Bond issue, school bd. candidates face Mon. test

Schools look for voters

BY ED FITZGERALD

This coming Monday, voters in the Plymouth-Canton School district will be asked to approve a $13 million bond issue. At the same time, voters will fill three terms on the school board.

The 10 board candidates have geared up for the election with public forums and questionnaires from parent-teacher groups. Two four-year seats are open, with six people vying. Four candidates are seeking the one two-year seat.

Dick Egli, administrator in charge of the Citizens Election Committee, said he is "cautiously optimistic" about the passage of the bond issue.

This week, the committee has increased mailings and phone calls to potential voters. A phone-in program for questions about the bond has failed so far, with only three or four calls.

Bernice Nichols, an election officer for the district, said the voter turn-out can sometimes be predicted by the number of absentee ballots. She said about 130 ballots had been taken out, and she called that average.

(The school election will be by machines, and not on paper ballots, like the candidate election last year. She did not have a count for the absentee ballots last year since they were all done on paper. The last machine election was 1984 and 198 absentee ballots were taken out.)

John M. Hoben, Superintendent of P-C Schools, said there were two parts of the bond issue he hoped voters understood. He said there were no plans to "use Central Middle School as anything other than a school."

He also said the new elementary school in Canton, with a possible location off Saltz Road, west of Sheldon -- would ease classroom crowding at four other elementary schools.

Egli said the bond's biggest fear was apathy, but reasoned that "people here are very supportive of the schools and with good reason." He said the committee's goal had been to show voters the positive side of the bond and not concentrate on dollar figures or how much the bond would cost each taxpayer (see chart, page 4).

Board trustees Dean Swartzwelter and Marilyn Schwinn both commented at a special board meeting Monday night on positive sessions they had with citizen groups concerning the bond issue.

Schwinn said she had found many in attendance at an Isbister Elementary bond discussion, uninformed about different parts of the bond.

"As soon as they understood it they were all fired up and ready to make calls (selling the bond)."

School officials have also touted the Homestead Exemption Act (Circuit Breaker) available to many in The

Wehmeyer resigns city seat

BY T.M. SMITH

For the second time in less than six months a member of the Plymouth City Commission has resigned, and to add a twist of irony to the dilemma, the commissioner who resigned was himself a replacement.

Mark O. Wehmeyer, appointed only

Wehmeyer wrote in his letter, that he "sold our property effective June 1, 1986 and must move out of the city by that date. Therefore, I must resign from the Plymouth City Commission on May 31, 1986 and do so with a feeling of loss."

Wehmeyer was appointed to the board in February, and sat on the board for only three months, but

Twp gets computer to help run DPW

BY T.M. SMITH

If there is an error in your Plymouth Township water bill after say, September - then rest assured that it is a quirk.

At least that is the hope of DPW superintendent Thomas Hollis, after his department got the stamp of approval from the Plymouth Township Board last week to purchase a $20,000 computer for the department's billing and records.

Currently DPW is on-line with the township mainframe computer - but in less than two months Hollis hopes to be self-sufficient.

Because of limitations in the current computer system, along with problems competing with computer time with other departments in the township, Hollis suggested that DPW purchase its own computer with DPW money.

"This has been in the program all along. Basically we decided long ago that DPW would have its own computer as we grew and evolved into it," Hollis said.

A concrete indication that the department has grown in recent years is marked by the accounts billed out of DPW.

•In 1978 the township used a billing machine to process 4,800 accounts.

•In 1980 the township utilized a service bureau to process 5,000 accounts.

•In 1982 the township purchased its own main frame computer to handle the 5,200 accounts.

Now, in 1986, Hollis maintains the DPW needs its own computer to cover the 6,000 accounts which currently run through the department. He says that time, money and efficiency will be improved with the system.

"We should save a lot of time and the efficiency of the department will be increased by at least 20 per cent," he said.

The system, which was designed specifically for the township DPW by Computer Analysis Planning, Inc., of Plymouth, will be able to run the accounts more smoothly and with less time.

In his report to the board Hollis said that he expects to save 100 to 150 work hours per month by using the new program, he also pointed out that other departments within the township will benefit from DPW getting off the main computer.

Hollis said he expects to have the computer on line and working within a month or two.

Plymouth man found dead after reported missing

An 83-year-old Plymouth Township man was found dead last Thursday evening near Wilcox Lake, following a search for the man, police said.

Claude Bridges, was reported missing earlier Thursday to the Plymouth Township Police, and was later found at the lake by police, township police chief Carl Berry said.

Police said the investigation is closed and homicide was not the cause of death.

Bridges was a 34-year member of the Detroit Fire Department and retired as battalion chief in 1963.

Police have suspect in prison death

State Police say they have a suspect, but no arrests have been made in the stabbing death of a prisoner at the Western Wayne County Correctional facility over the weekend.

A spokesperson at the Nothville Post said detectives have been at the scene since the body of Raymond L. Downey, 21, was found with multiple stab wounds early Saturday morning.

"The investigation is on-going at this point, and detectives have been there all day (Monday). We have a suspect and the prosecutors office has been notified, but no warrant has been issued," the officer said.

Downey was serving a two -- to 15-year sentence for breaking and entering. He was placed in the prison, located in Plymouth Township, in August of 1985.

Prison officials said Downey was found at 8:54 a.m. on Saturday with multiple stab wounds to the chest and was rushed to St. Mary Hospital in Livonia where he died at 9:52 a.m.

140 people crowd Canton Board meeting

Mayfair residents delay shopping center action

BY DAN NESS

About 140 Mayfair Village subdivision residents at the May 27th Canton Board of Trustees meeting wanted the board to delay voting on a proposed shopping center in their neighborhood, and it did.

The Mayfair residents, spoken for by Mayfair resident Michael Faloon, said an agreement between the residents, the developers of the proposed mall, the Mayfair Homeowner's Association, and the township stipulated a 15-day notice to homeowners within 300 feet of the mall before a vote could be taken to allow construction.

The board voted to delay voting on an amendment to a consent judgement which would allow for construction of the mall until June 17.

Construction of Coventry Commons East, which would be built on the southeast corner of Joy and Morton-Taylor roads, has been delayed since Mayfair residents charged that a 1975 consent judgement prevented shopping centers from being built on the property.

The mall had initially been approved by both the Canton Planning Commission and the Board of Trustees in December before residents complained that it was violating a consent judgement. Construction on the project, which would include the extension and paving of Morton-Taylor Road to Warren, was to have started in March.

Fred. Fehheimer, an attorney representing the developers of the project, The Nelson/Ross Companies, said the move by the Mayfair residents was meant to delay the project, but that his client would not object to a delay on the vote. Fehheimer said The Nelson/Ross Companies were losing $10,000 each week the project is delayed.

Mayfair residents opposed to the construction of the 113,545-square-foot shopping center and extended Morton-Taylor Road say the project would endanger their children walking to school, since traffic would increase.

The Canton Planning Commission voted 6-1 two weeks ago to approve an amendment to the 1975 consent judgement which would allow Coventry Commons East to be built.

Trustee Stephen Larson defended The Nelson/Ross Companies methods in negotiating with residents on the project. "I can tell you, this particular developer has chosen to go a very non-aggressive route . . . and others have been very aggressive," he said.

Disgruntled residents disagreed. "They have the money, we don't," said Mike Macyda.

The shopping center would be built in an L-shape, with a 600-space parking lot. The biggest retailers in the mall would be A and P supermarket, Arbor Drug and Aco Hardware.

The Nelson/Ross Companies also own property on the west side of Morton-Taylor Road, on which they have planned another shopping development.

Plymouth area to get EDC brochure

BY T.M. SMITH

In an advertising age when slogans like "Say yes to Michigan" and "Come home to Chicago" are attracting people to cities and states, it is not surprising that the Plymouth area is about to cash in on this trend.

Plymouth's Chamber of Commerce, along with the city and township of Plymouth are putting the final touches on a brochure that is geared at luring business and industry to the area.

The six-page full color brochure is due to become available sometime in July, and will be used in an effort to attract more developments to the area

-- such as the Metro West Industrial Park in Plymouth Township.

The brochure contains information on schools, shopping, culture and transportation, and is the result of more than a year of work by the chamber and Vic Wilkinson general manager of Hulmet in Plymouth.

Lynn Anderson of Plymouth's Chamber of Commerce said the idea originated more than a year ago in a planning session of the commerce and has grown since that time, with support from the township, city and schools.

"The chamber asked what would be most beneficial to the area, and both the city and the township agreed that a brochure that would attract more business would be needed.

"We really didn't have anything to hand to prospective people interested in locating here," Anderson said.

Wilderson said that the brochure will be out very soon, and the only snag was waiting for some aerial photos that are being taken of the area.

At the May 27 meeting of the township, the board voted to donate $5,000 to the brochure, and Anderson said donations are expected from the city and the school system.

Sparse turnout for LWV forum

This story was contributed to by Phyllis Redfern, T.M. Smith and Ed Fitzgerald. It was written by Fitzgerald.

Only 30 people attended last Thursday night's candidate forum for the Plymouth-Canton School Board, sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Nine of the 10 candidates were present at the Canton Little Theatre. Judith Lore, seeking one of the two four-year seats, was not present. There are three seats open in the June 9 election, including one two-year term.

After opening remarks by the candidates, questions were taken from the audience. Included were queries on what cuts might be made if the $13 million bond issue failed. Other questions centered around a supposed lack of Christian representation on the board.

The candidates were also quizzed about their voting records. Diane Daskalakis and Jerry Raymor admitted they were "ashamed" of their failure to ever vote in a local school board elections, despite being registered.

John Voymas, who has been criticized for being a newcomer and unfamiliar of the area, defended his failure to vote during the lone year he's lived here.

"I register wherever I live," he said.

Joan Kotcher said she didn't think people should worry about voting unless they were up on the issues.

"An uninformed vote is worse than not voting. I don't think you should throw a dart at it."

Richard Sumpter said he "had no problem" with the fact he had missed several elections, since registering in 1978.

There was a question asked for all candidates, except Daskalakis and Raymor. The question asked if anyone else, besides those two (because they opposed the appearance of Gundella the Witch at CEP last year), were concerned about the children.

Sumpter was the most outspoken, saying he was upset that any of the candidates' would be questioned on this. "All of us care," said Kotcher.

Voymas sided with Daskalakis and Raymor, as he said Gundella, since she believed witchcraft to be a religion, should not have spoken in the schools. He cited the separation of church and state.

All of the candidates were asked if they had a choice where to make cuts, in which of the following three areas would it be: music, transportation or athletics?

Kotcher said she'd recommend a 10 per cent cut in all three. Raymor voted to cut athletics. Schwinn said it'd be hard to make a decision, but that she would vote to cut each a full third.

Zagorski, who has defended music programs in her campaign, said athletics would be a better place to cut than music.

The candidates were also asked which programs at the schools were the most efficient and saved the most tax dollars.

The Plymouth-Canton Schools' board issue for $13 million will be voted on Mon., June 9.
 As always, you should vote one way or the other. This time, you should vote "yes."
 Here are some of the issues to be decided:
 •The largest expense is $4.5 million for a new elementary school in Canton. There is no question here. Build it. The sooner the better.
 •$925,000 for renovations to the Administration Building on Harvey. The Citizens Bond Committee made no recommendations for this, but school officials thought otherwise. Board president Roland Thomas called the first-floor conditions "deplorable." The board meeting room is far too small and cannot accommodate large (though rare) crowds of visitors. Objectors say this is just a temporary solution. Associate Superintendent Ray Hoedel says future administrator personnel additions will be minimal and parking should be no problem. He also says a new face to the building will help the value of downtown property. The location is undoubtedly prime.
 •$600,000 for computers. The district got as good a price as it could through a purchasing pact with Wayne County Intermediate Schools. Nowadays people hand over money for computers readily, acknowledging it as the wave of the future. But is the district's program preparing its students for the real world? Computer businesses such as EDS have been known to help set up schools' programs. Leasing of computers should also be considered, since equipment turnover is high.
 •$1.6 million for renovation to Central Middle School. This has been called a sentimental issue by many school officials. No one wants to see the grand old building demolished. But this is another temporary fix-up. A master plan is needed. Hoedel says the building's foundation is sound and could last for a long time with proper upkeep. Again, the location is excellent and shouldn't be lost.

•$700,000 will be spent to add six classrooms to Gallimore Elementary. It's needed. So are the proposed portable rooms for slightly over $100,000. The citizens' committee did not recommend the Gallimore addition.
 •Over $1 million for a new heating system at Pioneer Middle School. The existing roof-top system has been called a "mistake" by school board treasurer Dr. E.J. McClendon. Hoedel calls the package "bare bones." The district has also set up a hotline where homeowners can call in to see how much it will cost them. It's estimated that a home worth $70,000 will cost its homeowner another $40 a year in taxes.
 Board vice president Elaine Kirchgatter has been correct in repeatedly asking "what if ...?" Confidence has kept the schools from preparing a comprehensive plan for failure of the issue. Hoedel says an executive cabinet meeting would be called and a second attempt, with certain changes, would be discussed.
 Some of you might think a new school is needed but you don't go along with other issues. The different requests could have been separated on the ballot, but Hoedel says attorneys have recommended against splitting the issues.
 The state still has to ratify the package before it goes before local voters. There are many items in the package not listed here. Such as over $4 million for many, some small, equipment and technological improvements. Superintendent John Hoben says it's good to have some smaller requests in the package, so as to give the state something to trim.
 A comprehensive report on the bond issue is being prepared by the schools. If you have questions stop by their offices or attend the board meetings -- the second and fourth Mondays of the month.

If you care, VOTE!!

Citizens of The Plymouth-Canton Community have something to prove Mon., June 9.
 On that day, a vote will be held to determine the fate of a $13-million bond issue for Plymouth-Canton Schools as well as filling three school board seats.
 In the last schools' vote last June, only 3.67 per cent of the registered voters participated, in what was an appalling show of apathy for a community that prides itself on its quality of education.
 There is simply no excuse for not voting June 9 if you care at all about education in our community.
 If you have children in the school system -- VOTE.
 If you pay taxes to the school district -- VOTE.
 If you are dissatisfied with the way the schools are now run -- VOTE.
 If you are one of the residents who have voiced concerns about the possible extension of Morton-Taylor Road because you think it will affect your kids walk to school -- VOTE.
 If you think the schools do a good job of educating community youth -- VOTE.
 Whether you know it or not, you are affected by the outcome of Monday's vote. By not voting, you are saying, "I don't care about my community."
 - Last June, 45,141 registered voters did not care enough to vote. On Mon., June 9, Plymouth-Canton citizens will have a chance to show that this is a community that cares about its future.

THE COMMUNITY CRIER 3.67%?!?

Voter apathy has reached an all-time embarrassment in The Plymouth-Canton Community!
 Only 3.67 per cent of the school district's registered voters cast ballots in the June 10 election.
 This meant that the 1,719 good citizens listed on this page made the decision for all 46,860 registered voters in the district.
 These voters exercised the primary right for which our country was founded, while 96.33 per cent of the voters, whose names do not appear, chose excuses not to participate.
 Why devote the space to honor these voters and to chastise the non-voters? To demonstrate the issue! Imagine -- the names of EVERYONE WHO VOTED in Michigan's ninth-largest school district fit onto less than a full page. (Printing the names of the non-voters would have wasted too many trees.)
 Note that the names of many so-called community leaders and constant complainers on school issues do not appear here. They didn't vote.
 At some point, it's time to ask the question, "Why bother to hold elections?" Following a less-than-four per cent turnout would appear to be that time.
 Hopefully, the 45,141 non-voters whose names do not appear here are embarrassed into giving extra thought to the tenet of "government BY the people."

JEANETTE WINES

MARILYN SCHWINN

For 4-year school board seats

Choose Wines, Schwinn

Six candidates are on the ballot for the two four-year seats. At least five of them are well-suited to serve on the board (in fact, the overall field of candidates in both races may be the best in recent history of Plymouth-Canton School Board elections).

But as all good sports know, someone has to lose. This time it shouldn't be Jeanette Wines and Marilyn Schwinn. Wines is active in many local political arenas. In her stint on the district's safety committee she has made many valuable contributions. She seems honest and accessible, someone you could walk up to with a question, without feeling intimidated. She has attended more board meetings than any other citizen (unfortunately, also more than 99 per cent of the citizens combined). Attending the meetings may seem trivial, but it does give the candidate a good idea of what the board does. Wines sought a seat on the board back in the 70's and was defeated.

Schwinn, an incumbent, who was appointed to finish a term a year ago, has shown sincerity and a willingness to learn. Look for better things from her during her first full term. Here, it is a case of 'if it's not broken, why fix it?'

Very close behind are Richard Sumpter and Joan Kotcher. Sumpter ran and lost last year. Past failures do not faze him. He is opinionated and his desire to serve on the school board is heartening. There is no doubt his presence would be felt. Kotcher has as good as credentials as any candidate, having served on the Citizens Bond Review Committee, which helped draft the bond proposal for this election (which all of the candidates favor).

A little further back is Judith Lore, who might be guilty of special interest politics, with her worries for the school music programs. Lore is very active in the community, though. Last, and perhaps the only four-year candidate not qualified, is Jerry Raymor, who has joined Diane Daskalakis on a 'Christian slate.' He, too, has his heart in the right place, but his voting record and board meeting attendance are both negligible.

Keep McClendon

There are four candidates ready to fill a two-year seat on the Plymouth-Canton School Board. Three of these candidates are qualified and capable. But one stands above the rest, and that's incumbent Dr. E.J. McClendon. The good doctor is not getting older, but better. He's concerned and frequently outspoken on red-tape boondoggles in the school system. Besides garnering local support and respect, McClendon is known in some national education circles, too. He has voted in more school elections than any other candidate, and is currently the board treasurer and a former president of the board.

E.J. McCLENDON

Bringing up the rear, is the well-intentioned Diane Daskalakis. She has centered her campaign around the supposed lack of Christian representation on the board. She is particularly appalled at the board's unanimous decision to allow Gundella the Witch to speak at the high school last Halloween. But Daskalakis is a one-issue candidate and not well-versed in other matters. Her only appearances at school board meetings have been to talk and not to listen.

It's likely some of the above candidates thought McClendon would go for the four-year seat, as he is indeed formidable and does deserve your vote.

THE COMMUNITY CRIER

Close, but given no stogie, are John Voymas and Pat Zagorski. Voymas is new to town, and has already whetted his political appetite as president of the Tanger PTO. He is polished and quoteable, but just can't top McClendon's experience. Zagorski is likeable and very sincere. She would be easy to work with, for other board members and the community alike. If Voymas and Zagorski had chosen to run for the four-year seats, the races would have been more interesting. But they did not.

Why, how we endorse school bd. candidates

The candidates clarify their positions

EDITOR'S NOTE: The endorsement positions seen on these pages represent the collective views of The Community Crier news and editorial staffers.

After meeting the candidates and discussing the issues with them, the Crier editorial staff met to discuss the issues themselves and to choose candidates to endorse. Many points were debated, and the endorsements are the result of long discussion.

The resulting consensus opinions are offered to our readers as one additional tool in formulating decisions for Monday's voting. Whether you agree or disagree is not the point; whether you have all the information available and whether you exercise your right Monday is what's important.

Vote 'no' on school bond issue

EDITOR AND VOTERS:

VOTE NO on school bond proposal! The Board of Education/Administration would like the public to support the upcoming bond issue with a yes vote. As an incentive to vote yes they have come up with a smorgasbord of bond projects. Each project could be viewed as a commitment or promise to the community to spend money in a specific manner.

I believe without a commitment to increase classroom space at Eriksson, Field and Hulsing schools the bond proposal is fatally flawed and doesn't merit approval.

As a school board member for over 11 years there were countless times when parents, students, and staff from Eriksson, Field and Hulsing confronted the school board members/administration (present members included) with concerns about the totally inadequate space in their classrooms. Members would wring their hands, patronize the individuals and then say, yes a problem exists, but without additional classroom space nothing can be done. They would then say, support a bond issue and the problem will be solved.

For years these schools have suffered from wall to wall students and the smallest classrooms in the district. They also were asked to endure extended school year (E.S.Y.). They have put up with a great deal!

Elaborate plans were drawn up to enlarge the three schools and paraded in front of parents to gain bond support. Hours were invested in looking for a solution. This issue proved to be the genesis of the present bond issue.

To drum up citizen support and create some measure of credibility a citizens bond committee was established. I served as chairperson of the elementary subcommittee and met hours with other citizens to arrive at a series of recommendations for the bond issue. After interviewing teachers and principals and conducting an exhaustive statistical review of student enrollments, the committee recommended that four classroom spaces be removed from each of the three schools. The entire bond advisory committee agreed with this recommendation, among others.

Lo and behold when the administration packaged the bond issue, the above recommendation, among many others was absent or reshaped. An example being the board office addition -- it received no support, as did the computers or general maintenance items. Yet they appear on the bond issue.

In other words, the very issue that was responsible for the bond issue was eliminated from the bond package. Members of my committee, parents, teachers and even leaders of the millage committee have all also asked the question -- why?

I can tell you -- I've spoken to most board members -- they don't want to make a commitment, they don't want to tie their hands. Yet they want us to sign up for higher taxes without any assurances. They have made a commitment to resurface the track, build a storage building, widen a road, add on to the board office, yet when it comes to our kids in-classroom instruction they won't make a commitment.

Without a commitment by the Board of Education to solve this on-going problem they don't deserve your yes vote. Send a message, vote NO!

Privileged to work with Michael Gross

EDITOR:

As accompanist for the Plymouth Community Chorus, I realize my opinions are hardly objective. However, I feel your paper's review of our recent concert calls for a rebuttal.

Michael Gross is a sensitive and professional director who has developed the chorus from a very small group to its present size of 150. His personal style, though obviously objectionable to your reviewer, is an integral part of the chorus as a whole, and his "lecturing" is intended to add cohesiveness to the concert, not to add to his own ego.

I personally feel privileged to work with Mr. Gross and the chorus, who do indeed "deserve the opportunity to show off their abilities under the best of conditions," which should include their whole-hearted support of their community.

LESLEY MORRISON

'Disgusted and outraged' at review

EDITOR:

After reading Cheryl Sznyszewski's "review" of the May 18 concert of the Plymouth Community Chorus, I am thoroughly disgusted and outraged at the personal assault the reviewer (and I use the term loosely) launched in her article.

It is my understanding that the reviewer's job is to critique concerts -- not indulge in personal opinions of a single individual in that concert.

If you will re-read the review, you will see that the comments devoted to the Chorus' performance are:

1. "Throughout the evening the group of nearly 150 male and female singers sounded good." Sounded "good"? What does "good" mean? Is that the extent of your reviewer's vocabulary or knowledge of music?

2. "The Plymouth Community Chorus is obviously a very capable, talented group." What makes them a very capable and talented group? No explanation was given -- just more expressions of the reviewer's obvious preoccupation with her diatribe against the director of the Chorus.

If the above examples are representative of the reviewer's ability to critique music, she should be in another occupation. Journalism is not simply a matter of sharpening one's "poison pen" on someone else's reputation or ability.

As a long-standing member of the Plymouth Community Chorus, I am much dismayed by the negativity shown our director by your reviewer. It is a great shame that your paper could not have given a more positive, professional critique of our work. I would have much appreciated comments about our singing abilities, our stage decorations, the composition of the program of music -- even the fact that we award scholarships to aspiring music students.

Unfortunately, we only received an ugly, slanted attack on the abilities of our director, Michael Gross. For your reviewer's information, it is his hard work and enthusiasm that has given the Plymouth Community Chorus the polish and spirit it has today. He encourages us to be the most professional and musically adept community chorus we can be and to give our audiences concerts of high caliber music.

What some may view as "antics" is simply Mr. Gross' way of engendering enthusiasm and emotion on the part of the singers -- not necessarily to give the audience a show or to be "cute". It is his expression of oneness with the music and the chorus.

It think your reviewer and your paper owes Mr. Gross an apology for the undeserved treatment he has received. I sincerely hope you will send a more able representative to another of our concerts and give us a fair and legitimate review of our work.

COLLEEN PALMERIE

Balderdash!

EDITOR:

Balderdash!

Michael Gross has been conducting the Plymouth Community Chorus for eight years. Successfully! He has increased the chorus from more singers than audience to 150 people. The concert attendance is more than proof of that.

Cheryl Sznyszewski must have resented having to attend our concert as this is the first time it has been reviewed that I can remember. Perhaps we are not high-brow enough. Michael's style is his own and we like it.

Thank you for finally getting around to some comments about our singing ability. Who do you think is responsible for the way we sound?

NORMA HUETTEMAN

PLYMOUTH COMMUNITY CHORUS MEMBER

Three cheers for review of Gross performance

EDITOR:

I was in complete agreement of your review written on May 21 titled "Concert spoiled by 'Gross' antics."

Mike Gross stages all of the PCC concerts in the same manner. It seems that in the final outcome all he is interested in is how many chuckles he can get out of the audience.

Take the Christmas concert for example, when Mike brought his daughter out on stage. At first it was touching. Although when Mike got more and more into his personal life it got out of hand. It almost seemed as though he thought he was a celebrity.

In my opinion Mike Gross is a stubborn, self-righteous, egotistical baby and I know many people who feel the same way I do.

Again three cheers for your review. It's about time Mike Gross found out just how much his actions affect the PCC and others who expect a good concert.

City should be proud of Chorus

EDITOR:

I am a member of the Plymouth Community Chorus and do take great exception to the article written and published by Cheryl Szyniszewski in the May 21st issue titled "Concert spoiled by 'Gross' antics".

I believe Cheryl either had her article written before attending the concert, because she had a personal vendetta against Michael Gross, or she attended the concert with ear muffs on.

Cheryl neglected to say that the Plymouth Community Chorus had a nearly sellout performance both nights, and the audience responded with standing ovations both nights. There was not one favorable comment in her article. I can accept constructive criticism, but this was an example of one of the most bias displays of editorializing I have ever seen in my life.

I must call your attention to the fact that, the Plymouth Community Chorus has 146 members, 132 business patrons from the area, and 65 individual contributors, who support the chorus, not to mention the more than 5,000 area residents who attend our concerts each year.

There are no professionals in the Plymouth Community Chorus, and yet we have one of the finest community choruses in the State of Michigan. We are just a group of average people who enjoy singing with Michael Gross. We consider ourselves very fortunate to have Michael as our director. I have sung in church choirs for more than 35 years and also had the privilege of singing under the direction of Dr. Harry Langsford at Wayne State University. Dr. Langsford is the only one, who I have sung with, for which Michael would need to take a back seat.

The City of Plymouth should be proud of the Plymouth Historical Museum, the Plymouth Symphony, and the Plymouth Community Chorus. Not many communities can boast such accomplished organizations.

Time to focus talent, arts' energy

EDITOR:

It is and was probably unfortunate but at the same time inevitable that a critique of the Plymouth Community Chorus and subsequent response occurred following the last concert.

The musical talent and business skills of Mike Gross are more than apparent. As well, so is the analytical mind, musical background and insight of Cheryl Szyniszewski. (Bachelor's and Masters in Fine Arts)

Now — what needs to happen is a positive refocusing of talent and energy toward the greater enjoyment of art in the community — i.e., CHORAL MUSIC.

We cannot and should not expect anyone to leave their talent and intellect at the door before they walk into a music concert. I suppose that all the rest of us can only try and sort out the closest approximation of truth — whatever that is!

Let's end the feud. It is our hope that everyone will look onward and forward to raising cultural standards and exposure to "good music".

Our chorus gets better each year

EDITOR:

In reference to the article "Concert spoiled by 'Gross' antics" of May 21, which attacked the director, Mike Gross, of the Plymouth Community Chorus:

It seems as if Cheryl Szyniszewski is an authority on Mike Gross as well as music. It also seems as if she just wanted to put someone down for whatever reason.

I have been with the chorus for nine years. Since Mike has been the director, the chorus only gets better each year. I enjoy the various types of music the "Music Committee" chooses (not Mike Gross). My many friends enjoy the music as well as watching Mike direct.

Keep up the good work, Mike!

Offended by review

EDITOR:

As a member of the Plymouth Community Chorus for the last six years, I was grossly offended by the so-called "review" by Cheryl Szyniszewski of our "Let Freedom Sing" spring concert in your May 21 issue.

This so-called "review" --no diatribe-- was nothing more than a personal assault on our director, impugning his conduct and motives.

Mike Gross is the reason some 150 persons continue to devote every Tuesday evening for seven months in rehearsal for the two seasonal concerts we perform. Never have I met a conductor who has continued to give: (1) 150 per cent of his talents and energy trying to perfect each piece we sing, and (2) so much time and energy to train us vocally. That good sound and enthusiasm from the Chorus didn't just happen by itself!

Me thinks Ms. Szyniszewski protesteth too much! Could she have been more offended by the patriotic and sacred themes presented in the concert which she failed to even mention? If so, a scapegoat was needed to vent her frustrations.

The 50+ friends and family of mine who attended the concert had nothing but highest praise for a wonderful evening of entertainment and inspiration.

Enthusiastic audience response is perhaps the greatest and most reliable review necessary.

Vituperious review fails Chorus

EDITOR:

After reading the recent review of the Plymouth Community Chorus Spring Concert by Ms. Cheryl Szyniszewski, I felt compelled to write this letter.

The review consisted of six out of nine paragraphs devoted to roasting Mike Gross for his conducting style, expertise as a choral conductor and his stage conduct. Almost nothing was written about the chorus and how they performed the music, or their proficiency, or lack of it.

If particular songs were ill prepared or poorly sung then it is your job, as a critic, to point this out in your review. If, on the other hand, there were particular songs well performed, it was also your job to point this out.

The Plymouth Community Chorus is made up of people who love to sing and spend countless hours preparing their concerts. They are an amateur chorus and a fine one. They add greatly to the musical scene of our community along with the Plymouth Community Band and our very fine symphony orchestra.

Your vituperious review of the chorus conductor failed the chorus and the efforts of many people who did their best to give an enjoyable evening to many music lovers of our community. If you are truly a professional music critic, it was not shown in your review. Even Mr. Gunn of the Detroit Free Press has favorable comments for some parts of the performances of the Detroit Symphony, even when they fail to play up to their potential.

I close with this thought: Would you have written such a review if it had been the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra instead of the chorus, even if said symphony conductor didn't measure up to the potential of the orchestra? I doubt it.

Where did reviewer sit at Chorus concert?

EDITOR:

Do you ever look at what is put in the paper before it is sent to press? The article I'm referring to is the so-called review of the Plymouth-Canton Community Chorus.

It wasn't a review at all, rather a personal attack aimed directly at Michael Gross, it only casually mentioned the Chorus. It reads more like a poison pen note.

What Cheryl Szyniszewski failed to see and hear was an auditorium full of people like myself who enjoyed themselves immensely. A lot of hard work went into their performance and she totally ignored it.

The Chorus sounded better than good, it was one of the best I've heard. The stage was beautifully decorated and everything was quite professionally done, all this capped off with fireworks at the end.

I don't know where Ms. Szyniszewski was sitting? She seems to be a very negative person and I seriously question her professional ethics.

I think the paper and Ms. Szyniszewski owe Michael Gross and the Plymouth-Canton Community Chorus an apology.

She learns the ways of the world

Prejudice is a rank odor that drifts through the air of almost every walk of life. It is something that everyone lives with at one point.

History books are cram-full of problems created by this foul smell. Heroes are born out of a desire to freshen the air of prejudice, and martyrs die in a need to change what is bad.

This, is the adult world. At 22 I know this.

I plug my nose and run through it when I can't go around it, and I learn to change what I can -- live with what I can't.

But, all of this knowledge about this disease of ignorance did not come to me until my high school years. Until then I could play and laugh with who I wanted --without recourse. It didn't matter because prejudice was a disease for adults to deal with.

There is a five-year-old girl in Plymouth, however, who is feeling the sting in her petite nose this week from the smell of prejudice. She might not know what it is, but the stinging is there.

Sarah is the recipient of this stinging odor from a place that should be the one sure haven to escape the soiled air -- the church.

This little girl's plight is that her mommy and daddy do not attend the church that offers a kindergarten program. They attend a church across town.

At Facevalue

Mom and dad go to a Catholic Church. The kindergarten program is offered through a Lutheran Church.

The school board at this Lutheran Church denied the child entrance into the program because she is not Lutheran. Because her parents were not of the Lutheran faith.

There are currently two chairs open in the kindergarten program for next fall at the church school -- but this little girl will not be allowed to sit in one of those chairs. Instead she will sit in a chair at Bird School, part of Plymouth's Community Schools.

Mom and dad are Mary Jane and Michael Gregory, and this story was passed on through a letter the parents wrote to The Crier last week. They are hurt and angry and confused. And they have every right to be.

The school board voted to keep the Gregory's daughter out of the program because "she would receive mixed messages" being from a Catholic family and going to a Lutheran Church.

The only message any five-year-old should receive about God, is of the goodness and love of the Creator. Mary Jane asks what messages could be passed to her child that would be confusing.

In her letter she wrote "We had no prejudices regarding the differences between the two religions and felt the benefits of a Christian environment most important. As a kindergartner, the chance of experiencing conflicting religious messages are practically non-existent."

The Gregory's also point to a statement in the handbook that makes claim to a non-discriminatory policy. A policy the Gregory's wonder how the school board justifies in light of this recent decision.

The Gregory's make several other valid points in the letter, concerning why they were led through the entire process, encouraged as they went without a mention of problems with choice of religion.

The Gregory's, daughter in hand, went through an interview process, kindergarten round-up, aptitude tests with the teacher. They were given tuition information, a school handbook, physical and dental forms and were flying through the program -- until their daughter was denied admission by the board.

When this letter was handed to me, I was shocked.

I thought, well maybe there were many children that go to the church who wouldn't have a chance to attend the school. That does not seem to be the case.

The board seems to believe they are saving this five-year-old from a confusion two religions would create.

I don't believe the board is prejudiced. But they are making a mistake. The future of this girl is for the parents to decide. They want a christian upbringing in a christian school. They have been denied this, at least temporarily, by a church.

Good intentions aside, no matter what the decision is shrouded in, this little girl has been the victim of prejudice at the tender age of five. I hope this isn't a message that stays with her.

Gross, the spark that carries Chorus

EDITOR:

Several weeks before our annual Spring Concert this May, we were informed that our performance was to be reviewed by someone from The Crier. Therefore, as a Chorus member, I was extremely surprised to discover that in place of a review of the culmination of our months of preparation and rehearsal was instead a review of the conducting style of Michael Gross.

Had we been misinformed? Or had your dislike of his conducting narrowed your focus to the point that you totally lost sight of the original intent of your presence at the Plymouth Community Chorus concert? To have our performance reduced to the platitude "... sounded good" was an insult to our efforts in and of itself. To devote 99 per cent of the review to our director was inexcusable.

Perhaps in attempting to do such a review one loses sight of the fact that we, like our director, are not professionals in vocal music. We are a group of people from various communities and various occupations who wish to share our love for vocal music with a community of people who love to hear vocal music performed. While I feel sad for you that you found Mike's conduct disturbing to the point of being unable to enjoy our performance, I make no apologies for his style. The present size of our chorus and the fact that we now perform five concerts yearly speaks volumes on Mike's ability to generate enthusiasm.

Under Mike's leadership our chorus has grown from approximately 30 members to its present maximum of 150. All perspective members must audition for the limited number of vacancies occurring each season and we turn away many more people than we can use. Our long standing members now, for the first time, find themselves facing the possibility of no position to return to should they have

Conductor is Chorus catalyst

EDITOR:

As a father and a daughter living here in the Plymouth community, we have heard for several years about the excellent performances of the Plymouth Community Chorus. As new members of the PCC this past season, we now understand why this Chorus has such great acclaim. There are several attributes which contribute to this fame including the beautiful voices of dedicated members, the outstanding selection of music, the superior stage design and production, and the fantastic accompanist but, perhaps, the most outstanding attribute of the PCC is its "spirit."

Everyone notices that, including people who ought to know, such as Dr. Kenneth Jewell (to drop a name). That "spirit" is in part a product of another important attribute of the PCC, the to take a leave of absence for one or two concert seasons!

Despite your distaste for his ego, I feel you should know that same ego carries with it a very infectious drive and enthusiasm that has built our chorus to its present status. I know I speak for most everyone in the chorus when I say that we look forward to that infusion of enthusiasm at every Tuesday rehearsal and for many of us it's the spark that also carries us through a difficult week.

Director, Michael Gross. And Mr. Gross is the catalyst who sparks that "spirit" enabling us to produce an extraordinary musical experience.

We who have had the privilege of singing in this group, making those

One last comment. There have been some concerts where Mike has chosen not to speak to the audience. And you know what we have discovered from those concerts? The audience lets us know that it just wasn't the same. They, too, enjoy that spark that Mike spreads because we are community -- we are all one. We are not A chorus, A director, and An audience -- we are the Plymouth Community Chorus!

Okay, we get the drift

EDITOR'S NOTE: Several letters in response to the May 21 Crier review of the Plymouth Community Chorus concert were not printed because of lack of space. Almost all the letters were from Chorus members, and all reiterated the fact that they disagreed with the review. As this is not an on-going issue, we will not print any more letters -- pro or con -- regarding the concert review. The point has been made -- we welcome responses to future reviews.

Where have all the Dems gone?

Are there any Democrats alive and well in Canton?

At one time, with the Canton board boasting only one Republican, many thought Canton was a solid Democratic stronghold.

But that was before Ronald Reagan. His landslide over Jimmy Carter turned the tide and firmly entrenched the Republicans as THE local party.

A number of hardworking GOP types like Bart Berg, Flossie Tonda, both Bennetts, Jim Poole and Bob Padgett have built a solid group while the Democrats once in local control burnt themselves out with factional fighting.

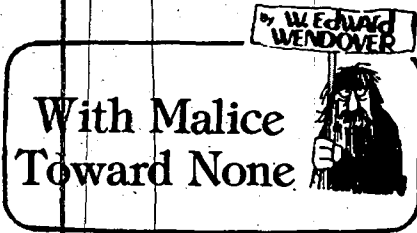

It's election year again. But this time, the local board isn't up for vote.

How will Canton go?

Will any Democratic candidates carry Canton?

Certainly no one asks that more than U.S. Rep. William Ford who, two years ago, lost Canton to a Nazi.

Democrats have hidden in the Plymouth community too. At one time even the Plymouth Township offices had strong Democratic challenges -- Don Skinner even almost won a trustee spot. But of late, the Democrats have been quiet or non-existent. One challenger, Don Grimes of Ann Arbor, will be dogging U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell. He was out getting petitions signed at the Plymouth Memorial Day parade.

It's not that Democrats would be better than Republicans per se. Will Rogers wouldn't trust any of them.

However, voters deserve a choice of SOMETHING.

Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurie Breen was unopposed two years ago. So was District Judge Jim Garber last time he ran (that's a non-partisan post).

For most of the posts, though, opposition within the primaries was the only real challenge in the past six years.

Will the Democrats wake up?

As quickly as Canton flopped from Democrat to Republican or as the Dems faded in the Plymouth community, things could flop back.

At least there should be SOME opposition, even within the party in power.

There's a strong argument to making the local posts non-partisan -- even the Republicans agree -- but in the meantime some balance would help government along.

Wake up Democrats!

Join the race Republicans!

Concert review not fair

EDITOR:

Ms. Szyniszewski's review of the Plymouth Community Chorus' spring concert last week was not a fair assessment or judgement of the choir or the music performed. Instead it seemed to be a personal attack on Mr. Gross.

Even though she may not care for this style in directing, it's obvious it produces positive results in the way these people perform.

To say it was impossible to relax and enjoy the performance is contradicted by the immediate standing ovation by nearly 1,000 people each night.

The PCC choir has attained the distinction as being one of the finest choirs in the state and I'm sorry she could only make such a non-committed statement as, "they sounded good."

I really question her qualifications as a vocal concert critic, as any director I have ever seen always mouths the words, and even if Mr. Gross does over exaggerate his arm movements in directing, it is to inspire his singers to peak performance so the audience can feel the energy they are generating.

Mr. Gross and the choir are to be highly commended once again for a beautiful and inspiring performance.

I. PERRIE

Local press gets scooped on Bigfoot tale

We'll write it, but will you read it?

When given a choice of subjects to write about, I'll go with Cheri Barnett any time.

Cheri, aside from being one of the most interesting people I've met covering Canton so far, is definitely worth reading about. My problem, and it may just be journalist's paranoia, is that I have no way of knowing if anybody will be reading this, or for that matter, if any stories in this issue will be seen by the choosy newspaper reader.

My anxieties were forced to surface last week as I waited in line at a local pharmacy. The latest issue of The Crier was displayed next to The Observer and several national-distribution tabloids.

In the newspaper competition for the reader's eye -- or in this case, the customer-waiting-in-line's eye -- the national tabloids had the local papers beat by a mile. While we (your trusty local papers) naively reported on a new medical complex in Canton and the latest on the Fall Fest food booth deliberations, one of the tabloids screamed, "I Was Bigfoot's Love Slave." (I wish I were kidding).

Now, take a deep look inside and ask yourself which story would catch your eye first -- a Fall Fest food fight or the aforementioned Bigfoot/slave confession we so blindly missed? Be honest.

It just goes to show that some papers will print anything to get another reader. But, lately, I've heard a few

To The Point

By Dan Ness

other theories behind the press and how stories are selected for print.

Theory One: Money.

Very recently, a number of Plymouth Community Chorus members (about half of the chorus, gauging by the flow of mail) voiced their displeasure of a concert review we printed. One member said we would never run a negative review of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra because "people with money" dominate the Symphony.

(Which brings up a good point, and one that might not be known to certain arts groups. The Crier's Arts Review Price List is as follows: "They Played Out of Their Heads" - $100; "Glowing" - $75; "Rave" reviews go for between $50 and $65, depending on how many times you want us to use the word "inspirational;" the "So-So, But They Gave It Their Best" review will cost ya $35; the "Slightly Scolding" review is a bargain at $20; and a variety of pans cost $10, since the group gets their name mentioned several times as a side benefit).

Another theory, this one from Canton Clerk Linda Chuhuran, is the "Bad-Boys-Get-All-the-Ink" theory.

In summing up the local paper's philosophy, Chuhuran noted in so many words that kids that got into trouble made the news while kids that did well for themselves were ignored.

I disagree, but anyone knowing of a "good-news story" please call. Bad news seems to be easier to find, unfortunately, since it usually shows up in the police blotter, while good news may only be discovered by a reader calling in to inform us.

Which brings me back to Cheri Barnett, an example of good news that was brought to my attention by, coincidentally, Linda Chuhuran.

Barnett, of Canton, is 31 years old, schooled in music therapy, and now works part-time in the Northville School District. She was also born with cerebral palsy and discriminated against by many who judge people on first impressions, ignorant biases and stubborn prejudices.

I first met her when she worked as a volunteer in Chuhuran's office twice a week. Cheri's desire to work for her community may be surpassed only by her love of music, particularly Mozart. While others clamored for more pay, Cheri was working for nothing -- although in her own unselfish mind, she was being rewarded by having the opportunity to "make her mark" on the community.

She sure made her mark on me, but I'm not the only fan of Cheri Barnett. Cheri will be honored this Monday by the Awareness Communication Team for Developmentally Disabled (ACT/DD) in Southfield. She is one of five persons being awarded a Certificate of Merit in the John Furtaw Inspiration Award Category, named after the first chairman of ACT/DD.

This is the kind of news that I/we welcome, and the more the better. Nobody wants to write about the robbery, the assault and battery, the fatal car accident.

No, I'll choose the Cheri Barnett stories any day. The problem may be that there are more stories like that out there, but they're not as obvious.

Deep down, I like to think most readers will choose a low-key story of a woman who donated her talents to Canton Township and remarked, "Never have I let my disability interfere with what I wanted to do," over the sensational tabloids on the other racks.

In fact, it would take Elvis' ghost returning with a miracle grapefruit diet at a Fall Fest food booth to sway my journalistic tendencies here. But, until that happens, give me more Cheri Barnetts and you can read the other papers to find out what Bigfoot is up to.

A teacher of the first grade

BY ED FITZGERALD

Helen Kelly says she "lucked out." After 29 years of teaching first grade at Starkweather, and loving everything about it, she taught two more years of first grade at Tanger.

And she's loved it, again.

"For years I was so happy at Starkweather and then to go somewhere where the people are also good. It may even be an improvement. I'm not just saying that, either."

Kelly, who lives in Ann Arbor, calls teaching the "best job ever." She will retire at the end of this school year, and turn 70 years old in August. She has not taught more than any other active teacher, but she is the oldest.

Kelly says she shorted herself by a late start in the teaching business. She served in Africa with the Red Cross in World War II. After marrying a sergeant, she returned to raise a family. Within eight years the Kellys had four children.

"I thought, 'What can I do for more family income?', she said. 'Something that would suit the purposes of the family.'"

She decided to get her teaching certificate. Her first job, under Superintendent Russell Isbister, was at Starkweather. She loved her work from the beginning.

"It's been wonderful. There is so much gratification. I like to see the improvement with the child."

Watching them grow Helen Kelly waters plants in her classroom. She says teaching is like being an actress. "You've got to keep them happy." (Crier photo by Chris Farina)

That's why Kelly has stayed with first-graders.

"It's an ego trip," she admits. "I like to be at the bottom where I can see results. If a child is shy I try to bring them out -- help them reach their potential."

"In the first grade, and kindergarten -- that's when you see the most progress."

Kelly says the kids have stayed the same over the years. There will always be the students "who do what you want them to do and those who don't."

She says an overload of the entertainment media has affected today's kids, and made them more involved in different things.

Kelly is the type of teacher who is just apt to give you a hug. She says children like to get a lot of attention, and, "I like to give it. I'm a demonstrative person."

Joan Hartell, a staff member at Tanger, says Kelly's love for children is apparent.

"She is very cuddly. Everyone loves her," says Hartell. "She is so full of life. She's probably still debating as to retire or not."

But Kelly has plans. And that's to stay involved. She wants to work with the homeless and substance abuse addicts.

"I have to be in something useful. I really care...I don't have to know the people."

"As long as I can still move around good, I'll be moving around."

The CEP Perspective took 13 awards in the 1985-86 Free Press Writing Award Contest, held in conjunction with Wayne State University and the Charles Mott Foundation.

The contest was open to students from Genessee, Lenawee, Livingston, Macomb, Monroe, Oakland, St. Clair, Washtenaw and Wayne counties, and winners were picked out of 5,000 entries. Only 10 per cent of the entries received an award.

First place awards were given to Minal Hajratwala, a Canton sophomore, for the feature "Banned books: warning this product may be hazardous to your health," and "New requirements strive for higher standards," a feature written by Salem junior Mike Zaretti. Hajratwala also won a first-place award for "In Television We Trust," which appeared in the Perspective's editorial pages.

Second place awards were given to Brian Crum and Colleen McNamara,

By 12:30 in the afternoon the apartment pool is crawling with little red lobsters.
I try to step over them
as they frantically wave and splash, their piercing playful cries
pinching at my ears.

Finally,
I can dive under the rope that divides the shallow beach from my ocean.

I float on my back and let my body be swallowed by a cloud of clear liquid
until the screams of the children become dull and smooth.

I open my eyes
AND LET THE AQUA TRIANGLES
DANCE WITH THE SUN.

But a vibrant orange and yellow invader
penetrates my world

I gasp for air
poisoned by a chlorine mixture.

I surface and recover to find the children
clinging to the boundary rope, yapping and begging like hungry goldfish for their beach ball.

The Nut House by Shawnda Todd

I sat next to the pay phones and watched the car races on T.V. There were six other kids in the room who had all earned their stay in the "nut house". Kathy was sitting at the table in front of me playing solitaire. She was fourteen and looked twenty. She had run away from home twice, to Texas, and got mixed up on drugs. Don always mumbled to himself and he was again mumbling, as he sat back in the easy chair in the corner, on the other side of the room. He was in for selling drugs to a ten year old. Then there was Helen, she was laying on her back in the couch staring up at the ceiling. She had always been very quiet, only speaking when she wanted to leave the room. She had slit her wrists two years before because her parents got a divorce and were putting a lot of pressure on her, then again last year she overdosed on sleeping pills. She was sixteen and a total wreck. Everyone else was in for attitude problems, including me.

I'm just about fifteen and I had been in CDPC, which is short for the Capital District Psychiatric Center, for about twenty days. I got caught taking money from my parents' room and that's what set everything off. My parents found out about me skipping school and changing my report card. Then finally, I got arrested for disturbing the peace one night when I was out with my friends.

I was sitting next to the phones waiting for my parents to call. They were suppose to have gone to see Kate, my Probation Officer, to see when I'd be let out of the "cage". My parents couldn't get me out of here on their own because I was ordered to stay here by the court, the night I was arrested.

When the phone finally did ring, I answered like I didn't know who it would be. "Capital District Nut House, if you know someone in here you ought to join them, Jeremy speaking".

"Jeremy, how are you doing?"

"Not bad, I only got locked in the padded room twice this week." I answered, pretty sarcastic, but it was the truth. I got in a few fights with Don.

"Well, we talked with Kate and she said that the only way you'll be able to leave CDPC is if we take family therapy together at the house two or three times a week, to find out why you act the way you do. Now we're not going to agree to take these sessions if you're not going to participate, so what is it?", she said.

"I guess if I want to leave this place I have no choice, do I", I said.

"Does that mean you are willing to try to work everything out with a counselor or not?" she said and she seemed to be quite annoyed.

"Yeah, yeah it means what you said", I answered then made a fuzzy sound into the phone and said,

"Sorry ma, can't hear you well, I..." then I hung up.

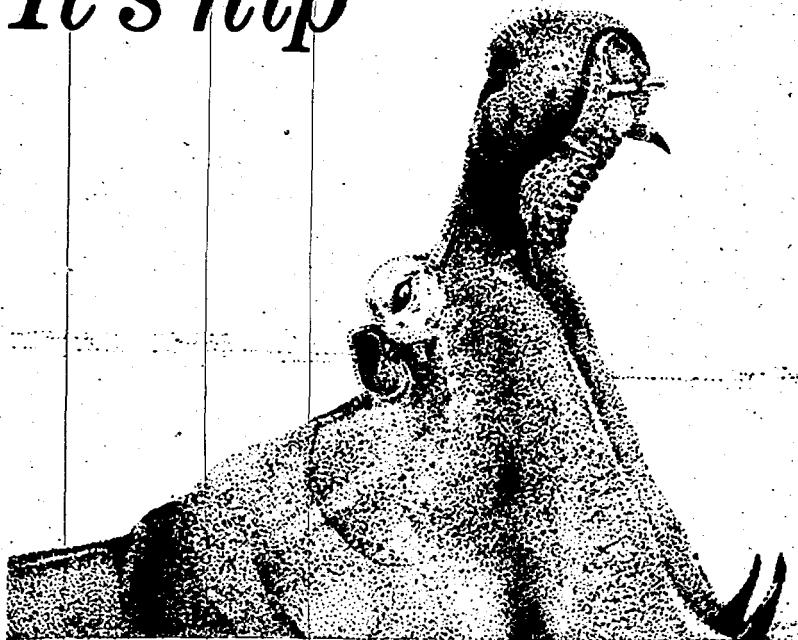

Nobody in the room had moved the whole time I was on the phone. Don was still mumbling and Helen still stared at the ceiling. I looked back at the T.V. and the race was about over. Stuart Miles was in the lead, and some lady driver was right behind him. I hoped Stuart would win because you can't let any girl get the best of you.

I suppose I should explain some things to you. I have two sisters; my older sister, Lora, was fifteen and my younger sister, Tammy was six. Lora acted like my mother and always told me what to do. Whenever we argued, Tammy would take Lora's side. That bothered me; I used to shout and yell a lot when my parents were working. I'd also hit and push Lora whenever we got in a disagreement. The neighbors would hear and see but I didn't care, just as long as my sister wouldn't get the better of me. I guess you could say that was another reason I spent time at the "nut house".

That night I lay in bed thinking about the stupid questions that the crisis counselor would ask. I looked around the room at the bare

Sculpture dedication

BY CAROLE CONKLIN

Balloons and music will create a festive atmosphere at dedication ceremonies Saturday afternoon for the play sculpture in Plymouth Township Park.

The program, set for 4 o'clock, will feature short presentations by school children, representing the relationship between sculptor Peter Rockwell and Plymouth-Canton students. Rockwell has been artist-in-residence in the school district while working on the sculpture.

Student speakers are Jeff Ward, a first grader at Hulsing Elementary School; Steve Laurette, a ninth grade student at West Middle School and Gail Tang, a humanities student at Centennial Education Park. They will share their experiences with Rockwell and the sculpture project.

Other speakers include Lynne Lonigro, art teacher at West, and Dr. David Campbell, who will represent the community.

master of ceremonies. Township Supervisor Maurice Breen will make welcoming remarks and receive the sculpture on behalf of the Township.

The sculpture, a three-part group of friendly monsters and gargoyles, will be decked with hundreds of balloons. At the close of the program, the balloons will be cut by members of the Play Sculpture Foundation, the group which commissioned Rockwell's work.

As the balloons soar, the CEP "Singsations" will sing "Plymouth as People," a song written for the Follies several years ago by Connie Heidt and Frankie Lamerand.

Elaine Kirchgatter, chairperson of the dedication program, said the event will be a "fun-filled celebration of the ending of an exciting time in our community." She encouraged people to come early to view the sculpture.

At 3:50, Andrew Dahlke, saxophonist, will play musical selections as the crowd gathers. Dahlke, a senior at Plymouth-Canton High School, recently received two music scholarships.

Comfortable clothes are the suggested attire, and persons should bring lawn chairs on blankets to sit on. Following the program, light refreshments will be served.

Rockwell leans and plots strategy early one morning on the Plymouth Township site.

A civic minded group pitches in and helps with the polishing phase of the project.

During the project, one of the tasks Rockwell undertook was to do a lot of explaining to various elementary students.

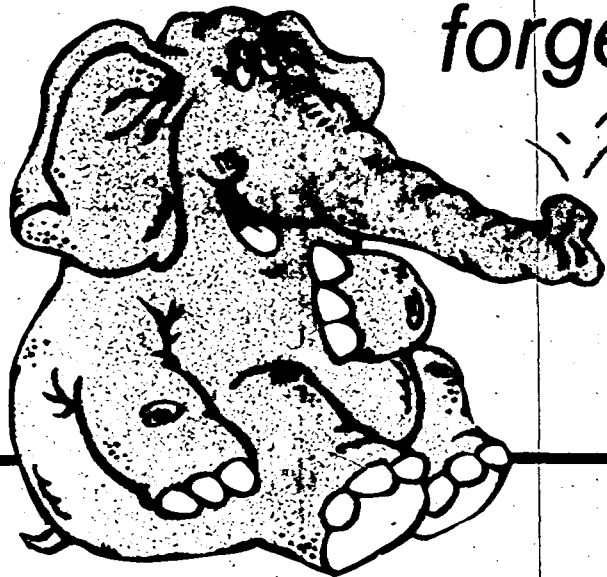

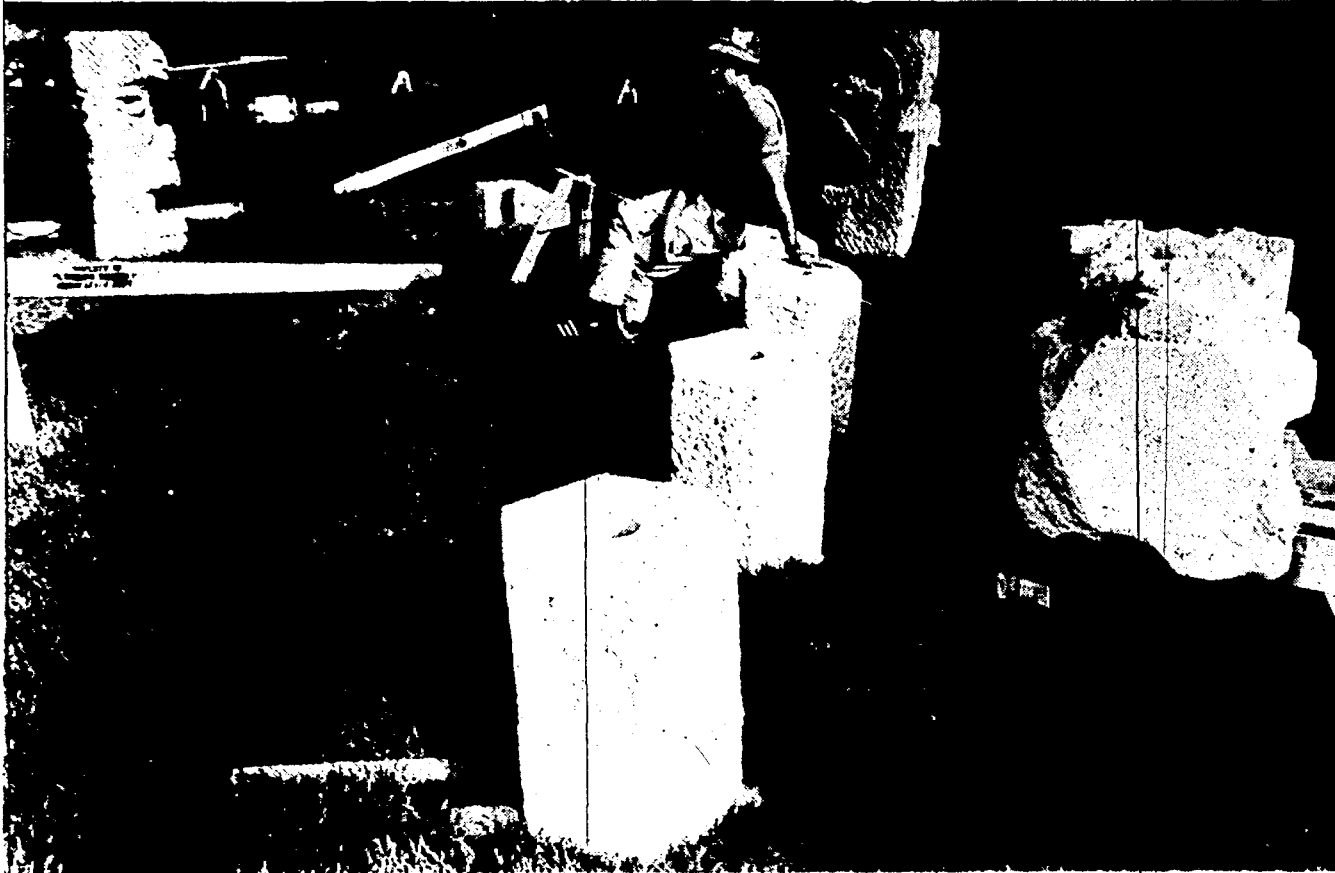

The project was mostly fun, but sometimes boring.

Rockwell takes a break shortly after the pieces were moved to the actual location in the park (bottom photo). At right, Erickson cleans out the holes that were drilled for the reinforcement rods that enable the sculptures to be climbed on.

"I hated Don"

walls. We weren't allowed to have posters. There were two dressers, and Don, my roommate's bed. The room smelled like sulfur because Don was always lighting-up in the closet. I smoked too. Everyone did. It was just something that your parents didn't want you to do, so everybody did it. I whistled "Nobody Knows" until I finally fell asleep, having bad dreams about going home.

I got up the next morning at exactly 7:30 a.m. That's when everyone got up. We were given a half-hour before we had to be down for breakfast. CDPC is a huge building and the area I stayed in was like a large house. Up a few stairs there were twelve bedrooms, and two bathrooms. Down the stairs were the meeting rooms (that's where they have the two-way mirrors) and two padded rooms for people who get hyper or mad or something like that. There was a small kitchen where counselors would cook and an eating area. Also on that floor there was a large living room play area, and four pay telephones.

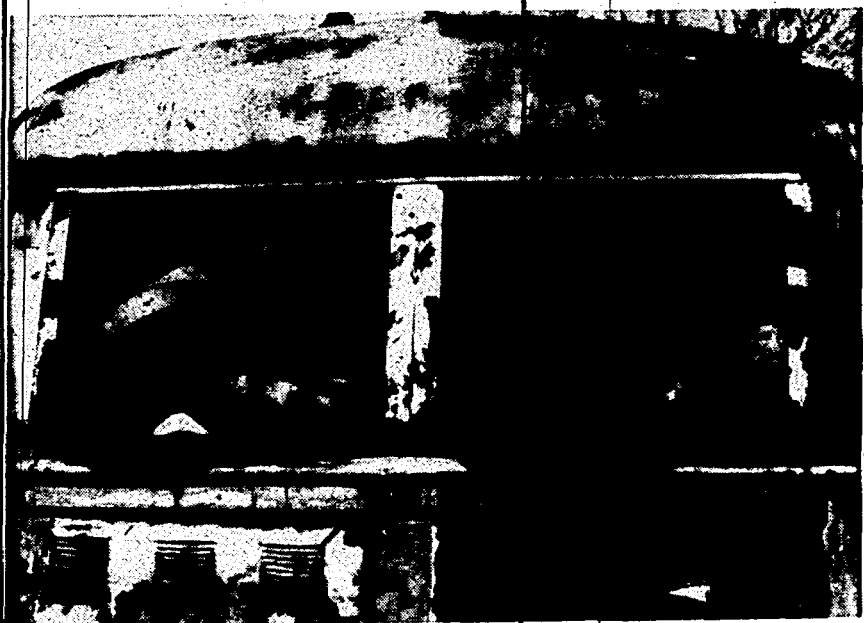

When I got down to breakfast, Kelly, my counselor told me that my parents would come to pick me up at 4:30 p.m. and that if I wasn't in my best behavior that I'd be staying. I knew that it was only a threat because once the court says I can go, they can't hold me back. I ate my breakfast and laughed in Don's face because I was leaving. He took a swing at me but I jumped back and he swung at the air instead. I walked away with a big grin on my face. I hated Don.

When my parents arrived at 4:25, they wouldn't let me go until 4:30 because that's when I was authorized to leave. My parents didn't say but five words to me all the way home. "How are you doing, Jeremy?" I complained about how I hated CDPC and how I was glad to leave behind Don. I don't think they listened to me, but then again they never did listen. It was a forty minute ride home. It felt so strange to be back in the neighborhood.

My sister had dinner all ready when we walked in the door, like she had ESP and knew exactly when we'd be back. We sat down to eat and at first everybody struggled for words, but that was good because I was really hungry. The food at CDPC really stunk. It was worse than what they serve at the school cafeteria. My father sat at the head of the table not saying a word but eating his food quietly. Before I went to CDPC the dinner table was never quiet. My father would start out asking each of us about our day but it would end up with my dad and me arguing. Most of the arguments would end with me walking out of the house.

“...because you violated your probation on your first day back”

“Corrin and I went to see the movie Deadly Eyes last week; it was really good, you ought to see it sometime,” Lora said, hoping that would break the ice.

“Yeah, well maybe”, I answered.

“I guess this is a good time as any to tell you the new rules around here”, my father finally said.

“OK”, I said.

He placed his fork and knife down and looked at me with very serious eyes. “First of all, you cannot go anywhere without asking our permission. You will not be out past nine o’clock. There will be no drinking, smoking, or having friends over when your sister is babysitting Tammy, while your mother and I are working. No hitting, pushing or arguing with your sisters. There will be no ...”

“Wait a minute!”, I yelled, as I knocked my chair out from behind me and ran up to my room, slamming the door. I couldn’t believe my sister would tell on me. I didn’t need her, I didn’t need my parents or anyone. I could take care of myself. That’s when I decided to run away from home. It was the only answer.

The next morning I got up at eleven o’clock. It was Saturday and I was in no hurry to get anywhere. All I wanted to do was get away from my parents and sister. I was just getting up after eating my lunch when my mother yelled after me.

“Jeremy! don’t go anywhere. Brenda Parks will be here soon”.

“Brenda Parks, I don’t know her, why is she coming?”, I asked sarcastically.

“Remember our agreement, you come home and we take family therapy”, my mother said.

“Well I’m sorry but I have plans, you can all get to know each other. I’m going out for a while”, I said as I opened the screen door and walked out.

By the time I got home, it was about 4:30 and my father was really mad. I could tell just by how quiet the house was when I walked in. He was waiting in the kitchen drinking a cup of coffee.

“Bout time you got home”, he said. I was surprised how calm he was. “Just to let you know, Monday, you’ll have to go back to court because you violated your probation on your first day back”. After he said that, he got up and walked out of the room, leaving me standing there.

That night I took a few of my clothes and packed them in a duffle bag and sneaked into my parent’s room, taking all the money from their wallets. It was total of sixty-five dollars when added with my own money. It wasn’t much, but I was sure it would hold me over until I got a job.

I couldn’t get very far with the little money that I had so I spent the nights with my friends (not mentioning that I had run away). After about a week I got arrested for trying to steal some beer from a store with my friends. Once I arrived at the police station, I was asked a lot of questions and was threatened to be put in jail if I didn’t tell them my name and my parents’ name, so I did.

My parents came to get me and I didn’t know what to expect. I knew they’d be mad but who knows what they’d do. The minute my father started the car he said, “Now listen, your mother and I talked this over and we’ve decided that we’re not going to put up with you disrupting this family any longer. Tomorrow we’re going to take you to Kate’s office and she can do whatever with you.”

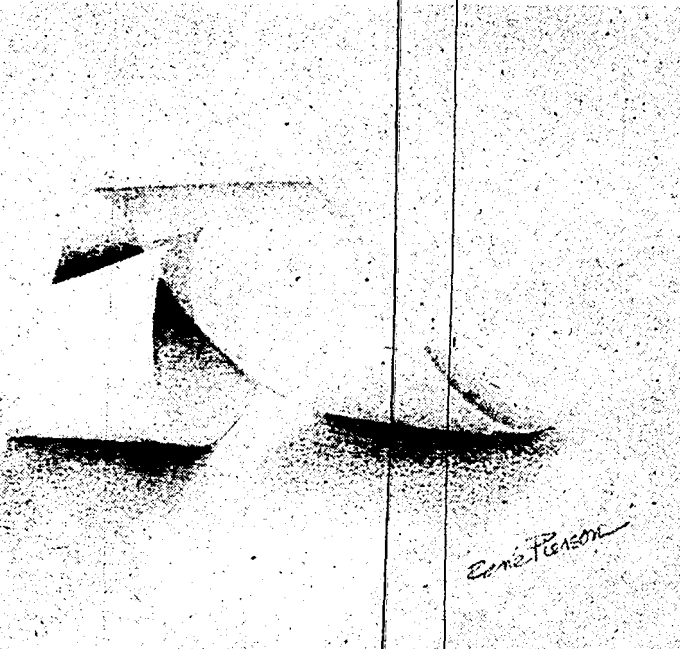

“Yeah! well if you think I care - you’re wrong, cause I don’t”, I yelled at the top of my lungs. “I don’t need you!”

Well, it’s funny how things work out. I look around me and see Kathy sitting at the table in front of me playing solitaire. Don is sitting in an easy chair mumbling to himself again and Helen is staring up at the ceiling. I’m sitting next to the pay phones not waiting for my parents to call to tell me I could go home, just hoping they would call. I guess I do need someone.

 They were small and fragile, often they were admired.
 Yes, they grow like humans,
 but, you don't see them.
 Remember when you lost it,
 your beautiful 14K gold anklet?
 It now survives in New York.
 Remember the bracelet,
 your boyfriend gave to you,
 it too lives in a busy city,
 after you threw it out.
 But, surely you wonder,
 where the chains come from,
 on high structures and bridges?
 Yes, your lost jewelry has now grown to maturity, and lives.
 Happily it lives in Chicago, or remembers you in L.A.

--Geoff Albin

The Glass

There it sits on that brown wooden tray half filled with ice waiting for more.
 As my hand lifts the tray
 The glass tips to the right the left the right and OFF the side.
 Falling down down
 down
 as the ice cubes SCATTER
 The glass hits the ground once and bounces low.
 The second time it hits — CRASH!
 Glass everywhere.
 The sound of laughter.

--Gina Pacetti,

John Stuart Mills:

“Art necessarily presupposes knowledge”

I know what you think—and I'm ashamed of what I did.
I knew drugs weren't the answer—
but I was just a kid.

I thought it wouldn't hurt—
since I've never done it before.
So I took just one hit—and one hit led to more.

It got to be a problem—
I was addicted to the stuff.
No matter how much I had—it just wasn't enough.

It seemed that half my life was messed up really bad—
My needle and my roach clip were the only friends I had.

I didn't know what was real and what was really not—
The more drugs I took—the more screwed up I got.

And I began to convince myself that I had no one there—
And if I Died right now no one would even care.

Even though my family tried to help—
You see, no one could do anything,
No one except for me.

Then I began to realize—finally I was shown
There were people just like me—
I
I wasn't all alone.

I saw that people cared—and really loved me too.
They sent me to a place—
to help pull me through.

So when I see a kid about to take his first hit—
I remember what happend to me—
And try hard to forget.

For me it's all over and done—
But for that poor kid—
It's only just begun.

—Andrea Cassetta

ADVERTISING
ADVICE #342

DON'T RISK STARTING OVER

Remember how long it took you to get started? Once you build up a business, you can keep it going with a moderate, consistent advertising program. But if you cut your advertising and lose your hold on the public's awareness you'll find it's much harder to build it up again. It's like starting all over.

BIG, BEAUTIFUL GUADALAJARA

Guadalajara is the second largest city in Mexico. If you're an art buff, be sure to visit this city.

Jose Orozco, the famous Mexican artist was born in Jalisco and Guadalajara has become a showcase of Orozco murals. You seem to see his work everywhere; the public buildings, the university, and naturally the Orozco Museum all seem to glory in showing off the stark beauty of this man's artistic genius. Orozco's murals in the Colonial styled Hospicio Cabanas can only be described as overwhelming.

The contrast between the old and the new in Guadalajara is well evidenced by the architecture. Although there has been a great deal of modernization, the town has still preserved much of its Colonial past; there are still beautiful parks, gardens, and an old plaza with many fascinating buildings around it. The many-columned Degallado Theatre is there, a symbol of really grand, grand opera! We recommend you include Guadalajara on your next trip to Mexico.

Wehmeyer

commissioners did not seem surprised by his resignation.

"Commissioner Bob Jones said he knew Wehmeyer was selling his house, and that he must not have been able to find a place to live within Plymouth.

It is not known where Wehmeyer is moving to.

When Wehmeyer was appointed in February it was following a two-month vacancy created when Martin resigned in December of 1985.

The commission was without a seventh commissioner for the two months while Mayor William Robinson sought a replacement.

Robinson's job is again ahead of him as he will have to replace the replacement. Commissioners did not know when that would be, and Robinson was not at Monday's meeting.

Wehmeyer, 59, also served on the commission before his appointment in February. Between 1977-83 he was twice elected to the commission.

At the time of his appointment Wehmeyer said that he would not seek re-election after serving the remaining terms of Martin's term.

He also said that he had minor reservations at the time of the offer, saying he didn't think the same people should be on it (the commission).

Plymouth Canton Community for the school election. The Circuit Breaker is a property rebate based on a person's ability to pay. It says no one should pay more than 3.5 per cent of household income in property taxes.

For senior citizens, the rebate is 100 per cent of the excess taxes up to $1200. For other taxpayers, it's 60 percent of the excess, also to a maximum of $1200.

Renters, too, are eligible for the rebate. Instead of the property tax, renters use 17 percent of their rent to calculate the amount which they will be rebated.

Kotcher favored programs for "bright, but not gifted students." She'd like to see languages taught at the elementary levels.

Wines said she'd like to see more proven consumer review programs. She says a closer eye should be kept on the qualifications of those involved with the children.

Dr. McClendon said the system was currently effective. "We need to keep being that way," he added.

Merit pay for teachers was also discussed. Raymor, who has seen the program at his own work was all for it.

Sumpter said he had changed his mind in the last three weeks; now believing it not feasible for P-C Schools.

Zagorski said it might be a way to get the teachers to go that "extra mile."

getting down to business

A touch of class for hair

BY DAN NESS

Yvonne Shorter was frustrated working as manager of a hair styling salon in a large department store, which she had done the last seven years. She got so frustrated, in fact, that she decided to start a business of her own.

Yvonne's Touch of Class hair styling salon, in DJ Plaza at 6720 N. Canton Center Rd. in Canton, has been opened since April, and despite more work, Shorter likes being on her own.

"I don't mind the extra hours or the work," she said. "I'm real pleased with the shop, it turned out well."

Shorter likes the fact that she works with different people every day. "I like meeting different people," she said. "We get very interesting customers."

Yvonne's Touch of Class is a full-service salon for men and women, Shorter said. Shorter is assisted by five other hair stylists at her business.

She is also confident that she made the right choice in starting this, her first business, and leaving the department store salon. "I've seen a lot of mistakes in larger companies. There are too many managers, sometimes," Shorter said. "A beauty salon is not like a store. You just can't run it that way."

The salon is open six days of the week, and on Sundays, Shorter and her husband, who live in Wayne, clean the business. Shorter has high hopes for her salon.

Yvonne Shorter, owner of "Touch of Class" is in the process of her first venture into the thrills and spills of being a business owner. (Crier photo by Dan Ness)

"I know I can make it work," she said. "Maybe 10 years ago I wouldn't have had the courage to do it."

Shorter wanted to open her business in Canton because there were many salons in Wayne, and she likes this area, she said. "I picked this area for the shop," she said.

"I'm real pleased with the location and the area in general," she said. "In fact, I just may move out here."

Sunshine celebrates 5th year

In five years Sunshine Honda has far outreached any expectations people had of the dealership when it opened up shop in Plymouth during May of 1981.

This past May, in the year 1986, the dealership celebrated its fifth anniversary -- and they had a lot to celebrate.

"Since we opened up, we have more than doubled in size," general manager Terry Bixler said. "We started with 17 associates and have more than 50 today" he said.

He said the dealership has expanded from a small 500 to 600 car sales per month, to the largest car-import dealer in the state.

Bixler said that Sunshine, which started in Plymouth with its first dealership, has expanded to six dealerships in Michigan and Ohio.

In celebration of the five-year mark the Honda dealer gave commemorative mugs to all employes and awarded the employes who have worked all five years at the dealership rings.

Bixler credits the huge growth of the company to a "commitment to customer service and satisfaction levels

District Champs!

Canton explodes past district, set for Regionals

BY JEFF BENNETT
AND T.M. SMITH

On the tide of two impressive weekend victories, the Canton baseball team readies itself as host and underdog for its own Regional tournament this Saturday.

Last Saturday the Chiefs ran away with the district crown at Walled Lake, beating Walled Lake Western and Bloomfield Hills Andover, and earned the right to advance to the next round of the state baseball tournament this weekend on the CEP's diamonds.

STATE REGIONAL BASEBALL TOURNAMENT AT CEP

10 a.m. Canton Field	REGIONAL CHAMP
John Glenn (24-2)
Monroe	Championship game 12:30 Salem Field
10 a.m. Salem Field
Redford Union

The hitting barrage for Canton was led by freshman designated hitter Mike Culver and right fielder Mark Stevens.

In the semi-final game they trounced Bloomfield Hills Andover 13-7 before rolling by Walled Lake Western 10-8 in the championship contest.

This Saturday the plot thickens for Fred Crissy's ballclub as they face Westland John Glenn, a powerhouse team with a 24-2 record, at 10 a.m. on the Canton field.

On the Salem field Monroe will tangle with Redford Union to round out the four-team tournament. The winner of the games on each field will face each other at 12:30 p.m. to decide the lone team to advance to the state finals.

Although Canton will enter the game a decided underdog with a 18-14 slate, which hovered below .500 for most of the season, the Chiefs bring with them a winning tradition and a hot bat.

The team's hitters made fast work of their opponents in district play last weekend scoring 23 times in the two games, while allowing opponents 15 tallies.

Culver had two homers, while Stevens had 11 RBIs for the two games, including a grand slam in the first game.

Crissy said his key player for the game was Stevens who contributed fine defensive play for the Chiefs, along with his prowess at the plate.

Steven's and company, however, will have their work cut out for them against John Glenn. The Rockets bring pitcher Steve Irwin and his 9-0 record with them to face the Chiefs.

In his district win Irwin tossed a five-hitter against Wayne Memorial.

The Chiefs are likely to throw back Adam Kocik, who has a no-hitter to his credit this season.

Game time is 10 a.m., admission is $1.50.

Miller leaps for 7th place at state meet

BY T.M. SMITH

Canton sophomore Angie Miller opened a new page in the Canton girls track record books over the weekend, as the high jumper tied for seventh place at the Class A state finals with a leap of 5-1".

Three athletes from CEP traveled to Flint for the Track and Field Championships, but Miller was the only one to score.

"This was the first time that we have had anyone score," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "Angie jumped real well at the meet, and she was very excited."

Before the meet the coach predicted that if Miller was able to clear the opening height of 5-1", there was a good chance the sophomore would place in the meet. Miller turned her coach into a prophet with her stellar

Salem softball out of tourney

BY CHRIS FARINA

Chalk up another year.

The Salem Rocks softball team was eliminated from district play Saturday by South Lyon, 19-4. Salem hasn't won a district game in four years.

Eleven errors and nine walks added up to 20 bases for South Lyon, which was a key to Salem's loss.

In the semi-final Salem beat Howell 5-1. Ann Munding had two hits along with Leslie Plichta and Denise Tackett who also had two hits each.

The second game started bad for the Rocks, falling behind 6-0. But three runs in the third inning brought the Rocks closer.

South Lyon sewed it up by scoring four runs in the fourth inning which crushed any hopes Salem had for a comeback.

Munding was 3 for 3 against South Lyon.

The Rocks finish their season 21-7.

Canton track puts final sparkle on fine season

BY JEFF BENNETT

The last meet of the year put icing on the red and white cake for Canton when they took home the conference title last Wednesday.

But the cake was not easily eaten as Canton and Salem battled down to the bitter end before the meet could be decided.

The Chiefs edged out the Salem Rocks for first place with a 96 point score. Salem was second with 94, Farmington followed with 67, Churchill had 60 and North Farmington rounded out the top five with 44 points.

It came down to the pole vault for the Rocks and the Chiefs.

"We were in a position where if we won and they didn't place, we would tie," said Salem coach Gary Balconi.

It appeared good for the Rocks when Ron Piewko took first with a 12'5" vault. But, Canton's Greg Houstin managed to slip into fifth place which earned Canton two points and the league title.

Tyrone Reeves was Canton's force of the meet.

"He scored a ton of points," said Neu. "Anytime you have that kind of performance, things are going to happen."

Reeves made things happen in the long jump when he took first with a 20'2 1/4" jump. He took third in the 100 meter dash with 11.3 and he was part of the 800 meter relay team that took first with a 1:32.6 time. It was not only a personal best for Reeves, but for his teammates Jim Young,

Roger Trice, and Brian Carney as well.

Reeves, Carney, Trice and Brian whiteley finished second with a :44.6 time in the 400-meter relay.

Dan Hudek in the 300 low hurdles ran a :39.8 for first place and Roger trice took a second in the long jump with 19'10 1/2".

"Mike Spitz developed this team and taught the guys track and field," said Neu. "There was also a lot of senior leadership (this year).

Salem's outstanding runner was senior Brian Neuhardt who scored points in the 200 meter dash with a first place time of :22.43. Neuhardt's jump of 9'6 3/4" earned him third in the long jump and he finished out the day being on the winning mile relay team of J.P. LaRoche, Brian Tiller, and Rick Williams which ran 3:28.68.

Chris Range also had a nice day with a :15.0 first in the 120 meter high hurdles and a :40.35 in the low hurdles for third place.

Tiller scored again in the 100 meter dash when he ran :11.23 for second place.

"I was pleased with everyone's efforts," said Balconi. Salem also scored in all of the relay events with the 400 meter relay taking third with a :45.0 time.

"With the conference meet you need to score and they did," said Balconi. "I told them one or two points in the end will make a difference and it did. It was a good total effort that you could get."

Former CEP athletes make good in college sports circles

The Western Lakes Athletic Association isn't the only place Plymouth-Canton athletes have made their mark this year. In collegiate leagues all across Michigan and in surrounding states former CEP athletes have been competing and showing their prowess.

One of the biggest performances by a CEP grad comes from out of state where Wendy Gilles, the No. 1 tennis player for the Badgers of Wisconsin competed in the NCAA tennis championships in Texas recently.

Gilles, along with her sister Chris, have competed in the Big Ten for the past four years for Wisconsin.

This season Gilles compiled 14-7 mark in singles and a 15-5 slate in doubles competition in leading her team to a second-place finish in the league.

Another out-of-state standout from the area was Jenny Ashton, who made her mark as a freshman on the softball fields on Minnesota.

Ashton is a 1984 graduate of Greenhills School in Ann Arbor, but her parent's home is Plymouth.

As the catcher for the Carelton women's softball team in Minnesota coach Eileen Reading said she was "very pleased with the play of Ashton in her first starting role as catcher."

Here in Michigan, former CEP jocks are making waves as well. At Alma College, 1984 Plymouth-Canton grad Mark Bennett has earned his second Varsity letter as a sophomore for the Scots from the pitching mound.

At Albion Plymouth-Salem grad Mike McBride led his track team as captain and also earned All-League honors in the 400 meter dash.

Canton's Tyrone Reeves and Salem's Jeff Neuhardt also earned a right to compete in the state finals, but found the competition a little too stiff, and were unable to break into the top eight places.

Earlier in the week, the Western Lakes pitted the leagues girls track teams against each other in a race for the league title.

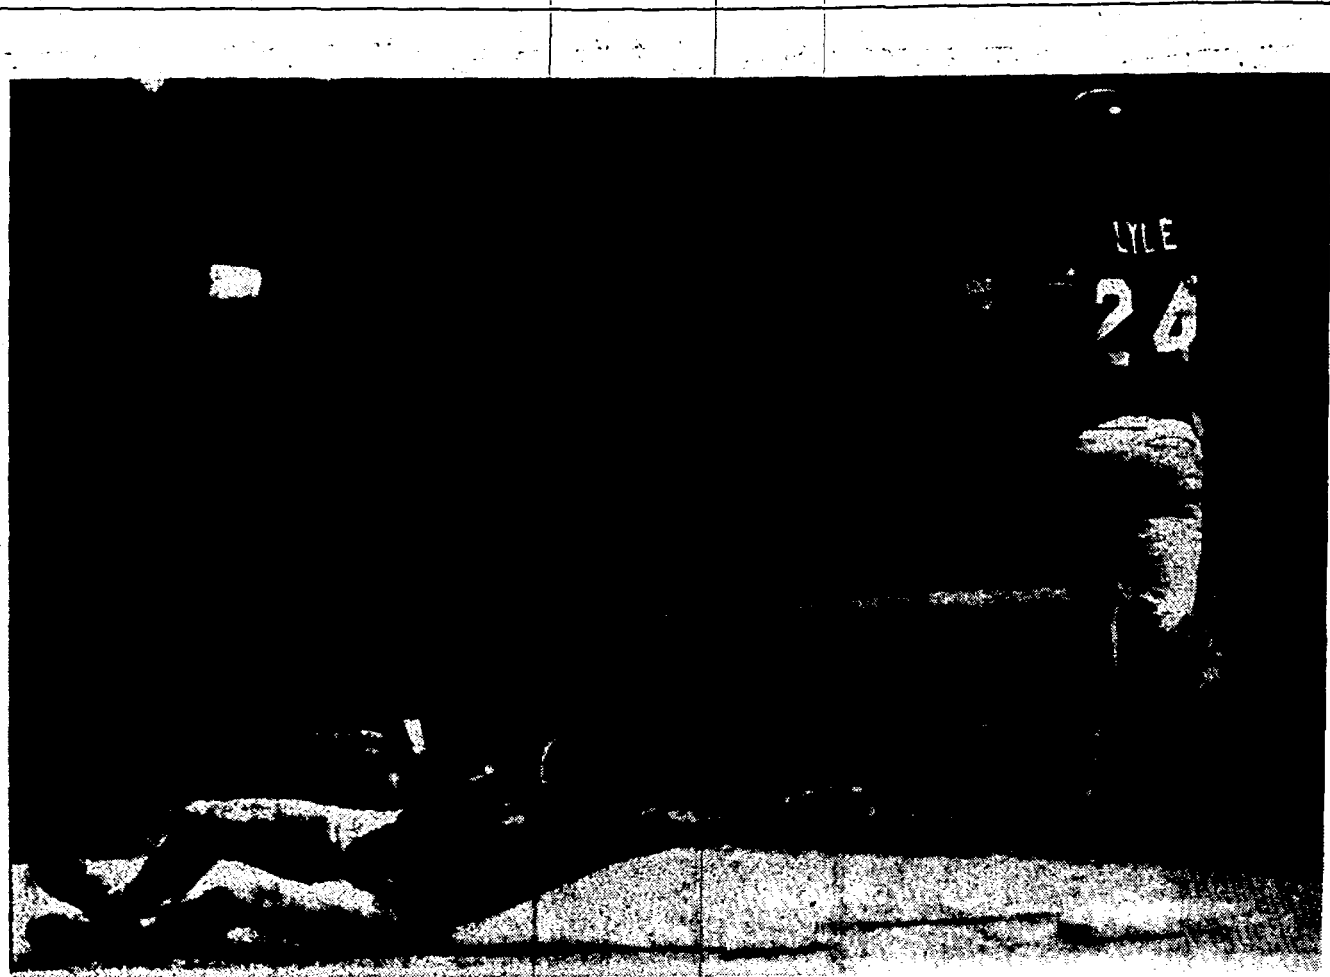

Salem and Canton both scored respectable performances at the league finale, with Salem placing 3rd, and Canton not far behind in 5th place out of the 12 team meet.

Salem finished the meet with 57 points behind the first-place effort of Karen Marciniak in the discus with a toss of 110'-10", and second places from Kristen Houstinski in the 110-meter hurdles. Other seconds were in the 800-meter relay and the 1600-meter relay.

The Canton team was led by Tricia Carney's first-place finish in the 400-meter dash with a time of 1:01.4, and a second place from Miller in the high jump.

Rachel Mann placed third in the 3200 meter run, and set a new school record with her time of 12:04.4.

Przgodski was pleased with the way his girls ran, and thought the meet ended the season on a good note. "We did everything we could. We scored in all the events I thought we would, and Marie Jarosz had an incredible day for us," he said.

Hit the dirt!

Canton's Jeff Lyle is safe at first after his base hit, at Walled Lake Western, against Bloomfield Hills Andover on Saturday. Lyle and his teammates will challenge Westland John Glenn this Saturday at the CEP fields in the first game of the regional match-up. The Chiefs advance to the finals at 12:30 p.m. with a win over the Rockets. (Crier photo by Chris Farina)

Prayer to the Holy Spirit

Holy Spirit, you who made me see everything and showed me the way to reach my ideal. You who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in the short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved one. Pray this for three consecutive days without asking for your wish. It will be granted, and you must promise to publish this prayer.
