Railroad Man
Fatally Injured

Gasper Carullo, a young Italian, was fatally injured late last week Thursday afternoon while working on the track in the P. M. yards. The accident was unaccountable as his fellow workmen saw the approaching train and gave him warning, but he failed to hear and twenty freight cars passed over his body, severing both limbs and otherwise injuring him. He was put aboard a way car and started for a Detroit hospital, but died on the way. The remains were taken to Detroit where the funeral was held.

Plymouth Band Enjoy
Annual Picnic

The Plymouth band and other friends were agreeably entertained last Sunday at Ed. Shafer's pleasant country home situated on Union Lake. Twenty-one automobiles carried the party over, and the guests numbered nearly one hundred. Enroute to the lake our band boys entertained the residents of Northville, Farmington and Orchard Lake with some of their choicest selections. Geo. Taylor in his usual efficient way prepared and served a fine dinner. The entertainment of the afternoon was music. These affairs have become annual and are always looked forward to with great pleasure.

The M. E. church was crowded last Sunday morning. A large number coming from Newburg. The occasion being the last service for the conference year. The Rev. J. M. Shank was at his best and delivered a very impressive sermon, appropriate to the occasion, being a review of the work of the year. The church here and at Newburg are in a very flourishing condition financially, having raised this year $230 for the pastor's salary, $145 for incidental expenses, and $137.18 for missionary and other benevolences. Mr. Shank has conducted the affairs of the church in a very satisfactory manner, and the congregation is anxious for his return another year.

The Grange School Fair

The committee in charge of the Grange school fair met last Thursday and completed the final arrangements. The fair will be held Friday and Saturday, Sept. 26 and 27.

The exhibit of antiques was so successful last year, the committee decided to repeat it, with the promise of a better and larger collection this year. That means an unusually fine exhibit, something no one can afford to miss.

The ladies are preparing a play to be given both Friday and Saturday evenings. W. H. Harmon has agreed to provide a musical treat also for the two evenings. The Grange boys are to have charge of an Indian booth, where the small boy can buy whistles, bows and arrows, squakers, tops, etc., to his heart's content. The Grange fathers will have a table on which will be exhibited their best products and which will afterward be sold at auction. There will be a bake sale and candy and popcorn sale Saturday afternoon.

All contestants will be admitted free, otherwise a charge of 10c. admission will be asked to the exhibits and 10c. to the play. The townspeople will be afforded an opportunity to visit the fine and convenient hall which the Grange is very proud and fortunate to be in possession of. The Grange offers three prizes in each class of contests. Should there be but one entry for any one group of prizes, but one prize will be given. Some Plymouth merchants have expressed a desire to contribute to the prizes. If such prizes are contributed they will be entered for any particular contest chosen in order of their value and credit given to the donor. The prizes will be on exhibition in A. H. Dible & Sons window during all of next week.

To the young people in the country schools, contests were announced in this paper last spring. There are contests in the growing of popcorn, watermelon asters, the making of quilt tops, book cases, bread, pillow slips, sheets and pillowcases for a doll's bed, according to grade classification. There is a special contest for the older Grange young people not in the country schools. Also a special prize for a medicinal herb collection, and a special prize for a garden contest for the children in the village. A prize will be given as last year to the school scoring the most points. Our young people made a fine showing last year and better results are hoped for this year.

Raviler Canning Factory
Destroyed By Fire

Shortly after 3 o'clock Monday afternoon the canning factory of George A. Raviler in the north village was discovered to be on fire. The fire was located in the east cupola of the building and is supposed to have started by a spark from a passing Pere Marquette engine. The alarm was given immediately, but before the fire department apparatus could be got to the scene, the building was a mass of flames and beyond any possible chance of saving. By hard efforts, however, the firemen succeeded in saving a portion of the west end of the building. At two other times during the day the roof was discovered to be on fire and extinguished before the flames had made any headway. The canning factory had just been started by Mr. Raviler, and they were just getting nicely started with the season's run. About 15,000 quart cans and 5000 pint cans of tomatoes, 4000 pint cans of beans, 4,000 one gallon cans and 1,000 five gallon cans of tomato pulp which was stored in the basement of the factory were damaged by water. The loss will be in the neighborhood of $5,000. The contents and building were covered with insurance. This is the second time Mr. Raviler has had the misfortune to have his canning factory destroyed by fire. The building was formerly used as a cheese factory and was owned by ex-Governor Warner. The destroying of the factory will throw about thirty people out of employment and means quite a loss to the business interests of the village.

Auction Sale

Having decided to quit farming Mrs. L. D. Packard will sell at public auction on the premises two miles south and one-half mile east of Salem station on Wednesday, September 17, at one o'clock sharp, a quantity of farming tools, live stock and household goods. See bill for particulars. Frank Boyle, auctioneer.

Want Cemetery Vacated

A petition is being circulated for the signature of citizens and taxpayers asking the village board of health to cause to be vacated the cemetery known as the Presbyterian cemetery on Church street, and arrange for the removal of all bodies now interred there and have the grounds placed in a sanitary condition. This is something that should have been done long ago and we believe the movement will meet with the approval of the majority of our citizens and those who have relatives and friends buried in this now sadly neglected cemetery. During the past few years many bodies have been taken up and re-interred in Riverside cemetery and it would not be a great undertaking to remove those now remaining. In its present condition the cemetery is anything but a pleasing sight, situated as it is in the heart of the village.

The School Desires the Co-operation of Parents

Every year during fair week our school attendance is broken into a great deal by pupils attending the fair. Some go Tuesday, some Wednesday, some Thursday, and some Friday. This year the Board of Education has kindly granted us one day off to attend the fair. We have selected Friday, Sept. 19th, as the day that would least interfere with good school work and also one of the best days of the fair. We wish to ask all parents to kindly co-operate with us as far as they can and plan to attend the fair on that date. It will be better for the schools and better for the pupils if they go on this day.

Red Color of License Plates.

Automobilists will after January 1st be required to adopt revolutionary colors, as the style of automobile license plates will change with the first of the year, and a brilliant red will be the color. The background of the new plates will, however, be white, with red letters and numbers of the present year. Nearly 50,000 of the new plates will be required, and the order for them has already been given.

Through a recent ruling of the attorney general all persons driving automobiles for hire must, in addition to the machine license number obtain a license as chauffeur. The fee for this is $2. Police officers are charged with the enforcement of this law which applies to all species of the state.

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, seeks a man to intercept the daughter, Molly, who is being sent to the post. An Indian outbreak is threatened. Sergeant "Buck" Hamlin meets the stage in which Molly is traveling. They are attacked by Indians, and Hamlin and Molly escape in the darkness. Hamlin tells Molly he was discharged from the Confederate service in disgrace and as the close of the war enlisted in the regular army. He suspects one Captain LeFevre of being responsible for his disgrace. Troops appear and under escort of Lieut. Gaskins Molly starts to join her father. Hamlin leaves to rejoin his regiment. He returns to Fort Dodge after a summer of fighting Indians and finds Molly there. Shots are heard in the night. Hamlin rushes out, sees what he believes to be the figure of Molly hiding in the darkness and falls over the body of Lieutenant Gaskins, who accuses Hamlin of shooting him. The sergeant is proven innocent. He sees Molly in company with Mrs. Dupont, whom he recognizes as a former sweetheart who threw him over for LeFevre. Mrs. Dupont tells Hamlin LeFevre forced her to send him a lying note. Hamlin declares he has been looking for LeFevre to force him to clear his record. Later he overhears Dupont and a soldier hatching up a money-making plot. Molly seeks an interview with Hamlin. She says her father seems to be in the power of Mrs. Dupont, who claims to be a daughter of McDonald's sister. Molly disappears and Hamlin sets out to track her. McDonald is ordered to Fort Ripley. Hamlin discovers that the man who left on the stage under the name of McDonald was not the major.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Dead Body.

That both McDonald and his daughter were involved in this strange puzzle was already clear. The disappearance of the one was as mysterious as that of the other. Whether the original conspiracy had centered about the Major, and Miss Molly had merely been drawn into the net through accident, or whether both were destined as victims from the first, could not be determined by theory. Indeed the Sergeant could evolve no theory, could discover no purpose in the outrage. Convinced that Dupont and his wife were the moving spirits, he yet possessed no satisfactory reason for charging them with the crime, for which there was no apparent object.

Nothing remained to be done but search the town, a blind search in the hope of uncovering some trail. That crime had been committed—either murder or abduction—was evident; the two had not dropped thus suddenly out of sight without cause. Nor did it seem possible they could have been whisked away without leaving some trace behind. The town was accustomed to murder and sudden death; the echo of revolver shots would create no panic, awaken no alarm, and yet the place was small, and there was little likelihood that any deed of violence would pass long unnoticed. With a few words of instruction, and hasty descriptions of both Dupont and Connors, Hamlin sent his men down the straggling street to drag out the occupants of shack and tent, riding himself to the blazing front of the "Poodle Dog."

Late as the hour was, the saloon and the gambling rooms above were all crowded. Hamlin plunged into the mass of men, pressing passage back and forth, his eyes searching the faces, while he eagerly questioned those with whom he had any acquaintance. Few among these could recall to mind either "Red" or his boon companion, and even those who did retained no recollection of having seen the two lately. The bartenders asserted that neither man had been there that night, and the dealers above were equally positive. The city marshal, encountered outside, remembered Dupont, and had seen him at the hotel three hours before, but was positive the fellow had not been on the streets since. Connors he did not know, but if the man was Major McDonald's driver, then he was missing all right, for Captain Barrett had to employ a hired man to drive Mrs. Dupont back to the fort. No, there was no lady with her; he was sure, for he had watched them get into the carriage.

The troopers were no more fortunate in their results, but had succeeded in stirring up greater excitement during their exploration, several brave individuals, roughly aroused from sleep, exhibiting fighting propensities, which had cost one a blackened eye, and the other the loss of a tooth. Both, however, had enjoyed the occasion, and appeared anxious for more. Having exhausted the possibilities of the town, the soldiers procured lanterns, and leaving the horses behind, began exploring the prairie. In this labor they were assisted by the marshal, and a few aroused citizens hastily impressed into a posse. The search was a thorough one, but the ground near by was so cut up by boots and wheels as to yield no definite results. Hamlin, obsessed with the belief that whatever had occurred had been engineered by Dupont, and recalling the fact that the man was once a ranchman somewhere to the southward, jumped to the conclusion that the fellow would naturally head in that direction, seeking familiar country in which to hide.

The gray of dawn was in the sky as the three troopers, soaked to the waist, crept up the south bank and studied the trail. Behind them the yellow lanterns still bobbed about between the river and town, but there was already sufficient light to make visible the signs underfoot. Horsemen had climbed the bank, the hoof marks yet damp where water had drained from dripping fetlocks, and had instantly broken into a lope. A moment's glance proved this to Hamlin as he crept back and forth, scrutinizing each hoof mark intently.

"Five in the party," he said soberly. "Three mustangs and two American horses, cavalry shod. About three hours ahead of us." He straightened up, his glance peering into the gray mist. "I reckon it's likely our outfit, but we'll never catch them on foot. They'll be behind the sand-dunes before this. Before we go back, boys, we'll see if they left the trail where it turns west."

The three ran forward, paying little heed until they reached the edge of the ravine. Here the beaten trail swerved sharply to the right. Fifty feet beyond, the marks of horses' hoofs appeared on the sloping bank. Hamlin sprang down to where the marks disappeared around the edge of a large boulder. His hand on the stone, he stopped suddenly with quick indrawing of breath, staring down at a motionless figure lying almost at his feet. The man, roughly dressed, lay on his face, a bullet wound showing above one ear, the back of his neck caked with blood. The Sergeant, mastering his first sense of horror, turned him over and gazed upon the ghastly face of Major McDonald.

"My God, they've murdered him here!" he exclaimed. "Shot him down from behind. Look, men. No; stand back, and don't muss up the tracks."

The Man Roughly Dressed Lay on His Face.

There are footprints here—Indians, by heaven! Three of them Indians! "Some plainmen wear moccasins." They don't walk that way—too in; and see this hair in McDonald's fingers—that's Indian, sure. Here is where a horse fell, and slid down the bank. Isn't that a bit of broken feather caught in the bush, Carroll? Bring it over here.

The three bent over the object. "Well, what do you say? You men are both plainmen." "Cheyenne," returned Carroll promptly. "But what the hell are they doing here?" Hamlin shook his head. "It will require more than guessing to determine that," he said sternly. "And there is only one way to find out. That fellow was a Cheyenne all right, and there were three of them and two whites in the party—see here: the prints of five horses ridden, and one animal led. That will be the one McDonald had. They went straight up the opposite bank of the ravine. If they leave a trail like that we can ride after them full speed."

Carroll had been bending over the dead officer and now glanced up. "There's sand just below, Sergeant," he said. "That's why they are so darn reckless here."

"Of course; they'll hide in the dunes, and the sooner we're after them the better. Wade, you remain with the body; Carroll and I will return to the fort and report. We'll have to have more men—Wasson if I can get him—and equipment for a hard ride. Come on, Jack."

They waded the river, and ran through the town, shouting their discovery to the marshal and his posse as they passed. Twenty minutes later Hamlin stood before the Colonel, hastily telling the story. The latter listened intently, gripping the arms of his chair.

"Shot from behind, hey?" he ejaculated. "And his clothing stolen. Looks like a carefully planned affair, Sergeant; sending that fellow through to Ripley was expected to throw us off the track. That's why they were so careless covering their trail; expected to have several days' start. It is my notion they never intended to kill him; had a row of some kind, or else Mac tried to get away. Any trace of the girl?"

"No; but she must have been there." "So I think; got mixed up in the affair some way, and they have been compelled to carry her off to save themselves. Do you know why they were after Mac?"

"No, sir."

"Well, I do; he carried thirty thousand dollars."

"What?"

"He was acting paymaster. The money came in from Wallace last evening, and he was ordered to take it to Ripley at once."

Hamlin drew in his breath quickly in surprise.

"Who knew about that, sir?"

"No one but the Adjutant, and Major McDonald—not even the orderly."

The eyes of officer and soldier met. "Do you suppose he could have told her?" the former asked in sudden suspicion.

"That would be my theory, sir. But it is useless to speculate. We have no proof, no means of forcing her to confess. The only thing for us to do is to trail those fugitives. I need another man—a scout—Wasson, if he can be spared—and rations for three days."

"I'll do it for Miss McDonald, but not for the money," he said slowly. "I expect orders every hour for your troop, and Wasson is detailed for special service. But damn it, I'll take the responsibility—go on, and run those devils down."

"You know this man Dupont, Colonel?"

"Only by sight."

"Any idea where he used to run cattle?"

"Wait a minute until I think. I heard McDonald telling about him one night at the club, something Mrs. Dupont had let slip, but I didn't pay much attention at the time. Seems to me, though, it was down on the Canadian. No, I have it now—Buffalo Creek; runs into the Canadian. Know such a stream?"

"You think it was Dupont, then?"

"I've heard of it; in west of the North Fork somewhere."

"I haven't a doubt that he is in the affair, and that the outfit is headed for that section. I don't know, sir, where those Indians came from, or how they happened to be up here, but I believe they belong to Black Kettle's band of Cheyennes. His bunch is down below the Canadiana, is it not, sir?"

"Yes."

"Dupont must be friendly with them, and this coup has been planned for some time. Last night was the chance they have been waiting for. The only mistake in their plans has been the early discovery because of Miss Molly's disappearance. They have gone away careless, expecting two or three days' start, and they will only have a few hours. We'll run them down, with good luck, before they cross the Canadian. You have no further instructions, sir?"

"No, nothing, Sergeant. You're an old hand, and know your business, and there is no better scout on the plains than Sam Wasson. Good-bye, and good luck."

CHAPTER XXIV.

In Pursuit.

The four men, heavily armed, and equipped for winter service, rode up the bank of the ravine to the irregularity of plain beyond. The trail, leading directly south into the solitude, was easily followed, and Wasson, slightly in advance of the others, made no attempt to check his horse, content to lean forward, his keen eyes marking every sign. Scarcely a word was exchanged, since Hamlin had explained what had occurred as they crossed the river. Hardly less interested than the Sergeant, the sober-faced scout concentrated every energy on the pursuit, both men realizing the necessity of haste. Not only would the trail be difficult after they attained the sand belt, but if snow fell, would be utterly blotted out. And the dull, murky sky threatened snow, the sharp wind having already veered to the northwest. All about stretched a dull, dead picture of desolation, a sun-colored plain, unrelieved by vegetation, matching the skies above, extending in every direction through weary leagues of dismal loneliness. The searching eye caught no relief from desolate sameness, drear monotony. Nowhere was there movement, or any semblance of life. Behind, the land was broken by ravines, but in every other direction it stretched level to the horizon, except that far off southward arose irregular ridges of sand, barren, ugly blotches, colorless, and forever changing formation under the beating of a ceaseless wind. It was desert, across which not even a snake crawled, and no wing of migrating bird beat the leaden sky above.

The marks of their horses' hoofs cutting sharply into the soil, told accurately the fugitives' rate of progress, and the pursuers swept forward with caution, anxious to spare their mounts and to keep out of vision themselves until nightfall. Their success depended largely on surprise, and the confidence of those ahead that they were unpursued. Wasson expressed the situation exactly, as the four halted a moment at an unexpectedly discovered water-hole.

"I'd think this year plain trail was some injun trick, boys, if I didn't know the reason for it. 'T ain't injun nature, an' he's cock-sure that nobody's chased him yet. He's agurin' on two or three days' get-a-way, and so don't care a tinker's dam 'bout these yer marks. Once in the sand, an' that won't be no trail anyhow. It's some kinstry out that, an' it would be like buntin' a needle in a haystack to try an' find them fellars after ter-night. This is my idea—we'll just mosey along slow, savin' the horses an' keepin' back out o' sight till dark. Them fellars ain't many hours ahead, an' are likely ter camp first part of their night anyhow. They'll feel safe o'ud hid in them sand-hills, an' if they don't git no sight of us, most likely they won't even post no guard. That's when we want ter dig in the spurs. Ain't that about the right program, Sergeant?"

Burning with impatience as Hamlin was, fearful that every additional moment of delay might increase the girl's danger, he was yet soldier and plainsman enough to realize the wisdom of the old scout. There were at least four men in the party pursued, two of them Indian warriors, the two whites desperate characters. Without doubt they would put up a fierce fight, or, if warned in time, could easily scatter and disappear.

"Of course you are right, Sam," he replied promptly. "Only I am so afraid of what may happen to Miss Molly."

"Forget it. That's nuthin' goin' ter happen to her while the bunch is on the move. It that outfit was all injun, or all white, maybe that might. But the way it is they'll never agree on nuthin', 'cept how to get away. 'T ain't likely they ever meant ter kill the Major, 'er take the girl along. Them things just naturally happened, an' now they're scared stiff. It'll take a day or two for 'em to make up their minds what to do."

"What do you imagine they will decide, Sam?"

"Well, that's all guesswork. But I reckon I know what I'd do if I was in that sort o' fix an' bel'n' chased fer murder an' robbery. I'd take the easy way; make fer the nearest injun village, an' leave the girl that."

"You mean Black Kettle's camp?"

"I reckon; he's down that on the Canadian somewhere. You kin bet those fellars know whar, an' that's what they're aimin' for, unless this yer Dupont has some hidin' out scheme of his own. Whar did you say he ranched?"

"Buffalo Creek."

"That's the same neighborhood; must've been in cahoots with those red devils to have ever run cattle in that. We've got to head 'em off afore they git down into that kintry, or we won't have no scalps to go back home with. Let's mosey erlong, boys."

WATERY BLISTERS ON FACE

Smithville, Ind.—"Six months ago our baby girl, one year old, had a few red pimples come on her face which gradually spread causing her face to become very irritated and a fiery red color. The pimples on the child's face were at first small watery blisters, just a small blotch on the skin. She kept scratching at this until in a few days her whole cheeks were fiery red color and instead of the little blisters the skin was cracked and scaly looking and seemed to itch and burn very much."

"We used a number of remedies which seemed to give relief for a short time then leave her face worse than ever. Finally we got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed the child's face with very warm water and Cuticura Soap, then applied the Cuticura Ointment very lightly. After doing this about three times a day the itching and burning seemed entirely gone in two days' time. Inside of two weeks time her face seemed well. That was eight months ago and there has been no return of the trouble." (Signed) Mrs. A. K. Wooden, Nov. 4, 1912.

Banana Eaters.

Americans used to be called a nation of pie eaters. Today a more appropriate term would be a nation of banana eaters. The United States takes more than two-thirds of the bananas shipped to the handlers in the world.

Part of this pre-eminence in banana consumption is due to geography; the source of supply on the Caribbean is almost at our doors. Part is due to accident; a Boston skipper introduced the American public to this tropical fruit while it was still unknown in Europe. Whatever reason one may choose to give, the United States is the world's chief banana market, and though the use of this fruit is increasing abroad, the American boy remains the Jamaica grower's best friend.

Extremely Modest.

"Rather a modest, retiring fellow in a crowd, isn't he?"

"Yep. Pretty modest. Reminds me a whole lot of a governor on a state occasion surrounded by his staff of colonels—in uniform."—St. Louis Republic.

Hard Luck, Indeed!

"How's your son, the lawyer, who went to Texas, getting on?"

"Badly, poor fellow. He's in jail."

"How's that?"

"He was retained by a horse thief to defend him, and he made such a good plea that the judge held him as accessory."—Lippincott's.

Its Advantages.

"A rolling stone gathers no moss."

"Then it never becomes a moss-back, either."

Many a man puts his foot in it when he attempts to stand on his dignity.

The man who hides his light under a bushel is apt to think the whole world is in darkness.

"What are you going to do?"

"Who, me? I'm going to get a row-boat and pull over the lake and try to get some fish."

"Fish? The last fish was caught out of that lake three years ago."

"Well, I know that. Suppose I don't get any fish, I've had a tiptop boat ride, haven't I?"

"Hurry up that order!" said a traveler in a railroad eating house down south. "I'm afraid I'll miss my train!"

"Yes, sah, boss!" the waiter answered as he hurried off.

After what seemed an almost interminable wait to the traveler, he returned with the food. As he set it down he asked:

"Is you de gentlemen what feared he'd miss de train?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, you needn't be feared ob dat, sah, no mo'."

"Good! Is it late?" the traveler inquired.

"No, sah, it's done gone!" was the waiter's affable and reassuring response.

Johnston Corn Binder

When we say the Johnston Corn Binder is without a peer, we say it because every farmer that has ever used a Johnston Corn Binder testifies to its merited superiority over all other Corn Binders. It has many features which help to make this statement true. The one-piece main frame is of steel and exceptionally wide. The pole is attached inside the main frame. The weight is evenly divided between the wheel and the operator on one side and the elevator and gear on the other. The binder attachment is therefore in direct line of draft. The machine is always perfectly balanced and has absolutely no side draft. There is no danger of the machine tipping on side hills. A forty-inch drive wheel of the suspension pattern is used. Angle steel calks are placed at right angles the same as on the main wheel of the grain binder. Dust-proof roller bearings on the hub reduce wear and draft. The cutting apparatus consists of two stationary knives, and a sliding knife which cuts the same as a sickle. The method of cutting is very similar to that of cutting the corn by hand with a sickle. This feature of the cutting apparatus enables the Johnston to cut large, tough corn as easily as short and tender corn. No clogging or complex cutting attachments to give you trouble. The gathering chains with stationary fingers pick up the row knocked down in opening the field. They also handle tangled corn perfectly. Every Johnston Corn Binder is equipped with another exclusive feature that is known as automatic gates. The corn is carried to the binding attachment by conveyor chains with folding fingers. Just before the needle passes around the bundle, these automatic gates release the fingers which pass on as the machine moves, and resume the 7 natural position again. This feature does away with all packers, and entirely does away with the knocking off of the ears than any other binder. The binder attachment can be adjusted to bind from eighteen inches to thirty-two inches from the butts. Can bind above or below the ears. For very short corn, the binder frame extension is removed and needle and knoter lowered. The stalk channel has a six-inch adjustment. Every lever is within easy reach of the operator. The machine is five feet, eleven inches wide, and will easily pass through any ordinary farm gate way. Sold by

Five Solid Reasons

FIVE solid reasons why each farm needs a manure spreader are these, in the words of a farmer who has devoted much time to correct soil-feeding. 1. It saves disagreeable and hard work. 2. It pulverizes and mixes the manure mass. 3. It distributes manure evenly over the field, insuring a good, even stand of grain. 4. It prevents loss of nitrogen through fermentation or leaching in the pile when manure is hauled directly from the stable. 5. Indirectly, the ease with which it can be handled encourages the owner to care for the manure and distribute it on the fields carefully instead of wasting it.

I H C Manure Spreaders

will work uncomplainingly for years making profits for the owners. You will find them all styles and sizes, high and low, endless apron or reverse.

I H C manure spreaders are exceedingly durable, strong, correctly built to stand all conditions and all strains they may meet. Each feature has its purpose. Up hill or down or cutting corners, they spread all kinds of manure evenly, in a light or heavy coat at the will of the driver. The beater drive is strong and simple, beater teeth are square and chisel pointed to pulverize the manure, and the large diameter of the beater prevents wind-ing. The rear axle, carrying a large percentage of the load, insures ample tractive power. But use all these things yourself at your local dealer. Find your choice in the I H C line. TRICK TURNED BY DIPLOMAT

Nicaraguan Postage Stamps, Issued at Unfortunate Time, Lost That Country the Canal.

A postage stamp which played a part in history is told about by M. Bunau-Varilla in his book on the Panama canal. The incident occurred when the discussion over the relative merits of the Panama and Nicaragua routes was at its height. Bunau-Varilla had been working vigorously for the Panama route, making use of the two arguments of less cost and immunity from active volcanoes.

One day he recalled that Nicaragua had issued a handsome stamp, showing a volcano in full activity. He at once sent to the dealers in foreign stamps in Washington, and obtained ninety of these stamps, which he forwarded to the ninety senators, along with bits of paper bearing the words: "Postage stamp of the republic of Nicaragua; an official witness of the volcanic activity of Nicaragua."

The catastrophe at St. Pierre took place about this time, to deepen the impression of volcanic danger, and the Panama route was adopted by the narrow margin of four votes.

Our readers will have no difficulty in locating the large ad of E. L. Riggs in this issue of the Mail. He announces a big September clearing sale that means a saving of dollars to you.

The contract has been awarded for removing the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Ry., tracks from the streets of Wayne to a private right-of-way. The contractor has started making the grade. It will require the removal of 31,000 cubic yards of dirt to make the grade and the course of the River Rouge will be slightly changed in the construction of the new line.

There are merchants who take the wrong course in order to head the farmers off from going to the mail order houses by trying to club them back. Won't do. They're from Missouri and will have to be convinced there are bargains for them here at home, and that means persistence, patience, good salesmanship and the expenditure of a little money. Farmers nor nobody else is coming here because they love the merchants. It's a business deal and a number of contractors in the field after the job.

LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

COMMISSIONER HELME FINDS
WAY TO FORCE SWIFT & CO.
TO PAY LICENSE.

TONAGE TAX WILL BE URGED AT NEXT SESSION.

New Law Governing Hotels Is of Little Effect on Account of No
Appropriation for Enforcement of Same.

[By Gurd M. Hayes.]

Lansing, Mich.—Dairy and food inspectors, James Helme, who has been kicking up considerable dust in Detroit recently by his investigation of meat markets, bakeries and cold storage plants, claims to have "put one over" on Swift & Co., during the last session of the legislature and he says that hereafter the big packing house will pay its regular fee for operating creameries in Michigan.

For a number of years there has been a law on the statute books which provided that every creamery, milk station and condenser should pay a yearly license of $5. However, there was no penalty clause attached to the old law and Swift & Co., which controls about 400 creameries and milk stations in Michigan, refused to pay. The smaller concerns paid rather than go to court as legal services would have cost them more than the license fee.

During the last session Helme had a bill introduced to amend the old law so that it would be possible to prosecute. While the attention of Swift & Co. and the other big concerns was drawn to this bill, another measure was slipped in by Helme giving him authority to condemn impure cream. Apparently this bill was overlooked by those who represented the interests of the big companies, and it was not until the statute took effect August 14 that Swift & Co. discovered that Commissioner Helme was in possession of a weapon that would compel them to do business.

Helme says that it was the intention of the companies to refuse to pay their license fees, Helme stationed some of his dairy experts and at their creameries and confiscated several hundred gallons of impure cream. After the case had continued for three days Swift & Co. remitted and other concerns are paying up. Helme says the department will collect more than $5,000 from the creameries this year.

It was learned here that the state grants will reimburse its efforts at the next session of the legislature to bring about the passage of a tonnage tax and owing to the fact that it has already cost the state $200,000 to maintain the militia in the copper country to protect the mines during the strike trouble, it is believed that a tonnage tax will stand a better chance of passage than any time in years.

Agdist General Fuller has already paid out $300,000 from the general fund of the state to the military authorities in the copper country and the cost to the taxpayers is mounting each day the troops are kept in the upper peninsula.

"The copper properties of Houghton and Keweenaw counties are owned largely by eastern capitalists and the taxpayers of Michigan are paying the freight," said a prominent stranger who has always boasted for a tonnage tax on the output of the mines.

Under a law passed at the last session of the legislature the cost of maintaining troops in a county is placed upon the whole state. It is claimed that the grange leaders will use this as an argument when the tonnage tax bill comes up for consideration at the next session and it is believed here that the bill will have the support of all labor leaders in the house and senate who will not be readily disposed towards the mining interests.

Clifford Vetter, of Grand Lodge, who sustained a broken wrist while playing baseball with the Roan team in the factory league of this city, has applied to the industrial accident board for compensation.

Vetter claims that it was his intention to go home the afternoon of the accident, but he says he was ordered by a foreman to play with the Roan team. Owing to the fact that Vetter is not regularly employed as a ball player, there is considerable question as to whether he is entitled to any compensation from the Roan Motor Car company.

When State Treasurer Hester unveiled the results of the state's strong arm at the beginning of the September session, there was a balance of $1,251,171.51 in the general fund available for immediate use.

The specific tax fund was credited with $77,000.00 and the primary school interest fund contained $4,755.25. However, within an hour after the treasury was opened, $177,250 was drawn from the general fund for the various state hospitals.

At the month of August, 11,000,000 was drawn from the general fund and it is believed that the state will be in a position to meet its obligations for the coming year.

State Fire Marshal Winship says that more than half the fires reported to his department during August were caused by lightning. During the month of July lightning caused 85 fires, while 159 were reported last month. Winship says the fire loss from lightning last month amounted to $183,422.95. There were 267 fires during August with a total property loss of $14,942.78.

The records show that 136 fires occurred in rural communities outside the range of adequate fire protection. A property loss of $25,991.75 is charged against fires of unknown origin.

All state employees are protected under the workmen's compensation and employer's liability law and Insurance Commissioner Winship filed a list of 3,769 employees with the accident board.

The Kalamazoo State Hospital has 376 employees. This institution has more employees than any other in the state. Every institution in the state is included and some of the largest are as follows: Traverse City State Hospital 228, legislative employees during sessions 102, Newberry State Hospital 50, Ionia State Hospital 35, Central Michigan Normal School 100, secretary of state's department 50, industrial school for girls 150, Pontiac State Hospital 231, Michigan Home and Training School at Leapeer 100, Michigan Soldiers' Home 100, Kalamazoo State Hospital 376, University of Michigan 300, Michigan Agricultural College 245.

When the last legislature passed the bill endorsed by the traveling men's associations creating a hotel commission and providing for a vigorous inspection of all hosteleries and lodging houses, the lawmakers neglected to make an appropriation for carrying out the work. However, this fact apparently was not discovered until the commission composed of Labor Commissioner Cunningham, Dairy and Food Commissioner Helme, Insurance Commissioner Winship and Secretary Dixon of the state board of health, held a meeting recently.

Inasmuch as the law pays particular attention to the equipping of hotels and lodging houses with fire escapes Labor Commissioner Cunningham's inspectors will be able to carry out this provision as it is along their line of work.

Section six of the act provides that every hotel keeper shall provide all beds with regulation sheets not less than ninety inches in length. The law provides also that the beds shall be provided with sufficient number of regulation size blankets that are kept in a sanitary condition.

Owing to the fact that the state is without an official inspector of sheets and pillow cases and there is no funds to hire one, it appears that the hotel keepers can do about as they please in this particular regard.

An echo of the Balkins reached the industrial accident board when Tony Dimoff, injured May 26 at the Morgan & Wright plant, in Detroit appeared with a petition for a lump sum payment of the 35 weeks' compensation due him for the loss of his index finger. He stated that his wife and three children had been turned into the streets of Sofia, where they were subject to the insults of wandering soldiers and in danger of starvation.

When Tony, who is a Macedonian by birth, came to America to make his fortune, he left his family in the care of his brother, Michael Dimoff. Michael answered the call to arms when the recent affair with Turkey opened up, existing under Bulgarian colors. February 1 he laid down both arms and life in a warm engagement with the enemy.

The bad news came to Tony at Detroit, but he was then earning $12.50 per week, which he found ample for the support of himself and for the support of his family in Sofia. The son of May 26 Tony's right hand was drawn into the machine for the wrapping of automobiles, which he was operating. The index finger was wrench off at the second joint. The nails were torn from all the fingers on that hand and the skin was laid back to the wrist.

Tony suddenly found his income cut in half. The $6.25 per week compensation was barely sufficient to provide for his needs in this country. He had no friends here to whom he could appeal. The brother in Sofia was dead. When the money from American stopped coming, the mother found no means of meeting the bills incurred in the care of her brood of three young children. As a result they were turned out of their home into the street, where they have wandered for several weeks. The price of all foodstuffs has been advanced to an exorbitant standard in Sofia, according to Dimoff and even a good American quarter is barely sufficient to purchase one loaf of bread.

Tony seems to be an honest, intelligent sort of workman. He is now in America for the second time, and he speaks English fairly well. His petition will probably be acted upon by the industrial accident board Monday. He proposes a willingness to permit the superintendent of the Morgan & Wright plant to accompany him to the postoffice to make sure that the money is mailed to his wife in Sofia.

Secretary of State Frederick C. Macdonald, has been elected chairman of the State Board of Control, which has supervision of the leasing of the property owned in the St. Clair State. Attorney General O. B. Feller is secretary of the board which was created by the last legislature to succeed the old State Board of Control.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

City Fathers of Memphis Solve a Hard Problem

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Memphis believes it has solved the problem of the bachelor and the baby. It's the simplest thing in the world. Memphis just makes the bachelors support the babies.

The bachelors are taxed and the money is turned over to a bachelor's baby club to maintain a summer home for sick babies and their mothers and to provide milk and other necessities for the babies during the hot summer months.

The amount of the tax is determined by the "income, eligibility and general attractiveness of said bachelor, due deductions being made for overweight, baldness, loss of one eye and general disposition." The usual tax assessed, however, is $5. And here's the way it's collected:

The law provides that "no unmarried male arriving at the age of 21 years shall be allowed on the streets of Memphis after nine o'clock p. m. or to court, visit or accompany an unmarried woman to any place of amusement," unless he has paid the tax.

He must present a bachelor's license on demand of any married woman.

married man or police officer. If he can't, or won't, he's liable to a fine of $5 to $50.

"It's all nonsense," said some of the surly ones at first. "They can't collect the tax, either." But Jim Rawlings and J. A. Reichman, originators of the idea, showed them.

In less than two days' time several of the most prominent attorneys and business men in the city had been arrested on warrants sworn out by the wholesaler. They were hauled before a police judge and fined double the amount of the tax. Soon everybody was paying cheerfully.

Statistics in the hands of the Memphis health officers had showed that a great many infants died every summer through the lack of fresh air and pure milk.

The solution of this problem was a baby sanitarian. The clubhouse of the tri-state fair was confiscated. Money, lots of it, was spent in screening, cleaning, decorating and furnishing the pretty building.

Once upon a time the broad verandas of this structure held the brilliant crowds that flocked to Memphis from all over the nation to see the races.

But now the women of fashion have given way to the trained nurse. The thoroughbreds have disappeared before a herd of Holsteins and Jerseys. The French poodles and toy dogs are no more, for the babies have come into their own. The racehorse men vanished, and the doctors took their places.

Auto, Kicked and Abused, Refuses to Be Deserted

CHICAGO.—In spite of himself, Balser T. Dahl, 2922 North Whipple street owns an automobile. Worse than that, he possesses it.

"And there is an uncomfortable difference," Mr. Dahl said the other night, "between merely owning the thing and actually possessing it. If I had nothing but a bill of sale and a clear title I could lock up the papers and forget them. But there by the kitchen door stands the rusty old scow itself, hideous and mocking."

Dahl spent 12 hours the day before in a vain endeavor to get rid of the car. At daybreak, while his neighbors slept, he went forth on his mission of losing the pesky machine. Twelve miles he drove—straight out into the country. Carefully he peered around. Apparently there was no one watching. Cautiously Dahl slid through the door of the machine. Then he kicked it in the slats and ran for cover.

Three hours later, his clothes splashed with mud from short cuts through the pastures, his hair full of burrs and his temper in shreds, the erstwhile owner of a motor car appeared at his own domicile. One look he took and fainted.

Four bluecoats confronted him. "We haven't got the thieves yet, boss, but the machine is at the station house and there ain't any need for you to faint any more."

"I don't want the machine," feebly protested Dahl.

"Can't help it," responded the one in blue. "Under the law we can't accept it, and it's up to you to go and get that benzine buggy."

Dahl went.

In the meantime, the machine, evidently vexed by its experience in being dragged brutally to a common police station by a pair oxen, refused to respond to Dahl's frantic efforts to restore the spark of life to a dead engine.

It took an hour to start the engine—but Dahl still has the machine at his home.

Policeman Hostage in the Hands of an Enemy

CLEVELAND, O.—Many strange things have come to pass since the Fourteenth precinct police station, colloquially called the Collinwood station, was located near a little clump of woods at Hayden and Idarose avenues, in a nice secluded spot, where burglars, tramps and other marauders could not easily find it and say harsh things to the policemen, but the "last straw" has arrived.

A great army of emigrant Melanoplus Spretus, with several regiments of Milar spili Femur Rubrum, numbering 95,500,000 by the estimates of Sergeants Batchelor and O'Hara, took possession of the station and the fields all about the other day. After a desperate battle the police retired in confusion and chagrin determined, however, to recapture their stronghold.

Sergeant O'Hara was missing when the roll was called some distance away on Idarose avenue and it is feared he is held a prisoner in the station house by the invaders. As nearly as the police can make out they appear to be of both the Acridia and Locustidae tribes. Despite their formidable names, they are really nothing more ferocious than the common garden or Kansas variety of grasshoppers.

Sergeant Batchelor was at the desk when the advance guard of the grasshopper army walked in.

"It sounded like a march," said the sergeant. "In marched several million grasshoppers. A detachment hopped upon the desk and made themselves busy with things. It seemed they were trying to get me to understand they had taken possession. I called for reinforcements, but it was too late."

Chauffeur Runs Car Into Curb to Escape Arrest

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Thoughts of being arrested just because one failed to turn on the lights on his automobile are not pleasant ones—especially to Henry Smith, colored.

Henry has had the experience and knows whereof he speaks. Policemen who make the arrests do not like the idea of being given a joy ride into a curb, either. So the "arrests" and the "arrested" can have a story to tell.

Patrolman Dan Dees found an automobile on the street which did not have the lights turned on. Henry Smith, negro chauffeur, was arrested and ordered to drive to the police station. Patrolman Dees being hampered with a free ride. Henry started toward the station and suddenly announced that he could not stop the car.

Instead of trying to stop, though, Henry turned on the "motor" throttle, and the car sped away, going about 40 miles an hour. Although commanded to stop, Henry refused, and the patrolman struck him on the head with his club.

TARIFF BILL IS PASSED BY SENATE

MEASURE CARRIES FEATURES
ADVOCATED BY THE ADMINISTRATION.

LA FOLLETTE AND POINDEXTER
VOTE FOR BILL.

Two Democrats Oppose Majority On
Final Vote—Bill Will Go to Joint Conference With House.

Washington—The Underwood-Simmons tariff bill passed the senate late Tuesday afternoon by a vote of 44 to 37.

It went through carrying all the features for which President Wilson has contended—free wool, free sugar, free meats and greatly reduced duties on all of the necessities of life.

As it passed the senate the tariff bill represents an average reduction of more than 4 per cent from the rates of the original bill that passed the house, and nearly 23 per cent from the rates of existing law.

The bill now goes to conference between the two houses and ten days, it is expected, will see final action on this important measure which already has dragged itself along for six months.

The vote in the senate today was big with political possibilities. Two Republicans, La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Poindexter, of Washington, voted for the Democratic bill. Only two Democrats, Thornton and Randall of Louisiana failed to stand by the caucus pledge. They voted with most of the Republicans against the measure.

Fatal Results of Duel

Antlers, Okla.—C. B. Taylor, postmaster at Farris, Okla., and Bert Stevens, a constable, are dead as the result of a pistol duel in which they engaged on the streets of Farris.

Two years ago two men went to Taylor's home, and after calling him out attacked him and inflicted injuries which kept him under a physician's care for three months. Taylor accused Stevens of being one of his assailants. Since then both men have threatened to shoot each other.

When they met both began shooting and each fell fatally wounded. Both died soon afterwards.

Close Up Sea Hotel

New York.—Heirs of the John Arbuckle estate have decided to close one of his old philanthropic hobbies, known as the "Arbuckle Deep Sea Hotel." The hotel is made up of two boats, one an old square-rigged ship named the Jacob A. Stabler, and the other the schooner yacht Gilana, once a palatial craft used by the late coffee merchant as his private yacht. For years the two boats have been moored off the East river shore and largely patronized by poor working girls, who have lived there for $2.50 for both room and board a week.

German Aid Ship Wrecked.

Berlin.—The worst of the numerous disasters which have overtaken Germany's shipping fleet happened Tuesday evening when the new naval transport ship L. H-1 was wrecked while on a voyage from the mainland to Heligoland, 23 miles away. Thirteen of the crew of 20 were drowned. This is the twelfth accident to befall the Zeppelin airships and the first to be accompanied with loss of life.

Jerome Is Set Free.

Costa Rica, Que.—William Traversa Jerome was acquitted Monday of the charge of having gambled on Thursday last, on the station property of the Grand Trunk railway here, while waiting for the immigration authorities to pass on the case of Harry K. Thaw. In discharging him the court apologized for the humiliation to which he had been subjected.

The hearing before Magistrate Henry Mulvena, of Sherbrooke, lasted less than an hour. It began at 7:35 o'clock and at 8:20 the court said: "Sir, you are honorably discharged."

Big Money Is Out Up.

St. Louis—Two million and a half dollars in currency was partly destroyed here at the United States treasury by order of the treasury department at Washington.

Holes big enough to put a finger through were punched into the notes and they were then divided lengthwise by an electric cutter. The notes were gold and silver certificates of the $5,000 and $10,000 denomination put up in packets of $500,000. About $1,500,000 of the $5,000 notes and $1,000,000 of the $10,000 were sacrificed.

J. H. Kent, 55 years old, a Galena, Ill., farmer, is the first victim of the corn shredder this season in this county. He lost his right arm when his coat sleeve became caught.

A Lecture on Christian Science

By VIRGIL O. STRICKLER, C. S.

Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

However much people may differ in their attitude towards Christian Science every one will admit that it has done many good things. Entirely apart from the question of physical healing, it is generally conceded that it produces a happy and contented mentality, that it destroys fear, and makes people loving and kind.

When we add to this the fact that it has healed many who have previously been unable to find relief under other systems, that it has cured many of the drug habit, and of the liquor habit, has restored harmony in many homes that were discordant, and has given hope and courage to people who were discouraged, it is easy to see that why Christian Science has spread from one end of the earth to the other with such wonderful rapidity.

Why should any one not wish to believe that God heals the sick? Is it not a thing to be desired? And is it not something for which humanity has been praying through the centuries? Now that it is here why should any one not wish to accept it? Let each one ask himself that question.

As time goes on humanity exhibits an ever decreasing interest in theories about God that are not helpful and practical. The tendency has been to place the churches at indicating a loss of interest in religion, but it is not so. It indicates a tremendous desire for a religion that is practical.

THIS IS AN AGE OF PRACTICAL THINGS

The demand for practical things also demands a religion that is practical. People are no longer satisfied with theories about what is to happen in another world. What is desired is a demonstrable religion that saves from present troubles—from sickness, and sin, and failure, and unhappiness, and the countless ills of every-day human experience—and if there is a religion that will do that, it can be safely trusted for the future.

Christian Science is essentially a practical religion. It has been called applied Christianity. There is the same difference between Christian Science and other systems that there is between mathematics and engineering. Mathematics does much good in many ways, but it is not until the rules of mathematics are applied to human affairs that we see brought out great bridges, railroads, subways, lofty buildings, and other things that are of public utility, and which contribute to the well-being of mankind. So it is only when the teachings of Jesus are understood and applied to human affairs that we see the sick healed, sinners liberated, from bondage to evil habits, and other practical things done for the betterment of humanity.

When viewed from any point Mrs. Eddy stands as one of the great characters of this age. She has made a discovery in the realm of metaphysics that exerts and must continue to exert a more far-reaching influence upon humanity than any discovery ever made in the physical realm. She has founded a religion that has restored to mankind the spiritual healing as practiced by the primitive church. Within the brief space of one generation her teachings have so impressed themselves upon the public that it would be difficult to find a place where there is not a Christian Science church or society, or at least where there are not some Christian Scientists. Sooner or later every person will adopt that system of religious teaching which brings the largest measure of help and hope and consolation, and as long as any remain who are suffering from unhappiness or sickness or sin, Christian Science will offer to them a sure means of finding divine help.

EASILY TOWED CANAL BOAT

Remarkable Strength Displayed by Three Hundred Pound Car, According to Captain.

With a big piece of fried carp as his corroborative evidence, Capt. Tom Moore of canal towage boat No. 8, in service on the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, related a fish story of some magnitude when his boat reached here recently, says a Cumberland (Md.) correspondent of the New York Herald.

"We were slipping along in the Big Pool," said Captain Tom, "when I saw an enormous carp swimming near the boat. I steered my rife and fired, stunning him. Up he comes, belly up. Then I jumped ashore and slipped a mule collar over the fish's head and back to just behind the gills. It fit snug. He couldn't shake it off. Then I tied one end of a line to the collar and the other to the boat and got aboard."

"In a few minutes the carp came to and started like a flash down the canal, and he yanked the old boat along with ease. I yelled to the driver to unhitch his mules and trot along behind and the carp pulled us clear into Cumberland. When we got to the bend here I killed the carp. It weighed three hundred pounds. And there," concluded Captain Moore, pointing to the dish of fried fish, "is a piece of it, if you don't believe me."
