

Discovers Paper 104 Years Old

The first issue of the Grand Rapids Tribune, published at Grand Rapids on Tuesday, April 18, 1837, is an interesting journalistic document brought into the office of The Plymouth Mail this week by Mrs. Nelson Cole of 1005 West Ann Arbor Trail. This paper was discovered by Mrs. Cole in an old farm house on McClellan road, west of Plymouth, more than 30 years ago.

The paper is interesting on a number of counts, for it is not only volume one, number one of a publication of more than 100 years ago, but it contains the text of President Van Buren's inaugural address. A glowing testimonial for democracy, President Van Buren stated "the capacity of the people for self-government, and their willingness for a high sense of duty, and without those exhibitions of coercive power so generally employed in other countries, to all peaceful restraints and exactions of the municipal law, have also been favorably exemplified in the history of our American states."

"Occasionally, it is true, the ardor of public sentiment outrunning the regular progress of the judicial tribunals, or seeking to reach cases not denounced as criminal by the existing law, has displayed itself in a manner calculated to give pain to the friends of free government. These occurrences, however, have been less frequent in our country than in any other of equal population on the globe," declared the President.

Must Write His Name on Ballot

Leroy H. Reiman, who has been deputy sheriff of Wayne county for this section during the last two years and who carried on the work of Constable George Springer during his long illness, is the only candidate for constable to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Springer.

The candidacy of Mr. Reiman is looked upon with considerable favor in view of the fact that he is thoroughly familiar with the type of work he would be called upon to do if elected at the forthcoming election. He not only possesses a knowledge of the job, but he also has good judgment. Because of the fact that Mr. Springer died after he had been nominated for the office, Mr. Reiman's name will not be on the ballot. His friends are urged to write his name in and then place a regular voting cross in front of it.

For life and health at least 13 minerals seem essential.

Mr. and Mrs. Finlan Back From Florida

When Mr. and Mrs. Charles Finlan left Fort Lauderdale, Florida for Plymouth last week Wednesday, the weather way down south was as warm and balmy as one could wish for—but when they arrived in Plymouth, this locality was experiencing one of the coldest snaps of the entire year.

"But we are glad to be back in Plymouth," stated Mr. Finlan yesterday. "We enjoyed our vacation in the south. A part of the time we were in Lakeland and saw the Tigers go into training for the coming season. The trip home was made in ideal weather all the way, no cold winds or snow until we reached Plymouth."

Mr. Finlan, who was suffering from a broken bone in one of his ankles when he left, has sufficiently recovered from the injury so that he can use his foot without difficulty.

Howard Stark Leaves Hospital

Following many weeks spent in Plymouth hospital where he underwent a serious operation, Howard Stark has sufficiently recovered to be able to be about the streets for a few hours each day. Shortly after the first of the year Mr. Stark was taken to the hospital for an operation, but attending physicians did not expect his convalescent period to be of such long duration. However, Mr. Stark is now well on the road to complete recovery.

He plans to spend the summer with Mrs. Stark on an extended vacation trip. A great lover of northern Michigan, Mr. and Mrs. Stark will leave as soon as weather is suitable for one of the state parks, not planning to return to their home in Plymouth before fall. Mr. Stark's host of friends will be glad to know of his most satisfactory recovery.

Attends Rites of Samaritan Aunt

Mrs. Oscar Matts and family attended the funeral Tuesday of her aunt, Mrs. Sylvia Merritt Coe, of Ypsilanti, who spent a lifetime aiding the needy and homeless, and who is revered by the many boys and girls she had taken into her home to rear as her own.

Mrs. Matts, born Lynn Merritt, lived in a farm home one mile west of Mrs. Coe's late rambling residence, until 25 years ago when she moved to Plymouth.

Mrs. Coe, who died Saturday, was childless, but she provided a home for numerous needy children, who were all at the funeral to pay tribute to the only mother they had ever known. All of the Coe "children" were badly in need of homes. Some were orphans. Some were wards of children's societies who needed individual care. Some were ill and needed a restful place in which to recuperate.

Correspondingly, Mrs. Matts who was taken care of as a child by her aunt, has provided for her younger sister in addition to adopting two children, Oscar, 20 years old, and Ivahlynn, 17 years old.

Traffic School Has New Machine

Purchase of a new movie projector for the training center for traffic offenders at the Detroit House of Correction has increased the facilitation of class work now being conducted by officers of the Detroit Safety Division. The machine will also be used in instructing inmates taking extension courses at the institution.

At the conclusion of the six-weeks course of February and the first two weeks in March, the traffic school was attended by 274 violators, 368 inmates other than violators and 322 visitors from schools or groups from communities in Wayne county.

Here's Big News! F.D.S. on Vacation

Shades of Lucifer!

Fred Schrader is taking a vacation! His daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Prescott and daughter, Sally, of Dixon, Illinois, drove up in front of the Schrader residence Tuesday morning just as the sun was due to rise over the Daisy factory, packed Fred's grip, hurried him to their automobile, and whizzed away for Florida.

Yes, sir, as far as any man hereabouts can find out, it is the first vacation Mr. Schrader has ever taken in his lifetime. Once he did cross over Main street and spent 15 minutes in the office of The Plymouth Mail, and that is about the longest vacation any one ever knew him to take.

They have gone to Lakeland, Florida, where Mrs. Schrader and daughter, Evelyn, have been spending the last few weeks. No one knows how long they can keep the head of the house among the palm trees and the mocking birds, but most guesses are that it will be about two days.

An American air line has put out calendars printed in reverse type for use in barber shops so that the customer in the chair may read the date in a mirror. This, however, is still not the answer envisaged in the appeal. "Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight!"

Michigan grows good corn

Sturdy hybrid strains of corn, adapted to local conditions, have been developed by private breeders and by the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station. Hybrids produce strong stalks, even ears, and a profitable yield.

RARELY thought of as a "corn-belt" state, Michigan nevertheless ranks eleventh in the production of this great American grain crop. The corn grown each year on the farms of Michigan would provide two bushels for every home in the nation.

Whether he has a telephone or not, every farmer who grows or feeds corn benefits from the part modern telephone service plays in reporting up-to-the-minute price quotations, in the prompt delivery of seed, implements and stock, and in the process of marketing that moves his products to the consumer.

All along the line, from plowing to husking, from corn-crib to dinner-table, your Telephone Company helps to carry on the job of production and conservation of food—a vital link in the National Defense.

Much of Michigan's corn goes into the feeding of livestock. The state's farm income from meat animals in 1939 was about $50,000,000. The Michigan housewife buys corn almost every day in the form of steak or pork chops, eggs or milk.

Mrs. Belle Farley Murray, Noted Child Psychologist, Outlines Some Fundamentals in Child Training

There are no A. B. C.'s to insure success in the rearing of children, but there are certain basic principles from which both parents and children may benefit," says Mrs. Belle Farley Murray, noted child psychologist, who lives at 557 Blunk avenue, Mrs. Murray, formerly associated with the Merrill-Palmer school in Detroit and now an instructor in the "Family" class at Wayne University and a child training lecturer for the J. L. Hudson company, has a 12-year-old daughter, Jean.

"We are very conscious of the need for good citizenship as insurance for democracy today, and the best place to cultivate good citizenship is in the home. An important factor in good citizenship is satisfactory self-adjustment to the needs of the group," Mrs. Murray explains.

The problems of adjustment have become more complex with the development of the industrial age and the speed of the urban life, according to Mrs. Murray.

Keen competition is one of the resulting phenomenon which reaches children's experience at an earlier age today.

"Psychologists tell us that security for our children is vitally important for their best development. The parent concerned with a world which sometimes seems to him anything but secure often becomes doubtful and even pessimistic about his ability to help his child gain this precious value. Perhaps a re-evaluation of security—what it is and how we create it—may be worthwhile. The child's own nature, factors in environment and some guiding principles offer us a basis for sound achievement.

"Just as the baby gradually gains physical independence, he also, with good learning experience, becomes more and more capable of achieving security from within. We believe we can help our children develop these inner resources by creating an environment in which they can have confidence, by respecting each child as a unique and valued personality who has rights, needs, wishes and possibilities worthy of consideration, by helping them base their sense of security upon lasting values, and by offering reasonable appreciation and approval."

Environment is not the only consideration in child training. Mrs. Murray points out, but given a reasonably good heritage of capacities, a child's development may be materially improved by his environment. It has been said that heredity which provides one's fundamental capacities is like a block of marble, and that environment is the sculpture which carves it into a thing of beauty.

Discussing discipline, Mrs. Murray declares that even the very young child manifests growing ability in self-control. One of the parent's functions is to help him progress in self-discipline and be less in need of external control. Therein lies the difference between domination and guidance. Domination is an external control and an attempt to make the child do things in your way or according to your ideas, while guidance is an effort to help the child develop his own best capacities including self-control. Little children react in terms of what is pleasant or unpleasant to them rather than right or wrong.

Because the pre-school child is young in years and experience, dependent in many ways and eager for approval, it is natural for him to be unquestioningly obedient much of the time. Because he is a growing developing individual with a strong urge toward self-reliance and domination of things and people it is likewise natural for him occasionally to rebel against the authority of others.

"When it is necessary for your child to obey you, lower your voice a bit to gain his attention—don't raise it, speak his name, then pause before making a request; reduce the submission-to-person element and avoid the 'you'll do this because I say so' attitude keeping the number of orders at a minimum; and keep emergency words and voice for emergencies," Mrs. Murray advises. "When a child disobeys, study the case from his point of view, too, avoid unwise threats, and check to see if the child's needs or wishes are continually disregarded."

"Good mental health contributes to happy and effective living. It has to do with sound thinking, wholesome attitudes and emotional responses and good behavior. It is not just the absence of mental disease; it is a positive, dynamic possession of a rest and constructive meaning to life. Some indications of good mental health are the ability to face change without great upset, preferably with a keen sense of adventure; the ability to face disappointment successfully, and a reasonable faith in self and other human beings," Mrs. Murray states.

"Parent-child relationships, good or bad, don't just happen. They develop out of a multitude of experiences beginning in infancy and continuing throughout life," Mrs. Murray emphasizes.

In the belief that the kind of relationship between parents and children depends in considerable measure upon one's willingness to learn, Mrs. Murray offers the following list of books as helpful suggestions in child training for various age groups: "Your Baby and How to Care For It," by Dr. Lindsey W. Batten and "Babies Are Human Beings," by Dr. C. A. Aldrich and M. Aldrich, both for baby study; "Your Child's Development and Guidance," by Lois Hayden Meek, "Parents and the Pre-school Child" by Blatz and Bott, and "Home Guidance for Young Children," by Grace Lagdon, for the toddler age; "There's No Place Like Home," by James Lee Ellenwood and "We, the Parents," by S. Gruenberg, for the in-between age, and "Do Adolescents Need Parents," by Katherine Taylor, "The Sex Life of Youth" by Elliott and Pene, and "A Plan for Marriage" by Joseph K. Folsom for adolescents and young persons.

Patricia Ann, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McGorey, celebrated her fourth birthday last Monday by entertaining 10 of her little friends in the afternoon. The little guests were Linda Lent, Patrick and Teresa Nolan, Kathleen and Patricia Norton, Norma Leslie, Arlene Ross, Donald and Lloyd Smith and Gerald McKenzie. Mrs. McGorey delighted the children with attractive favors and party goodies.

A Rose Calendar

(By The Master Gardener)

This calendar is compiled on the basis of climatic conditions in the northern part of the United States. Suggested time for various operations will vary slightly with locality.

March—Plant new stock just as early as ground can be worked.

If you are getting new roses for spring planting, remember to order early and plant early. All good rosarians stress the fact that if spring-planted roses are to succeed, early planting is important so that the plant may become established before a hot weather sets in. Roses are heavy feeders. To assure vigorous plants with healthy foliage and an abundance of bloom, keep the beds supplied with proper nourishment. For established plants, apply a complete, balanced plant food very early in the spring, as soon as the frost is out of the ground; feed one rounding tablespoonful of complete, balanced plant food to each square foot of space in the bed or surrounding the bush. This is equivalent to four pounds to each 100 square feet. Apply on the surface of the soil and work into the soil lightly with a steel rake. Any plant food that comes in contact with stems or foliage should be washed off. For first-year plants, apply three pounds of balanced plant food for each 100 square feet, and at the same rate every three weeks during the growing season.

April—During the first part of April remove the top mulch of straw or leaves from the rose beds. (This may be too early for some sections.) Leave the hills of soil in place. On a warm day, spray the soil and plants with a good fungicide, such as lime-sulphur or Bordeaux mixture. Cut off canes that protrude from the mound.

May—Remove the earth mound and level off. Prune, removing all dead tops and surplus growth. After the buds have swelled, prune again. Hybrid Teas should be pruned about six inches from bud-level.

Give first feeding after earth mound is removed and leveled off. Apply one tablespoonful of complete, balanced plant food to each square foot of space around the bush. After application work lightly into the soil and water thoroughly.

As soon as foliage appears, begin spraying or dusting with a good fungicide, or a combination fungicide and insecticide such as Massey dusts, which can be purchased under several trade names. Continue spraying or dusting regularly throughout the season, until frost. Be sure to make application before rains and after rains, and see that it gets under the leaves as well as on top. Remember in connection with spraying or dusting that satisfactory results cannot be expected unless the treatment is given regularly and thoroughly.

Begin cultivating regularly, at least once each week, and after each rain or watering.

June—Feed again when first color shows in buds.

Continue to dust or spray weekly.

Continue cultivating regularly to conserve moisture.

Apply small quantity of arsenical of lead to the soil and give light cultivation to destroy rose bugs or chafers before they emerge from the soil.

July—Prune ramblers immediately after the blooming period is over.

Continue to cultivate and spray regularly.

August—Give roses their final feeding in mid-August. Do not feed after this date.

The Poorest Place to Tell a Lie!

IT has been said by some of our radical reformers that advertising misleads the public.

Such accusations fall under their own weight.

The poorest place in the world to attempt a lie is in the advertising columns of American newspapers and magazines, and in American radio programs.

In the first place, our publishers and broadcasting companies wouldn't carry dishonest advertising. They outlawed it long ago.

In the second place, such efforts to mislead would be conducted in full view of the public and of the officials empowered to apply fraud laws.

In the third place, dishonest advertising is as inefficient as dirty football. It does not pay.

Informed people have lost interest in the advertising-baiting books and speeches of the radical self-appointed reformers since one after another of them has figured prominently before the House Special Committee on un-American Activities.

MICHIGAN, MY MICHIGAN

ience and the new knowledge he will gain in the army at his type of work will make him a far better mechanic when his time is up.

There have been some stories published in some newspapers about soldier drinking parties around the camp. That's the bunk. Of course, in a group of more than 16,000 young men, there will always be some who will transgress a bit, but the drinking that has caused the comment has been done chiefly by civilians who have invited the youthful soldiers out to enjoy a pleasant evening. Not only will army officers tell you that, but residents in and around Kalamazoo and Battle Creek confirm the statement.

"No one can hazard a guess at what the next few months may bring forth," said Captain DeJonge, "but this we do know that when these young men are through with their army service, they will return home better citizens and better trained workers."

What about the food served to the men at Fort Custer? It could not be better—and there is plenty of it for even those with the biggest appetites. In fact, the rations are fit for a king.

The writer was assigned to have lunch with the anti-tank company of the 2nd Infantry. Great dishes of spaghetti and cheese, of baked beans and bacon, fresh vegetables sliced and served in bowls of vinegar-fried potatoes—and bread and butter—with coffee that excels that served in most of Detroit's famous eating places—these dishes made up the menu. And for dessert there was a most delicious pudding, not just a little served in a side dish, but pudding served in a big bowl so that a soldier might help himself to all that he wanted.

For dinner that evening there was going to be served roast meat, with boiled potatoes and other good food, and apple pie was to be the dessert. Uncle Sam surely is seeing to it that his boys get the best there is—and the best is to what they are entitled.

Clothing? Well, it just couldn't be better. Warm overcoats, with galoshes, gloves and caps—everything to provide comfort for the soldiers on a cold, stormy day.

The writer discovered Captain Raymond W. Sellers of the anti-tank company to be a most interesting individual. He is a West Pointer, but came up from the ranks. All admissions to this famous military school are not made by congressional appointments and examinations. An enlisted soldier who can pass the entrance examinations can enter the school—and that is just what Captain Sellers did. Some months ago he was transferred to Fort Custer to head up the anti-tank company. He has 120 in his company, all of them enlisted men. He expected some 40 or more selectees that day and is looking for about 58 more of his men back who have been up at Camp McCoy.

The anti-tank forces in the army are something a bit new. This is an organization set up to fight off powerful tanks. There are small anti-tank guns at Fort Custer that are so powerful they can drive a shell through a foot and a half of concrete a mile away. They can send a bullet tearing through a solid sheet of steel over an inch and a half thick. It takes six men to operate one of these guns, which look like exceedingly small outfits for the terrific wallop they can deliver. A trained crew can deliver more than 30 shots a minute.

Barracks at Fort Custer are now air-conditioned so that when warm weather arrives, the boys in training will have most comfortable quarters in which to spend their idle time.

There are several motion picture theatres about the grounds, one being set aside specially for colored troops who are in training at the Fort.

Fort Custer still is lacking in a complete equipment of trucks but production is being speeded up and the shortage will doubtless be ended soon.

America can well be proud of the new type army that is being developed by its war department—a new type army that will amaze the world by its performance if trouble ever comes to our shores. That is the impression one gains after looking about Fort Custer.

Trailer Camp Ordinance Passed

shall be based upon the number of individual trailer parking spaces and the number of individual cabins provided as designated by the plot plan, and shall be established at five dollars annually for each unit trailer parking space. No reduction will be allowed for fractional yearly licenses. Licenses shall expire on the thirtieth day of April of each year.

The city manager is to refer each application for a license to the city health officer who shall investigate the site to determine if the proposed camp conforms with the terms of the ordinance. The application must then be referred to the chief of police and to the fire chief to determine if the camp meets the minimum standards of safety. The approval of the application is then referred to the city commission.

According to the ordinance, one person may hold licenses for both tourist and trailer camps covering the same site if all necessary conditions are complied with. A service building is to be maintained on each trailer and tourist camp site except in tourist camps which have modern conveniences in each and every cabin. The ordinance calls for an adequate supply of pure drinking water, showers, laundry facilities and concrete floors in the service buildings.

Licenses may be revoked after a hearing, if the licensee violates any of the required terms or if he permits unlawful or immoral conditions to exist. Every trailer and tourist camp shall be in charge of a responsible attendant at all times, and the ordinance requires a guest register listing the name and address and car license number of each tourist, along with the date of arrival and departure.

The city may require lighting during the night at any camp site, and no occupied auto trailer shall be permitted to remain in a camp in the city for more than 45 days in any 12-month period.

Visitors at private homes in the city may park their trailers on the property without obtaining a license, but they must notify the police of such action. This permits guests of residents in the city to park trailers at private residences while visiting. The ordinance, however, outlaws the development of squatter camps on vacant lots in the city. The trailer and tourist camp ordinance will become law within 21 days following its passage by the city commission.

The club will have its next regular meeting on Monday evening, March 24 at 7:30 o'clock. This meeting will also be at Grange hall.

Members of the club have been advised of a visit of Dr. Townsend with Henry Ford at Ways, Georgia. Dr. Townsend while not quite as old as Mr. Ford, is as physically active as the famous automobile manufacturer.

Maccabees Hold Dinner Meeting

Lady Maccabees, Hive No. 156, of Plymouth entertained Wednesday evening at a 6:30 dinner. The greatest homage we can pay to truth is to use it.—Emerson.

Bowlers Back, Cold in Northwest

"Maybe the natives about here think it has been cold during the last few days, but they don't know anything about cold weather," declared Garnet Baker and other members of the Plymouth bowling team who went up to St. Paul last Saturday to take part in the A.B.C. bowling tournament held in Minnesota.

"It was way below zero and the wind was blowing a 45-mile gale—and that means it is cold. They can talk about the dry air of the northwest, not being as cold as the air down here, but they have to show me. Never suffered so much from the cold in my life as I did up in Minnesota Sunday, Monday and Tuesday," said Mr. Baker.

Other members of the Plymouth bowling team who went with him were Ray Gilder, William Lomas, Gar Evans and Don Lightfoot. All declare that the weather up in St. Paul was about the coldest they had ever experienced.

On Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Elmer G. Ross, a tea and handkerchief shower was given for Mrs. Edward L. Ham, who is soon to take up her residence in Ohio. Mrs. Robert Baker and Mrs. Ralph E. Baker assisted Mrs. Ross as hostesses. About 40 ladies were present. Green carnations and white sweet peas were combined as a centerpiece on the luncheon table and the tea cakes and sandwiches carried out the St. Patrick motif as well. The honored guest was presented with a corsage from the "lunch" hostesses, and many other gifts were given her from friends present.

ATTACK ON AMERICA

THE STORY SO FAR: Intelligence Officer Benning's warning that 200,000 foreign troops were poised in Mexico for an attack on the United States caused grave concern in army headquarters, but the people branded the statement as "war mongering." Four large southern cities were suddenly attacked from the air.

CHAPTER X—Continued

As the commanders scattered toward their station wagons and military sedans, the bright sky festered into a hideous hiss of sound. It came crashing in out of the distance. The car could trace its course as it settled toward the earth.

An instant's silence and the ground trembled under the impact of high explosive. A geyser of muddy brown earth shot skyward, the air filled with the mighty detonation.

The departing commanders gave an anxious look at the spot of dirt, but changed neither gait nor posture. General Mole calmly touched a match to the stub of his cigar and gave several vindictive puffs.

"Well, there's the first shot," he muttered. "Sounded to me like a long-range baby—probably from twenty or thirty miles."

An observation plane radioed in the information. Van Hasek's heavy artillery had set up north of the Nueces. Mole offered no comment. There was nothing he could do about it until the enemy came within range of his howitzers. His own 105-millimeter cannons, good for fifteen miles, had yet to be molded, mounted, tested, and delivered to the army.

As for his airplanes, there was no taking further risks over Van Hasek's moving columns. It didn't matter that the air service had sent in the crack combat groups from all three of its powerful wings. Nor that American pilots and gunners had proved themselves this morning much more than a match for the Van Hasek airmen.

The American squadrons had paid a heavy price for their swoops against Van Hasek's invaders. Into one anti-aircraft trap after another the Americans had fallen.

The first big shell fell in an empty field well back from the Second's front lines. A second shot followed quickly, and the business of long-range cannonading settled down into glum, racking routine. From a range of approximately twenty-two miles, observation reported. The Van Hasek columns were still rolling forward in a great, tortuous martial serpent whose tail reached far back across the Rio Grande into Mexico.

The ten thousand men of the division worked feverishly through the hot afternoon, deepening and extending their trenches, adjusting gun positions. They pretended indifference to the roar of Van Hasek's artillery, to the frequent spouting fountains of earth that rose hideously about them. In mid-afternoon one shell caught a full squad of men who in a flash were shreds of flesh.

A stark reminder of what was to come. But the men who saw this tragedy went stubbornly on with their work.

Out of the distance came the rumble of light American artillery. The firing came from the Rio River, which meant that Major Randt, commanding, was potting at the head of the main attack force. The sound of Van Hasek's counter-battery assault waited in fifteen minutes later. It rose in volume. The artillery duel went on, growing in violence, which told the whole Second Division that the intrepid Randt was forcing the Van Hasek advance guard to extend itself.

Firing broke out to the north and south on the extreme flanks. At the division command post Mole and his staff watched on these actions with tense nerves. Three o'clock was near. If Van Hasek's invaders could be delayed much longer, they would not be able to deliver their attack in force against the Second before daybreak.

General Mole and his staff made an estimate of the situation. Mole's judgment was in a moment's exultation as his staff unanimously agreed with his own deduction. The Van Hasek commanders would not be able to attack now until morning. Their advanced divisions had not even started into assembly areas for battle deployment.

"That means we've delayed them one day without a fight," Mole exclaimed. "It gives us a real chance of getting through tomorrow without getting blown out of our shoes. After that—we will see what we will see. But what a hell of a pounding we're in for tonight, without any anti-aircraft and long-range artillery!"

When the hot Texas sun slipped down to the horizon through the haze in the west, a furious roar of motors swept the Second Division. The flight of enemy attack planes, flying an altitude of less than five hundred feet, struck with the sharp bite of forked lightning.

Over the 9th Infantry's sector the attack planes appeared close enough to be hit with a hand-grenade. Men gaped after the apparition, or ducked into their holes in the ground against the menace of fragmentation bombs. But there came no explosion. The enemy had not opened up with their machine guns.

"Gas!"

The warning outcry rose in volume from two thousand throats. Terror froze on men's faces. Officers the air; Washington was bombed and the President killed. General Brill, commander of the army in Texas, reported to General Hasek at Washington that he was opposed by greatly superior forces. General Hasek told him to resist the enemy's advance at all costs. Brill ordered Captain Boll to lead the 11th U. S.

Infantry into position for battle. Boll's motor column bravely withstood a terrible strafing from enemy aircraft, but he ordered the men to abandon their trucks when he observed twenty more planes approaching. Further resistance seemed useless to him.

Now continue with the story.

fragmentation and shock effect. A second enemy squadron was reported flying in.

The warning buzzed out over the field wire to the sectors. Men were to take cover as best they could. More long-range artillery opened up. Night became another volcanic bedlam, the Second's position a raging inferno that drove men huddling into their holes to claw frantically under a maddening impulse to dig their way down, down out of it all. Attack flights roared over, released fragmentation bombs attached to parachutes—small bombs that exploded on coming to earth.

It confirmed Mole's theory that Van Hasek expected an American withdrawal. This enemy blow fell at exactly the hour the Second would be pulling out if such had been its intention.

In the 20th Infantry sector a bomb, estimated a six-hundred-pounder, fell in rear of a company position with a devastating force that released seventeen men to speechless, trembling impotence, though no man was wounded. Later they were reported slowly recovering their wits from the shock and were not evacuated.

Van Hasek's planes were operating without lights. American pursuit hawks buzzed about, but were ineffective in the darkness. Van Hasek's fury rose and fell intermittently, then slowly dwindled away into a mere barking of some long-range artillery that was pounding the roads into San Antonio.

The clash of musketry far out in front brought an anticlimax to the crimson hurricane. Van Hasek patrols were pressing the American outposts, seeking information of an American withdrawal that had not occurred. Half a dozen Van Hasek riflemen were gobbled up by the 9th Infantry outpost and shunted back for question.

Over the field wire, Mole's staff checked casualties at eleven o'clock. The bombardment had killed only 71 men, wounded 142. Another 80 were numbed by shock. Three had been stripped of their wits and sent back, in driving madness, for evacuation.

Mole nodded his head approvingly at this small toll. It did not surprise him that he had lost so few men to the Van Hasek strafing. This was not Mole's first battle. In France he had learned how frugal can be the night's harvest of artillery and bombardment.

"I've been talking to Brill at San Antonio," Mole told his assembled staff when he had completed his newest estimate. "Fort Sam Houston took another air beating to night. Our air service has been forced to abandon Kelly and Randolph Fields. Galveston got a dose of mustard gas tonight after our 6th Anti-Aircraft Regiment there shot down an enemy bomber. It's all unspeakably horrible—but my mind has had so many jolts I just can't feel things any longer."

General Mole staggered but caught himself. The light in his unquenchable eyes burned steady through the toxins of fatigue. There had been a lapse in his memory, now he picked up the gap.

"Put the Guard infantry in reserve just south of San Antonio. Also keep the mechanized cavalry out to look after our flanks. I am going to turn in for some sleep, but don't hesitate to call me if anything important develops. Otherwise call me when the enemy preparation fire puts down on us in the morning. Good night, gentlemen."

CHAPTER XI

First Lieutenant Boynton, 9th Infantry, lay sprawled on the ground, his eyes strained into the first gray light of approaching dawn. Above the thunder of the enemy artillery preparation he could feel the pounding of his heart against the drums of his ear.

Behind that curtain of fire and thunder Boynton knew the Van Hasek infantry was moving forward to the assault. From his position out in front of the American outpost line it was Boynton's job to discover the attack and fall back to the outpost with twenty riflemen of his who lay immediately behind him.

Boynton's eyes caught an instant's glimpse of infantry, men silhouetted against the sheet-lightning of artillery flashes. Not more than a hundred yards away he estimated the enemy infantrymen. He slipped the safety lock of his service automatic and lifted the weapon in front of his face. His men, long tense and ready, fitted the butts of their new semi-automatic rifles against their shoulders and waited.

Like a ship looming suddenly out of a thick fog there came into view the weaving shadows that were the flesh and blood of moving infantry. A spurt of flame leaped from the muzzle of Boynton's pistol. It released the pent-up rage of twenty Garand rifles which sent a stream of lead pouring into those shadows of the night.

The warning came in from an observation plane a few minutes after nine o'clock. It merely confirmed Mole's fears. Fast on the heels of the warning came the devastating roar of a heavy bomb. The earth churned under the roar of successive explosions. A squadron of nine bombers, air service reported, using an estimated three-hundred-pound bomb which would have a barbed orders, noncoms raged at their men.

Stay put! Discipline slowly but surely prevailed over the hot impulse of self-preservation. Men dove into their trenches to bury their faces in the earth, or ripped off their cotton shirts, and wound them, doused with water, about their faces. Gas—and not a gas mask in the entire regiment—only ninety in the whole division and those for demonstration purposes in training tests.

What type of gas had the Van Hasek barbarians put down? Obviously not a mustard or persistent gas. The Van Hasek infantry would not want the sector contaminated in the morning when they launched their attack to blast the Americans out of position. A noncom caught the answer as his eyes burned into tears.

"Fear gas!" he shouted.

The sector commander cursed again and trotted off to the left, imparting a dose of deliberation to his gait. Gas officers were making their calculations of what appeared a new gas. Scores of men, afflicted with a lachrymation and burns that might extend over several days, would have to be evacuated to the hospital at San Antonio for treatment.

Overhead the American aviation was redoubling its efforts. The 33d Pursuit Squadron was hawking over the sector. The 77th Pursuit Squadron was patrolling to the front. That audacious attack flight of Van Hasek's had used its heels to get away intact. The American pilots were sharply alert against a second such surprise. Reinforcements flew up from Kelly Field.

Overhead the American aviation was redoubling its efforts. Pursuit and observation squadrons had flown in from Louisiana and Virginia. Other planes were en route from California.

At the division command post, General Mole and his staff grimly watched the fading light of day. There was a tightening of tension throughout the sectors as dusk slowly engulfed them and deepened into night. Long-range artillery pounded away laconically, tearing great craters in the Second's artillery area and hitting near the division's main line of resistance, and back in the bivouacs of the reserves. This told Mole that enemy observation planes had photographed his positions in detail—and confirmed the hint of what must be expected during the night.

Evident it was, as the enemy purpose unfolded itself, that Van Hasek did not mean to brook delay. With the preponderance of force held by his main Laredo column he had no need to wait. For that matter it hardly made sense, within the Van Hasek line of military reasoning, that the Second Division would commit the rash audacity of a serious fight in front of San Antonio. Withdrawal would be only the logical course for the Americans, and Van Hasek had no reason to expect anything more than a few holding battalions at daybreak, resistance that would roll up in a hurry and scatter before his massed assault waves.

"Bombers flying in, altitude between eight thousand and ten thousand feet!"

The warning came in from an observation plane a few minutes after nine o'clock. It merely confirmed Mole's fears. Fast on the heels of the warning came the devastating roar of a heavy bomb. The earth churned under the roar of successive explosions. A squadron of nine bombers, air service reported, using an estimated three-hundred-pound bomb which would have a

AIR'S FREE so why not use it?

GETTING right down to it, one reason why you get as much as 10% to 15% more miles per gallon from a 1941 FIREBALL Buick with Compound Carburetion is that this engine is supplied with more air.

For it is a mixture of gasoline and air that gives you power.

A single carburetor, no matter how many jets it has, can handle only so much air.

But two carburetors that function as needed, as is the case in Compound Carburetion, can meet any fuel-supply need from low-speed to heavy-power use — and always provide a well-balanced mixture.

They can double the air supply as well as the gasoline feed — and that's something you can't do in any single-carburetor car.

So Compound Carburetion gets as much as 800 miles for the gas-cost of 700 in earlier Buicks of the same size.

It also provides a wallowing big bank of reserve power, which means an up-and-at-em lift and surge that's nothing short of thrilling to experience.

And you can have Compound Carburetion, you know, on any 1941 Buick — it's only a few dollars extra on the swell big SPECIAL pictured here, and standard equipment on all other models.

Easter Seal Sale for Crippled Aid Opens Friday

Seals May Be Bought From Rotarians, at Hotel or Drug Store

The annual sale of Easter seals to aid crippled children will open Friday (today) and continue until Easter. Robert Willoughby is chairman of the Rotary club committee aiding in the campaign, and Russell Daane is district secretary-treasurer of the Michigan Society for Crippled Children. The campaign is part of the nationwide drive conducted simultaneously in 30 other states throughout the country, affiliated with the National society. Wayne county joins with other counties throughout the state to gain public support necessary to carry on and expand the work for the crippled children in America on a local, state and national scale.

Residents of Plymouth will receive an appeal to purchase Easter seals by way of a direct-mail campaign which was started this week. Easter seals may also be purchased from any Rotarian, at the Hotel Mayflower, at the Plymouth United Savings bank, or at Community drug store.

The first Easter seal appeared in 1934. It showed a white cross in a red field. In the middle of this cross was a pen drawing of a boy with a crutch. Eight states participated in the sale and two and a half million of these penny seals were sold in Michigan alone. For many years, Donahy, the cartoonist of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, had been drawing very appealing national seal, depicting the cause of the forgotten crippled child. Year after year he demanded opportunity for crippled children. In 1934, a cartoon appeared in the Cleveland Plain Dealer which showed a little girl in a wheelchair and a boy standing about her with the aid of crutches. Both were looking upward into the rays of the sun.

The idea of this cartoon was transferred to the seal and the slogan, "Opportunity for Crippled Children," was printed across the top. The trend of the sale has been steadily upward. Now in 1941, the Easter seal has become traditional and established. The idea has spread from coast to coast and now a majority of the states sell Easter seals.

You may do your share by purchasing Easter seals from any member of the Rotary club, or at the other stations in Plymouth.

Delivers Speech on Temperance

Captain Charles J. Thumme of the Plymouth police department returned to the vicinity of his boyhood last Sunday when he appeared as guest speaker at the Methodist church of Kingston. Captain Thumme spoke on "Temperance" at a joint meeting of Kingston's two churches.

The speaker emphasized the importance of the right kind of home environment and guidance through the schools, churches, PTA groups and recreation programs in the community in preventing crime and intemperance among youth. Stating that we are all living at too fast a pace today, Captain Thumme declared that the people must get back to God. Mrs. Thumme accompanied her husband on his trip to Kingston.

Rotarians Hold Inter-City Meet

Plymouth Rotarians will be hosts to the new Rotary club of Garden City at an inter-city meeting Friday (today) at the Hotel Mayflower. John McLachlan, chairman of the community service committee, is local chairman of the meeting. The Garden City club will furnish the program.

Last Friday, John W. Tenn of Dearborn, who is a member of the Wayne County Crippled Children's organization, told club members of the need for continued help, and displayed some interesting motion pictures of the effort being made to re-make the lives of handicapped boys and girls. Robert Willoughby distributed to each club member a supply of Easter seals to be sold for the benefit of crippled children.

Inspectors Attend Milk Convention

Police Chief V. R. Smith and Marvin Partridge, city milk inspectors, and Herman Bakhaus of the Cloverdale Dairy attended the fifty-seventh annual convention and exhibit of the Michigan Allied Dairy association at Grand Rapids last week.

"It is chiefly through the efforts of this association that uniform standards of requirements for milk inspections have been adopted throughout the state," said Chief Smith, who reported that the highlight of the convention was a debate on "Should Michigan Have Milk Control?" The affirmative of that argument was supported by B. F. Beach of Detroit, and the negative by D.E. McLaughlin, who pointed out the hardship invoked upon the small milk operator by a price control legislation. Other items on the four-day program included "Bottle and Can Washing Problems," "Proper Inspection of a Milk House," "Bottle Exchanges" and "Advertising Dairy Products—State and National."

Class 'A' Clash. Floors Plymouth

Lose to Jackson in District Regionals Tilt

Plymouth's basketball team stepped into brutal, bruising class A competition at the Adrian district regionals. Friday, and succumbed in a 46-16 contest to Jackson high of the Five-A League.

Leaque, thus qualified for the semi-finals of state tournament, went on to lose by an eyelash, 39-38 on Saturday, by the point system, to Ann Arbor. Ann Arbor had qualified prior to the Plymouth game Friday by setting down Monroe high school, 29-22.

Playing in the big, new Adrian high gym, Plymouth found only one player, John Wilkie, approaching consistency in scoring. With Warren Hoffman who hooped three points, Wilkie emerged the only Plymouth player who parted the pleats in the Jackson hoop.

John manufactured 13 points, the highest score of both sides. While his mates were trailing the energetic Jackson forwards, he tended to business and hooped baskets.

Behind at the half, 28-8, Plymouth tried zone defense in the third quarter in an effort to curb the flow of Jackson baskets. This worked better than the first half man-to-man defense, Jackson scoring 11 points in the third period and seven in the final.

Both Plymouth and Jackson used 10 players during the game. At the half Jackson introduced a complete, new team.

Stan Pyciak, Jackson forward, was the only player to approach Wilkie's total goal score. His five field goals yielded 10 points. Henry Karwas, guard, was second with nine points.

State selected referees, Bortle and Stemmlein, called few fouls. Most of these in the last half, Plymouth missed, all told, eight foul throws and Jackson, five.

Fast and vivid, Jackson scored smoothly and fluently. Their careful guard under their own basket was not relaxed once. In very few instances was Plymouth able to recover a shot that bounced wild, off the Jackson backboard.

Jackson's forwards breaking fast, did not find difficulty in maneuvering under the Plymouth basket. They used a fast break and pass offense that netted constant results through the game.

Although Wilkie and Hoffman were the only Plymouth players to enter the scoring column, nine Jackson men scored at least twice.

When Jackson encountered Ann Arbor Saturday, both teams were tied at the game's end, and tied at the end of a three-minute overtime. Because Ann Arbor had played better, technically it was awarded one point and the game.

Ann Arbor, therefore, will be the only one of the four basketball contestants at Adrian to enter the state basketball tourney.

Plymouth, 16 points: Olds rf; Gorton rf; Hoffman lf; Section ff; Baker c; Wilkie rg; Lacy rg; Johnson lg; Hunter lg; Lorenz lg.

Magazine Sale

For the second successive year the Plymouth high school band, under the leadership of Lewis Evans, is sponsoring a magazine subscription sale. The contest will run from March 21 to March 31 inclusive and will feature Crowell publications, namely, the American, Woman's Home Companion and Collier's.

To push the sale along L. Shields, a representative of the Crowell Publishing company, will preside at assemblies and offer encouragement and inspiration to the amateur salesmen.

The entire school will participate in the competition which offers many attractive prizes. A room contest will again be held. Each student will participate in the contest in the first hour class he has on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The winning room will be entertained at a banquet, details of which will be disclosed later.

In addition to individual prizes, eight grand prizes are offered. They include a boy's and a girl's wrist watch, a man's suitcase and a lady's suit case, two Philco radios, and four eversharp pen and pencil sets.

The band intends to use the proceeds of the sale to pay the final installment on their uniforms, to purchase additional uniform equipment, and to pay for the purchase of two new instruments, an oboe and an alto clarinet.

Early Phonograph

Music, laughter and education were present at Miss Waldorf's 10-A English class last Wednesday.

What was the occasion? The students have just read the biography of Thomas Edison written by Francis Arthur Jones. The class has been very interested in Edison and many have written short themes. Perhaps the most outstanding work was contributed by Wilfred Green.

Wilfred's brother came into possession of one of Edison's first phonographs, which he brought to school for a private concert.

The case of the machine looks very similar to that of our modern sewing machines. The phonograph is about 16 inches in length and not more than 19 in width. One interesting feature of these early machines is that the records, or cylinders, instead of disks. Perhaps the greatest difference between the old and new is that the early machines have black diamond needles. The patent was first obtained in 1898 and later in 1904. The phonograph was in good working order, although on certain records it was a bit temperamental.

Wilfred gave the class a short concert consisting of the popular records of the time. The selections were "Overt on the Jersey Side," "Why Don't Santa Go Next Door?" and "It Looks Like A Big Night Tonight."

The song about Santa was very slow and sad compared with modern music. The last song was the story of night life in the early twentieth century.

The class was much interested in this entertainment. It was not only amusing, but far more instructive than the usual classroom exercises. How many modern conveniences he is responsible for.

School Mascot

Black cats bring bad luck, according to superstition, but whether or not "Nigger," the school mascot by self-adoption, upholds this tradition remains for the future to disclose. While this moot question hangs in the balance, Nigger has decided to waste no time in enjoying himself. He is very like the character whom everyone knows, but no one sees—Yehudi. So Nigger differs from Yehudi in that he actually allows his tail to be seen as he turns corners.

Nigger loves to explore and there are few rooms in the school building that he has overlooked. His favorite, of course, is the lunchroom, but much to his disappointment and chagrin, he is refused admittance even though he is a good eater and a good moocher. His favorite lounging places aside from the coat bin and wood pile in the basement, seem to be window ledges, show cases, and the Lincoln statue. He does look so appealing when he pokes his head under Lincoln's arm and coquettishly blinks his eyes.

Not only does Nigger go blithely up and down stairs, but he has lots of fun watching class-fairs. His favorite napping place is the typing department. Let the machines bark and clatter as they may, Nigger picks out a sunny spot on the window ledge, washes himself, and calmly goes to sleep. He also enjoys poking his inquisitive nose in study hall just to see if the students are tending to business.

But Nigger is not only a decoration; he is also a useful object, for like all felines, he enjoys catching mice. (Yes, indeed, there really are such things in school.)

Inspirations

(By A. Hope)

Band members were reporting their success at wheedling the family transportation for their use Saturday in packing the band to Ann Arbor. Arrangements went well. One musician with a cautious eye and a big car reported room for "Myself, my horn, and four more." It was the tuba player.

We all know that gum-chewing is positively illegal in Plymouth high school, but never until we heard the cutting comment of a high school teacher did we realize the horrible consequences. Gum, he pointed out, is made from cow's stomachs; any continued chewing of same results in a small amount of the substance sticking to the chewer's stomach—provided, of course, he swallows to get rid of it in a hurry. So the unfortunate swallower assumes at least the digestive traces of a cow. This, the teacher infers, is the reason for the large number of lovesick names so prevalent in high school halls. Because, he thinks, they all look like a bunch of sick cows.

We just can't forget the super-compliment of the bouncy electrical student who looked at a girl-classmate's hair for the first time. "Why," he gasped in amazement, "your hair is exactly the color of the electric wires on a rheostat."

Just introduced to this story, we have forebodings about its age, but it is here related, anyhow. Patient, with querulous ideas on the future says: Will I be able to sing, doctor, after my teeth are pulled? Dentist, (if he's awfully dumb) says "Why, yes, of course." So patient says how much extra will I have to pay for that?

Mary Patricia Kinahan, the up and coming artist of the class, was born in Chicago to James and Mary Kinahan. Pat, who is noted for her soprano voice, has taken part in the junior and senior play, Glee club, double quartet, Girl Reserves, and J-Hop and senior prom committees. She intends to become an art teacher. Her pet peeve is for people to call her "Bernice" and to call "Bernice," who is her sister.

Helen Moore was the runner-up. The eighth grade winner was Rosamund Busby who won on the word "cylinder." The runner-up was Franklin Maxey. The school champion will be one of the students on either the seventh or eighth grade teams. Each team is composed of the last ten students who remained standing in the first contest. Those teams will compete against each other for the school champion. Those who are on the seventh grade team are Mary Ellen Sexton, Helen Moore, Marjorie Elliott, Mary Jane Christianson, Ann Watkins, Celia Clayton, Wanda Merritt, Rose Marie Ericsson, Beatrice Johnson, and Danny Wisely.

Those on the eighth grade team are Rosamund Busby, Franklin Maxey, Bill Bauman, Jim Gray, Gerald Frisbie, Caroline Goodale, Betty Lou Arnold, Henry Johnson, Richard Wall and Juanita Petty.

While it may not seem quite fair to neglect the study of Europe so completely, there is little else that can be done. Europe is no longer the Europe of old; therefore, it is impossible to teach geography in the old manner. It is not impossible to teach geography in the new manner, for this fact, the students may be thankful that Europe has become so mixed-up. It has made their course of study somewhat easier.

Spelling bees were also held in the grade schools in the fifth and sixth grades. The winner at Central in the fifth grade was Mary Jane Thompson, who won on the word "cradled" and the runner-up was Jean McPherson. The winner in the sixth was Ellen Smith, who won on the word "cautious" and the runner-up was Jayson Closson. At Starkweather the fifth grade winner was Charles Arnold who won on the word "desire" and the runner-up was Charles Noah. The winner of the sixth grade was Wanda Lee Hunt who won on the word "ignite" and the runner-up was Marilyn Tobo.

Each grade school will hold a spelling bee in the fifth and sixth grades to determine school champions. Then the school champions from Central, Starkweather and Plymouth high schools will attend the district spelling bee. The winner of that bee will then go to Detroit to compete with other district champions.

Scholarships

Every year seniors interested in obtaining scholarships from colleges make applications for them in March or April. This year, as usual, there have been a number of scholarships offered to high school graduates of outstanding ability. Included are offers from the University of Michigan, Michigan State college, Michigan College of Mining and Technology, Kalamazoo college, and the University of Chicago. To be eligible for the scholarships, a student must be in the upper 20 percent of his class, show outstanding ability, and have a financial need. After application blanks are filled out, the students are required to take a competitive examination on a variety of subjects, including science, mathematics, and English. Intelligence tests are also given. Extra-curricular activities as well as scholastic ability are considered by the board awarding the scholarships.

Competition among the seniors for the University of Michigan scholarship is particularly keen this year with five seniors making applications. Most of the scholarships offer tuition paid for one year and renewable after that if the student maintains a "B" average. Any further information desired by students may be secured from the bulletin board in room 43 or from Mr. Dykhouse.

Editorial

The history-making struggle between the European continent, dominated by Hitler and the English-speaking people of the world, headed by Great Britain, has been causing a number of intricate problems, and not among the least of these, is the teaching of geography to American school children. With nearly disappearing often in less than 24 hours, it has become nearly impossible to teach students in the elementary grades the boundary lines of Europe, for what was a nation one day, is often a satellite or a small part of another country the next. Such rapidly changing conditions, necessitating an adjustment, have brought about a new manner of teaching geography very different from the geography of our parents' day and even from the geography of six years ago.

Formerly it was customary to teach students the names of countries, their capitals, and a little about the nation—its make-up, natural resources, races of people, and industries. At the present, with Europe in the chaotic condition it is, teachers have been instructing students on the characteristics of the United States, Central and South America, and the Far East, and discussing Europe only so far as it affects American industries and trade. Even the geography of the United States has changed, as far as teaching methods go. While in previous times, the names of the states and their capitals were learned incidentally while pupils studied various industries and their location—thereby learning the states and their principal cities.

While it may not seem quite fair to neglect the study of Europe so completely, there is little else that can be done.

Europe is no longer the Europe of old; therefore, it is impossible to teach geography in the old manner. It is not impossible to teach geography in the new manner, for this fact, the students may be thankful that Europe has become so mixed-up. It has made their course of study somewhat easier.

Literary Scraps

In connection with a recent English assignment in Miss Waldorf's classes, the students were asked to develop a paragraph from a given topic sentence. Following are two of the paragraphs showing how different interpretations are given to the same subject.

Building Paragraphs

Examples

There are many disturbers of the peace. The first and probably most important disturbers of the peace are foreign powers. Germany and England are at war. They are disturbing the peace of other nations as well as the people in their own countries. They are causing people to become ill, to starve to death, and even to be killed by bombs. Then there are the political parties in our country. At the time of election, they campaign for this and that, ways as to disturb the peace of an otherwise happy, joyful life. The third in importance is the criminal. Murders and thefts are not things that are welcomed in the lives of the people in our country. Probably the fourth in importance are the men who are constantly striking for more money, better working conditions, or something of that nature. They cause people to become badly injured and make a lot of disturbances in the industrial area of our country. The least of importance, in my estimation, is intoxicated people. Although they cause quite a lot of disturbance by accidents, foolish singing, and such things, they are not really so harmful to our country as the others. I have never heard of anyone who has been disturbed by the peace, and the world would be wonderful without them.

Disturbing the Peace

There are many disturbers of the peace. Did you ever sleep outside at night? At dawn the morning dove starts to coo. It is very annoying when you want to sleep. Then there are the gay people just outside the window late Saturday night. They always put me in a good mood. Another annoying peace disturber is the cat yowling on the back fence. The other night I lost my shoe by throwing it out the window. I must say my aim was good though. Last, but far from least, is the greatest of all peace disturbers—Hitler!

Detroit Flower Show Opens Saturday, April 5

Plymouth Garden
Lovers Plan
to Visit Exhibit

"If spring came but once in a century, instead of once a year, or burst forth with the sound of an earthquake, and not in silence, what wonder and expectation there would be in all hearts to behold the miraculous change!" —Longfellow.

And so it does, Mr. Longfellow, not with the sound of an earthquake, of course, but it bursts forth or literally erupts in Convention Hall, Detroit on the occasion of the annual spring flower show which this year will be staged April 5 to 12 inclusive, by the Michigan Horticultural society. Hundreds of thousands of blooms spring forth over night, buds swell and burst into leaf almost instantaneously, lawns green up all in a minute and one can step from the cold bleak winter into spring in all its magnificent splendor by going through a door.

Most outstanding in the entire exhibition will be the tropical garden staged by the Chrysler Corporation. It is to occupy 33,000 square feet of space. One end of the huge garden will be a jungle, dark, dense and moss covered where jungle birds such as the egrets, flamingoes and cranes roam, then as one moves along toward the other end the garden develops gradually until we find ourselves in a Michigan spring garden glowing with color and filled with the perfume of myriads of flowers. The purpose of the garden is to show how many of the tropical plants through horticultural research, hybridization or cross breeding and many years of effort have become available for use in our northern gardens. Some have become acclimated and with a certain amount of protection will thrive. Rhododendrons, azaleas and mountain laurel with their magnificent blooms in such great profusion can now adorn our gardens as well as boxwood and cectain of the palms.

The jungle section of the garden will be reproduced to the minor detail, lush rank undergrowth, steaming tropical bogs, dense, dark and mysterious. Material for this section of the garden, six carloads of it, was brought from Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida and California and several greenhouses are required to bring the plants into condition.

In connection with the Chrysler garden there will be staged a magnificent display of hundreds of orchid blooms of choice and very rare varieties. They will be staged by Leslie H. Green of Turtle Lake Farms near Pontiac, who has made orchids his hobby for a number of years. Among his plants are many of which he owns the only specimen and flowers from these will be in the display. They are to be staged in a unique setting and for splendor will be unequalled at any other flower show in the land.

The garden club section, one of the outstanding features of the show, will this year be larger than in previous years with a number of interesting new classes such as wall pockets, corner arrangements and terrace stands. Table arrangements will feature Easter tables, Budget tables, Personality tables and Bride's table. There will also be arrangements of bulbs, roses, snapdragons, carnations, tea tray arrangements and miniatures.

In addition to the Chrysler tropical garden there will be more than a dozen completed gardens in every type, rock garden, rose garden, water garden, Japanese, herb, wildflower, vegetable and others. These range in size from an estate garden to one for the small city lot containing plant material of both the exotic types and the modest little flower to fit the purse of any man.

The use of flowers in the latest fashion for weddings, various parties, or for dress will be shown in the exhibits by florists of Detroit and Michigan. With the mode of dress changing so rapidly the question of what to wear in the way of flowers and how to wear them becomes a perplexing one. The day when a young man bought just flowers for his date is past. Today they must suit the style and color of her gown as well as the occasion and florists are constantly finding new flowers which lend themselves to dress purposes.

Bird lovers will be interested in the thousands of bird houses and feeding stations as well as the outstanding exhibit of the Detroit and Michigan Audubon Societies collaborating in an interesting exhibit of a section of wilderness showing birds in their natural habitat, their nesting habits, feeding, etc. In addition the children's division will feature birds as a part of their program. The exhibit is being planned by the science department of the Detroit public schools.

Furrowing has been discontinued as a means of preparing land for reforestation in state forests. "Scalping," the removal of a small patch of sod to make a place for each seedling, has been found less harmful to valuable "volunteer" growth which has developed naturally as a result of protection from forest fire.

From Olden Times

SINCE THE EARLIEST ERAS of recorded history, there have been men whose life work was to provide fitting burial for those who departed this earthly scene. Theirs was a sacred duty, carried on in a spirit of reverence and sympathy.

Their ways were crude, as were their times, but that does not detract from the honor that is due them. Today, the funeral director has advanced far beyond them in professional knowledge. He is a sanitarian devoted to safeguarding public health, as well as a counselor to those in grief.

Yet, perfected though his methods may be, his code has changed little from that of his forebears. He is still devoted to serving humanity, leaving them his best without complaint. That is the spirit in which this firm offers its services.
