ONE NEVER KNOWS

This community was shocked and amazed last Friday when it was learned that Berg D. Moore, who for over five years had been secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, had ended his own life. Close associates knew that he had been somewhat worried over a number of matters and that he had been receiving medical treatment, but no one knew his condition was of such a nature that he had in mind the termination of his own life.

One never knows what might be the burden another is carrying. One never knows the trials and tribulations of his neighbor, even though there might be no outward signs of it—and so it was with Mr. Moore. No one apparently knew his mental distress and because of this fact his sudden passing was indeed a shock to everyone.

The young man will be greatly missed in the community. He had a clear knowledge and the right conception of his duties as the executive officer of the Chamber of Commerce. He was loyal. He was honest and he was frank. If fate had not decreed that his life should end at this time, there is no question but what a successful future was in store for him.

To Mrs. Moore the community pours out its sincerest sympathy. Every one who knew her liked and respected her and it is with regret indeed that her many friends as well as the entire city has learned that her plans for the future take her back to her old home in Indianapolis where she intends to remain. However may the sorrow of the present be turned into a future happiness that one of her delightful characteristics is entitled to.

ABOUT HUEY LONG

Newspapers carried a report the other day that Senator Huey Long had declared President Franklin D. Roosevelt to be a "liar and faker."

We have seen no denial of the report by Senator Long and therefore we assume that he was correctly quoted.

The senate has one job to do before it adjourns—and that job is to remove Senator Long from its membership. Franklin D. Roosevelt is the President of the United States. He is OUR president, irrespective of political parties or beliefs. A president of the United States is entitled to the greatest of respect. He has the same right as an individual to change his mind and to change one's mind about a question or an issue, does not make him a "liar and faker" by any means.

In these trying times it is our duty and our responsibility to give to those in high places our respect and our trust, but when one filling such an important post as a United States senator uses the language that Senator Long did against OUR President, he has clearly displayed the fact that he is not fit to occupy a place in the United States senate and if he is not removed for good and sufficient reasons, the senate of the United States is open to the severest of criticism.

MORE TABLES

Hundreds of picnic tables have been added to the large numbers that are scattered about the parkway system but visits to the park during recent Saturdays and Sundays provide plenty of evidence that hundreds of additional picnic tables could be used by visitors to the parks. To say that there were at least 200 families who used the ground covered over with paper or table cloth for their Sunday picnic dinners would be putting it at an exceedingly low estimate. We know how busy the members of the Wayne county park commission are and we know of the tremendous demands being made upon them, but if this one condition can be remedied before the summer is over, the commissioners will please a large number of people.

CHANGING TIMES

WHY PUBLIC TRUST SECRECY?

Commenting on the fact that Governor Frank Fitzgerald has made it known that the report of Attorney General Toy following the latter's investigation of the Public Trust Commission, occasioned by a series of newspaper charges, is to be kept completely apart from public records, the Grand Rapids Press very aptly refers to the fact that the Trust Commission is a state agency and that the investigation was an incident of public expense.

If there is something in the affair which the governor prefers to have forgotten as quickly as possible, as is further indicated by the Grand Rapids paper, he has made use of his assumed authority in a way that will finally result quite contrary to his anxiety. However, that fact should not prove surprising to either Governor Fitzgerald or the people of the state as almost every purpose he has had in mind has been so mismanaged and befuddled as to argue for the absence of any sort of mind.

Governor Fitzgerald has done far more to create a state wide interest in the attorney general's report through his attempt to suppress it than if he had permitted its contents to be shouted from the house-tops. But the subject of the Grand Rapids Press protest is only one of more than a few disappointing experiences that Governor Fitzgerald has thus far experienced and is yet to meet.

When the Public Trust Commission was formed both its sponsor, Senator Felix H. H. Flynn, and the governor seemed zealous to have good men named on that body but in the face of very strong endorsements for men of integrity and high state standing the governor was inclined for unknown reasons to name men of his own choosing. But what choosing? Two have already resigned! Can the governor explain such appointments as these and others in the light of recent developments when he is again a candidate for the state's highest office?—T. O. Huckle in The Cadillac Evening News.

A GROESBECK IDEA REVIVED

State parks should be in part self-supporting, their maintenance and upkeep being in part paid for by modest fees charged those who make use of them. Another source of revenue should be a portion of the gasoline tax, not a great sum, but enough at least to account for some portion of that revenue paid by residents of other states

Oh, little child, may you fill this day
To the very end with the joy of play!

In the kindly glow of the morning light,
May your heart be happy and warm and bright;

Through the hours of gladness the whole day long,
May you romp with laughter and cheer and song;

In whatever way you choose to go,
May the flowers of beauty and kindness grow;

And when shadows tell that the day is done—
When you weary of pleasure and play and fun—

Then may gentle arms and a loving breast
Hold you tenderly, and bring blissful rest.

called to Michigan because of the advantages of our state park system. A little courage on the part of the legislature and the department of conservation in providing a fee system would do much to make the parks better and lift them out of state budget limitations. A half million a year from the gas tax would not injure the state highway program but would return itself in added revenues because of added travel in years to come.

Michigan has not too many parks. Perhaps it is spreading too little money too thin in management of what it has. A well developed plan of expansion with a long-view attitude of mind regarding their support will in a few years place Michigan far in the fore so far as recreational features are concerned.—Vernon J. Brown in The Ingham County News.

EASY BORROWING

I'm not stuck on the easy money borrowing plan so often spotted over the radio in order to trap the gullible, for remember every cent borrowed must be paid back with interest, and if you are not able your collateral will be confiscated and you'll have to stand that expense also. E. McMullen in The Linden Leader.

WANDERERS

During the last eleven months, 10,000 roaming boys between the ages of 16 and 20 have registered as "transients" in Los Angeles. Many more youthful wanderers undoubtedly failed to register. Of this number, 4,051 came from Texas or more than from any other state. Every state in the Union sent its contribution. Delaware with nine and Vermont with ten, had the fewest. Sixty per cent came from cities of more than 25,000 population. Chicago, El Paso and New York top the list of "contributing" cities.—Harold W. Baker in The Crosswell Jeffersonian.

President Hough stated that there were several things needed by the school, among the very urgent needs being sanitary closets. The board did not feel like asking the people to provide means for the expense at this time, but thought perhaps the old closets might be made to do for another year. He estimated the expense of new closets to be put in the basement of the building at $1,500.00.

Water superintendent Passage wasn't fooling when he notified water users to use water for sprinkling purposes only during regular hours. He found several careless people Tuesday who neglected to obey the rule, and shut off their water supply. They demanded somewhat, but it cost them the usual price to have it turned on again. The rule will be enforced right along, so watch out, and the superintendent says further that the second infraction will cause the water to be shut off for thirty days.

DEMOCRATS REASSERTING CONTROL

By Mark Sullivan

That something highly important has occurred in Washington there is no doubt. What it was can be stated thus: The Democrats in Congress took control of the party as against the extremely personal control heretofore exercised by President Roosevelt. What will develop from now on is influenced by too many factors to permit confident generalization. The Democrats in Congress will try very hard to compromise with the President. They are certain to wish to preserve in respect and prestige as the de facto head of the party. The Democrats know that normally it is highly desirable for them to go into the campaign next year with Mr. Roosevelt as their candidate for President. Some Democrats feel that the party should nominate a different candidate, but this idea will not grow unless Mr. Roosevelt by his course compels it to grow. If Mr. Roosevelt is willing to make reasonable arrangements, the Democrats in Congress will greatly prefer to keep him in a kind of titular leadership of the party, with the Democratic leaders in Congress acting as in effect a regency in actual control of the party. If this happens, it will be a conformity to the American political tradition and the condition contemplated by the Constitution in which the President is not superior to Congress.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt will accommodate himself to some such adjustment depends on whether he can adopt the Democratic leaders in Congress as his intimate advisers. So far he has preferred to have around him men of the type who compose what is called the "brain trust." Whether the "brain trust" will have to go is the most interesting speculation in the present situation. To get rid of them is one of the objects of the proposed Congressional investigation. Into whether one of the "brain trust" tried to intimidate a Congressman by threatening that unless the Congressman voted for the "death sentence" in the public utility holding company bill, he would be deprived of any credit for or association with expenditures for public works in his state.

The probability that the "brain trust" must go does not by any means make the situation alone. The distaste of Congress for the intimate advisers around the President rests on many counts. The Democratic Congressmen, plain men, accustomed to certain taken-for-granted standards in their own minds, and other men have come to regard some of the intellectuals with deep distrust that men of direct minds have for men of overbearing minds. Congressmen think that some of the intellects are hidden meanings into the statutes which Congress passed because the measures came from the Administration, but which Congressmen would have been reluctant to support had they realized the full meanings of the measures. Congress feels as many others do that the intellectuals tried to practice a similar evasiveness with respect to the courts.

Only by getting rid of the "brain trust" can Mr. Roosevelt be preserved. The substance of what came to a climax recently in the Administration had sent to Congress. Those measures originated either with Mr. Roosevelt personally or with the advisers around him. Only by blaming the measures on the advisers and getting rid of the advisers can Mr. Roosevelt be preserved in prestige.

There is one condition which will trouble the Democratic leaders. They didn't make their revolt until after the Administration had sent to Congress some measures which in their existing forms, are plainly unconstitutional. Some of these measures have been passed. More are on the list which the Administration regarded as "must." From the standpoint of the intellectuals, it was a case of the more unconstitutional the better. It was undoubtedly the intention of the intellectuals, and also of Mr. Roosevelt, to have against the power of the Constitution and over the power of the Supreme Court.

The anticipation was that the Supreme Court next year would hand down decisions invalidating some of the measures recently passed. The further anticipation was that such decisions would be unpopular and would serve as the starting point for a campaign on putting the unemployed back to work in private industry. Now when this problem is examined it will appear, I believe that given the recovery necessary to absorb a substantial part of the unemployed, the present tax rates will yield very large revenues.

It is not generally realized that the present tax rates are already producing larger revenues than the government received in any year from 1923 to 1928. They were nearly 80 per cent larger this year than in 1927; they have produced $3.70 this year for every $2.10 they produced in 1927. The trouble with the budget, therefore, is not in the tax rates. The trouble is in the expenditures and in the fact that business is only partially recovered. A recovery which makes possible a reduction of expenses will also, without raising the tax rates, increase the revenues.

If the Administration will concentrate on recovery it can readily balance the budget. If it will not concentrate on recovery, it will not balance the budget merely by raising the rates.

An eventual revision of the tax system is desirable and necessary as a matter of a larger public policy. It should include more steeply graduated income and inheritance taxes. But these new rates should be imbedded in an income tax system which covers at least as large a proportion of the voters as are covered by the British income tax system. In 1931-1932 there were 3.7 million persons who paid income taxes in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland. This was about 17 per cent of the voters in the 1931 election. That same year in the United States 1.9 million individuals had taxable returns. They constituted less than 5 per cent of the voters in the 1932 election.

An income tax system set up so that not more than one voter in twenty pays a tax that not more than one voter in ten even files a return, is a dangerous one to invoke for the purpose of breaking up large fortunes. It is wide open and without defenses against extravagance and the squandering of the large accumulations of the nation's capital. Those large accumulations ought eventually to be taken out of private hands. But they cannot safely be entrusted to a legislature elected by a population which is not conscious that it pays taxes. An electorate containing 10 million income taxpayers may hope to redistribute income without destroying capital, but an electorate in which income taxpayers are a negligible number is under constant provocation to squander capital on current political expenditures.

In short, we may conclude, I think, (1) that new taxes for revenue should not be considered apart from a budget which trenches and (2) that new taxes to redistribute wealth should not be considered apart from new taxes to redistribute responsibility among a very much larger number of income taxpayers. Since Congress is not now ready to deal with either question, this fashion, this is not the time to legislate.

People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw parties.

If you would keep your friend, don't give him away.

Let us suppose that the primary object is to balance the budget. Is it not self-evident that the time to discuss new revenues is when the new budget is presented next winter? What is the point of discussing taxes until it is known what the expenditures are to be? The whole purpose of a budget is to enable the country to consider its expenditures in relation to its revenues and its revenues in relation to its expenditures. When a budget is in balance or is being balanced, the first rule is that no money must be appropriated for which revenues are not provided. It is no less contrary to orderly budget practice to raise revenues which have no relation to expenditures. It leads to such absurdities as the suggestion that the government must immediately have $340,000,000 more to reduce a prospective deficit of over $4,000,000,000. Why $340,000,000? Would a deficit of $3,660,000,000 be in any real sense different from a deficit of $4,000,000,000?

The proposed new revenues will not balance the budget or bring the balance into sight. The only effect, therefore, of imposing new taxes now is to add to the burden of a few thousand individuals without lightening in the least the burden on the national finances. Burdensome taxation that does no one any good is just stupid and arbitrary.

The only wholesome way to impose new taxes is to impose them as part of a comprehensive plan to bring the budget into balance. Opinion is divided as to whether it is necessary or wise to balance the budget at once. But if the budget is to be balanced at once, new taxes should accompany retrenchments. To add the taxes without beginning to economize will not balance the budget; it will merely produce the worst results of both policies. It will not give business men and the unemployed the confidence that a balanced budget would give them and yet it will have the deflationary and discouraging effect that a meaningless sacrifice involves.

What could be more despiriting than to be taxed drastically without making a dent on the deficit? Taxation of this sort is merely punitive. It hurts the income taxpayer and helps no one else.

My own view is that no new taxes should be imposed until after the budget is presented to Congress next winter. That budget ought, I believe, to contain a definite program to reduce the deficit drastically next year and to end it soon thereafter. Such a program depends upon reducing the cost of relief and reducing the cost of relief depends primarily on putting the unemployed back to work in private industry. Now when this problem is examined it will appear, I believe that given the recovery necessary to absorb a substantial part of the unemployed, the present tax rates will yield very large revenues.

An eventual revision of the tax system is desirable and necessary as a matter of a larger public policy. It should include more steeply graduated income and inheritance taxes. But these new rates should be imbedded in an income tax system which covers at least as large a proportion of the voters as are covered by the British income tax system. In 1931-1932 there were 3.7 million persons who paid income taxes in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland. This was about 17 per cent of the voters in the 1931 election. That same year in the United States 1.9 million individuals had taxable returns. They constituted less than 5 per cent of the voters in the 1932 election.

An income tax system set up so that not more than one voter in twenty pays a tax that not more than one voter in ten even files a return, is a dangerous one to invoke for the purpose of breaking up large fortunes. It is wide open and without defenses against extravagance and the squandering of the large accumulations of the nation's capital. Those large accumulations ought eventually to be taken out of private hands. But they cannot safely be entrusted to a legislature elected by a population which is not conscious that it pays taxes. An electorate containing 10 million income taxpayers may hope to redistribute income without destroying capital, but an electorate in which income taxpayers are a negligible number is under constant provocation to squander capital on current political expenditures.

In short, we may conclude, I think, (1) that new taxes for revenue should not be considered apart from a budget which trenches and (2) that new taxes to redistribute wealth should not be considered apart from new taxes to redistribute responsibility among a very much larger number of income taxpayers. Since Congress is not now ready to deal with either question, this fashion, this is not the time to legislate.

People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw parties.

If you would keep your friend, don't give him away.

Let us suppose that the primary object is to balance the budget. Is it not self-evident that the time to discuss new revenues is when the new budget is presented next winter? What is the point of discussing taxes until it is known what the expenditures are to be? The whole purpose of a budget is to enable the country to consider its expenditures in relation to its revenues and its revenues in relation to its expenditures. When a budget is in balance or is being balanced, the first rule is that no money must be appropriated for which revenues are not provided. It is no less contrary to orderly budget practice to raise revenues which have no relation to expenditures. It leads to such absurdities as the suggestion that the government must immediately have $340,000,000 more to reduce a prospective deficit of over $4,000,000,000. Why $340,000,000? Would a deficit of $3,660,000,000 be in any real sense different from a deficit of $4,000,000,000?

The proposed new revenues will not balance the budget or bring the balance into sight. The only effect, therefore, of imposing new taxes now is to add to the burden of a few thousand individuals without lightening in the least the burden on the national finances. Burdensome taxation that does no one any good is just stupid and arbitrary.

The only wholesome way to impose new taxes is to impose them as part of a comprehensive plan to bring the budget into balance. Opinion is divided as to whether it is necessary or wise to balance the budget at once. But if the budget is to be balanced at once, new taxes should accompany retrenchments. To add the taxes without beginning to economize will not balance the budget; it will merely produce the worst results of both policies. It will not give business men and the unemployed the confidence that a balanced budget would give them and yet it will have the deflationary and discouraging effect that a meaningless sacrifice involves.

What could be more despiriting than to be taxed drastically without making a dent on the deficit? Taxation of this sort is merely punitive. It hurts the income taxpayer and helps no one else.

My own view is that no new taxes should be imposed until after the budget is presented to Congress next winter. That budget ought, I believe, to contain a definite program to reduce the deficit drastically next year and to end it soon thereafter. Such a program depends upon reducing the cost of relief and reducing the cost of relief depends primarily on putting the unemployed back to work in private industry. Now when this problem is examined it will appear, I believe that given the recovery necessary to absorb a substantial part of the unemployed, the present tax rates will yield very large revenues.

It is not generally realized that the present tax rates are already producing larger revenues than the government received in any year from 1923 to 1928. They were nearly 80 per cent larger this year than in 1927; they have produced $3.70 this year for every $2.10 they produced in 1927. The trouble with the budget, therefore, is not in the tax rates. The trouble is in the expenditures and in the fact that business is only partially recovered. A recovery which makes possible a reduction of expenses will also, without raising the tax rates, increase the revenues.

If the Administration will concentrate on recovery it can readily balance the budget. If it will not concentrate on recovery, it will not balance the budget merely by raising the rates.

An eventual revision of the tax system is desirable and necessary as a matter of a larger public policy. It should include more steeply graduated income and inheritance taxes. But these new rates should be imbedded in an income tax system which covers at least as large a proportion of the voters as are covered by the British income tax system. Plymouth Park Holds the Lead

Plymouth Park defeated Gray A. C. 9 to 3 Sunday, to retain first place in the Southern Michigan baseball league standings. The victory was the ninth straight game for the Plymouth Park team.

Weber made his debut for the local nine as the starting pitcher and allowed but five hits in five innings he worked, after which a pinch hitter was sent in for him in the big fifth inning rally. Harold Pisarek took up the pitching burden in the sixth inning and allowed but four hits and no runs the remainder of the game.

The local nine was held hitless until the big fifth inning when P. Schomberger opened with a single and pinch hitter Pisarek followed with a single and a walk. The bases were filled the bases with none out. Gates walked to force in P. Schomberger with the first run, then L. Bassett singled to score Pisarek and Zielasko which tied the score but Bassett rounded first he fell and was ejected out. J. Schomberger and Tonkovich walked to fill the bases. Gates scored the run which put the Park team in the lead as T. Levandowski went out second to first on a beautiful play. Urbanak than tripled to left to score J. Schomberger and Tonkovich with the fifth and sixth runs of the inning. The rally ended with P. Schomberger up for the second time flied out to right field.

The big four for the Plymouth Park team in hitting follows: T. Levandowski is first with a batting average of .438 and is followed by John Schomberger with .404 and Ed. Zielasko with .375 and K. Gates with .368.

Next Sunday at one o'clock the fast going Wyandotte team will make their second appearance of the season and last one here as the third game will be played at Wyandotte. Wyandotte is in second place only one game from first place by defeating the Plymouth Park team.

Given Trimming By Garden City

The Garden City baseball team defeated the hard hitting Skrzyzki team last year winners of the Class AAA crown of the Detroit Baseball Federation, but lost to the Wyandotte Merchants over the week-end. In the game with Skrzyzki, Garden City won by a close score of 3 to 2. Lovell Hill pitched for the victors and allowed Skrzyzki 6 scattered hits and only one earned run. S. Tatro started on the mound for the locals against the Wyandotte Merchants and kept them scoreless throughout the first six innings. In Garden City's 7th inning, Tatro got on base on a single and almost got caught off first base, while sliding back into first base, he injured his side. The Wyandotte Merchants hopped onto his offerings and knocked him out of the box. Mueller relieved him and before the side was retired seven runs were scored. Wyandotte won the game by a score of 8 to 3.

In the game with Skrzyzki, both teams were held scoreless for six innings. Garden City had an opportunity to score in the 2nd and 3rd with one out. Garry struck out and B. Johnson walked filling the bases. Hill struck out ending the rally. Garden City scored the first run in the 4th inning. C. Wolfram walked to open the inning. C. Johnson doubled to center. C. Wolfram taking third, Garry singled to left scoring C. Wolfram. C. Johnson's sacrifice bunt was slipped rounding that base. B. Johnson struck out and Hill hit to the box, and C. Johnson was retired sliding into home plate. Skrzyzki scored a run in the 6th to tie the score. Kelpenski walked with two men out. He stole second and went to third on a wild pitch and scored when Hill committed a balk. Wummell struck out on the next pitched ball. Skrzyzki went into the lead in the 8th when they scored a run. Hibberd singled with one man out. Hibberd to Higgins at short stop. Higgins threw to R. Wolfram at third, and Fuller was safe on a beautiful slide into third base. Kelpenski flied to center. Fuller scored after the catch. Hibberd also tried to score from second base when the ball got by Tatro, but was out when Tatro recovered the ball and threw to Hill. Garden City's big moment came in the 8th inning. O'Brien was singled to right field. Garry hit to center field. Wummell fell down fielding the ball, and Garry got a hit. R. Wolfram scored on the play. Skrzyzki did not get a man on base in their half of the inning.

Ford Purchases Dam at Milford

Since the recent acquisition of the Pettibone and lower pond water powers and properties by Henry Ford in purchase from F. H. Hubbell, surveys have continued to be at work herabouts. Much conjecture has been indulged in as to the use to which these properties would be put and what it may mean to the industrial development of our village. The Times learns from a well authenticated source that the deal has been completed within the past day or so whereby Mr. Ford has added the Huron river power plant to his Milford holdings by purchase from the Detroit Edison Company. It is understood however, that the latter will retain possession for six months or more and operate as at present.

It is understood, also, that Mr. Ford has purchased from Francis M. Alfred the latter's farm property of several hundred acres in the vicinity of Milford.—Milford Times.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Delilah and Samson.—Corrupted by the Philistines, Delilah sought the source of Samson's strength. Weighed at last by her questioning, he told her: "If I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man."—Judges 16:16-17. Delilah then made Samson sleep, and cut off his hair. The Philistines put out his eyes and imprisoned him. Samson's hair began to grow again, however, and one day when the Philistines gathered to make sacrifices to their god, Samson was called in to make sport for them. Samson asked to be led to the pillars which supported the house, and took hold of them. "And Samson said, Let me die with the Philistines. And he bowed himself with all his might; and the house fell upon the people therein. So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life."—Judges 16:30. In the right foreground Merian, Seventeenth century engraver, shows Samson being taken by the Philistines, and in the left background he shows the destruction of the house and the death of Samson.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH
Richard W. Neale, Pastor
"We have not all sinned alike; but we have all sinned," exclaimed Casey Vander Jagt, the evangelist, as he climaxed his searching messages on man's need of Christ's salvation at Calvary Church last Sunday.

Many terse but striking phrases were uttered by Bro. Vander Jagt with thundering forcefulness, such as: "You had better suffer for the Cross of Christ than let the Cross of Christ suffer because of you"; and again, "It's not a particular place you get saved, it's particular way; for Christ said, 'I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the father but by me.'"

Mr. and Mrs. Casey Vander Jagt were accompanied by two of their family, Miss Margaret, and Leonard; and were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schultz, singers, and Charles Wright, of Grand Rapids.

The enthusiasm of the crowd who heard them made their return next year, D. V. a foregone conclusion.

This Sunday's services at 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. invite your interest as our pastor preaches in the morning from Acts, chapter nine, on the theme, "The Conversion of Saul of Tarsus: Was He The Product of His Times, or a Trophy of God's Power?"

The evening message centers around the sixth chapter of Luke, or "Plain Words About The Salvation Christ Offers You."

We meet on Wednesdays at 7:30 p. m. for prayer and fellowship. The Sunday school convenes after the morning service on Sunday at 11:15 a. m. All services are held at the church, 455 South Main street.

Through A Woman's Eyes By JEAN NEWTON

WE'VE GROWN TOO MODERN FOR WIVES TO SELL HUSBANDS IF MY friends have any doubt that a new day for women has not only dawned but is in full swing, let them hark to this tale from Soviet Russia, where a wife sold her husband for a hundred rubles! The couple were textile workers, in their thirties, and had three small children. A friend of the wife in the lower social position of a teacher, asked her help in finding a husband. She complained of not having the more fortunate factory workers' opportunities for meeting men, and offered the other woman a hundred rubles if she could get her a "kind hearted man with domestic tastes." The wife needed a hundred rubles and her friend had never met her husband; so quite ingeniously she conceived the idea, not of selling him, but of renting him temporarily, so to speak. She arranged a satisfactory meeting between the two, and divorced her husband to enable him to marry the other woman. Those are mere details in Russia today, and the plan was to have him return in a few weeks and remarry her. This is authentic, mind you, the subject of a news dispatch from Moscow; not a fairy tale. The marriage went off smoothly and the money was paid. The only hitch in the plan came a few weeks later when the wife prepared to remarry her husband—and he would not go home! And the courts upheld him. The moral—cheating cheaters? Oh, no. The story is too luscious with other implications for one to be too serious about it. It turns my thoughts to past days when husbands could sell or give their wives. If they wanted them back they had only to settle that with the buyer—the wife was never consulted. Now comes a day when a wife sells or rents her husband! And yet it seems not so easy. When she wants him she can't get him back. And what defeats her utterly is that the courts support his claims of the right to stay with his current spouse. © Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

No Potato Bugs Can Be Located

These are days of unusual things, there isn't much question about that. And there is one unusual thing that R. T. Willoughby, father of Robert Willoughby of the Walk-Over shoe store, would like to know the reason for. Mr. Willoughby states that it was 43 or 45 years ago when the Colorado beetle bug better known as the common potato bug, first made its appearance in Michigan. Since that time there has never been a year that the potato bug has failed to appear, always doing considerable damage to the potato crop. In some instances known so it was a common thing for a whole crop to be destroyed by the bugs. "Since 1870 I have never known a year to pass without the usual damage by this pest, but this year I have failed to find a single one in my big potato patch over on Hartoughs street. I have looked and looked and there hasn't been a bug in my patch," says Mr. Willoughby. Surely in this year of dole, politics, and pollution there must be something wrong with the potato bug as it ought to be a great year for them, commented a listener to Mr. Willoughby's unusual observation.

Mother's Cook Book PICNIC MEALS

OPEN-AIR meals are in order now until the snow flies. These picnic meals may be of the simplest, but be sure that there is plenty of whatever it is, for there is nothing that encourages appetite like a good long walk and a ride in the fresh air. The perfect picnic always supposes a fire, where things can be heated or cooked, and there are few Scouts or Campfire Girls who cannot prepare one in a short time. The building of a fireplace to roast the potatoes or corn and boil the water for the frankfurters is an accomplishment that most of the youth of today take as a matter of course. If the fire is to be made on the beach, a trench is dug to make a fire-box. Then the true sportsman will see that every bit of debris and all embers are burned and buried before leaving the campfire. One may cook bacon on sticks, threading the slices on green twigs, or cook steak in a camp frying pan or on a piece of sheet iron. A few trips will give one a good idea of the things needed and the collection will last for a long time, with care. One may eat and digest very hearty foods when out of doors. Fried potatoes, boiled waterbury or frankfurters cooked in boiling water are so good in bread and butter sandwiches with a slice of mild onion. Eggs scrambled make a nice dish. To roast sweet potatoes one must use the following directions carefully: Wash the potatoes thoroughly and wrap them in green leaves or wet brown paper, then bury them in hot ashes and cover with coals and burning wood. In 40 minutes try them with a sharp stick. As soon as they are soft remove from the wrapping and eat with plenty of butter while piping hot. This same method is used for Irish potatoes. © Waterloo Newspaper Editor.

Dr. Merrell H. Draper Weds Ypsilanti Girl—Reside In Ann Arbor

White lilies and ferns were banked around an improvised altar in front of the fireplace in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis E. Stephens in Ypsilanti, Wednesday for the wedding of their daughter, Margaret Ellen, to Dr. Merrell H. Draper of Ann Arbor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Draper of this city, which took place at eight o'clock that evening. Reverend S. Conger Hathaway of Albion, formerly pastor of both the Presbyterian church of Plymouth and Ypsilanti, where the bride and groom attended, performed the ceremony uniting them. Summer garden flowers were used in profusion throughout the house. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Benjamin Boyce sang "O Promise Me," accompanied by Miss Frances Lister, both of Ypsilanti. Miss Stephens, who was given away by her father, was charming in her wedding gown of white net over white satin with a floor length veil of tulle. Her arm bouquet consisted of white roses with valley lilac and was tied with white satin ribbon. Her maid of honor, Miss Marjorie Geddes of Jackson, was becomingly gowned in blue net and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses and blue sphinx lilies tied with talisman satin ribbon. The groom and his best man, Elmore Carney of Detroit, a brother-in-law, wore gardenias. The bride's mother, Mrs. Stephens, wore flowered chiffon with yellow as the predominating color wearing a corsage of Johanna Hill roses and bachelor buttons while the groom's mother, Mrs. Draper, wore flowered chiffon with pink the predominating color and wore Hollywood roses and baby breathe. Miss Irene Lewis, Miss Maxine Sneider, Mrs. Paul Hedding, Mrs. Max Ambrose, Miss Helen McCalla of Ypsilanti and Miss Doris Gillman of Ann Arbor assisted by receiving and serving the buffet-luncheon following the wedding to the guests numbering twenty-five. The table of beautiful appointments was centered with a tiered wedding cake having a miniature bride and groom on top with lighted white tapers on either side of cake. The happy couple left immediately for a month's stay at Big Silver Lake after which they will be at home to their friends in Ann Arbor. The bride chose an ensemble of yellow trimmed in brown with yellow accessories for her going away costume. Dr. Draper was born in Plymouth and is a graduate of Plymouth high school, also of the University of Michigan and is very well known and highly respected while Mrs. Draper also has many friends here having visited here times innumerable in the past few years. Their friends unite in extending to them best wishes for a long, happy wedded life. A wedding rehearsal was held Tuesday evening at the home of

Farmers Begin Wheat Harvest

The song of the binder is heard in the land again as farmers in the vicinity of Plymouth started this week to harvest what promises to be the biggest wheat crop in years. While the acreage planted is not large, the yield is expected to run from 30 to 45 bushels or more per acre. One farmer declared that he had never before seen the heads of wheat so large and so well filled as they are this year. He expects to get an average of better than 40 bushels to the acre from his farm. The wheat acreage was considerably reduced as the result of the government's crop reduction program, but the tremendous yield from the small acreage planted is going to offset almost entirely the planting reduction. The bride in Ypsilanti. She was honored with four lovely "showers" previous to her marriage, the last one a "pantry shower" being given last Thursday evening by Miss Irene Lewis of Ypsilanti. This proved to be a very unusual affair and a jolly evening was the result.

Vacationists See Big Otter In Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Gorton and daughter, Miss Carrie Gorton, have returned from a vacation trip spent near Lewiston. The well known Plymouth mail carrier and his family did considerable fishing, but returned without a fishing tale of any kind. However he did bring back a wild life story that is new and different. Mr. Gorton states that while he was on his way across T lake with his daughter in their canoe to a new fishing ground that they saw an otter in the water near the shore. Paddling carefully, they were able to get within thirty feet of it. They state that it was a full sized otter, one of the few ever seen by fishermen in the lower peninsula. Miss Gorton has returned to her studies and work in the University of Michigan hospital. Sunday visitors at Green Oak lodge, summer home of Mr. E. J. Cutler and family were Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Cutler and little sons Rupert and Edward, Harry Hopkins of Dearborn, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rector and Misses Wilma and Melba Rector of Detroit.

Miller Writes Of Volcano Visit

The many friends of Albert Miller, better known as Red Miller, a Plymouth high school graduate and former employe of The Plymouth Mail, will be pleased to read another interesting letter he has sent this paper from Hawaii, where he is now located and serving on naval submarine S-27. His letter follows:

Sometime ago I wrote to you describing the Island of Oahu to you. Oahu is the Island where Honolulu is situated. Since then I have been to nearly all of the Islands and I found the Island of Hawaii most interesting than any of the other islands.

On the island of Hawaii is located two of the largest volcanoes in the world.

In reality there is just one large volcano with another one inside of it. This volcano is called Kilauea (pronounced Kil-oo-ah-ah) Kilauea is about three miles in diameter and between ten and twelve miles around. The floor which is covered with hard lava. It is about fifteen hundred feet from the rim of the volcano. After reaching the floor of the crater, by sliding down solid rock. I walked about a mile and a half and came to the firepit of Kilauea. This firepit is called Halemaumau (pronounced Hale-mama) It is about 1100 feet deep, 3,000 feet across, 3500 feet around and the floor of the pit covers about 86 acres of hot lava. It is burning all the time and once a year it erupts. The last eruption was in September, 1924.

During the eruption it threw a fourteen ton rock up 1100 feet out of the pit and the rock landed about one hundred yards away from the pit.

I also went through an underground tunnel known as a lava tube which was formed by the flowing of hot lava beneath the surface. This tube is about 1400 feet long and about fifteen feet high. It is about 25 feet underground.

There was one interesting thing I enjoyed while in the volcano district and that was a steam bath. This steam is given off by the hot lava. It seeps through the earth in little crevices. The National Park Association has erected small buildings over these crevices and made it possible for people to take a lava steam bath.

While I have been out here I have become quite agile in the use of the "chop sticks." It is quite an act by itself to be able to use a pair of these sticks, but with a little practice one can become an old hand with them.

I suppose you have read about the recent fleet maneuvers out here in the islands. Well, I was right in the midst of them for about three weeks. For fourteen days at one stretch I didn't see the sunlight. We would dine about three in the morning and would not come to the surface until around six-thirty or seven at night. We would be anywhere from fifty to a hundred feet below the surface of the water and I am mighty glad the maneuvers are over.

Sincerely, Albert Miller. P. S. I would like to hear from some of my old friends back home I promise to answer every one of the letters I receive. My address is care of U.S.S.—S-27, Submarine Base, Pearl Harbor, T. H.

We all accuse each other of being stupid. Then it is generally admitted, after which we all go on as before.

A man who measures 42 or more inches around the middle is glad waistlines do not change in men's fashions, as they do in women's.

Farmers Rejoice Over Big Hay Crop

Not in years and years has there been a bigger hay crop for the average farmer than this year—and not in years and years have farmers around Plymouth enjoyed better "haying" weather than they have had during the past two weeks. The one big draw back to their work has been the inability to hire good help.

One farmer came to The Plymouth Mail office the other day to insert a want ad for help. He declared that he had hired one man from town. The fellow worked six hours and said he had worked long enough that day and refused to come back the next. He had tried to hire another "welfare client" who said there wasn't enough money in working on farms and he wouldn't work.

But notwithstanding the inability to get good help farmers have been exchanging work and with members of their family assisting they have been able to store away the biggest hay crop of years.

Early-season crop prospects in Michigan are markedly better than a year ago, and also somewhat above average. In the July 1 Federal-State Crop Report released today by James F. Thomson, Commissioner of Agriculture and Verne H. Church, U. S. Agricultural Statistician, the composite condition of the 16 major field and fruit crops is rated at 78 per cent of normal for that date which is 19 points better than for July 1, 1934 and 3 points above the 10-year July 1 average figure. Growing conditions have been generally favorable for small grains, hay, and pastures. Corn prospects are below average, however, as a result of cool weather and frequent rains during June. Potatoes, field beans and sugar beets, three of the States' main cash crops, have also been held back by unfavorable growing conditions. Fruit crop prospects declined rather sharply during June but were still above average for July 1. Ample precipitation, accompanied by warmer weather during the first ten days of July has been favorable for crop growth. The acreage of the principal field crops for harvest in 1935 is estimated to be practically the same as the area planted in the spring of 1934 but about 2.5 per cent more than the acreage harvested last fall.

The acreage of field beans for harvest in Michigan in 1935 is reported at 547,000 acres or 2 per cent more than the revised estimate of 536,000 acres harvested in 1934. Planting was delayed by rains, particularly on heavy land, and there has been considerable replanting because of seed rotting in the ground. The retarding effect of the cold wet weather during June is reflected in the July 1 condition figure of only 67 per cent, which is 4 points below that for July 1 last year and 11 points less than the 10-year average for that date. Final production depends to a large extent upon late-season weather, but on the basis of average growing and harvesting conditions after July 1, a crop of 3,118,000 bags is indicated for 1935. This compares with a revised estimate of 3,377,000 bags harvested last year.

The acreage of potatoes for harvest in Michigan this year has been estimated at 268,000 acres or the same as in 1934. In general, there was some reduction in acreage compared with last year in the principal carlot-shipping areas, while growers near cities in the southern part of the State have made slight increases. Planting this year was delayed by unfavorable weather and in some sections considerable re-planting has been necessary. The July 1 condition of the crop is reported at 81 per cent of normal—7 points better than on July 1, 1934, but 3 points below average. The indicated 1935 production is placed at 25,466,000 bushels but the actual harvest may be either larger or smaller than this figure depending upon late-season weather. Last year Michigan produced 34,304,000 bushels, the largest crop since 1922. The total United States potato crop is indicated from July 1 condition reports at 387,589,000 bushels compared with 385,421,000 bushels for 1934.

"Well, it seems to be slipping back to a man's world," says ironic Irene, "the date that used to ring the doorbell with candy and flowers now sits out in a flower at the curb and toots the horn."

Grand Hotel Is Grand As Name

Michigan weekly and small daily newspaper publishers, their wives and families, are home this week after three most delightful days spent at Mackinac Island, July 4, 5 and 6. Guests of the famous Grand Hotel, the world's greatest summer hotel, situated in this famous historic spot, and nearly two hundred newspapermen and women enjoyed their Thirtieth Mid-Summer Outing, Ideal weather, splendid fellowship, a fine program, and unsurpassed hotel co-operation, made this outing one of the most memorable in the history of the Association.

Arriving at the Grand Hotel Thursday morning, July 4, the visiting "home-town" journalists of the State began to congregate beneath the blue skies of Michigan's Straits of Mackinac, on the historic Mackinac Island that once served as the strategic fortification for the French, English, and American conquest of the Indian tribes whose glamorous past makes romantic the early chapters of Michigan's settling by the white man.

Paul H. McDonald, president of the Michigan Press Association, aided by his special committee consisting of A. H. Weber, of Cheboygan, Hal Whiteley, of Rogers City, and Ed Chastelle, of St. Ignace, were on hand to receive the guests from every section of Michigan.

Entire facilities of the Grand Hotel, the headquarters for the outing, were turned over to the visiting scribes by W. S. Woodfill, manager of the great establishment. It is interesting to note that the Grand Hotel was built in 1887, under the leadership of John Oliver Plank, assisted by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Potter Palmer, George Pullman, officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the Detroit and Cleveland Navigation Co. The Grand Hotel boasts the largest veranda of any hotel in the world, and 312 people required to administer to the needs of the colorful and gay assemblage of guests who visit it each year.

Visitors at Mackinac Island are removed from the hustle and bustle of modern civilization with its motor cars, its noise, its grime and dust, to a veritable "old world." Here no automobiles may be found; instead, various types of horse-drawn vehicles, from the dignified single-seated carriage to the three-seated flat-topped surrey, serve to transport guests over the 2,200 acres of the island. Regular sight-seeing trips to various historic spots, including the old British Fort, the Natural Rock Bridge, early English and French churches and the beautiful little harbor, were a part of the three-day outing. Speed boats also lured many of the newspapermen and women to pleasant hours on the clear blue waters of this portion of the Great Lakes.

MINUTE MAKE-UPS

Many of the new hair ornaments have for inspiration the Egyptian motifs used by Cleopatra. One of the most modern combs following this fashion is of rhinestones showing the ball-and-leaf design. It should be worn at the side of the head where the curls are massed.

"This Thirtieth Mid-Summer Outing was splendid, and we hope that a few years hence we will come back to Mackinac Island and the Grand Hotel for another meeting," stated President McDonald, at the conclusion of the affair on Saturday evening. "Many of our newspaper group came to the island for the first time, and were deeply impressed with the natural beauty of the island, situated as it is between old Mackinac City and St. Ignace, Michigan, is a great state and these summer outings to various sections serve to point out to makers of over 300 hometown newspapers the value of 'seeing Michigan first.'"

Milford Plans A New Bank Soon

Definite assurance that Milford will have a new bank was evidenced Wednesday when the announcement was made that the local stock sale had been completed and the 150 shares which were allotted here subscribed. The deal by which the General Motors were to purchase forty-five shares of stock did not materialize, the board of directors in New York having turned thumbs down on the proposition. Reported reason—the Corporation's desire to keep out of the banking business and participation here would lead to similar requests from other localities. The balance of the unsubscribed stock, however, was taken personally by A. J. Schamehorn, head of the Proving Ground, and a resident of Milford.

No word had been received in Milford this Thursday noon as to what action has been taken by RFC officials in Washington on the application for $10,000 in preferred stock. A letter to W. S. Lovejoy from Congressman Geo. Dondero, reveals that he has interviewed RFC officials and a decision should be reached at any day. However, if RFC aid is not forthcoming, other arrangements may be made.

Tentative date at which the bank will open has not yet been set, but all possible speed will be made. Orders for supplies have been given and E. S. DeGarmo, treasurer of the stock solicitation committee will shortly begin the assembling of the capital. Necessary papers were filed Thursday with the banking department.—Milford Times.

Ford Declares New Tax Scheme Will Help Politicians, Not The People

Declares Money Lenders and Wall Street Seek To Control Business and Office Holders Are Giving Aid To The Scheme

Henry Ford looks upon the American scene of today as one of momentary confusion and darkness with the sun of a new era of brilliant technical and sound social advance visible on the horizon. Nothing will obscure this light permanently, he thinks, least of all the politicians in Washington.

Mr. Ford expressed his opinions on industrial and social affairs to a reporter yesterday. He has kept silence during the slow waning of the NRA and the efforts to "crack down" on him and force him to sign something which he felt was wrong. Now that that has failed and a new effort begun, that of the "share the wealth" taxation plans of the New Dealers, he feels that the time has come to talk to the American people. They will not long be deceived as to their true welfare, he thinks.

"The proposed Share - the - Wealth taxes will not share the wealth and there is no great 'soak' he said. They are a figment of political imagination on the one hand and a new form of destruction on the other."

Sitting in the engineering laboratory where he does most of his work, the master of the greatest industrial empire ever built by one man said of this "new form of destruction":

"We do not intend to be destroyed."

He appeared unworried, as though he had stepped aside for a moment from more important problems to consider some lesser thing.

"I have never objected to paying taxes," he continued, "but I do object to government taking the real wealth of this country on the pretext of giving it back to the people. It never gets back to the people."

"Can industry stand it?" he was asked.

"Industry can stand it—yes—but it would be like using the doors and woodwork of your house for fuel—pretty soon you would have neither house nor fire."

"Part of the scheme," he said, "referring to the tax problem put before Congress—is to get independent institutions like ours into the hands of the money lenders. Well, so far as we are concerned, we don't intend it shall work out that way."

"The politicians may not know it, but they are working right in to the hands of that crowd. Money lending is the only business that has prospered during the depression."

Mr. Ford has lost nothing of his determination to keep independent of Wall Street. His eyes take on their most steely look when he mentions money lenders and war makers.

"Personally," he declared, "I am not paying any attention to this new tax scheme. I just know that there is a principle of right and wrong, and that the wrong thing will not work. I feel perfectly able to handle any situation they may create. We have been doing that all our life. I am sorry for the business man who lets these things get on his nerves. All we ever need in such conditions is to have the people think. The people have the fire say—and they cannot be finally deceived."

In speaking of his business, Mr. Ford used "I" and "we" interchangeably. He seems to regard his vast organization, which reaches into 32 countries outside the United States, and controls an army of people as great as Napoleon's hordes of destruction, as an entity in which he plays a part only. On this occasion he seemed to be sitting on the sidelines, looking at it objectively, as something built by men and for men, not for himself personally.

He was asked about the Ford fortune and the inheritance tax. It has been estimated in some quarters that under one schedule advanced in Washington the Government would take about 900 million dollars upon the death of Henry Ford.

He looked amused and very much alive as he talked about this.

"The inheritance tax?" he said. "Well, what is that? Take our money, but the machine and its useful product. Politicians think that money can do anything. It can do nothing. It is the people that have all the wealth. The American home is the most heavily financed corporation in this country. There are not enough rich people to do anything for, or do anything to anybody."

"America is not a land of money, but of wealth; not a land of rich people, but successful workers. Money is only something the bookkeepers put down. It ought to be the sign of a man's right to his work. It is not a commodity of any value in itself—merely a part of the mechanism of exchange. Something is wrong with the mechanism. The money engineers should fix it."

Then Mr. Ford said: "Our institution has always been a great conundrum to those who want to live by lending. They have sought control in many ways. But finance did not build this business and, when we were born, government was content simply to govern. Now finance and government propose to step in and take control."

"They tried it under NRA and that failed. They have tried it by financial methods and failed. Now comes the new thing (taxation). Well, we shall see how that goes. Of course, they know I am 72 years old, and they probably think that something is likely to happen, but I expect to be around here a long time yet."

Mr. Ford spoke of his surplus. In one year of the depression, the Ford company "lost" 68 millions. That came out of surplus. It represented about two months pay-roll in ordinary times. It was not regarded by Mr. Ford as lost money, however. It was just circulation of 68 millions more than they took in. It was used to keep men at work and to prepare for better times.

"Every business with a surplus has become a source of envy," he said. "Our surplus keeps men working when business is bad. Now, the Government never has a surplus, and it wants ours. The financiers get in too—tell us what to do. There are a lot of other concerns in the same position that we are in. It's a fine piece of confusion."

"We could hog business if we wanted to," he continued, drawing idly on a piece of paper, one leg thrown over the arm of his chair, eyes out of the window. "We could make a lot more money, but I have always believed that business cannot be good for anyone until it is good for every one. I think that every fellow ought to have a chance. We shut down to change our model and gave other business men the whole American market. It didn't injure us to do that. If we can't compete on the basis of merit, we don't belong in business."

Leaving his own affairs and looking upon the scene as a whole, Mr. Ford said:

"There is one crowd in this country that wants to keep things as they are. The other, more nervous, wants to go ahead. The first crowd always talks about 'earnings'; in their view the chief product of a business is dividends. The real producer works for the product. If he gets a living out of it, that is all he expects."

"Spending money is a greater science than getting it. Those people in Washington don't know how to spend, because they don't know how to earn money. That is why they take a course which will not only dry up the sources of wealth, but render useless su-wealth as they are able to collect. "In this opportunity the Government isn't doing anything. It is holding for control, it wants to control the finances; but control never goes to those who cannot exercise it. Where the politicians get blocked is that they can't find the right people to work for the Government, anyone—except in the useful, non-political services. Edison never hired out with the idea of making a lot of money for himself or anybody else. He was a producer."

Mr. Ford is certain of America's good future. What he sees is worth considering, for 40 years ago, before there was an automobile in Detroit, he saw with his mind's eye four lines of traffic that exist today. He now sees American on the verge of undreamed progress, sound prosperity and that social equity for which he has worked all his life. He has been called a mystic, but that is not the right word for him. He has qualities of mysticism, however, such as viewing the intangibles as real.

NICE JOB FOR A HOT DAY—By BROWN

Glenn Smith Will Get Tax Refund

Happy days are here again! That is they are here again for one individual in Plymouth—and that certain gent is none other than Glenn Smith, former BIG chain business man who has the distinction of being about the only man in this part of the state to pay a chain store tax as required by the state law two years ago.

It seems that in addition to running a lunch stand up town Mr. Smith during the summer time has a couple of pop corn and hot dog stands out in the parks.

The state "cracked down" on him and ruled that he was in the chain store business and he paid the state the big chain store tax. Now comes the interesting part to Mr. Smith—it has been ruled by Secretary of State Orville Atwood that operators of chain stores who were not party to the recent litigation which ended when the state accepted a compromise payment for the chain store tax for 1933, will shortly receive a gift of some $34,000 from the state government. Mr. Smith was not a party to any litigation.

The 26 litigants offered the state a sum which was exactly 62.19 per cent of the total tax the state had sought to collect. The litigants thus saved about 38 per cent of the 1933 tax. When the state administrative board accepted this settlement, it was the feeling of its members that those who had already paid their 1933 tax should be entitled to the same consideration.

Consequently, to the operator of every chain store system for which the 1933 chain store tax has been paid, a check for nearly 38 percent of the tax paid, will shortly be sent. As the state collected about $90,000 by this tax in 1933, the total of the refunds will be slightly more than $34,000.

An additional refund on taxes paid in 1933, 1934 and 1935, by operators of chain counter systems, has also been approved by the board. The 1935 legislature provided for lower rates of taxation for chain counters than for chain stores; prior to this, no distinction had been made between the two kinds of chain organizations. Thus, to chain counter operators who have paid their taxes for the three years the act has been effective, at the chain store tax rates, refunds of the difference between these rates will be made by the Secretary of State, official collector of the tax. These latter refunds, however, will be made only on application, and then after an investigation of individual claims for the refund. Application blanks will be mailed shortly to everyone who has paid a chain store tax, as shown by records in the office of Orville E. Atwood.

The Kitchen Table

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SHE sits with heavy heart, and watchful eyes— An angel banished from her Paradise. The state proceeds . . . Her treasures one by one, Are purchased for a song by kindly neighbors. She sees the couch go, where her oldest son Lay till released from earth's purposeful labors. There is a chair, a chest of drawers. . . . Unable To buy, she longs most for the kitchen table.

For it was at the kitchen table she Was blessed most by her home's tranquility; Here she has bent, and rolled the flaky crust For pies, and stirred up cakes and cookies . . . Here Many a hasty luncheon has been thrust Down eager throats . . . Speech, intimate and dear, Took place around this table made of pine, So homely was its use—but half divine!

For finer treasure cannot stir her thought As this does . . . All the furniture she bought Long, long ago is carried from the door. She does not grieve for it. . . . Her dreams remain Around a kitchen table, where once more The children gather, doing suans again . . . And she, engrossed in happy memory, Smiles at her husband o'er a cup of tea.

Making Old Roads Safe For Speed

When the automobile manufacturers stepped up the speed of their cars a few years ago many curves on the Wayne county roads became obsolete and dangerous, stated Edward N. Hines, veteran road commissioner of Wayne County.

We were faced with the problem of rebuilding these curves at a large expense to the taxpayers due to the fact that in previous years they had been super-elevated or tipped to accommodate a top speed of 35 miles per hour. To remedy the now obsolete design, the whole slab on sharp curves is "mud-jacked" to conform to the modern high speed without the excessive cost of removal and replacement of any pavement.

The equipment used consists of one compressor, one mixer, two air drills, and a mud chamber. Holes are drilled in the slab at proper locations and a mixture of 20 parts of sandy loam to 1 part of Portland cement is then placed in the mud chamber. Air pressure of 85 pounds is then turned on which forces the mixture by means of a 3-inch hose through the previously drilled holes, hereby tilting the pavement to its desired position.

The crew handling this work consists of six men who are able to re-adjust 100 square yards or more of pavement per day, depending upon the amount of tilting necessary.

In addition to the saving involved, which is approximately 70 per cent of the cost of new construction, all of this work is done at no inconvenience to the traveling public, states Mr. Hines, and speeds are safely stepped up to 55 miles per hour.

THIS WEEK'S BEST FISHING STORY

"I've been reading in The Mail all about these fishing stories some of the boys have been telling. They've all been good, but I know Harry Ayers and I know Russ Powell and I know Gene Orendorf and I know all of these fishermen," said Edward Gayde the other day as he sat at a Rotary meeting discussing some of the finer points of the way some well known Plymouth followers of Isaac Walton tell their fish stories.

"I don't mean to dispute the accuracy of what they have had to say, but my fish story is a true fish story and one that every one will believe the minute they read it. Now I don't mean to have any one think for a minute that the stories these other fishermen have told are not true. Just because mine happens to be a true fish story," continued the well-known north side groceryman and pioneer business man.

"This fishing story takes me back to some 24 years ago, the year that Ed. Hough set the town talking about that new Maxwell car he had. That car was about the latest thing there was at that time in the line of automobiles. But it didn't have any top and it didn't have any dash board and a lot of other things that cars have these days.

"Well Ed and myself got it into our heads that we wanted to go fishing so we dug some worms, nice big ones like they used to get in the good old days, and we caught some minnows. We tied our cane poles to the side of the car and away we went to Walled Lake. The road was sandy and dusty but we got over there without having to stop once to fix the car or do anything to it. We made what we thought was pretty good time.

"We placed Ed's car down under a tree and went out on the lake fishing. No two men ever fished harder or in more places than we did. We used worms. We used minnows. We fished deep and we fished shallow. We fished under the lily pads and we fished out in the middle of the lake.

When it got late in the day, of course in those times no one thought much of driving in the country at night times with an automobile, we rowed to shore and called it a day.

"Our catch for the hardest day's fishing any two men ever did, consisted of one fish that had the nerve to bite one of the minnows that was bigger than itself. Now if there are two fishermen in Plymouth or anywhere else in the world that ever caught a fish smaller than the minnow being used for bait, just stand up and tell your story. Anyway that was the last day I ever did any fishing. I guess too it was the last fishing trip for Mr. Hough."

The profit system hasn't passed as long as they can sell a 5-cent cushion for two bits at a football game.

Tournament To Start On July 25th

The annual tennis tourney which is expected to include three thousand of Michigan's novice players will be under way in Plymouth about July 25th. The final line for entries has been set for one o'clock on Saturday, July 27th, 1935.

This has been made strictly a novice tournament for the purpose of furthering the competitive field among beginners and others alike.

Chase Willett is in charge of the entries and director of the Plymouth district. The entry fee is nominal to each district of which there are twenty-eight, including many up-state cities.

The maximum entry fee of twenty-five cents has been chosen for the Plymouth district because of past experience in having a doubles tournament, fee paid, after the final tournament of the districts which is always held at Gladwin or Waterworks Park.

The play between the men and women from the districts will begin August 3rd. The Detroit News being sponsor of "the world's biggest tournament" furnishes the prizes. The winners of each district, both men and women, will receive a tennis racket and the runners-up a pair of tennis shoes. The News also furnishes balls at the final meet in Waterworks park.

Northville players have entered the Plymouth district and are probably looking forward to a tourney of their own within a few years.

When the four clay courts near Cass Benton Park are rolled into first class shape and the cement courts adjacent to them are finished there will be many more players developed in Plymouth and especially Northville.

Harvey H. Barcus is in charge of the tournament under The Detroit News and Harry P. Eikoff is helping direct it through the city of Detroit, department of recreation.

The newspapers in the different communities are supporting the net meet in their own district and sending the four top players to the finals in Detroit.

Dies As His Boat Leads In A Race

Older Plymouth residents who remembered Fred S. Ekiloff well during the days he was superintendent of the Hamilton Rifle company were shocked Saturday when they learned of his sudden death as he was sailing his yacht to victory in a race being held on St. Clair lake.

He was riding his boat, the Docant, to sure victory, when his son Kenneth suddenly saw his father collapse and slip from the boat into the water. The son threw two life preservers to his father and he caught them both. He hung to them tightly as his son pulled him towards the boat. Then suddenly his grip loosened and he sank below the water. Doctors said that a heart ailment was the cause of his death. His body was quickly recovered.

Rain Proves Big Help To Cemetery

The appearance of the grounds of Riverside cemetery is the best for this time of the year than in recent years. The large amount of rainfall which we have had during the past few months has made it possible to keep the grass green and growing; whereas, in most years the lack of rainfall has caused the grass to be very badly burned by the middle of July.

This is an indication that if water for sprinkling were available the ground could be kept in fairly good condition. It is suggested that those interested in the cemetery, who have not recently seen it, drive through the grounds and see what can be done when the proper amount of water is available.

The city commission and cemetery board have considered for the past several years the matter of installing a sprinkling system in the cemetery grounds, but as yet finances of the cemetery will not permit such installations. There is only about 25 per cent of the old cemetery property under perpetual care, which is not a sufficient amount to give an income large enough to finance a sprinkling system. The cost of obtaining perpetual care is the lowest in the history of the cemetery. Perpetual care can be obtained on any lot by the payment of thirty cents per square foot. Funds received from this source are placed in a trust fund with the Detroit Trust Co. and the earnings from such funds are used annually for the care of lots. Many people subscribe to annual care which costs a minimum of $500 per year; whereas, if a lump sum payment were made and invested in the trust fund, it would not take very many years to offset this $500 annual charge.

During the past few months, several persons have transferred their lots over to the perpetual care plan, but there are still several hundred lots which are not under this plan, and are either not cared for at all or are being cared for by the local owners. If all of these lots were under the Perpetual Care plan and a sprinkling system were installed, then it would be possible for the City to do a much better job in maintaining the cemetery.

As one drives through the cemetery, lots will be seen which have had absolutely no care during the past season. These lots are the ones which are not cared for by the owners and on which annual care of perpetual care charges have not been made.
