FRIDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1901

The Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General has issued an order establishing a postoffice at McKinley, Franklin county, in the State of Washington. This is the first postoffice named in honor of the late President since his death.

The higher officers of the War Department have taken to wearing their uniforms while on duty at the Department, in this following the example of all European and other armies, and the example by ourselves set during the war with Spain. No order has been issued on the subject, but it is hoped that the officers generally will adopt the idea.

Consul McCook of Dawson has sent to the State Department a general warning against fraudulent mining companies which float stock on alleged Klondike properties. Most of these, he says, possess nothing of value and pay dividends out of the capital of the company; their officers meanwhile living on the fat of the land and drawing big salaries.

Senator Morgan, known as the "father of the Nicaraguan Canal," laughs at the report of an engineer that he has discovered a new route presenting less difficulties than either the Nicaraguan or Panama. Mr. Morgan says that ten governments have spent 200 years and hundreds of thousands of dollars in investigating this subject, and does not believe that they have missed any route of value.

General Chaffee advises that the number of troops in the Philippines be not further reduced at present and the War Department has acceded to his ideas on the subject. It was supposed that our army there could shortly be reduced to 24,000 men but now the full 40,000 will remain. About 20,000 men, whose enlistments expire shortly, will return but others will be sent to take their places.

The Census management is trying to get some better statement of the wages paid in this country for manufacturing work than the misleading figures as to "average earnings" heretofore given. These were obtained by dividing the total payroll by the number of employees and gave no indication of the real rates. The new method will be to copy the actual payrolls of typical establishments and average them.

Exports of merchandise for the nine months ending September 30th, amounted to the enormous sum of $1,046,228,274, which is $14,264,036 more than for the same period of last year. The imports for the first nine months of 1901 amounted to $646,957,728, which is $22,490,295 more than for the same period of 1900. The balance of trade in favor of the United States for the first nine months of the new century amounts to $399,270,540.

It is not generally known that Mr. Roosevelt applied for a post on the staff of Fitzhugh Lee at the breaking out of the Spanish War, but withdrew his application in order to organize the Rough Riders. A day or two ago, General Lee called on Mr. Roosevelt and congratulated him on his failure to go on his staff. General Lee it will be remembered, did not get into action, and had Mr. Roosevelt joined him, he would not now be President of the United States.

United States Consul Albert, reports to the State Department from Brunswick, that the Germans are making efforts to raise cotton in their possessions on the west coast of Africa. The government has taken into its service four intelligent negroes from Alabama who have had a good school training and are experienced in the cultivation of cotton. They were selected by the president of the Tuskegee Institute, in Alabama. The men left New York last year, taking with them all necessary tools and machines. The President of the Tuskegee Institute has received a letter from one of them, saying: "We have brought under cultivation 100 acres of land, a part of which has been planted in cotton, corn and peanuts. The cotton has already more fruit than many a farmer America gets in a whole harvest. I find the natives are glad to work, but they can not accomplish much and soon become tired."

Chas. B. Weemar, Evanston, Ill., writes: "My boy 2 1/2 years old had a severe cold which refused to yield to any treatment until we tried Foley's Honey and Tar. He was completely cured before using one bottle." Take none but Foley's. Wolverine Drug Co.

Postmaster General Smith will recommend to Congress the appropriation of half a million for resuming the pneumatic mail service in the big cities of the country, which was knocked out at the last session, chiefly owing to the peculiar methods adopted by the company owning the patents in the matter. Mr. Smith has decided on this action as a result of the efforts of a delegation of Philadelphia business men, who presented to him an enormous petition in favor of the system.

The declaration of war by the Sugar Trust against the beet growers of the west may have far reaching results. If the beet sugar men can extend the area of conflict from the western points, to which the Trust seeks to confine it, to the entire country, the chances are that the sugar cane men will regret their action. No doubt the Trust can afford to lose the amount involved in the cut from 6 to 3 1/2 cents at western points, but when it is obliged to lose it all over the country, the pinch will come. In a rate war, the competitor doing the largest business always suffers the most. Moreover, Secretary Wilson declares that if the farmers can once be persuaded of the value of the by-products of the sugar manufacture, the result of the battle will no longer be in doubt. He says: "No fertilization is needed to grow sugar beets in the United States, provided rotation of crops is practiced, the lands being sowed to beets once in four or five years. The beets can be refined and finished by neighborhood factories—much on the principal of the water mills that used to grind the neighborhood's wheat—and the refuse pressed into cake and returned to the owner, who can use it for feeding his stock. This cake contains all the elements of nutrition needed by cattle. Abroad it is even fed to horses with excellent results. Thus everything taken from the soil is restored thereto and there is no deterioration. I fully believe that before long all our sugar will be made from home grown material. Evidently, the Sugar Trust believes this too, or it would not be trying to crush the beet sugar men."

Woman's Literary Club.

The woman's literary club held its second regular meeting Friday afternoon, Oct. 18, with Mrs. C. Shattuck. A large attendance answered to roll call, after which the usual business was transacted. Mrs. Ella Chaffee and Mrs. C. W. Valentine were chosen delegates to the annual meeting of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Ann Arbor in the near future. After the reading of "Hamlet," the fourth division, under the leadership of Mrs. Ella Safford, gave the following program: Birth of Russia—Paper, Mrs. T. C. Snerwood; the Mongolians in Russia—Oral, Mrs. W. J. Adams; the Ivans and their Work—Paper Mrs. H. Shattuck; Contemporary European History—Brief sketch, Mrs. J. H. Patterson. The Round Table topics were, "Moscow, the holy city," "the Kremlin." On motion club adjourned to meet Nov. 1st with Mrs. Frank Shattuck.—Sec'y.

Nineteen ladies, representatives of the Woman's Literary Club, were pleasantly entertained Thursday afternoon, Oct. 17th, by the Northville Woman's Club in their pleasant club room, the village library, the latter made most attractive with palms and the club colors, pink and green. After a pleasing address of welcome by the President, the program opened with a violin solo, beautifully rendered. The afternoon was chiefly given to a discussion of the subject, "The Influence of the Drama." The topic was handled with much insight and enthusiasm, both sides presenting interesting food for thought. A social time, with light refreshments followed, and after many pleasant greetings, the club adjourned, the Plymouth ladies feeling greatly indebted for a most enjoyable afternoon.—Sec'y.

Drs. Symmonds & Smith, osteopathic physicians, will be at the Taylor hotel restaurant every Saturday to consult and examine, free of charge, those who are suffering from chronic diseases of any kind, and who wish to investigate and find out the nature of osteopathic treatment. Will be in Wayne every Tuesday at Curtis boarding house. Main office, Ypsilanti, 315 N. Washington street.

The following are some of the diseases successfully treated: Of course, we do not claim to cure every disease or every case of the same disease; but we do claim as high a per cent of cures as any other form of practice.

Dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, diarrhoea, dysentery, indigestion, Bright's disease, diabetes, torpid liver, gall stones, cystitis, incontinence of urine, throat troubles, bronchitis, pneumonia, consumption in its first stages, pleurisy, functional heart troubles, angina pectoris, weak eyes, granulated lids, goitre, exophthalmic goitre, piles, varicose veins, asthma, headache, diseases of nose and joints, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, rheumatism, neuralgia, dropsy, emaciation, general debility, diseases of women, la grippe, locomotor ataxia, paralysis, nervous diseases, appendicitis, etc., are some of the diseases successfully treated by osteopathy. However, it is not limited to the above mentioned diseases for its success, for its methods are applicable, with success, to each and every curable disease.

THOUGHTS

(Pauline Frances Camp.)
 A thought within a busy brain Ours grew, and grew apace, Until it could no more remain In such a narrow space.
 So springing from the loosened tongue It winged its airy flight In loving, helpful words that sung And made a sad heart light.

Another little thought, as sweet, By silence was held fast Till the great Reaper stayed his feet And set it free at last.
 It found its life in flowers rare And tears and tender speech.
 But they that Death's pale colors wear No loving words can reach.

Ah! little thoughts fly forth today A flock of white-winged birds, Go, full of love, to cheer the way As kindly, precious words.
 Rest not, inactive, useless, vain, Till Death your torches light, But shine right now, through sun and rain,
 And make each dark place bright.

When Half-Gods Go.

BY D. H. TALMADGE.
 (Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.) Believers would have called it Destiny; unbelievers a coincidence; Thornton himself called it nothing, and blessed it from the bottom of his heart.

He contemplated his bride proudly, happily, from a vantage point on the hotel piazza. She was playing tennis with agility and skill which mark the expert; her shapely arms bare to the elbows, her lips parted slightly, disclosing the tips of her strong, white teeth, her eyes shining, her face glowing. More particularly than her other features he noted was her hair, for he was one of those to whom woman's hair is her crowning glory, and he had fallen in love with this cluster of dark-brown curls even before the shafts from her eyes had entered his heart, or the words from her lips had enthralled his understanding. Men sometimes do such things.

He had been told—and she smiled now at the recollection—that he would wed a woman of red hair. A gypsy woman had told him so years before.
 A red-haired child playing about a camp had been chosen as a mark for his callow wit, and the mother had overheard. She had come forward into the midst of the group of visitors, and had shaken her finger at him, speaking in tones that hissed.

"'Tis the badge of my shame," she had said, "but I am not of the sort that suffers in silence. His father was such as you. I believed what he told me. He has never seen his child." Then the hiss of her voice had changed abruptly to a shrill cry.

"Curses upon him and upon those who jest at the innocent child! Ah, smile on, young gentleman. You think me daft. Yet take heed to what I say. A woman whose hair is red as the sunset shall be your bride and she shall bear you a child whose hair shall be in color as the berries of the mountain ash."

It was not a dire prophecy. Thornton had not permitted it to weigh upon him heavily; still, he had thought of it more than he cared to confess. He had a mild horror of red hair. Furthermore he disliked the idea of being cursed. Such curses mean nothing, of course, but they are unpleasant; they threaten the wool of a man's dignity and menace his self-confidence.

He had not told his wife of the incident. He had not considered it sufficiently consequential or interesting, and there was a possibility of her taking it seriously. He had a fine sense of consideration for feminine nerves.
 He had reasoned the matter thus:
 We have been married three days, and not a drop of bitterness has entered the bowl of our bliss. Suppose I tell her the story. She might laugh and pass it off lightly. Again, she might not. She is different from all others of her sex—vastly more charming, far more sensible, and yet, loving me as she does, she might allow this ridiculous thing to play havoc with her hap-ping. "Jack," she whispered.

Thornton had seen them cut from their place, a sacrifice to necessity.
 He had seen that near the roots they were of another color—verily as red as the sunset. But he had not been pained by the revelation. Strangely enough he had been relieved.

He was not thinking of them now.
 His gaze was intent upon the blue-veined eyelids of his wife.

"She will open her eyes presently," the doctor had said in leaving; "but you must not be surprised if—if she does not know you. It sometimes happens under such circumstances that the mind is affected for—"
 Thornton had understood, and was grateful for the uncompleted sentence.
 So they sat, he and the nurse. In-distinctly the murmur of voices came through the open window from the piazza below. Tiptoe footsteps passed and repassed the door. A yellow butterfly poised for a moment upon the window sill to rest.

The nurse raised a finger to her lips.
 Thornton's hand, hanging at his side, clenched until the nails all but cut the flesh. His lips were almost white.

Slowly, flutteringly, the lids of the sufferer's eyes were lifted. She drew a long, sighing breath. For an interval she seemed to see nothing.
 Then her lips moved, and the faintest semblance of a smile showed upon her face.

"Jack!" she whispered.
 "Thank God! O, thank God!"
 sobbed Thornton.

The press dispatches differed somewhat in detail, but that from the Tribune is the one preserved in Thornton's scrap book, and therefore may be accepted as authentic.

A team of horses standing in the driveway at a little distance from the tennis courts became frightened and unmanageable. With scarcely an instant's warning they plunged into the grounds. Men shouted, women screamed, dogs barked, hoofs thundered; the wheels of a landau crashed against a tree. For a moment silence.
 Then, gasping, the spectators surged into the courts.

Ahead of them all was Thornton.
 He was upon his knees by the side of his wife before even the other players had recovered themselves sufficiently to realize what had happened. As the throng came forward he arose to his feet, motioning them back.

"She has been struck upon the head," he announced, "but she is not dead. Keep away, please, and hurry for a doctor."

Then he dropped to his knees again, his lips whispered words of endearment and anguish, one hand holding one of her hands, the other gently stroking the blood-soaked curls of her dark-brown hair.

The doctor came. "Your wife?" he inquired, with kindly brusqueness, his fingers deftly working about the wound.

Thornton nodded.
 The doctor smiled reassuringly. "It is not so bad," he said; "there seems to be no great fracture, but she has had a shock that may last her a long time. We will remove her to her room, I think."

Two hours later Thornton sat at one side of the bed, and a nurse at the other, waiting. At the head of the bed, upon the floor, was a washbowl in which lay a mass of dark brown curls.

"She will open her eyes presently,"

 grateful for the uncompleted sentence.
 So they sat, he and the nurse. In-
 and repassed the door. A yellow butterfly poised for a moment upon the window sill to rest.

The nurse raised a finger to her lips.
 Thornton's hand, hanging at his side,
 flesh. His lips were almost white.

 terval she seemed to see nothing.
 semblance of a smile showed upon her
 face.

"Jack!" she whispered.
 sobbed Thornton.

Bird Lighted on Preacher's Head.
 A rather amusing incident occurred on a recent Sunday evening at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Miami, Fla. The auditorium was well filled with people, who were intently interested in the sermon which was being delivered by the Rev. C. Fred Blackburn. Suddenly a small bird flew in from the open window, circling round the room, lighting for a moment on the seats, then circling round and round the room. The attention of the audience was directed from the words of the speaker, when all at once the bird settled quietly down on the head of the preacher. A swift stroke of the hand and away went the little bird—

Odd Request at Siege.
 A correspondent of the London Daily Mail, writing of the siege of Christiana, in South Africa, says it is not without its humors. "For instance," he continues, "the other day, field cornet Scholtz favored us with a flag of truce and a list of miscellaneous requests. He contemplated grinding a little corn and wished to fix up a windmill for that object. Unhappily, an abnormally large screw was necessary for the enterprise, and the field cornet didn't happen to have one with him; but he knew of one in Christiansa that would suit his purpose. Surely, our correspondent would let him have that screw!"

One of Wellington's Officers.
 On good authority soldiers like best to be offered by gentlemen, but they have their choice of the type. Of the right kind was General Crawford, the leader of the Light Division. An incident in his career during one of the Wellington wars shows him to have been rich in that justice which commands respect from equals and loyalty from inferiors; in a word, he kept discipline without regard to rank. His divisions was crossing a ford on one of the Spanish marches, and an officer, to keep his breeches dry, rode through on a soldier's back. Crawford observed the thing with disgust, and in a minute was splashing through the water after them both. "Put him down, sir!" he shouted. "Put him down! I desire you to put that officer down instantly!" The soldier dropped his burden and went on. "Return back, sir," Crawford said to the officer, "and go through the water like the others. I will not allow my officers to ride upon the men's backs through the rivers; all must take their share alike."—Youth's Companion.

giness. "O, Jack," she might say, "I knew it was too sweet to last. I am to die, and a red-haired creature is to take my place. O, why have you told me? Why, indeed? I haven't, thank goodness, and I won't."

Thornton considered slightly, and lighted a cigar, then glancing right and left from the piazza, he marked the advance of the eyes that were looking at him, and he looked back steadily.
