New Commission Takes Over Village Government

The Old Council Adjourns Sine Die and the Village is Now Under the New Charter Form of Government.

Commissioner W. T. Conner Chosen President by Commission.

An adjourned regular meeting of the common council was held Monday evening for the purpose of cleaning up some unfinished business, and turning over the reins of government to the new commission.

After the business matters had been disposed of President Robinson took the opportunity to thank the members of the council and other village officials for their hearty cooperation and support during the past year, and spoke of the friendly feeling which had always predominated among the members of the council and himself. The president also spoke of the work and improvements that had been made during the past two years, some of which are yet to be completed, and expressed a hope that the new commission would carry out the ultimate completion of this work. The old council then adjourned sine die. After the adjournment the members of the old council extended to the members of the new commission their greetings and best wishes for a pleasant and successful administration.

W. T. CONNER President of the New Commission

The commission was called to order by Commissioner James O. Eddy for the purpose of selecting a president for the ensuing year. Commissioner W. T. Conner was nominated for this important office without opposition, and received the unanimous vote of the commission. President Conner then took the chair and Plymouth's commission under the new village charter was formally organized, and the municipal machinery set in motion.

F. J. Tousey was asked to continue temporarily as village clerk, and all other elective or appointive officers of the village will hold over until their successors are named.

A number of applications for the office of city manager were read and ordered placed on file for further consideration. The selection of a manager is going to be one of the most important, and also one of the hardest propositions which the new commission will be called upon to solve, for much depends upon the success of the new form of government in securing the right man for the all important position of city manager. A man to fill this position must necessarily be a well qualified business man, a civil engineer and a man of good judgment in the conduct of municipal affairs. It is not to be supposed that a man with these qualifications can be secured for a nominal salary, and we believe the taxpayers will uphold the commission in securing the best man possible for any reasonable remuneration. Aside from the taking up of a few minor matters the commission adjourned to meet at the next regular meeting, April 1st.

Set Clocks Ahead March 31

Get ready to turn your clocks ahead one hour beginning the last day of March. Congress has enacted the daylight saving bill, which provides that this shall be done and remain in effect until the last of October, when the clocks will be turned back again.

Under the new law, the Daisy and Markham companies and probably other factories will set their clocks ahead one hour, but instead of beginning work at 6:30, will begin at 7:00 o'clock a. m., closing at 6 o'clock. Undoubtedly all business houses and school will conform to the same schedule. At least there should be a uniform time in the village. This is an important matter and everyone should act accordingly.

"Inauguration Night"

The Penniman-Allen building being completed, its owner, Mrs. Kate E. Allen, wishes to announce to the people of Plymouth that she is very desirous of having them join with her in an open night dedication of the Auditorium, which is to be something of a social center for the city. The dedication will be held on the evening of April 12th, and all Plymouth people and vicinity are invited by Mrs. Allen to be present at the reception and dancing party to be held that evening, the grand march starting at 8 o'clock. The invitation is also extended to the Plymouth boys now at Camp Custer, and it is expected their presence will lend considerable interest to the evening's pleasures. It is Mrs. Allen's hope that the people of Plymouth will regard this new Auditorium as a municipal social center, that the possibilities of such a meeting place will be fully realized in the years to come.

Closing Number on Lecture Course

The last number of the Citizens' Entertainment Course was given in the High school auditorium, last Tuesday evening, when Alton Packard, cartoonist, entertained a full house. Mr. Packard is clever and versatile and a genius with the crayons. He was greatly appreciated, judging from the applause. He pre-barefoot boy fishing in the pool, tubes ranged from the sublime to the ridiculous. Mr. Packard makes his drawings very rapidly, and during the entire time keeps the audience in the best of humor by his ready wit. He also sang several songs of his own composition, playing his own accompaniments. His first and last drawings will long remain in the memory of all present. The first a "barefoot boy with cheeks of tan," bringing to mind Whittier's poem of the barefoot boy with cheeks of tan, and the last picture, one of nature's sunsets, with an aged couple coming from their modest little home hand in hand, representing "The Sunset of Life" by the Hoosier poet, Riley. This number concluded the winter's course, and as a whole it averages well with the entertainments of former years.

In a few preliminary remarks, Rev. Karl P. Miller asked for an expression from the audience as to whether the course had been satisfactory, and if those present desired the committee to prepare a course for next year. He asked for a rising vote and it was responded to almost unanimously. It is safe to say that Plymouth will have another entertainment course next winter.

Strength Gave Cut

Mrs. Schmitt Was Misgiving From Kidney Trouble Until Doan's Came to Her Assistance. Now Well.

"My kidneys gave out during the change of life," says Mrs. Margaret Schmitt, 43 Alabama Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. "My back ached and pained as if it were broken. When I moved in bed, sharp, darting pains caught me across my back and I couldn't turn. Mornings I was stiff and sore and it felt as if heavy weights were tied to me. I was so worn-out, I often came near falling from dizziness and flashes of fire would come before my eyes, blinding me."

"I had the most severe headaches and my kidneys didn't act regularly. The secretions passed too often and caused much distress. I was hardly able to do my housework and just to walk upstairs took all my strength."

"As soon as I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, I improved and six boxes put me in better health than I had enjoyed for years."

Mrs. Schmitt gave the foregoing statement in 1916 and on April 6, 1917, she said: "My cure has been permanent. I keep Doan's on hand, however, and take a few doses occasionally."

REWARD FOR TELLING TRUTH

Portuguese Statesman May Not Have Been Flattered, But at Least He Won One Vote.

Senor Costa, the Portuguese prime minister, in excusing himself from making a speech on the anniversary that he was no orator, told an amusing anecdote at a luncheon party given in his honor during his recent visit to London. It appears that when he first put up for the Portuguese national council he prefaced his opening address to the electors by alluding frankly to his lack of oratorical gifts. After he had finished a man pushed forward, grasped his hand warmly, and said: "Senhor, I've been a lifelong election of yours, but at the coming election I shall vote for you."

"Thank you," said Costa, much gratified. "May I ask the particular reason for your change of views?" "Because you are the first speaker on either side that I have heard tell the truth," was the reply. "You said when you began that you couldn't make much of a speech, and by heavens, senhor, you can't."

There's a Reason. We need not follow the antiquarians back into the era of the cave dwellers in our search for the origin of religion. Religion is reborn in the birth of a babe. He needs no teacher to tell him that he is dependent on his mother for his food, and a widening sense of his helpless dependence on her grows with his widening experience. Her service to him awakens his gratitude, her brooding love for him inspires in him an answering love. If she is a wise as well as an affectionate mother, her early recognition of his authority and learns that prompt obedience is one secret of happiness. If she loves and honors her husband, her child's love and honor follows hers to the strong stranger. If she has plenty as well as human affection, he timidly perceives in her prayers at his bedside an experience which he presently wishes he might share. Thus there grows up in him a spirit of dependence, gratitude, love, reverence, obedience, faith—and this spirit is religion. It antedates all theology, precedes thought, transcends definition. The spirit of faith, hope and love toward father and mother is the child's religion. The conception of God and his duties toward God comes later.—Lynn Abbott in Outlook.

Flowers For Easter. To paint the lily is wasteful and ridiculous excess. I said Shakespeare of the floral emblem of purity, of loveliness and especially of the renewing of life. Its fairness and fragrance sung by the poet, its perfection of grace painted by the artist, the lily is the queen of spring blossoms chosen to symbolize the resurrection as it is celebrated at Easter. Some years ago the United States department of agriculture took note of this annual exodus of American funds, growing larger year by year, and since then it has been taking effectual measures to keep those millions at home. In the case of the Easter lily, the narcissus, the hyacinth and the tulip, with other spring blossoms used at Easter in immense quantities, the government's experiments have proved that all can be grown in this country, not only as well as abroad, but better and the department scientists are now working out the problems of how and in exactly what sections of the country Easter lilies and other bulbous plants and delicate flowering shrubs may be grown to best advantage. Of late years the Bermuda lily bulbs have given the United States florists trouble by reason of disease, which has caused great uncertainty as to result and general deterioration in the stock, a condition attributable, it is believed, to continuous planting in the same spot. On account of this difficulty with the lily from Bermuda this country's trade has been transferred in large part to Japan, some of whose islands now supply the larger part of the American trade in Easter lilies. Easter lilies are shipped into the larger cities of the East, such as New York, Boston and Philadelphia, during the months of July and August. Each of these cities receive hundreds of thousands of bulbs annually and distribute them to the trade, the larger florists taking from ten thousand to fifteen thousand bulbs a season. The price of the bulbs is in the neighborhood of a hundred dollars a thousand. The florist loses no time in planting his precious freight in a temperature where only the root will start. To obtain perfectly healthy American stock from which to make his experiments in bulb culture in this country the department of agriculture some years ago planted the seed of the lily longiflorum, which is the botanical name of our familiar Easter lily. From this planting there resulted several pounds of seed, with which experiments were made in sections of Florida, Mississippi, the state of Washington, Texas and California. The result has been the production of stronger, healthier and handsomer Easter lilies than can be grown from imported bulbs. Federal experimentation proves that climatic and soil conditions in southern California are such as to favor the production of the finest Easter lilies in the world. The department of agriculture is also expending its efforts upon other plants, whose bulbs and roots are imported each year at a cost of nearly three million dollars to supply the Easter trade. These include hyacinths, tulips and narcissi, with the decorative azaleas, rhododendrons, lilacs and other blossoms, which are brought to the zenith of their glory at Easter.

After a series of tests made by the department of agriculture in various states it has been found that tulips, narcissi and hyacinths can best be produced in this country in certain parts of the Pacific coast, these being northwest Washington and northwest California, and that there are areas in those states extensive enough to supply all the bulbs this country needs, with soil and climatic conditions even more favorable for the culture of "Dutch bulbs" than the Haarlem bulb district of Holland. Said one of the scientists of the department of agriculture in a recent talk on the subject of bulb culture in America for the home trade: "One of the main deterrent factors with those who contemplate entering the business in this country, where it seems probable they can produce a better article than the imported, is that of the extensive hand labor as yet necessitated in bulb culture. The biggest job in this connection is digging. As the business expands, however, it is more than likely that the American farm implement manufacturer will provide machinery to overcome this need, as he has in the past overcome every other obstacle in farm operation. Of late it is reported that machinery is coming into use even in Holland to a limited extent in bulb culture on account of the scarcity of labor due to war conditions."

Whether due to the war, or to a knowledge of the tendency on the part of the United States to keep its bulb trade at home, a number of Holland and Belgium bulb and decorative plant growers have emigrated to the Pacific coast and have entered the business with a view to assisting in the American supply of Easter flowers. One grower of azaleas and araucarias who came from Ghent in Belgium is endeavoring to establish his business in California. He made the statement to the effect that he found conditions here superior to those in Belgium. One great advantage, he finds, is that plants bud here fully several weeks before they finish budding in Ghent, enabling them to be forced for the early American market. He states that America imports annually between two and three millions of decorative plants, including rhododendrons, azaleas, hollies, boxwoods and araucarias, all of which can be produced here in commercial quantities at a cost which will defy competition, provided the transcontinental railroads will encourage the development of right rates, which will enable dealers to use the home-grown products. There is one widely used Easter flower, formerly imported from Holland, which has been thoroughly established in this country, having been brought to bloom in sufficient quantity to supply the entire demand. This is the freesia, prized by florists and people alike as a beautiful and fragrant Easter blossom. A talk with one of the horticultural experts of the department of agriculture resulted in some interesting facts concerning the freesia. "The plant is a native of South Africa," he said, "but had been commercially grown in Holland up to about fifteen years ago, when it was found that it could be produced here more satisfactorily than it could be imported. We have produced strains larger and finer and very much better fitted for our use than the original flower. It has been developed in Florida, to some extent in Georgia, but to the greatest extent in California, where it is cultivated in great, sweet-scented fields in Santa Ana, Santa Barbara, Pasadena and San Gabriel. These towns are the center of our home-grown freesias, now thoroughly Americanized and supplying our entire trade. The original colors of the freesias were white, known as 'Purity,' and a rather lurid yellow, but about fifteen years ago a few plants of a pale pink-tinted species, known as 'Freesia Armstrong,' were found in Natal, South Africa. It was a small, lilac pink flower, but scentless. This species seems to be extremely rare in nature and it was eagerly seized upon by propagators in different parts of the world. Italy, France, Holland, England and this country all procured specimens, and by hybridizing and intercrossing the seedlings a great range of beautiful colors have been produced. They run from cream to golden yellow on one hand, and to pale pink and light crimson on the other, and even a blue has been developed. These varieties are still scarce, but they are known to the trade, which has termed them 'rainbow freesias.' They exhale a delicate apricot-like fragrance.

MAN CLEARS SELF AFTER EIGHT YEARS

In Another Place on Day of Robbery for Which He Was Convicted.

Canon City, Colo.—James E. Edwards, for nearly eight years an inmate of the state penitentiary here, after conviction as a bank robber, is about to establish his innocence. With the aid of C. W. Shores, formerly head of the Denver and Rio Grande secret service, and now a rancher at Grand Junction, Edwards has been able to prove that he was in Salt Lake City, Utah, on the day of the robbery, pawning some personal jewelry. The police of Salt Lake City and the pawnbroker, as well as his pawn ticket, clinch this evidence. Edwards, according to his own admission, had been in Glenwood Springs, the town in which the bank robbery occurred, taking treatment for rheumatism, and there met the men who committed the crime. He asserts he had no knowledge of their plot and knew nothing of the deed until long after it had occurred. He was convicted with John H. Wilson, who has little to say about the robbery except that he also is innocent. The robbery of the Citizens' National bank at Glenwood Springs was one of the boldest in the criminal annals of Colorado. Two men hired horses at a livery stable in the town and rode to the bank, tying the horses in an alley. They entered, covered Vice President Drach and Bookkeeper T. H. Davis with revolvers and proceeded to gather in $10,000 in cash. At the trial Edwards was identified as one of the robbers. He made a personal plea in his own behalf, declaring that the men who identified him as a bank robber might be honest in their statement, but he said, "I am not the man they take me for." It took him eight years to prove this assertion. Edwards and Wilson were sentenced to from 20 to 30 years for the crime.

"BOY WANTED— TO EARN THRIFT STAMPS"

When you see the sign, "Boy Wanted—to Earn Thrift Stamps," or its companion sign, "Girl Wanted," hanging in the window of any Michigan home, you are to understand that the first schoolboy coming past is eligible for the job which awaits him inside. By simply knocking at the door and saying, "I've seen your sign and am ready to do your work," it means that the householder can use him with windows to scrub, ashes to empty, an errand to run, dusting to be done, something to fix, or any one of dozens of odd jobs which the schoolboy can do as well as the skilled laborer. The basis for payment has been fixed at 25 cents per hour, payable to the schoolchildren, however, not in the form of money, but in Thrift Stamps, of which the householder will already have a supply, or can readily obtain at the nearest drug store, grocery store, or other authorized station, or from the postman.

In order to foster the success of this movement, house holders are being requested to reserve such odd jobs, to display the card calling for a Thrift Stamp boy prominently in the window, and in every case to pay for such service only in Thrift Stamps.

As Frank A. Vanderlip has so pointedly defined the work which the War Savings Certificates and the Thrift Stamps are intended to accomplish:

"They are going to raise $2,000,000,000. That is a big thing; the biggest financial transaction ever undertaken in this country, except the two Liberty Loans.

"But that is not the great thing about it. It is going to teach thrift to America. That is a great thing. We needed the lesson. We needed it desperately. We have not stood up very well under the hardest test of all—prosperity. We have become careless; we have become a spendthrift people. Our savings do not compare per capita with those of much poorer countries. Sweden has five times as much savings per capita as we have in this country. So has Switzerland. We have fifteen million depositors in savings banks. I believe we shall see thirty million holders of these certificates. That will be something. It will be thirty million stockholders in the United States."

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

The Masonic Lodge at South Lyon is planning on building a new temple there.

The Park House in Northville is to be again opened to the public on May 1st. William E. Ambler will be the new "landlord."

Word has been received of the death of Joseph A. Yerkes, a Northville soldier, of pneumonia, in France, March 13.

The old brewery at Ypsilanti will soon be equipped for making commercial bodies and cabs for all kinds of automobiles. There will be a blacksmith shop and paint shop in connection.

The village of Farmington is seeking help from the state to pave its main street. If ever a village had a just cause Farmington has and the state should pave that street from limit to limit. It is asking village taxpayers too much to put that street in shape for traffic when it is torn to pieces by outsiders entirely.—South Lyon Herald.

While at Oldsmar, Florida, last week Tom Leith contracted for seventy acres of land on old Tampa Bay for the Michigan Military Academy, and received Mr. R. E. Olds acceptance to act on the advisory board of the academy. It is expected that a commodious building will be erected at once, and the winter term of the Academy will be held in the south. Mr. and Mrs. Leith expect to spend the summer here, but will go to Florida in the fall.—Brighton Argus. Mr. Leith is a former Plymouth boy.

The Carp industry is not exactly a new industry in this city. Every spring men and boys make good money spearing these fish out of the Huron river, but the last few days, owing to the high water and the overflow of the low lands, has made it possible for carp hunters to make good wages. The fish market has shipped in the past week somewhere in the neighborhood of two tons of carp. Parties have brought in as high as 250 pounds to a catch, at six cents per pound. This makes a pretty good day's work.—Ypsilanti Record.

Two new names are added this week to our list. One is that of Archie Kidd, who has been called to the service and assigned to Ft. Oglethorpe, Georgia, and the other is Alan Newman, who has recently enlisted in the Aviation section of the army. He will be remembered as one of two brothers, who lived here for some time when boys, with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ely at the Park House. He was later taken in charge by Mr. and Mrs. Cass Benton, who assisted him through the High school at Plymouth. He has always called the Benton household "home," since it first opened its kindly doors to him.—Northville Record.

A flag pole, 65 feet high, was planted in the center of the square on Michigan avenue and Ann Arbor street, last week, surrounded by four electric lights. A beautiful flag, 12 by 22 feet, in size was raised. A large service flag, 8 by 12 feet, is displayed for Saline with 31 stars in honor of our boys who serve for their country.—Saline Observer.

Northville Man for State Legislature

Milo N. Johnson, Well Known Farmer and Business Man of Neighboring Town, Will Be Candidate.

The Northville Record had the following to say last week, in announcing the candidacy of one of its most prominent and best known citizens for the nomination of representative in the State Legislature from the Third District at the coming primaries:

After much persuasion Milo N. Johnson has consented to allow his name to go before the primaries for the nomination for the Legislature from this Third district. Ed Gayde of Plymouth, has faithfully represented this district for the past four years, and is one of Mr. Johnson's loyal supporters, and word has come from other parts of the district that is very encouraging. So far there are no other candidates.

Mr. Johnson is a prominent dairy farmer and is recognized as a very successful business man. For 12 years he was Northville's postmaster, and he performed the important duties of the position in a manner which won unqualified approval, not only for his business ability, but his unflinching courtesy and kindly manner. His many friends here believe he will make a splendid representative in Michigan's lower house.

Mr. Johnson is well known in Plymouth, and the announcement of his candidacy meets with the hearty endorsement of the Republicans of this village and vicinity, and there is no doubt but what he will receive a most cordial support at the coming primaries.

The W. C. T. U. held a very pleasant meeting, Thursday afternoon of last week at the home of Mrs. Floyd Hillman. After all business was attended to the leaders, Mrs. M. A. Patterson and Mrs. S. E. Campbell, took charge of the meeting. "The Effects of Prohibition on States" was their topic, and it was made very interesting as both ladies are enthusiastic workers in the cause. The annual meeting is the next one, and it will be held in the parlors of the Presbyterian church, Thursday afternoon, April 11. All members are urged to be present. As this is a social, as well as a business meeting, all members are given the privilege of inviting one guest. The annual meeting is the time for paying dues, so it will be greatly appreciated if all members will come prepared to do so. These dues help in doing our bit in the fight against John Barleycorn, and when the fight is won it puts a stop to the wasting of our country's greatly needed grains and sugar.

The Pneumonia Season The cold season of March seems to be the most favorable for the pneumonia germ. Now is the time to be careful. Pneumonia often results from a cold. The danger is in a cold getting into the lungs the danger. As soon as the first indications of a cold appear take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. As to the value of this preparation ask anyone who has used it.

This report is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. RALPH G. SAMSEN, Township Clerk.

It Cost the Average Family Less Than 10c Per Week for Packer's Profit in 1917.

The Meat Bill is one of the large items in the family budget less than 10 cents per week of it goes to the packer in profits.

In converting live stock into meat and getting it into the hands of the retail dealer, the packer performs a complex and essential service with the maximum of efficiency.

The above statement is based on Swift & Company's 1917 figures and Federal Census data:

Swift & Company's total output (Meat and by-products)	5,570,000,000 Pounds
Swift & Company's total Profit	$34,650,000.00
Profit per pound	$.0062
U. S. Meat Consumption	170 pounds per person per year

Win the War by Preparing the Land Sowing the Seed and Producing Bigger Crops

Work in Joint Effort the Soil of the United States and Canada

The Food Controllers of the United States and Canada are asking for greater food production. Scarcely 100,000,000 bushels of wheat are available to be sent to the allies overseas before the crop harvest. Upon the efforts of the United States and Canada rests the burden of supply.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute; Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operation.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 460,000,000 Bushels

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but needs the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help, to do farm work this year. It wants the land in the United States developed first of course; but it also wants to help Canada. Whenever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied, we want to direct him there.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than April 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

For particulars as to routes and places where employment may be had apply to: U. S. EMPLOYMENT SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, DETROIT, MICH.; GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.; SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH.; PORT HURON, MICH.

Not So Bad.
"Target No. 3 was the one to shoot at and you hit target No. 7," said the captain.
"Yes, sir," replied the cross-eyed private.
"Didn't you look where you were shooting?"
"No, sir. I shot where I was looking."

Really Quick Work.
An Irishman, who was a bricklayer, and who was evicted, went to America to find work. When he was passing through New York he saw some bricklayers at work, and stood looking at them. While he was standing the foreman came over and said to him:
"Well, Pat, are you able to build houses as quick as this in Dublin? We start a house in the morning and the tenant is living in it in the evening."
"Well, heorra!" said Pat. "That's nothing. In Dublin we start a house in the morning, and the landlord is evicting the tenant from it in the evening."

Opposite Treatment.
"What is the best way of freezing a rival out?"
"By hot competition."
Error is its own refutation.

YOU NEED NOT SUFFER WITH BACKACHE AND RHEUMATISM

For centuries GOLD MEDAL Haarlum Oil has been a standard household remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and stomach trouble, and all diseases connected with the urinary organs. The kidneys and bladder are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters, the purifiers of your blood. If the poisons which enter your system through the blood and stomach are not entirely thrown out by the kidneys and bladder you are doomed. Weakness, sleeplessness, nervousness, dizziness, headache, stomach trouble, backache, pain in joints, and lower abdomen, giddiness, gravel, difficulty when urinating, cloudy and bloody urine, rheumatism, sciatica, lameness, all warn you to look after your kidneys and bladder. GOLD MEDAL Haarlum Oil Operates on the kidneys and bladder, and makes them work as they should. They are not a "rubbed medicine" or a "new discovery." For 50 years they

DAIRY SITUATION NOT HOPELESS ONE

Investigator Finds Reports of Extensive Slaughtering Are Overdrawn.

MANY CENTERS BUY COWS

Huron and Osceola Counties Among Those in Market—U. S. Must Supply After-War Demand.

By J. A. WALDRON, Field Agent in Dairying, Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lansing, Mich.—What is the situation in the dairy industry in Michigan? In these days of kaleidoscopic changes it is ticklish to attempt predictions of the future. A calm review of conditions as they seem to be, however, furnishes us with food for thought.

An opportunity has been afforded the writer during the past winter to become familiar with conditions in several parts of the state, and while much has been said and written about the great numbers of dairy cows being slaughtered, I feel that these reports are not universally true and that accounts of this killing have been very much overdrawn. In the southwestern part of the state, especially in parts of Berrien county, where the milk produced is marketed largely in Chicago, and in the districts close by Detroit, dairy cows have been killed off. These, however, have for the greater part been cows that under test failed to show a profit. I have in mind, as an illustration, a certain cow-testing association of about 350 cows, of which 36 were sold in the month of December. This was a move in the direction of efficiency, for 30 of these animals showed by their records that it was costing more to feed them than they were producing. This has undoubtedly been the case in many other instances where cows have been disposed of.

The marked increase in feed prices, as much as 150 to 200 per cent on some things, and the tardy increase in the price of dairy products has, however, caused the standard up to which a dairy cow must measure to return a profit to be raised. Since maximum prices on bran and middlings have been established there has been a tendency toward a lowering in the prices of these products and the stabilizing of prices of other feeds. The prices of dairy products have increased since early fall and good cows are as a rule giving fair returns. These profits in many cases are as good as usual—that is, where the cows are good cows, feed rations balanced to meet their needs and are given good care.

There are communities in Michigan, in fact, where there is and has been all the past winter a demand for dairy cows. These localities, included in which are Huron, Osceola and a number of other Michigan counties, are in general farther from the large cities where land is just a trifle cheaper than the communities mentioned above. In one or two instances condenser plants have been established in these communities, offering thus a better market for dairy products than existed in these centers before.

These facts, and the world shortage of dairy cows, the increasing demand for dairy products for export purposes and the importance of milk and butter in the feeding of young children should encourage the dairyman to be hopeful for the future and should make him feel the value of the service he is rendering in the present emergency. The situation is such as should cause men who are in the dairy business to hesitate before sending any of their good cows to the block.

More so than ever before, the keen dairyman will also realize that there is a great difference between dairy cows, and that this difference can be capitalized. Of the 22,000,000 cows in the United States, probably 4,000,000 have not been producing a profit over the cost of their feed. A great waste of feed is one of the results of this. These suckers should be eliminated so that the feed consumed by them may be fed to cows that will give good returns for it. Consequently the milk scales and the Babcock test have never had a more important or useful part to play in the dairy herd than at the present time. We would not attempt to place a value on a fast horse without first trying him out while holding a stop-watch on him. No more should we milk and give good feed to cows without determining whether or not they are producing a profit. The milk scales and tester are the dairyman's stop-watch.

Purebred sires also should hold an increasingly important place in the

The Girl With the Hoe.
The example of the value of college girls in real farm work which was given last season by Vassar students is likely to prove catching. This year it will be even more evident that the United States needs to coax all the food out of the ground that it is possible to obtain.
At Wellesley, for example, Dr. Margaret Clay Ferguson, head of the botany department, has proclaimed the doctrine that "the knitting needles must give way to the hoe." So it is likely to be with young women there and elsewhere. The necessity which put many young British women into farm work is pretty certain to be felt here. The present thought at Wellesley is to request the trustees to turn college land over to willing students when planting time comes around.

To Train Rural Teachers.
Special courses devised to school rural teachers in the things that are becoming of particularly vital importance in country communities today—such as club work for boys and girls and the changing of the old-type school to meet the intimate needs of the rural districts will be offered at M. C. A. this year as a part of the summer school. The summer school sessions of the college will commence on June 24 and will continue until August 2.
Question of Drainage.
Labor and seed must not be wasted this year on fields or parts of fields too wet for profitable crop production. We need the right drain for the right place. The present emergency has made judicious land drainage more profitable than ever before, but all proposed projects must be very carefully considered before entering upon them.
Only Want Square Deal.
During this war, the greatest ever waged in the cause of civilization, the farmers of America must and will do their duty. All they ask is a square deal.
Russia is said to have the greatest timber resources of any country in the world.

HAD NOT DEPARTED ALONE

Fake Telephone Call May Have Scared Tramp, But He Had Retained His Business Faculties.

Representative Edward W. Saunders of Virginia remarked at a social gathering that foxy schemes do not always pan out the expected results, and told this story as an illustration:
"Two men were having a gabfest over a lunch table recently when one told of an experience he had just had with a tramp.
"He came to my house," said the man, "impudently banged on the kitchen door, walked in and demanded something to eat. Right there I decided to give him the scare of his life. Going into the next room, I liberated an alarm clock and pretended to call up the police station, and told them over the imaginary wire to hurry down to my house and arrest a hobo. When I returned to the kitchen the tramp was gone."
"I see," laughingly interjected the other. The fake telephone started him.
"Yes," returned the first, a little sadly, "he was gone with two of my coats, one hat and enough silverware that was lying around loose to start a quick-lunch restaurant."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

"Tricks in All Trades."
Every business-man company has as not the least important part of its equipment a pair of hollowed coconut shells, which, in the hands of the stage mechanic, sounds more like a horse than a horse itself. Now that most of our melodramas comes to us through the motion pictures, along comes an imitator of clattering hoofs to be attached to a stationary organ. It is operated from a keyboard by a lever or button. With the aid of a swell box the sound can be made to swell or diminish.
The device consists of six cups, the upper three of which are secured to the hollows and the lower three of which are mounted on a solid base. To operate them, the organ player presses a key which causes the first cup to come down with a thud, followed in quick succession by the other two cups. There is no break in the action. The cups are made of maple. The inventor is Harold A. Valkenburg of Oakland, Cal.—Popular Science Monthly.

What She Would Talk.
At an Irish asize a deaf old lady, who had brought an action for damages against her neighbor, was being examined, when the judge suggested a compromise, and instructed counsel to ask what she would take to settle the matter.
"His lordship wants to know what you will take?" asked the learned counsel, bowling as loud as he could in the old lady's ear.
"I thank his lordship kindly," answered the dame; "and if it's no inconvenience to him, I'll take a little white ky and water."

Chivalry of the Sea.
Naval history is full of instances of the sailor's chivalric humanity. When the captured Chesapeake was taken to Halifax, her Captain Lawrence ("don't give up the ship") was buried with military honors by those against whom he had fought, Park Benjamin writes in the New York Independent. A British officer who was one of his pallbearers later commanded the Boxer in her fight with our Enterprise. Mortally wounded, he sent his sword to the dying American captain, who died with it in his hands. And then all the people of Portland, Me., reverently received both bodies and buried them with equal honors, side by side.

22 Million Families in the United States

4 CUPS OF WHEAT FLOUR TO THE POUND

If each family used 4 cups of flour less per week, the saving would be 22 million pounds or 112,244 barrels every week.

NEWS OF OUR BOYS

We print below a letter written by Lieut. Russell A. Warner, son of Mr. and Ammon Warner, who is now somewhere in France, which will be of interest to the lieutenant's many Plymouth friends: Feb. 21, 1918

Dear Folks:—

I received your letter written on my birthday, (Dec. 28) a few days ago. I was sure glad to hear from you and know that you are all well. I also received letters from Harvey, Art, Cora and Carrie the same day. I am getting the Saturday Evening Post, Literary Digest and M. A. C. Record quite regularly now. My former boss, A. G. Davis, head of the Patent Department of the General Electric Co., wrote me a nice letter and sent me a box of cigars. Don't remember whether I wrote you about my Christmas or not, but I was at school at the time, and the American officers and the Y. M. C. A. gave a Christmas tree and presents to the French children in a nearby village. We had moving pictures, music, etc. I thought some of the French children would go crazy with joy. Most of them had never seen movies before.

We have a weekly newspaper published by our headquarters over here for the U. S. army in France. It is called the Stars and Stripes and I may send you a copy later. The officers of my company, also the regimental dental officer and the assistant regimental doctor eat together. We have a very fine cook and have excellent food; cost about 80 cents per day for everything.

We are having pretty good weather except for a bad day now and then. We worked all day today in a drizzling rain, but it did not hurt us, as we are pretty tough now. I haven't been on sick report since I joined the army last May and hope I won't be. Had a little cold once. I never heard anything about Carrie being sick until she was back from the hospital and sitting up. I have quite a stack of mail to censor, but thought I had better write you first, as I would be too sleepy afterwards. My regiment received 29 sacks of mail a few days ago. Remember me to all the neighbors and friends.

Your Loving Son, Russell A. Warner. 1st Lieut. Engrs. U. S. R.

The following interesting letter has been received by Ralph Cole from Egbert Isbell, a former Plymouth boy: Amb. Co., No. 22, Camp Greenleaf, M. O. T. C., Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. March 17, 1918

Dear Ralph: For the first time in quite a good many years, we are unable to spend our birthday either together or even near together. The tricks of Fate are often of the queerest, and this time she seems to have been especially freakish. Could we have looked ahead from last year at this time, I doubt if we would have believed our eyes. But no matter how great the distance, friendship always bridges it. And the friends I have are coming to mean more and more to me now. Somehow, their value seems to rise till money, and goods and things seem relatively unimportant. God has made me exceedingly wealthy in friends, and that wealth has been greatly added to by your friendship.

I sincerely hope, Ralph, that this birthday has been a happy one for you, and promising of bigger and better things for the future. Life wouldn't be worth very much to us if we couldn't always look forward with hope to a bigger and better future. Especially since joining the army that hope has meant a great deal to me, and I will never be able to thank my parents for having made such a hope possible through a Christian training. Life down here is pretty busy, yet has its good times. Yesterday afternoon I visited the summit of Lookout Mountains, where the battle above the clouds was fought in the Civil war. To get there we went on a railway that had a grade of at least 67 degrees. It was certainly very steep. Had a very interesting time, and saw some great scenery. It was like being up in an airplane. I am with a pack-mule squad now, which consists of four mules and equipment for a first aid dressing station to be set up just behind the lines. There are about fifteen men connected with it. I have a mule of my own to care for and lead about in drill. Her name is Mad-eye, and she is surely some mule. Will close now with hearty wishes for the best year to come you have known. Your St. Patrick twin, Egbert.

Presbyterian Notes

The monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the Presbyterian church will be held Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the pastor's study. C. F. Keebs Sunday-school class will have its regular monthly business and social meeting in the Presbyterian church house, Monday evening.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary will be held in the church house, Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Greenleaf is chairman of the entertainment committee.

A self-serve supper is to be held next Wednesday evening in the church house, in charge of the Junior and International Christian Endeavorers. The public will be amply provided for and the little people are expecting generous patronage.

The services at the Presbyterian church last Sunday will long be remembered. The day was filled with thoughts of our Plymouth soldiers, and prayers and songs for their return. In the evening stereoscopic pictures were shown of every man in the service, and a letter was read from each, while his picture was on the screen. The quartette, composed of Miss Genevieve McClumpha, Miss Helen Scheer and Messrs. C. H. Rauch and Calvin Whipple, repeated, on request, the beautiful anthem which they sang at the morning service. Large congregations filled the church, and the war budget of $100 was raised in cash and pledges.

The spring meeting of the Detroit Women's Presbyterian, comprising the Home and Foreign Missionary societies, will be held at Woodward Avenue Presbyterian church, next Tuesday and Wednesday. A program of rare excellence has been provided for each day. Among those who will attend from Plymouth church are: Mrs. William Shaw, Mrs. Mary Chaffee and Mrs. Carl P. Miller. Banquet for the Young People will be served at 6:15, Tuesday evening in the Woodward Avenue church house, and a missionary pageant will be staged in the evening. It is expected several will attend from the Plymouth society.

The new pipe organ for the Presbyterian church has arrived, but has not yet been set up. The instrument, in its present condition, fills the greater part of the church parlors, making it impossible to use the parlors for regular meetings until the organ is moved. The organ builder, representing the Moller Company is daily expected to begin the work. Considerable change is necessary in the rostrum of the church auditorium to make room for the instrument. Pledges on the organ fund may be paid to William Shaw, when due. A dedication service will be held in the near future, when the people of Plymouth will be given an opportunity to hear the organ speak for itself. For Tired Women With Aching Heads

"They help me so much and I feel better soon as I begin taking your Foley Kidney Pills." Mrs. Frank P. Wood, Merrill, Maine, R. F. D. No. 2.

Sometimes it seems as if you can't stand the pain across your head. It is just making your life miserable and robbing you of all energy and strength. When you are constantly tired, head always aching, nerves "on edge," kidney action painful and burning, then is the time to start in at once on Foley Kidney Pills.

They strengthen the weak, ailing kidneys, improve their action, enable them to throw off the poisons that cause your trouble. They give you peaceful sleep, become sounder, nervous headaches disappear. As Mrs. Wood writes: "I have been so long as I begin to take your Foley Kidney Pills. Be sure you get the genuine ones. They are the only ones that are really medicinal and contain no harmful drugs."

LURE OF HIDDEN GOLD CALLS "ROARING BILL" AND HAZEL INTO THE WILDERNESS.

Synopsis.—Miss Hazel Weir, a stenographer, living at Granville, Ontario, is placed under a cloud by circumstances for which she is entirely blameless. To escape from the groundless gossip that pursues her, she secures a position as schoolteacher at Cariboo Meadows, in a wild part of British Columbia. There, at a boarding house, she first sees "Roaring Bill" Wagstaff, a well-known character of that country. Soon after her arrival Hazel loses her way while walking in the woods. She wanders until night when she reaches "Roaring Bill's" camp fire in the woods. He promises to take her home in the morning, but she is compelled to spend the night in the woods. After wandering in the woods all the next day, "Roaring Bill" finally admits that he is taking Hazel to his cabin in the mountains. Hazel finds upon their arrival at the cabin that she cannot hope to escape from the wilderness before spring. During the long winter "Roaring Bill" treats Hazel with the greatest respect. He tells her he loves her and tries to induce her to marry him, but she refuses. In the spring he takes her to Bella Coola, where she can get a boat to Vancouver. At Vancouver Hazel takes a train for Granville, but on the way she realizes that she loves Wagstaff and decided to return to him. "Roaring Bill" is overjoyed and together they travel to a Hudson bay post and are married.

"This is July the twenty-fifth, Mr. Roaring Bill Wagstaff," she announced. "We've been married exactly one month."

"A whole month?" he echoed, in mock astonishment. "You don't say so? Seems like it was only day before yesterday to little persons."

"I wonder," she snuggled up a little closer to him, "if any two people were ever as happy as we've been?"

Bill put his arm across her shoulders and tilted her head back so that he could smile down into her face.

"They have been a bunch of golden days, haven't they?" he whispered. "You won't forget this joy time if I ever do hit real hard going, will you, Hazel?"

"The bird of ill omen croaks again," she replied. "Why should we come to hard going, as you call it?"

"We shouldn't," she declared. "But most people do. And we might. One never can tell what's ahead. By and by when the novelty wears off—maybe you'll get sick of seeing the same old Bill around and nobody else. You see, I've always been on my good behavior with you. Do you like me a lot?"

His arm tightened with a quick and powerful pressure, then suddenly relaxed to let her lean back and stare up at him tenderly.

"I ought to punish you for saying things like that," she pouted. "Only I can't think of any effective method. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof—and there is no evil in our days."

"Amen," he whispered softly—and they fell to silent contemplation of the rose and gold that spread in a wonderful blazon over all the western sky.

"Twenty-fifth of July, eh?" he mused presently. "Summer's half gone already. I didn't realize it. We ought to be stirring pretty soon, lady. These northern seasons are so blessed short. We ought to try and do a little good for ourselves—make hay while the sun shines. We'll needs do that."

"Needs? Adjectives," she laughed. "What do we need money for? It costs practically nothing to live up here. Why this sudden desire to pursue the dollar? Besides, how are you going to pursue it?"

"Go prospecting," he replied promptly. "Hit the trail for a place I know where there's odds of coarse gold, if you can get to it at low water. How'd you like to go into the Upper Naas country this fall, trap all winter, work the sandbars in the spring, and come out next fall with a sack of gold it would take a horse to pack?"

Hazel clasped her hands.

"Oh, Bill, wouldn't that be fine?" she cried. "I'd love to."

"It won't be all smooth sailing," he warned. "It's a long trip and a hard one, and the winter will be longer and harder than the trip. Still, there's a chance for a good big stake, right in that one trip."

"But why the necessity for making a stake?" she inquired thoughtfully, after a lapse of five minutes. "I thought you didn't care anything about money so long as you had enough to get along on? And we surely have dollars in real money—and no place to spend it—no where to put it?"

Bill blew a smoke ring over his head and watched it vanish up toward the dusky roof beams before he answered.

"Well, little person," said he, "that's very true, and we can't truthfully say that stern necessity is treading on our heels. The possession of money has never been a crying need with me. But I hadn't many wants when I was playing a lone hand, and I generally let the future take care of itself. It was always easy to dig up money enough to buy looks and grub or anything I wanted. Now that I've assumed a certain responsibility, it has begun to dawn on me that we'd enjoy life better if we were assured of a competence. We won't stay here always. I'm pretty much contented just now. So are you. But I know from past experience that the outside will grow more alluring as time passes. You'll get homesick for civilization. It's the most natural thing in the world. And when we go out to mix with our fellow humans we want to meet them on terms of worldly equality. Which is to say with good clothes on, and a fat bank roll in our pocket. And last, but not least, old girl, while I love to loaf, I can only loaf so long in contentment. Satisfy? I've got to be doing something; whether it was profitable or not has never mattered, just so it was action."

"I suppose, as you call it," Hazel smiled. "Of course I do. Only lazy people like to loaf all the time. I love this place, but we might stay here for years and be miserable. Yes—"

"But we'd be better satisfied to stay if we knew that we could leave it whenever we wanted to," he interrupted. "That's the psychology of the human animal, all right. We don't like to be coerced, even by circumstances."

"If you made a lot of money mining, we could travel—no one could do lots of things," she retorted. "I don't think I'd want to live in a city again. But it would be nice to go there, sometimes."

"Yes, dear girl, it would," Bill agreed. "With a chum to help you enjoy things. We can do things together that I couldn't do alone, and you couldn't do alone. Remains only to get the wilderness. And since I know how to manage that with a minimum amount of effort, I'd like to be about it before somebody else gets ahead of me. Though there's small chance of that."

"We'll be partners," said she. "How will we divide the profits, Billum?"

"We'll split even," he declared. "That is, I'll make the money, and you'll spend it."

They chuckled over this conceit, and as the dusk closed in slowly they fell to planning the details. Hazel lit the lamp, and in its yellow glow pored over maps while Bill idly sketched their route on a sheet of paper. His objective lay east of the head of the Naas proper, where amid a wild tangle of mountains and mountain torrents three turbulent rivers, the Stikine, the Skeena and the Naas, took their rise. A God-forsaken region, he told her, where few white men had penetrated. The peaks fluted with the clouds, and their sides were scarred with glaciers. A lonesome, brooding land, the home of a vast and seldom-broken silence.

"But there's all kinds of game and fur in there," Bill remarked thoughtfully. "And gold, still. It's a fierce country for a man to take his best girl into. I don't know whether I ought to tackle it."

"We couldn't be more isolated than we are here," Hazel argued. "If we were in the Arctic. Look at that poor woman at Pelt House. Three babies born since she saw a doctor or another woman of her own color! What's a winter by ourselves compared to that. And she didn't think it so great a hardship. Don't you worry about me, Mr. Bill. I think it will be fun. I'm a real pioneer at heart. The wild places look good to me—when you're alone."

She received her due reward for that, and then, the long twilight having brought the hour to a lateness that manifested itself by sundry yawns on their part, they went to bed.

With breakfast over, Bill put a compass in his pocket, after having ground his ax blade to a keen edge.

"Come on," said he, then: "I'm going to transact some important business."

"What is it?" she promptly demanded with much curiosity.

"This domicile of ours, girl," he told her, while he led the way through the surrounding timber "is ours only by grace of the wilderness. It's built on unsurveyed government land—land that I have no more legal claim to than any passing trapper. But I'm going to remedy that. I'm going to formally stake a hundred and sixty acres of this and apply for its purchase. Then we'll have a claim on our home. We'll always have a refuge to fly to, no matter where we go."

She nodded appreciation of this. The cabin in the clearing stood for some of those moments that always loom large and unforgettable in every woman's experience. She had come there once in hot, shamed anger, and she had come again as a bride. It was the backbone of a man's life, loved with a passion that sometimes startled her by its intensity. But the mere possibility of that place being given away to others roused in her a pang of resentment. It was theirs, hers and Bill's, and, being a woman, she viewed its possession jealously.

So she watched with keen interest what he did. Which, in truth, was simple enough. He worked his way to a point southeast of the clearing till they gained a little rise whence through the treetops they could look back and see the cabin roof. There Bill cut out an eight-inch jack pine, leaving the stump approximately four feet high. This he beveled square, the four flat sides of the post facing respectively the cardinal points of the compass. On one smoothed surface Bill set to work with his pocketknife.

Hazel sat down and watched while he busied himself at this. And when he had finished she read, in deep-curved letters:

W. WAGSTAFF'S S. E. CORNER.

Then he penned on a sheet of letter paper a brief notice to the effect that he, William Wagstaff, intended to apply for the purchase of the land embraced in an area a half mile square, of which the post was the southeast corner mark. This notice he fastened to the stump with a few tacks, and sat down to rest from his labors.

"How long do you suppose that will stay there, and who is there to read it if it does?" Hazel observed.

"Search me. The moose and the deer and the timber wolves, I guess," Bill grinned. "The chances are the paper won't last long, with winds and rains. But it doesn't matter. It's simply a form prescribed by the land act of British Columbia, and so long as I go through the legal motions, that lets me out. Matter of form, you know."

"Then what else do you have to do?"

"Nothing but furnish the money when the land department gets around to accept my application," he said. "I can get an agent to attend to all the details. Well, let's take a look at our estate from another corner."

This, roughly ascertained by sighting a line with the compass and stepping off 850 yards, brought them up on a knoll that commanded the small basin of which the clearing was practically in the center.

"Aha!" Bill exclaimed. "Look at our ranch, would you; our widespread acres basking in the sun. A quarter section is quite a chunk. Do you know I never thought much about it before, but there's a piece of the finest timber that lies outside. If this country should get a railroad and settle up that quarter section might produce all the income we'd need. Just out of hay and potatoes. How'd you like to be a farmer's wife, huh?"

"Fine," she smiled. "Look at the view—it isn't gorgeous. It's—it's simply peaceful and quiet and soothing. I hate to leave it."

"Better be sorry to leave a place than glad to get away," he answered lightly. "Come on, let's plike home and get things in order for the long trail, woman o' mine. I'll teach you how to be a woodland vagabond."

CHAPTER X.

En Route.

Long since Hazel had become aware that whatsoever her husband set about doing he did swiftly and with inflexible purpose. There was no malingering or doubtful hesitation. On his mind was made up, he acted. Thus, upon the third day from the land staking, they bore away eastward from the clearing, across a trackless area, traveling by the sun and Bill's knowledge of the country.

"Some day there'll be trails blazed through here by a paternal government," he laughed over his shoulder, "for the benefit of the public. But we don't need 'em, thank goodness."

The huckster pony Hazel had bought for the trip in with Limping George ambled sedately under a pack containing bedding, clothes and a light shelter tent. The black horse, Nigger, he of the cocked ear and the rolling eye, carried in a pair of kyaks six weeks' supply of food. Bill led the horse, seconded by Hazel on easy-gaited Silk. Behind her trailed the pack horses like dogs well broken to heel, patient under their heavy burdens. On in the east the sun was barely clear of the towering Rockies, and the woods were still cool and shadowy, full of aromatic odors from plant and tree.

There was no monotony in the passing days. Rivers barred their way. These they forded or swam, or ferried a makeshift raft of logs, as seemed most fit. Haps and mishaps alike they accepted with an equable spirit and the true philosophy of the trail—to take things as they come. When rain deluged them, there was always shelter to be found and fire to warm them. If the flies assailed too fiercely, a smudge brought easement of that ill. Each day was something more than a mere trot of so many miles traversed. The unexpected, for which both were eager-eyed, lurked on the shoulder of each mountain, in the hollow of every cool canyon, or met them boldly in the open, naked and unafraid.

Bearing up to where the Nachaco debouches from Fraser lake, with a Hudson's bay fur post and an Indian mission on its eastern fringe, they came upon a blazed line in the scrub timber. Roaring Bill pulled up, and scanned away down the narrow lane fresh with ax marks.

"Well," said he, "I wonder what's coming off now? That looks like a survey line of some sort. It isn't a trail—too wide. Let's follow it a while."

"I'll bet a nickel," he asserted next, "that's a railroad survey."

Half an hour of easy jogging set the seal of truth on his surmise. They came upon a line blazed through a heavy timberment set on three legs, blazings, with alternate wavings of his outspread limbs, certain activities of other men ahead of him.

"Well, I'll be—" he bit off the sentence, and stared a moment in frank astonishment at Hazel. Then he took off his hat and bowed. "Good morning," he greeted politely.

"Sure," Bill grinned. "We have mornings like this around here all the time. What all are you fellows doing in the wilderness, anyway? Railroad?"

"Cross-section work for the G. T. P.," the surveyor replied.

"Huh," Bill grunted. "Is it a dead clinch, or is it something that may possibly come to pass in the misty future?"

"As near a clinch as anything ever is," the surveyor answered. "Construction has begun—at both ends. I thought the few white folks in this country kept tab on anything as important as a new railroad."

"We've heard a lot, but none of 'em has transpired yet; not in my time, anyway," Bill replied dryly. "However, the world keeps on moving. I've heard more or less talk of this, but I didn't know it had got past the talking stage. What's their Pacific terminal?"

"Prince Rupert—new town on a peninsula north of the mouth of the Skeena," said the surveyor. "It's a country would do the same thing, they'd be better off. A chunk of land anywhere in this country is a good bet now. We'll have rails here from the coast in a year. Better freeze onto a couple of lots here in Hazelton, while they're low. We'll plumb the sites in ten years. Natural place for a city, Bill. It's astonishing how the settlers is coming."

There was ocular evidence of this last, for they had followed in a road well rutted from loaded wagons. But Bill invested in no real estate, notwithstanding the positive assurance that Hazelton was on the ragged edge of a boom.

"Maybe, maybe," he admitted. "But I've got other fish to fry. That one piece up by Pine river will do me for a while."

Here where folk raised only of gold and pelts and railroads and settlement and the coming boom that would make them all rich, Bill Wagstaff added to them all ponies to his pack train. These he loaded down with food, staples only, flour, sugar, beans, salt, tea and coffee, and a sack of dried fruit. Also he bestowed upon Nigger a further burden of six dozen steel traps.

And in the cool of a midsummer morning, before Hazelton had rubbed the sleep out of its collective eyes and taken up the day's work of discussing its future greatness, Roaring Bill and his wife draped the mosquito nets over their heads and turned their faces north.

They bore out upon a wagon road. For a brief distance only did this endure, then dwindled to a path. A turn in this hid sight of the clustered log houses and tents, and the two steamers that lay up against the bank. The river itself was soon lost in the far stretches of forest. Once more they rode alone in the wilderness. For the first time Hazel felt a quick shrinking from the North, an awe of its huge, silent spaces, which could so easily engulf thousands such as they and still remain a land untraced.

The Surveyor Lifted His Hat With a Swift Glance of Unconcealed Admiration at Hazel.

rush job all the way through, I believe. Three years to spike up the last rail. And that's going some for a transcontinental road. Both the Dominion and B. C. governments have guaranteed the company's bonds away up into millions.

"Be a great thing for this country—say, where does it cross the Rockies?—what's the general route?" Bill asked abruptly.

"Goes over the range through Yellowhead pass. From here it follows the Nachaco to Fort George, then up the Fraser by Tete Juan Cache, through the pass, then down the Athabasca till it switches over to strike Edmonton."

"Uh-huh," Bill nodded. "One of the modern labors of Hercules. Well, we've got to peg. So long."

"Our camp's about five miles ahead. Better stop in and noon," the surveyor invited. "If it's on your road."

"Thanks. Maybe we will," Bill returned.

The surveyor lifted his hat, with a swift glance of admiration at Hazel, and they passed with a mutual "so long."

"What do you think of that, old girl?" Bill observed presently. "A real, honest-to-goodness railroad going by within a hundred miles of our shack. Three years. It'll be there before we know it. We'll have neighbors to burn."

"A hundred miles!" Hazel laughed. "Is that your idea of a neighboring distance?"

"What's a hundred miles?" he defended. "Two days' ride, that's all. And the kind of people that come to settle in a country like this don't stick in sight of the cars. They're like me—need lots of elbow room. There'll be hardy souls looking for a location up where we are before very long. You'll see."

They passed other crews of men, surveyors with transits, chalmers, stake drivers, ax gangs widening the path through the timber. Most of them looked at Hazel in frank surprise, and stared longer after she passed by. And when an open bottom beside a noisy little creek showed the scattered tents of the survey camp, Hazel said:

"Let's not stop, Bill."

He looked back over his shoulder with a comprehending smile.

"Getting shy? Make you uncomfortable to have all those boys look at you, little person?" he bantered. "All right, we won't stop. But all these fellows probably haven't seen a white woman for months. You can't blame them for admiring. You do look good to other men besides me, you know."

So they rode through the camp with but a nod to the aproned cook, who thrust out his head, and a gray-haired man with glasses, who humped over a drafting board under an awning. Their noon fire they built at a spring five miles beyond.

At length they fared into Hazelton, which is the hub of a vast area over which men pursue gold and furs. Some hundred odd souls were gathered there, where the stern-wheel steamers that ply the turbid Skeena reach the head of navigation. A land-recording office and a mining recorder, Hazelton boasted as proof of its civic importance. The mining recorder, who combined in himself many capacities besides his governmental function, undertook to put through Bill's land deal. He knew Bill Wagstaff.

"Wasn't he?" he nodded, over the description. "It seems more as if these boys that have blazed trails through this country would do the same thing, they'd be better off. A chunk of land anywhere in this country is a good bet now. We'll have rails here from the coast in a year. Better freeze onto a couple of lots here in Hazelton, while they're low. We'll plumb the sites in ten years. Natural place for a city, Bill. It's astonishing how the settlers is coming."

For the first time Hazel felt a quick shrinking from the North, an awe of its huge, silent spaces, which could so easily engulf thousands such as they and still remain a land untraced.

Hazel gets a terrifying glimpse of the ruthless way of the wilderness. She learns that the great wide spaces of the north are merciless to those who make mistakes. How she learns the lesson is told in the next installment.

LONG ISLAND AND NEW YORK

Stretch of Breeze-Swept Sand Has Been Made to Meet the Demands of Every Class.

Long Island is the safety valve and salvation of New York. It is hard to see how the big city could get through a summer without this hundred miles of breeze-swept sand, which it can reach in a few minutes by bridge or tube or ferry, writes Niskan.

It is a matter of endless admiration how Long Island has been made to meet the needs of New Yorkers of every taste and income. It has cheap beaches, where anyone may get a swim for a quarter, and exclusive beaches where $10,000 a year is regarded as poverty. It has sport beaches full of cafes and music, and quiet beaches, where old ladies knit on shady porches. It has millionaire suburbs from which the many are ingeniously excluded; and middle-class suburbs with their neat little cottages, looking like advertisements out of paint catalogs stuck primly in the middle of correct little lawns; and suburbs for those who have just enough money to get out of town in the summer. Most of these latter are situated in the lagoon district between Rockaway beach and the island proper. They stand on stilts in the shallow water. They are wide green salt meadows. They are unappetized, for the most part, but painted into soft grays and purples by the sea air. They are alive with children and stout fishermen with long poles decorate all the wharves, while the narrow channels between the houses are full of rowboats and little launches. There is more picture and color in this bit of Long Island than in all the rest of it put together.

Made 10,000 Shark Hooks.

The government is going in for shark fishing, but not as a sport, however. It is going after this aquatic monster that the skins of the sharks may be tanned and used as a substitute for leather.

The experiment is now under way, and the man who has given Uncle Sam a leg over the fence, as it were, is J. W. Fordham, a New London, Conn., artisan, whose blacksmith shop is in the vicinity of picturesque Shaw's Cove, for in that little smithery 10,000 shark hooks were made in three days for the United States government.

Mr. Fordham signed the contract and was allowed thirty days in which to complete the order. By keeping his force working day and night he was able to ship the entire consignment to the government agents in New York in little more than half the time called for in the contract.—Marine News.

Keep Smiling.

Best advice of all is contained in the last words of the chorus of a popular song: "Smile—smile—smile!" However, you must smile from the heart, not merely twitching facial muscles mechanically, but flashing a message of friendliness and jollity from the heart.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Philippines Population.

Government officials recently estimated the population of the Philippine Islands at slightly more than 9,500,000. It seems more as if these boys that have blazed trails through this

DOG IS CAUSE OF LONG LITIGATION

Pup Bit Chicago Lad, Thus Carving His Name in Court Records.

RUNS ALONG 8 YEARS

Canine Has Long Since Passed Away, but His History Is Written Permanently and Expensively in Court Annals.

Chicago.—Eight years ago a nameless dog bit Willie Herzog. The dog has long since gone to the place where biting dogs go, but his history as well as that of Willie is written permanently, voluminously and expensively in the Cook county court records. The final entry was made recently by Judge Tutthill at a special holiday session in the Circuit court.

To begin at the beginning immediately after Willie had been attacked by the dog Charles Albrecht was charged with being the owner of the animal and was sued for damages in the municipal court. Despite his denial of ownership Mr. Albrecht, after a trial of three days, was assessed $75 damages and costs of $23.50. Mr. Albrecht paid the bill near the date of the first anniversary of the dog bite.

Makes Perjury Charge.

Mr. Albrecht began to check up the 100 pages of testimony in the case and declared that Mrs. Mary Herzog, mother of Willie, had committed perjury because she had sworn that Willie was at home for a period after the accident and Mr. Albrecht's inquiry indicated he was in school all the time.

Mr. Albrecht visited the state's attorney. After some consideration a high salaried assistant decided there was ground for a perjury prosecution and sent the case to the municipal court.

A highly paid judge, an assistant prosecutor and a clerk turned their attention to the matter and after due time a warrant was issued for Mrs. Herzog. She was arrested, a hearing was had and Mrs. Herzog was discharged.

Round Three Begins.

Mrs. Herzog then started round three by beginning suit against Mr. Albrecht, charging malicious prosecution. There were more judges seen, more papers served and more motions heard. There were delays and continuances until one day recently when the case went to trial. A jury was sworn and numerous witnesses heard. After four days, the taking of evidence was completed.

Among the witnesses called to testify in the case were a judge, two assistant prosecutors and the court reporters who took the testimony in the original case.

After the evidence was all in Judge Tutthill took the case from the jury and ordered it dismissed.

"And they're asking what's the matter with our judicial procedure," remarked a lawyer who has watched the eight years' proceedings.

Convict Picks Prison Lock

Storm Drives Man Back After He Had Effected His Escape.

Columbia, Mo.—The second jail delivery here in two weeks took place the other night. On Dec. 28 Francis Branham, Irvy Conley, Fred Scott, Byron Evans and a negro broke jail. All were captured next day. Evans had no shoes when he escaped and his feet were frozen so badly that it was necessary to amputate one of them.

Scott picked a lock on the cage section of the jail and went to the upper story, where he picked the lock on the cell occupied by Branham and Conley.

They removed bricks from the outer wall and Scott walked four miles down the "Katy" track with the other men, but was turned back by the blizzard and crawling in through the wall picked the lock and let himself back into the cell section of the jail. Branham and Conley have not been caught.

Shot Deer From Bed.

Portland, Me.—Dr. Fred O. Orcutt, who was staying at Oak Point Camp, Me., was awakened one morning by a noise. Rising on his elbow he saw a buck through the window of the cabin. He picked up his gun and shot the deer while still lying in bed.

Loved Him So Much She Killed Him.

Chicago.—Mrs. Jennette Wall, arrested for the murder of her husband, Scott Wall, declared she killed him because she "loved him too much to permit him to be faithless."

Will Observe Humane Week

Civic Committee of Woman's Literary Club Have Made Arrangements to Observe the Week of April 15th.

Through the efforts of the Civic committee of the Woman's Literary Club, arrangements are being made to observe the week of April 15th as Humane Week, and everyone is requested to assist in this work. It is the request of the Red Star Animal Relief and the American Humane Association that the week of April 15th, be observed throughout the country, and Plymouth, as in all good movements, desira to be in line in this noble work.

Superintendent C. F. Reeb has kindly consented to observe, "Be Kind to Animal Week" in the school, and during that week several bird houses will be erected by the manual training class. The boy scouts will also lend a helping hand in making the week a success, and the pastors and Sunday-schools of the various churches will observe Sunday, April 21st. The Red Star Animal Relief is doing a wonderful work in this great war in caring for the injured horses and dogs that are doing such good work on the battle front.

Walter Dyer in a recent article in the Red Cross magazine, says that it is estimated that 10,000 dogs are in use by the various armies at war in Europe. How many have lost their lives in service no man knows. The military dogs are no hobby, their usefulness has been amply demonstrated. In Europe they are in use in the main for three purposes, as ambulance assistants and searchers out of wounded, as scouts and messengers and as sentries. To a small extent they are used as ammunition carriers, as well, while terriers have been employed to rid the trenches of rats.

There are hundreds of instances where dogs have saved the lives of wounded soldiers during the present war. The dog can do more than man can do, for he can dash swiftly through shot and shell to a position where it would be sure death for man to go. He can find the wounded by his superhuman sense of smell, distinguishing the living from the dead. He can bear water and restoratives to the stricken soldiers, and then by bringing back a helmet or other objects, inform his masters of the wounded man's presence, and then lead them there when it is safe to go.

The horses are also doing an important work in the present war, and we should all try and do what we can for the Red Star Animal Relief, for this society is helping to care for the injured animals.

A Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John Hix Celebrate Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary.

On Sunday, March 17th, Mr. and Mrs. John Hix celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their farm home, three and one-half miles north of Wayne. A bountiful three-course dinner was served to forty friends and relatives. Their son, Ralph, was unable to be with them, as he is in training at Camp Kearney, California. Eleven grandchildren and four great grandchildren were present. Friends were there from Detroit, Dearborn, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor, Plymouth and Clarkston. Mr. and Mrs. Hix have resided on this farm their entire married life, except one year they lived in Plymouth. One remarkable circumstance is that Mr. Hix is the fifth of a family of nine to celebrate their golden wedding day. The afternoon was spent in social intercourse, and the guests departed at an early hour, leaving a purse of gold and other remembrances and wishing the aged couple many happy returns of the day.

A Communication

Mr. Editor:—

Being the time has come for our annual election, I would like to make some suggestions through the columns of your valuable paper, to voters of the township of Plymouth. In the first place each voter should consider it his duty to be at election and vote, it being the time when we need an expression of the voters to know what they want, and to vote means for improvements. The highway fund and improvements are always considered at that time. Since being nominated for commissioner, I have made a canvas among the farmers to know how they felt about building some State award road, and I was surprised to learn how much in favor they all were of building such roads.

I was doubly surprised to hear the liberal offers of cash and gravel that these farmers offered, without even being asked to donate, the only restriction being made on such donations being where they were to be applied. This fact shows that each giver feels that they ought to derive some personal benefit from said donation, thus trying to build one and one-half miles of State improved road in the town.

It would be impossible to please all. Trying to adopt a plan which would please the majority, I would offer the suggestion that we begin at the corporation of Plymouth and build one-half mile of State improved road on the three principal roads leading out of Plymouth. As far as I can learn, this suggestion would prove satisfactory with everyone. I do not feel at this datelike making public, the offers I have had from farmers to boost the good road problem; but am at liberty to state I have had some very generous ones, for which I render my personal thanks. As for my own offer, I feel at liberty to make it public at this time. If the town will gravel two miles of road this year, beginning at my north line, coming toward town, I will give the gravel for one mile free of charge. I have only one suggestion more, first and last, come and vote.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Favorite for Colds

TODAY'S REFLECTIONS

Good morning, President Conner.

Also members of the new commission.

Got your Easter hat?

Get ready to plant a war garden.

The seed catalogues are just as alluring as ever in spite of the high cost of paper.

Town meeting day next Monday.

There is bound to be some disappointed ones.

We are worried over whether our war garden this summer will be considered a non-essential industry or not, if the onion sets don't begin to shoot early.

There is a couple in Wayne county asking for a divorce, who have been married for sixty years. It seems they might have dwelt a little longer in the state of matrimony, if only to keep the home fires burning.

A Bilious Attack

When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter.—Adv't.
