

SAYS SCHOOL IS JUSTIFIED

Judge Hulbert Resents The Attack Being Made On Training School

Judge Henry Hulbert, veteran member of the Wayne county prolate court, does not like the publicity that the Wayne County Training school is receiving and he frankly told a committee from the board of supervisors so the other day.

"It is easy enough to sit here and find fault," declared Judge Hulbert. "It is easy to say the institution does not justify itself from a dollars and cents standpoint. But I think I know the situation in a little more detail.

"I handle in Probate Court the children that go to the Wayne County Training School. I know that 70 per cent of our criminals come from this level of sub-normal children. I wonder what the expense of non-care for them would be to Wayne County?

"This training school represents a new idea. Before our school," all others were simply housing institutions. We try to take these children coming from the courts and the schools, and train and adjust them so they can support themselves peacefully in society.

"During the six years we have been operating, we have sent out 527 boys and girls. So far, only a few have drifted into any form of idleness. On that we base our case.

"We could operate a merely housing institution cheaper than our school. But with that, you would have to support most of these boys and girls all their lives. Which is cheaper in the long run?"

Dr. Haskell denied many families are being supported at the school, as charged. He said the present population is 667 boys and girls, averaging from 15 to 16 years old. He said with a mental age below 10. He explained the large number of carpenters, farmers and other workers listed as being teachers to instruct the inmates in trades. The average cost of meals, he declared, is 8 cents a person. The Lincoln car operated at the school, he claimed was purchased with money.

"The school was built originally with the proceeds from a $2,000,000 bond issue approved by the people," explained Mr. Alexander. "The supervisors called the institution into being because they wanted to do something to correct the feeble-mindedness rampant on every hand.

"We couldn't get our feeble-minded children in jail, even though we wanted to, because there was no place for them. And we didn't want to put them there to associate with imbeciles, epileptics and paralytics.

"Since the school has been opened, feeble-minded children have practically disappeared from our streets.

"Such a crime as that terrible one at Ypsilanti could hardly have happened in Wayne County because those children would have been in school.

"Members of the board are convinced there is no waste at the school. It is just as cheap to maintain children in light and beauty as it is in squalor.

"Mrs. Beattie, a member of the board of control, made a similar declaration.

Mr. Fisher, while talking about Eloise, said he used married persons wherever possible, the same as at the training school, because it prevented scandals.

Eloise, he said, probably will be taken to the limit this winter, when the committee adjourned until Monday.

District President At W.C.T.U. Meeting

The Women's Christian Temperance Union met Thursday, September 22, at the home of the Misses Polham and had a pleasant surprise when the District President, Miss Elizabeth Irwin, of Strathmore unexpectedly appeared on the scene.

Mrs. Irwin has visited many missions during the summer and her talk was full of interest as she told of the efforts put forth by the unions for increasing the membership of the W. C. T. U. as an example of the influence of the shut-in members she told of one lady who could only move from bed to chair, yet who not only kept up her own dues but also paid the dues for five others, thus adding to the treasury and increasing the membership of the union. An amusing play, "The Windfall," was presented by Mesdames Lauffer and Todd and was greatly enjoyed by all.

The next meeting will be the annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Harry Mack on Mill street, Thursday, October 27. Reports of both state and district conventions will be given at this meeting. It is hoped that the president and several other members will be able to attend these conventions.

Miss Gladys Schroder has returned to Ann Arbor for her senior year at the University.

Presbyterians To Celebrate 100th Birthday In Feb.

One of the oldest organizations in Plymouth is the Presbyterian church. It came into being at a meeting held in the home of one Ira Brunson on February 23rd, 1833, and has continued to function since that time.

The congregation is preparing to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its organization in February 1933. A full week February 19th to 26th, inclusive will be devoted to this anniversary. A committee with Raphael Metcalf as general chairman is expected to bring to Plymouth several former pastors of this church, some of the outstanding leaders in the U. S. A. and many former members and friends of the Plymouth church.

CHURCHES CAN FOR RALLY DAY

Methodists, Presbyterians And Baptists To Arouse Church Spirit

Rally Day will be observed in the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches on Sunday, October 2nd. For many years the various church organizations have experienced a lessening of activity and attendance during the summer months. The setting apart of a Sunday in autumn, when a special effort is made to arouse fresh interest and begin the work of the year with enthusiasm has proven to be of real value in the conduct of church work. This year the three local churches mentioned above have decided on the plan of a rally day. They are uniting their forces to secure the best results. Interesting programs have been arranged for the services in these churches next Sunday and every organization hopes to approach its maximum strength.

The church through its services of worship, its Sunday school and all associated activities, continues to offer a real contribution to moral and spiritual life. Regularity of attendance is an important factor in the securing of these benefits.

PREVENT FIRE URGES STATE

Fire Prevention Week Dates Are Set For October 8th To The 15th

City officials of Plymouth urge strongly proper observance of Fire Prevention week, October 8 to 15, believing that by doing so many of the fire dangers of the fall and winter can be done away with.

Plymouth has fortunately escaped any serious fire losses in recent years. In fact the number of serious fires here have been exceedingly small, due chiefly to the organization of a splendid fire department and an unexcelled water supply.

But about every building there is often an accumulation that results in fire. Old electric wiring is another source of danger. Hazards of this nature are the objects of special attention during fire prevention week.

In the United States in 1931, almost one-half billion dollars was lost to property. 10,000 lives were lost, 6,000 being women and children. In addition, fire closes factories, throws men out of work and does incalculable harm throughout the nation. It was pointed out.

So to aid this year in the national fire prevention campaign which is held every 10th year annually, the local group will carry the program chiefly to the schools. There will be short talks on fire prevention to assembly groups, inspection by the students of their homes by official blinks which will be given to the children and returned to school authorities, school inspection by firemen and short talks put out by the children.

To educate adults programs will be presented at luncheon clubs and posters will be placed in factories and public places.

Plymouth Branch Of Needlework Guild Working For Prize

The Plymouth branch of the Needlework Guild of America is working hard for the Newberry prize table, Mrs. R. E. Cooper, president of the Plymouth branch has just received a letter from Mrs. Truman H. Newberry of Detroit announcing the membership contest for the first two weeks in October. That branch of the Needlework Guild in Michigan which shows the greatest proportionate gain in members between October 1st and the close of National Membership Week, October 15, will receive the Newberry Prize Table. That means 100 new articles for the Fall gathering, so the Plymouth Guild is planning to work hard.

A gift of two new garments makes any Plymouth citizen a member of the local guild. Men may become members. All of the garments stay in Plymouth and are given to Plymouth's needy.

See if you are in doubt about what you want your gift to be, see the guild exhibit arranged by the local merchants for Thursday, Paul Hayward, Cal Simons, the Goldstein company, Blunk Ross, and the Esther Shop have their guild windows ready for inspection.

RED CROSS IN PLEA FOR AID

Plymouth Officials Ask For Clothing To Be Used Here

The Red Cross drive that has been an annual event at Plymouth for many years past will again be made in the near future, and in the meantime it is the intention of our Red Cross workers to supplement the present welfare work of our city by helping dependent families to secure necessary clothing for themselves and their children to get through the coming winter. An authority on the present welfare situation in our city makes the statement that more clothing will be needed this winter in Plymouth than ever before and if ever the services of the Red Cross were needed in helping to alleviate present conditions, they are needed right now.

With this in mind the Plymouth branch of the Red Cross has been able to secure necessary material to make up garments that will be necessary in clothing the welfare families, and in the next issue of the Mail we hope to be able to tell the residents of Plymouth where we will locate our workrooms and where any articles of clothing which any of our friends may wish to give to these needy same may be brought to our work headquarters, where they will be turned over to the local welfare committee for distribution.

It is necessary that some of our Plymouth ladies help in the making of the garments in this Red Cross work by knowing the loyalty of most of our Plymouth women to the Red Cross, we feel sure there will be no lack of workers in this much needed emergency. It will be much appreciated if any lady who can give a few hours of her time to helping out in this Red Cross work will call Phone 175 and get all the details.

City's Welfare Needs Decrease Since Summer, City Manager Tells Members Of Rotary Club--Clothing Is Present Need

While other communities are having difficulty in raising sufficient funds to care for their welfare burden, Plymouth is not using up the amount that the city commission set aside for welfare purposes. This was the declaration made last Friday by City Manager Henry Cookingham at the meeting of the Rotary club where he had been invited to speak by Supt. George Smith, chairman of the program committee.

"Some time ago the commission made a monthly allotment of $700 to be used in the payment of those who have been forced through unemployment to appeal for public assistance. At no time have the requests exceeded an average total of over $500. Of this amount practically all of it is paid out in the form of wages," said Mr. Cookingham.

The city has worked out a plan whereby everyone able to work is required to do something in return for the money paid for their support. In fact the system has done away with the "dole" feature entirely and people are paid in cash for labor in most cases.

"We have fixed an average wage of 25 cents per hour and we find that practically all of the men who have been unable to secure other employment are glad to work for the city at this wage. Of course the work that we have about the streets, the cemetery and parks is not sufficient to provide all with employment and it has been a real pleasure to find that such concerns as the M. G. Co. and other local industries have gone out of their way to employ some of our unemployed men.

O. K., MR. AVERILL, BUT!

In a recent issue of the splendid Birmingham Eccentric, Editor George Averill, who is one of Michigan's most devoted fishermen, advocates a fishing license for everyone who takes a rod or old cane pole to the bank of a lake or stream for the purpose of trying to land a fish or two. He believes that a general rod license is necessary for the purpose of perpetuating fish life in Michigan.

His belief is only partly true. A rod license, no matter how much revenue it returned to the state, could never overcome the damage that is done to Michigan each winter by the hundreds and thousands of "natives" who cut holes through the ice, spit tobacco juice and "harpoon" any kind of a fish that might swim under the shack-covered hole.

Why Michigan permits spearing to go on unmolested is one of the great mysteries of the day. While these "harpoon throwers" are supposed to spear only certain kinds of fish, northern Michigan natives laughingly tell you that this legal restriction is just "bunk," and that any good fish that comes within spearing distance is taken.

One cannot help but wonder how it is that there are any fish left at all in northern lakes and streams—especially if you have ever driven by these lakes in the winter time and noted the hundreds of fishing shacks that cover every one of them.

Northern Michigan, with only few exceptions, is now existing entirely on the tourist business and the majority of the tourists come to Michigan to fish. It is highly important to that part of the state that the tourist business be developed to the fullest extent, but they are doing the very thing that sooner or later will take the bread right out of their mouths. Already there is a pretty firm belief existing in neighboring states that fishing is much better in Canada, Minnesota, New York and Wisconsin than in Michigan. All one has to do to confirm this fact is but read the great magazines that are devoted exclusively to fishing and hunting. They tell the story of our greed and shiftlessness. And northern natives jokingly tell the story of our slaughter of fish life through the ice.

Conservation department officials, including the director of that department who has made a study of this situation, are bitterly opposed to the law which permits spearing through the ice, but the state for some unknown reason permits this shameful practice to continue.

One of the reasons given in past years for the continuance of the "harpoon law" is the contention that northern Michigan people must spear fish to live on during the winter. That is more just plain "bunk." If the state desires to enable northern Michigan natives to catch a few fish during winter time for the table, why not permit them to catch say a limit of 15 perch per day, but strictly prohibit the spearing of any kind of fish or the taking of any other kind of fish by hook or line? That will answer the native demand for fish food.

Northern Michigan produces but a small fraction of the revenues that go to support the conservation department or conserve wild life in Michigan, but on the other hand it has been able to sponsor legislation which nullifies all the good that the conservation department and real Michigan sportsmen do.

Yes, Mr. Averill, when Michigan refuses to permit spearing through the ice, The Plymouth Mail will be glad to endorse any revenue plan you may suggest for perpetuating fish life in Michigan, but until that time every penny raised by a rod license for such a purpose would be absolutely without benefit. You might as well take the money and dump it in the middle of the ocean as for any good it would do fishing in Michigan as long as the state permits spearing through the ice.

WHO PAYS WHEN UNCLE SAM PAYS?

You hear and read much these days about the government—the government should pay this or the government should pay that. Some say "Uncle Sam has got the money, let him dig." Others declare that there should be no hesitation about the government paying off the soldier bonus—a sum of money not due to be paid for many years to come.

When you hear gents standing on the street corner orating from morning until night about the government spending this or that or paying this or that, just keep in mind the fact that every cent the government pays out comes directly out of YOUR pocket.

The government has but two ways to get money, one is to borrow, the other is to tax. When the government borrows money, that money has got to be paid back some time and when it is paid back it must come from a tax that is paid out of YOUR pocket. YOU are the government if you pay a cent of tax of any kind. You are going to pay every cent that the government spends—don't let anyone fool you about that. If you feel especially flush with money and believe that you have got a lot of it to spare, then possibly it is proper for you to talk about the government spending money—because it is your money that the government is spending. It is a pretty good thing for you to always remember that when Uncle Sam spends, YOU PAY. The government is our agency for handling public business, that's all.

THE "PAP" BOYS

It is an interesting sidelight on the recent Michigan congressional primary campaign to note that the candidates of both majority parties who shouted the loudest and longest for the immediate payment of the cash bonus to the soldiers were the heaviest losers. The candidates who supported the contention of President Hoover that the bonus should not be paid before it is due, were the candidates who won. This fact merely tends to prove that the vast majority of the voters of the United States are not in favor of special class legislation and that they believe others who are in distress are just as much entitled to consideration as those who were called to military service. The action of the "bonus group" within the ranks of the American Legion has not been of benefit to a very worthy patriotic organization.

SUGAR BEETS

Michigan sugar beets broke into print more emphatically the other day than for many years past. It was all due to the thoughtfulness of Senator Chester Howell of Saginaw who wanted to emphasize to President Herbert Hoover the importance of the tariff law to this state. Senator Howell, a member of the Michigan publisher delegation invited to see the President, carried with him three big sugar beets that were shown to official Washington. Due to the new tariff law, Michigan sugar beet growers will this year be paid something like ten millions of dollars, Mr. Howell told the President. The Saginaw valley is one of the greatest sugar beet growing sections of Michigan. Editor Howell of the Chesaning Argus gave it more advertising in one brief minute than it could buy with hundreds of thousands of dollars.

READING BIG TREES

The big trees of California, three hundred and fifty feet, or more, high, have for a long time been subject to the scrutiny of experts who wanted to learn all about them. One of these trees when felled revealed its age in the number of ring growths on the end of the main log. It was not less than thirty-five hundred years old. Quite a respectable age for a tree, or anything else, for that matter.

Let us see. That tree was around a thousand years old when Rome was founded. It was approaching the end of its second thousand when Christ was born.

The battle of Hastings occurred in 1066 A. D. The tree was then a tall and vigorous adult of nearly 2,500 years.

This information makes us of today feel very young. Further investigation revealed that the tree had passed through at least twelve hundred consecutive years, revealed by the width of the annual rings in one place. This would make our occasional wet summers modest by comparison with that long wet stretch of time antedating the Middle Ages.

The big trees are confined to one area of California. The problem of their size remains unsolved; but big as they are, they have a history, and this history, largely, can be read.

Men too leave "rings" in their lives, not charted on their frames, but memorable to those who could for a little time see beneath the bark and read the unwritten feelings, the wordless signs of character.

VILLANELLE FOR AUTUMN

Autumn envies not the spring,
Autumn with her purple moods
Seen in shadows deepening;

Covets not those hours that sing
When the bloom is on the woods,
Autumn envies not the spring.

Starry asters lingering
Match the purple of her moods
And her shadows deepening.

Filmy brush-smoke watering
Vells her leafless solitude—
Autumn envies not the spring.

Mounds of swelling stormclouds
fling
Violet shadows on the woods,
Purple shadows deepening.

Gone that madcap burgeoning
Of a young year's floral floods:
Autumn envies not the spring.

Comely as a grackle's wing,
Penalve as a bill, she broods—
Marks the shadows deepening,
Autumn envies not the spring!

TIME VERSUS MONEY

Time is money. Turn it round about, and you get a precious truth—money is time. I think of it on these muddled mornings, as I come down to find a glorious fire crackling and leaping in my study. Suppose I were so poor that I could not afford that handsome blaze, how different the whole day would be! Have I not lost many and many a day of my life for lack of the material comfort which was necessary to put my mind in tune? Money is time. With money I buy for cheerful use the hours which otherwise would not in any sense be mine; nay, which would make me their miserable bondsmen. Money is time, and heaven be thanked, there needs so little of it for this sort of purchase. He who has overmuch is wont to be as badly off in regard to the true use of money, as he who has not enough. What are we doing all our lives but purchasing, or trying to purchase, time? And most of us, having grasped it with one hand, throw it away with the other.

WOMEN ARE BIG EATERS OF TODAY

"Women are cultivating curves, and men are reducing," according to H. V. Dale, veteran dining-car steward of the Canadian National Railways' on completing 20 years of serving meals to passengers between Montreal and Boston.

"Women's ideas of eating," he declares, "have undergone a complete change since the vogue for curves came in. They have become 'quantity eaters' and are topping off hearty meals with large servings of rich foods. Men, on the other hand, are beginning to reduce, choosing their meals with a caution that is almost finicky. Saddest blow of all, they are forsaking the traditional coffee for tea, while women are leaving tea for coffee."

"POLITICO-LEGIONAIRE"

Demands of the "politico-Legionaire" that the United States government pay him his bonus, as set forth in the American Legion resolution adopted at Portland, Oregon, are beyond consideration at this stage in our national economic system. This newspaper has often declared that, as far as the "spoils" of war are concerned, the soldier always gets the smallest end of it.

We often have lamented the lack of consideration shown returned veterans by the modern business and industrial world in providing them with jobs; but that condition is true not only of our own generation—for every post-war period brings into existence a similar final ingratitude of the possessors of wealth on battlefields. There is a time for the payment of funds to our soldier-veterans—part of it has been acknowledged in bonuses already paid, and the remainder must wait until the funds are available. President Hoover reveals high courage in his frankness to the American public upon the subject of a soldier bonus payment. The best thought of the American Legion is probably with him, too.—George Averill in The Birmingham Eccentric.

BING! RIGHT ON THE NOSE

A delegation of county publishers, all sorted, hand-picked and graded by George R. Averill, Birmingham newspaper man, have just returned from Washington as the goodwill ambassadors of the President. They want to obtain a close-up view of Herbert Hoover and the new Republicanism. Like the wise men of old, they brought presents with them, three large sugar beets. One was presented to President Hoover, another to Senator Vandenberg and the third to Secretary of Commerce Roy Chapin. The game then was how to get rid of the beets without appearing ungrateful. Carrying around three large sugar beets at a Presidential reception and retaining your composure isn't any pleasure, with everything that's laid at the door of the Republican party.—George Neal in The Orion Review.

Animals Say The Winter Is Going To Be Long and Hard

The birds and beasts say it's going to be a long, hard winter, beginning early and lasting late.

Their message was delivered to John W. Ireland, curator of the Belle Isle Zoo, in a language he professes to understand perfectly, by the critters who inhabit his island domain.

Incidentally last Friday was the first day of Fall.

Nature warns the birds and animals of cold weather coming; by their actions, the dumb creatures warn Curator Ireland; the curator warns the newspapers in tones of positive conviction, and the newspapers pass the word to you for what it's worth.

"They never fail to guess right," Ireland declared, recalling last season's prediction of an open winter by his charges, which was 100 per cent correct.

would be looked upon with favor. But the reverse is true.

They were promised payment by the government in 1946 and it is assumed that they will be paid at that time. If a man has a note which calls for a specific amount that will be due in thirteen years, hence, and without interest in the meantime, it is rather unjust to insist that he pay it now whether he is financially able to do so or not. If he were able to and did pay the full amount, he would lose the interest on the face of the note between the time he paid it and the time it became due in fact. Why should he?

To the great majority this demand seems to lack both fairness and patriotism. We wonder if those members of the American Legion who have notes and mortgages coming due some time in the future would relish the idea of being compelled to pay them at once, plus a large additional amount, especially if they were in no condition to pay. We imagine their outcry would at least equal their clamor for the bonus. The principle is the same. They want today what they have coming in 1945 plus the interest from now until then from Uncle Sam who is in no condition to pay.—C. H. Hemingway in The Ann Arbor Tribune.

Duck Hunters Are Ready For Opening Of Season Saturday

Plymouth duck hunters are ready for the opening of the season at noon on Saturday. Many expect to go to Wild Fowl bar, others over near Monroe and some expect to tie to the northlands.

But it is a good year to look out for the game warden because of the fact that the federal government has placed four species of wild ducks, the Wood Duck, Ruddy Duck, Bufflehead or Butterball, and the Elder Duck on the "forbidden game" list.

The Ruddy Duck and Bufflehead (butterball) have been added to the list of completely protected birds by the Federal authorities, but it is hoped that a year of protection will result in sufficiently greater abundance of these little ducks to warrant a future open season.

Michigan regulations have been made to conform to the Federal requirements since the state does not have authority to relinquish protection given any migratory bird by the Federal Government.

Elder ducks are so rare in Michigan that hunters who fear unintentional violation of the game laws need worry little on their account, but the other protected ducks are fairly common migrants during October and hunters will look carefully before they shoot.

Realizing that it is not always easy to identify flying ducks under hunting conditions, the Game Division of the Conservation Department has issued comparative descriptions of protected ducks and birds that are legal game. The descriptions follow:

Bufflehead All "butterballs" have large puffy heads, short, narrow bills, and at least some white showing in the wing in flight. They are most easily identified by the sooty or black and white coloration, and especially on the white marking just back of the eye. A similar marking is found in the wooded Merganser drakes, the smallest of the "fish ducks," which differ by having a longer and more slender bill, a crested head, and a white bar on the side just in front of the wing.

Ruddy Duck The Ruddy duck differs from the "butterball" in being lighter colored, either grayish, reddish or brownish-gray color. It has a very thick neck but only slightly puffy head. The beak is usually gray or bluish and slightly upturned, but shaped quite like the beaks of the bluebills. In addition to its small size, the Ruddy is recognized most easily by the large amount of white on the lower part of the head (cheek) contrasting with the dark cap. In winter plumage (also females and young in first year) Ruddy ducks are brownish-gray color, with silvery gray breasts and flanks. The crown is dark, nearly black in drakes which have the whitest faces. The females and young are not so contrastingly marked and show a streak running backward from the bill through the white area just below the eye. Much of the time these ducks swim with their tall feathers pointing straight up instead of close to the surface of the water, as is the usual position for most ducks.

Wood Duck When jumped from ponds or wooded streams, their favorite habitats, wood ducks frequently give their squeaky, plaintive calls, and this alone is sufficient warning to experienced hunters to "hold their fire." Wood ducks also decoy in upon marshes without calling, and then identification is possible by means of certain peculiar behavior, color and shape.

Full-plumaged drake wood ducks are easily identified by the white throat which extends upward as two bars on each side of the head and neck, contrasting strongly with the greenish-black crested head. The upper part of the drake appear nearly black and the underparts chiefly white.

The female or "hen" wood duck is grayish brown but lacks the streaks and spots of the flanks, head, and upper parts which identify as legal game such ducks as teal, mallards, and mallards. The white throat and wide white ring about the eye are found in no other native duck.

Wood duck heads appear very large, the neck short, and the tail seems long and thick. More than heads while in flight, and no other Michigan duck has the silver edge to the outer flight feathers—a field mark that shows at a great distance. The Game Division suggests that hunters can become better acquainted with these ducks by visiting the University, Michigan State College and local museums which have mounted specimens or study skins of these species. In a few places such as the Belle Isle Zoo and the W. K. Kellogg Bird Sanctuary near Augusta, live birds may be observed. At the State Game Farm near Mason wood ducks may be seen but no buffleheads or ruddy ducks are kept in captivity.

Prisons Educate Crooks - Declares Captain Denniston

"The prisons of today make criminals faster than 700 policemen can arrest them. What the inmates don't know about crime before they enter, they learn before they leave."

This indictment of the modern penal system in the United States was one of the high-lights of an address by Captain Edward Denniston, superintendent of the Detroit House of Correction at Plymouth, before the Birmingham Rotary Club at its regular meeting in the Community House last Monday noon.

Prisoners are fed there all they can eat at a cost of slightly less than 7 cents per person per meal. The inmates raise and can all the fruits and vegetables they use, besides enough in addition to supply several other Detroit City department institutions.

Complete tabulations of the vote for the Democratic nomination for state representative in the Fifth Wayne County district, which includes Plymouth, Nankin, Dearborn, Northville, Livonia and Redford townships, show that City Commissioner Frank Learned was only slightly over 200 votes back of the winner.

The successful contestant is H. Franklin Donner of Garden City who won out by a little more than 1,000 votes. Mr. Learned had 833. The third contestant ran something like 200 votes back of Mr. Learned.

Mr. Donner who has been a resident of Garden City for a number of years was a visitor in Plymouth recently calling upon a number of prominent local Democrats and other friends.

His opponent is Dr. Fisher of Dearborn who has served two terms in the state legislature. He has already started an active campaign, both Mr. Donner and Dr. Fisher realizing that this is one of those years when no one knows what is going to happen in politics.

Two reforms he recommended in the present penal system included segregation of criminals as to type and personality, and abandonment of the practice of imposing sentences for any definite length of time.

"You will see the time, or at least it is bound to come, when no judge will fix sentence for any definite period," he said. "The understanding will be that the criminal is to be imprisoned until he is fit to re-join society. As soon as that time has come, he will be released, and not before."

The modern workhouse he characterized as being, for the most part, merely a debtor's prison. "You and I might commit the same offense," he pointed out, "and you, not having the money to pay your fine, would be fingerprinted, photographed and imprisoned, whereas I might have the money, pay my fine and go scot free. It isn't right."

He described in detail some of the discipline at the Detroit House of Correction, where, he said, more prisoners are admitted each year than to Marquette, Ionia and Jackson Prisons combined.

Newspaper Is Best For Advertising

The newspaper was ruled the supreme medium for retail store advertising at a meeting at general headquarters of Sears, Roebuck & Co., at which time a comprehensive advertising policy was written and ratified by a group of district managers, store managers, sales and advertising managers and national officials.

M. C. Penticoff, Michigan district manager reports that Sears expenditures for newspaper advertising in 1930 were $5,597,088 whereas in 1931 they jumped to $7,077,068, an increase of $1,479,980 or more than 25 per cent. That the increased expenditure was evenly distributed throughout the country was shown by the fact that all except three states in which retail stores are operated shared in larger advertising appropriation.

"Although we do not belittle the efficiency of other media, our experience has taught us that the newspaper is supreme for advertising retail stores," he declared.

"Sears, Roebuck has firm favor in the newspapers of the country and appreciates the magnitude of the task they have to perform. It is grateful for the excellent service they have given, and is sure that the commodity they have to sell—advertising—is more vital and necessary now than ever before."

Maybe Mr. and Mrs. Plymouth have not yet been advised of the fact—but the cost of living is going up.

The U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics is authority for this statement. While Plymouth growers of fruits and vegetables and farmers in this locality have had the idea that the cost of living has been going down a bit every day and every week, authorities in Washington say otherwise.

The index number of wholesale commodity prices was 64.5 in July using average prices in 1926 as 100 for a basis of comparison. In August the number was 65.2. In the week ending Sept. 10 it was 65.7.

In August, 1931, the index number of wholesale price commodities was 72.1.

The bureau reports that farm products made the greatest gains in August, with prices advancing 2 1/2 per cent during the month.

Barley, corn, rye, wheat, calves, poultry, eggs, hay and peanuts all increased. Decreases were reported in the prices of cats, cows, hogs, fresh apples, lemons, oranges, leaf tobacco and onions.

Food prices as a whole increased 1 1/2 per cent during August with only canned milk and fruits, rolled oats, lamb, mutton, fresh pork, and salt lower than the month before.

Hides and leathers went up 1 1/2 per cent in August, textiles, 2 1/2 per cent. Building materials moved upward slightly.

Auto, plumbing and agricultural instruments remained at the July level. Fuel and lighting materials, drugs and fertilizers declined slightly.

However this general advance in wholesale prices has not yet been reflected in retail food prices in most cities.

In the 21 cities for which records are kept by the bureau retail food prices declined two tenths of one per cent up to Aug. 15th. This decrease was recorded in 30 of the cities while 21 showed increases, some as much as 4 per cent.

In this last group, with increases of from four to five tenths of one per cent were Washington, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Norfolk, Richmond, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, and Portland, Ore.

Dearborn Making Effort To Get Rid Of Street Hand Bills

The people of the city of Dearborn will have the opportunity to express their wishes whether or not they want to continue to receive tons of literature on their porches every day of the year.

It was decided at the council meeting yesterday to place the proposition before the voters at the coming general election to be held on November 8th. Mayor pro-tem E. G. Miller stated that in recent months the council had been besieged to do something to stop the wholesale distribution of literature on the streets and porches of the city.

He stated, "The people are sick and tired of the tons of handbills and advertisements of every nature being promiscuously thrown around the homes of this city and I don't blame them, because I for one do not like this nuisance to continue. Everyone knows not one in a thousand pieces of literature is ever read that is cast on the porches of this city."

It was also pointed out that it is not only a waste of money, but a general nuisance to have lawns, porches and vacant lots literally covered with obnoxious pamphlets of every description. Some are even obscene and immoral and not fit for the eyes of children, it was said. Beautiful lawns are trampled upon and spoiled at much inconvenience to the home owners. During the

Charles A. Sink To Run Again In 1934

Ex-Senator Charles A. Sink is a candidate for the lieutenant governorship in 1934, he stated in a letter to the Plymouth Mail this week. "From now on my hat is in the ring," he said.

"Although I was not successful in my campaign for lieutenant governor in the recent campaign, I made a clean canvass and left no stone unturned so that I can begin my 1934 campaign where I left off in this one. I am well satisfied with the results considering the conditions," he continued.

"I renewed many old acquaintances and contacted many of the state's most influential leaders who have assured me of their support. Many supported me this year but others were not able to because of prior commitments. I am anxious to begin my 1934 candidacy at this time that all my friends throughout the state may know my intentions," he added.

Mr. Sink is one candidate who came out of the primary with no sore spots. As soon as his defeat became a fact, he tendered his congratulations to his successful rival and followed this with an offer of his services to Governor Wilber M. Brucker, the successful gubernatorial nominee, and to Howard C. Lawrence, chairman of the Republican Central committee, in behalf of the whole Republican ticket from President Hoover down. Mr. Sink is a fluent speaker and a capable campaigner, so there is no doubt but that his services will be in demand.

He asked that The Mail extend his thanks to his friends about here who conducted his campaign so efficiently in this county while he was engaged elsewhere, and to the voters who so generously supported him.

Now that Mr. Sink has made known his 1934 intentions, his friends may be expected to line up behind him because they recognize that his years of public service which include six years in the state senate, four in the state house of representatives, six years as a member of the Ann Arbor Common Council, and ten years as a member of the Ann Arbor Board of Education, to mention but a few, admirably fit him for the position he will seek in 1934.

EVERETT-EATON

Miss Myrdred B. Everett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Everett of Tecumseh, who were former residents of Canton Center, was united in marriage September 28th to Arthur J. Eaton, also of Tecumseh. The marriage took place at 12 o'clock noon in the First Methodist church of Mount Clemens. The Rev. Marsh, formerly a minister at Tecumseh, read the wedding vows.

The bride and groom were attended by the bride's cousin, Miss Kathleen Jewell of this place and Elvin Fisher of South Lyon.

The bride wore a pretty ensemble of King blue silk and carried Thisman rose buds. Miss Jewell also wore a blue silk ensemble of a lighter shade and carried pink rose buds.

After a delightful luncheon and shower of rice at the "White Grill" the young couple left for Grand Rapids where they plan to spend a week, after which they will make their home in Tecumseh where Mr. Eaton is employed. They have the best wishes of their many relatives and friends.

Rotarians To Play Golf, Dine Tonight

Today's program for the Rotary club is going to be something different. Chairman George Smith of the program committee having arranged for a joint meeting with the Northville club for the evening. This afternoon Rotarians who are golf players will go over to Meadowbrook where they will play the Northville Rotarians, beginning at 2:30 o'clock.

At 7 o'clock members of the two clubs and their ladies will have dinner at the Mayflower hotel. The dinner will be followed by a keno party.

President Charles Bennett of the Plymouth Rotary club who has been in Chicago on business during the most of the present week, will be back in time to take part in all of the club affairs arranged for today.

It is expected that the joint meeting, the first arranged of the kind during the present year, will result in an exceptionally good attendance at the meeting this Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Newell were dinner guests Wednesday evening of friends in Detroit.

Court Ends Row In Salem Township

The Supreme court in a recent decision denied the right of appeal in the Salem township election controversy which has been in the limelight for several months. The failure of the high tribunal to review the proceedings brings an end to the battle that started prior to the spring elections when the township board refused to have ballots printed for the election on the grounds that the caucus results were not properly filed with the board.

The case was heard by Judge George W. Sample in circuit court when an appeal was made by Carl H. Stinberg, Jacob F. Fahrner and Burke and Burke, representing Albert Rider, then the caucus choice as a Republican candidate for supervisor, for a writ of mandamus compelling the election board to have proper ballots printed for the election. Judge Sample granted the writ.

Following the election an application was made to the Supreme court for the right to appeal by Former Supervisor Harry Athelston, Irving Johnson, Glenn Burnham, John K. Rich and Nelson Bender. It is this application that has been denied by the Supreme court.

Bubbling Springs Not Always Pure

The bubbling spring so beloved by poets and the old onion bucket so celebrated in song draw no cheers from bacteriologists at Michigan State College who state that the latter is used in wells which are very dangerous and the former may furnish contaminated water.

The distrust of the bacteriologists is based upon the results of hundreds of tests made of samples of water submitted for examination by the College department. The water supplies of both small and large cities are now amply safeguarded but the water used in farm homes is not always obtained from a safe source.

The improvement in water provided for city residents is shown by the statistics on disease which are commonly the result of using contaminated water. The death rate from typhoid fever in one Michigan city in 1900 was 37 per 100,000. The death rate from the same disease over the entire State in 1928 was 1.8 per 100,000 people. Dug wells are unreservedly condemned by the bacteriologists. Driven wells usually obtain water from the same soil strata as dug wells but the sides of the driven well are sealed and it is more difficult for surface drainage to enter the well. Curbs for both types should extend above the ground surface and the pump should be sealed in to prevent water seeping into the well around it.

Any Michigan resident who suspects the safety of their water supply can have the water tested by sending a sample to the bacteriology department at East Lansing. Complete directions for taking proper samples will be sent by the department to those requesting such information.

Fruit Cans Filled? Then Dry Your Fruit

Surplus fruits can be preserved by drying by those who lack jars to care for the fruit in the ordinary manner. Drying is one of the oldest methods of preserving fruit and the dried product has an excellent flavor if the work is properly done.

Apples, peaches, pears, and plums are dried in the same manner. The fruit should be peeled and quartered and then cut crosswise into slices one-eighth inch thick. Drop the slices into water to which a tablespoonful of salt to the gallon. This will prevent the fruit from turning brown before the drying starts.

A drier may be made from small mesh galvanized screen and strips of lath. The fruit is spread upon the drier which can be suspended over the kitchen range or any other type of stove. The pieces of fruit should be stirred or turned occasionally.

Four to six hours of drying over the stove are usually sufficient. Fruit may be dried in direct sunlight during hot, sunny days but the fruit must be protected from insects and dust.

The dried fruit must be stored in a dry place and in containers which will prevent the entrance of insects. Only small amounts of the fruit shall be stored together.

Tells Benefits Of Pere Marquette To Business of State

"Railroads today are in better shape to handle passengers, freight and contract shipments than they have ever been in since the time the first train made its initial run. Railroad equipment is better, their safety requirements and records are higher than any other means of transportation operating today. Passengers and shippers are better served at lower costs than ever before," stated T. E. Bickers to the Kiwanis Club Tuesday evening.

Mr. Bickers, an executive of the Pere Marquette railroad, was brought to Plymouth through the efforts of Dr. Luther Peck and the address proved to be one of the most interesting heard this season.

Mr. Bickers elaborated on the dependency of the American public on the railroads, telling of the great railroad bond investments held in trust for hospitals, universities and other public institutions. He told of the yearly operating expenses of the Pere Marquette road in Michigan, stating that the yearly expenditure in this state amounted to 300 millions of dollars. He stated that the Pere Marquette had more miles of track in Michigan than any other railroad and that they had properties worth at least 150 millions of dollars. Mr. Bickers explained that the P. M. was one of the public pocket book today in the largest contributing factors to Michigan and that the wise business man would take full advantage of railroad activities to protect the future of American business.

Every President of the United States has at some time visited Harper's Ferry. In fact Dr. McDonald declared Thomas Jefferson made known his intentions for the first time of becoming a candidate for the presidency while standing on a rock overlooking a beautiful valley on the west side of Harper's Ferry. Four or five daring publishers mounted this rock, but the correspondent of The Plymouth Mail heard no political ambitions proclaimed. Among those that clustered on the top of the big rock were Muri DeFoe of Charlotte, William Canfield of Howell, Chester Howell of Chesaning and the publisher from the city made famous by the Dalys.

She graduated from the Arthur Hill high school in Saginaw, her home town and received her degree at the Central State Teachers' college. Miss Spratt teaches reading and spelling. She was graduated from high school at Big Rapids and received her A. B. degree at the University of Michigan and her Master at Boston college.

The new Central Grade school teachers are: kindergarten teacher, Miss Wurster who was graduated from high school in Ann Arbor and college at the Michigan State Normal; Miss Gammell, the first grade teacher, who was graduated from high school and college in Olivet and formerly taught in Fowlerville; Miss Frantz, the second grade teacher who was graduated from high school in Big Rapids and college at the Central State Normal; Miss Sly who was graduated from Plymouth high school and Michigan State Normal and before coming back here to teach, taught in Dearborn; Miss Erleben, the sixth grade teacher who was graduated from Wyandotte high school and Michigan State Normal.

SOCCER SEASON BEGINS

If one should happen to look toward the playground while passing he would probably see a group of blue figures running hither and yonder after a ball which some lucky young woman had had the good fortune to kick. You're guessing the soccer season has opened and ambitious young women are running after the ball in a vain attempt to kick it and secure a goal for their team. Tuesday evening after school the freshman and sophomore teams battled against each other, and Wednesday the juniors and seniors practiced and elected captains for their teams.

Girls that are juniors this year have held the championship for two years and it is up to the other classes to fight and break this record.

This week after school more soccer practice will be held and the teams will be organized. As soon as this is done the tournaments are to start. They are held at noon and at night after school. Girls in Leaders' Club will officiate.

CENTRAL GRADE SCHOOL NOTES

In Miss Winster's kindergarten the enrollment in the morning and afternoon classes is so uneven that the children are being tested to find more who are eligible for the morning class.

The children in Miss Gammell's first grade are having a merry time making pumpkins, gourds and leaves with which to decorate the room. They are also making "Family Books." In the first grade class under Miss Mitchell a health report is taken every morning and the children must have clean faces and hands, and a clean handkerchief. Each child has his name fastened on his desk to aid him in writing it. Several can count to one hundred and are learning to find the pages in their readers. They are also learning how to construct sentences by the use of word cards.

Leonard Kinnear's second grade was hit by a car Tuesday noon while returning to school. He was not hurt badly and will be in school soon. Jean McGee entered Miss Weatherhead's second grade. The children have been bringing many flowers. In the class they have been making fruit baskets.

The seniors have elected the following: Kenneth Greer, president; Ernest Archer, vice-president; Geraldine Schmidt, secretary; Doris Bridger, treasurer; Rosemary Hill, student council representative; Robert Shaw and Laura Kincaid, executive board members; Kenneth Greer, Ernest Archer and Doris Bridger held the same positions last year. The senior class is proud to have them on the officer's staff during the coming year.

The sophomore class elected the following: Harold Cline, president; Ruth Schmidt, vice president; Thomas Hearn, secretary; John J. Liff, treasurer; and Jack Wilcox, student council representative. Harold Cline was also class president in the seventh and eighth grades.

The freshmen elected the following: Jeanette Bauman, president; Jack Kinser, vice-president; Lorella Sandry, secretary; and William Houtwater, treasurer.

The above class officers will officiate throughout the coming school year.

HI-Y BOYS HAVE POTLUCK DINNER

The following boys hold offices in the HI-Y club this semester: president, Melvin Blunk; vice president, Russell Stevens; secretary, Ernest Archer; treasurer, Robert Shaw; and student council representative, Donald Bronson.

Warren Bassett, Robert Champe, Vincent Forshee, Robert Gilles, Eugene Hiesler, Wesley Kaiser, Arthur Kepka, Clarence Levandowski, Oscar Luttmoser, Grant Miller, Mathew McLellan, Bill Ray, Marvin Schmidt, Arden Sackett, Harold Stevens, George Straub, Dewar Taylor, James Williams, Sanford Knapp and Russell Kinnear were recently voted into the club. They will be formally initiated at the next meeting.

Last Friday at noon hour Mr. Dykhouse, adviser, and the rest of the HI-Y boys enjoyed a potluck dinner composed of the following items: escalloped corn, escalloped potatoes, meat loaf, rolls, milk, jelly, cake, green pickles, olives, potato salad, and six watermelons. After everyone had eaten his fill, the seniors in the club were defeated by the juniors in a fast game of baseball.

OH, THESE SENIORS!

Not much midnight oil was burned at the desk in the weeks of school as is evident by the following bright remarks made by a few seniors in one of Miss Fiegl's American history classes: "Geraldine S.: 'Vasco Da Gama sailed around the Cape of Good Hope.'"

Chaire S.: "Christopher Columbus was to be ambassador to all the lands he found."

Donald R.: "Do we have to write this history test in English?"

Eleanor E.: "Constantinople was the first country to become nationalized."

Harold J. in biology: "Matter can not be destroyed or cremated."

Seniors WELCOME FRESHMAN CLASS

About one-hundred and seventy-five freshmen and seniors attended the annual Freshman Reception last Friday evening, September 23, at seven-thirty o'clock.

The speaker was president, Kenneth Greer, who addressed the freshmen and impressed upon them the importance of their freshman year as the foundation of their four years of high school work. The freshman president, Jeanette Bauman, then answered thanking the senior class for the kind and helpful advice.

Various entertainment occupied the rest of the evening. The freshmen entertained with a play in which they impersonated members of the senior class. Genevieve Neely performed two tap dances. Numbers accompanied at the piano by Miss Ford. Dancing was then in order. The music was furnished by Miss Ford, Kenneth Greer, Sidney Patton and J. D. McLean.

Ice-cream cones were served as refreshments by senior boys and girls. An enjoyable time was had by all.

Miss Erleben's fifth grade class has been making salt and flour maps of Asia. They are making little booklets and posters on the care of the teeth. Amos and Andy are the names chosen by the children of Miss Holt's fifth grade class for the spelling tests. They are studying South America. The sixth grade under Miss Pennington are making pictures to illustrate "The King of the Golden River." They have been studying and learning the parts of speech. Marvin Hank's team is ahead in spelling.

One of the simplest causes of ear pain is loose ear plugs. They may be tightened by inserting long screws of the same or even greater diameter.

HELP YOUR TEAM TO VICTORY

Any winning team must have the support of its spectators. Walled Lake is not in the Twin Valley League, so the loyal supporters who backed the team at last week's game are expected to be mightily re-enforced at the future games.

One of the main objects of high school athletics is to promote good sportsmanship, regardless of who wins or loses. If the spectators do not uphold this ideal, one great benefit of sports is lost.

Organized cheering from an enthusiastic "gallery" is one of the most important parts of the game. It is also often one of the most neglected. Plymouth has much to learn in this respect. At times the only ones cheering are the yell leaders themselves. Does this give your team added confidence, courage and ability to win the game?

A team playing before an enthusiastic capacity crowd can not help showing the best that is in it. Come on everyone who possibly can! Come out to the game this afternoon and help to beat Detroit Country Day. We can win with your support.

AD. LIB.

Good day, dear lovers of nonsense, here we are back again, bursting forth into inelegant paragraphs of this, that and the other thing.

The folks who saw last Friday's football game are still talking in awestruck whispers about that run of Manager Elmer Horvath's unprecedented, unparalleled dash after that elusive water bucket. Hero Horvath, when questioned, modestly asserted that he just pulled in his head, hitched up his pants and ran, trusting to luck and instinct to guide him to the proper spot. Well done, Mr. Horvath, well done.

In accordance with President Hoover's plans to bring back prosperity, we are taking up the campaign and are going to endeavor to prove that there is no such thing as a depression. Our theory has been partially augmented by interviews with several members of our faculty.

What do you think of the depression? The reports were as follows: "Mr. Evans: 'What is this here so called depression that everyone is talking about? It has bothered my search for elusive atoms, neutrons, cosmic rays, etc. not one whit.'"

Miss Fiegl: "A-hem! Now that you have brought before me a question, the answer to which will probably influence the course of our great and noble nation, I am at loss to find suitable words describing the situation. However, you may put me down as having noticed no depression, until I can think up a better story."

Miss Ford: "Depression? Why everything is all jake with me! Now hear it, I've got to go and have words with Mr. Bentley!"

Next week we will endeavor to secure some more of these delightful little chats on our economic situation with other personages of import around our school who, I am sure, will likewise support my claims. (And President Hoover's).

The third A and fourth B in Miss DeWaele's room are exhibiting their penmanship, and dramatizing a story in their reader.

The five B arithmetic class in Miss Hunt's room have a score of "five" on their chart. Louie Delyoon on the spelling test this day. The five B class are reading, "All Baba" and "The Open Season" for oral reading.

The spelling champions in the sixth grade of Miss Farrand's room are Billy Garrett and Iona Fleeger. The sixth B are making a map of South America.

LARGEST NUMBER OF TUITION STUDENTS FROM ROSEDALE

There are, at the present time, 175 non-residents in Plymouth schools, that is, there are 175 students who have to pay tuition. Students coming from Rosedale Gardens 2nd St., Newburg, 20; Stark, 15; Bartlett District, 14; Grandville Gardens, 13; Wadsworth, 12; Wayne County Training School, 7; and 70 from areas in Canton, Salem, Superior, Northville, Livonia, Redford, Plymouth and Nankin townships.

Four of these tuition students are in grades one to six; two are in grades seven and eight; and one hundred sixty-nine are in grades nine to twelve.

The amount of tuition paid by these students is as follows: students in the first six grades pay $55 a year; students in grades seven and eight pay $75 a year; and students in grades nine to twelve pay $84 a year.

Tuition money is not used for any certain purpose, usually for general school expenses.

Bolled down, the French argument is that you don't owe that note at the bank unless you can take that much from the pockets of some fellow you liked.

KITCH-I-TI-KI-PI SPRING FASCINATES TWO LOCAL TEACHERS

Thirty thousand, six hundred and thirty-six miles, six hundred and thirty miles through northern Wisconsin, Canada, United States, and Canada was the distance covered by Miss Lickly and Miss Fiegl this summer. The trip was started by driving through Chicago while the Democratic convention was in session.

The next place of interest was the city of Wisconsin at Madison. Upon entering the main floor of the capital building at Madison one may see eight streets leading away from the building.

A very picturesque boat trip through the Dells was enjoyed, arriving two days too early to see the show of the great and describing Rice Lake is a pretty summer resort district that was visited.

At Duluth one of the many joys of motoring was experienced. A flat tire. The streets in Duluth are terraced on a hill, all streets running in one direction and all avenues running in the other.

The enchanting, fascinating, and interesting spring of Kitch-i-ti-ki-pi, twelve miles from Manistique, Michigan, was one of the most beautiful places visited on this trip, according to Miss Fiegl and Miss Lickly. It is one of the world's largest springs. The spring is from forty to seventy feet deep and from three to four hundred feet across the top. It feeds a swift flowing stream that curls about through the dark woods like a clammy serpent. Nature built it like a kettle covered with green moss, all the scenic wonders, the spring is from forty to seventy feet deep and from three to four hundred feet across the top. "Native Forest"
Some such name is being thought of (in the few spare moments they have) by Cousins MacLean and Thompson for the parkway beautification, behind, or rather south of the fence. As the trees to arrive so far have required derricks and a musical octave of note-dandapelecticians to handle one at a time. Just like fly swatters—you can only swat one fly at a time, so here they can only swat one tree at a time.

The only trouble is, says Mildred M. W., to her little sister Marlon, is that Santa Claus may get confused with so many Xmas trees standing out so boldly.

Well the little folks need not fear about oldie Nickle getting confused as we have just compiled a renovated roster of all Gardentines, and any changes he is sure to read about in the Plymouth Mail, as he is a regular subscriber and has been for 44 years.

Base Ball Games
Last Sunday, B team split a double header, winning the first game with Fixtek Clothiers—a score of 8 to 6 and the second with almost total loss of 18 to 4 with the Hostess Cake Eaters (or Bakers.)

Now it is almost all over with the base ballers on the outside this year, and the boys are talking football and a good indoor team, including basketball.

Many church boards are kept busy these days, thinking and planning in an effort to keep finances coming in fast enough to meet all expenses. An interesting article appeared in the magazine, "Prophecy," which if read by all Christians in the churches, could help greatly in solving the financial difficulties.

There was a day when Israel was under a fearful depression. Their increase was devoured, their land failed to produce, their vines cast their fruit before the time. A curse rested upon the land.

Through Malachi it was revealed to them that the chief reason for this condition was their disregard of God's ordinance, especially in the matter of tithing. (Mal. 3:6-12.) They were robbing God and expelling His blessing at the same time.

The churches today are full of people who make much of baptism and the Lord's Supper, and shout for fundamental truths—but never pay their tithes, to say nothing of sacrificial offerings.

If God declared that the curse rested upon Israel because the tenth was unpaid, can those who live in this age of Christian privilege expect to prosper when they do not do that which was expected of a Jew under the law?

The above article is fine food for thought in these days of our depression. Don't you think so? The pastor will preach at both services Sunday. His subject at 10 a. m. is "The Devil's Devices," and at 7:30 p. m. "The Pearl of Great Price" and other parables of the Kingdom.

A hearty invitation is extended to all.

Village of Wayne
Finds Tax Money is Coming In Slowly

In Plymouth where the payment of taxes has run much higher in proportion than in any other community in Wayne county, and has maintained an average that exceeds that of nearly every other place in the state, the following article from a recent issue of the Wayne Dispatch about the tax payments in that place will be of interest:

"Taxes paid by the taxpayers of the village of Wayne to date total $40,830.06, according to a report made at the regular meeting of the village commission Tuesday night by Miss Emma John, treasurer.

This amount represents almost 50 per cent of the total taxes to be collected, the total levy for this year being $85,705.83.

"While the per cent of taxes collected thus far is below that of last year for the same period, both Miss John and the members of the commission believe that local tax collections are greater than those throughout the state and it is also believed that when the collections are completed the delinquency this year will not be any lower than last year. If as low. Last year a delinquency of about 42 per cent was shown, a certain per cent of which, however, now has been paid.

"A check of approximately $1,000 was received by the village last week from the office of the Wayne county treasurer, representing delinquent taxes which have been collected by that office.

"Members of the commission last week extended the deadline for tax payments without penalty for another 30 days, this time to expire October 15, and at which time, expectant are that most of the taxes that can be paid will be received by the treasurer. It is not believed that any further extensions will be granted to taxpayers who have not made payment on or before that time.

"As a result of the receipt of the check from the county treasurer's office, the commission was able to authorize the payment of every outstanding bill against the village, Miss Isabelle Comer, village clerk, said. Total bills paid by the commission amounted to $3,054.10.

"A motion picture was made by Commissioner Truesdell and supported by Commissioner Rollo W. Roiser that $10 be paid towards the expense of the annual flower show held last month."

WASHINGTON HIGH SPOTS

What a Number Of Michigan Editors Saw And Heard While On a Pilgrimage Recently to the Nation's Capital

By E. R. EATON

Everybody is turning their eyes to Washington these days. "Bonuses" went down there a while back to get some cash from the government. Twenty or more Michigan newspaper editors puzzled by the conflicting data sent out of Washington to the papers of this state by the press agents of both big parties decided they would go down to the fountain of all information and get the correct picture of affairs in this nation and the rest of the world. The idea was that of Publisher George Averill of the Birmingham Eclectic. Going through his mail one morning he found the usual batch of material sent to his paper from Washington, New York, Chicago and Detroit—all of it about national affairs and the depression and of such a conflicting nature that he was puzzled by the wide variance of facts presented. Knowing that every newspaper in Michigan received the same material and assuming that every publisher was just as puzzled as himself as to what to use and what not to use, he consulted with a number of them pertaining to the advisability of going direct to President Herbert Hoover and asking him a number of questions pertinent to the issues of the day.

What a bunch of weekly newspaper editors of Michigan asking the president a lot of questions? asked the editor of the Mail of Mr. Averill. "Sure, why not?" A dozen or more put the same query to Mr. Averill. The upshot of it all was that Mr. Averill had the consent of twenty or more publishers to arrange the interview with the president of the United States.

Calling to his aid Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Grand Rapids, it was not long before word came back to Mr. Averill that the Michigan publishers and enlighten them, if possible on any subject that they might ask about.

It might not be amiss at this point to say that the editor of the Plymouth Mail was the only newspaper publisher in Michigan to oppose the nomination and election of Senator Vandenberg to the United States senate. And why would this be a good time to say that our position in the matter of the most glaring political errors we ever made. The former Grand Rapids newspaper publisher in the was just curiosity, they explained. T. O. Huckle, publisher of the Cadillac News and for years one of the most dry and conservative of the stumplands of northern Michigan, announced that he was going to vote for the re-nomination of the whole business. Not a conversion to the wet cause, he explained, but just disgusted with present conditions.

Guests of some of the writers of the National Republican Committee at a luncheon, whose material for the newspapers that was partly responsible for the trip to Washington, the publishers had the pleasure of first contacting Theodore Joslin, secretary of President Hoover. Mr. Joslin is a former Washington newspaper correspondent. He served the Boston Traveler for many years before taken from his duties as a news writer by the President and made the chief executive's most intimate adviser.

A number of the Michigan publishers were keenly interested in viewing the place where the bonuses had taken place. As they stood about the streets where the trouble took place, the comment of Washington "natives" was most interesting. Needless to say that from their own official sources it was learned that Washington as a city was glad to have the "bonuses" return home. No comment was expressed as to the method used in moving the campers from the city, but all seemed to be of one accord that it was justified.

Proceeding the White House conference the editors were the guests of Senator Vandenberg and Secretary Roy Chapin at a dinner at the Willard hotel. Here it was that Senator Vandenberg told some of the intimate things of the life of President Hoover that are hidden from the public—the Hoover as only those close to him know and understand. Senator Vandenberg early in his official career had occasion to differ strongly with the president and voted against one of the chief executive's proposals. "I thought from what I had heard of the President that my criticism on the matter would end our friendly relations, but because I had differed with him he would regard me as an opponent. Late that afternoon a message came from the White House that the President wanted to see me. Convinced that he had determined to tell me personally what I feared, I went to the White House—and I am here to tell you that the interview that followed between myself and the President was one of the most delightful occasions of my public service and it fixed President Hoover in my estimation as one of the greatest men who ever served our country," said the junior Michigan senator.

The time had arrived for the interview with the President. Into the front door of the White House walked editors from the substantial little cities and communities that make Michigan such a great state, editors from rich fruit growing localities, from Zealand's tulip fields and chick farms, from Midland, from the rural communities of Eaton county, from communities made rich by the dairy industry, from Howard City, Grandville—an industrial center that manufactures many products claimed by Grand Rapids—and numerous other places—and Plymouth, the home of the largest air rifle manufacturing plant in the world. For two delightful hours President Hoover answered question after question about issues of the day that have confused not only newspaper editors, but the public at large. There was no propaganda in what he had to say, the editors wanted to know about these serious problems, and he told them frankly and clearly, without any attempt at evasion or quibbling. The information they secured was of the most authentic and never appears in the Plymouth Mail pertaining to national issues during the next few weeks, will be based upon facts and not the colored propaganda that comes from publicity outfits. In last week's issue of the Mail was a general outline of some of the issues discussed.

With President Hoover during the evening was Mrs. Hoover. The visitors were presented to President and Mrs. Hoover by Secretary Joslin, Senator Vandenberg, Secretary Chapin and Henry D. Allen, chairman of the Republican publicity committee, were also guests. Following the cordial and delightful informal reception, Mr. Averill explained the mission of the Michigan publishers. As the visitors waited a brief time for the meeting, one commented of the small number of policemen about the white house, only two being in evidence at any time during the evening. It was some two hours later when the conference ended and newspaper publishers were beset by alert Washington correspondents to tell of the visit.

Among Washington correspondents who had made a place for himself in the "great capital" is Eugene Leggett, Detroit Free Press writer. Mr. Leggett during the few years he has been in Washington, has been honored by being elected president of the Washington Press Club, one of the outstanding organizations of its kind in the entire world. He is regarded as an authority on questions of national interest. For a number of years before being sent to Washington by the Free Press he served that paper most efficiently as its representative in Lansing and it was his outstanding work in that city that led to his Washington promotion.

It might not be amiss at this time to say that Malcolm W. Binyag, editor of the Detroit Free Press, has been of greater service to President Hoover and the Republican party in Michigan than all

Garden City Saves Fruits, Vegetables For Welfare Use

A huge canning program was undertaken in Garden City this week. The goal aimed at is many thousands of jars of vegetables to be used for a worthy cause this winter.

The vegetables and the jars are being supplied by the Ford Motor Co. The vegetables are surplus produce grown in the Ford Thrift Gardens in Garden City and in nearby communities. There is a large supply available.

The village welfare committee has been informed that the Ford company will furnish enough cans to can 7200 quarts of vegetables. The actual canning has been assumed by members of all of the Parent Teachers Associations in the village.

The board of directors of the Presbyterian church has generously offered the use of the church kitchen and this has become the scene of operations.

The vegetables are to be used to furnish all school children with a hot meal each day this winter. There will be no charge for most children but those who come from families in better circumstances will be expected to pay a small sum for the meal.
