The Home Man

We Should Have Faith in Him Often times. Help Him Develop the Idea.

It is true today as it was 1900 years ago that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country." The lack of appreciation by home people has caused many a man to leave a town and seek a new community in which to begin an enterprise. Thus a new industry which might have helped this town to grow was lost because its people lacked faith in the home man. The man who goes away and succeeds is readily acknowledged by the people of his home town as a genius. Many an inventor and many a projector of new enterprises has had this experience; it is common indeed, to all mankind. Persons in many communities have not sufficiently appreciated what their neighbors were accomplishing or could achieve and so many a man has gone elsewhere and found the recognition that was denied him at home. Give credit and backing to the home man. Have faith in him and encourage him. If this is done fully and freely it will go a long way toward keeping at home many a man who otherwise will go elsewhere to find moral and financial backing.

There is genius in this town as well as in any other. If you know of a man who has something to develop, don't let him go elsewhere. Help him to get a start right here. Commercial enterprises are a benefit to any town, and we should have sufficient pride in this town to want it to grow.

TODAY'S REFLECTIONS

October the prince of all months.
The leaves are turning to gold.
And that's about all the gold there is in sight.
Get out and boost the high school football team.
The world's series are now on.
Gee, but it is comfortable not to have to worry about the Tigers' chances for winning the series.
Don't forget to shop early.
Plymouth stores are certainly looking attractive.
No excuse for trading away from home, here.
The new tariff bill is now a law.
But the high price of living is still in our midst.
In our "midst" is right.
Mushroom hunters are certainly getting in their ticks.
Get the habit of trading in Plymouth.
Then you have a chance of getting your dollar back.
October is all right but there's more promise in May.

Patrons Must be Careful

Because people have carelessly wrapped packages sent through the mails by parcel post, the articles in question not only being destroyed but their contents destroying other matter, a special circular has been sent out by the department at Washington issuing a note of warning to officials and insisting on their refusing packages improperly packed or wrapped.

According to instructions received by Postmaster Ladd from Washington the postmaster is informed that if a package is improperly packed or wrapped it is accepted by him for mailing he will be held accountable for the results.

The Washington order enumerates golf sticks, berries, oils and paints as among the articles which should be wrapped and tied carefully before being presented at the postoffice for mailing.

MOLLY McDONALD A TALE OF THE FRONTIER

By RANDALL PARRISH Author of "Keith of the Border," "My Lady of Doubt," "My Lady of the South," etc. etc. Illustrations by V. L. Barnes

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, seeks a man to lead his daughter, Molly, who is betrothed to a man named "Buck" Hamlin...

CHAPTER XXXI.—Continued. "Yes, I am Molly; please do not move yet. You have been hurt, but it is all right now."

"And left you?" "Yes—he never thought of me; only—only how he should escape with the money. Never moved never opened my eyes, perhaps he believed me dead also, and—and I prayed he would, I would rather have died than have him touch me again. And—and I thought you were dead too. O God! It was so horrible!"

"The man's voice was soft and low, thrilling with the love that refused control. 'I know, dear; I know it all, now,' he said tenderly, clasping her hands. 'But that is all over and gone.' He put up one hand to his wound. 'Heaven, how my head aches! But that pain won't last long. I am a bit groggy yet, but will be on my feet pretty soon. You are a brave little girl. Tell me how you got free?'

"But how did it happen?" he asked. "Your captors? Your father's death? It is all a mystery to me after I left you on the hotel balcony. The tears stood in her eyes suddenly uplifted to his, and impulsively the man encircled her with his arm. 'You know I care, dear,' he exclaimed recklessly. 'You are not afraid to tell me.' 'No, no; you have been so kind, so true. I can tell you everything—only it is so hard to confess the truth about my father.' 'Who suspect he was implicated?' he asked in astonishment, 'that he actually had a part in the plot?'

"She looked at him gravely, down into his very soul. 'Yes, and—and that hurts more than all the rest.'"

CHAPTER XXXII.

Words of Love. Hamlin was silent for a moment, not knowing what to say that would comfort or help. He had never suspected that he could not refrain at a distance from experiencing a feeling of relief. Deeply as he sympathized with her in this trouble, still the man could not be conscious of those barriers formerly existing between them which this discovery had instantly swept away. Now they could meet upon a level, as man and woman. No longer could rank intervene, not even the stain of his own court-martial. Possibly she dreamed of what was passing in his mind, for she suddenly lifted her eyes to his. 'Shall I tell you?'

"No; not now; both your explanation and mine can wait," he replied quickly. "I can stand alone now—see," and he regained his feet, swaying slightly with dizziness, yet smiling down at her as he held forth a hand. "Now you try it; take hold of me until you test your limbs—that was an ugly fall you got when I shot your pony."

She straightened slowly, her cheeks flushing in the keen air, her eyes striving to smile back in response to his challenge. "That was nothing," she protested, tramping about. "I only went down into the snow, but my arms were rebound, and the pony fell on my foot—it feels quite natural now."

"Good. We shall have to tramp a little way. In which direction did Dupont go?" "Across the ridge there, see, that is his trail."

"Then he never saw our horses out yonder. That is one piece of good luck, at least. The sooner we get to them the better. I have been guilty of enough foolishness today to be careful hereafter." He looked across at Hughes' body. "I wonder if that fellow meant to hit me? I never trusted him much, but I didn't expect that. Did you see him fire?"

"Yes, but it was so sudden I could not even cry out. He was upon one knee, and his revolver waved like this as he tried to aim. Dupont saw it, and jumped just as he pulled the trigger."

"I thought so. The poor devil got the wrong man."

"Why? Were these two enemies?" "They had been partners, stealing and running cattle. Dupont had cheated Hughes out of his share, and there was bad blood between them. I ran across the fellow up on the Cimarron, waiting for Dupont to come back to his old range. Did you ever hear Dupont called by any other name?"

"The shock he had questioned me?" "No, I want that his real name? The woman back there—wasn't she his wife?" "She was his wife, yes; but their name was not Dupont. That was assumed; the correct one was Le Ferre."

ately, recklessly, inspired by her nearness, his dependence upon him. He had faith that she cared; her eyes, her manner, had told him, his eyes, even now he could not realize all that was meant by that quiet confession. The iron discipline of years would not relax instantly, in spite of the boldness of his utterance, he was still the soldier, feeling the chain of rank. Her very confession, so simply spoken, tended to confuse, to mystify him. "Do you mean," he asked eagerly, "that you love me?"

"What else should I mean?" she said slowly. "It is not new to me. I have known it for a long while."

"That I loved you?" "Yes," smiling now. "Love is no mystery to a woman. I do not care because you are in the ranks; that is only a temporary condition. I knew you out there, at the very first, as a gentleman. I have never doubted you. Here, in this wilderness, I am not afraid. It is not because my father is dead, or because he has been guilty of a crime, that I say this. I would have said it before, on the balcony there in Dodge, had you asked me. It is not the uniform I love, but the man. Can you understand?"

"Will you marry me—a sergeant of cavalry?" She was still smiling, her eyes frankly looking into his own. "I will marry David Hamlin," she answered firmly, "let him be what he may."

The man let out his suppressed breath in a sob of relief, his eyes brightening with triumph. "Oh, Molly! Molly!" he cried. "I cannot tell you what this all means to me. There is no past now to my life, but all future."

"Am I that to you?" "That! Yes, and a thousand times more! I had ambition once, opportunity, even wealth. They were swept away by a man's lie, a woman's perfidy. Out of that wreck, I crawled into the world again a mere thing. I lived simply because I must live, shrinking in obscurity, my only inspiration the hope of an honorable death or an opportunity for vengeance. Mine was the life of the ranks in the desert, associating with the lowest scum, in constant contact with savagery. I could not speak to a decent woman, or be a man among men. There was

"This is so strange I can hardly realize the truth," he said gravely. "But, dear one, we must talk elsewhere, and not here. Life was never better worth so much as it is now, and every instant we waste here may mean capture and death. Come, there are two ponies at the mouth of the valley."

He snatched up the blanket from the ground, and wrapped it about her in such manner as to enable her to walk; stooped over Hughes, loosened the revolver from his stiffened fingers, and then came back to where she waited. "You can walk? It is not far."

"Yes, the numbness is all gone. He was all seriousness now, alert and watchful, the plainsman and the soldier. "Then come; I'll break trail." "Where is the Indian village?" she asked, her voice trembling slightly. "Beyond those bluffs; at least Hughes thought so. We saw their pony herd in the valley below, more dots against the snow."

Ten minutes later, plowing through the intervening drifts, they came forth to the broad vista of the valley and the two patient ponies standing motionless. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Spain's Pigeonhole Cemeteries. A rather curious—and to our ideas somewhat unpleasant—custom obtains in Spanish cemeteries. All around the burying-ground a building is erected whose design can only be compared to that of a nest of pigeon holes, often seen in post offices and similar institutions. Each pigeonhole is a tomb. When a person dies his relatives hire a pigeonhole for five years, and the remains are placed inside. The end is then sealed up with mortar and a memorial tablet affixed on the outside. The lease of the pigeonhole may be renewed at the end of the five years, but if it is allowed to expire the tomb is unsealed and the bones removed to make way for another tenant. Needless to say, the plan has some good points. The space taken by the pigeonhole cemetery is comparatively small as is the cost of burial. Picturesqueness is, however, conspicuous by its absence; no sentimental grief catered to, as it would be impossible to go and mourn at the grave of a person buried in a pigeonhole so high up that a ladder was needed to reach it. To such as prefer the old-fashioned graves the central space of the ground is offered, but the pigeonholes are the most popular.—The Wide World.

Changing Nature Indirectly. You are constantly assured that you cannot change human nature; that you cannot make people over by process of law. But if you cannot reform men by reforming the conditions that make men what they are, how is it that you can so readily debauch and degrade them by reversing the process?—Collier's Weekly.

Cause of Fall of Bullet. The resistance of the air and the attraction of gravitation cause a bullet or cannonball to end its flight and fall to the earth; these two forces operating together cause the projectile to describe a curve dependent on its initial velocity. The greater the speed at the beginning the farther it will go.

Not Needed. He—Copper is dull. She—No one. We keep it always highly polished.

Might Make Use of Eels. Many Curiousnesses Worthy of Consideration by Citizens of Towns Just Now Severely Afflicted. The towns of Red Hook, Tivoli and Madala are having a plague of eels. They are all near Poughkeepsie, and are situated upon a single lightning-belt. The eels are seen in great numbers in the dark or light up their ing for the intake pipes, and provided that the eels are not exterminated, a pickling plant might be introduced as a side line with the manufacture of light. Again, if this scheme is not feasible or worthy, why not cross the eels with the electric eel of the old world? Then, seeing Red Hook, Tivoli and Madala would not be situated.

City's Heavy Burden. New York is said to have 14,000 feebleminded public school children.

New Ideas for Handy Boys

By A. NEELY HALL Author of "Handcraft for Handy Boys," "The Boy Craftsman," etc.

HOW TO MAKE A "PAUL REVERE" LANTERN. The "Paul Revere" lantern shown in Fig. 1 differs from the lanterns used in colonial times only in this respect—it is lighted by removing the bottom instead of through a doorway in the side.

The Dutch women to celebrate. A century ago Holland regained its old independence and right of self-government, and the Dutch people propose to celebrate this event by a series of exhibitions illustrative of the progress that has been made during the intervening years.

The exhibition will show a middle class house of one hundred years ago, and particularly the kitchen, where all the cooking for the house was done and provisions were kept. The domestic will not be the only side of the life of the Dutch women of 1813 illustrated.

number of spaces indicated. Then, with a nail sharpened at its point, pierce the small holes of the design, and with a small cold-chisel, or a screw-driver, cut the slits. Space the perforations as indicated, and be careful to guide the ends of the slits within the guide-lines.

Fasten the ends of the side pieces together with brass shanks (brass paper fasteners will do if you cannot get the brass shanks sold for the purpose); then cut a circular block of wood to fit in the bottom end of the cylinder thus formed (Fig. 5) and fasten to it a circular piece of brass of a large enough diameter to make a 1/4-inch projection beyond the sides of the lantern. Make a candleholder out of a strip of metal, as shown in Fig. 5, and tack this to the base block. The pins for holding the bottom in the lantern are made out of two screw-eyes, by slipping off the threads, and these are held to the bottom with short pieces of chain to keep them from being lost when the bottom is removed for lighting the candle.

Teaching an Eaglet to Fly. In teaching the young to fly, the mother will often have one of them climb on her back. She will then sail away with it in this position. Suddenly she will drop from under the young one and leave him alone in his attempt at flying. Should he start to fall, the mother will catch him on her back and wings, and then try the same project again.—Farm and Fireside.

HIDES TANNED For Robes and Coats. Mrs. B. A. Hitchcock of Canada, an officer of the Litchfield County Equal Franchise league, has made the following statement in a letter to a local newspaper: "I tamed half a dozen angle dogs or worms, and got them so that they would come up out of the earth and strike me on my nose, but they thrived best on sauerkraut. It took me some time to tame them so that they know my knock on the earth above them from the tap of an old hen's bill. I rap softly three times and whistle 'Oh, Promise Me,' and up come the angleworms. One day I discovered that the biggest, fattest angleworm was cross-eyed."—Winsted (Conn.) dispatch to New York World.

Turn About is Fair Play. "A famous tenor," said Giulio Gatti-Casazza, "was invited one night to dinner by a Chicago trust magnate. The dinner was superb, but at its end the trust magnate asked the tenor to sing. This, of course, was as bad as inviting a doctor to dinner and then asking for a free prescription. So the tenor politely declined. The trust magnate, however, insisted. After five or ten minutes of this, the tenor said, with a laugh: 'Oh, well, every one to his trade. Let me see you pick a pocket. Then I'll sing.'"

Will Christ Ever Come Again?

Toppling 'omb-stones, falling mountains, opening graves, waiting maniacs, fiery heavens and a burning earth have been so promiscuously associated with the Lord's Second Coming, that many Christian people are coming to dread the event instead of praying for it as instructed in the Bible.

What is the manner of the Lord's Second Coming? Will He ever come again in the flesh? Will this earth ever be totally destroyed? Why should the Lord ever come again? What could be the benefit of His coming? Is it a time to be dreaded?

Local Notes.

Mrs. J. V. Clinesmith and daughter Helen of Utica; Mrs. W. H. Durfee and Mrs. Adah Keilior of Bad Axe, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. G. Herriman.

A Sunday-school convention and rally was held in the Livonia Union church last Sunday. Fine music was furnished and several excellent speakers from away were present.

There's nothing which will pay as good interest on the money invested as a year's subscription to the local paper. How? By watching the display and local advertisements and taking advantage of the bargains which may be picked up in this way.

The people may sneer to their hearts' content, but the wide-awake American will continue to use slang till the cows come home or the clouds roll by.

The Two Year Course in Practical Agriculture offered at the Michigan Agricultural College beginning November 3 promises to be of most popular one. Numerous inquiries are being received daily and it is expected that a large number of the young farmers throughout the state will enroll.

Having occasion, a few evenings ago to carry out a forgotten milk bottle, one of our citizens found in the milk box two poor miserable, little half starved kittens only a few weeks old, that appeared weak and frightened.
