What is Life?

In the last analysis nobody knows, but we do know that it is under strict law. Abuse that law even slightly, pain results. Irregular living means derangement of the organs, resulting in Constipation, Headache or Liver trouble. Dr. King's New Life Pills quickly re-adjusts this. It's gentle, yet thorough. Only 25c at Jno. L. Gale's and Wolverine Drug Co.

LAPHAM'S CORNERS.

P. S. Rich has been very seriously ill with heart trouble the past week, but is some better at this writing.

Rev. Horace Palmer, the new minister at the M. E. church, occupied the pulpit at the Lapham church Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Nelson are the proud parents of a baby girl, born Saturday, Sept. 24.

The members of the G. A. R. post at South Lyon pleasantly surprised one of their comrades on Friday last. An elaborate dinner was served and the "boys" all voted the day a success.

H. C. Packard and family attended the funeral of Mrs. Packard's sister, Mrs. Sabra Moyer, at Ypsilanti Sunday last. After a short service in Ypsilanti the body was taken to Jackson for burial.

The Lapham S. S. will hold a literary social on Friday evening, the 30th. Every one come and enjoy themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Nelson were in Ann Arbor on Saturday.

H. C. Packard made a flying trip to Detroit on Monday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Savery are visiting at I. S. Savery's this week.

The sharp frost a few nights since make the farmers feel pretty sore. Many of the fields of beans are utterly ruined to say nothing of corn and vegetables.

He Could Hardly Get Up.

P. H. Duffy of Ashley, Ill., writes, "This is to certify that I have taken two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure and it has helped me more than any other medicine. I tried many advertised remedies, but none of them gave me any relief. My druggist recommended Foley's Kidney Cure and it has cured me. Before commencing its use I was in such a shape that I could hardly get up when once down." The Wolverine Drug Co.

So completely was her preoccupation that she disregarded another thing,—the highway along which they were traveling. It was Randallin who first awoke to a consciousness that the noise of the rabble had become very faint behind them, that no sounds at all broke the stiffness ahead of them, that the uneven road-grown path they were treading was very different from the smooth hardness of the Watling street. For the first time, she spoke to the son of Lodbrok, who had silently taken the place at her side.

"This is not the Watling Street! Yet we have not turned—Where are we?"

Rodgar gnawed at his heavy mustache as though the answer were difficult to frame.

"You are still on the Watling Street," he said. "It is only that this is the old bed of it. It leads also to Saint Peter's Monastery on Thorny."

Stung with fear, Elfgiva tried to snatch the fines from him. "I am not going to a monastery! I am going to the palace."

As a cliff stands against the treading of waves, his grasp stood against hers; and his voice was as immovable as his hand.

"The palace where the king is," he said, "is the palace for a queen."

At first it either seemed that she would scratch out his eyes or throw herself from her saddle. But in the end she did neither, for a sense of her helplessness turned her faint. To one who has always ruled undisputed there is something numbing in the first collision with the pitiless hand of force. "If I had the good luck to see a bee caught in a briar, I should wish your death," she threatened. But she said it under her breath; and after that, rode with drooping head and eyes that saw nothing of the scene before her.

CHAPTER XXII.

The King's Wife.

The fact that King Edgar had slept under its uneven roof, on some visit you will tire yourself more if you consent to the entertainment I came hither to propose. I was thinking how it might cause amusement to us to ride into the city and see what the goldsmiths have in their booths."

Elfgiva threw aside the candle to come close and lay her hands upon the girl's breast. "Do you think it likely that I might fall in with the king somewhere in the city?"

This was going a bit faster than Randallin had planned, and her breath came quickly, but she took the risk and admitted it. "I did hope that it might happen that we would see the king," she said, "and what is more important to us—that the king might see you."

Slowly, the king's wife went back to her seat before the mirror, and sat there fingering and turning the jeweled rouge-pots in a deep study.

"Deliver me your opinion of this, Teobon?" she said, at last, to the big raw-boned British woman who was her nurse and also the female majordomo of her household.

Teobon, after becoming deliberation, replied that she thought rather favorably of the plan, that certainly it could do no harm, while it would be almost as sure to do good if the king could be reminded of how beautiful a woman he was neglecting.

Elfgiva's laughter was like returning sunshine. "How! You say so? Then will we make ready without delay! Tata, I could find it in my mind to scold you for not thinking of this before. You must mouth the order for the horses, though," she added as an afterthought. "I should expect it would be told me that I am a prisoner, whereat I should weep for rage."

Another flash of daring lighted Randallin's eyes, though her mouth remained quiet. "A good way to keep them from thinking you a prisoner, lady, is to act like a free woman," she said. "I shall tell them that you are going to the palace to see your husband." Sowing her seed, she left it to take root, and went away to convince the head of the grooms.

Let me through to my husband!"

to Dunstan's monkish colony, was scarcely sufficient to make a palace of the rambling rookery, which a wall separated from the West Minster. "It is the waste-place of ruins," Elfgiva said on the day of their arrival.

To-day, a fortnight later, Randallin repeated the comment with a despondent addition. "The king will never come to this rubbish heap. Here we are buried no less than if we lay in a mound. It is not likely that we shall get news by an easier way than by going to him."

Straining her eyes out over the mist-robed river, she tried for the thousandth time to think of some bait alluring enough to tempt Elfgiva to that point of daring. "I will try once more to entice her to the palace, so that I can get tidings," she determined. "I wonder what kind of humor she is in."

It was not necessary to go far to obtain a hint as to that. Even as she entered the passage, she heard the scramble of scuffling feet, and then screams and the thud of blows.

"Now it is heard that she is not sulking among her cushions," Randallin observed. "When her temper is up she is little afraid of doing things which she else would not dare do."

According to that her expectations should have mounted high, as she drew aside the door curtain, for the lady of Northampton was far from sulking. Partially disrobed, as she had sprung up from before her mirror, she was holding the luckless Dearwyn with one hand while with the other she administered pitiless punishment from a long club-like staff which she had snatched from its holder.

"Come not betwixt, or I will treat you in a like manner," the mistress panted.

But the Valkyria's fear of Elfgiva's strokes did not extend to Elfgiva's hands. Catching the dimpled wrists, she held them off with perfect coolness, as she said soothingly. "Now you tire yourself much, lady; and

As she had foretold, he was too uncertain regarding their position to dare contest their order, little as he liked it. In something less than an hour, the five women, fur-wrapped and flanked by pages and soldiers, were passing under the deep arch of the New Gate into the great city itself.

"Do you purpose to visit the palace first, noble one?" the leader of the guards inquired with a respectful, if uneasy salute.

The seed had rooted so far that Elfgiva did not disclaim the intention; but she hesitated a long time, pulling nervously at the embroidered top of her riding glove. "Which way lies the palace?"

"Down the lane on your left, noble one."

They obeyed her, but their gay chatter died on their lips. If the road bore none of the repulsiveness of the shambles, it was still little more cheerful than the graveyard. On their right, an ice-stiffened marsh reached to the great city wall, while a remnant of the primordial beech forest lay along their left, leafless, wind-lashed and groaning. Ahead, behind its walls and above its gardens of clustering fruit-trees, rose the towers and gilded spires of the king's palace.

As they neared the arched gateway, red with the cloaks of the royal guards, it seemed to Randallin that an icy hand had closed about her heart. The blood was ebbing from Elfgiva's face, and it could be seen that she was forced to keep moistening her lips with her tongue. Nearer—now they were in front of the entrance—All at once, the lady thrust a spur into her horse as he was slackening his pace in obedience to her tightened reins.

"To the goldsmith's first," she ordered. "On our way back—"

Her words were lost on the frosty wind. The master of the little booth in the row of wretched little stalls was hunched with steaming breath over a brazier of glowing coals. He leaped to greet such splendid ladies with a profusion of salaams and a mouthful of pretty speeches that brought some of the color back to Elfgiva's cheeks. "Do not have me in contempt, Tata," she admonished with a laugh of some unsteadiness. "Let me sharpen my weapon for some space among these precious things, and it may be that I shall go hence panting for the field."

"Ah, gracious lady, you must needs buy my whole stock," the merchant cried with ingratiating smiles, "for I can never endure to sell to another what I have once seen near your face."

Certainly the jeweled bugs, the golden snakes, the strands of amber and jet and pearl, seemed to act as tonics upon the Northampton lady. If she had not traded away, at the first two stalls, every ornament in her possession, she would have investigated each booth in the square. She came out in bubbling spirits to the waiting horses and the half frozen guards.

"This Cheapside is a very fairy garden," she prattled, lingering with her foot in the hand of the kneeling groom. "Everything in beds and rows as they were herbs—milk down this lane, soap down that, jewels, fabrics—"

She turned with a sudden inspiration. "Maidens, would not this be a merry thought? To find out where the fabrics are kept and try some cloth of gold against these pearls?"

As the servile murmur answered, Randallin's brow darkened. Cloth of gold and pearls—when a wolf was tearing away at her heart. She spoke desperately, "I wish that the way to the fabrics might lie past the king's house, lady."

The king's wife sent her a glance, half resentful, half questioning. "Why do you say that?"

"Because if Canute could see you as you look now, with your cheeks a-flower, and that ermine, like snow, upon your hair, there is nothing in the world he could refuse you."

Elfgiva's mouth curved bewitchingly. "You speak as though you had jewels to sell. What fine manners they have, these London merchants! Tell me, Candida, Leonorine, does she speak the truth? On your crosses, has not the cold reddened my nose? Or pinched the bloom off my lips?"

If the murmur that answered lacked any heartiness, their mistress did not perceive it, for every man within earshot swelled it with reassurance—thinking perhaps of the hot spiced wine in the king's cups.

After a moment of hesitation, Elfgiva flew up to her saddle like a bird. "Do you all think so?" she laughed. "Certainly I never felt in lustier spirits. I declare that I will try it. Hasten, before the roses wilt in my cheeks. Forward! To the palace!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

In the Judgment Hall.

While he kept a firm hold upon the spear which he had dropped like a gilded bar across the door, the English sentinel repeated for the tenth time his respectful denial: "I will take it upon me to admit you to the gallery, noble lady; but though you were the queen herself, I dare not let you in to the lower part. There be none but men with the king, and it is not fitting—"

"And is the son of a Saxon serf to decide where it is fitting for me to go?" the Lady of Northampton demanded, facing him in a tempest of angry beauty. "Whatsoever you shall do by my direction, dog, will in all respects be available to your credit. Let me through to my husband, or I can tell you that you will find your wariness terribly misplaced!"

Blue Stockings of To-day.

The last few years have seen marked changes for the better in the "blue stocking." She has, after causing much distress to her relatives and friends, come to the conclusion that the "ologies" and pretty frocks are, after all, not so incompatible as at one time they seemed, and that her learning, combined with a pleasing outward seeming, carries far more weight than it did when she wore shapely garments and neglected her coiffure.

The "blue stocking" is indeed giving up the "tailor-made" for festive occasions, the severe tie and collar and rigidly plain hat which was one of her phases, and she has begun to revel with her more frivolous sister in frills and furbelows, and a hundred pretty things which a comparatively short period ago she would have felt it incumbent upon her to scorn, says Woman's Life.

She is acquiring a taste for the joys of suitable attire which marks the well dressed woman, and she has by no means made the pathway of learning easier for the rising generation, whose parents will no longer put stumbling blocks in the path now that eccentricity and a "sweet girl graduate" may be things apart. All mothers and the majority of fathers strongly object to seeing their daughters sacrifice looks to learning.

Fail to Recoup Donations.

The citizens of Cambridge subscribed liberally toward the expenses of the recent meeting of the British association there, expecting to be able to recoup themselves by the custom of the visitors. But the colleges received the members of the association as paying guests and boarded and lodged them. Now the citizens are angry.

Of course things are going wrong when they don't go your way.

Old and New Rome.

(Special Correspondence.)

One of the most common complaints that artists and those given to esthetic expressions make on coming to Rome is that the city has been modernized out of recognition and with a woeful lack of taste. The idea at first prevailed that the new masters of the Eternal City were striving to convert it into a feeble and distant imitation of modern Paris. In spite of all that has been accomplished in the course of thirty years the remnants of the old Rome are still to be seen, and travelers are to be met with in the narrow, sunless lanes, rather than streets, of Trastevere, sauntering slowly along, admiring magnificent fragments of architecture or abandoned frescoes, with a most refreshing interest.

The fountains of Rome are celebrated throughout Europe, and several of them are unequalled for grandeur and artistic beauty. But the fountain that occupies the center of the Piazza di Perimoli, at the end of the Via Nazionale, is notorious rather than celebrated. It was originally built to mark the completion of a great work achieved under Pope Pius IX., the restoration of the ancient aqueducts and conduits which led to Rome the stream known as the Aqua Marcia, originally in use long prior to the Christian era. On the 10th of September, 1870, Pius IX., assisted at the inauguration of the fountain, and earlier in the morning of the same day he received the letter of Victor Emmanuel II., announcing his determination to invade the Pope's Roman possessions, and requesting meanwhile the pontiff's blessing!

Among the important memorials in the newest Rome is the grandiose and stately Church of St. Joachim, erected as a jubilee offering to the late pontiff, Leo XIII., whose name was Joachim.

mother of the present king, there stand still the close leaved ilexes, casting deep shadows around, that are the last remnants in the way of trees of the demolished Villa Ludovisi. The palace itself is a new construction made by the Piombino family; and it is here that the two American ambassadors to the Quirinal, Wayne MacVagh and Gen. Draper, resided in succession. Here also the present ambassador, Mr. Meyer, would have lived, had not Queen Margaret purchased it for her residence.

Among the newer adornments of the city, one of the most conspicuous is the great monument to Garibaldi on the Janiculum Hill, on the Trastevere side of the city. This position is the highest in Rome, and as the pedestal of the chief figure is of unusual altitude the statue is seen from nearly every part of Rome, and from several spots in the near Campagna. The sculptor Gallori has made rather a stately and novel combination of figures. The horse on which the hero of the figure is placed, seen from beneath, seems very long in the legs, a defect which probably arises more from the position of the ordinary spectator than from a fault in the modeling. There is a particular show of animation in the groups of soldiers and allegorical figures at the base of the pedestal, which is not perhaps beyond the proprieties, as the material is of bronze, but which some are inclined to regard as excessive, as breaking in upon the lines of the group taken as a whole.

Rome indeed is not devoid of monuments or statues. There is a fever prevailing both in France and Italy of what is called "statue mania," and even ordinary individuals who have done little else than live through their lives are remembered by memorials

Fountain Near Rome.

It is the outcome of the enthusiasm of a French priest, the Abbe Brugidou, who had more zeal than business capacity, and was eminently successful in accumulating a very heavy debt, which the late pontiff paid up to preserve the church from being sold. The cupola is formed of a white metallic substance that shines like silver in the sunshine, and which is pierced in star like apertures filled with yellow glass, through which the light penetrates in golden glow. Above the rich portico of fine Corinthian columns a glowing mosaic is seen. The interior is distinguished for its wealth of marbles and bronzes and frescoes.

Along the aisles are chapels which are constructed and adorned at the expense of several of the nations of Christendom. The chapel of the United States at the right near the transept is a splendid shrine in richness of painting, sculpture and decoration. Opposite is the French chapel; close by is that, very rich indeed, which England has made its own; on the opposite side, its art expressive of the new impulse that possesses the mind of the Irish people—the Celtic revival—is the recently completed Irish chapel. Thus this church would seem to be a world's gift to the memory of Leo XIII. The beauty of the structure and its method of adornment are not quite like those which prevail in Rome, and has a suggestion of modern French church architecture. Yet it is characteristic of the new Rome, to which nothing that is good, whatever the style may be, is wholly foreign.

The site of the city of Rome is, it has been said, quite fitted to receive the capital of the world. The azure of the horizon here is limpid and dazzling, and the dark foliage of the north harmonizes here with the lighter foliage of the south. In the garden of the palace of Queen Margaret, in stone or bronze. Statues are everywhere—in college courts, in public squares and in tiny gardens; they are so numerous that a future generation will have difficulty to remember them, not having known them; for the present generation who have met some of them in restaurants or lecture rooms, in public demonstrations or in the halls of parliament, the task is not so difficult. The great monument to Victor Emmanuel, the hugest construction probably ever raised, since the pyramid builders ceased work, to commemorate a king, is not likely to be completed for years to come. The men who knew him during life are not likely to live to see the monument finished. It is a construction of slow growth, made slower still by want of funds and by frequently recurring strikes among the workmen.

Time in its course is bringing the harsh colors and inharmonious freshness of the new Rome into a condition in which the discord is less felt. In the course of the years, when rain and sunshine have beaten upon the staring bright of the new walls of Rome, it will be difficult to distinguish them from those that are more ancient.

Plan Ocean Cable Line.

A group of German and Dutch capitalists, bankers and merchants have formed a joint stock company for the purpose of constructing and operating a new ocean telegraph line whose cables are to connect the island of Celebes (Dutch East Indies) with the island of Yap, whence one cable is to reach Shanghai, the other the island of Guam, where it communicates with the Pacific cable of the Commercial Cable company.

It is always safe to do right; and the true expediency is simple justice.—John G. Whittier.

SEEK A BURIED TREASURE.

Mexicans in Concerted Effort to Find Hoarded Gold.

Reliable parties from Westphalia report that a number of Mexicans with teams, plows and scrapers are excavating in that vicinity, claiming to have in their possession maps and charts showing treasure to be buried there to the amount of $100,000 in Mexican doubloons.

They say that the treasure is buried near what is known as the Bull Tank, and have agreed to pay the owners of the land on which they are at work a certain per cent of the find for the privilege of excavating. This treasure is said to have been buried during the Texas and Mexican war. It is said a tradition has existed that a large sum in Mexican doubloons was buried somewhere on the banks of Pond creek and another that there was treasure of considerable amount in Mexican money buried at some point along the banks of the Brazos river near Marlin.

Many excavations have been made to locate the buried treasure, both on Pond creek and the Brazos river. These efforts were not only made by home people, but strangers have gone in and excavated, among whom were Mexicans. A few years ago it was no uncommon thing to see deep holes dug along the banks of these streams, presumably by parties in search of the lost treasure, but if any money has ever been found in this manner the fact is not known.—Galveston News.

Preached From Engine Footplate

Hundreds of audiences have been addressed from railway trucks; but Dr. Parker once had the unique experience of preaching a sermon from the footplate of an engine. Nearly two thousand men were gathered around him, and he has been heard to say that that was the most interesting episode in his life.

Ocean Traffic in Beef.

There has been just one branch of the transatlantic freight traffic satisfactory to the steamship agents of Boston this year, namely, the shipments of live stock and fresh beef, these two, more than anything else, having kept freighters plying to and fro between that port and Europe, when otherwise they must have been withdrawn or retained in the service at a big loss.

Lesson For Women.

Jersey Shore, Pa., Sept. 26 (Special).—"Dodd's Kidney Pills have done worlds of good for me." That's what Mrs. C. B. Earnest of this place has to say of the Great American Kidney Remedy.

"I was laid up sick," Mrs. Earnest continues, "and had not been out of bed for five weeks. Then I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and now I am so I can work and go to town without suffering any. I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have good reason to praise them everywhere."

Women who suffer should learn a lesson from this, and that lesson is, "cure the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills and your suffering will cease." Woman's health depends almost entirely on her kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills have never yet failed to make healthy kidneys.

Explosives in Cabbage.

In these days of chemical manures, we often consume a lot of explosive when we eat a cabbage. Ground, the nature of which requires it to be fertilized with nitrate of potash, yields some of this up to the plant in the course of growth, and so it reaches the interior of the body.

Buy a Thermometer.

We have often advised our readers that make butter to buy a thermometer, whether they are engaged in making butter on a large or small scale. In fact, they should purchase a number of thermometers, as they are frequently broken, and cost but little. In getting them, however, it is best to be careful and get good ones, as there are many on the market that are carelessly made and will not give correct results when used. A large number of agents that have thermometers handle only exceedingly cheap makes with the object of making as much money as possible out of them. If the farmer tries to buy a "dairy" thermometer from them he will be told that they do not know anything about such thermometers and never handle them. Perhaps they will refer to a catalogue and show an expensive thermometer made on an elaborate scale. The writer had this experience in trying to get a thermometer in Chicago. Most of the stores visited had thermometers, but not of the kind desired. One or two had thermometers made for floating around in liquid, but costing more than they were worth for practical use. At last one place was found that had dairy thermometers that sold at 25 cents each and which proved entirely reliable. A dollar thermometer is as likely to be broken as a twenty-five cent thermometer, and this is a contingency that must be provided for.

The buttermaker of the past seldom or never used a thermometer and as a result made a very uneven lot of butter, taking one make with another. It is certain that no scientific buttermaker now ever thinks of making butter without learning the temperature of his cream. There is nothing that can be relied on to give this temperature record but the instrument created for the purpose.

The Pipette and Test Bottle.

A good many of our readers are using the Babcock tester. To such we would say, "Be careful as to the correctness of the pipette; as a variation in the graduations of this may result in rendering the test of no value at all. For many years this matter has been discussed, and in some of the states laws have been passed in an attempt to regulate it. It has been decreed that every creamery should provide itself with a pipette approved by the state, this pipette to be used to test all the others. But a good many creameries paid no attention to the law and others bought the pipettes and laid them away carefully. It was easier to assume that the pipettes bought from the commercial houses were right than to find out by testing them. But to the man that purchases a tester for the sake of finding out what his cows are doing this carelessness will not be passed by in silence. He has his own interests to act as a spur to make him careful. One of the common methods of testing bottles is to make the tests and then compare the results from the different bottles or pipettes. If all agree it is quite safe to assume that the pipettes and bottles are correct. This does not, however, necessarily follow; for the reason all of the pipettes and bottles may have come from the same manufactory and been all made wrong. On the test bottles the neck from 0 to 10 should contain two cubic centimeters of liquid, and the pipette should have a capacity of 17.6 cubic centimeters. Where possible it is best to send to the state experiment station and get sample bottles and pipettes known to be accurate.—Farmers' Review.

Drainage from Creameries.

The drainage from creameries often becomes a source of much annoyance to people living in the vicinity. The drains become foul with decaying casein and other refuse. As most of our readers are aware, putrid sour milk has not the smell of roses. Residents in the neighborhood of such drains make complaint at the nuisance, while the cattle and other stock that are in the habit of drinking at the brooks refuse to take the water. Some creameries undertake to remedy matters by running sewers for a long distance to some brook that is at a considerable distance from houses, but even in such cases some of the objectionable features remain. This may be remedied by the building of large tanks that will receive from 3,000 to 6,000 gallons of the drainage material at a time. These tanks can be constructed so that the water in them will gradually run off but the tank will be kept nearly full at all times. In effect, this is a septic tank. It should be kept closed at the top, so that the air will not have free access to the tank. The result will be that the casein in the slop will largely rise to the top and form a scum. In this the bacteria of a kind that do not use air will work and destroy all the organic matter, precipitating the ash only. The water then flows away clear without odor and can be allowed to run into any brook without a suspicion of polluting it.

Milk Powder.

At different times we have discussed in these columns the matter of milk powders and have cautioned our readers against too quickly accepting the statements that are going the rounds of the press, so far as the making of milk powders that will change back into milk is concerned. There never was a time when this matter was receiving so much attention as at the present time. Yet in the matter of milk powder we have made no revolutionary discoveries. The making of milk flour has been followed for some years and this flour is now an article of commerce. The men that put out the new processes claim to have discovered some way of making a powder that will quickly turn back into fresh milk. On the investigation of any one of these powders it is discovered not to have this valuable property. A report from Germany says that an investigation into milk powders in that country shows that they fall far short of the mark and will not change back into milk but do change into a liquid that has a sediment and is little like milk.

Wisconsin Buttermaking.

Prof. J. G. Moore, after an inspection of Wisconsin creameries, says:

The methods of making butter are by no means uniform. Some buttermakers have success with high temperature in ripening; others with low temperature. The conditions at each creamery have to determine for the buttermaker what plan he will pursue to get the best results, as it is manifestly impossible for a maker to practice high ripening temperature unless he has ice or some other means at his command to control the temperature at will. However, more important than methods of making, to my mind, is the factor of cleanliness both in the handling of the machinery in the factory and in the care of the milk by patrons. The pumps and pipes through which the milk passes should be cleaned much oftener than they are and to this one cause a great deal of off flavored butter can be traced. The gates to the milk and cream vats, too, are liable to become contaminated and prove a lively source of bad flavors. Churns are usually kept clean, although not always, as I have had frequently to clean churns this last summer. The reason for this is in a good many cases due more to ignorance than a deliberate desire to be dirty. There is more of a chance, however, to reach the slovenly maker than there is to impress the average patron with his shortcomings. In looking over the cans brought to a factory it is rather a delicate task for the maker to tell a man that his cans are dirty and his milk impure. Not only from the fact that he will incur his enmity, but that he will no doubt be told that if he does not want to take his milk in, there are other creameries where they will be glad to take it, and this is too much the case and where a creamery is getting hardly enough milk to pay expenses the loss of a patron or two is keenly felt.

Foam in Skimming Tank.

H. R. Wright, Dairy Commissioner of Iowa, says: There has been a very considerable amount of discussion in regard to the methods of prevention of foam, which is the one objection to the pasteurization of skimmed milk at the creameries. The experience of numerous buttermakers, who have tried numerous plans, is convincing that there is no successful method of preventing, absolutely, the foaming of the skimmed milk when it is heated by the introduction of steam into the milk. The foam, however, can be taken care of at slight expense so that it will not be at all annoying. For some unknown reason practically every creamery has been built with the skimmed milk tank inside, a fact for which there exists no necessity. A skimmed milk tank built outside the creamery at a reasonable distance from it and situated over the drain, is the ideal skimmed milk tank, and in any case, in order that the foam may be controlled, the skimmed milk tank must be a closed tank. There should be a manhole in the cover of the tank so that it can be cleaned, and besides the opening of the inlet and outlet for the passage of the skimmed milk, there should be another opening in the cover of the tank from which a tin or sheet iron pipe 12 or 14 inches in diameter leads down and is finally connected with the drain. Such a device is cheap and easily made by any tinner and will effectually dispose of any amount of foam that may arise.

The Butterine Interests.

The effect of the national anti-color law is seen in the steady decrease of the production of oleomargarine. In the last year of the old law the production in the country was 126,316,472 pounds, while in the fiscal year ending the last of June the output was only 48,071,480 pounds, considerably less than half. The makers of oleomargarine are still exerting themselves to find some technicality in the law that will permit them to color their goods. For this reason the officers of the National Dairy Union urge the members to still keep up the organization, lest the dairymen lose what they have gained.

TOILERS OF THE MINES.

Millions of Men Make Their Living Underground.

Mining and quarrying throughout the world command the personal attention of more than four and a half million men. Of the grand total of 4,738,393, no fewer than 1,592,050 belong to the British empire, the remaining 3,146,343 being "foreigners." Great Britain and her colonies and possessions have been specially favored by the forces of nature in so far as there is an abundance of valuable mineral which may be mined, and thus add to the wealth of the empire. More than half the miners of the world are employed in getting coal alone. Great Britain employs over three-quarters of a million, the United States and Germany over half a million each, France 165,000, Belgium 135,000, Austria 123,000; whilst India comes along with close upon 100,000.

The Bank of England.

The Bank of England generally contains sufficient gold in sixteen pound bars to make 20,000,000 sovereigns. The bank, which stands in three parishes in London, covers three acres of ground, and, as the current price of land in the vicinity works out at £1,000,000 an acre, it is easy to form an idea of the money value of the home of England's wealth. The ratable value is nearly £1,000 a week. The bank employs about 1,000 people and pays £250,000 a year in wages and £35,000 a year in pensions. There are £25,000,000 worth of notes in circulation, which have been handed over the bank's counters.

Service Shocked Her.

A certain noble family in Scotland adopted the Episcopal faith and carried out its ideas regardless of expense. On the first introduction of the full choir service into the local church the great lady who had been active in the work was anxious that a favorite woman servant of hers—a Presbyterian of the old school—should have an opportunity of hearing the service. Accordingly she took her down to church in the carriage and on returning asked the old woman what she thought of the music. "Oo, it's verra bonny; but, oh, my lady, it's an awfu' way of spending the Sabbath!"

Settled Bill by Marriage.

A poetically-minded literary man, hailing from North Dakota, not long since married his landlady, who keeps a small hotel in the Latin quarter of Paris. This young man, who for eleven years had paid not a single sou for board or lodging, was at length taken severely to task by his long-suffering hostess, who threatened summary ejection. Such a cold prospect was little to his liking, so he proposed to cancel his bill by marriage. The lady was willing, and the twain were made one.

European Forests.

The percentage of the wooded areas of European countries, as compared with their total areas, is as follows: Finland, 51.2; Sweden, 49.3; Russia, 40.4; Austria, 32.6; Luxemburg, 29.1; Hungary, 27.7; Germany, 26.1; Servia, 24.9; Turkey, 23.4; Norway, 22; Roumania and Switzerland, 21.4 each; Bulgaria, 20.8. The other European countries have less than 20 per cent of woodland. England has the smallest wooded area, 3.6 per cent.

Fought Over Mince Pie.

A farmer residing in Adams county, Pa., caused the arrest of a neighbor for having entered his kitchen "and taken from the stove and eaten a large and juicy mince pie." The offending neighbor was held to answer by the justice. That official remarked that he regretted "that a mince pie should disturb life-long relations between friends and create another war so near a battlefield (Gettysburg) that is already sufficient history."

As to the Teeth.

A dentist says that the more teeth are used, legitimately, the better for them; that perfect mastication on both sides of the mouth prevent receding gums and tends to ward off decay. Those who chew on one side have poor teeth on the disused side, and that the fad of chewing every mouthful very fine is one of the most sensible fashions humanity has ever taken up.

Cost of Backs Give Out Under the Burden of Daily Toil.

Lieut. George G. Warren, of No. 3 Chemical, Washington, D. C., says: "It's an honest fact that Doan's Kidney Pills did me a great lot of good, and if it were not true I would not recommend them. It was the strain of lifting that brought on kidney trouble and weakened my back, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills I have lifted six hundred pounds and felt no bad effects. I have not felt the trouble come back since, although I had suffered for five or six years, and other remedies had not helped me at all."

Miss Nellie Holmes, treasurer of the Young Woman's Temperance Association of Buffalo, N. Y., strongly advises all suffering women to rely, as she did, upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your medicine is indeed an ideal woman's medicine, and by far the best I know to restore lost health and strength. I suffered misery for several years, being troubled with menorrhagia. My back ached, I had bearing-down pains and frequent headaches. I would often wake from restless sleep, and in such pain that I suffered for hours before I could go to sleep again. I dreaded the long nights as much as the weary days. I consulted two different physicians, hoping to get relief, but, finding that their medicine did not seem to cure me, I tried your Vegetable Compound on the recommendation of a friend from the East, who was visiting me.

"I am glad that I followed her advice, for every ache and pain is gone, and not only this, but my general health is much improved. I have a fine appetite and have gained in flesh. My earnest advice to suffering women is to put away all other medicines and to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Miss NELLIE HOLMES, 540 No. Division St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Irene Crosby, prominent in Social Life in East Savannah, Ga., adds her testimonial to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—"It always gives me pleasure to find an article of real value and unquestioned merit. I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound well calculated to relieve and cure the various troubles arising from irregularities and menstrual pains.

"Much suffering could be spared if we only paid more attention to proper living and diet, but as long as women do not do this, your Vegetable Compound has come to the front as a true friend in need. I have been very pleased indeed with the relief it has brought me. I find that I have perfect health now, and that my mind is also more clear and active since I used your Vegetable Compound. It has been of great benefit to me, and I gladly recommend it. Very sincerely yours, Miss IRENE CROSBY, 315 East Charlton St., East Savannah, Ga."

Happenings of the Week Chronicled Briefly For Busy Readers

A COLD STEIN.

An Application For Clemency Turned Down Hard.

One of the most cold-blooded crimes in the history of the upper peninsula has been recalled by the refusal of the state board of pardons to recommend clemency in the case of Frank Stein, convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced from Dickinson county to the Marquette penitentiary.

The crime was committed a dozen years ago near Saginaw. The victim was Patrick Carey, a cedar jobber, by whom Stein had been employed. The killing was carefully planned, according to the evidence adduced, and it was committed for a paltry sum of money. While Carey was walking from the Saginaw railroad station to his camp, Stein, who was concealed behind a clump of bushes, struck his victim as he was passing a fearful blow with a club, crushing his skull.

Having robbed Carey's body of a sum of money and a watch, Stein dragged the corpse to the Milwaukee railroad track, where he placed it across the rails, hoping it would be run over by the night train and thus destroy all evidence of the murder. The body, however, was discovered by the trainmen in time to prevent its being ground beneath the wheels. Suspicion fastened itself upon Stein, and a few weeks later he was arrested by detectives in Chicago.

The State Fair.

The Michigan Agricultural Society has decided the matter and the state fair will be permanently located in Detroit. The contracts have been made out and the deal is completed. The property will be turned over to the state fair within ninety days, and work will be commenced within the next sixty days to prepare for next year's exposition. The property selected is a tract of land of about ninety-six acres, having a frontage of 500 feet on Woodward avenue and extending back to the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee railroad tracks, thus giving the fair both electric and steam railroad connections, without the necessity of building a long track especially to reach the grounds. The property will cost between $50,000 and $60,000. Besides this the business interests of the city put up $35,000 in cash.

Sold Stepsons to Pay $380 Debt.

During the progress of a suit in court at Grand Rapids it developed that Peter Smirles, the wealthy proprietor of several shoe shining parlors in the city, had purchased from Tom Tisor the latter's two stepsons for $380. At the same time he loaned the latter $40 more. Both are Greeks and the whole sum was used by Tisor to pay a debt in the old country. The suit was over the repayment of the borrowed $40. Smirles says he needed the lads in his business, and considered the purchase of them from their father perfectly correct in both law and ethics.

Postal Changes.

These offices will be discontinued and superseded by rural free delivery October 14: Blackman, Saginaw county, mail to Fosters; County Line, Saginaw county, mail to Birch Run; Crown, Huron county, mail to Fillion. Rural free delivery will be extended at White Cloud, Newargo county, November 1, by one route. Rural carriers have been appointed as follows: Cheboygan, Theron M. Gardner; substitute, Edwin H. Gardner; Fillion, Arthur T. Fillion; substitute, Simon Fillion; Freeland, Charles A. Vasold; substitute, Claud McCarthy.

Woodcutting on Increase.

Work for hundreds of men will be furnished in the hardwood forests of Iron county this fall and winter. Some 300 will be employed in the district adjacent to Crystal Falls alone. During recent years each cutting season has seen the output of cuttimber increased, and that at present will be no exception. More wood than ever before will be put in, much of it destined for use as fuel in Milwaukee, Chicago and other cities. The hardwood tracts in Iron county are of great extent and the wood industry will continue to thrive for many years to come.

Farmer Shot by Boy.

John Grevenhoe, a Holland lad aged 17, was shot in the base of the brain Sunday night by Henry Walcott, who, having been put under arrest, confessed, Grevenhoe, with Roy Hiller and John Glick, was near Walcott's vineyard searching for beechnuts, when Walcott ordered them away. Walcott pursued them, when they started for the fence, pushed one down the embankment, and shot Grevenhoe, whose body hung upon the fence until the officers arrived.

New Industry for Michigan.

State Land Commissioner Wilder has received a letter from a man in the northern part of the state, who writes that he is about to establish a plant for the manufacture of turpentine, tar, etc., from Norway pine stumps, and suggesting that as state lands are covered with stumps of pine trees he would like to make an arrangement with the state to use the stumps.

Blackbirds are eating corn on farms near Union City. There were two baptisms in the river near Standish Sunday afternoon. One of the baptismal candidates, a woman 75 years old, came near dying in the water.

Cash E. Herman, postmaster at Charlevoix, and Miss Lucinda Rehberg, daughter of Charles Rehberg, were married at the bride's home Wednesday afternoon.

DEADLY AUTO.

Man Killed and the Auto Driver Speeded Away.

Frank Spencer, aged 34, of Detroit, was run down by an automobile on the Boulevard Monday, and sustained a fracture of the skull and a compound fracture of his left leg below the knee. A citizen found him unconscious on the roadside and notified the police. The patrol wagon of the Grand River avenue station removed him to Grace hospital, where he lies at the point of death. Spencer started out after supper on his wheel to visit a friend. The appearance of the wheel, which was crushed, would suggest that an almost head-on collision, due to one of them being on the wrong side of the road, took place. The investigation of the police showed that the driver of the automobile did not stop after knocking Spencer down and his identity is yet unknown. Since May 1st there have been thirty-three accidents from fast running of autos in Detroit in which persons in the street were injured, some so severely that full recovery will never be realized.

Supt. E. L. Dunbar, who for 30 years has watched the water supply of Saginaw, is authority for the statement that the water of Saginaw bay is fully one and one-half feet higher than at this time last year. He says the level of Saginaw bay has been rising for several years past.

Patrick Cunningham, a farm laborer employed on the Griffin farm, near Ox Bow, died from the effects of eating road stools. Cunningham ate heartily of what were supposed to be mushrooms, but which later turned out to be road stools. That night he was taken sick and steadily grew worse until death resulted. Other members of the family did not eat as heartily as Cunningham and escaped.

After 35 years in its present quarters, the First National bank of Alpena commenced work on its new building, corner of Second avenue and River street. The new bank building will be built of pressed brick, with stone front. Alpena now has three banks, and there are rumors that a fourth bank will be started in the room now occupied by the First National when that bank removes to its new building.

William Carruthers, of St. Ignace, for a score of years a section hand, has purchased a $4,000 farm at Enniskillen, Ireland, and will leave about October 15 to spend the remainder of his days in the Emerald Isle.

AFTER MUKDEN.

The Japs Are Enveloping the City to Settle It.

The latest development in the situation at the front is the definite establishment of the fact that Field Marshal Oyama has now begun to move up his left. Gen. Karaparkin's report shows that the Japanese have reached Javan, on the west bank of the Liao river.

A considerable concentration of Japanese is observed at Satehan, on the Hun river, 35 miles southwest of Mukden, and Japanese cavalry is massing in the valley of the Yu river. The latter is a tributary of the Hun river, which crosses the line of railway midway between Tie Pass and Mukden, and may furnish a natural line of advance from the west.

Oyama's armies now apparently cover a front of 40 miles for enveloping movements. His wings are extended to the north, east and west of Mukden. Thus far the Russians have found little strength or pressure from the Japanese center. Oyama seems to be moving with great deliberation, probably gathering strength for a rapid advance of both wings when an attempt is made to close the pot.

Although the imaginary line connecting the extreme Japanese advance east and west of Mukden still passes ten miles below that city, it is evident that the fate of Mukden cannot long be delayed. If Gen. Karaparkin intends to try to hold the city fighting on his flanks will begin almost immediately.

Letter a Forgery.

The letter alleged to have been received by Michael J. Donnelly, the leader of the meat strike, purporting to be one sent by President Roosevelt was copied from an editorial in the New York Evening Post of August 1. The Evening Post says:

"The letter appeared as an editorial in the Evening Post of August 1 and was explicitly stated to be a letter which the president MIGHT have written with advantage to himself and the country."

In other words it was confessedly an imaginary letter, written for the sake of bringing out certain truths in regard to the meat strike."

President Michael Donnelly, of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers' union, daily denies ever having received a letter purporting to come from President Roosevelt.

The Central Wreck.

Six people who were injured in a wreck on the New York Central railroad a short distance east of Lyons, N. Y., early Sunday morning, were brought to Rochester hospitals. Three sleepers on the western express, a fast train bound from New York to Chicago, left the track because of a split rail, and threw the passengers to the floor of the coaches. Just as the train came to a standstill, a fast freight east-bound ran into the derailed cars.

Mrs. Newman Erbs, wife of the former vice-president of the Pere Marquette railroad, was brought in with both limbs cut off and died at the hospital. Mr. Erbs was bruised and injured. Sarah L. Owen, Pierston apartments, 420 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich., was bruised and cut.

Japs Are Advancing.

During the last ten days 2,500 troops have arrived at Chemulpo, and others are expected. The Japanese authorities at Gensan are collecting 4,000 pack ponies for the use of the army to advance northward along the eastern coast toward Vladivostok.

The advance already has begun. Sixteen hundred Japanese troops, with five machine guns, five hundred pack ponies and 400 coolies are reported to have arrived at Han-yang.

The advance guard was fired upon by Chinese. Ten men were killed and 17 wounded. The Japanese were completely surprised and retreated to await the coming of the main body. The garrison at Gensan is being reinforced from Seoul and Pyongyang.

Vesuvius Spitting.

The eruption of Mount Vesuvius continues, and although it has somewhat decreased, it is still imposing and its vividness has been augmented by the breaking away of the crust around the crater, which is being re-jected with shakings, rumblings and explosions, making it appear as if the whole mountain would be rent from top to bottom.

On the Pompeii side the eruption is very threatening and a great quantity of ashes is being ejected. The eruption is more violent than at any time since 1872. Red hot stones are hurled to a height of 1000 feet falling down the flanks of the mountain with a deafening sound.

Four Hundred Men Idle.

About 400 men are out of work at Boston in consequence of the strike of fourteen engineers and craftsmen employed on contracts in Boston harbor by the Eastern Dredging Company. The strike order was issued from the national headquarters of the national union in Chicago early in the week.

Don Carlos Was Shot At.

An attempt was made on the life of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, at Venice. Carlos was taking his usual morning stroll when an unknown man fired a pistol at him. The bullet missed its mark. The would-be assassin escaped.

In Paris a woman has just awakened after being in a strange sleep for 11 years.

Thirteen women hold honorary commissions as colonels in the Prussian army. All belong to royalty or nobility.

MUST APOLOGIZE.

An Auto Causes a Big Tempest in Massachusetts.

The following telegram bearing on the case of Hugh Gurney, the British diplomat who was arrested at Lee, Mass., for speeding his automobile and fined for contempt when he refused to plead, was sent to Squire Phelps, who imposed a penalty, by Acting Governor Curtis Child, Jr., of Massachusetts:

"The assistant attorney-general informs me that if the facts are as stated you have in your endeavor to enforce the laws of Massachusetts for the security of life upon our highways, committed in this particular case a grave breach of international law. May I ask you to telegraph me at once if Mr. Gurney was arrested and fined in spite of protest. Other channels of redress are open in case of the violation of Massachusetts laws by the diplomatic representatives of other nations. Therefore, if fine was imposed and collected the commonwealth will apologize. The fine must be remitted and I need not suggest to one so respected as you the personal amendment that you will, of course, desire to make to Mr. Gurney for the error in method adopted by your court in this unusual case. Kindly forward me affidavit of the evidence of any breach of Massachusetts laws."

Gurney is third secretary of the British embassy and was fined $50 on two charges, $25 for contempt of court, and a similar fine on a charge of speeding his automobile in Stockbridge Sunday.

It is believed at the state department that the matter may be far more serious than local officers at Lee seem to regard it. By constitutional and statutory law, the persons attached to an embassy are expressly relieved from any legal responsibility and the exemption even extends to domestic servants.

Justice Phelps, who imposed the fine, said: "If I find that I have made a mistake I will gladly apologize," he added, "I did only what I believed to be right."

Car Strikes Box of Dynamite.

An outward bound electric car, containing 32 persons, was blown to pieces at Melrose, Mass., by striking a 50-pound box of dynamite that had fallen off an express wagon. Six persons were killed outright, three mortally of their injuries within an hour and 19 others on the car were taken to the two hospitals suffering from severe injuries. At least a score of persons in the immediate vicinity of the explosion were hurt by flying glass and splinters.

Alice Roosevelt's Lover.

North shore society would not be surprised by the announcement of the engagement of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Congressman Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati. The feeling of expectancy has been growing since a dinner and costume ball for Miss Roosevelt were given Friday night by the wealthy bachelor at the Myopia Hunt club house, George C. Lee, Miss Roosevelt's grandfather, when asked about the matter, said: "I know nothing about it."

Second Congress at The Hague.

President Roosevelt announced Saturday afternoon that at an early date he would ask the nations of the world to join in a second congress at The Hague for the promotion of arbitration.

The occasion of the announcement was the reception by the president of the delegates to the Interparliamentary union which recently held a session at St. Louis.

CONDENSED NEWS.

Italy's new heir, the little Prince of Piemonte, is said to have had less, like his father. The report is increasing at Rome that the baby is not at all robust. The king is less than five feet tall, although so long-waisted that when seated, he appears to be a good-sized man.

Judge Jackson, of the United States court at Parkersburg, W. Va., issued an injunction restraining the city of Fairmont from interfering with a concert by an eastern orchestra at the opera house Sunday night. The mayor at the instance of the ministers of the town had issued orders against the Sunday concert, and 1,000 people clamored for admission while the churches were empty.

In the presence of 20,000 to 25,000 people Archbishop Thomas Randall Davidson preached a strong sermon at Mount St. Alban, Washington, Sunday afternoon, taking "Liberty" as his text, the archbishop gave voice to a plea for greater Christian unity. Members of the president's family and leading members of the diplomatic corps were present.

John Alexander Dowle, Elijah H. and a retinue including Chief of Police Stearns, of the Zion Guards are spending a few days at Ben Mac Dui, an epidemic of smallpox at Zion City is said to have hastened his retreat to his "Little Gallee," as he calls White Lake.

ONE CAUSE FOR DRINK HABIT.

Expert Traces Intemperance to Improper Feeding.

"There is a cause for the drink habit which even good Christian parents do not understand," says a writer in What to Eat. "They cannot realize why their children, with beautiful surroundings and daily Christian influences, sometimes go far astray, becoming sadly immoral, and in many instances drunkards. When they, as well as many of the physicians, shall have exhausted all other efforts to locate the cause of the trouble, let them look to the stomach—the poor, abused stomach—and they will, in all probability, find the source of the evil. From infancy many of the little ones are given food beyond the capacity of their digestive organs. As soon as several teeth have appeared, meats are frequently a part of the bill of fare. These, as well as the other articles of food, are necessarily swallowed without proper mastication. Pepper, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, vinegar and highly seasoned salads also find their way into these young and tender stomachs until, as the result of such a diet, fermentation sets in and a little distillery is created in these youthful temples. Under such conditions a child becomes irritable, quick tempered, untruthful, and it would be surprising if it grew up to noble manhood."

PREPARE FOR LONG FASTS.

Nature Takes Good Care of Animals That Hibernates.

A large number of species of animals undergo more or less prolonged and continuous fasts during the period of their winter or summer sleep. During such slumbers the more active functions of the body are to a great extent suspended, while those that are carried on act slowly and entail comparatively little waste of tissue and energy. Moreover, before the period of the winter torpor or hibernation takes place, many animals, such as bears, accumulate large stores of fat on various parts of the body, which suffice to supply all the waste entailed by the respiratory function during the period in question. Fat is also accumulated by the mouse-lemmings of Madagascar previous to the summer sleep, or aestivation, and is used up in a similar manner, their summer sleeps being undertaken for the purpose of avoiding the season of great heat and drought, when food is difficult or impossible to procure.

"Ah Sin, Esquire."

By way of corroborating my view that the title "Esquire" is utterly devoid of meaning, one of my readers mentions that in Singapore, where he has resided for eleven years, it is not only universally bestowed on every white man, but also upon the wealthier Chinese and Asiatics. "Ah Sin, Esq.," looks and sounds well. It will surely lend an additional attraction to life in a Rand mine or compound when the Celestial knows that the wealth he amasses out of his "average minimum" wage will entitle him to such a designation. He could not get a peacock's feather or a yellow jacket at home for anything like the price.—London Truth.

Grouse Has Many Defenses.

The grouse has a hundred tricks of defense. It will lie still until the hunter is within a yard of it, then soar straight upward in his front, towering like a woodcock; again, it will rise forty yards away, and the sound of its wings is his only notice of its presence. It will cower upon a branch under which he passes, and his cap will not be more than a foot below it as he goes, and though it has seen him approaching it will remain quiescent in fear until his back is turned. It will rush then, and when he has eluded himself hurriedly around he will catch only a glimpse of a brown, broad wing far away.

One of Corea's Superstitions.

Near the city of Seoul, the capital of Corea, is a hill called Pouk Han, which was formerly covered with trees. The legend runs that so long as a tree remained on the hill so long will Corea maintain its independence, and therefore no one is allowed to cut or touch a tree. But the natural consequence of this want of forestry has been that the trees have gradually died off, until now only one is left. On this one tree it is believed that the fate of the country rests, and when it goes Corea as an independent state will go with it.

My Queen.

I did not know I had a friend so near, by chance to save. It seemed my fortune here must end. Just plundered by a knave. Her back was turned, I knew her not in my perplexity. Yet she was there to spoil the plot Of my arch enemy. And when I saw her regal face Appear upon the scene, Victorious champion of my case, I hailed her as my queen. There may be those of higher rank. Of greater worth than she. But now the queen of trumps I thank—She took the trick for me.—New Yorker.

Counted His Grandmother.

When some surprise was expressed that a small boy should prefer to go for a summer outing to the sleepy village where his mother lived as a little girl, instead of to the seashore with its "attractions," the little fellow replied: "I count my grandmother." In the plans of many families at this season of the year "counting the grandmother" plays an important part. Her welcome arms form for the child "the first line of reserves," to use a military phrase.—Youth's Companion.
