Plymouth Township's fourth shopping center was granted appropriate zoning last week by the planning commission.

The center, being developed by Robert Wedler, is located on the southeast corner of Ann Arbor Rd. and Haggerty Road. Other such areas in the Township are located on two corners of Sheldon and Ann Arbor Rd. and in Fred Greenspan's

The director of the two controversial Plymouth High School plays that were cancelled last week will resign as drama coach, and one member of the student cast has raised the question of censorship.

John P. Kontos said Monday he had asked the school's administration to allow him to resign. He noted that he had not received an answer. He will remain as PHS reading teacher.

Kontos also said he would take his case back to the Faculty Advisory Committee, a school group that handles problems and issues raised by staff members.

The two plays, Edward Albee's "The American Dream," and "The Sandbox," were scheduled for presentation on Nov. 19 and 20 at PHS. But administrator Carvel Bentley and parents of the cast felt that there were objectionable passages, and the plays were stopped.

The student body has also apparently taken an interest in the plays' cancellation. In an article titled "Censorship" and signed by Mary Arnold, a member of the cast, the administration is charged with censoring the plays with "no adequate reason.

The paper was circulated among the students Monday and charged that neither the general public nor the students were given adequate

"The School Board, the School superintendent, and the principals of PHS must give the general public and the students of this high school a reason-one that is not absurd or subjective," the paper said. Other portions of the article read:

Detroit Bank and Trust Company was granted commercial rezoning for lots on Ann Arbor Rd. and Lilley Rd. from manufacturing to commercial near the intersection. In their action, the planners made the entire corner commercial.

APARTMENTS DENIED

Apartments to be located on land along Ann Arbor Rd. between Sheldon and Canton Center Roads were denied rezoning after objections from residents in the area and from consultant W. C. Johnson, at a public hearing.

The new 701 master plan calls for multiple dwellings to buffer the area along Ann Arbor Rd. just west of the Michigan Bank and shopping center area. The multiple dwellings would run about midway to Canton Center Rd., just short of the proposed apartments..

Developers Bernard and George Stadtmiller said they felt they had come "within an inch" of meeting planning commission plans, and that rezoning should be granted.

E. D. Mogle, speaking for the Western Homeowners Association, said his group opposed the rezoning. Ray Hulce 9275 McClumpha, Albert Allon 44881 Ann Arbor Rd. and Eldon McGee 45145 Ann Arbor Rd. also opposed the rezoning.

Clayton Koch said he recognized the need, liked the plan for the apartments, but felt that they were in the wrong and his motion passed unani- ban Renewal action consists less damage to the upstairs of place. He moved denial, ment on the southeast corner of Five Mile and Bradner Rd. was denied rezoning from single family residential to garden apartments.

The developer, Gerald Loiselle proposed to build 112 units on the land, but was turned down without a public hearing. W. C. Johnson had recommended that request be denied, pointing out that the entire area was surrounded by single family homes.

The commission agreed, and Loiselle's request was voted down unanimously.

Development of the Mill St. project has created a better tax base and gained a probable commitment of additional employment, Fisher said.

IN FIELDING questions on the proposed Project No. 2, affecting the area on S. Main St., from Food Fair to Ann Arbor Tr., plus E. Maple St., Deer St., and Kellogg St., Fisher indicated that because the project was still in the very early stage solutions to specific problems have not been found.

Questions put to the speaker included 1) Relocation plans for residents involved; 2) How residents could afford to move; and 3) How determination of sub-standard or structurally unsound buildings was made. (Sixty percent of buildings in the area must be classified as structurally unsound before an area can qualify for Urban Renewal); and 4) How does an individual take a positive attitude toward Urban Renewal when he is faced with demolition of his home.

Fisher urged interested residents to attend the City Commission meeting when the issue is presented and give their views to members at that time.

The fundamental philosophy of Federally assisted Urban Renewal, according to a report by Vilican-Leman & Associates, Plymouth's planning consultants, is to help urban communities help themselves in the prevention and elimination of slums and blight. School committee lacks teacher representative

A committee whose work is of prime importance to the future direction that education will take in The Plymouth Community began its work this week.

It is the Citizens' Facility Study Committee of the Plymouth Community School District, headed by William Fronk - an automotive manufacturing firm executive.

The chief purpose of the group is to chart the moves the school district must make in terms of new building, and specifically the problem of plan-ning the second high school which population growth makes imminent.

Appointment of the 13-man committee was made by School Board President Gerald Fischer of Plymouth; an executive of the same company that Fronk works for. Other members include:

F. Richard Merriam, an engineer for the same firm; Mrs. Ray Hulce, whose husband works for the same company; a medical doctor, Dr. Ensign Clyde; a dentist, Dr. Frederick Foust; and a Plymouth pharmacist,

Also named to serve are Canton

The Sporting Life Play cancellation not necessary by Doug Johnson

Plymouth lost a chance to grow up a little bit last week.

Two plays by Edward Albee were stopped in the final stages of production by the Plymouth High School administration, who cited "objectionable words and phrases unfit for students."

The two plays - "The American Dream" and "The Sandbox" were set for production on Nov. 19 and 20 by a cast from the PHS student body.

I personally didn't like the cancellation; it was untimely and unnecessary.

Carvel Bentley, PHS principal, will no doubt win praise for his quick and swift action. He called for a parental review to confirm what he thought was true - that the plays as they stood were too raw for the Plymouth High School stage.

About the only people who have questioned the action are members of the PHS student body, and the director himself, John P. Kontos.

Kontos has raised the hue and cry of censorship, and has attracted the attention of one big city newspaper, the press associations and the radio. Censorship is only a peripheral issue as far as I am concerned. The crux of the cancellation goes beyond mere censorship, beyond stifling of a good piece of literature, beyond the ill-timed stopping of a play almost at curtain time. The cancellation touches on a key issue of our educational system.

To wit: To what lengths must a high school go to see that its students learn and read and discuss and regurgitate for public and parental glee, only those things that are safe and traditional? How far must they water down life's problems, mitigate the world's dilemmas, to satisfy parents and frustrate students. We are in a position where glass and brick high schools are laboratory's that turn out only faceless molds of what we hope our children should be. They have gone through 13 years of public education unable to discuss religion, politics, sex and practical government in their schools, and then, suddenly, are asked to become productive members of our so-

Are children learning if they are "merely doing our bidding?

Now try this. Suppose I proposed to put on a play about a white woman married to a Negro man, who accuses her of adultery, falsely, and ends up smothering her to death.

So much trash - you know, like those 'dirty' Albee plays that were Suppose I slap a fancy title on it like "Othello," and tag on a magic name — William Shakespeare. Change your mind?

"Well I'm not sure. I never really read Othello that closely," you say. Chances are you never read it at "Othello" must sit on the shelves at the High School Library. If it doesn't, anyone is welcome to my dogeared copy.

I had a brief experience with teaching as a student teacher in a school system south of Lansing, in a town called Charlotte.

I had a speaking acquaintance with a young art teacher who presented a $50 book with beautiful photographic reproduction of Michelangelo's art. Yuo know, the one who lay on his back for many years and painted the Sistine Chapel,

The art teacher gave the book to the library to help build its collections of great works.

The ancient librarian turned down the book because of the nude statuary pictured in it - statuary which in-cluded Christ, God and Adam.

"That's toilet literature" she said. I'm not kidding.

I hope that Plymouth nas grown up past that stage. I hope someday any great play can be done by the high schoolers. I would much rather see them do "The American Dream" than "Archy and his Friends," "My Sister Sarah" and similar pap.

I salute Kontos and his efforts to tackle serious drama. And certainly, Albee is one of the modern dramatic

The issue of censorship is diluted somewhat by the fact that copies of both plays are available in their unexpurgated forms. They are even in the high school library, along with, I suppose, "The Scarlet Letter" "The Catcher in the Rye" the Bible and other works that at one time or another have been controversial.

The cancellation was unfortunate but not fatal. It was unfortunate because the hearing and seeing of the plays would not have sent a single Plymouth soul to Hell.

The students would have had a chance to work with good drama, rather than useless grade school plays, despite a few raised eyebrows.

Now everybody can pretend that the plays don't exist, that the issue and commentary in them are irrelevant, and that Plymouth is just a little bit better because they weren't put

Township Trustee and farmer Richard Palmer; Plymouth Township Trustee and Dearborn schoolteacher Richard Lauterbach; Real Estate Agent Mrs. Norma Schmeman; Burroughs Corp. executive Robert Tripp; Mrs. Evelyn Gilbert, a housewife who lives in the recently annexed Geer School District; National Bank of Detroit Vice President Robert Barbour; and Kelsey-Hayes executive William

While we would not quibble with the individual qualifications of any of the persons on the committee, an analysis of the roster indicates a degree of unbalance that should be rectified.

First of all, some of the names are those of persons who have served on virtualy every citizens' committee appointed by the school district in recent

While they may have contributed much to such efforts in the past, surely it is not inconceivable that fresh faces and viewpoints could add new dimensions in terms of thought and resultant committee conclusions.

Secondly, while the committee is obviously well armed with professionals and executives, it would not be out of line to include factory labor representation or persons from the clerical or sales fields.

Perhaps people in these occupations haven't been willing to serve on school study committees in the past; or, on the other hand, maybe they simply haven't been asked.

Additional and better facilities for Plymouth Schools will come only with the enthusiastic support of all elements of the community. And one element that seems to be consistently ruled out is perhaps the most important to local education.

It is the Plymouth teacher.

After all, the classroom teacher is one factor without which schools could not exist. It seems that their experience, their outlook and their knowledge would be of value to a study group.

It would be well to appoint a member of the teaching profession from Plymouth Schools to the study group, even now.

Even though the committee as it now stands may not seem like balanced representation, there are encouraging sounds emanating from some of the membership.

It appears that they are determined to do their own research and reach their own conclusions based not only on committee materials, but on information they have gathered in their spare time.

This is refreshing and indicates that viewpoints of other segments of the community may still be heard.

But it still doesn't justify omitting large population segments who could contribute much to the group.

Blymouth

"Darien's children are disadvantaged." This is a statement that emanated from the superintendent of schools of the wealthy Connecticut commuter town that took so many knocks last year for a teen-age beer blast given wide national publicity.

Dr. Gregory Coffin's remarks are reported in the November 20 issue of "Saturday Review" magazine in an article titled "Integrating a White Ghetto.

The report raises all sorts of interesting possibilities since Darien and Plymouth share certain similarities. Both are wealthier than average; and both have a good share of commuters.

They both have teen-age booze parties too, with and without parental knowledge, in case you wondered. And Russell Isbister, Plymouth's Superintendent of Schools could with a good deal of justification make the same comment about Plymouth's youngsters.

Dr. Coffin, queried about how kids with boats, tennis courts and country clubs could be disadvantaged, explained they are brought up in an all-white suburban community isolated from many of life's realities, according to the SR article.

- Realities "such as mixed racial, social and economic situations, the poverty of slums, and sheer desperation."

As one Darien teacher quoted in the article put it: "The current struggle for civil rights seems as relevant to the average student at Darien as an earthquake in Japan."

All of this was made a bit more painfully apparent Sunday afternoon when I participated in an interracial discussion, sponsored by the Plymouth Assembly for Equal Opportunity and held in a Plymouth home. It was one of four similar sessions being held simultaneously throughout the community. There, gathered in a circle in the living room with a Negro couple from Detroit, their two children and a teen-aged nephew, we got a little insight into life in Detroit's inner city and - more importantly - into the relations that presently exist between our respective races.

I came away with more questions than I had to be-

What would I do, for instance, if I found that city services were sharply reduced in my neighborhood because it had begun to "deteriorate"!

What would I say if my children were attending a school where classroom size exceeded 40 students and books were scarce, a school where the faculty turnover was rapid and thorough?

What would I do if the hard facts of everyday life contradicted all the cant and hypocrisy I keep hearing about the brotherhood of man? What indeed?

I fear my patience would be thin, my tolerance far less than that of some of my black brethren.

I would suggest that my reaction would be similar to a Negro I met once who commented, "I'm not one of the non-violent ones. My momma never taught me I couldn't hit back after I turned the cheek one time."

Perhaps some of the educational alternatives that Dr. Coffin has proposed and implemented for Darien would be in order here.

For instance, a neighboring community of more than 70,000 does have a population that includes ethnic minority groups; and its high school offers courses that Darien's does not.

So an exchange program has been set up. Students from Darien have taken courses there and students from the other town have come to Darien to enroll in courses that their school doesn't provide.

Darien teachers are encouraged to have nonwhite speakers from foreign countries and in different professions.

And a student exchange weekend has brought Negro, Puerto Rican, Japanese and Jewish students from New York to the Connecticut community,

Some people, or course, will hasten to point out that Plymouth doesn't have a problem. This they have done in the past and this they will continue to do. I have lost, in the past year or so, a couple of subscriptions from people adhering to this view. In a talk at Columbia University, Dr. Coffin commented :

"The statement 'we don't have a problem why create one' is the index of the problem itself . . . Unless the direct experience of contact with Negroes only as maids and garbage men can be changed, the attitudes of children in all-white communities will continue to be shaped significantly by the direct experience no matter what is taught in school."

Maybe you can ignore the problem and hope it will go away. I can't. I let it bug me. I will continue to.

Dr. John H. Fischer, Head of Columbia University's Teachers College and a former superintendent of schools, commented on the Darien experiment. His remarks answer the question:

"Negro Americans will never become part of the mainstream of American life unless specific, deliberate steps are taken toward that end. And, because in virtually every community and at every level of government, the white group has effective control, it is through white initiative, in most cases, that the necessary corrective action must begin.'

So you see, Charlie, it's not only President Johnson's and Governor Romney's and Mayor Cavanagh's problem. It's Mayor Houk's and Supervisor McEwen's and Superintendent Isbister's. And yours, And mine.

INSTALLATION OF THE three Carillon Bells at Schoolcraft College was completed Friday, Nov. 19. Donated by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd

Kehrl, the bells were ordered in the fall of 1964. Because of the dock strike in New York at that time, they could not be unloaded and were sent back to England. When they finally arrived, it was discovered that one of the bells was cracked and had to be returned and recast. Consequently, two of the bells are dated 1964 and one, 1965. The bells will ring on the quarter hours and the hour in a sequence requested by the college. The four small bells which hang below the Carillon bells do not ring and are symbolic of the four original school districts in the School-

Easy method to roast your turkey

You can prepare your Thanksgiving turkey in 10 easy steps, according to the Michigan State University Extension service. They suggest that frozen turkeys should be cooked soon after thawing using this easy method: 1. Remove thawed turkey from bag, rinse, and pat dry. For roasting unstuffed bird, rub inside with salt (about 1/4 teaspoon per pound). Do not salt if bird is to be stuffed. 3. If stuffing is to be used, allow one cup per pound of urkey. 4. Fill neck cavity ightly, but do not pack. Fastn neck skin to back of turkey

5. Stuff body cavity lightly, not pack, since stuffing ill expand while cooking. Tuck legs under band of in at tail or tie with heavy ring; when 2/3 done, cut in or string to free legs. 7. ewers or string. 8 Brush ene bird with shortening, oil melted butter. For deeper lor, 2 teaspoons paprika ay be added to melted short-. Roast as desired at 325 grees F. 20 Minutes per und. 10. When turkey is ne, remove from oven, covtightly with aluminum foil, allow to stand about 20 nutes for easiest carving.

No insured motorist should try to buy his 1966 automobile license plates without evidence of insurance which meets the requirements of the Act. Anyone who hasn't received such evidence, or has mislaid it, should check with his insurance man.

With the evidence, an owner pays $1 to the Claims fund. in addition to the regular license plate cost. Without it, he faces the frustration and lost time of having to go after it and to make a second trip for his plates, unless he wants to pay the $35 charge for uninsured vehicles.

The Claims Act places the responsibility on each vehicle owner to produce evidence that he is insured. It doesn't define evidence. But logically it shouldn't need to. Each motorist's insurance policy, which is the actual insurance contract, is the best possible evidence.

This has been accepted by the Secretary of State's Office, which administers the Act - but with an important second issuance on expiraif. The policy must include: The owner's name; the year, period of license plate sales. make and number of the vehicle; and the insuring company's name (preferably al- able to supply an essentially so the agent's name), the policy number, an expiration this has not been possible, date later than the date of li- agents have filled in with cense plate purchase, and similar forms, copies of polthe signature of an authoriz- icy declarations, identificaed representative of the com- tion cards, or statements on

In addition, the administrators wanted something which could be checked quickly, and the information on policies is in many forms.

> The insurance industry proposed a simple solution - that each motorist be permitted to make an affidavit, which could be verified at any time with the named insurer. This was declined on the grounds that it would invite perjury to avoid the $35 charge, and thus cut the revenue of the Claims fund.

Instead, the administrators felt that a uniform certificate could be provided very simply. The industry volunteered to do this, but warned that it would not be a quick or easy process. A suggested form had to be adapted to each company's records system. Procedural decisions and acceptable variations had to be worked out with the administrators. Red brick, one-room schoolhouses part of Plymouth's modern system

By DOUG JOHNSON Mail News Editor

The one-room schoolhouse is one of those vanishing sentimental remembrances of the "good old days." The Plymouth Community School District has from time to time added outlying districts, and thus acquired oneroom schoolhouses. They have been shut down. This fall, two new districts, South Salem Stone and Geer District, became part of Plymouth's, and thus two more oneroom schoolhouses were

They are open this year. The one at Geer is technically a two-room schoolhouse, being divided to accommodate two teachers. A third, called Truesdell, is in Canton Township, is about 10 years old, and houses only first and second grades.

The little red brick schoolhouse stands as one of the cornerstones of American democracy and education. Oldtimers from the rural areas fondly remember the long walk to school, the wood stove, the ink wells and the smell of chalk.

The schools stand in our minds as monuments to old-fashioned ideals, humble beginnings, practical education and rural life.

Part of American heritage, it is with some reluctance, both in Plymouth and elsewhere, that they are closed.

SO THIS year, both for a sentimental and a practical reason, the Stone and Salem schools were kept Stone is located on the corner of North Territorial Road and Curtis Road. Built in 1859 of stones probably gathered from nearby fields, it has withstood 106 years of screaming youngsters, the elements and countless community meetings. Today it looks the same on the outside as the day it was built. Inside, however, it has been remodeled, with modern lighting and plumbing added.

The Geer School on West Ann Arbor Rd. is of red brick, and has the traditional weather vane atop its sturdy roof.

This one was built in 1880, is also remodeled inside, and has had an addition built on it to create a second class room.

In both schools, the teachers teach more than one grade. Mrs. Elisabeth Haliker, and Mr. George Dodson teach at Geer. In a recent interview, conducted on the day of Halloween parties in the schools, they commented on their feelings about their school:

"We don't have a lot of the frills," Mrs. Haliker said. 'But rural schools are a part of my life. I'll be sorry to see them go."

Mrs. Haliker, a bustling, kindly and friendly woman, said she stuck to the fundamentals in her teaching. "There's just something about a rural school. It's democracy to the 'enth' degree. The children are even responsible for the school building. This is the first year we have had somebody to sweep the floors."

George Dodson is the other teacher at Geer. He is a quiet, handsome man with a soft southern accent.

"THE THING I appreciate about a rural school over other schools that are so large is the liaison, or rapport between parents and teachers. You get to know the whole family. You even know who's sick in the family.

Both Mrs. Haliker and Dodson said they felt the school was the center for the little community in that area. She teaches the lower grades, Dodson the upper (4-6).

Both say that their students might not have the polish of the students that come out of one of Plymouth's more modern schools, like say Farrand. "But I'll put my little readers up against any school in the state," Mrs. Haliker says proudly. "I will too," Dodson added. "They don't miss a thing out here."

Some of the "frills" have made their way into the school. A physical education teacher comes out on a regular basis. They get their music over FM radio from Ann Arbor and the University of Michigan. An art teacher also visits the school. Both teachers use the closeness of nature to teach science, and feel that it is another advantage they hold over urban schools.

Mrs. Nancy Malecki teaches at the Stone school. "One of the things nice about it is that all the children from one neighborhood are in one room," she said. "That way they are more of a single group. In the bigger schools the children often see their neighbors only on Saturdays.

She has kinder garten through fourth grade. She notes that the parents of some of her students went to the school many years

The older children help the younger ones, she said, and commented on several children in one room from the same family:

"They come with their older sisters and brothers so there is no traumatic experience in adjusting to the school. The adjustment is very, very

Mrs. Malecki devotes much of her time to the school, and often has to stay late to clear up work. She feels one disadvantage arises because she is with the children virtually all day. "There's no chance to get away from them," she said. "But I like it."

Russell Isbister, superintendent of schools for the Plymouth Community School District, likes the schools, provided they are adequately equipped and staffed.

"There are certain work habits, personal habits that in the past took place in that setting that are hard to duplicate, and are difficult to transplant into an urban school," Isbister commented recently. The teacher-student relationships are unique and valuable, Isbister feels. But the teacher needs up to date equipment.

He himself feels a sort of nostalgic attachment to the one-room schools, having attended one for eight years.

CONSIDERABLE selfdirection and personal at-, tributes can be developed in such a setting. And, in modern terms, it is an ungraded school in which children learn from each other," he said.

Isbister said the parents involved with the two schools urged that they be continued, and were pleased when told they would

The other one-room school house, Truesdell, is a'miniature version of Plymouth's larger, modern elementary schools. It is not the ungraded, old oneroom schoolhouse. Only kindergarten and first graders attend it.

A position in a one-room school house is one of the most difficult of all teaching assignments. It demands modern training and broad experience, coupled with patience, and the best modern equipment available. The one-room schools were born in rural Americs and served the children of families in farm communities and isolated

The romantic feeling towards the value of a rural school setting still exists; but modern school systems have many more resources than a single one-room school district.

IN THE END, the oneroom school houses will be shut down. The children will be packed off to the cinder block, glass and terrazzo palaces of the

For some it will be a sad time; the one-room school house has become like the Model A and crystal radio set-monuments to a cherished but dead era.

Thanksgiving message from Lutheran pastor

THE OLD-FASHIONED red brick school house is passing from the American scene. The Plymouth Community School District has one, located on W. Ann Arbor Rd. and run by two teachers, Mrs. Elizabeth Haliker and George Dodson. The school, known as the Geer School, was built in 1880, and was annexed to Plymouth's district last summer.

that He has given us turkeys and birds and bees and families and warm homes and flags and discount stores and a free nation and pilgrims (without whom, after all, Plymouth would be non-existent) and money-in-the-bank and school busses and charge accounts and colonial architecture and . . . all the other people and things which please us.

Dare we take the time to be thankful for the rest of life, for the "left-over" people whose ideas never quite reach the plateau of acceptance by the multitudes who compose the "majority?" Perhaps we, for whom the Bible is authority, will have to ignore it this time, unless we want our Thanksgiving marred by what appears to be an unrealistic injunction to offer

But, on the other hand, what's the sense of Thanksgiving if we can only say, "Lord, I thank thee that I'm not like that other guy."? What's the sense of Thanksnot like that other guy."? What's the sense of Thanksgiving if we never look beyond the over-filled table and out the window into a world made by a God who created more than "our kind"?

So we must give thanks for all men: For communists who not only help us understand what freedom means, but who also serve as an arm of God's judgment against our national self-satisfaction; for agnostics who continually question our "little faith" until at last we are able to know what we believe; for demonstrators, both civil rights and anti-war, who force us to recognize that God's world has room for more than one point of view, even if that point of view comes from the Pentagon itself. We must give thanks for all men, even for the prophets of our age, the Albees and Kings and Alinskys, who will not let society rest with a false peace of mind, men who help us see ourselves for what we are so that we might also see what we ought to be. Is it not possible for us just once to turn from our self-chosen blessings and offer thanks for a world notof-our-making, a world infinitely filled with a knowledge greater than our own, a world of people who serve us and save us even when we don't want to be served or saved?

Offer thanks for all men and, who knows, having done so we might also learn to love all men. How can we remain separated from those for whom we are led to offer thanks? How can we remain alienated from those whom God has made and loved even though they fail to conform to our standards? On e of the other meddlers of the Bible wrote, "He who says he loves God and hates his neighbor is a liar."

So be it. It isn't a very big step from thanksgiving to love. If we can offer thanks for all men, perhaps we can also love the unlovable and accept the unacceptable. That, after all, is what makes for peace — and until that comes there isn't much else for which to be thankful.

So let Thanksgiving Day come, but let it be more than the opening of the Christmas season, more than a time for self-satisfied suburbanites to gorge themselves on heaps of blessings with all the trimmings. Let it be a day for a new beginning and a new thankfulness

Let it be a time to understand that, as W. H. Auden wrote, "We must love one another or die."

"Censorship is absolutely contrary to the spirit of democracy for it shows intolerance of opinions which are different from the accepted and the norm or which differ from the ideas and opinions of the censor.

"If the school administrators choose to become censors and ban or suppress every new concept that comes into this school, we may as well 'forget it.'

Would like to commend Mr. Bentley, our High School principal, Mr. Isbister, superintendent of schools, and other school officials for their recent action in cancelling two plays, deemed objection-

Colonial Community

Families throughout the Plymouth Community will bow their heads, in thanks Thursday for traditional Thanksgiving blessings. Thankgiving has a special meaning in Plymouth because of its rich colonial background and early American atmosphere. Scott Powell, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Powell, 1378 Beech St., anxiously awaits the moment when he starts in on that turkey. Plymouthites will have a chance to hear a Community Thanksgiving Service at 8 tonight (Wednesday) in the First Methodist Church with the Rev. David Strang speaking.

ntbearing, 'arch' flattens and disappears Bones are arched with foot at rest

Metatarsal pad in shoe fills cavity, returns arch to normal level plane

Cavity formed in insole across ball —and arch becomes 'depressed'

Is a wave of metatarsal distress sweeping through The Plymouth Community?
I don't know, you say.

Actually, according to an a r t i c le that Willoughby spotted in a trade publication, metatarsal distress is very common among women - simply because they wear heels over one inch in height. The higher the heel, the more the body weight is borne in the metatarsal area?

Uh huh, you reply, what's the metatarsal area?

Well, that's the part of the foot often referred to as the metatarsal archbut the existence of which is doubted by some.

What is supposed to be the metatarsal arch consists of the heads of the five metatarsal arch consists of the ball of the foot.

The basis of the differences of opinion about the a c t u a l existance of the arch, however, is because when the foot is at rest (not bearing weight), there is an arch in this area.

To relieve these distressing symptoms, shoemen and doctors will usually use a pear-shaped metatarsal pad placed just behind the metatarsal heads in an effort to give some "lift" to these bones and relieve direct pressure on them.

This usually offers some temporary relief, but it's no cure.

The best cure or remedy is to get the foot to resume its normal stance in flat or low heels, so that the heel of the foot can bear its no r m a 1 share of the weight, and the ball of the foot can be relieved of excessive weight-bearing.

I don't know, you say.

Besides, what the heck is metatarsal distress?

Good question, and the answer is that you may be experiencing metatarsal distress when your tootsies hurt. Quite bluntly, it often goes hand in hand with sore feet.

But the man who can best speak on the subject locally is Robert Willoughby, owner of Willoughby, owner of Willoughby's Shoes on downtown Plymouth's Main St. and the person to whom many area women turn for advice when their feet give them

In "fallen" metatarsal arch, shoemen can usually find a cavity in the center of the ball of the insole area of the worn shoe. This is because the three middle metatarsal heads have been depressed below the flat level.

when their feet give them trouble.

Over the years, Willoughby has been conducting a one-man battle against foot problems and he's probably got more information about feet in his fread than any other layman in the

The use of the metatarsal pad is actually to fill in this cavity, and to once again create a flat level which is more normal for the metatarsal "arch" on

But when the foot bears weight as in standing or walking, the arch flattens out and disappears.

But back to metatarsal

So, if your feet hurt, maybe you've been suffering all this time from metatarsal distress and didn't know it.

weightbearing.

More foot ills are experienced in the metatarsal area than in any other part of the foot. It is a common site of he a v y callouses, sometimes corns; and sensations such as burning, numbness, toe cramps, aches and pains are also found here.

Now, if you'll pardon the pun, you can take steps to "de-feet" it.

Deer Hunters Attention

Ordinarily, 50 per cent of the weight is supposed to be borne by the heel. But when milady pulls on a pair of high heels, most of the heel's share of weight shifts to the ball of the foot.

joining forces for the annual feast has been going on for several years. From the smell of pumpkin in the air and the slightly harassed look of some of our busy homemakers, it's not hard to tell that come the T h a n k s giving celebration, there will be a great deal of traffic headed toward, and away from, our little community.

A very special feeling of the home of Dr. and Mrs. I David McCubbrey. They will not only celebrate the holiday with Mrs. McCubbrey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Lambert, but their new little daughter, Doris Ann, born Nov. 13, will swell the ranks.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Shultz of Elm Street are preparing to entertain the John Breeden J family from Dearborn. The tradition of these old friends f

The Gerald Fischers and daughter, Nancy, will journey to Interlochen for a visit with their son, Norman, who is a student there this year.

An interesting note from St. John's Episcopal Church—the bread and wine to be used for the Thanksgiving Communion Service will be home-made and will be provided by Dr. and Mrs. Clifford Mc-Clumpha. A full house is expected at I the John Jacobs. Mr. Jacob's C parents from Whitehall, his sister and family, the Roger Smiths from Mayville, his brother, Dr. James Jacobs, Mrs. Jacobs and their two boys from Iowa City, Iowa, and another sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Ib, Mr. and Mrs. William Detrich from Lansing, will gather around the table.

The Denver McCords plans to spend Thanksgiving Day that Mrs. McCords parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton T. Obee in Ann Arbor, where they will be joined by the Robert P. Coopers, Patricia and Tom, from Grand Rapids. Mrs. McCord and Mrs. Cooper are sisters.

Friends of Jeff Cardinal will be pleased to know that his planned confinement in St. Joseph Mercy hospital will be postponed until after Christmas so that he can spend the holiday season with his family and friends. Jeff has been attending high school since September, but will enter the hospital after the first of the year for additional treatment for injuries as a result of his accident last May.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray A. Hulce have just returned rom several days in New York City where they attended many concerts and plays.

5 industry rate cut

The Michigan Public Service Commission today granted Consumers Power Company permission to lower its natural gas rates to certain the commercial and industrial acustomers.

The company had asked approval of a liberalized seasonal rate schedule to permit potential savings of up to $750,000 for customers on other gas rates who could take advantage of the new seasonal rate.

The new rate provides for a minimum monthly bill of $5,000 per month except for January, February and March when restrictions on usage allow the elimination of the minimum charge.

The company said the general company and the minimum charge.

It's Thanksgiving-time for all PHSers to give thanks for-

Turkey, dressing, mashed potatoes, canberry sauce.

Two extra days to work on fast approaching due dates for term papers and book reports.

But most of all, for another little town called Plymouth—a town which first gave its thanks to God on this same day for the hardships it had sustained.

A town for which there might not have been a Plymcuth, Michigan 1965 had it not survived to give those thanks.

It's something to think about . . .

Mrs. Brigitte Rauer, German teacher, the Reverend Peter Beckwith, pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, and senior Mary Arnold all spoke at the annual Thanksgiving assembly last Thursday.

Reverend Beckwith spoke on the topic of "Thanksgiving and Teenagers." Mrs. Rauer told of Thanksgiving in relation to her trip to Russia this summer, and Mary gave a reading.

The Choir sang "Triumph Thanksgiving," "Sing to the Lord of Harvest," and "O Holy Lord."
