It Looks Like Long, Hot Summer For City Commission

Incinerator . . . sewers . . . drainage . . street paving . . . water pollution . . . special assessments . . . vacating alleys . . . zoning ordinances . . . water . .

These are the ingredients of what has every indication of being a long, hot summer for the City Commission.

Several of these problems came to light during the recent storm when drainage sewers backed up in the downtown business area, several of the intersections were flooded and it required several hours until the water receded.

"We possibly should make a study of the drainange sewers in the area," both Commissioners McKeon and Vallier commented at the last Commission meeting. "It may be that some of them will have to be rebuilt - or repaired, for they've been in a long time."

These two commissioners also called attention to the condition of the streets within the city. Some of them are badly in need of

This maintenance is aside from the year's street paving program which has been changed considerably since being offered.

The first change came when the property owners on Evergreen appeared at a public hearing and protested the paving, claiming they preferred the "rural" atmosphere that comes with a gravel road.

The Ann Arbor Trail portion of the paving program had to be eliminated because of a problem involving the railroad crossing. It happens the tracks are above the road surface and can't be lowered - except with a great deal of trouble. By the same token, the City can't build up the Trail at the moment, because, by doing so, they would eliminate driveways into property and this would necessitate a lot of trouble and expense.

Commissioner Vallier also asked about the incinerator.

"We've been supposed to be studying this for a long time," he commented, "but I haven't heard a report in months. Where do we stand on this?

"One of these days we'll find ourselves with a real problem on our hands. So, I want a report on the incinerator plans."

Later, City Manager Richard Blodgett reported that the plan for the erection of an incinerator at the House of Correction still was being studied, but that nothing, locally, could be done until the City of Detroit, which owns much of the property, makes its move.

"At the moment," Blodgett said, "we must wait on Detroit — and I expect that some action will be taken in the very near future."

Commissioner McKeon called attention to the water pollution problem in the area.

"The Boy Scouts have done a grand job of removing the debris from the Rouge River," he informed the other members of the Commission, "but they didn't remove the cause of the pollution. That's not the Scouts'

When other Commissioners agreed, he suggested that the City Manager contact surrounding areas to learn what they are doing with the pollution problem and that some sort of action be planned - or taken - to remedy the condition.

The vacating of alleys promises to be a never-ending problem until all hands are satisfied. The Commission started on a program to eliminate all of the alleys in the city. The work started in the northwest section, but caused a "hullabaloo" and some hard feel-

As a result some of the proposed vacations have been abandoned and a study is being planned for the others.

The zoning ordinance also is certain to provide many arguments as some of the zoning of property is planned to be changed.

Timing Set For School Plans, Bids

Actual construction of the Plymouth District's new $8.5 million high school, approved overwhelmingly in last Monday's election, is scheduled to start by Feb. 1, 1968.

A specific timetable has been drawn by the school administration, now that funds to proceed with the project have been ap-

3. By December, these working drawings are to be finished and presented to the Board of Education which will advertise for bids before the end of that month.

At no cost to the city they finally succeeded in collecting a sufficient sum of money from civic minded persons to pay for the lights -- 25 of them -- and now they are encountering difficulty in having them installed. The Garden Club, one of real active groups in the city, had hoped to have Kellogg Park beautified in time for the big centennial week July 3-8,

"We have received the money for the lights", City Manager Richard Blodgett confessed, 'but there is a lot more to it than that. - Our Beautification Committee isn't quite satisfied with the layout proposed by the Garden Club and an official plan is being prepared now. We hope to have it by Wednesday evening -- and if it is approved we may have the lights in by July 4.

At a cost of $125 each these lights are being donated by some of the leading families in the city and the Garden Club is frustrated by the lack of action. As Mrs. Johanson, one of the leaders in the gas light program remarked, "We have been waiting for years. And now that we have the money--and it was raised at no cost to the city-it seems rather strange that the lights can't be installed for the Centennial."

The Plymouth Jaycees put out a call this week urging all antique car enthusiasts to drive their vehicles in the Fourth of July parade.

Chairman Ron Coosaia said owners of old-time cars should bring them to the Kroger parking lot on Main St. by 11:45 a.m., July 4, ready to parade. Each car should carry a sign on both sides giving the year, make and model of the vehicle.

Business firms, civic groups and other organizations wishing to enter floats in the parade also will be welcomed, Coosaia said. He can be called at 453-9478 or 427-2000, extension 8355, for further information.

The parade will be one of the highlights of Centennial Week and the Fourth of July celebration itself will be a daylong affair.

Mettetal Airport will be the scene of grand prix sports car racing in the afternoon, and the day's schedule also includes a horse show and evening fireworks display.

Township Court Selection Stirs Political Flames

In an unheralded, surprise gues wagging, the Plymouth Township Board of Trustees this week appointed a Second Peace, adding fuel to discussions of the future District Judgeship expected to be set up here.

Attorney James E. McCarthy. 44428 Clare Blvd., who was area chairman of U.S. Sen. Robert Gracin's campaign last fall, was given the Board's unanimous seven-vote approval to fill a Justice of the Peace position which has been dormant since December.

Supervisor John McEwen. who recommended the appointment, said the action was taken to relieve the township's second Justice, Martin Schomberger, of an overly taxing work load.

The appointment of McCarthy fills the vacancy created seven months ago by Lawrence Schendel's resignation. He was sworn into office Wednesday morning, less than 12 hours after his appointment, by Clerk Helen Richardson at the Township

The political overtones are many and inevitably are linked with the City of Plymouth's current quest for a successor to Municipal Judge Edward Draugelis.

Draugelis' own resignation last month admittedly was timed in part to give his successor head-start in the campaign for the ultimate District Judgeship anticipated under Michigan's judicial reorganization package being studied by the Legislature.

Jim Houk Due For Surprise On His Return

Former Mayor James Houk, who has been spending a vacation in England for the past several weeks, is due for a surprise on his return. Through a quirk in circumstances he has been cast in the role of the man who will select Plymouth's new municipal judge.

This came to light last Monday evening when the city commissioners were deadlocked 3-3 in a choice to fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Judge Ed Draugelis.

Following an "executive" session Mayor James Jabara announced that the commission was divided and the choice was delayed until the return of Commissioner Houk.

While no official announcement was made it was learned on good authority that the two candidates discussed were Tom Healy, present city attorney, and Dunbar Davis, a Plymouth

Mail & Observer Takes Pride In Fulfilling Obligation To Community

The obligation of any newspaper goes far beyond the distribution of news or the guarantee of delivery to your front door or mail box.

It has a duty to report current events accurately and to make a choice between news and propoganda. Beyond that, it also is duty bound to serve as the watchdog of government - local, state and national - and be the medium by which the taxpayers learn how their affairs are being handled.

And even beyond that, the modern newspaper has another very important duty. It must serve as a leader in and for the community. It must be the leader in civic affairs and point the way to making any community a better place in which to live and raise a family.

It must be able to ferret out the problems that plague its home precincts and help to provide the solutions.

So, with these guide lines as a measuring stick, what does the Mail & Observer mean to the Plymouth Community?

Let's look at the records.

It helped make a real success of the second annual Leadership Conference at Schoolcraft College.

It supported the Unification program in the belief that the combining of the several governmental units in the area is of vital necessity for the intelligent growth of the area in the immediate years ahead.

It has supported the beautification and traffic plans for the Central Business District.

It pointed out again the necessity of removing an eyesore on Penniman Avenue, which casts a shadow over all other plans for the city's

Then, it made a frontal attack on one of the city's major problems the possible elimination of the ed. rail crossings on Main Street.

Never before had such a bold step been taken, but under the of these recommendations. sponsorship of the Mail & Observer, all of the integers took part in a workshop to study the problem and come.

start the wheels in motion toward a solution.

These forces included the City officials, leaders of business and industry, the Wayne County Road Commission, the federal government and the top representatives of the C & O railroad.

Many of these officials made no secret of the fact that they responded to the call of the Mail & Observer and would not have attended otherwise. In this statement, alone, the dynamic force of the newspaper for good in the community was exemplified.

For the first time all of the elements of the railroad crossing problem were placed on the table for the world to see. And, more important, all factions agreed on doing their part in finding a solution. To that end a comprehensive study is being made and reports will be made to the public from time to

Under the forceful leadership of the Mail & Observer, the public is now being made aware of the many tennacles of the problem and the steps being taken to solve it.

The recent school election is another example.

Following a serious study of the entire educational picture of the area, the Mail & Observer supported the passage of the two bond issues and recommended the election of Mrs. Joanne Hulce, Carl Schultheiss and Calvin Strom.

It was the feeling of this paper that the program for the building of a second high school would fill a vital gap and the naming of the three recommended candidates would be in the best interests of the entire school district.

It is a matter of record now that the recommendations were follow-

Letters To The Editor

This being Plymouth's Centennial year (1867-1967), or its 100th Anniversary since the municipality's incorporation as an organized village-the village which 35 years ago changed its status to that of cityhood--it would seem to be a most logical time for city and township to villagers inside the township bury its now dulled hatchets. shake hands, then say to each political power everywhere inother -- "Let's quit our shen- side the township as they had anigans and start to emerge. had before. Since once we were a team together let's get into harness again and work for the common

As a native born son of Plymouth, with memories going back into the early gay 90's and when Plymouth had only wooden sidewalks and foot paths, I have long had a private and unheralded hope that the time would come when the twain would meet and the new order cometh. Could not that time be NOW? We once did act as a single unit--could we not, and with much better effect,

After the unincorporated village within the township, in the year 1867, became the incorporated village of Plymouth, we were still part and parcel of the township. Although, after incorporation, the village as such then separately, from President down, elected its own set of officers, in nowise did we become separated from the township. We continued to be just as much a part of the township as we were before.

Thus, when the annual township elections were held, they were always, because of convenience, held inside the incorporated village and, after 1889, inside the old Village Hall. The incorporated village was still the core of the town-

Although the villagers could still vote for all township officers (because they were still residents of the township), and just as they had always done before incorporation, residents outside the limits of the village could take no part in village elections. They were not residents of the village. But everybody understood and everybody was happy, and even though continued to have the same often than not, township officials were elected from among by its vote, to express desire the people living inside the village rather than among those outside. My grandfather, for instance, had sometimes served as township supervisor though he had always resided inside the village and never outside.

Then again, and I believe for sixteen successive years, he had served as Justice of the Peace, yet living inside the village meanwhile.

But when, in 1932, we reorganized ourselves into a city, we lost our township status. Or, when this event occurred, and as some had described it at the time, we automatically kicked the township out. The township could no longer use the facilities at the old Village Hall to hold their elections.

After we became a city we then disassociated ourselves from the township and no longer had any jurisdiction over them.

And this may be one reason, though perhaps more or less unconscious on the part of the majority of the township's citizenry of the present day, why some degree of animosity arose inside the minds and hearts of township people toward the now city of Plymouth. Though the basic and original reason for it may now be forgotten, some of this old animosity may have rubbed off and into the township's present generation.

of us again, and for the city, to take 'em back. All necessary "studies" can come later and as time progresses.

Once done, no resident nor citizen of the township need feel that he or she might be held subservient nor "under the thumb" of the city. Once done, each and every citizen would have equal rights and privileges with all other citizens. The farthest away resident, politically speaking, would be equal to the biggest shot inside the present city. Once reunited, we'd then be one compact whole, an opposite effect might come into being. That is, it is conceivable, with the present township being greater in area than the city, and growing fast, it might be able to tell the core (the present city) where to get known-throughout the length and breadth of this wonderful simply--have we got it in us?

Karl Starkweather

Urges Unification Now

All this may be a part of a possible and present unconscious reason why a majority of the township's later people seem unwilling to come back into and be a part of us--to form that bigger, better and more cohesive city of Plymouth--and now that finally we want them to. And there need be no prolonged "studies" to ascertain the practicality of g all this. All that needs to be done is for the township, In substantiation of this fact by its vote, to express desire let it be known that, more to come on back and be a part

Indeed, it is conceivable that

But the greater Plymouth would then be on the road to a higher and more glorious destiny. This greater Plymouth in the state of Michigan would become known--and favorably land of ours. We have the power to do this -- but will we? To put the question even more Strolling through town during the past week the thought suddenly struck The Stroller that he hadn't seen a home for rent no matter what part of the area he happened to visit.

Usually, in some remote place you'll see a "For Rent" sign. The location may not be of the best, but the dwelling is open for anyone wishing to rent. But no such areas were spotted.

"Hell," commented Joe Hudson, the real estate man, "we haven't had a home to rent around here for more than two years. And even if such a thing did exist the place would be taken so fast no one would hear about it."

Asked if apartments were in the same class, knowing that quite a few new ones are being built, Hudson admitted that there are apartments of some size available most every week. "But," he quickly added, "you'd think we would be loaded with apartments to rent - judging by the number going up. However, we are just about able to keep up with the demand." "I had a house for rent just last week," Carl Pursell, another real estate man, confided, "and I'll bet

I had 120 calls - despite the fact it was a four bedroom home." According to Pursell the apartment problem is not as critical as one may be led to believe. 'We have a few vacancies every week," he confided, "but they are taken quickly, despite the high rent."

"Why is it," The Stroller asked, "that apartments are going up in the area — but so few homes?" It was pointed out that Bud Gould abandoned the home building field because of the extremely high costs involved. With the high cost of materials and the fact that labor is so high, homes could not be built for the modern income group. So Bud switched to commercial building.

Isn't it amazing what a little thought while strolling can bring about in the way of information?

FROM PLYMOUTH to PLYMOUTH to PLYMOUTH

When the Lord Mayor of Plymouth, England, and his entourage, arrive here on July 3 to spend a week helping to celebrate the centennial, there'll be a great welcome for them — if at least a half dozen Plymouth families have anything to do about it.

These are families who have visited Plymouth. England, during the past year, and are loud in the praise of the treatment they were given. The latest of these is Tom Kelley, and his party of six, who have just returned.

They claimed the hospitality accorded them in Plymouth, England, was the most spontaneous of the entire trip.

So, there's the tip. How about Plymouth pennants that can be sold as souvenirs the remainder of the centennial year?

JULIA CLARK gets a kiss from Rascal, a Welsh pony, one of a variety of horses on the family's 14 Mile Road farm.

Spring, Kids And Animals

One of suburbia's charms is that it's part city, party country. It's a great place for kids to grow up, and it's a great place for adults to feel rejuvenated in spring when the baby animals are born.

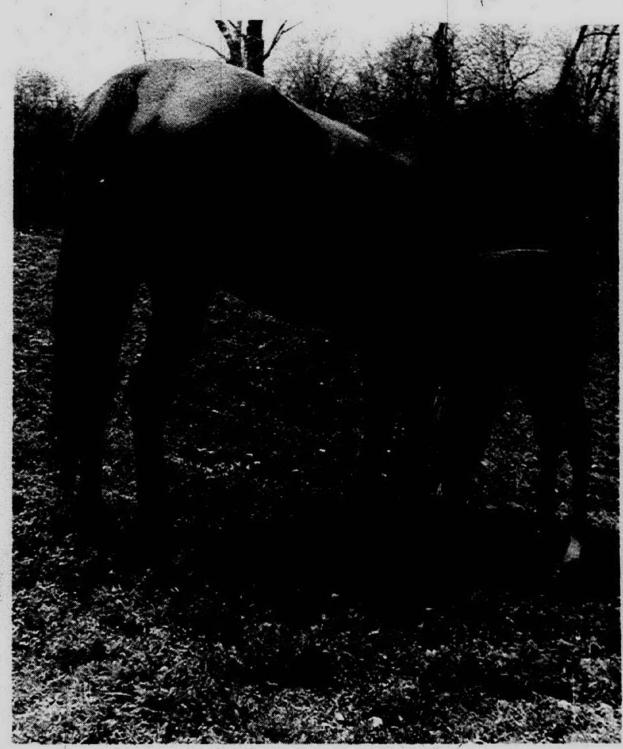

Fran Evert, our Farmington photographer, visited several farms in the area, only a short hop from subdivisions and stores and high schools.

One was the farm of Bill Clark on 14 Mile between Halstead and Haggerty. A member of the Farmington Township mounted police auxiliary, Clark raises a variety of thoroughbreds and standard-breds.

The other was the 17-acre farm of Robert Drury on 13 Mile between Haggerty and Halstead. A plumber who has seven children, Drury raises prize Hampshire sheep, several dogs to guard them, a couple of goats and some baby pigs.

MOTHER ROBIN lands on nest to feed babies, whose upturned beaks are barely visible. Mrs. Evert shot this photo near her home a few days before a cat got to the young robins.

LUNCH BREAK is taken by this spindly-legged foal, a thoroughbred who will one day be able to skim over long distances with grace and speed. Scene is the Clark farm.

Fe-Mailmen On The Rise

Women have been working as mail carriers for a long time, but the number of fe-mail carriers has increased noticeably in suburbia in recent years.

Basic reason, according to local postmasters, is a shortage of men in the booming economy's labor

Farmington Postmaster Henry Trombley said his town had a lady mailman as long as 40 years ago, and that women have been delivering mail almost continuously since then. At present, Trombley's office employs four lady mailmen.

Plymouth Postmaster John Mulligan began hiring women last November. Plymouth now has four lady mailmen, and more will join the staff this sum-

Livonia Postmaster Arthur Jenkins hired the first lady mail carrier there in October of 1965, now has 24 on his staff. WOMEN EARN the same pay as men, under federal civil service rules. They're also expected to produce the same as men. Some find it tough. Livonia's Postmaster Jenkins says quite a few work a couple of weeks because the weight of a mail bag and six to eight miles of walking is too much. A typical carrier is Miss Kristeena Wallace, who works in Plymouth as a substitute. One day she may drive a truck, the next push a cart. "The weather is the only drawback," said Miss Wallace. "But I don't mind the cold - just the rain. During cold weather, I wore bundles and bundles of clothes. And on really bad days, people often asked me in for coffee.'

Jenkins of Livonia says some women drive trucks there, but the "mounted routes" must be bid for as they open up. Seniority is involved, and since most women don't have much seniority, there are few women on the motor routes.

Does your child think that green peas come from a frozen food box, corn from a can, and tomatoes from a plastic carton?

Growing vegetables can provide wonderful educational opportunities as well as delightful culinary experiences.

In some cases, it is the root that is eaten; in other cases, the stem or leaves: in a few instances, the flower, and for many the developing seed case, either with or without the enclosed seeds.

IF AMPLE SPACE is available, the selection of vegetables that can be grown is unlimitedor limited only by the likes and dislikes of the family. They'll be enjoyed more than ever because they can be picked and eaten at the "just right" short row of leaf lettuce, and a few tomato plants trained to a stake. Include a plant of cherry tomatoes. Children enjoy the bite-sized fruits and they are good in salads or for garnishes. If space permits, include a chive plant and perhaps one of parsley.

With more space, add head lettuce, spinach, swiss chard, green beans, summer squash, carrots, beets and brocolli. In a large area, corn, squash, potatoes, melons, cucumbers, and many others can be grown.

Radishes, leaf lettuce, green onions, spinach, peas, carrots, and beets can be planted in rows one foot apart, although 18 inches makes cultivating a bit easier. Most other vegetables need from 1 1/2 to 2 feet between the rows.

Corn can be planted in rows 2 1/2 feet apart with the plants one foot apart in the row.

Tomatoes that are staked need two feet between the plants and three feet between the rows. If they are not staked, they need three or more feet each way in which to sprawl.

Melons, squash and cucumbers are spreading vines that need three to five feet of space in each direction.

Farmington's entry in the South Oakland American Legion Baseball League chalked up a 1-2 record last week, dropping a single game to Walled Lake while splitting a doubleheader with Milford.

In the series with Milford. the Farmington team, representing Groves Walker American Legion Post 346, earned a split by winning the first game 3-1 before falling in the nightcap 5-4.

Leading the Farmington attack in the opener were Joe Himmelspach, who blasted a 400-foot home run, and Mike Thompson, who scattered five hits against Milford pitching.

In the rain-delayed second game, a last-inning rally fell short, as Farmington's third out came with three men stranded on base.

Farmington dropped the Walled Lake game 11-8, as a spotty fielding performance enabled Walled Lake to stretch four hits and two Farmington errors into their 11-run total.

All Sunday games are doubleheaders, starting at 2:00 p.m. Weekday games are played under the lights, beginning at 6:00 p.m. All home games are played at Our Lady of Sorrows

Plymouth Veteran Finds

Kids Same, Games Change

man of sports at Plymouth High School hasn't made John Sandmann feel any older.

He realizes he probably has slowed up a step or two. A gray hair, or two, has cropped up.

"But working with youngsters keeps you on the younger side," declared Sandmann as he prepared to close the books on another year of athletic supervision at Plymouth.

"The kids always stay the same-agewise, Sandmann continued. "We always are dealing with athletes who range from 15 to 18. A few are a little younger and sometimes we deal with a 19-year-old."

THE NATURAL QUESTION was have the students changed over the years? "Many claim the athletes of today are better than the kids

we had here 18 or 15 years ago. I really don't know whether that's true or not. "It's a difficult answer to make, because the sports themselves have changed so much.

Football is more wide open. The same goes for basketball. "Then, too, the kids today benefit from far better facilities. We have more room for sports, yet, ironically, we don't have enough."

Sandmann noted that he has been trying to add wrestling to the program at Plymouth.

"We have the OK, but the question is where to find space for the squad. One of these days, maybe after we get our new high school in a few years, we'll locate the space."

IN HIS LONG reign as Plymouth's athletic director, Sandmann has worked with scores of

PLYMOUTH HIGH'S JOHN SANDMANN

Again, he was asked: "Do you find the coaches today better than their predecessors?*

"I wouldn't say so," declared Sandmann. "The coaches whom I first met here were just as dedicated and just as good as the men we have today.

"The difference centers around techniques. The modern coach is better off, thanks to the new ideas that have come forth in the last two decades."

What, then, constitutes the biggest difference Sandmann has seen in the 19 years he has spent at Plymouth? "That's easy. The growth of the community and with it the growth in our school.

"WE WERE JUST a Class B

'B' maximum when I came here. Now we're well up the ranks in Class A and growing to the point we must expand to add another senior high."

Sandmann talked about the pride that goes hand in hand with his job.

"The athletes always have been top flight around Plymouth. Gentlemen and dedicated all. And hard working.

"So many have gone on to star in college. The list is too great to mention. But who could forget the Egloff boys or Dick Schryer or Denny Lucka?

"And the coaches. Regardless of their records--whether their teams have won or lost, finished first or down the ladder, they have matched the athletes in high calibre.

"Nor do I ever remember a coach who wasn't most cooperative in the way he handled matters.*

SANDMANN HAS learned to be a realist. After years of seeing Plymouth roll along near the top in football, the team has sagged in the last couple years.

"The sports cycle keeps changing, you know," he declared. "It may be a few years before we get back up there in football, because the opening of the new school (due in 1969) is bound to have its effects on the present school's teams.

"But we'll be bouncing back. Don't worry about that."

How to Adapt Bass Bug For Spinning Tackle

Originally considered one of the most deadly of all bass baits, the bass bug was fished by means of a powerful flyrod and, admittedly, involved a lot of work in casting. Plop one down near a weed bed, let it lie quietly a moment, then give it a slight twitch.

The formula here called for a vicious explosion under the bug and you found yourself securely fastened to a big bass. Even today, a good bass bugger

Adaptation of bass bugs to spinning tackle is rather easy, though. By winding the bugs with lead wire just behind the body, enough weight will be added to make it cast easily. It is necessary to get just enough weight for casting but not so much that the bug will

ANOTHER SLIGHT change is needed in rigging up spinning gear for bug casting.

A light monofilament line of about three-pound test is about right for the best casting. To this should be added a short leader of six-pound material in order to minimize breakage if a bass should make a sudden turn and rake the leader with his dorsal fin.

One important consideration is to make sure the spinning reel is properly filled. Since the lure is going to be in the featherweight class, even with the extra wire wrapping, the reel should be filled right up to the lip. This will make it slip off the reel with a minimum of friction and results in longer casts.

Most music festivals are heterogeneous in nature-offering music by a variety of composers and periods -but the Schoolcraft festival will have a single theme.

IT WILL CONCENTRATE on the music of Joseph Haydn (1732-1809) and the contemporary neo-classicist Paul Hindemith.

Haydn is the father of the classical symphony and the string quartet, which he laced with sparkling melodies and rich instrumental coloring; his music is currently enjoying a revival.

Hindemith, who was born in Germany in 1895 and later settled in the U.S., was a string quartet musician-turned-composer. He used many techniques of the 1700's in writing operas, symphonies, ballets, sonatas and chamber music.
