New contract first since 1979

Curbside recycling program approved by City

BY KEN VOYLES

Curbside recycling is coming to the City of Plymouth this summer.

Starting July 6 residents will begin using special "recycle bags" designed to hold recycled materials and be put out at the curb for weekly collection.

The Plymouth City Commission

Monday approved the hiring of Mr. Rubbish to run the program. On a 4-2 vote, Commissioners Dennis Shrewsbury and Jerry Vorva dissented.

The new program includes residential solid waste/compost collection, the curbside recycling using plastic bags, cardboard recycling, a small drop off center at the city DFW yard and fall leaf collection.

The plan was recommended by the city administration following the letting of bids earlier this year.

The new program calls for continuing the current bag/tag solid waste system. As a part of the new contract, however, the city will also be providing each household with a one year supply, or some 40 recycle bags. (Additional bags will be available for purchase as well.)

Items that can be put into the recycle bags, at no additional charge to residents, Five Plymouth-Canton residents will challenge the two incumbents during this year's June 8 Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education election.

Jack Farrow, James Mills, Marilyn Schwinn, Tim Vetter and Carol Bollman are candidates on the upcoming ballot. Rounding out the slate are incumbents E.J. McClendon and Barbara Graham.

All were certified for the race on Monday's filing deadline, but can withdraw by 4 p.m. Thursday (April 9).

Besides the contest for the two four-year seats, school district voters will cast their ballots June 8 to accept or reject the Schools of Choice (SOC) plan provided by the board of education's special committee on the subject.

The board rejected the committee's report during its March 30 meeting, giving the choice to local voters. If approved on June 8, district officials will implement the SOC plan beginning this fall.

In another local school election, four candi certified for the Northville Public Schools Board of Education race. Two seats, currently held by trustee Donald Klokkenga and secretary Carol Rahimi, will be contested in the June 8 election.

In the Plymouth-Canton schools race, four challengers are seeking a slot on the board for the first time, while one is a former member hoping to return to the board.

Farrow, 43, is employed by Medar, Inc., a Farmington Hills firm which manufactures industrial process control equipment. His job title is innovator, "which is sort of like research and development," Farrow said. He holds more than a dozen patents, and has lived in the City of Plymouth since 1978.

Artley decides not to run in State Rep race this year

BY RANDY COBLE
Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education President David Artley laid to rest rumors Monday that he would run for the Michigan House of Representatives this year.

"I will not be a candidate," Artley said during an afternoon gathering with local media.

Artley was thought to be lining up as a Republican to challenge State Representative James Kosteva.

It now looks like Dan Calabrese, former assistant to Canton Supervisor Tom Yack, will enter the state race this year instead. Calabrese, who left the employ of the township Friday, has said he is planning to file nominating petitions this month.

Artley cited "higher priorities" in his decision to remain out of the race.

"It would be inappropriate for me to run now," he said. "My first responsibility is to the kids, the parents, the staff and the community.

"There are only two things we can give them," he continued, "roots and wings. A good education is crucial to both. I can't be an effective candidate and handle the responsibilities the voters have given me."

"I'm very concerned about what I see in Lansing," he said, referring to recent school finance moves the state has taken. "They're putting a band-aid on a heart

City plans beefed up cruise effort

BY KEN VOYLES

Instead of hiring additional police officers this summer the City of Plymouth will attempt to battle cruising by beefing up its auxiliary force and maintaining a "traffic zone" along Main Street between Ann Arbor Road and Wing Street.

The city's plans were outlined last Wednesday by Plymouth Police Chief Robert Scoggins during a meeting with about 35 residents and business owners.

It is expected that the city will first try its cruising plans the week of Easter break.

"We've spent a lot of money trying to handle cruising," Scoggins told the residents.

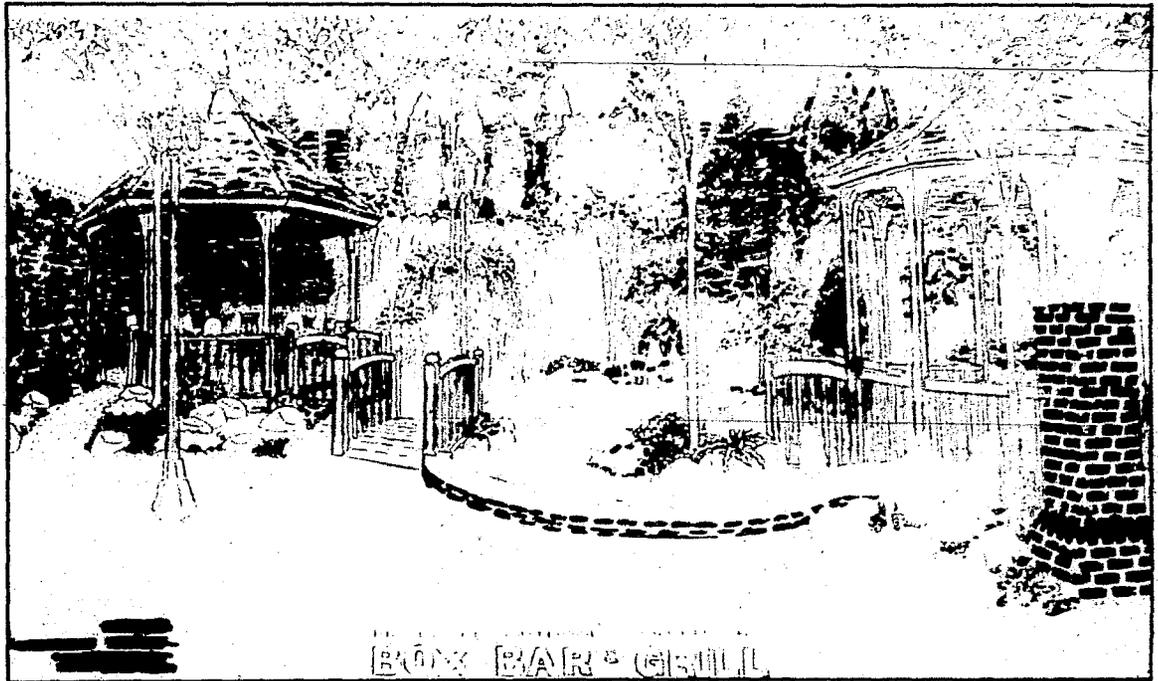

"In the past we've hired up to seven or eight additional personnel," he continued. "We're not going to do that this year."

Scoggins said the city had taken some of its cruising funds (about $65,000) and purchased additional equipment to make the traffic zone in the center lanes of Main more visible and clear.

"We're going to continue the same program as last year," he said. "A firm, fair, consistent approach."

Along with the zone, the police will block off the sidestreets that flow into Main Street. Scoggins said when this was done last year complaints about cruising decreased.

If all goes well Plymouth's Box Bar will feature gazebos, ponds, waterfalls, footbridges, and rockwork planter boxes.

'Wonderland' includes waterfalls

Box Bar outdoor cafe planned

BY RANDY COBLE

Magical. That's one way to describe the vision Box Bar and Grill owner Chip Falcusan has for the outdoor cafe he wants to add to his establishment on Ann Arbor Trail in downtown City of Plymouth.

Falcusan has submitted an ambitious plan to the Plymouth City Planning Commission for approval to build an open air cafe featuring gazebos, ponds, streams, footbridges, cobblestone paving and nearly encircled by mature trees in raised rockwork planterboxes.

The centerpiece of the new addition will be a 12 foot high, 20 foot wide waterfall, which then cascades down to different levels, and supplies the streams that flow into small ponds, where koi, Japanese multi-colored goldfish, will swim, Falcusan said.

Falcusan plans to build his wonderland on the site of Box Bar and Grill's current asphalt parking lot. He said the entrance to the lot, facing Ann Arbor Trail across from Kellogg Park, will be sealed off with a brick wall and decorative iron-wrought gates. The remaining three walls of the cafe will be eight feet high and made of mortared rockwork, he said.

Twelve feet high planter boxes will play host to a series of mature pine and spruce trees, Falcusan said, thus completely shutting off patrons' view of nearby buildings.

"We want people who come in to see two things," Falcusan said. "At one end, it'll look like a Colorado mountainside. At the other end, the cafe will look like an English courtyard."

That effect will come from two wooden gazebos, nestled among the ponds and streams, connected by three small footbridges, Falcusan added.

A second waterfall, 10 feet high and four feet wide, will be built near the side of the Box Bar and Grill that borders the lot, he said.

At night, Falcusan continued, "the waterfalls will be backlit with a blue-toned light. The ponds will be backlit with a greenish glow... the koi will sparkle in the ponds. You'll be able to see the central waterfall easily from Kellogg Park."

Falcusan said that the Plymouth Downtown Development Authority has approved his plan, and the "now the next step is the planning commission. Hopefully, they'll make their decision soon."

Falcusan said he was evaluating bids made by construction companies for the project now, and hoped to make a decision within two to three weeks, "if the Planning Commission and the financing comes through on time."

He said he was waiting to see if there were any further hurdles in the approval process, such as zoning.

Seating in the cafe will depend on the style of seat used, Falcusan said, but the menu will remain the same as in the current restaurant. "We're famous for our burgers; that's our niche. We want to keep that. At most, we may add a salad and a sandwich or two," he said.

The cafe will be a seasonal establishment, he said, staying open "probably in the neighborhood of May to the end of September," depending on the weather.

"We'll probably need anywhere from seven to 12 new employees once we get started," Falcusan said. He added that he planned to hire locally for the positions if possible.

Kosteva: 'I am not a wimp'

Rescind party registration law

EDITOR:

Thank you for contacting my office regarding your thoughts on the presidential primary and the requirement to declare a party preference. I am in agreement with you.

During the 1988 presidential primary campaign in Michigan a very heated and often angry split occurred in the state Republican party between supporters of then presidential candidates George Bush and Pat Robertson. After the primary election was held, legislation was introduced by Republican State Senator Richard Posthumus to return Michigan to the more formal presidential primary system, thereby replacing the caucus system in use at that time.

As this legislation moved through the State Senate, it was then-Senate Majority Leader and now Governor John Engler who introduced the substitute to the bill that made for a closed primary and added the requirement of having voters declare a presidential preference.

At the time it was very opportunistic for Republicans to want a closed system and avoid the open warfare that occurred during the 1988 caucuses. It was only after it became clear that year and early this year that President Bush would essentially be unopposed that state Republicans began charging the only reason for a closed primary was due to the Democrats.

Of course there were other factors involved in re-establishing the primary, such as rules of the national political parties that will not recognize delegates chosen in primaries which do not comply with their rules. It was also hoped that by re-establishing the primary over the old caucus system, the voting public, rather than political bosses, would have more to say about who was chosen as a presidential candidate.

It is important to remember that primaries are designed to give voters the opportunity to nominate candidates from one party or another.

Then, during the regularly scheduled general election, the voting public has the opportunity to choose between candidates that were chosen during the primary.

Party declaration language itself has been found to be constitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court and many states even require party registration in order to be able to vote. Michigan is one of the few states that does not require party declaration for voter registration. That tradition continues.

As you know the 30-day preference requirement was eventually scrapped in favor of letting voters declare on election day.

Nonetheless, public sentiment on this issue has been loud and clear and I understand the frustration which you and many other citizens in my district encountered when being told that in order to vote you had to declare a party preference.

I am hopeful that long before the next presidential primary in 1996, changes will be made preserving the rights of the voting public.

Please be assured that, "No, I am not a wimp and I will vote to rescind this stupid law." And further, if this law is not rescinded, I will vote to make the political parties pay for the election.

Is there a cure for writers' illness?

All writers have to defend what they do to the people around them. Most of our friends and relatives think writing should have its own heading in the Center for Disease Control's list of psychiatric illnesses.

The symptoms of writers' disorder include an obsessive need to work long hours for little pay; a craving for large amounts of sugar and caffeine-laden substances; a tendency to correct the grammar of anyone -- including friends, news broadcasters, and the waiter at your favorite restaurant; and a masochistic penchant for perturbing powerful people with investigative articles.

Still, every disease has its source. And, believe it or not, the rewards of writing are far greater than many would imagine.

Like stage performers, we writers get our reward from the audience. In the time I've worked at The Crier, the letters,

Word processes

By Anna Murray

phone calls, and compliments from people passing me on the street have compensated me far more than any paycheck.

Writing articles for a newspaper is a little like flinging messages out into the universe, never knowing where they will land. It's nice to know people receive the messages and respond.

If this is sounding like a farewell column, it is. But not because I'm giving up writers' disorder. Actually, I think the disease has progressed into a more advanced stage.

It's drawing me back to New York to work an even more crazy schedule -- this time for ABC News.

I will miss the people I worked with -- reporters, editors, commissioners, mayors, supervisors, police chiefs -- everyone who helped show me the ropes. Most of all I will miss the people I wrote for -- the ones who took the time to respond to my articles and columns.

I hope to be back in Michigan some time soon. Perhaps by that time I will be completely drenched with writers' illness: I might be writing boots.

And for myself and all the rest of the afflicted -- I hope they never find a cure.

Were Twp. Mettetal costs hidden?

Just when you thought it was safe...
...the controversy over Mettetal Airport and the ongoing attempt of Plymouth Township to own a piece of it is back.

Various residents of the township have recently expressed concern over matters related to the proposed acquisition.

There have been charges leveled that township officials aren't disclosing the whole truth about money spent and contracts made to see through the grant application for funds the township made to the FAA.

Allegations were raised that last year then township supervisor Maurice Breen may have exceeded his authority in signing a contract for work on the Mettetal project without proper approval from the board of trustees.

Current supervisor Gerry Law and the board took steps to cover up that fact once they were aware of it to avoid looking foolish, the story goes.

The firm who performed this work supposedly was paid out of funds buried in legitimate township legal expenses associated with gaining FAA approval of its grant application for funds to buy Mettetal. Smacks of a scandal, doesn't it?

'Fraid not. A check of the records and township officials shows everything apparently on the up and up. Sorry, conspiracy fans.

The story in a nutshell goes like this:

The board of trustees last year passed a resolution giving the supervisor (then Breen) the authority to cut contracts necessary to complete the grant application to the FAA and the state.

Breen and Law, his successor, then engaged the services of a Novi firm, JCK and Associates, to complete work on some environmental aspects of the application and potential acquisition.

JCK, a engineering, land survey and consulting firm in turn hired Delta Environmental Consultants of Farmington Hills and Birmingham lawyer Alan Miller.

Delta completed the environmental assessment needed for the application, and Miller advised the township on various environmental legal issues. They were paid by JCK.

JCK was then paid in full by the Michigan Bureau of Aeronautics, according to MBA official Oliver House. Its bill totaled $27,932.

Apparently, the MBA advertised for bidders on the needed work, and passed these along to the township supervisor, who chose and then hired JCK.

Since the township only approved the bills JCK sent them and passed them along to the state, that company's work

Since you asked . . .
By Randy Coble

cost it nothing.

Consequently, monies paid to JCK, Delta and Miller do not appear in the $53,970 listing of expenses the township itself covered that had to do with the Mettetal acquisition.

So, the bottom line is that the township didn't pay for JCK's work or that of its subcontractors, and the board gave the supervisor a green light to do what needed to be done to complete the grant application process.

Nothing done here appears to be illegal or improper.

However, that doesn't mean that a close scrutiny of township expenditures and decisions, particularly on such a controversial issue as Mettetal, is neither unwarranted or uninformative.

This little jaunt along the Paper Trail was very instructive for me on how people act and react in political situations.

As a matter of fact, I hope such dissection of government actions, by our elected representatives, by the media, and by John and Joan Q. Public will become the norm.

Never take someone else's word for it (not even mine) if you can find it out for yourself.

Active citizen involvement in our democracy is both a springboard for good government and a safeguard against bad government.

Story long on rhetoric, short on facts

EDITOR:

Anna Murray's article, "Cruising charges dropped: City released of liability," is long on rhetoric and short on facts.

As someone who personally knows the victims involved in the aforementioned article, it appears that Murray has not done her homework. Here are a few of several facts that have been conveniently omitted:

Fact one: This is NOT an incident involving "cruising." In fact, one of the victims was in charge of Dimitri's Party Pantry at the time of the incident and the other was a customer. This is a point that various persons writing about the incident have failed to grasp.

Fact two: Plymouth City attorney, Ron Lowe, intentionally let evidence be destroyed relating to this incident. Also, there is no mention of the photographic evidence showing the use of unnecessary force by city agents.

With malice toward none

By W. EDWARD WENDOVER

The Arts have always been strong in The Plymouth-Canton Community.

They've found much support and many aficionados.

Music. Sculpture. Painting. Photography. Drawing. Dance. Theater. Writing.

It's all been found here.

Now, add film.

"Let's Kill All The Lawyers" -- a just-finished southeast Michigan production -- held its debut to a packed Michigan Theater crowd in Ann Arbor. Many of its backers, and some of its actors, hailed from Plymouth.

And much of the 1,700-sell-out crowd (plus a hefty part of the afterglow) in A Square were folks from Plymouth-Canton -- including a few attorneys connected here.

Notable among the on-screen roles (and noticeable in the opening night crowd) was local Realtor Jim Courtney. Cast as a TV-advertising lawyer, Courtney was a perfect plaid-leisure-suit portrayal of late-night television in-your-face-ambulance-chasers. Of course, some would claim it to be simple type-casting.

Courtney also served as the "Lighten Up Films" executive producer, enlisting a number of local backers.

They included: Tom and Joyce Bohlander, Jim and Jean Jabara, and K.C. Mueller. Will their investment live up to their three-years-in-the-making project's partnership name: "Make a Killing Limited Partnership"?

Bohlander says of the film's $500,000 to produce:

"Investor wise it greatly exceeded my expectations in quality of production and quality of acting. The movie has tremendous market value compared to other movies in the marketplace today."

Writer-director Ron Senkowski has headed to the Big Apple to sell rights to the film. And L.A. is next. He said the low-budget production costs held great potential "even if it goes to four-walling." (That's the movie-land term for brief, big-city showings before taking the film to video sales.)

Profit-wise, the film may more than break even just by selling T-shirts with the logo on it given, today's anti-lawyer sentiments.

Producer Shannon Hamed said the key to producing this film was its Michigan location. "A dollar can go a lot further here," she said. "We've got a good corps of people who aren't tainted (by Hollywood)."

But that doesn't mean the Hollywood Bug hasn't bitten some of the Lawyer Killers' crew.

One opening-night-party butterfly, Starlet Cyndi Mueller -- if you look real quick in the film she was the student who sat two folks over in the scene of the law school entrance exam -- looked to catapult her cameo into true stardom some day. Those who see "Let's Kill All The Lawyers" can say they saw her first.

And it's worth seeing just to add a few new lawyer jokes to the repertoire.

Sets new policy as well

City approves DDA cafe 'experiment'

BY KEN VOYLES

The experiment begins.

The City of Plymouth Commission Monday unanimously approved a move to allow the city DDA to enter into an agreement with the Penniman Deli to operate an outdoor cafe on an experimental basis.

The DDA and deli will use the street right-of-way to establish the outdoor cafe in front of the Penniman Avenue business.

The commission's move Monday allows the DDA to now enter into an agreement with Russ Webster, the deli owner.

City Manager Steve Walters recommended the commission authorize the move.

The commission also unanimously approved a sidewalk cafe policy.

The city's current cafe policy will be continued, however, with some minor refinements. The policy does not address cafe structures which extend into the street beyond the curb line.

Earlier in March the Plymouth Planning Commission approved a draft of the cafe policy, but at the March 16 city commission meeting city attorney Ron Lowe raised questions about the city's ability to enforce the provisions as drafted.

The commission, though, did indicate a general agreement with the concept and intent of the planning commission's recommendation subject to the review by Lowe.

Walters said the DDA expected that areas for cafe operations would be planned into the city's streetscape design and be inside the sidewalk areas once those areas were enlarged and redesigned.

Lowe said the new policy does not allow for the deli's operation of a cafe in the street, but commission approval of the plan would allow the DDA and Deli to join forces.

Commissioner Bill McAninch said the experiment is to the city's advantage since it will help get people downtown.

RESA hearing tackles school land transfer

BY KEN VOYLES

A public hearing is planned tonight (April 8) at the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency (RESA) to consider a plan to transfer 87 acres of Canton land from the Van Buren Schools to the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

The transfer plan was worked out between developer Bob Paciocco and Van Buren Schools, said Van Buren Superintendent James Richendollar.

"We have promised to petition the intermediate school district to place the given land in the adjoining school district in return for growth and development in our own," Richendollar said. "I expect (the plan) to be well received by the intermediate."

The land transfer affects property in the new golf/residential development in Canton known as Pheasant Run.

Richendollar said Paciocco agreed to develop homes on land in Van Buren Township by 1994.

Plymouth-Canton Schools Superintendent John M. Hoben said the district board of education was likely to go along with the plan.

Hoben said the land transfer was worked out between Van Buren and the developer and did not involve Plymouth-Canton officials.

Choice plan also on Schools ballot

Farrow graduated from the University of Michigan in 1971 with a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering. He is married and has four children, three currently attending Plymouth-Canton schools, in 12th grade, first grade and kindergarten.

Farrow has served in various volunteer capacities, including the TAG advisory committee and the 1989 I CARE millage campaign.

He has sought a seat on the board in the past, two years ago withdrawing from the race after getting on the ballot.

Farrow sees the issues of technology and budgeting as crucial.

"I understand the range of technology, and the limitations and pitfalls of technology. I believe my knowledge could be a great help to the School Board in that decision-making process," Farrow said in a statement of his position.

"State versus local funding for the schools is a big issue as well," he added.

However, Farrow sees improving public education as the number one issue on the board's agenda.

"It's all about improving public education," he said. "You do that or you'll sit here 20 years from now and wonder why the Japanese own this and the Germans own that and we don't own anything."

Mills, 29, works as an underwriter for Blue Cross/Blue Shield in Southfield. He lives in Canton, but grew up in Plymouth.

In 1985, he graduated from Taylor University in Indiana with a bachelor's degree in math education. Mills received a master's degree in mathematics from Eastern Michigan University in 1991. He is married with no children.

Asked about key issues, Mills said that "the biggest one is our financial situation, the cutbacks.

"We're in a state of unsureness, the board may pass a budget and then the state will take away some more money from us," he said.

Mills, who was a substitute teacher in the school district for a brief time, added, "I have a desire to be involved in education here." He has tutored district students in math at night for the past three years.

Schwinn, 47, has lived in Plymouth Township for the past 16 years. She is a registered pediatric nurse with the Detroit Medical Center's Woodland Center network.

Schwinn graduated from Miami Valley Hospital School of Nursing in Dayton, Ohio, in 1966. Before joining DMC, she worked as an AIDS educator and counselor for two years with the New Health Center. She is a single mother with three children.

Two of Schwinn's sons graduated from Salem High School, and her youngest son will do so on June 8, election day.

"State funding cutbacks are the number one issue," said Schwinn, a former Plymouth-Canton Schools board member for five years. "I've had experience in wrestling with budgets. I did while on the board, but then for personal reasons felt the need to be at home more often."

Referring to the SOC plan, which was mandated by the state, Schwinn said, "The idea of choice is wonderful, but the board, the community just can't afford it," she said.

Vetter, 37, has lived in Canton for the past nine years. He owns Drapery Design Studios, a custom drapery, curtain and blind shop in Canton. He has two children in the Plymouth-Canton system, in fourth grade and kindergarten.

Vetter received his associate degree in liberal arts from Schoolcraft College in 1974. He attended the University of Michigan-Dearborn, then transferred to Lawrence University in Southfield. He graduated with a degree in business administration in 1977.

"The kids are first priority," Vetter said. "Whatever decisions the board makes will affect them most of all."

Like the other candidates, Vetter sees the school budget as another critical issue for the board to deal with. "We're facing up to a $7 million deficit this year. This may imperil our program," he said.

Vetter sees other items on the board's agenda as well.

"A new superintendent will soon have to be picked," he said. "There's a possible bond issue coming up. With a vested interest as a parent with children in the school system, I want a voice in those decisions."

Bollman, 48, has lived in Canton since 1979. She is married and has three children.

"My oldest daughter has been identified as handicapped and is in a special education program in Livonia," she said. "This gives me a parent's perspective on the special education curriculum in the system."

Bollman has two other children, one who graduated from Salem High School and another who attends West Middle School.

She graduated from Ann Arbor High School, now Pioneer High, in Ann Arbor. Bollman attended Jackson Junior College, and has worked for Coca-Cola, the University of Michigan and the Canton Chamber of Commerce. She describes herself as a "home mom" now.

She questioned the "constant negative attitude" of many current board members.

"Are we actually in such a doom and gloom scenario as we've been presented?" Bollman asked, citing her concern over the budget. "It's almost propaganda: we'll go bankrupt, they're saying, we'll destroy the program, destroy the schools."

Bollman also said she wants to see the board address curriculum issues, the "pay to play" issue and money being spent on certain remodeling projects by the district.

"The main reason I chose to get into this is that too many people running are not making enough changes, the changes this district needs," Bollman said.

She also expressed a desire for more female representation.

"I'd like to see more women on the board."

Squaring off against the challengers are incumbent trustees McClendon and Graham, both residents of the township.

McClendon, 71, has been on the board since 1972, serving three terms as its president.

He is a professor emeritus of public health at U of M, and engages in occasional research projects and off-campus teaching activities. He has received degrees from the University of Oklahoma and Wayne State University.

McClendon was born and raised in the Native American Choctaw Nation in Oklahoma and served as an officer in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

He has written six books and many articles in professional journals. McClendon has served as a consultant to the World Health Organization of the United Nations, and has worked in 26 countries.

McClendon is a father of three children, all of whom went through district schools.

McClendon said he too sees the budget as the key issue facing the board.

"This monstrous manipulation and adjustment has set us back on our heels. I've been through crises like this before," McClendon said, "so I know how to preserve as much of our program as possible."

"The number one focus of the board must be what happens in the classroom," he said.

McClendon also saw a major goal as "adjusting to the age of technology. No one right now says U.S. education is where it should be."

Graham, 57, works as a cashier at the Meijer store in Canton. She has lived in Plymouth Township for 13 years, moving there from Detroit. She has three children, the youngest of whom graduated from Salem High School.

Graham is in her first term on the Plymouth-Canton Schools board, and served for six years on the Detroit School Board.

Graham shares the concerns of her fellow candidates over the district's financial affairs.

"They're giving us a pretty rough time in Lansing," she said.

Graham feels that issue intertwines with the success of the incumbents in the school board race.

"It all depends on community perception. If they see the board as having done well and see Lansing as the culprit, we (on the board who are up for election) won't have as bad a time. It's up to them."

Graham sees another vital issue the board must handle as "the problem of promiscuity among our young people."

"For 20 years, I've seen the current sex education program continue, and meanwhile we've seen teen pregnancy and venereal diseases reach epidemic proportions," she said. "We need to return to common sense. We can't look to a condom to solve all our problems. Parents need to get angry, to address this. That's why I want to get involved."

In the Northville school board race, four candidates have been certified, John Street of the Northville Board of Education business office said.

Competing for the two open seats in the June 8 election will be Glen Meisel, Patricia Custer, incumbent trustee Donald Klokkenge and incumbent secretary Carol Rahimi.

Voters will also vote on their district's SOC plan as well, Street said.

Northville school district voters will cast ballots April 28 on a millage renewal and increase. The renewal to be decided is 22.63, and the increase is 2.78.

If voters reject the initiative, they may see it again on the June ballot, Street said. "Right now, however, it's not an issue for the (June 8) election," he said.

Canton eyes golf plan

A decision on how to finance and construct the golf course phase of the Pheasant Run project in Canton may be closer at hand.

Last night the Canton Board of Trustees looked at several options for financing and building the project. A vote on which option to use is possible sometime this month.

Among the options facing Canton's board are whether or not to consider a management lease or a township management plan, and whether or not to go with private financing, non-recourse bonds or general obligation bonds.

Canton Supervisor Tom Yack said Monday that he was leaning toward the township building and operating the facility itself.

Under that plan, he said, the township would provide the backing for the $4.5 million in general obligation bonds needed to pay for the construction of the golf course.

"We think we have enough experience ourselves," said Yack.

Plymouth graduate runs casino

High roller

BY ANNA MURRAY

The leap from Plymouth to Las Vegas is a big one, spanning a gulf between Norman Rockwell and the glitz of casino gambling. But at least one Plymouthite has made the transition.

Mel Larson, a graduate of the Plymouth High School Class of 1946 who remembers his hometown newspaper as the Plymouth Mail, is now executive vice president and director of Circus Circus Enterprises, Inc., a hotel-casino conglomerate in Las Vegas and other Nevada cities.

His operations are known in the casino industry for their bright pink and white hue — a candy cane color combination taken from the circus theme that guides many of the Circus Circus holdings.

Larson even runs a pink and white helicopter service, a venture he undertook with his wife Marilyn who also flies. The copter company provides private tour and filming services of the Grand Canyon.

At Circus Circus, free circus acts perform from 11 a.m. until midnight.

Circus Circus Enterprises' other properties include the Excalibur, which contains an area recreating the legend of King Arthur's Court and a twice daily performance of the Royal Lippazanner Stallions. A new $200,000 stable houses the stallions.

The Colorado Belle is a 1,238-room replica of a paddlewheeler on the Colorado River in Laughlin, NE. The Silver City

MEL LARSON

Casino, Slots A Fun Casino, the Edgewater Hotel and Casino, Circus Circus Reno.

And Larson has a new project underway for a Pyramid-shaped hotel, named Project X until the official name is released.

Larson began his career in the U.S. Air Force. But when the air force transferred him to Phoenix in 1951, he decided he wanted to pursue the fast track on land instead of in the sky.

So he bought a race track, drove race cars and traveled the country as a promoter of racing. This brought him into contact with the Las Vegas crowd.

"I tell everybody I raced into the business," Larson said.

Larson said he has organized to mini class reunions in Las Vegas. "One time 60 people came, and another time we had 50," he said.

"All my old friends come through here at one time or another," he said.

Larson said Las Vegas is more exciting than Plymouth and more lucrative.

"The economy is great here compared to the rest of the country," he said. "I would never have made as much money if I had stayed in Plymouth."

Still, Larson knows many of his best customers come from places like his hometown.

"We cater to middle American families," he said. "We offer quality rooms and food at budget prices."

Circus Circus is known as one of the few family-oriented Las Vegas Hotel Casinos.

Larson said he returns to Plymouth about once a year to visit friends.

Breen, Amann get districts back County redistricting plan approved by committee

BY RANDY COBLE

The Wayne County reapportionment committee was expected late Tuesday to adopt a new redistricting plan that will benefit the two Plymouth-Canton county commissioners.

Under an order from the Michigan Supreme Court, the commission must have adopted a plan before the end of the day April 7. The commission was scheduled to meet at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday to choose a final map of the county commissioners' districts.

County Executive Edward McNamara and Commissioner Bryan Amann (D-Wayne) recently challenged an earlier redistricting plan that would have placed Amann and fellow Commissioner Maurice Breen (R-Plymouth) in the same district, forcing them to compete for the lone seat.

That district would have included Wayne, Canton, Plymouth and Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township and a small part of Livonia, Breen said.

McNamara and Amann argued that the plan violated the Voting Rights Act and would cut cities and townships into pieces that would confuse voters.

The court heard the appeal and sent the plan back for review to the commission, composed of four Democrats and one Republican.

Breen currently represents the 10th district, which includes the City of Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville Township and part of the City of Northville.

Amann has the 11th district, which encompasses Canton, Belleville, Wayne, Romulus, Huron, Sumpter, Flatrock and Rockwood.

Under the plan expected to be approved Tuesday, Breen would gain all of the City of Northville and part of Livonia.

Amann would lose Flat Rock and Rockwood, while retaining the majority of his existing district.

"It's a compromise," he said, "a legal, technical and political compromise. Probably the emphasis could be placed on the last one, though."

Breen described the new redistricting scheme as "an incumbency plan," and said he foresees changes in his constituency.

"I was much happier with what I had," he said. "Now this district is stuck in two different Congressional districts, with two different state representatives. It's a little messier now."

"There was more interaction, more community identification, between Plymouth and Canton than between Plymouth and Livonia," he added. "They were communities with similar issues and similar problems, if you will."

Amann disagreed with the charge that planners drew the new lines to secure the jobs of current commissioners.

City budget review set

A review of the City of Plymouth's 1992-93 city budget will begin Thursday (April 9) and continue over four more sessions until the end of the month.

The Plymouth City Commission will use the review sessions to refine and prepare the budget before the May 8 public hearings and adoption of the budget.

The other review sessions are planned for April 11, at 11 a.m.; April 13, 7 p.m.; April 16, 7 p.m.; and April 27, 7 p.m.

The proposed 1992-93 general fund budget includes revenues of $5.8 million, $5.7 million in operating expenses and $92,000 in reserve, for a total of $5.8 million in expenditures.

While property tax revenues are up two per cent to $3.1 million, other revenues are expected to fall more than one per cent from $1.9 million to $1.8 million. State funds will increase by three per cent to $853,000.

Expenditures are expected to increase 1.5 per cent.

The proposed general fund budget is based on a current millage levy of 12.86 mills.

The city's general fund began the 1991-92 fiscal year with a deficit of $199,000, which is projected, according to City Manager Steve Walters, to be eliminated by June 30.

Walters said that was accomplished by two major amendments to the general fund during the year, reducing both revenues in response to deteriorating returns of state revenues and expenditures to produce an offset to the deficit balance.

Walters said the 1.5 per cent increase in general fund expenditures reflects the restoration of some of the projects which were deferred to deal with the 1991-92 deficit, such as repairing the Cultural Center roof.

RESA hearing

Canton Supervisor Tom Yack said he did not want to get in the middle of the issue, but added, "Our position is that subdivisions and developments should all be in one school district or another."

The balance of the Pheasant Run project falls in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district.

The public hearing will be held at the RESA facility at 33500 Van Born Rd., in the City of Wayne. It begins at 7 p.m. in rooms 250A and B.

Following the hearing the RESA Board of Education is expected to vote on whether or not to approve the land transfer.

COMMITTED • COMMUNITY • COMMUNICATIONS

The Community Crier

Kevin Martin, whose artwork has graced The Crier's covers and opinion pages for the past year, has been named Employee of the Month for The Crier and its publishing company affiliate, COMMA.

Martin, 23, was cited by the company for his contributions to The '92 GUIDE to The Plymouth-Canton-Northville Community as well as for work on publications produced by COMMA, such as Buck Fax (the magazine for Commemorative Bucks of Michigan), and two GUIDES now in progress.

"Kevin's growth in the artistic side of publications and the new computerization process has contributed a great deal to the appearance of all our publications," said Crier-COMMA, General Manager Phyllis Redfern. "He typifies the commitment of our company's staffers to produce the best possible publications."

The Crier's editor, Ken Voyles, praised Martin's editorial cartooning. "The recent piece on Michigan's party registration for the presidential primary will surely bring recognition in one of the press competitions."

Martin wins dinner for two at the Mayflower Hotel along with the praise of his colleagues, who add that this honor for the graphic artist was in no way connected to his "extra" role as building maintenance handyman—"Mr. Hardware," as he is sometimes known.

Anti-cruising efforts in City will begin Easter break

"That had a positive effect," he said. "We could then control the direction of the cruisers." At the same time, however, it increased the number of vehicles jamming Main Street.

The central zone was also used for emergencies, he said, as well as a way for police officers to shuttle up and down Main Street to trouble spots.

Scoggins said the traffic zone ended a lot of the "cat and mouse games" with the youths.

"I think we are on to something with the traffic zone concept," Scoggins said. "We're going to revisit it this year."

This year auxiliary officers, armed only with radios will patrol up and down the zone on foot while officers, in as many as four to six patrol cars, will remain "mobile," said the chief.

"This is the best program I have," Scoggins said. "There have been access problems for residents but the officers will help you get to your street."

The first city anti-cruising efforts will be tried during Easter break, said Scoggins, the week of April 20-24.

Scoggins said his department would also alter its work shift patterns to better manage the cruising patrols.

"We've made personnel changes in our own department to accommodate this," he said. "In the past we've had as many as a dozen officers out there and we weren't winning. I hope not to have to use so many this year."

Scoggins said the auxiliary officers would be the "eyes and ears" of the department and help handle traffic.

"We will save money with this approach," he said. "That's our intent. We want to preempt bad behavior, eliminate bad behavior and save money."

One resident at the meeting asked about using curfews to reduce the problems.

A businessman along Main Street suggested owners come out on cruising nights and set up lawn chairs and eventually the youths will leave because there are "too many old people" on the street.

One high school student at the meeting, Dan Retherford, said that if residents didn't want the youths on Main Street "maybe you could find something for us to do."

Residents shot back that the youths could "watch television," or "get a job."

Retherford, a Catholic Central student, said such answers by residents don't "solve anything."

"A great number of us are trying to solve the problems," he said. "Your attitude seems to be very hostile to us."

Residents said it was not up to the adults to find things to do for the young people who gather to cruise.

"The majority of the kids are good. The problem is there are too many of them," said Scoggins. "And residents get frustrated."

"But if one per cent of them are bad it's not something we can tolerate," he added.

Another Main business owner wanted the city to find a way to "create extreme inconvenience" for outsiders who come to Plymouth to cruise.

Another said the city should see if the CSX railroad firm would park a train across the tracks along Main Street.

Scoggins, who said he plans to meet with Plymouth Township Police to coordinate activities, said the city had no right to stop vehicles from entering Main Street.

Another student on hand for the meeting suggested the city buy the old Farmer Jack's lot and turn it into a parking lot for the students.

Plymouth City Manager Steve Walters said, "Why Plymouth, that's the mysterious part."

"Part of it may be the initial reaction the community made of it -- that made it an event," he said. "It's now an actual social beast and self-perpetuating."

Last year the cruising was concentrated along south Main Street with hundreds of youths on foot, especially during the weekends. Police reported an increase in random violence and confiscated weapons.

Other cruising concerns center on the noise and traffic volume, disorderly conduct, drinking, loitering, and urinating on private property.

Public hearing on Twp. group home

The Plymouth Township Board of Trustees will hold public hearings on the proposed Eastside Drive group home April 27 at 7 p.m. in the regular board meeting room at the township hall complex.

The board made the decision unanimously at last week's meeting.

Christ Centered Homes, Inc., has notified the board of its wish to open a group home on Eastside Drive in the township.

Township Supervisor Gerry Law said that the township must notify all residents living within 1,500 feet of the proposed location.

"The township has no veto power over this, it's all in the state's hands," Law said. "Right now, we're doing what state law tells us to do -- notification, hearings and so on."

While acknowledging the state's primacy in the final decision, Law said he wanted to give "the needed information" to township residents.

Ask why they have to pay 19 cents

Elvis stamp debate grips local residents

BY RANDY COBLE

Patrons of the U.S. Post Office in Plymouth are all shook up over voting on which visage of the King of Rock Roll to place on a new postal stamp.

And over having to pay for the privilege.

Yes, Elvis Aaron Presley fans, the big day has finally come. People all over the United States had their first opportunity Monday to pick up mail-in ballots at their local post offices and cast votes for one of two designs for an official stamp series commemorating the jailhouse rocker.

Some local postal customers remain unimpressed with the event.

Postal clerk at the Penniman street office Kathy Hornback said the demand for ballots was not large on Monday.

"We've had a few ask for them, but a lot handed them back when they saw they had to put a 19 cent stamp on it," she said.

Dave Varga shared similar sentiments.

"I don't have an opinion, not if I have to pay 19 cents to express it. I don't have to pay to vote for president, why should I pay to vote on a stamp?" he asked.

Many were unaware of the democratic event.

"Voting on an Elvis stamp? Really?" said one local resident outside the post office.

"What?" said Dave Zerweck, a local resident. "Elvis is still alive, you can't put him on a stamp yet."

One person who worked in the city but declined to give her name was a bit caustic.

"I find it pretty humorous that they're going to such lengths. That's our government for you," she said.

The two competing designs contrast each other, and illustrate the changes that took place in the life of the Tupelo, Mississippi, born singer, hip swiveler and (sort of) film actor.

The first portrait of Presley is a 1950s-style image of Elvis, where he had slicked-back hair and minimal sideburns, crooning into an old-fashioned microphone, wearing a suit coat and tie.

It is the Elvis of youth, the one who drove a truck before cutting his first record as a gift to his mother, the one against whom adults raged when he appeared on the Ed Sullivan show, gyrating suggestively.

customers? "The same ones we have now (at the Box Grill)," he said. "Average, everyday people -- husbands, wives, boyfriend and girlfriend. Anyone who appreciates beauty and a great burger," he said with a smile.

Falcusan said he hopes to break ground, complete construction and open the cafe in five to eight weeks.

Falcusan sees a role for the cafe beyond its use as an eatery. "What if during the Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular people could walk through (the cafe) and see a carving of a six foot bear?" he asked. "There could be winter displays as well. It could become a viewing attraction to enhance all kinds of city festivals and events."

Darabos bound over

A man who stabbed his wife in a Plymouth Township mobile home park and held police at bay for more than eight hours will be arraigned on the charge of assault with intent to murder.

Steven Darabos, charged in the March 26 stabbing attack on his wife, was bond over to Wayne County Circuit Court Friday by 35th District Court Judge James Garbar.

He faces an April 16 arraignment on the charge in circuit court. Darabos remains in Wayne County Jail.

But don't think Falcusan stops there. He sees his plan as "hopefully, just the first step" in a renaissance for Plymouth.

"This is a city which is creative, has vitality. People here are willing to make the long-term commitments to the city, to make something to be proud of. This project will be the exclamation point on this point," he said.

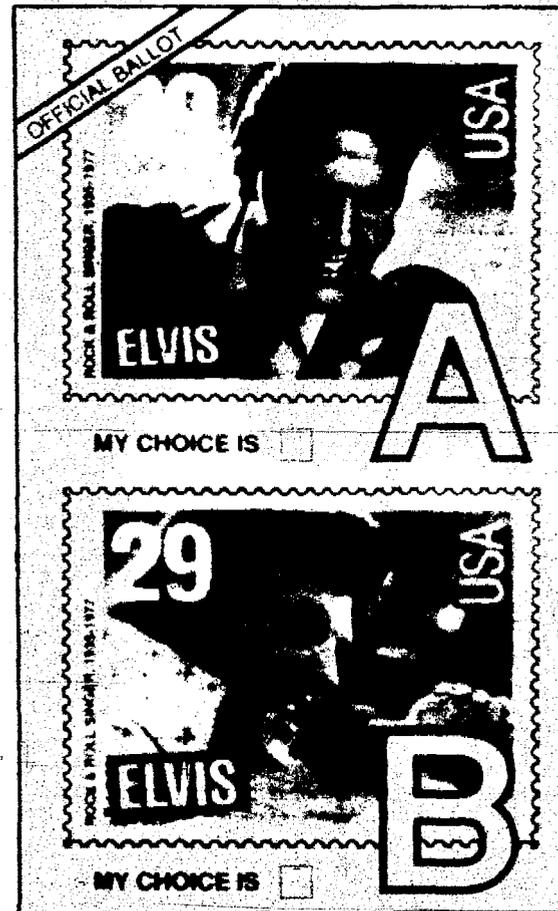

"I see the possibility of restaurants (in Plymouth) working together to appeal to all our customers. It's very important to me that the other restaurants in this town succeed so we can work together. I don't want to succeed and see the Cozy Cafe (down the street from the Box Bar and Grill) fail, for example," Falcusan said.

He went on to describe some ideas he has for cooperation among city businesses. "What if restaurants gave customers beepers on busy nights, so they wouldn't have to wait for a table at the door? Here's a beeper, go and stroll and shop and we'll let you know when your table is ready," he said.

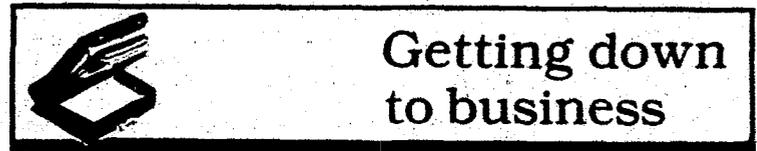

"What about a network among local restaurants?" he continued. "I could call down the street and say, 'Hey, I'm packed here. Do you have any tables?' and then send customers to them," Falcusan said. "There are lots of possibilities."

What does he want people to know about his new cafe?

"It's unique. It's beautiful," Falcusan said. "There's not going to be another outdoor eating establishment in this area like it, not anywhere. It's an awakening for the city, a big step forward for Plymouth."

The young Elvis, or the old Elvis, take your pick. Residents gobbled up stamp ballots Monday and Tuesday at the Plymouth Post Office.

Foreign trade zone in Twp.

The W.F. Whelan Co., a general-purpose foreign trade zone (FTZ), based in Romulus, moved more than 28,000 square feet of FTZ warehouse space to Plymouth, April 1.

This move allows warehouse space at the Mitsubishi facility on Industrial Drive, in Plymouth Township, to act as a foreign trade zone.

A general purpose foreign trade zone permits a company to store, distribute, inspect, test or relabel imported goods in the zone without paying U.S. Customs duty. Duty is paid when the goods leave the zone. No duty is paid if the goods are re-exported.

Win season opener

Salem softball squad reorganizing

BY ANNE SULLIVAN

There are a lot of changes this year with the Salem varsity softball program. It has been reorganized from the ground up.

Perhaps the most obvious change is that of head coach Al Campbell. He was hired as coach this year, and is making his debut as a high school fast pitch varsity coach this season.

Campbell has 15 years experience

coaching women's slo-pitch softball, and was honored last year as "Coach of the Year" in the United States Slo-Pitch Softball Association.

Campbell has coached his slo-pitch teams to more than 1,600 wins, has won five world series titles and more than 100 major national tournaments.

He has no illusions of being a miracle worker with the softball program at Salem, but he hopes to set some new ground work at Salem and improve on last year's 7-19 record.

Campbell is starting from square one, teaching fundamentals to the Rocks and grooming a program. His short term sights are set on this season, but he is eyeing down the road. "I had 28 freshman come out this year, and not a one was cut," said Campbell. Freshmen made all three teams.

Three seniors are returning to the varsity squad this year. Emily Guilliani will take her spot at third base. Outfielders Dawn Alex and Kim Tykoski are returning to their positions.

Juniors on the varsity squad this year are pitcher Jenny Garvey, infielder Jennifer Lock, left fielder Amanda Tubaugh, catcher Amber Trombetta, shortstop Kristin Stackpoole and Lori Tomczek at second base.

Sophomore Jenny Coleman saw varsity action last year and will return to the Rocks either as a catcher or outfielder.

Completing the outfield will be juniors Marcy Londo and Jenna Stanton, who also pitches.

New to the program this year is junior Holly Lehner, who will either cover first base or take the designated hitter position.

Joining the program for the first time, and making the varsity cut is freshman Stacy Sinke, who will play first base.

"Our goal is to be very competitive and be a challenge within the division," said Campbell.

In the Rocks season opener Monday, against Farmington, the Rock chalked up a 9-3 victory.

Jenny Garvey pitched a cone-hitter and threw 10 strikeouts.

Chief kickers solid this year

BY ANNE SULLIVAN

It's been an unusual season for soccer this spring. With six inches of snow the week before the season opened, and the Centennial Educational Park soccer field under water, Don Smith, Canton coach was wondering how the season would get started.

The Chiefs opened their season last Monday in an away match against Farmington Harrison. Canton had a powerful game, defeating Harrison 8-0.

Canton's home opener, last Wednesday against Farmington was moved to Central Middle School. The Chiefs defeated Farmington 3-1.

Saturday's game against Troy Athens was cancelled. The Chiefs played Livonia Franklin Monday, winning 2-0. The Chiefs overall record is now 3-0.

The Chiefs face division rival Livonia Churchill at home today (April 8).

In his six years as Canton coach, Don Smith only remembers his first season schedule being hindered by the weather.

It ought to be a good season for the Canton girls soccer team with 13 seasoned players returning.

Last year, the Chiefs tied with Northville as division champs. Smith has his sights set on winning the conference and moving up in the state this year.

Canton's record last year was 11-5-1, but the Chiefs only lost to three teams, state champions Troy Athens, cross campus rival Salem, and co-division champs Churchill.

Smith sees "solidness all the way around, the ability to substitute and not lose skill on the field, and a strong bench where everyone contributes," as the assets of the team this year.

Four seniors are returning to the team. Tri-captain Christina Stansell will return to her position as midfielder. Returning to their defender positions are Danielle Meyka and Rebekah Raymor. Amy Tortora is the senior forward.

The seniors aren't the only seasoned players this year. The Chiefs will also see four juniors with three years of varsity experience under their belt. Junior keeper Jori Welchans is back for her third season. Forward Colleen Connell, midfielder Leah Hutko, and defender Kathy Bahr have returned to the team.

Junior Amy Wesserhold has two years varsity experience in the midfielder position. Junior defender Juli Nelson is bringing two years of varsity experience to her defender position.

Three juniors moved up this season from the junior varsity squad. Defender Kelly Reeves, midfielder Becki Cifaldi, and forward Erica Sivelglos.

In his bag of tricks, Smith has three sophomores each on the varsity squad for their second season. Midfielder Alyson Nouse and forwards Britta Anderson and Mandy Salia are returning to the team.

Three more sophomores were added to the varsity squad this year, up from junior varsity, defender Lynn Haines, and midfielders Robyn Vashow and Erica Anderson.

Two freshmen were also recruited to the varsity squad, keeper Amy Toms and

Top notch Canton linksters look to repeat

BY ANNE SULLIVAN

Coming off an undefeated season last year, it's hard for Canton girls golf coach, Dan Riggs, to imagine improving on that record.

"We had three goals last season," said Riggs. "Our goals were to be division champs, conference champs and to qualify for the states. We made two of those goals. Our goals this year are the same."

Riggs has coached the Chief linksters since the team started seven years ago.

"Last year was the best team I ever had," said Riggs. "This year's team has the potential to be as good, if not better than last year's team."

The seven starting linksters this year are all varsity lettered players and include seniors and tri-captains Ann Vernon, Katie Konovilitv and Melissa King.

Three juniors will be starting, Audrey Meisner, Christine Wertenan and Val

Smith. Sophomore Laura Schilling will also be starting.

Rounding out the varsity roster are junior Michelle O'Beirne, sophomores Michelle O'Brien, Carrie Lozon, Loren Gross and Karen Kelly.

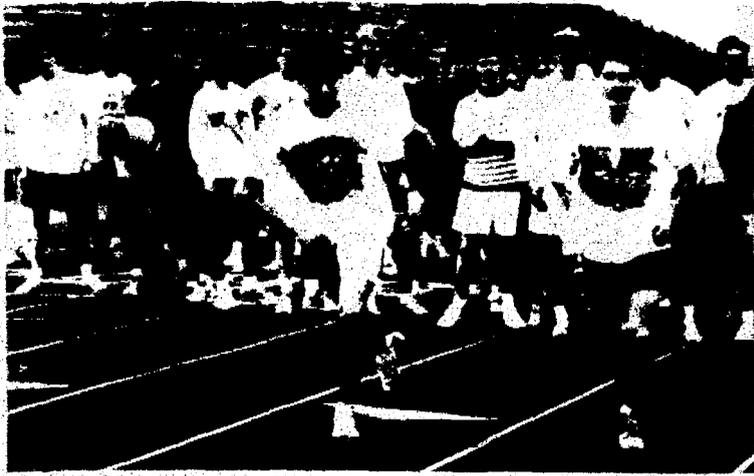

Three seniors graduated from last year's undefeated team. Although they were top players, the void will be filled.

"Eight of the girls have been taking private lessons and working out over the winter," said Riggs. "They have a strong desire to do well."

"Last year, Melissa Vernon, who is now at Duke, was captain. Her sister Ann is taking over that role this year. Both are goal oriented and have a lot of drive. Ann helps out that way with the team."

Riggs expects Stevenson and Northville to offer the toughest conference competition.

Salem boys track team hope to find success

BY JAY KEENAN

First year head coach Geoff Baker realizes that his Salem boy's track team will have a hard act to follow.

After all, the Rocks are coming off one of their more successful seasons.

Last year, Salem won the Western Lakes Activities Association Conference meet, the Lakes Division, and the Elks and Tiger Relays. The Rocks were also 6-0 in duals.

On top of that, Salem graduated a handful of prominent high jumpers, along with several key hurdlers and throwers.

But with a strong distance crew and a promising cast of returnees, Baker is confident that the Rocks can hit peak form by the end of the season.

"We have good depth in our distance core," said Baker, who takes over from long-time mentor Gary Balconi. "This year, we're going to look to our distance team and sprinters because we're not as strong this year in the high jump."

"Last year's team was well rounded in every event. We had a key, if not one or two people, that were above average that would score points."

Salem returns senior captains Steve Boudreau and Jayson McDonald. Boudreau finished second in the WLAA in the 3200 meter run and can also race the 800 and 1600.

McDonald, another distance runner (800-1600) was a part of the Rocks' league championship 3200 relay team.

Junior Derek Cudini, a strong contributor at 1600 and 3200, is also back along with junior Justin Richardson (1600-3200) and sophomore Mike Wooters (800-3200).

Wooters also ran on Salems 3200 relay squad. Senior Leon Hister, Salem's other captain, returns as a sprinter and the team's top long jumper.

Senior Justin Fisher and juniors Rob Kenny and Mike Richard will see action in the short distance and relay events.

Baker also has high hopes in sophomore sprinters Adam Bakowski, Jay Casey and Andy Coburn, along with freshman Mark MacInnis, who provide hope for the future.

Junior Todd Forbes is another sprinter whose main expertise will be utilized in the relay events.

The Rocks will also be fortified in the hurdles with juniors Brian Beauchene, Don Johnson, Jamie Miller, Matt Homes, and sophomores Dan Miller and Brian Herk.

The shot put and discus events will feature seniors Dan Kaczmarek, Dan Stevenson and Bob Smith, along with sophomore Jeff Schumacher and freshman Rockland Johnson.

Junior Mike Stone will compete in the high jump, while Coburn and Johnson complement Hister in the long jump. Johnson can also jump high.

Baker, an assistant under Balconi since graduating from Salem in 1982, will be aided by assistants Jeff Armstrong, Jay Blaylock, Scott Austin and Pat Bowie.

Canton netters win

BY ANNE SULLIVAN

The Canton boys tennis team opened its season Friday, at home, with a 6-1 win over Farmington.

The Chiefs took every match except the number three singles, which was lost in a three game set.

Facing harsh elements and working with a new coach, the Chiefs started their season showing they could come back and repeat as division champs and conference champs this year.

This week will be a real test for the team as they face competition four days, culminating with a match Friday against Salem.

Facing Farmington in the number one singles slot was Adam Magewski, who took the match in two games, 6-0, 6-1.

Joe Binder played in the number two slot, taking the match in two games, 6-1, 6-1. Mike Donhaust in the number three singles position lost his match in three games. In the number four slot, Vipul Parikh took a win for Canton.

In doubles competition, all three teams chalked up a win in their season opener. Jeff Furst and Stu Levanbach played in the number one position. Eric Baden and Alex Warden took the number two doubles competition. Steve Griffin and Steve Dale played in the number three slot.

Rounding out the varsity roster this year for Canton are Scott Boersma, Chris Bry, Brad Yeager, John Mincher, Joe Kim and Ryan Byrne. New to the program and playing in reserves are Casey Mouthart, Mike Ross and Mike Phillips.

New to the team this year is Canton coach Fred Libbing. He replaced Jim Hayes who retired last year. Libbing may be new as a coach, but he's not new to the game.

Back in the days of Plymouth High School, Libbing donned the Rocks uniform and was captain of the tennis team in 1957.

"I think we'll do real well and continue the tradition of Jim Hayes," said Libbing. "I think he did more for tennis for Plymouth-Canton schools than anyone else I've been aware of. I think we have a good shot at the conference. Last year we were third in the region. We can do the same thing this year from the looks of it."

Rock tennis team takes win

The Salem boys tennis team opened the season Friday with a 4-3 win over North Farmington in division competition.

On a blistering cold day for tennis, the Rocks battled North in a tight meet taking three singles and one doubles match.

The Rocks grabbed wins in the number one, two and four singles spots, and the number one doubles.

Playing in the number one singles for Salem was junior Jason Grimm, who captured the win in two games, 6-1, 6-4.

number two singles match in two games, 6-2, 6-1. Junior Kevin Laber in the number four slot took the win in three games, 6-3, 2-6, 7-6.

"It was a tight match all the way around," said Judie Braun, who has been coaching the Salem boys tennis team for 10 years. "The last match decided the overall winner."

On the doubles court, Salem's number one team of seniors Kevin Clough and Ryan Polkowski took the match in two games, 6-2, 7-6.

Braun is carrying 14 varsity players this season.

Salem girl runners ready

BY JAY KEENAN

Salem girls' track coach Mark Gregor has a strong-flavored message for his team opponents.

"I think everybody who runs against us should be prepared," said Gregor, now in his sixth year at the helm. "We're going to throw the whole kitchen sink at them. It isn't going to be a matter of where we're going to give anybody any free points because we're going to be competitive everywhere. We're not going to hold back at all."

"This is also the best team morale and team unity we've had. If we can stay injury free and work well as a team, it's going to work wonders."

Gregor has reason to be optimistic.

For starters, the Rocks are coming off of a respectable season and welcome the return of a cast of veterans, including two state qualifiers. In 1991, Salem was 5-2 overall, 4-1 in Lakes Division duals, third in the Western Lakes Activities Association Conference Meet, and champions of the Belleville Tiger Relays.

Heading this year's cast are senior captains Nikki Santilli and Theresa Giachero.

Newcomer junior Vanessa Benning could provide some points in the 100 and 200 sprints, while sophomore Sarah Makins shows promise in the hurdles.

Sophomore Alysia Sofias, a 16-foot long jumper last year, could be another prominent force for Salem. German exchange student junior Sandra VonHolt and junior Cheryl Lim appear to be the top candidates for the high jump.

The 800 and 400 relay teams could likely feature Benning, Driscoll, Saphias, and freshmen Sarah Hamilton and Sarah Lapinski.

Wheeler will also see action in the 800 and will anchor the 1600 relay team. Other members of the 1600 squad include sophomores Jessica Moyer and Lynda Sebestyen, with the other spot going to either Hamilton, Driscoll or Saphias.

Withhoff and Czaplinski will likely compete in the 3200 relay. Other candidates for that event are Moran and distance runner Karca Boudreau.

Salem's girls' track team opened its season with a sixth place finish at the 42-team Spartan Relays Saturday at Michigan State University.

forward Melissa Tomci.

"I've got 'em in all grades," said Smith. "It's a good solid group. There are four good seniors, who hopefully will provide good leadership, and juniors with good experience. It could be a very good season. I hope it is. We're going to try hard."

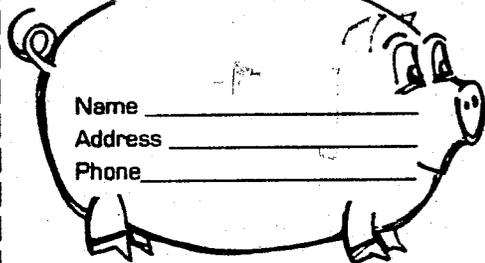

Looking ahead to the season, Smith sees Salem, Livonia Stevenson and Churchill, Novi, Troy and defending state champs Troy Athens as the toughest teams to face.

Recycling program going curbside in City

include newspaper, with inserts; corrugated cardboard; mixed office paper, including some junk mail; type one and two plastics; and tin and aluminum.

However, the program will require residents to take glass and household batteries to the city's drop off site at the DPW yard. The center would also collect materials from businesses not using the residential program.

The new hauler is expected to come on line May 4 with curbside recycling starting July 6.

The new program was developed with the ending of the current city rubbish contract with Midwest Sanitation. That contract expired last month but was extended. It did not include curbside recycling. (The last time the city bid the contract was in 1979.)

The new contract calls for a three year program at a cost of $272,000 for the first year and a slight increase the following two years.

Paul Sincock, the city's public works director, said the city has significantly decreased its trash flow. Prior to the bag/tag program residents averaged 2.5 bags or cans of trash each week. That is now down to one per week, he said.

"Recycling is really big here," Sincock told the commission Monday. "Our rate of recycling is higher than in communities even with bins."

Vorva said he preferred to continue the current program.

"The way we're doing it is just fine for me," he said. He said residents were unlikely to use the recycle bags if they couldn't put glass in them.

Shrewsbury raised concerns about the financial ties between Mr. Rubbish and Waste Management, which also bid on the program. He called for postponing the vote but the motion failed on a 3-3 tie vote by the commission.

Commissioner Dennis Miller said he wanted to keep costs down. "I'm interested in a program that maximizes our ability to reduce our solid waste and keep costs down," he said. "I think (program) two does that."

The other alternative of keeping the current system would have been about $14,000 cheaper in the first year, while the third alternative of going to a recycle bin for curbside recycling would have cost about $36,000 more.

Sincock said one of the most asked questions from residents using the current drop off recycling program behind City Hall was when the city would go to curbside recycling.

Canton limits auto sales

A new Canton ordinance will regulate the use of private property to sell used automobiles.

According to Canton Police the new ordinance, which went into effect April 1 in Canton, will prohibit the use of private property for the sale of used vehicles.

"We've had some problems in the commercial areas of the township," said Tammy Colling, a Canton Police spokesperson, "so we had to establish this ordinance."

The ordinance was originally approved by the Canton Board of Trustees in December.

The ordinance came about, said Colling, after complaints about residents parking their vehicles in shopping mall parking lots with for sale signs. It covers automobiles, motorcycles and motor homes.

The civil infraction will carry a fine of $100, said police.

"Those people in the township confronted with the problem are thankful we're doing this," said Colling.

She added that residents will still be able to leave vehicles on their own property with for sale signs.

Local's book

Matthew Lee, of Plymouth, has authored his second book, "SEAGRAVE, A Pictorial History of Seagrave Fire Apparatus."

The Seagrave Company, founded in 1891 by Frederic Seagrave, became a world leader in the design and production of fire ladders, engines, and additional fire apparatus products.

Elvis stamp voting

It's the Elvis who bought Graceland for his beloved mother, who young people turned out across the country to see as he traveled by train to report for induction into the U.S. Army.

Artley

transplant. You gotta change the way you fund schools and you gotta do it now," he said.

Artley, 47, is president of the Canton Republican Club, said he will eventually back one of the candidates currently in the state house race. He has been on board for nearly nine years.

"I'll look at them carefully and will support wholeheartedly the one who most closely represents my views," he said.

Artley expressed his feelings openly. "Sure, I'd like to run. I'm not afraid of a fight. But I took the job of president to lead, not to back off. I think the best fight is the one for the quality education for our 15,000 school age young people."

It is the young man who returned from Europe with a young bride named Priscilla, the one who stood out among the rockers of the 1950s.

One cannot understand that decade, or the people who grew up in it, without acknowledging the role of that young, innocent Elvis Presley.

The second design features an older, changed Elvis. He is dressed in the jumpsuit he favored in the 1970s, his hair looking blow-dried, his fingers gripping a modern microphone, adorned with gold rings. His face looks heavier, accentuated by the long sideburns.

It is the Viva Las Vegas Elvis, who had made 33 movies, most of them unremarkable. Presley was seasoned by then, and looked it.

Alcohol and drugs had taken their toll, as had the stress of a comeback. And yet the stamp design reminds one of the King's shining moments during that brief revival, as an oil lamp flares brightly for a minute before it dies.

Presley died in 1977, but the ballots Plymouth post office patrons picked up Monday bears testament to his enduring legacy in the American mind.

Horton joins Twp. race

than a slogan, it should be the underlying philosophy of everything the township does."

Horton has served 15 years on the Plymouth Township Planning Commission and was appointed to the board of trustees in 1982 to fill an unexpired term. In his first real election in 1984 Horton led the ticket among trustee candidates. He won re-election in 1988.

Raised in Adrian, Horton has a master's degree in government administration from the University of Pennsylvania.

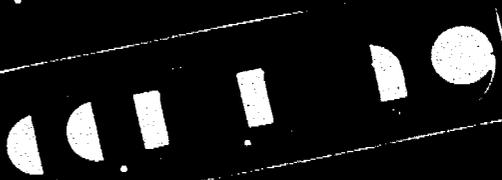

Horton said the township has "grown well."

"I would just like to continue the emphasis on our planning efforts as in the past and get the WTUA thing behind us," he said.

Horton also said he wasn't happy with the stifled debate over WTUA at a recent township meeting and said he regretted not reacting at the time.
