Will Rebuild Burned Factory Building at Once

Plymouth Improvement Association Let Contract For the New Building Wednesday Evening.

Arrangements Also Made for a Big Banquet Tuesday Evening, December 14th.

At a meeting of the Plymouth Improvement Association directors Wednesday evening, it was decided to rebuild the building owned by the association and occupied by the Plymouth Motor Castings Co., which was recently burned to the ground. The new building will be constructed of cement blocks and will be 40x90 feet and one story in height. This will be considerably larger than the old building. J. H. Pasterson was given the contract for the new building and the work of construction will be commenced at once and rushed to an early completion. When the building is ready it will be occupied by the Plymouth Motor Castings Co., who were doing a fine business when the plant was destroyed by fire a few weeks ago. They have orders on hand to keep them busy until next August. Their business has grown wonderfully since they came here early last summer, and there is every reason to believe that it will continue to grow in the future. They expect to employ quite a number of men when the plant gets to running again. The action of the Improvement Association in rebuilding the plant, and thus securing this growing industry for Plymouth, meets with the approval of every citizen.

After the rebuilding matter had been disposed of President, F. D. Schrader suggested that it was high time that a movement be started for a get-together meeting of the Association, and awaken some interest and enthusiasm in the affairs of the organization. He suggested that a big banquet be given with a program of speaking and music. This suggestion was received with much enthusiasm on the part of the members of the board and it was unanimously adopted that a banquet be held on Tuesday evening, December 14th. President Schrader appointed Edward Gayde as chairman of the program committee and George W. Richwine as chairman of the banquet committee with power to choose their own assistants. The price of the tickets will be $1.00 which will include membership fee and dues to the Association.

An effort will be made to secure Governor Ferris as one of the speakers and Eddie Guest as one of the entertainers. It's going to be some banquet and some program all right. Tickets will soon be in the hands of the committee and when they call on you, greet them with a "Plymouth for Progress" booster smile and buy one of the tickets. It will be the biggest $1.00 worth you ever got. More particulars later.

Pupils of Public Schools Hear Fine Talk

"Evils of the Cigarette" was the subject of a talk delivered by C. M. Carson of Detroit, to the pupils of the Plymouth High school and their guests last week Thursday afternoon.

Proceeding the talk of the afternoon the tenth and third grade pupils rendered some pleasing songs, after which Superintendent Keebe, with a few well chosen remarks introduced the speaker. Mr. Carson's earnest talk to the boys and girls showed his great interest in their welfare and it is hoped that the interference he drew and the facts he cited as to the evils of cigarette smoking will go far toward lessening the tendencies of the boys in this community indulging in this dangerous habit. Although Mr. Carson is a very busy man, at the head of one of the departments of the Cadillac Motor Co., he gives much of his valuable time, freely, for this good cause.

Mr. Carson said, in part: "Cigarette smoking is acquiring a hold on a great many boys in our community. The habit has grown to an abnormal extent, both among boys and men in the last year or two. Since it is such a bad practice and is taking such a hold upon so many people, we think it is a disgrace for a grown man to smoke cigarettes, because it is not only injurious to his health, but is such a bad example to the boys. Boys who smoke cigarettes do not care to employ or keep in our employ. In the future we will not hire anyone whom we know to be addicted to this habit. It is our desire to weed it entirely out of the factory just as soon as it is practicable. We will ask everyone in our factory, who sees the seriousness of this habit to use their influence in having it stamped out. We have two objects in interesting ourselves in this matter. First, to help men and boys; second, we believe that men who do not smoke cigarettes or frequent the saloon can make better automobiles than those who do.

State Law Says "Public Toilets"

Numerous Michigan small towns are agitating the subject of public rest rooms with toilet conveniences. So far as the latter are concerned, no need to agitate. A state law governs the matter. Here you have it.

Public Acts No. 285 of Acts of 1915 reads as follows:

Sec. 1—It shall be the duty of the common council of any city in the state, and of the board of trustees of any incorporated village, to cause to be constructed and maintained not less than one public closet, commonly known and designated as a public convenience station, in such place or places as directed by the local board of health. Such closets or public convenience stations shall have thereon the proper signs and be so placed as directed by the local board of health as to be easily accessible from the business district or districts of such city or village and shall be maintained in a satisfactory manner under the supervision of the local board of health. Suitable and adequate accommodations shall be afforded at such public convenience stations, to the members of both sexes.

Death of Peter Cooper

Peter Cooper, an aged resident of this place, passed away at his home on South Main street early last Tuesday morning. The deceased had been in ill health for the past year, but had been confined to his home for only a few weeks. His death was due to heart trouble. Mr. Cooper was born in Hoboken, New Jersey, and was within a few days of being 83 years old, his birthday occurring the latter part of this month. He had been a resident of Plymouth for the past half century, except five years spent in Detroit. He is survived by his widow, three sons and one daughter—Charles and James of this place, and Harry and Mrs. W. L. Deland of Detroit. The funeral services were held from his late home Thursday morning, Rev. B. F. Farber officiating. Interment in Riverside cemetery.

Death of Charles F. Gordon

Charles F. Gordon, an aged gentleman who had resided with Mr. and Mrs. Oona Harrison at the Plymouth Hotel for the past four years, was found dead in bed last Sunday morning. Mr. Gordon had been in failing health for the past month, but was around as usual the day previous to his death, which was caused by bronchial trouble. The deceased was born in New Hampshire in 1844 and was a veteran of the civil war, being a member of Company C, 11th New Hampshire Infantry. The funeral services were held from the Plymouth Hotel, Tuesday morning at nine o'clock. E. H. Milworth of Detroit, conducting the services. Interment in Riverside cemetery. The deceased leaves no near relatives.

Bluffs of Dally's lumber camp direct a stranger to the camp. Walter Sandry, a foreman of the Dillingworth Lumber Co., is the most of it. He makes acquaintance with the camp and the work he has come from the East to superintend and make successful.

Out of the near gloom, which was brightening a bit with dawn, the log trail rose, an aggressive, snake-like trough climbing uncompromisingly at an angle of 36 degrees, its center a straight pine log sunk to its surface, which was polished like ivory, its slightly curving sides the same. How many tapering trunks had gone into its two sides would be hard to say, for in some places they had sunk and were covered—in the dip, say, over the ridge where the real mountain began, at the turn where it wound around the shoulder.

Before ten minutes Sandry was breathing heavily, though he said nothing and kept close to Dally's heels. The logs came forward and upward with an easy, climbing lift that rippled every muscle in his loose body, while the man from the cities strained and heaved in painful labor, slipping on the wet earth, foundering in the rotten bark and brush that lined the way. They climbed beside the trail, not in it. Ahead of them the gang of men had long since disappeared from sight and hearing.

The forenoon that followed was the opening page in a new chapter of his life, and Sandry bent all his faculties to a grasp of outlets.

He stood silently watching the work go forward. They had reached the cutting. Here, in a wide dip high above the world, it seemed to the Easterner, was a huge circle of activity. Close beside the built trail a second donkey engine fussed and screamed, reaching out uncanonically on all sides for the great logs, to haul them in with sweeps of spool and strain of cable and turn them over to the mysterious steel rope that came constantly crawling back on its traveling line. This was called the "yarding engine"—the one at the foot of the trail beside the railway and the track being known as the "roader."

The monotonous song of the cross-cut saw had begun where the buckers were converting several hundred-and-fifty-foot trunks into handling sections.

A little below, two foot-wide planks some five or six feet long had been set into a giant yellow pine about eight feet from the ground, one on either side, and on these two men were standing, their flannel shirts open at the throat, their sleeves rolled up from arms of steel and leather, their heads bare. Sandry watched the bending of their backs, every muscle outlined under the clinging shirts, the play of their knees, the whole easy rippling of their entire bodies with the regular give and take of the long saw. The boards, known as springboards, rose and dipped with the even motion.

These men were fallers, and presently they would lay the towering monarch of the great woods to the fraction of an inch in a given place, ready for the buckers, the hook-tender and the cable.

In the meantime the logs already down were swiftly, skidded of their limbs, out into thirty and forty foot lengths, rolled into the trail with peevish, noisy, and sent up and over the cables to the compartment of small spots from the whistle-bob's restful, deliberate, and polished.

The built trail ended here in the shallow hollow between the first ridge and the great mountain beyond, though up the face of the latter it was produced by a steeper path, sharply defined among the dense growth of the timber.

He was impressed by the magnitude of the country. On every hand the lifting hills were clothed in trees, close packed and of such girth and height as to seem almost grotesquely impossible. Humanity was dwarfed to insignificance, like an ant crawling on a cathedral column.

Sandry looked upward. Up to this distance the woods were dotted with cottages where the great stumps glowed white amid the vivid green and the debris of slashings and trimmings which bordered with the fern and hazel brush and other undergrowth to make a perfect tangle. But beyond, along the new-cut trail, was nature, dense and untouched, waiting for the hand of pygmy man to come and take her lavish treasures.

By nine o'clock the sun was shining above the peaks and the fog had vanished from the valleys and although it was late fall there was no feeling of the death of the year. On the contrary, there was a sense of bustle and hurry and work beginning with the advent of the rains. The tidewater slough was bank-full and mud-brown with thick grass and water growths along its edges. The stranger unconsciously drew great breaths of the sweet air of the high hills and began to feel dimly something of their charm.

John Dally was everywhere, looking at this, lending a hand at that, shouting some good-natured instruction here and there, overseeing with an eagle eye each minute detail of the work.

One of the new owner's first impressions was that in this man he had an object of great value. He was just thinking this when there came one long blast from the donkey over the ridge and the men dropped to their knees in their tracks, the two on the spring boards jumped down, leaving the saw just where the call had caught it, far out on one side, and the foreman came up to him.

"Dinner time, Mr. Sandry," he said, smiling. "I expect you're pretty hungry."

"What?" cried Sandry, "why, I hadn't thought of it! Is it possible we've been here five hours?"

"Sure. Time goes fast in the hills."

They began to climb the trail, the men straggling out ahead and behind, the youngest forging forward in the eagerness of youth and healthy appetites, the older characters, all of them hardened woodsmen, taking it more leisurely.

Before they were half way up, however, Sandry was breathing heavily.

"Might I ask," said Dally, "something about the change in the company?"

"Certainly. There has simply been an outright sale of the interests, all of which, or nearly all, I bought from Dillingworth & Frazer. A fifth, I believe, is still owned by a Mr. Rakeham, who is somewhere in South America. I have come out to take absolute charge and learn the timber business."

He Stood Silently Watching the Work Go Forward.

"I see. And you've had no expert?"

"None," said Sandry a little shortly. "Marvin Humphrey—but my few friends is tenderly complained a voice behind. Sandry glanced quickly back. Three lumberjacks were plodding up the slope, their seamed and weathered faces set intently on dinner. On one, a red-headed chap of some thirty-six or eight, powerful and rugged, he set his sharp eyes.

"But I'm acquiring it," he finished, rapidly. Discharge that man." Dally did not turn.

"I can't," he said, "he's just quit."

CHAPTER IV.

Old Ruins in New Hands. The East and the West had met. It was apparent in every essential that had to do with Sandry and his men in common.

It showed when he sat among them at the head of the long table, in the way he used his hands, his knife and his food. It glared when he spoke, it paraded in his clothes, and most of all it stood forth pitilessly when he sat by himself at night in the plain little room under the dripping eaves. They were nearly always dripping, the pan behind the spotless curtains was always black and glittering, there was nearly always the shut-in silence that rain imposes—that dense silence, his teeming and lonesome.

Sometimes, to be sure, it was only a little Oregon mist that saddened the night outside, but it had the same effect on the young man from the midst of life in New York.

He was East and he knew it. Also, the men had known it from that first speech in the doorway of the cook-shack. They spoke of him among themselves as "Dillingworth," accompanying the word with grins, tasting its flavor as delicately as any bespectacled professor of the East dallying with a new derivative.

Nowhere in the world is discernment brought to a finer point than in the lumber camps and mills of the Northwest, among that floating gentry of the pike and peavoy who pass here and there with the seasons, picking critically at the speech and doings of many places.

Also, nowhere is there a stronger prejudice against any manifestation of personal superiority, any exploitation of what may be east of the Cascades. To them the man and the place are one—East and Easterner.

They felt for him that contempt which only the seasoned feel for the inexperienced. And with the quickness which was his characteristic, the new owner sensed the feeling among them. It only added to that jumble of sensations and impressions which had crowded thick upon him from the first and which he had had no time to assort and get under control. He had simply laid them away for future attention.

In the meantime he went quickly at the work of settling himself in the new environment. A load of lumber was brought up the slough on the punt from the mill at Toledo and four men were put to building a small office. It was set at the edge of the slough, a bit below the cook-shack, where it commanded from its two eastern windows and door the track, the roading donkey, the log-trail and the railway, and from the southern one the winding slough, the rest of the track and the lower railway, where the donkey engine left the logs, its duty done. After that they rolled down with much splashing to the narrow ribbon of water which, with every flood tide backed in from the bay, lifted them high and trundled them, grinding and growling, slowly down, perhaps to the mill at Toledo, perhaps to be laced together with mammoth chains, built into a great raft and towed out to the ocean to voyage along the coast, down to southern California or up to Portland. A tiny, wheezy tug fussed about the backwater for the express purpose of starting the monster rafts out on the ebb.

Inside the new office were installed a roll-top desk, a case of books, a map or two and several chairs, beside a small stove. Here, with the four pine walls around him, Walter Sandry at last looked around and called himself at home. The drawers of the new desk were full of documents and memoranda, the history, with statistics and records down to the minutest detail, of the Dillingworth Lumber company. These he set himself to master as his first step toward the vast golden goal of the dream that had brought him west.

Very shrewdly he decided to take nothing out of the capable hands of his foreman. There had been a sort of tense pause in the camp pending this development. When it became apparent that things were to go on as usual the work went forward as if a line had been loosened.

A Big John Dally had gone about during the few days of uncertainty with the untruffled calm of his quiet nature, though there was a small, a very small ache somewhere inside him. Ever since he could remember, his life had been cast in Dally's lumber camp—when his father, old John Dally, had logged with oxen on the eastern slopes of the Coast range and there was no jerkwater railroad in to Yaquina bay.

When a 200-foot fir had tottered out of line and sent the old man forever into silence in the roaring thunder of its fall, the boy John, at seventeen, had picked up the reins of government

DISCOUNT ON CZAR'S CHECK

Painter Learned Something About How Business is Conducted in the Realm of Nicholas.

When Professor Tuxen, the Danish artist, had finished his great work, "The Coronation of Edward VII," he received, it appears, an order from the Russian emperor for a copy of this painting, for which the czar was to pay 12,000 rubles.

In due course the professor repaired to Petrograd to deliver the painting. He was granted an audience with the czar, who expressed his satisfaction with the picture and who handed the professor an order for the sum agreed upon.

Always there had been no hand of power in the hills save his own, no supervision excepting the annual visits of some member of the firm who went over things, nodded, estimated, took figures and went away. He had carried on his camp himself, fought since he could remember with the Yellow Pines company, whose holdings were vast as those of the Dillingworth, and had not thought of change.

When Walter Sandry settled quietly down with no voice in the doings of the camp, Dally drew a good breath and went ahead once more.

As for the new timber magnate, he sat down at the new desk on the first day of his occupancy of the little office on the slough's edge and wrote his first letter.

It was on a printed letterhead: Dillingworth Lumber Company, Toledo, Oregon.

Dear Dad: Excellent! I fancy I'm on top of the world. I could stay in here for an hour's chat. The country would amaze you as it has me with its mighty bigness. You feel like an atom crawling on the sea's floor—too small to count. The hills are the our beloved Cascades, only they are their wild cousins from the wilderness, unkempt and savage. There is wealth here, Dad, untold wealth and I intend to get a handful of it. The timber is unsounded, it reaches away to the Siletz reservation on the north and on beyond. These Indians come into camp once in while with baskets, a timid sort of people, fisher, not fighters. The stumpage is magnificent. We are the company, though we have a rival, a formidable one, the Yellow Pines, which operates to the south of us. I have not one of their people as yet, but my foreman tells me there is, and always has been, blood between us. Well, dear old chap, I must not waffle you. Write me all the happenings that concern you there. Tell Higgins if he neglects one thing about me I will skin him alive when I come home for a flying trip. I hope, sir, you are feeling comfortable and will go into the winter in good shape. When the spring comes on I believe we can bring you out here with comfort—the Pullman service is smooth as glass across continent. And I know the trip would benefit you.

As he wrote these words the young man's bright blue eyes softened like a woman's and a grim line settled about his lips. He knew, on the word of the greatest specialist of two continents, that the dignified old gentleman to whom they were addressed, a white-haired gentleman with the finest bearing and the gentlest heart, tied irrevocably to an invalid chair, had at the most but a scant year to live. Yet he wrote of hope and travel and returning health, wrote determinedly with a force that must communicate something of his light to the lonely world left by the tide of life stranded at the edge of that mighty, flowing stream, the metropolis.

He finished the letter with a commendation so tender, so indicative of a great affection, that it did not sound like a man's, a son's to a father—rather like a daughter's to an ailing mother, signed, sealed and stamped it, and sat for many minutes holding it in his hand, staring hard with drawn brows at the yellow pine of the new walls. Again the faint shadow of sadness, of regret, flickered from the past across his features. Then he sighed, rose with his graceful quickness and straightened his shoulders. As he closed the desk and stepped from the office he felt that he had gathered up the reins of the new life.

CHAPTER V.

Wild-Blood and Horseflesh. The fall drew on apace. Sometimes the austere gloom of the mighty country thrilled Sandry with a strange compelling; often it held him at a dripping window with a load of lead on his heart. He had no companions John Dally, easy, simple, suggesting tried force, was his only comfort. In him he found something vaguely fine, as the plain little stone at the bottom of clear waters takes on a certain simple beauty. They spent an occasional evening together in the little office, talking of the work, and the new owner asked and learned many things from the simple heart of white-haired Ma Dally Sandry had stepped that first night, wholly without intent.

"He speaks like a man," she opined decisively, "an' you mark my words he'll prove himself so. If his hands are white."

Of the girl Siletz he had scarcely taken a moment's notice. He did not even know that when she served him silently at the o'clock covered table the two long braids were tied together at the nape of her neck so that by no chance could they fall against his hand. Neither did he know that the dog Coosnah watched him always with pale eyes. Of these two he knew less than of any others in camp with whom he had as much to do. As for the girl herself, she kept away from his view conversation, asked him: "Did you get your money, professor?" Professor Tuxen replied that he had not intended to mention the matter, but since his majesty himself raised the question, he would say that he had received only part of the money. At this the czar seemed not at all surprised, but calmly made out another order for the sum which had been deducted from the original amount, and thus Tuxen got his money.—Washington Star.

New York's Imports of Wood. New York state produces less than one-third of the raw material used in her wood industries. In spite of the popular impression that the introduction of concrete, brick and steel is doing away with the use of wood, it has been found that the state is yearly using more wood per capita than ever before. More than twice as much wood is used per person today, than 50 years ago. More than six times as much wood per person is used in New York state than in Germany, and more than ten times as much as in Great Britain.

ity. Often they two, the girl and the dog silent with a common consent like wild things of the woods, sought the wind-swept top of the great stump on the western ridge. Here Siletz looked down on the drooping slope and wondered of the cities and the sea. He had come from them both. He had never seen a man like him. His clothes were different. His speech was unlike. So were his hands, white and fine grained.

Also there was another of his possessions that she knew in every line and turn. Black Bolt, the splendid horse that stabled and whinnied with the filling in the lean-to beyond the fireplace. She could go more let him alone than she could refrain from lifting her hand to his forehead. He called to her blood with irresistible force. Day after day she crept away to the lean-to and dreamed, watching the slope and the log-trail.

"Oh, you beauty!" she whispered with a soft hand on the arching neck. "Oh, you beauty of the world! God made you strong to serve and beautiful to be loved!"

And at that moment, on that particular day, Walter Sandry stepped into the doorway of the lean-to. At his foot on the all the girl whirled upon him, her dark eyes wide with fright and confusion.

"I—" she stammered like a child. Sandry looked at her for the first time keenly.

"You are fond of the horse?" he asked.

But her tongue clove suddenly to the roof of her mouth and one of the inebriated silences that sometimes fell upon her shut her lips.

She dropped her eyes, twisted her fingers in Black Bolt's mane, and then Looked Around and Called Himself at Home.

with a gliding motion, soft-footed and swift, went past him, running toward the cook-shack.

The incident was nothing in itself, but it set the man thinking of her. He had seen adoration in the eyes she bent on the splendid animal, heard it in the words, stilled and incongruous.

"Queer youngster," said Sandry to himself.

That night after supper he came out, contrary to his custom, from the little room with its patchwork quilt, his crocheted mat and its antique Ebbie, into the big eating room.

He found Ma Dally rocking in the little chair, her tired old hands lying comfortably on the Portland Weekly spread out on her slanting lap. The wall lamps in their tin reflectors silvered her white hair exquisitely and brought out softly the thousand kindly creases on her ruddy face.

On the end of the bench drawn up to the stand Siletz was sitting, weaving a mat of long grasses, and her fingers were deft as an Indian's.

Behind her on the bench lay Coosnah, head on paws, eyes blinking sleepily.

"Come in, Mr. Sandry," said the old lady in her rich voice. "Draw up a chair. We're resting."

He sat down and bent a smile as brilliant as his blue eyes on this happy old mother of the wilderness. From the first he had felt for her personality, though he had no time to pay more than a passing attention to it.

"I should think you'd need it," he said. "How do you manage to keep up the stroke?"

"Law bless you," she laughed easily. "I'm trained to it. I've cooked in camp, young man, for forty-two year straight ahead."

"Then you've seen the growth of the country, the coming of railroads, the making of towns."

"Right from the bottom up. Seen 'em grow from three cabins on a covered wagon."

"You've witnessed the inroads of the world on this fine timber, too."

"Yes, an' it hasn't teched yet. I've seen it cut up over the Range and down this side, an' they's double stumpage for every acre that's been cut, between here'n the coast."

THE NEWEST REMEDY FOR BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM AND DROPSY

Kidney, Bladder and Uric Acid troubles bring misery to many. When the kidneys are weak or diseased, these natural filters do not cleanse the blood sufficiently, and the poisons are carried to all parts of the body. There follow depression, aches and pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, chilliness and rheumatism. In some people there are sharp pains in the back and loins, distressing bladder disorders and sometimes obstinate forms of uric acid sometimes forms into gravel or kidney stones. When the uric acid affects the muscles and joints it causes lumbago, rheumatism, gout or sciatica. This is the time to send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for large trial package of "Auric."

During digestion uric acid is absorbed into the system from meat, eaten, and even from some vegetables. The poor kidneys get tired and backache begins. Sad Pleasure. A minister who had resigned from his church was making his farewell calls. He called at the home of one of his parishioners who sent her little girl down to the parlor to entertain the minister for a few minutes, the mother not being dressed to receive him. After a few of the customary remarks about the weather the little girl said to the minister:

"I hear that we are to have the sad pleasure of losing you."

"Insulted the 'Copper.'" Through the busy streets a stalwart policeman led a little child by the hand.

A motherly-looking woman paused before them for a moment. Then, in a sudden burst of sympathy, she bent over the child and kissed her.

"Poor lamb!" she breathed; "early!" "She looks so cool and starvelike, and she hasn't been washed for a week. Some folks cannot be trusted with children, wicked, cruel things they are. Where did you find the child, policeman?"

"Find the child, woman?" started the policeman angrily. "I didn't find her at all. She's my own kid!"

Only Once. "Do you see the man?" "Yes, I see the man."

"What is he doing?" "He is blowing his fingers, jumping up and down and acting in such a way that his wife looks at him in astonishment and fear. There, he has kicked over two chairs, torn down the lace curtains and made a hash for the kitchen."

"But has the man gone crazy, all of a sudden?" "Oh, no; he was hunting for a collar button and picked up his wife's red-hot curling tongs in an absent way. Lots of husbands do that—once. He won't speak to her for the next three days, but he will not die of his injuries, and the experience may do him good."

How He Saw the Louvre. A French literary man fell in with one of the new order of American commercial men the other night and asked him if he had seen the sights of Paris.

"Yes," he said, "but I find that the police have closed most of the sights."

"Oh, no," said the literary friend, "the real sights of Paris, the monuments, are always open—the Pantheon, Notre Dame, the Invalids, the Madeleine and the Louvre."

"Ah, yes, I have seen the Louvre thoroughly."

"Thoroughly?" said the French home de lettres in surprise, recalling the labyrinthian vastness of the Louvre collection, "and how long did it take you?"

"Fully an hour," was the reply which has left the Frenchman puzzled ever since.

EARLY HISTORY OF EUROPE

Confederation of Germanic Tribes the Foundation of Countries of Germany and France.

The name Franks was applied about the middle of the third century to a confederation of Germanic tribes dwelling on the middle and lower Rhine. Later they became divided into two principal groups—the Salians, inhabiting the districts on both sides of the lower Rhine, and the Ripuarians, settled on the middle Rhine. In the third and fourth centuries hordes of them began to move southwards and afterwards into Gaul. In 358 Emperor Julian, although he defeated the Salian invaders, allowed them to establish themselves permanently in Tosandria, the country between the Meuse and the Scheldt. From this time Franks chiefs and their followers served in the Roman army, and during the fifth century they rendered valuable service to the empire by stemming the tide of barbarian invasion. By this time the Salian Franks had made themselves masters of northern Gaul while the Ripuarians were concentrated around Cologne. Under Hlodowig or Clovis, king of the former confederation, the Franks were converted to Christianity, while by his conquests in central Gaul, and by his subjugation of the Alemanni and the Ripuarian Franks, he not only extended his dominions as far as the Loire in the one direction and the Maine in the other, but he laid the foundation of what subsequently developed into the kingdom of France.

Sumatra's Tea-Growing Industry. The island of Sumatra, now in course of development as a tea producer, and reported to be capable of producing heavy yields from mature plants, has followed up last year's introductory period by larger supplies, and the industry has received much encouragement from the abnormally high values of the past year. The tea has already secured a "good will" in the market. The area under tea now approaches 5,000 acres, nearly all of which have been opened up on the east coast from Assam seeds.

SEE FINISH OF STEAM

RAILROAD MEN PUT THEIR FAITH IN ELECTRICITY.

Many Advantages Claimed for the Newer Power, Especially in Certain Sections of the Country—Some Arguments Advanced.

Railroad men are looking forward to the time when electric engines will supplant those of steam equipment. Especially is this the expectation on mountain divisions containing long, steep grades, and close to natural water power sites. The electric engine can pull a heavier load because of its superior number of driving wheels.

The engineers have calculated that the electric engine has these advantages as compared with the steam equipment:

It operates with the highest efficiency in the coldest weather, when steam locomotives often freeze.

It returns by "regeneration" a large part of the power used in running up hill during the corresponding run down hill.

It requires inspection only once in every 2,000 miles of travel, whereas the steam locomotive must be overhauled at the end of each division.

It uses no coal, requires no water and has no ashes to dump.

It carries no tender and has no boiler and will run indefinitely at a uniform rate of speed.

It reduces roundhouse tinkering to the minimum and handles uniform tonnage irrespective of weather.

It does away with fuel trains and clears the tracks for traffic that pays dividends.

The best steam locomotive has to be overhauled after running 100 or 125 miles, whereas the immunity of the electric engine from this necessity is a heavy advantage in operating efficiency.

A steam locomotive waiting at a division point consumes 80 per cent of the fuel it uses in actual service, whereas the electric locomotive when idle consumes no power.

The freeing of the track from fuel trains is an element of the highest importance, especially in mountainous country where double tracking is often impossible.

Tipperary Wins. Four-year-old Evelyn, whose home is in Crawfordville, had missed practice for the Children's day exercises.

When the little folk took their places on the big platform Evelyn managed to occupy the central position. At the sound of the organ all the childish voices burst forth in song.

She listened eagerly in an attempt to catch the tune, but to no avail. Possessed of a singing voice and a song spirit, she desired to use the former. Valiantly she stepped forth from the line and in a high key began "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary."

A neck-and-neck race ensued, "Scatter Sunshine," ensemble being outclassed by the swift-stepping march song sung by our little girl.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Railroader's Life Short. The working life of the average locomotive engineer is only eleven years and seven days, according to figures collected by the insurance department of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, a co-operative association, which carries insurance for its members amounting to $145,000,000.

For the last ten years the engineers' insurance fund paid out for accidental deaths incurred as a result of service nearly $5,000,000.

It has recently been calculated that out of every 100 men who start as firemen only seventeen become engineers, and that out of every 100 who finally become engineers only six become passenger engineers.

Swinging Semaphore Displaced. The swinging semaphore on the railroads is being displaced and electric lights indicating the semaphore positions are being used instead. The latter are more plainly visible.

New Use for Locomotive. Apparatus by which a locomotive can be utilized as a vacuum-cleaning machine has been invented by a German railroad man.

Seems Her Fault. "You used to say you would never tire of hearing me talk." "That was before we were married, wasn't it?" "Yes."

"Well, in those days I had no idea you would ever be able to talk about so many disagreeable subjects."

USE THE AUTOMATIC STOKER

Western Railroad the First to Adopt the Device on Anything Like a Large Scale.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad has equipped 600 of its locomotives with an automatic stoker that consists of a small conveyor, set in a trough, which runs from the coal tender to the front of the firebox, scooping the coal from the pile and carrying it forward. At the firebox the coal is forced into another conveyor that feeds the fuel into the furnace through three spouts, two of which are near the front of the furnace, to spread the coal forward, and one is near the center, to spread the coal over the rear of the grate.

By means of this mechanism, it is said, the coal can be distributed as evenly as by the most skillful hand firing. The device, of course, does not obviate the use of a fireman, but relieves him of much work, transforming him into a helper for oiling, signaling, etc. If the use of the stoker becomes general it is expected to affect the price of coal. Railroads have hitherto used lump coal for engine fuel, the same size as used in household stoves.

The automatic stoker uses a grade of coal known here as screenings or slack. It the railroads, which use about 25 per cent of the lump coal mined in the United States, turn their requirements to fine coal, the law of supply and demand may bring about an increase in the price of fine coal and a decrease in the price of lump coal.

On the other hand there may be an increase in the price of coke and gas as a result of the entrance of the railroads into the market for "screenings," which the gas and coke makers have hitherto been able to buy at low price because there was little demand for it.

Inasmuch as the fine coal constituted only about 35 per cent of the total coal mined, the railroads' demand of 25 per cent of the total may reverse present valuations. As a result of the gradual installation of automatic stokers by factories a writer in the Illustrated World states that the price of fine coal has increased in ten years from 20 to 75 cents a ton.

Safety First. Ex-Congressman Martin Littleton tells the story of a railway that was built through an obscure part of the West, where no railway had ever had the hardihood to venture before.

On the day the first engine ran over the line with its train, the engineer, on pulling out from a small way station, discovered that a country boy was riding a horse between the rails a short distance ahead.

The engineer sounded his whistle again and again, but the rider only lashed his horse into a gallop and made no effort to turn off into the farm lands that flanked the right of way.

At the end of a mile-long chase, the engine was so close upon the laboring horse that the cowcatcher almost touched its heels. The pestered engineer leaped out of his cab window and yelled:

"You idiot! Why don't you get off the track?"

Over his shoulder the frightened youth swung back a desperate retort: "Nav, sir! Ef ever you git me out yander on that thar ploughed ground you'll ketch me in a minute!" — Youth's Companion.

Through Many Perils. For a series of genuine hard-luck incidents, it would be difficult to surpass those of a young woman resident of Deepwater. Having gone to the cistern to pump a pail of water, the platform broke, letting her fall into the water, which was more than ten feet deep.

When she came to the surface she grasped the pump chain. The chain broke. She next caught hold of the cistern pipe and it gave way. The woman's father then came to her assistance and lowered a rope. The rope broke and she went under again. Finally a ladder was obtained and the bedraggled maiden climbed to safety.—Kansas City Times.

Nervous Diseases. Doctors divide nervous diseases into two great groups. The first group consists of maladies due to some physical disorder directly affecting the nervous system. Neuritis and locomotor ataxia are examples of nervous diseases of this sort.

The second group comprises diseases in which the nervous system, though originally sound, functions badly for various reasons. The principal maladies of this group are hysteria, neurasthenia and psychasthenia.

Superiority. "Do you think a man can be superior to his party?" "I doubt it," replied Senator Sorghum. "Ordinarily the only way a man feels that he can show his superiority to a party is by getting out and organizing another."

Shifting the Blame. Officer (severely)—Is this rifle supposed to have been cleaned? Private—Well, sir—yes. But you know what these servant girls are.—London Punch.

ONE ON THE OLD SQUIRE

Child's Misconstruction that Must Have Been in a Slight Degree Disconcerting.

The kindly old squire was giving a little treat to the village school children. After supper he stepped on to the platform and announced, with a beaming smile:

"Now, I am going to perform certain actions, and you must guess what proverb they represent. The boy or girl who succeeds first will receive a quarter."

That did it. Instantly every eye was fixed on him.

First of all the old gentleman lay down on the platform. Then one man came forward and tried in vain to lift him. Two others came to his aid, and between them they raised the squire, who was rather portly.

The actions were meant to represent the motto, "Union is strength." When they had finished, the squire stepped forward and asked if any child had solved the puzzle.

At once a grubby hand shot up and an eager voice squeaked: "Let sleeping dogs lie."

Bumper Grain Crops

Good Markets—High Prices. Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses.

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer. In Western Canada you will find good markets, splendid schools, exceptional social conditions, perfect climate and other great attractions. There is no war tax on land and no conscription.

SCHOOL NOTES.

HIGH SCHOOL

On Tuesday of last week the High school had a spelling contest.

Mr. Reebe's commercial arithmetic class started last week with percentage.

The teachers of the Plymouth school are organizing a glee club.

Pupils are given one hour after school for social recreation in the study hall, while the ninth grade room is open to those who prefer to study.

Mr. Carson, a prominent business man of Detroit, gave a splendid address to the school last Thursday afternoon, on the subject of cigarette smoking.

The third and sixth grades gave songs for the occasion, which were highly appreciated, much credit being due Miss Nurko.

Several Plymouth citizens were also present. Mr. Carson gave to each boy and girl a booklet explaining the ill effects of cigarette smoking upon health, morals and business success.

"A boy smoking 20 cigarettes in one day inhales enough poison to kill 40 frogs, while dogs have been killed with a single drop of nicotine. I have never known a boy who has smoked steadily for two years to give up," he concluded.

Cost of Radium Greatly Reduced. As a result of work done by the bureau of mines of the United States department of the interior, in connection with the National Radium Institute, radium bromide has been produced at a cost of only $36,050 per gram, a most remarkable result when it is remembered that only recently the salt has been selling for $120,000 and upward per gram.

Still, we have no definite information what it costs to produce this high priced salt. There is, however, little possibility that the price will be greatly reduced, as all of the known deposits of the carnotite ores, from which radium is at present obtained, are held very closely by their owners; and moreover, these deposits cannot last many years at the present rate of working.

These facts, together with a rapidly-increasing demand, will undoubtedly increase the price of radium even above the above big figures, notwithstanding the improvements in the methods of extracting—Scientific American.

Case of Bible Reading. The Rev. W. Y. Fullerton of the Baptist Missionary society told a good story at the anniversary meeting of the International Bible Reading association. As showing that some people needed guidance in the selection of their Bible reading, Mr. Fullerton, says the Westminster Gazette, recalled an incident reminiscent of his mission days, when a man came to his meeting and told of his efforts to comfort his wife as she lay upon the sick bed "I read the Bible to her every night," he said. "What did you read?" inquired the missionary. "Well," said the man, "I began at the first chapter of the Book of Proverbs, and when I had finished the book she died!"

LAST OF BULGARIAN EXARCHS Third and the Final Man to Hold Office Has Recently Passed Away in Sofia.

Joseph I, by birth Lazar Yovtcheff, whose death is announced from Sofia, was the third and in reality the last of the Bulgarian exarchs.

The exarchate is older than the Bulgarian state, and played a great part in calling it into being and extending its boundaries. The firman establishing the exarchate is dated March 11, 1870.

The first exarch was not chosen till two years later, and held office for only five years. His successor ruled for 22 years, and was compelled to resign when Russia declared war.

Twelve days later Joseph was elected. His promotion was extraordinarily rapid. Born in 1840, he was a journalist. The second exarch made him secretary general to the exarchate in 1872. He took orders that year on the very day when the patriarch excommunicated the Bulgarian church.

A month later he was archbishop. In 1874-75 he was sent to the bishopric of Widdin, and he thereafter returned to Constantinople as the right hand of the exarch. In 1876 he became metropolitan of Lofcha and a year later exarch.

He was a man of great courage, cool judgment, skilled diplomacy, untiring patience and high organizing talent. He carried the exarchate through the critical time of the war.

He resisted all efforts of Turks, Greeks, and even shortsighted Bulgarians to confine his authority to the territories of the new Bulgarian state, and he slowly and steadily extended the sway of the Bulgarian church in Thrace and Macedonia and laid the foundation of the Greater Bulgaria.

The story of his establishing new bishoprics and emancipating the Bulgarian schools from Greek control is such a chapter in diplomacy as only Balkan chronicles can show.

The second Balkan war virtually confined the authority of the exarchate to the limits of the Bulgarian state, and its importance as a political institution for the making of the big Bulgaria apparently disappeared.—Manchester Guardian.

SAYS ACTION IS NOT INSTANT

Gravitation, as Electrical Phenomenon, Explained by Scientist of Worldwide Fame.

Gravitation is an electrical phenomenon and does not act instantly across space, but is transmitted with the velocity of light, thus coming from the sun to the earth in eight minutes.

So says Prof. Thomas Jefferson Jackson See, famous astronomer, in his 600-word memoir entitled: "Electro-dynamic Theory of Magnetism and of Universal Gravitation: Discovery of the Cause of Gravitation. With Proof That This Fundamental Force of Nature is Propagated With the Velocity of Light." He claims to have discovered the secret of gravitation and has put the information in the hands of the Royal society of London.

Professor See is an astronomer of note. He is a graduate of the University of Missouri and has received the degree of Ph. D. from the University of Berlin, for which institution he was later an observer for the United States government and is stationed at the Mare Island navy yard.

Professor See holds that gravitation is due to elementary currents of electricity circulating around atoms of matter. Ampere, the celebrated French scientist, discovered in 1820 that two parallel currents of electricity floating in opposite directions repel. Following the lines first taken by Ampere, Professor See has worked out his theory of gravitation.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL

ONE-DEER LAW HAVING EFFECT SOUGHT IN PROPOSED BUCK LAW

HUNTERS ARE SPARING DOES

Game Warden's Department May Recommend Open Season For Prairie Chickens And Quail To Next Legislature

[By Gurd M. Hayes]

Lansing—State Game Warden William R. Oates is of the opinion that the one-deer law will serve in a limited degree the purpose of the proposed buck-law, inasmuch as the average sportsman will be inclined to allow does to pass without shooting so that his one deer may be a horned trophy. Warden Oates says that this plan is being followed in many of the northern hunting camps this year.

Compared with last season there is a decrease in the sale of resident licenses of about fifty percent, indicating that a meat value, if not a commercial value, was a consideration with some of the hunters.

As an offset to the decreased sale of resident licenses the sale of non-resident licenses has more than doubled. This increase is assigned to the fact that provision was made by the legislature that a deer may be shipped from the state without formality of a permit, the tag attached to a carcass in the field standing as a voucher for legal shipment.

Commissioner Oates has arranged for a checking of all deer via the straits, lake ferries and railways, but up to the present writing the number sent down from the upper peninsula is considerably below the average of four or five years for the first few days of the season. Reports at the Lansing office of the state game warden show that 44 deer have already crossed the straits of which 24 were bucks and 20 were does. Absence of tracking snow has protected deer from the hunter thus far and indications are that the kill will be greatly reduced. Fear of continuance of moderate temperature which would drive hunters from camp to save their venison from spoiling is another factor which is reducing the kill.

During the session of the legislature two years ago Game Warden Oates made strenuous efforts to have a law passed limiting each hunter to one buck deer. However, the bill failed to pass and the last legislature put through a law limiting each hunter to one deer which may be either a buck or doe.

May Have Open Season.

The long-time hopes of the sportsmen and conservationists of Michigan are in a fair way to be realized as evidenced by the fact that the state game department is considering the advisability of fixing an appropriate year when an open season may again be placed on quail and prairie chicken.

In the southern peninsula and particularly along the shore of Lake Huron, quail have increased in the past two seasons at an estimated ratio of five to one, according to State Game Warden Oates. Hunters assert that in some localities the number of quail exceed the ruffed grouse.

Warden Oates says that prairie chickens are now common in Iron, Gogebic and Marquette counties and both quail and chickens have been seen in Delta county. Oates is of the opinion that conditions may soon be such as to warrant a limited bag privilege.

Provision for a general spreading of winter food for quail, prairie chickens and partridge is being made by Oates, who is instructing his deputies to locate the best depositing grounds for buckwheat and other grains. South hillside areas of cover protected from the rigor of north winds will be selected.

It is the purpose of the game department to set aside a portion of the funds received from the sale of hunters' licenses for the purchase of grain foods for the game birds and for stocking and propagation on the state game refuge. Warden Oates says that applications from farmers and sportsmen for food for quail and other game birds will be given consideration.

Will Reorganize System At School.

Following a conference with Superintendent of public instruction Keeler, Governor Ferris announced that at the next meeting of the board of control of the Industrial School for Boys he would outline his plans for a complete reorganization of the educational system.

The governor refuses to make public the report rendered by Superintendent Keeler who has been investigating the educational system at the industrial school for the past six weeks. Each member of the board of control has been provided with a copy of Keeler's report.

The matter of punishment will be taken up at a later meeting. The governor is determined that evils in the educational system at the Lansing institution shall be corrected as speedily as possible.

ly as possible and if Superintendent Lawson does not carry out the plan outlined by the governor in a manner satisfactory to the chief executive it is claimed that his resignation will be demanded.

It is within the power of the governor to oust Lawson if he so desires. Two members of the board, Fred Rows of Kalamazoo, and John Bohner of Lansing, were appointed by Governor Ferris and it is believed that they would carry out any request the governor might make for a change in the management of the institution.

Michigan Has Most Factories.

Michigan, with 10 factories in operation, leads the 14 states engaged in producing the 1915 output of beet sugar in this country, in the number of establishments, but of the three states which will produce over 100,000 tons this season, ranks third, it being estimated that Colorado, with an acreage of 160,000 and a probable yield of 225,000 tons, will lead the country in this respect. California's acreage is 128,000 and crop of 160,000 tons, while Michigan, from 115,000 acres, will produce 100,000 tons.

The 1915 beet sugar campaign is well under way throughout the beet belt extending across the country from Ohio to California and a satisfactory season is expected. In 14 states 67 beet sugar factories are in operation, compared with 60 in 1914, and 71 in 1913.

Based on preliminary acreage and probable tonnage reports of beets harvested, the total production of these 67 factories is estimated as approximately 750,000 long tons. Compared with the production of 1914 of 646,257 tons, this will represent an increase of 16 per cent. If the final production does reach this figure, it will establish a new high record for beet sugar production in this country, and will exceed by nearly 100,000 tons the former record figure of 655,288 tons produced in 1913.

According to figures of the department of agriculture the total plantings of sugar beets amounted to 664,300 acres. Due to unfavorable weather and excessive moisture, it is estimated that a little over 6 per cent of the area planted was abandoned, leaving about 620,000 acres for final harvesting. In its early stages, the progress of the crop was retarded by abnormally low temperature in most parts of the country. Later on rains and floods caused extensive damage in the eastern states. The final output, while less than was estimated during the earlier part of the season and probably slightly below the yield per acre of some recent years, promises to equal the average of the past decade.

The financial returns to the farmers who grew this beet crop, conservatively estimated, will be nearly $40,000,000. In Colorado alone the sugar beet companies will pay out some $20,000,000 to farmers and employes this season. Michigan farmers who grew beets are reported to have received in excess of $6,000,000 for their crop.

If the present level of sugar prices continues, this estimated beet sugar production of 750,000 tons for this campaign will have a value of about $90,000,000 when marketed.

SCHOOLS TO GIVE WEEK TO TBC STUDY

SUPT. KEELER AT HEAD OF PLAN TO HELP BIG CAMPAIGN IN STATE.

WEEK BEGINNING MARCH 6TH

It is Thought Parents May be Reached Through Instruction Given to Children During This One Week.

Lansing—Michigan public schools will have a tuberculosis week beginning March 6. Superintendent of Public Instruction Fred L. Keeler, who is engineering the plan, also intends to ask the parochial schools to cooperate and is satisfied that they will do so.

This is to be the contribution of the public school system to the anti-tuberculosis campaign now being carried on with the $100,000 appropriation by the 1915 legislature.

"The way to reach many of the parents is through their children," says Mr. Keeler, "and I think I can do as much, if not more good, for the cause of anti-tuberculosis in this one week than the others can do with their $100,000."

Lessons for the entire week will be drawn up in the office of the superintendent of instruction and it is planned to have them in the hands of the teachers at least a month before the time set aside.

Next week the work of the campaign will be taken up in Grand Traverse county. Nurses are already busy there. St. Clair county will be next invaded.

With three counties, Wexford, Barry and Ottawa, practically completed the officials who are conducting the work think they have reached a point where pretty close to ultimate results can be guessed at.

Vom Schauplatz des europäischen Völker-Krieges

Wieder ist von einer "russischen Offensive" auf der ganzen östlichen Schlachtfeld die Rede. Man will wohl mit diesem Gerücht die Erinnerung an das schmachvolle Nijmegen der "Großen Offensive" der Franzosen und Engländer im Westen auslöschen. Oder die Aufmerksamkeit von Balkan ablenken. Die russische Offensive besteht tatsächlich lediglich aus Stellungskämpfen an der nördlichen Front (Wiga-Dinaburg) und an der südlichen Front (Wolhynien-Südgalizien), sowie in einem Einbruch der Rüsse gegen die gesamte Mitte der Front entlang laufenden besetzten Stellungen der Verbündeten. Dort haben diese sich, nach dem westlichen Muster, bereits in Schützengräben festgesetzt, aus welchen sie ebenfalls wie aus denen des Weltkriegs herausgeworfen werden können. Diese besetzte Linie erstreckt sich aus dem Raum östlich von Wlana über Wlana, östlich von Baranowitsch bis hinunter nach Wolhynien. Die Rüssen können sich bei ihrer "Offensive" gegen diese feste Linie lediglich blutige Kämpfe holen, was ihnen denn ja auch in reichem Masse passiert.

Bundessteuer auf Munitionsherstellung.

Washington. Eine Enquete, deren Zweck es ist, genaue Informationen über den Umfang der Herstellung von Munition für den europäischen Krieg zu erlangen, ist zur Zeit unter der Oberaufsicht des Zoll- und Steuer-Bureaus in Angriff genommen worden. Als Grund für die Bormahme dieser Enquete wird angegeben, daß der Kongreß aller Voraussicht nach bezügliche Statistiken verlangen werde. Aus dem Umfange, daß der Zoll- und Steuer-Kommissioner in erster Linie mit der Untersuchung beschäftigt ist, wird geschlossen, daß ein weiterer Zweck darin besteht, dieses enorm profitable Geschäft zu besonderer Besteuerung heranzuziehen. Eine Exportsteuer kann nicht auf Munition gelegt werden, weil dies mit der Bundesverfassung im Widerspruch steht, aber eine Aczesssteuer wäre möglich. Vorratenswert ist übrigens, daß nicht nur das Zoll- und Steuer-Bureau allein mit dieser Enquete beschäftigt ist. Das Kriegs-Departement hat ebenfalls eine derartige Untersuchung in Angriff genommen und zwar auf den Punkt des Schatzamtssekretärs, weil angenommen ist, daß Armeekorps-Offiziere beträchtliche Informationen über diesen Industriezweig besitzen. Weitere Enquete befaßt sich nicht auf die Munitionsherstellung allein, sondern bezieht alle Arten von Kriegsmaterialien ein: Hochexplosivstoffe, Geschosse, Teile von Geschützen, Maschinen und Teile von solchen, Automobile, Flugzeuge, Kupfer, Messing, Lokomotiven, Waggons, Holzzeuge, Schuhe, wollene Decken, Lederzeug etc.

Von 600 Mann in jenen Räumen waren 150 bereits zur Abfertigung fertig gestellt. Auch viele sonstige Maschinen sind zu Grunde gegangen, und die meisten der 2,000 Angehörigen verlieren ihr privates Hab und Gut. Personen kamen nicht zu Schaden.

Die Lehrerin sprach sich in Worten des höchsten Lobes über die Behandlung aus, welche die Japaner den deutschen Kriegsgefangenen angedeihen lassen, die in so traurigen Verhältnissen zu dem Verfall der Engländer und Franzosen ihrer Kriegsgefangenen gegenüber steht und die man in zivilisierten Ländern beinahe für unmöglich halten würde.

Thanksgiving

HE American Thanksgiving this year is invested with a profound significance, a blending of reverent appreciation for the blessings of the twelfth month, and a poignant regret that so many members of the World Family are in the red agony of war. The Thanksgiving, definitely established after national stress and travail, is tender with sympathy and brotherhood, and while one gives freely of thanks to his Creator, freely, likewise, does he give of love for his fellows. It is the most human of seasons, in which man should, and does, follow the eternal lesson of the Great Teacher.

Thanksgiving is elemental in the soul of man and it probably found its first expression, not in peace, but after conflict in the early twilight of history, when some of the hairy men, who had awakened to the mystery and majesty of the sun as the giver of good things, raised their scarred arms toward it, reverent and triumphant, their grateful gutturals voicing thanks for victory.

And this primitive thanksgiving will be multiplied and multiplied a thousandfold at the expiration of the present war—and not for the victory but for the coming of peace. In the intoxication of bloody triumph there can be little of the deep, spiritual thanksgiving; for, despite the gigantic slaughter that has made this century the crimson age, the world is still one big family with interests so closely interrelated that none is unaffected by the struggle. And none will give thanks, even with the prize of victory, for having made widows and orphans by the hundreds of thousands.

In the real thanksgiving there is neither exultation nor pride; no reflection of bitterness or hate; but a sweet realization of the kinship of all men before the Great Father.

In certain early and oriental liturgies was the Great Thanksgiving, now replaced by the preface and part of the canon. Then there is the General Thanksgiving in the Book of Common Prayer, a collect in the third place from the end of the order for morning and evening prayer, and of the litany. But the Thanksgiving which, while marked by the incense of prayer, has the sunny lightness of good cheer and laughter, is that annually observed in the United States.

In the beginning of the observance was a day set apart by the Plymouth Pilgrims, in 1621, in acknowledgment of their first harvest in America. It was perpetuated in many states by an annual festival appointed by the governor. Its national celebration, in recognition of the year's blessings, was first recommended by proclamation issued at the city of New York, in 1789, by George Washington, who set apart for observance Thursday, November 26, of that year.

The war between the states was the event that established the national day. It has been, therefore, sanctified by the blood of brothers who died not in vain, for as a recurring observance it was proclaimed by President Lincoln in October, 1863, who fixed the last Thursday in November. It since has thus been observed.

So it is that in 1915 the people of the United States give thanks, not for a war over, with the combatants putting aside the science of murder for the science of constructive things and resolutely facing the future, but because the country is at peace with its world brothers and looks toward taking the impartial part in the bringing about of the peace of Europe—and of the world. Dr. Carleton Simon, the distinguished neurologist, recently, while discussing "war as an acute nervous affliction and its treatment and its cure," made an interesting diagnosis of the condition of the United States. It may be reassuring to hear from such an eminent authority, who regards the more than 90,000,000 human beings in the presentment of a gigantic composite, that there is no fear of Uncle Sam "flying off the handle."

"The United States has escaped," says he, "that is the special occasion for thanksgiving. But may not the whole world come to find cause for real thanksgiving in the new spirit derived and nourished by the tragedy of this war?"

Contrast these typical rural Thanksgiving pictures with some of the family groups and of sustenance operations within the war-smitten territory, and, if you be apart from want, you will feel a pang of keenest commiseration and a regret that all of the world's struggling family should not be sharing the peace-and-plenty conditions.

In this case the turkey is the bird alike of peace and of plenty. It is the bird, likewise, of sacrifice—but not of burnt offering—and goes to its appointed end with what seems like a conscious dignity of the part it plays in the grateful season.

What finish more honorable and impressive for a bird than to be fated to die to make happy an entire nation? For this brief, golden period the eagle is only a remote symbol. The Thanksgiving bird is magically transformed into a tempting thing of appetizing odors, an eye-entrancing vision of glistening brown and bronze and bringing in its train attendants of the field that crisply show ivory white and pale emerald, and translucent, liquid ruby. In the turkey at this season there are the pride of country, the religious sense of a nation and its sustaining hopefulness, the racial family spirit that "makes the whole world akin," and the very essence of pleasing plenty.

THE THANKSGIVING FEAST

I
This is the day before the feast. A rack of storm clouds, gray with warning, signals the valley, and roads tomorrow morning. "White fields and roads tomorrow morning!" But through the farmhouse kitchen glows a light to gladden saint or sinner. White Nell, and Margaret, and Rose make ready for Thanksgiving dinner.

II
The pantry shelves are lined with cakes of flaky crust and fragrant sweetening. Yet incomplete the banquet waits. For this which Margaret's spoon is beating, the sideboard gleams in jeweled light. With amber quinine and ruby jelly. "Will wear an added grace tonight," wrought by the hands of Rose and Nelly.

III
A stir of eager girlish feet. Across the ancient, oaken flooring. A burst of laughter, bubbling sweet with mirth and confidence outpouring. A rallying jest, an awe-struck sigh. At Nelly's mistakes and Margaret's knowledge. Oh, never hours sped madder. For three fair cousins' home from college!

IV
Beneath the kitchen roof-tree brown, With weathered tile and rough-hewn rafters, What memories are looking down— A hundred years of toil and laughter! What echoes of low-voiced feet. "Sit in the shadows everlasting!" What far-off voices, young and sweet, From other days of feast and feasting!

V
Tomorrow, through the drifted snows, With hearts aglow for smiles and greetings, Nelly, and Margaret, and Rose Will walk across the hills to meeting, Good angels join them as they raise The old hymns dear to dead and living. And bend the feasting and the praise Into one day of pure thanksgiving. —Mabel Earle, in Youth's Companion.

CURED, BUT SHE DOESN'T KNOW IT

Girl Is Bed-Ridden and Speechless for Ten Years After a Fall.

IS PUZZLE TO DOCTORS

Neither the Child Nor Her Parents Discover She Is Better—Gradually Led to Walk and Talk By Teacher.

Los Angeles.—One of the most remarkable cases known in medical history and one fraught with interest both to surgeons and to students of psychology, has been called to the attention of scientists in this city. It is the case of Carlotta Sausedo, a fifteen-year-old schoolgirl.

For three years Carlotta was considered a hopeless paralytic, who would never be able to speak or walk. She had been injured by a fall on her head from a swing when she was twelve years old.

It is declared now by doctors and her teachers that whatever body or brain injuries she may have received from that fall have been absolutely outgrown and that she is perfectly normal physically and mentally, except that her mind has failed to register the fact of her recovery.

Doesn't Realize She Is Well.

In other words, according to the doctors, if the child's mind can be awakened to the fact that she has recovered from her fall she will be able to walk, talk and develop as other children do.

While three weeks ago Carlotta could not speak and could not walk alone, today she speaks with ease, walks without help and can even walk up and down the school stairs alone.

Three years ago the little girl pitched from a swing to her head. She was picked up and stood on her feet. Instead of standing still she began to whirl round and round. She was entirely unable to stand still or to sit up. She was put to bed, and pronounced a hopeless paralytic. Her power of speech was completely stopped.

Schoolteacher Finds Her. With the beginning of the present school term Miss Ettie Lee, one of the grammar school teachers, discovered the child. There were five other children in the family, all normal, and Miss Lee inquired into Carlotta's history. Securing medical examination, she learned that, whatever bodily injury may have been caused by the fall, it no longer existed.

"We cannot tell Carlotta she is not a cripple or sick because her mind has to be awakened up gradually to that fact," Miss Lee said, "but we are teaching her by degrees. She is placed in a special class at school and her teacher invents little exercises and lessons for her.

"She had to be almost carried to school. Her teacher made a small sand pile in the playground and many times a day took Carlotta there and helped her walk over it. Today Carlotta can walk up and down the school stairs. The other day she went alone to the soup kitchen, got her cup of soup and stepped it unaided.

Was in Bed Three Years. "When school opened she could not talk. Now she talks to us and knows what we say. She can count in English and Spanish and can write her own name. Her father tells me she was unusually bright before the fall, and I see no reason to suppose that she cannot be restored to her former

"She has been in bed for the greater part of the past three years, as the schools at Chico would not take her in. So, while her body healed itself, apparently, her mind never recovered from the shock of the fall."

Little Carlotta was taken to the Parent-Teacher clinic for further examination to verify the diagnosis of other doctors. If a similar report is made, her special teachers will continue as they have begun in their novel work of teaching the child's mind that her body is neither paralyzed nor injured in any way.

ARE WED IN LOCK-UP CELL

Ohio Bride Wanted Ceremony to Be "Out of Ordinary" and It Was.

Sandusky, O.—Miss Luella Martin of Toledo and James Edward Wessel of Detroit were married in a cell in Put-In-Bay village lockup by Justice of the Peace Homer Ramey.

"We want something out of the ordinary in the way of a ceremony," said the bride-elect. "Try a jail cell," suggested Squire Ramey. And they did.

Accenting Vogue of Rich Materials

Although one may choose almost any shape in hats, the progress of the season has given precedence to certain types. Hats inspired by the Puritan model are many and smart. Small high-crowned shapes with narrow curving brims followed naturally in the wake of the Puritan, and have been developed into brilliant millinery, combining rich brocades or velvets, in covering the shape, with fur in narrow bands outlining the brim edge and crown. The small turban has blossomed out in wintry materials (velvet and fur and other rich stuffs) in styles more varied than ever, and in the acme of dash and grace.

Trimming remains simple, either for these chic small hats or in the wider-brimmed shapes. And it seems that every one strives for novelty in it. Either the flower or feather must be something new and strange—and beautiful—or it must be oddly placed.

An example of this is shown in two views of a dress hat which are given in the photographs reproduced here. This model is made of velvet shirred in one circular piece, to cover the upper brim and side crown. The top crown is a small scant puff of the velvet, and the underbrim has a plain velvet facing. The shape lifts to a point at the front and flares upward at the back, where the brim widens.

The width across the back is greatly accentuated by a drapery of velvet lined with soft satin, which has the appearance of a high bow. Very odd satin and silver poppies are set over the drapery at the back, and one single blossom brightens the brim at the front.

In passing, it may be noticed that millinery blossoms are very brilliant, made mostly of silk or satin of bright luster, and without pretense to being faithful copies of their prototypes.

In the picture a wide-brimmed shape is shown with a round crown. It is covered with latter's plush. A fringe of ostrich feathers is set about the edge on both the upper and underbrim, and a fan, of ostrich fibers also, is posed against the crown, completing the adornment.

Millinery generally is characterized by better style this season than in the past. Women insist upon simplicity in trimmings, and this results from an advance in good taste. Good workmanship is another feature which tells the same story.

The Stocking Pantalettes. A novelty is white silk stockings with three little frills above the ankles in simulation of pantalettes. These frills are of silk, edged with lace.

Bespoke Comfort for Small Wearers

The outdoor garments made for small lads and lassies in the winter-time are first designed for warmth. This essential is taken care of and after that they achieve what measure of grace and style the material and the season's modes will allow.

Overcoats for the small boy are cut a little shorter than in previous seasons, of very heavy close-woven wools. Dark blue is a favorite color for them, but there are many dark mixtures, indistinct checks and a few crossbars. They are double-breasted, with ample collars that may be rolled up about the neck and ears. A very good model is that shown in the picture, which provides large but inconspicuous patch pockets for the convenience of the most appreciative of all possessors of pockets.

A cozy coat for a little girl, with cap to match, is pictured, with collar and cuffs of plush. It is made of a heavy wool-knitted material and is soft and warm. The stitched belt, shaped to include pockets, reflects a popular treatment of the belt in coats for older girls. With cap to match, which may be pulled down over the ears, a trim, smart outfit makes the youngster look as comfortable as she feels.

For the little miss who has arrived at the dignity of going out to parties, pretty coats are made and childish furs are designed to re-enforce them. White Iceland fox and other inexpensive white furs are prettiest for the little girl. The next best choice for her are the little gray squirrel sets. There are several other furs suited to children, and all of them are intended for the little miss to wear upon "dress-up" occasions. The warmth of furs goes without saying, and luckily the fur sets for children are modest in price, so that all may have them.

For House Wear.

White linen modified middies with collar and cuffs of color, and just a little smocking on each side to support the necessary fullness will be worn in the house all winter. The smocked stitching and collar and cuffs may be of horizon or drift blue, pink or lavender. A dainty negligee of fine nainsook with half sleeves and e-ton effect has a belt of three narrow pink ribbons braided together. Val lace and insertion are used with dainty empire waists in blue, pink and green on each side. Another nainsook blouse has scalloped edges, trimmed with balls of two shades of blue silk and irregular motifs.

Sweaters at All Hours.

Oddly enough, sweaters are worn with frocks of white silk, as well as with all other frocks, and dainty enough are the little affairs of knitted silk that as sweaters hold such an important place in Palm Beach wardrobes. The silk sweater has been passe in Dearville for eighteen months, but it is being worn here. All sweaters are long enough to cover the hips, and all are made with pockets; skirts are also pocketed. Separate blouse coats are of heavy crepe de chine.—Vogue.

Shaded Silk Hosiery.

Shaded silk stockings are among the important things this season, with fancy embroidered stripes, the embroidery carrying out the dominant color of the stockings. A variant from the stripes running round and round is the vertically-striped stocking of white silk, with vertical stripes embroidered in black or a color.

Thin Fabrics Worn.

As the season progresses the vogue of transparent fabrics for evening frocks increases. There is nothing prettier for the debutante's first ball, or for the opera, than a frock of white tulle, soft and billowy, with flounces and trills, and with panniers of mother-of-pearl paillette net. Silver and gold lace and fine net embroidered in gold or silver form flounces on many charming frocks.

The pompadour silks are still used, and a black one, figured in pale pastel shades, is especially effective when smartly made up.

BUSINESS IN CANADA IS GOOD

Successful Crops and Big Yields Help the Railway.

The remarkable fields that are reported of the wheat crop of Western Canada for 1915 bear out the estimate of an average yield over the three western provinces of upward of 25 bushels per acre. There is no portion of that great west of 24,000 square miles in which the crop was not good and the yields abundant. An American farmer who was induced to place under cultivation land that he had been holding for five years for speculative purposes and higher prices, says that he made the price of the land out of this year's crop of oats. No doubt, others, too, who took the advice of the Department of the Interior to cultivate the unoccupied land, have done as well.

But the story of the great crop that Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta produced this year is best told in the language of the railways in the added cars that it has been necessary to place in commission, the extra trains required to be run, the increased tonnage of the grain steamers.

It is found that railway earnings continue to improve.

The C. P. R. earnings for the second week of October showed an increase of $762,000 over last year, the total being only $310,000 below the gross earnings of the corresponding week of 1913, when the Western wheat crop made a new record for that date. The increase in C. P. R. earnings for the corresponding week of that year was only $351,000, or less than half of the increase reported this year. The grain movement in the West within the past two weeks has taxed the resources of the Canadian roads as never before, despite their increased facilities. The C. P. R. is handling 2,000 cars per day, a new record. The G. T. R. and the C. N. R. are also making new shipment records. The other day the W. Grant Morden, of the Canada Steamships Company, the largest freighter of the Canadian fleet on the Upper Lakes, brought down a cargo of 476,315 bushels, a new record for Canadian shipping. Records are "going by the board" in all directions this fall, due to Canada's record crop. The largest Canadian wheat movement through the port of New York ever known is reported for the period up to October 15th, when since shipments of the new crop began in August, 4,265,791 bushels have been reloaded for England, France and Italy. This is over half as much as was shipped of American wheat from the same port in the same period. And, be it remembered, Montreal, not New York, is the main export gateway for Canadian wheat. New York gets the overflow in competition with Montreal.—Advertisement.

DEMAND FOR PURE ENGLISH

New York Publication Criticizes the Style in Which Street Car Notices Are Worded.

"Public notices ought to be examples of the best writing. They should be written by masters of style. Take, for example, the notice in the street cars:

"Passengers requiring transfers must request same from conductors at the time of depositing fares in box."

Of course, that is understandable. It is about as good English as one would expect in a judge's opinion. But it is not good enough for a notice that hundreds of thousands of people are to read every day. Here is New York spending forty millions a year for literary and other instructions for children who, when they ride in the street cars, are exposed to managers' English and taught, as to transfers, to "request same from conductors."

Shocking! Of course the notice ought to read: "Passengers who want transfers must ask for them when they put their fares in the box."—Life.

RECOGNIZED DEBT TO MICE

Mr. Growcher Grateful That He Didn't Have to Partake of the Welsh Rabbit.

"Yep," said Mr. Growcher, "nothing was made in vain. Everything that earth produces may serve some useful purpose, if you can only find out what it is. There is a whole lot to think about in that story of the mouse who gnawed the net for the captured lion."

"Mebbe there is," replied his wife. "But I'm willing to bet that was the only kind and considerable mouse known to the animal kingdom."

"You are wrong. Have you forgotten that Welsh rabbit party we attended last night?"

"Yes. But there wasn't any Welsh rabbit?"

"And as a result we are all comfortable and happy today instead of being miserable and dyspeptic. And we owe it all to the fact that a few kind-hearted mice sneaked around during the afternoon and ate up the cheese."

Confused-Deties.

An Englishman was visiting in an American family in which there was a young boy of eight years. The nobleman was addressed by all members of the family as "My Lord." As soon as the family were seated at the table the lord was served first of all. Each dish was offered him with the remark, "My Lord, will you have this?" or "My Lord, do you care for this?" It happened that the pickle was overcooked, and the nobleman reached to get some. The small boy, seeing this, punched his mother and said in a loud whisper: "Mother, mother, God wants a pickle."
