Plymouth Suffers Disastrous Fire

Disastrous Fire

Was the conjecture of some that the fire might have originated from chemical combustion. But this theory is secouted by Supt. Reebs as well as members of the school board. They say there could be no foundation whatever for this theory. The opinion that the fire was the work of some malicious incendiary was most generally favored, and this is not improbable, as it is recalled that many public buildings in other parts of the State and country have mysteriously burned. State and country have mysteriously burned.

President Travis of the school board informs us that there was an insurance of $25,000 on the school bouse and $1500 on the school boundary.

The Fire Started on the North Side of the School Building and Its Origin is Unkown.

Not since the fire of 1893 has Plymouth been visited with such a disastrous configaration as that of yesterday the school ignited the spire of the concerning, when the fire public school building and the Methodist church were totally destroyed, involve the fire find. "I don't know, ma'am. Mr. Gerry hasn't come back since he went out this morning." To John, Mr. Lausing was a person who had been dead for some time. His present overlords were Mr. and Mrs. Gerry and Mrs. Lausing when she was in town.

"Telephone to the club and if he is there tell bim I want to see him," said Alix and turned to her welcome tea. The sandwiches seemed unusually small to her ravenous appetite.

Gerry was not at the club. Alix dressed respiendently for dinner. Never had she dressed for any other man with the care that she dressed for Gerry that night. But Gerry did not come. At haif-past time Alix ordered the table cleared. "I'll not dine tought," she said to John. "When your master comes, show him in here." She sat on in the library listening for Gerry's step in the ball.

From time to time John came into the room to replenish the fire. On one of these occasions Alix told him be might go to bed but an hour ster he returned and stood in the door. Aliz tooked very small, curled up in a great looked very small, curled up in a great

"It's after one o'clock, ma'am," said John. "Mr. Gerry won't be coming in tonight." Alix made no answer, John held his ground. "It's time for you to go to bed, ma'am. Shall i call the maid?"

It was a long time since John had taken aity apparent interest, in his onistrees. Alix had avoided him. She had felt that the old servant disapproved of her. More than once she had -thought of discharging him but he had never given her grounds that would justify her before Gerry. Now he was ordering her to bed and instead of being augry she was southed. She wondered how she could ever have thought of discharging him. He seemed

It was almost noon in the cloudy Sunday morning when ashe roused herself from apathy. She sprang from the bed. She summored Judge Healey with a note and Mrs. Lansing with a telegram. The telegram was carefully worded, "Please come and stay for a while. Gerry is away." (Call it nightmare if you like, sweetheart, but just remember that you are stays.") come and stay for a while. Gerry is away."

The judge found Alix radiating the freshness of a beautiful woman careful of her person, but it was the freshness of a pale flower. Alix was grave and her gravity had a sweetness that made the judge's heart bound. He felt an awakening in her that he had long watched for. She zold him all the story of the day before in a steady monotone that omitted nothing and gave the fe six only their own weight. Whos she funished this judge patied her hand. "Has be been to the club?"

"Has be been to the club?"

Alls colored faintly. "I see." said the judge quickly. "I'll ask there. I'll go now." He went off and all that day he sought in vain for a trace of Gerry. He went to all his haunts in the city—he had telephoned to those outside. At night he returned to Alix but it was Mrs. Lansing that received him in the library.

The judge was tired and his buoyancy had deserted him. He told her of his failure. Mrs. Lansing was thoughtful but not greatly troubled. "Gerry." she said, "has a level head. He can take care of himself." She went to tell Alix that there was no news. When she came back the judge turned to her. "Well." he asked, "what did she say?"

"Nothing, except that she wanted to ciue tomorrow."

There was a new look of content mingled with the worry in Mrs. Lansing's face that made the judge say as he held out his hand in farewell, "Things better?"

Mrs. Lansing understood him. "Yes," she suswered, and added, "we have been crying together."

Mrs. Lansing and Alix had never given themselves to each other. There given themselves to each other. There moved.

Be was not lonely. He wandered interested through all the straggling city. When he was too lazy to go to the city he sat in the precarious balcany of his room and watched the city come to him.

Almost a month had passed since he lauded on his Lethean shore, and it had served him well. The world seemed to have time-servers in small regard. He began to think of his mother. He strolled over to the cable station. The offices were undergoing repairs. The ground floor was unfurnished save for a table and one chair. In the chair sat a chocolate-colored employee with a long bamboo on the floor beside him, Gerry's curiosity was sruesed. He went in and wrote his message to his mother—just a few words telling her he was all right. The chocolate gentleman folded the message, slipped it into the split end of the waster and, when she found bottom, started to wade. Wading is words telling her he was all right. "Call it olghtmare if you like, sweetheart, but just remember that you are awake."

"Tes." said Alix softly. "I am awake now. I want to watch the Hill come to life and dress up for the summer. It will amuse me. It's long since I have watched for the first bads and the first awallows. I won't mind the meiting snow and the mud. It's so long since I've seen clean country mud. I want to smell it."

"You don't know bow bleak the Hill can be hefore the appring comes." objected Mrs. Lansing.

"Will it be any bleaker with me there when when you were alone?" saked Alix.

Mrs. Lansing came over to her and kineed her. "Re dang," she and trease bim." said Alix in a low tone to Mrs. Lansing had found new lines in the judge's tried face and she wisspered back. "Leant." She put the cablegram in the judge's band.

"What's this?" he said and read it. Then he gave a war-whoop, caught Alix around the watts and kissed her. The Firs were gay that night—gay with the joy of happy people happily in the judge's hand. The Firs were gay that night—gay with the joy of happy people happily is planting. In a month, say at the most, two months, Gerry could be here. Spring would have come. The Hill would be decked out in full regain of leaf and blossom. It would be in full commission to meet him. They looked at Alix and Alix seemed to look at herself. He would come into his own as never before.

The judge undertook the cabling. He cabled Gerry and the message was reported undelivered. Then he cabled the American cousul. There followed, a long series of measages: first quick and hopeful, then lagging but not doubtful, then a wearying silence of weeks, ending with the inevitable blow. Gerry bad been traced to the San Frauctsco river. The envoy sent on his track by the judge's orders had reached Piranhas to find the little town in apathetic wonder over the discovery of Gerry's cance stranged three miles down the river. The paddle was still in the cause and a suit of pylamas. No further trace of Gerry bad been found. His body had not been recovered. The people said it was not unusual. He had undoubtedly been stracked by tiger 68h. In that case his bones would have been stripped of flesh. It was impossible to drag the great river.

The judge hid in his heart the barrowing details. To Mrs. Lansing he told the entered for the solid the ent kingdom, did the frail Alix of other days come back. As she lay, pale and thin, but with the glorious light of supreme achievement in her eyes, Mrs. Lanslug went on her knees beside the bed and sobbed, "Oh. Alix, I love you so." Alix smiled. Slowly she reached one hand ever and placed it in Mrs. Lanslag's. "You are crying because you are a granny now," she said, softly, playfully.

Gerry ran the canoe upon the shore and stripped. Be stepped on to the splt of sand, in that moment just to live was enough. A sharp cry broke on his satonished ears.

Almost at the end of the tongue of sand stoods girl. Her hair was blowing around her silm shoulders. Over one of them she gazed, startied, at Gerry. He drew back horribly conting around her silm shoulders, over one of them she gazed, startied, at Gerry. He drew back horribly conting and mumbling apologies that she could have heard them. Then she pipulaged with a clean long dire into the river. But before she pinuped she laughed. Gerry heard the laugh. With an answering cry he burled himself into the water and swam as he had never swum before.

The girl had farther to go across the little bay, but she could beat Gerry swimming and she did. Only she failed to use her head and, when she found bottom, started to wade. Wading is slow work in water waits high. Gerry saturck to his long powerful stroke. As the girl reached the bank the strong fluers of his right hand closed on her bare ankle.

Alix kissed him. "There." she said. "Two sorry I was rough."

"You! rough!" laughed the judge. Then he jumped up. "I'm forgetting my duties. I have a guest of my tery own at Maple House and I must go to him."

A few weeks before. Hon. Percy Collingeford had looked up the judge. It was as much a pleasure to the young man as a duty he owed to his father, whose friend the judge had been for many years.

Collingeford was no stranger to America but he knew far more about dodging arroyos in New Mexico on a cow pouy than he did about dodging the open treaches and debris of Pittu was an Englishman, a younger son with enough money to put blin above the remittance chass, and he was postered to many places. He cause back from the Klondike with more money than he needed for his pussage out only a few kindred spirits knew that he had made it bammering the piano it in The Tallen Star of Hope. He had the English gentleman's common creed: ride straight, shoot straight, tub often and talk the king's English. That creed fulfilled, nothing else scened to worry him.

He was dining with the judge at the club one night when the name of Wayne—Alau Wayne—Goated over occasionally from a neighboring table. Later as they sat over their coffee and cluars Collingeford said abruptly." I know a chup named Wayne."

"So?" said the judge.

"Heerd those people mention Alan Wayne," explained Collingeford. "I wonder if it was the same one—Ten Percent Wayne of Africa."

"That's the one." Said the judge and watched Collingeford side.

"He was dining with the judge and watched Collingeford side.

"He was the same one—Ten Percent Wayne of Africa."

"That's the one." Said the judge and watched Collingeford side.

Percent Wayne of Africa."
"That's the one," said the judge and watched Collingeford's face.
"Hum." said Collingeford. "When I saw Wayne he was in shirt sleeves and a battered sun helmet. There are some men that won't shake hands with him, but I'm not one of the n."
It was then that the judge decided to take Collingeford to Maple House for over Sunday.

Gerry Lansing was sitting sione in the shade of a bush, his knees gathered in his arms and his head bowed down. Great quivering sighs that were aimost sobs were shaking his strong body. In one terrific swirl life had wrenched him from the moornings of generations, tossed him high and dropped him, broken. Between the moment when he had plunged from the sandspit and the moment when he sandspit and the moment when he sandspit and the moment when he and the girl had stood on the river bank and laughed together to see the cause, worked advirt by the eddy, swirl out into the river and away, eons had passed. In that laughing moment he had stood primeval man in a primeval world. With the drops of water from the river, he had flicked off the bonds it had taken centuries to forge. And now his trusuit conscience returned to stand dismayed.

The grif, dressed in a homespun cotton robe belted at the waist, came back down a balf-hidden path, shiyly at first and then with awe to see him weeping. She tossed him a cotton jumper and trouvers and then drew back and waited for him in the path, He rose slowly to his feet, dressed and followed the girl.

He rose slowly to his feet, dressed and followed the girl.

She led him along the path through the brush and out into a little valley made up of abandoned cane and rice bottoms. In the center was a slight elevation, too low to be called a bill, and on it was an old plantation house, white stucco once, now sadly weather-streaked, its tiles green-black with the moss of years.

All smiled. Slowly she reached one hand over and placed it in Mrs. Lansings. "You are crying because you are a granup now," she said, softly, playfully.

Then came the day when Alix was strong—arrong enough. Mrs. Lansing told her in a choked voice what they knew and what everyone believed. She cried softly in Alix arms.

"Poor mother!" said Alix, her itps against the wet cheek. "How strong you've been! How you hid it from me! What a burden to carry in your neart, and smile. But listen, dear mummy. You are all wrong. Perhaps I would not have known it if you had told me—then—but I know it now feerry is not dead. There is no river that can drown Gerry."

"My dear," said Mrs. Lansing, frightened. "you must not think that. It's always the beat swimmers that risk the most."

"It isn't that he can swim," said Alix. Her eyes turned slowly till they rested on her soo. Her boson swelled at the memory of the travail—the terrifole travail that she had borne, not for the child slove, nor for Gerry slove, but for them both. "Swimming has nothing to do with it. Somshow; I knew that Gerry is all right, some."

Permanent Features of the Road Bed

Foundations, Drainage and Grading a Permanent Investment

(Prepared by the U.S. Department of Agriculture)

in expending money raised by the sale of highway bonds, highway commissioners should distinguish carefully between the permanent and the perishable features of the road. Foundations, drainage structures, alignment and grades are in general fairly permanent features which should be looked upon in the light of an investment. If these features do not comply with a certain standard, it will be poor economy to spend money on transitory improvements such as hard surfaces, which must, at considerable expense, be renewed from year to year. In the same way, it is manifestly poor policy to build an expensive surface on defective grades with poor alignments and short-lived drainage features.

Even when much of the money expended upon a highway has gone into the road builders. When roads are built with borrowed money it is, of course, especially important to avoid this error. On the other hand, however, it is not necessary to regard the total cost of surfacting a road as a temporary emprovement. Much of the surfacing may be classed as a permanent investment, for it is becoming more and more common to have surfaces built in two courses, the lower of which is as much a permanent feature of construction as the grading itsess. This is particularly true of those types of road that are built with concrete foundations for bituminous macaisam. Drick or asphalt surfaces. It is probably conservative to regard 40 per test of the first-construction cost of macaisan or more eduling pavements as a permanent investment. It is seldom nowadays that hard roads are permitted to wear into the foundation course of the surfacing.

Features of Fashion

A lovely gown of black net, with flounces bordered with corded or banded taffeta, is distinguished by much originality. Several novel ideas appear in its finishing, which might be used on gowns made of any of the sheer fabrics that add so much to the midsummer wardrobe.

The model is made over a sitp of black taffeta with plain skirt and low bodice, which serves as a foundation and support for the net overdrees. This has two founces, one overlapping the other, headed by two puffs which form shorter, doubled flounces, about the hips.

The net bodice is shirred on to a narrow band at the round neck with a row of four small shirred tucks, forming a soft and pretty finish. It is cut in one with the full sleeves.

The sleeve is ebow length and finished with four rows of baby velvet ribbon. By gathering in the fulliness at two places about the upper arm two puffs are formed, corresponding with those at the top of the skirt. Little rosettes of baby velvet ribbon with hanging ends are mounted at the back of the neck and st the back of the neck and st the back of each sleeve.

An emplacement of taffeta with lace overlay across the top and bottom appears at the back and front of the bodice, forming a little blouse with a bodice, forming a little blouse wit

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the altimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of bot water with a teaapoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract.

WORD TO CONDUCTORS FIRST STEEL PASSENGER CAR

ests of the Company in Many Ways, Chiefly Through the Exercise of Tact and Courtesy.

of Tact and Courtesy.

In a campaign to reduce damage suits the management of one of the great western railroads has addressed an interesting communication to the conductors of that system. The letter to the conductors follows:

"The attention of conductors is directed to the frequency of lawsuits brought against the company for alleged delinquencies for which the company is held responsible through the large number of such cases are either fictitious or do not possess sufficient merit upon which to justify a jury in returning a verdict against the company, aithough the burden is upon the company to defend itself. Juries generally sympathize with the individual bringing the suit and naturally lean in that direction. The situation is quite a serious one, as the cost to the company of defending these suits is enormous, outside of the question of the verdicts that may be rendered against the company." An analysis of the suits brought verdicts that may be rendered against the company.

"An analysis of the suits brought will, to a certain extent, offer a guide as to how many of these cases may be avoided. It will be observed that a very large per cent of them are based on alleged ashaults, discourtesy and wrongful electment. It is well understood that conductors are frequently confronted with situations calculated to overtax the patience of the ordinary man. They should, however, remember that to a very large extent the reputation of the railroad is in their keeping. The conductor is one of the few employees who comes in daily contact with the public and in a very responsible way. It is absoa very responsible way. It is absolutely necessary that he lay aside all personal feeling and understand that ne is called upon to exercise patience and discretion much beyond the ordiand discretion much beyond the ordinary. In his position it is incumbent apon him to cultivate the arts of cour and discretion much beyond the ordinary. In his position it is tincumbent apon him to cultivate the arts of courtesy, tactfulness and diplomacy, remembering that 'a soft answer turneth away wrath,' and that the exercise of good judgment will controver fraudulent designs and that diplomacy will outgeneral those who may be seeking to lay the foundation to mulct the company. The general public, and particularly feliow passengers, are not disposed to be unfair. If diplomatic publicity is given to complicated situations when they arise, the sympathy of the prospective witnesses can be en listed in the company's behalf. If a conductor takes a broad view of the conditions, permitting nothing to an ger him, or to inducé him to enter into controversies or personal alteractions, he is thrice armed. He should take the precaution of enlisting the sympathy of a number of witnesses, explaining carefully to them his position, and request the latter to explain his side of the controversy, if he will; in other words, the case can be frequently tried on the spur of the moment before those who are conversant with all of the details and surrounding conditions and in this manner disposed of.

"It is, of course, understood that all of the conductors were not guilty as charged in the lawsuits: the fact is that but few of them were. A number have, however, unquestionably laid the company liable in damages by failure to follow the line of conduct which is deemed proper under such circumstances. Through tactfulness on the part of the conductors, however, many of the cases could possibly have been avoided. The company does not object to defending a conductor when he is in the right; it cannot defend him when he is in the wrong, but it may, be compelled to respond in damages by reason of his act."

Technical Point Decided.

The supreme court of Georgia in Tapley vs. Georgia & Florida Rail-way company reversed a verdict of $500 recovered by the plaintif for in-juries received when a train he tried to stop at a flag station failed to stop at a flag station failed to stop and his foot was injured while he what endeavoring to leave the track. The court held that where one goes to a flag station on the line of a rail-way company, at which passenger trains are accustomed to stop to take on passengers upon being signaled and gives a proper signal to indicate his intention to get upon an approaching passenger train, he does not ipso facto became a passenger, and a charge to that effect way erroneous.

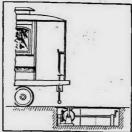

Oyster Can Move Fast.

The common impression that the oyster is a stationary creature is being given a ride shock at the Knickering given a ride shock at the Knickerbocker thester, where the screen discloses an alarmed oyster in full and speedy flight from a hungry star fish. The moving picture is productive of many wagers, for few people will believe that they can be shown a bivalve induiging in a hop, skip and a jump. The leaping oyster is shown on the screen and it is a perfectly faces, someone will get shot before this war's over!" on the screen and it is a perfectly placio thing until the buge star fab looms up ready for breakfast. Then the oyster springs into life and darts across the bottom of the sea with great bounds. Impetus seems to be imparted by the sudden opening and closing of its shell, but whatever the source of the motive power, it enables the oyster to outdistance its enemy.—New York Tribune.

Engineer's Tragic Death.
One of the oldest engineers in the Southern Pacific coast line service died recently of whock after narrowly missing an unidentified farmer who crossed the track in front of his train crossed the track in front of his train at Chusiar. He ran his train into Watsonville Junction and then collapsed at the throttle. He was carried into the beggage car and brought to Salinas for treatment. Physicians said that his death was caused by sudden enlargement of the heart due to fright. The locomotive missed the farmer, who was crossing the track on a two-spike harrow, by a margin of only three feet.

Long and Worthy Record.
The oldest engine driver on the given North-Eastern (England) railway has just retired with a service record of Tru. 55 years. During the 40 years as a passenger driver not a single accident occurred to passengers of trains of which he had charge.

"Millionaire Kid" Friend of All in Boom Town

OPEWELL, VA.—Out of Washington obscurity, where he toiled unostentationally, little Joseph J. Oulahan has sprung to fame. Hopewell, Va., the d-west town which was created in a night, knows Joseph. He is halled everywhere by rough-bearded, acid-scarred gun-toters; by Greeks and Slavs and Irishmen, and by a myriad men who have no nation.

On my that time.

The writer ran into Joe just after he had finished one of his train trips.

"Doesn't this sort of notoriety make you nervous?" asked the writer. "It seems a lot like having to shake hands with a lot of field artillery."

Joe shook his bead.

Joe shook his head.
"You don't understand 'em." he said. "They're the finest fellows on earth if you know how to treat 'em."

New York Bonifaces Are Prepared for Anything

New York Bonifaces Are Prepared for Anything New York,—'Ask and ye shall receive." is the motto that can be applied to the big hotels, when guests arrive with meager baggage and want something they cannot buy. The bonifaces are adequately prepared for anything. They have been known to have supplied everything from a toothbrush to an entire outfit. Women guests traveling light, who have received invitations to informal affairs and who have been at their wite end how to procure the necessary costume, have told their troubles to the manager and have been made happy. Only the other day a similar case confronted a well-known man from the West. His wife had failed to put his evening togs in his grip. He appealed to the manager of his botel and soon he was rigged out with an open-faced suit, including everything from silk socks to walking cane. Hotel managers are constantly being called on to aid guests in such emergencies. Some of the requests are amusing. A short time ago a Baptist elegrymnn arrived here wearing light tan shoes. He was called on by a prominent clergyman to occupy his pulpit. It being late Saturday night he could not buy a pair of black shoes, so he did the next best thing; he told his troubles to the hotel man, who found a pair of shoes for him, even if they were a size smaller. And one Sunday afternoon a man who wanted to catch a train crushed his hat in a taxicab. He could find no place to buy another. The disappointed traveler handed his battered headgear to the check boy and within a short time the hat was made to look like new. "If a commuter suddenly receives a last-minute invitation to a formal social affair," said one manager today, "and cannot find time to make the trip home and back in time, he need not worry; we can fix him up. We do it every day." In fact, anything and everything is somewhere within the walls of the modern hotel.

Antics of Gale Reveal Popular Spring Tints

N. B.—They are wearing a lot of pink ones this year.

The Park place and Broadway corner was visited first. The wind that whistles about it has a peculiar, lifting action that whirls hate and papers hundreds of feet straight upon into the sky.

Until the other day the altitude record was held by a panama hat owned by a Newark barber. It reached the twenty-first story, and almost to the twenty-serventh.

At the Whitehall building where the United States weather bureau counts the raindrops and reads the wind meter, the gale was 76 miles an bour.

N. B.—Pale yellow ones are also being worn extensively.

The Flatiron building lived up to its reputation. An 80-mile gale played tag around the building most of the day.

Another windy corner was found at Madison avenue and Forty-third street, where the gale blew around the base of the Bilimore hotel. So violent was the breeze that several women were blown against the building and held there. It was necessary to throw them rojees and pull them to safety.

N. B.—Many of the black ones have colored clocks.

About the windiest place encountered was the arch under the Municipal building. Through this Old Boreas howied and roared. Only the stoutest could buck the wind for any gain. Most of those who tried were held for downs. One particularly justy gust measured 8 s miles an hour.

N. B.—Only two pairs of red ones were discovered.

The women continued to scream, and a phalanx of brave waiters charged on the alligators and drove them back inti the fashless pool, where two of the waiters ctood guard to prevent them escaping again. The soup was cold by that time, and was eaten in grim silence so as not to stir up the enligators to making a fresh sortie.

LETTER FROM STATE CAPITOL RITE Clube.

COLONEL BERSEY EXPLAINS ALL ABOUT THE MILITIA AND THE SERVICE.

The Complete Organization Requires More Men But There Must Be More Money First-Present Condition
Up to War Standard.

Lansing—The trouble in Mexico, which may lead to war with that country, make the Michigan National Guard and independent military organizations a greater factor in the public mind that it has been for years. Everyone is now thinking and talking preparedness and few have real knowledge of military conditions in the state and all sorts of information is sought from the officers of the M. N. G. as to entering the service, and the organization of more units. Colonel John S. Bersey adjutant general of the Michigan National guard, has prepared a statement, covering has prepared a statement, covering the whole matter, which contains all the information necessary.

What the Militia Is

What the Militia is.

The militia is a subdivision of the population and not a military organization its individuals are merely potential soldiers. It consists of all abla bodied males over 18 and less than 45 years of age. All persons constituting the militia may lawfully be required to serve as soldiers, to repel invasion, suppress insurrection or to enforce the law. The federal army of the United States is a permanent military organization. Its officers and men devote their entire time to its service; officers for life and enlisted men for seven year periods. Its individual members are subjected to its individual members are subjected to its individual members are subjected to the time of the United States government and are exempt from duty as militiamen.

The national guard of the states, or the organized militia are permanent military organizations under laws of the United States and the respective states. The officers and men of the national guard devote a portion of their time only to its service. In Michigan its officers are such for life, and its enlisted men for periods of three years. They are liable to duty as militia and, under the law of this state, should the militia be "called" for military service, the national guard is to be the first to be ordered out.

Michigan's Quota. Michigan's Quota.

The National Guard of Michigan is tentatively assigned to the Eleventh division. Its quota is one infantry brigade, one regiment of field artillery and two squadrons of cavalry. Of this quota there is now organized, the infantry complete. Of the regiment of field artillery, which comprises six batteries, two are organized, and of the two squadrons of cavalry, eight troops, two are organized. The and of the two squadrons of cavalry, eight troops, two are organized. The shortage in Michigan, therefore, is four batteries of field artillery and six troops of cavalry. The Federal government furnishes arms, uniforms and personal equipment of individual enlisted men and of organizations, and a portion of the funds for pay and field training, including rifle ranges and ammunition. The state government furnishes a portion of the pay and expenses of field training, all of the expenses of fraining at home stations, including armories and their maintenance.

Appropriations and Cost,

Appropriations and Cost.

The National Guard of Michigan cost the United States government last year about $135,000. State appropriations to the military fund for the same period were about $164,000. A company costs the state about $2,600 a year, a troop about $3,300, and a battery about $6,000. Present state appropriations for military purposes are not sufficient to maintain the National Guard as outlined above the are not sufficient to maintain the National Guard as outlined above in everything required, even with the assistance of the United States government. Also lack of state appropriations prevents the shortage in organizations from being filled, although there is constant pressure from the United States to that end. As certain equipment and finances for troops must be acquired from the United States, no new organizations can be formed except by the approval of the government, and no old unite can continue to exist without its approval.

There is one way, however, by which individual citizens may partially prepare themselves without either further legislation or action by the military authorities, by organizing rifle clubs and engaging in rifle practice. For this the United States has a way the right of the control of the c COAT, SOURCE OF REVENUE information regarding the formation of government civilian rifle clubs may be procured from Major M. J. Philips, at Owesso, Mich., state secretary for Michigan.

The Get Ready Order.

The Get Ready Order.

Michigan has not received the slightest hint from the war department or the division of militia atfairs to hold her troops in readiness or to prepare a mobilization camp, or even to recruit for possible Mexican service. Furthermore, neither this ataste nor any other will receive such a hint. The reason is obvious. An official suggestion to get ready would soon become public property and our border, in part defenseless, would be raided by infuriated Mexicans who would jump to the conclusion that war had been declared. This national guard will not be called, if it is called at all, until there are enough reculars on the boundary line to stop Mexican raids until the guard arrives.

In his next message to the legislature, whether it is his inaugural or exaugural Governor Ferris will recommend appropriations sufficient to provide adequate fire protection for the Michigan Soldiers' Home at Grand Rapids, Industrial School for Girla Adrian Industrial School for Boys at Adrian, Industrial School for Boys at Lansing and the state library The governor says an automatic sprink ling system is needed at the soldiers home, but that it is impossible to provide it for lack of funds and he says conditions should be improved as the Adrian school and the industrial the Adrian school and the industrial school for boys. The governor in-spected the state library and is con-vinced that steps should be taken to house the valuable collection of books and state records in a fire proof build-

Made a Mistake.

Deputy Secretary of State George Lusk admits that he made a mistake when he notified the secretary of the United States senate that there would be no election of a United States senator in Michigan this year. The secretary of the senate wrote to know whether Michigan would require blanks used by senatorial candidates in reporting their campaign expenditures. Lusk told him no blanks would be needed as there would be no election of a United States senator. Charles E. Townsend's term expires next year and there will be an election this year. Candidates for United States senator will be nominated at the primary in August and will be voted were the secretary of the senator.

Until the supreme court upon the consitutionality of the auto-mobile tax law passed at the has session of the legislature, no attempt will be made to divide the tax received from the sale of automobil ceived from the sale of automobile licenses among the various countles of the state. At the present time approximately $450,000 has been collected and the countles are entitled to fifty per cent of this money under the terms of the new law. However, the constitutionality of the law, which was affirmed in the Wayne county circuit court, will be argued before the supreme court next month, and state officials will make no disposition of the money wow on hand untit he supreme court renders a decision.

An Appointment.

As the result of the death of Judge Chester L. Collins, of Bay City, Governor Ferris will have an opportunity to appoint a democrat as judge in the eighteenth judicial circuit. Although it will be several days before the governor will give the matter consideration, it is believed by those close, to the administration that the governor's ultimate choice will be Charles W. Hitchcock, of Bay City, who was the democratic candidate for congress against Rep. Loud in the tenth district in the campaign of 1914. An Appointment.

Many Pythiais Patients Improve.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—The Florida contingent of the Daughters of the American Revolution met at a dinner in the Windsor hotel here and some thoughtful person, to give local color to the affair, put several small No. 9a alligators in the pool of the fountain in the room where the goldfish used to be kept.

Alligators ate up the goldfish as a first course and then, attracted by the merry sounds and ratting of knives and forks, crawled out of the tank and mingled with the disers—for a moment only. The revolutionary daughters declined to do their part of the mingling and, with a series of shries, they rapidly mounted the dining-room chairs. TOLEDO HAS CAR TIE-UP Street Railway Men Refuse to Take Off Union Badge.

Toledo, O.—Though no strike has been declared officially, the Toledo street car system is tied up. Nearly every one of the 250 cars on the system were run into the barns late Tweeday aftermoon and motormen and conductors walked out.

The trouble was brought about by rehasal of the Toledo Railways & Light Co. to permit employes to wear union badges. The men organized two weeks ago. The new union of the Amalgamated Association of Electric and Street Railway Employes is 800 strong. The company employs about 1,000 motormen and conductors.

When new badges came they were distributed to the shift going on duty at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Company inspectors told the men they could not work while wearing union badges.

At Last-A One-Adjustment Cream Separator

BEFORE you buy any cream separator, come in and look at the Primrose. But one adjustment is needed to keep it in perfect operating condition. This adjustment is a simple one for keeping the bowl at the correct height—an adjustment that you or your wife can safely make.

The adjustment is made from the outside of the separator by either raising or lowering the bearing containing the hardened steel point, upon which the spindle revolves. A slight turn with a screwdriver, perhaps once a year, does the work.

The Primmose is a well-constructed, close-skimming, durable cream separator, one it will pay you well buy. When can you arrange to see it?
