

Commissioner Hudson Suggests 10 Charter Changes

GEORGE HUDSON

George Hudson, one of the most able members of the City Commission, who has asked for a thorough study of the city charter, has selected 10 provisions of the document that, in his opinion, could stand revision.

"Our charter was a fine document when it was written in 1952," he said, "but times have changed and now, after 15 years, some of the sections no longer are in pace with modern thinking."

"This is only my opinion," he pointed out, "but I think the study should be made. It may be that the other commissioners will not agree — but there can be no harm, and, perhaps, much good from such a study."

Commissioner Hudson then listed the following provisions that he will ask to be studied. They include:

1 — The section that now requires the printing of 500 copies of ordinances in lieu of having them published in the paper

2 — The method of requiring nominating petitions that now calls for the naming of the candidate at the time of taking out the petition. He would prefer that the petition be "blind" until the time of filing, such as is done by the Community School District.

3 — The provision allowing only 30 days — from April 1 to May 1 — for the preparation of the budget. He claims this is not sufficient time to do a thorough job.

4 — Provide for a report from the County Supervisor and a copy of the minutes of the Supervisors' meetings. The Supervisor is not required to make a report under the present charter.

5 — Alter the provision calling for attendance of all department heads at Commission meetings. He suggests that this be left to the judgment of the City Manager.

6 — Provide for the spelling out in detail the matter of publishing the minutes of Commission meetings and obtain a firm decision on the wishes of the people.

7 — Revise the provision calling for newly elected officials to take office on the first Monday after election and the organization of the Commission. Under this plan, Commissioner Hudson pointed out, the city could be without a Mayor for a week.

8 — Revise the provision limiting the service of a Commission member to two terms, which in some cases, is only four years.

9 — Alter the requirement limiting public employment to residents. In Commissioner Hudson's opinion this could be changed to a radius of 15 miles.

10 — The make-up of the various Boards and Commissions. Under the present charter, membership is limited to residents. It is Commissioner Hudson's opinion that this should be changed on the theory that if a good member is available, put him to work.

In listing the areas for study Commissioner Hudson made no mention of the limitation placed on holders of public office to those who are property-tax-paying residents of the city.

It was this limitation that caused Rev. Peter Schweitzer to sue the city some time ago and eventually brought an opinion from Circuit Judge Victor Baum that the limitation was unconstitutional.

"This matter is before the State Supreme Court now," Commissioner Hudson explained, "and it would be folly for us to do anything about it until the court makes its ruling. If Judge Baum's opinion is upheld, the change will have to be made. If the court rejects the opinion, then we will have to make a study and go to the people again for their view."

Township Water System Due For 9-Mile Extension

A 9.3-mile, $1 million extension of Plymouth Township's water distribution system is expected to be started in October following approval this week by a key committee of the Wayne County Board of Supervisors.

Completion of the project by late winter will mean City of Detroit water being supplied to township users along 57.25 miles of major mains, with the newest program opening vast acreage for industrial and residential service.

The Township has been a Detroit water user since 1961, and its network of mains will reach all except the western fringe as soon as this next project is finished.

Financing will come through sale of municipal bonds, and the Board of Supervisors' approval is necessary to have the state's assistance in the form of "good faith and credit."

Supervisor John McWen and Township Engineer Harold Howell appeared before the Board's nine-man Sewage and Water Supply Committee this week and quickly earned full endorsement of the undertaking.

The Ways and Means Committee and the complete Board still must act on the matter, but McWen anticipates few hurdles in gaining their approval.

Routes along which mains will be installed under the project include:

Five Mile Rd., from Sheldon to Beck.

Beck Rd., from Five Mile to Powell.

Powell Rd., from Beck west 1,200 feet.

Albion Court, from Powell to Beck.

Joy Rd., from Sheldon to Danrose.

Joy Rd., from Tilley to Eccles.

Northville Rd., from Hammett to C. Demons.

Five Mile Rd., from Bradner to Lake Pointe Village subdivision No. 5.

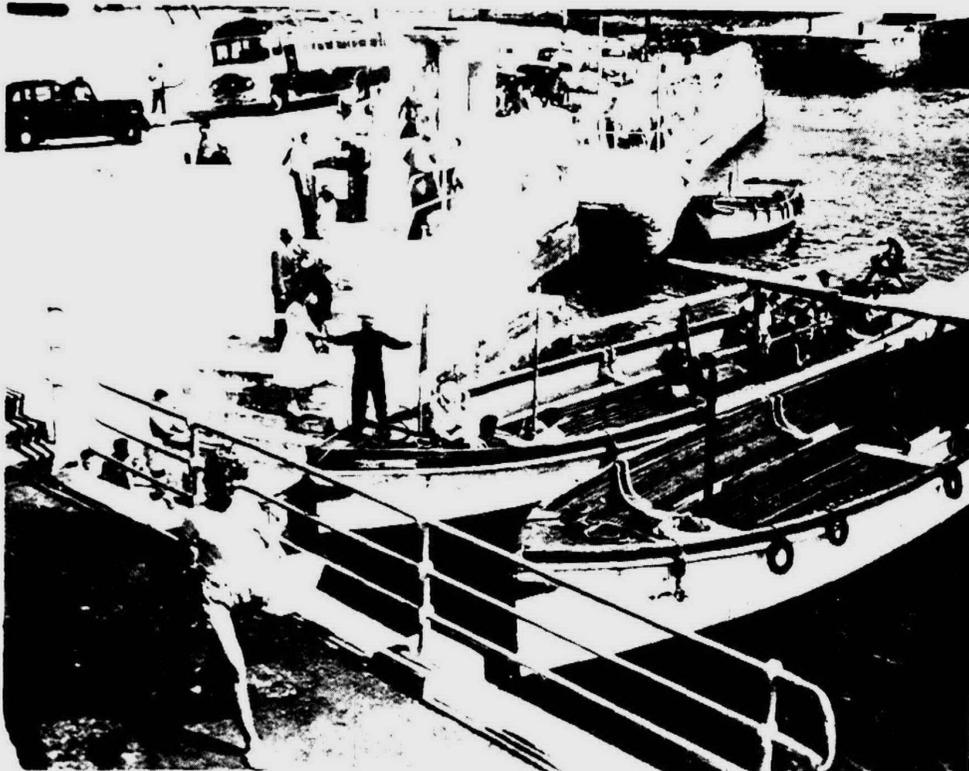

Old Five Mile Rd., from St. John's cemetery to Old Northville Rd.

City Opens Its Greatest Fete

Parade, Dinner, Home Products Show Top Week

A bright new chapter will be written indelibly into the history of Plymouth this week when the centennial celebration reaches its peak.

During the next six days the city will be host to His Worship, Frank Chapman, Lord Mayor of Plymouth, England, and his entourage that will include the Town Clerk of Plymouth and two members of his government.

Never before, in the long history that dates back to the first settler in the area in 1825, has such a group of celebrities from a foreign country visited our area and their presence, alone, will make the centennial something long to be remembered.

The arrival of the Lord Mayor and his party at Windsor Airport on Monday, July 3, will start the wheels in motion for a celebration the like of which Plymouth never has seen.

Before the departure of the celebrated guests Plymouth will be treated to a July 4th parade being sponsored by the Jaycees and which gives every promise of being the largest ever in the city.

On Tuesday evening they will be guests at the grand fireworks display, and will be honored guests at the big civic dinner at the Meeting House on Thursday evening.

Michigan's senior senator, Philip A. Hart will be the main speaker and head the list of dignitaries at the civic dinner.

Two outstanding features of the dinner will be toasts to her Majesty, Elizabeth, Queen

Downtown Heist Nets Guns, $50

In a major downtown break-in, one or more thieves who obviously "got what they went for" stole six pistols and revolvers — including a police .357 special — from the Western Auto Associates Store at 844 Pennington Wednesday night.

Ammunition, $50 in cash and a wastebasket, presumably used to carry out the loot, also were taken.

The robbery occurred between 11:00 p.m. Wednesday, when Manager Bill Keeler left the store, and 9:00 a.m. Thursday, when he returned. He said none of the hundreds of other sportsmen's items on the shelves were disturbed.

In a similar instance Thursday night, at Beyer Drugs, 1100 W. Ann Arbor Rd., Plymouth police apprehended two youths while allegedly attempting to gain illegal admission to the store. Both are being held for questioning regarding both cases.

JC's Pick Smith For U.S. Post

Wendell Smith of Plymouth, president of the Michigan Jaycees, this week was selected as one of the five outstanding state presidents of the organization at the 47th annual national convention of the Jaycees at Baltimore, Md.

Selection of the foremost five state leaders is made by a special judging panel. The decision is based on a review of the accomplishments and activities of all state presidents during their term in office.

Presentation of the award to Smith and the four others chosen was made by national Jaycees president Bill Suttle of Marion, N.C., at a banquet in the Baltimore Civic Center.

In further tribute to the Michigan president, the convention elected Smith as one of the Jaycees' national vice-presidents for the ensuing year.

$32,232 U.S. Grant Boosts Recreation

Federal financial assistance has been assured the Plymouth School District in a program for development of recreation areas adjacent to two new schools for year-around, community use.

From Washington came word this week that the Department of Housing and Urban Development had awarded the District $32,232 under its "open space acquisition program" to aid in making two sites serve joint school and community needs.

The sites involved are the new elementary school No. 9 on Canton Center Rd., a block south of Ann Arbor Rd., and the District's new "middle school" which will be erected on Ann Arbor Rd. just east of McClumpha.

Both schools are in the final planning stages with construction to start this fall. Both will open for classes in September, 1968.

The federal funds will be applied toward the purchase price of the land in both cases, in abidance with the requirements of the grant.

A similar request from the Board of Education for federal assistance to make the ultimate recreational facilities at the new high school complete for year-around, community use is still pending.

Until now the Board of Education has been hamstrung by a "swings and slides" playground philosophy at schools through the District. This has been good enough for the youngsters, but the playgrounds have not possessed facilities to warrant adult patronage.

House Pitchmen Must Have ID's

Householders were warned this week by the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce to require identification from door-to-door solicitors before listening to sales appeals.

"Some people don't know that they should not deal with any solicitor who does not wear a badge from the City and carry a card from the Chamber attesting to their legitimacy," said the announcement. The warning was particularly timely in view of the usual summer rash of solicitations.

PLYMOUTH'S OFFICIAL GIFT: In the year 1620 the hardy, determined Pilgrims walked down the granite steps of the harbor at Plymouth, England, and embarked on the frail Mayflower for the perilous journey to the new world. Now, almost 350 years later, a block of granite cut from the "Mayflower Steps" at Plymouth has been flown across the same Atlantic by the British Overseas Airways Corporation and it will be presented to the City of Plymouth at the civic dinner Thursday night. Above is shown the steps from where the stone was cut and below the stone is shown going through Customs in America. From left to right are: U.S. Customs Officer Herbert Fink, BOAC Cargo Representative Stanley Evans and Mr. E. Renshaw, BOAC station manager.

Goal for 1967 set at $98,000

Jim Thomas Named Chairman of Community Drive

First Call Is Issued For Team

James Thomas, general manager of Consumers Power Co., has been appointed to head the 1967 Plymouth Community Fund Drive. His appointment, and the goal of $98,000 were announced this week by John Herb, Community Fund Board president.

Thomas, who has long been active in community affairs, has a goal which is more than the $88,000 set up a year ago. However, last year the goal was exceeded by nearly $12,000.

Agencies which are supported by the Community Fund are: Red Cross, $5,463; Boy Scouts, $7,634; Girl Scouts, $9,400; Plymouth Dental Fund, $3,000; Michigan Cancer Society, $1,125;

Senior Citizens, $1,000; Veterans Memorial, $2,200; Visiting Nurse Association, $3,000;

Salvation Army, $11,500; and Family Services, $21,368. The fund also grants $2,000 to the Plymouth Symphony, $10,000 to the Plymouth YMCA, and $270 to the Plymouth Junior Police.

Plymouth always has maintained a separate Community Fund rather than joining the United Fund. However, part of the money raised in Plymouth is always given to the United Fund for services used by Plymouth residents.

Thomas's first plans are to organize a team which will help him conduct the drive.

Members of the Community Fund Board are John Herb, president; Earl Gibson, Kal Mahara, Joe West, John Kamel, the Rev. David Davies, Edward Schenning, Fred Beitzner, Beva Barter, Margaret Murawski, and Betty Korte.

Strom Will Join Board On July 10

Election of new officers of the Plymouth Community Board of Education, plus installation of one newly elected member, has been postponed to July 10 from the originally scheduled date of July 3. Recently enacted Michigan legislation changed the organizational requirements from a mandatory "first Monday in July" to a specification that the details be accomplished "on or before the second Monday in July."

Organizational steps this will precede the regular Board meeting of July 10, the first to be held under the administrative regime of Plymouth's new superintendent of schools, James H. Rossman.

To be sworn in at that time as members of the Board are Carl Schultheiss to his second full term, Mrs. Joanne Hulce to her first full term after serving as a full-in appointee, and Calvin Strom as successor to John Melaram. Strom was the only newcomer chosen in the June 12 election.

In the organizational procedure, the Board is required to name a president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, and to date no indication has come to light concerning the probable choices.

Currently Gerald Fischer is serving as president, Schultheiss is vice-president, Mrs. Esther Hulsing is the secretary and R. Bruce Scott is treasurer.

Schools Awarded U.S. Aid

At the two new schools such recreational advantages as shuffleboard and badminton courts, softball diamonds and other items of adult interest will be provided. This is in keeping with terms of the U.S. grant which dictate that the money is for acquisition of land that will be used jointly by the schools and community.

The word "jointly" is the key to the whole situation. This means 12-month availability without restriction to age. This marks the first time Plymouth schools have received a grant from this particular federal assistance program, and spokesmen for the Board of Education expressed elation when word of the approval was received.

This announcement came first from Rep. Marvin L. Eseh (Rep.-Ann Arbor) in a call from Washington to the Mail & Observer. Within hours the official notification was received at the Board of Education office from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The grant opens two added vistas. First is the opportunity to capitalize upon Washington's favorable attitude by seeking extra funds for physical development of both properties. Second is a likely change in policy to develop 12-month, neighborhood recreational centers in connection with older, existing schools. Otherwise the Board will be confronted by an out-of-balance situation that could provoke difficulties in the older neighborhoods.

Plans for installation of sewers to serve the same areas now are being worked on by Hamill and this project will follow completion of the water system extension.

Meanwhile, although this will expand the availability of Detroit water to an appreciable degree in the Plymouth community, there are no signs that the City of Plymouth is ready to join the network. Municipal water service is provided from wells existing northwest of the city and considerable dissatisfaction exists over its qualities.

of England, and the President of the United States, along with the presentation of a piece of rock taken from the dock in Plymouth, England, from which the original Mayflower sailed in 1620, to the people of Plymouth.

The climax of the visit will be reached at noon on Saturday, July 8, on the City Hall lawn when the Lord Mayor will be presented with four Imperial Locust trees as a gift from the people of Plymouth. They are to be planted on the city hall lawn in Plymouth, England, and provide a shady nook in which the folks can enjoy a few moments of leisure with the well wishes of their "cousins" in America.

Aside from these activities, the Rotary Club is sponsoring a special luncheon for the guests on Friday and the Jaycees have a day-long program, concluding with fireworks at Mettetal Airport on the Fourth.

Houk Gives Commission Full Quota

City Commissioner James Houk returned Thursday from a six-week European tour during which his personal visit to Plymouth, England, was instrumental in cementing a major highlight of his own community's coming Centennial observance.

Houk spent three days in Plymouth becoming acquainted with His Worship, Lord Mayor Frank Chapman, and other members of that thriving port city's administration.

A banquet in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Houk and other entertainment provided in England will be returned in kind when the Lord Mayor and his entourage visit here during the coming week.

Houk will join other Plymouth officials in meeting the English party at the Windsor Airport Monday, and his hand of welcome will be extended to men he already has come to know well.

Houk's return also will give the City Commission full attendance again when it convenes for a regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday. In the audience, getting their first glimpse of American government in action, will be the Lord Mayor and his colleagues.

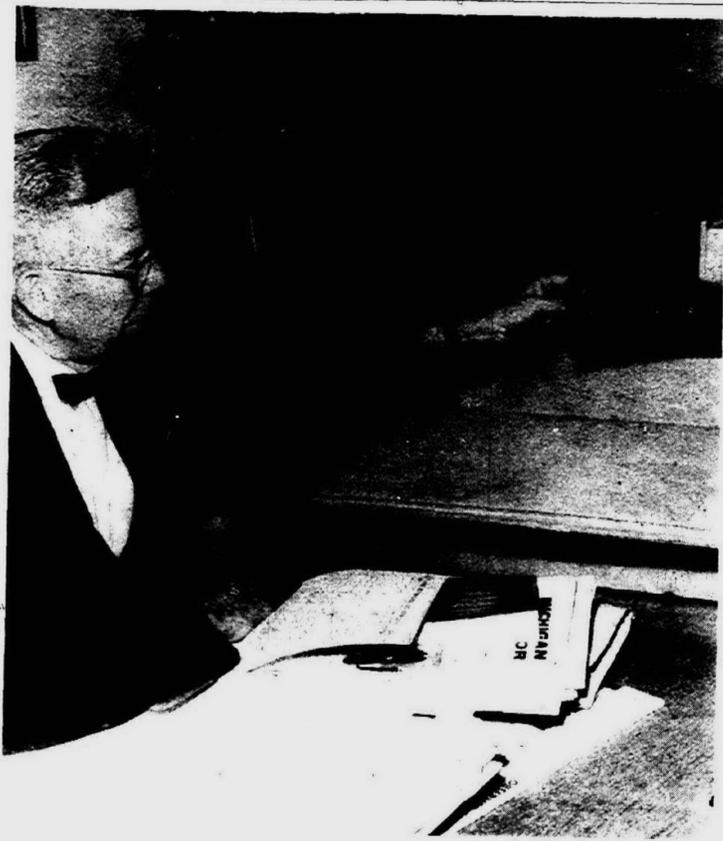

In Houk's absence, leaving the Commission with six members in attendance, a 3-3 split developed over the appointment of a new municipal judge. His return sets the stage for a tie-breaking ballot.

This over, the motorcade will proceed to Plymouth where a civic reception will be held on the City Hall lawn at 4:30 o'clock.

It will be the greatest week the City of Plymouth ever has known.

RUSSELL ISBISTER

Isbister Carries Many Memories And Disappointment to New Job

Russell Isbister, who closed out a 16-year career as superintendent of the Plymouth Community School District last Friday, will take a lot of fond memories with him when he reports for his new duties at Eastern Michigan University next fall.

But he'll also be bearing a keen disappointment, too.

He had just finished packing the last of his records, had lifted his name plate from his desk, and was about to leave the school office for the last time when he confided his disappointment.

"When I came here 16 years ago," he said, "the school system lacked unity. By dint of hard work through the years we overcame that and built up a nice working force."

"That accomplished I hoped that I could spread my efforts just a bit more and help to bring about the unification of the entire area—the City of Plymouth and Plymouth Township."

"I figured then that it was a pressing problem that needed solving and I still feel that way today. But I am sorely disappointed that the unification has not been accomplished."

He sort of sighed for a moment, then continued.

"This is a great locality,

It has great potential and as I so often have said—we have the four "P's"—People, Place, Purpose and Pride. We have a great reservoir of talent, too, and the know-how to do most anything.

"So, with assets such as these, and the need for unity, the unification of our governments is bound to come. Even some of the older folks who have been resisting it for years, now are beginning to see the benefits that could be derived."

"My only regret," he went on, "is that it didn't happen while I was serving in an official capacity within the area."

He chuckled just a bit at the thought and then went on: "I am delighted that with my new position I still will live in the area and I hope to be here when unification does come. And once that happens there is just no telling what a great place Plymouth could be."

Switching the conversation to education and young folks, one of his favorite topics, Mr. Isbister pointed out this salient point—

"We've got to teach these young folks the skills to recognize their ability and their needs. I sometimes think we don't go far enough in getting them exposed."

"For instance," he went on,

"it would have been a grand thing to have had a group of students at the Leadership Conference a few months ago. This could have given them an insight into government and what the thinking is in high places. It would have been a great exposure."

"I think arrangements should be made for students to attend the meetings of our City Commission and the Township Board. We've got to get them acquainted with such things—and the sooner the better."

Looking to the future of education this very able official who has done more than his share to better the school system, explained that one of the main jobs that lies ahead is to keep the students enthused.

"So often," he confided, "a little failure here and there causes a student to lose heart and another little failure along the line causes him to lose faith and drop out. This is what we've got to guard against. We've got to prevent them, if possible, from becoming discouraged. We've got to instill dogged determination in them. And if we can do that, education will have done its job."

With that he closed his desk for the last time. His parting words served as a sort of rallying point for his successor.

New Books In Library

"One Man in the World" by James Barlow is the story of the savage conflict between the emerging black man and the white settlers in Portuguese Angola and of a United Nations official who is sent to inquire into conditions, there and his struggle to bring decency and justice.

"Other People's Money" by Jerome Weidman is a novel set in New York City during the period from 1915 to the end of World War II. It is the story of two orphans, Philip Brandwine, who becomes a seeker after fame, and Victor Smith, who seeks only wealth, and of the woman who must choose between them. This is the 15th novel by Mr. Weidman, the author of "I Can Get It For You Wholesale".

"Nothing Ever Breaks Except the Heart" by Kay Boyle collects 20 of the O. Henry prize winner's short stories in one volume. The settings of the stories vary from Austria in the months just before and after the Anschluss to the rural South in the 1960's to Greenwich Village in 1965.

"Cooking with Style" by Charlotte Adams is filled with a large selection of epicurean dishes and menus, all intended for entertaining with a flair.

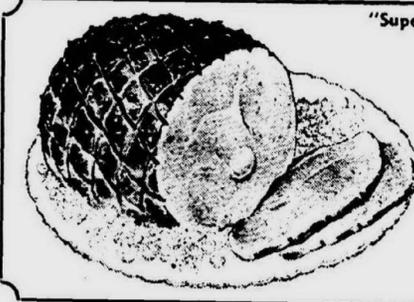

"The Silent Syndicate" by Hank Messick presents the history of organized crime in America. The major focus is on the Cleveland Syndicate, but a picture of the national network also emerges.

CONGRATULATIONS

City of Plymouth on your 100th Birthday

We are proud to have been able to help Plymouth grow into the prosperous community that it is today.

You can rely on Wiltse's as Plymouth has for 50 years.

Plymouth Plays Important Role In Hands Across The Sea Activity

While the nation's air waves and public prints are filled with news of the war in Vietnam, the crucial conditions in the middle east and the unrest in many other parts of the world, it is pleasant to know that two nations will be joined in a friendly hands-across-the-sea activity during the coming week — and right here in Plymouth.

It will be Centennial Week and one that will live long in the minds of those in attendance and longer still in the pages of history.

The activity will center around the visit of His Worship, Frank Chapman, Lord Mayor of Plymouth, England, who will be an honored guest along with three members of his government.

From the moment the English visitors set foot on the North American continent Monday morning at the Windsor airport, they will be treated to many peaceful scenes and they will see a city and entire community modeled after their homeland, at play.

First, they will be taken through the tunnel under the Detroit River and, from the top of the Veterans Memorial Building they will be shown the beautiful Detroit River and a portion of the most peaceful border in the world.

It is this border that is the envy of all nations. There are no such things as "Berlin Walls" and closed canals and the visitors will have the opportunity of seeing vessels from foreign ports plying their trade along the greatest fresh water way in the world.

This is a far cry from the doings along the Suez Canal and the other global sites that have the United Nations in an uproar.

They will also see something that may even surprise them — for there is more boat traffic on the Detroit River than any other water way in the world, and it is quite a sight to stand on the veranda atop the Veterans Memorial and look up and down the river and be almost within a stones throw of a foreign country.

While here they'll also see the University of Michigan, one of the world's greatest institutions of learning and they'll visit Greenfield Village and the Ford Motor Company — the organization that put the world on wheels.

What's more, right here in Plymouth, they'll see one of the few places left in America that still is a reminder of the colonial days. They will see a downtown business section with a "village green" — Kellogg Park — and they'll see many reminders of the trip and survival of their forefathers in 1620.

These things will help to make Plymouth the cynosure of all eyes during the week and it will be a lasting memory.

When the visitors depart they will leave behind a constant reminder of the visit that will be written indelibly into the history of Plymouth. It will be a piece of rock taken from the dock in Plymouth, England, from which the original Pilgrims departed.

This is not an ordinary rock. It will be the only official Plymouth Rock in the United States and it will most certainly become a tourist attraction and an historical gem in the years to come.

In no other country is such a thing possible — in this time of wars and rumors of wars. And it will help stand Plymouth, Michigan, apart from other sections of the land.

In return the visitors will take home with them a few fitting reminders of their trip. Aside from the mental pictures they'll also have some tangible evidence of what is an outstanding visit. It is not a summit conference, as such, but its results will be more lasting.

That's why it is so important for the people in the Plymouth Community to put their best foot forward during the coming week. It is not only the biggest week in the city's history, but will have a prominent place in the history of Michigan as well.

Where else do high government officials travel today with no thought of war or belligerent nations? The places are few and far between.

But, in Plymouth this week, it will be different.

Let's not miss the opportunity to be gracious hosts every minute of the visitors stay.

Letters To The Editor

Will Flag Be Forgotten?

Dear Editor:

Shortly after Memorial Day, one of your contributors complained that business houses in the downtown district had failed to mark the occasion with a display of flags.

The point was well made, but it didn't sink in as anyone who took the time to walk down Main Street on June 14 discovered. Remember what June 14 is supposed to be?

Flag Day, of course, but Plymouth merchants didn't seem to pay any attention.

Now I wonder how they will treat Independence Day. What this town needs is not a good five-cent cigar, but a wide-awake flag salesman. He could find plenty of customers.

Why Slight The Women

Dear Editor:

We read a lot about the men who are participating in the Centennial, but nothing about the women. Surely, the committee should have some women on it.

There seldom has been a successful event from the Symphony Ball to the AAUW Children's Play run without women.

It is women who think of all the extra touches which make an event something special to remember. It's too bad this wasn't realized by the men on the Centennial committee.

I did hear that the committee is letting women handle the ticket sales for the dinner. If women are good enough to do an important job like that, why can't there be a woman on the committee?

Defender of the Weaker Sex in the woods that was good enough.

The real birthday party for the community was that held a few weeks ago under sponsorship of the current Township Board of Trustees. They put 140 candles on the cake, which was historically correct.

All the City of Plymouth is celebrating this year is the legal incorporation of the Village of Plymouth which did take place in 1867. By that time Main Street already had had a $60,000 fire and the community was bustling.

However, if we must have a Centennial let's get on with the show. After all, this isn't the first time the City has been behind in its thinking.

Pilgrims Came From Holland?

Dear Editor:

I've enjoyed reading the stories in the Mail and Observer about the coming of the Lord Mayor of Plymouth, England to our Centennial . . . and of the Plymouth Rock which Longfellow in his "Courtship of Miles Standish" so aptly called "the cornerstone of a nation."

But I've noticed that no mention has been made of the fact that part of the original company of English Separatists (later called Pilgrims) had set sail from Leyden, Holland in the small ship "Speedwell." They had fled to Holland 12 years earlier because of religious persecution. When the "Speedwell" became unseaworthy, it was left at the port of Plymouth, England and the Pilgrims joined the rest of the company on the larger "Mayflower."

This is pure conjecture, but had the "Speedwell" continued on to the new world perhaps our town would have been called "New Leyden."

A Plymouthite since '41.

What About Bright Children

Dear Editor,

I constantly read and hear about special programs offered in the schools for retarded children. This is fine.

However, my son is in third grade and far from retarded. But there are no special programs to aid him. He brings home all A's on his report card, and surely could qualify for special classes for bright children if Plymouth had such a thing.

It seems a shame that a community so interested in education isn't doing more to encourage children to use their brains to the utmost.

Some of my son's teachers have been able to give him a little outside work to do, but there is no set program offered to challenge him.

I'm sure there are others who would like to see Plymouth start an enrichment program for the above-average child.

Here's Reason For Celebration

Dear Editor:

Apparently Plymouth (the City, that is, not the township) figures, "better late than never."

This Centennial affair is very misleading. It gives those who don't know any better the idea that Plymouth was just born yesterday, if 100 years ago can be called yesterday.

As a matter of fact, the first dwelling built in what is known now as the City of Plymouth was a log cabin on the same land where the Mayflower Hotel now stands. That was in 1825, which was 142 years ago, not 100.

It was only two years later, 1827, that the legislature of the then territory of Michigan approved use of the name "Plymouth" for this area. Of course, it specified "Plymouth Township," but for a clearing

Let's Play It Safe During Centennial

Now that we are heading into another celebration of our independence it might be well to ponder on the great changes that have taken place through the years and set up additional safeguards for the protection of life and limb over the holiday period.

Because July Fourth had overtones of wars and struggles with the homeland it always was marked with the explosion of fire-arms and the use of weapons over the period.

Year after year countless thousands were killed or injured in some manner during the fireworks displays and the amateurish handling of fire-arms. In fact it got so bad that the sale of fireworks is prohibited in most all areas.

Today the backyard fireworks display is only a memory. The big displays are staged mostly by governmental units and handled by experts.

Throughout the land there were cries of a "Safe and Sane Fourth" until the government finally had to resort to this type of fireworks celebration.

Successful as this drive was, it only partially solved the problem.

Death and injury from fireworks were reduced to a minimum, but the toll on the highways wasn't abated. Year after year this slaughter increases — and nobody seems able to do much about it.

This is mentioned now, to call attention to the fact that the highways and by-ways in the Plymouth area may be dangerous during the next week. It is the period of the Centennial celebration and traffic will be heavier than usual.

The presence of visitors from Plymouth, England, will make the celebration more attractive than usual. More and more folks will be driving to Plymouth. So, it is vital that more care must be taken to assure the safety of all concerned.

Some of the roads in and out of Plymouth are dangerous at best. This is especially true at the intersection of Five-Mile and Hines Drive. This is dangerous because Hines Drive is one-way only in one lane. This seems ridiculous, but it is true.

The drive through all of Hines Park can be dangerous, too, at high speeds because of the many curves and shaded areas. At any speed above normal a driver could have a car on top of him with little or no notice and a death-dealing crash could result.

Much the same is true of the highways on the other side of the city, where traffic will be coming from Ann Arbor and from the areas along Highway 23.

The holiday count started Friday night and it will continue through Tuesday night. It is a long period and, nationally, the death rate is expected to rise above other years.

Plymouth could be some of the cause unless we take careful note and exercise common sense while enroute to the Centennial celebration or even in the downtown areas.

Sufficient warnings have been placed. The laws have been defined. But there is no way to legislate the building of the man behind the wheel.

This week in Plymouth is to be a time of merriment. Let's not spoil it with traffic accidents.

No celebration is worth a human life. Let's not make this a costly one.

More years ago than The Stroller cares to remember, one of the fascinating activities was to toss a rock into the water and see how far the ripples would go. In fact, we used to have contests to see who could cause the most ripples and which traveled the greatest distance.

Did you ever realize that you could do the same thing with an idea — toss it on the table and see how far it would take you?

This thought came to mind as Plymouth heads into its Centennial Week.

Some months ago, when the Centennial was first discussed, a group of businessmen was sitting around the luncheon table with Joe Tarantino, former general manager of the Gaylord Container Company in Plymouth, who had just been named chairman of the Centennial Committee. In the course of the conversation Joe had asked for ideas of some outstanding events that could be made part of the Centennial program.

In answer, one of the men at the table suggested that it might be a good idea if we could find out how many cities in America were named Plymouth and then invite all of the mayors of these communities to spend the week with us.

Then some bold character, who was a dreamer at heart, spoke up and said, "Why not go further than that. Why not invite the Lord Mayor of Plymouth, England, to be with us. This would be a natural as there is more of a tie with him than the others."

The idea seemed fantastic. But the verbal rock had been thrown into the water and it was interesting to watch the ripples. The idea grew and grew and the ripples traveled further and further. Then, much to the surprise of everyone, word arrived that the Lord Mayor of Plymouth, England, had accepted. What's more he was bringing three members of his government with him.

This wasn't the end of the ripples, however. Next came word that a slab, taken from the dock from which the Mayflower sailed in 1620, was being sent here as a gift to the City of Plymouth to stand, forever, as a token of friendship between the two cities.

That's how far the ripple of an idea traveled.

SENTIMENTAL STREAK COMES TO LIGHT

When Ralph Lorenz, portly owner of the Mayflower, heard that plans were afoot to raze the old P & A Theater that recently was presented to the city, he shook his head and remarked, "That can never be. We just can't let it happen."

Surprised at this remark, his listeners were more amazed when he said, "That's where I had my first job. That old theater has a place in my heart and I just can't let it be torn down."

He then offered himself as the leader of a new group that wanted to save the place.

"I'll do all I can to preserve that theater. We need such a place," he said. "It could be the cornerstone of a cultural development in the downtown area and give Plymouth something no other city has — a home for the arts in the center of the business section."

Ralph can't do it alone. But such an idea should not be wasted. So, if you are interested in developing the culture of the city, you know now where you can find a leader.

THEY SHOULD CHARGE ADMISSION

Speaking of the theater, in these days when your TV screens are filled with the usual summer re-runs, you'll never find more drama and comedy than you can see almost every Monday night at the Plymouth City Hall.

A week ago, we had the dramatic scene of "Simon Legree" Vallier battling with Police Chief Robert Corrington — and getting only a tie. It was drama at its best.

Then, last Monday night, the drama turned to comedy when a spectator leaped to his feet and shouted to the Commission in general, "Are you fellows taking kick-backs?"

It came during a public hearing on the widening of South Main Street, and again brought Commissioner Vallier to his feet.

"Don't you dare make a crack like that," Vallier shouted, "We get $10 a meeting and don't have to take any insults like you just handed out."

"Take it back," Vallier shouted in his best dramatic tones — and the apology was made.

Then, a few minutes later, Commissioner McKeon got locked in a verbal exchange with a spectator. They were providing a good comedy skit until City Attorney Healy ended it all with a shout "You are both out of order."

It was all good, clean fun.

Maybe admission should be charged for such entertainment.

THINGS I NEVER KNEW 'TIL NOW:

That the City of Plymouth not only is plagued by the long delays at the railroad crossings, but must pay for the upkeep of the gates that stop the traffic. And the railroad pays no taxes.

How about that?

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY:

You'll never make any hits if you don't take the bat from your shoulder.

Join the Fashionables---Make And Wear Papier Mache Jewelry

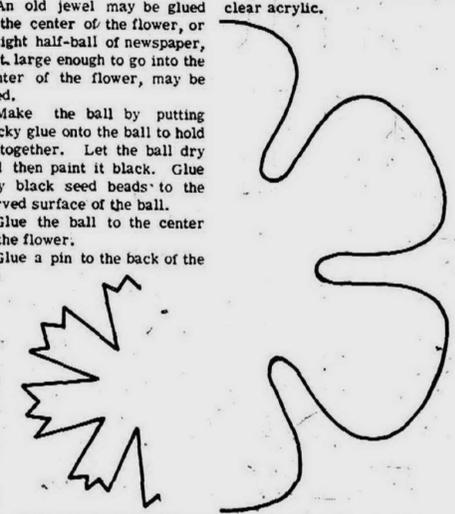

Mrs. Gerald Stevens, of Pine Tree, a young woman with a lot of ingenuity and a talent for arts and crafts, agreed to provide the "Mail and Observer" with her secret for making newspaper-mache jewelry. Here it is:
MATERIALS:
Newspaper
"Tacky" white glue (do not substitute)
Matte spray paint in any color
Jewels or other decorations
TO MAKE A BRACELET:
Cut seven strips of newspaper nine and a half inches long and about one inch wide. Take one newspaper strip and put tacky glue all over one side. Use lots of glue, because the glue gives the bracelet body. The more glue, the stiffer the bracelet.
Lay a second strip on top of the glued strip, allowing the end of the second strip to extend one inch. Smooth wrinkles out of the strips.
Make a circle of the two strips. Be sure the circle will fit over your hand.

Smooth the wrinkles out of the inside strip, by working around and around with your fingers. The procedure will give you a perfect circle, without wrinkles on the inside strip.
Take another strip of newspaper and again apply glue all over one side. Place this strip on the outside of the bracelet, overlapping the ends. Again work out wrinkles.
Continue adding strips in the same way until all seven strips have been used. Start each strip in a different place, so the bracelet won't be unevenly thick.
Let the glue dry about 10 minutes. Then trim both long edges to make them even.
Let the bracelet dry at least 24 hours before painting and decorating it.
Paint the bracelet with a flat or matte paint; others won't cover the newspaper. This leaves a dull finish. If you want a shiny finish spray the dry paint with clear acrylic.
To decorate use old buttons or trimming from the notions department of a store. Mrs. Stevens likes to put narrow gold or silver braid around the edges of the bracelet. This covers any rough edges, where the paper wasn't cut evenly.

The braid may be put on before the bracelet is painted, and sprayed the same color as the bracelet.
Mrs. Stevens then uses her imagination to decorate the center of the bracelet, using old jewels, backs of buttons, or any small decorative piece.
The jewels and the braid can be glued on, with the "Tacky".
TO MAKE A FLOWER PIN:
Trace the flower pattern onto a square of newspaper. Glue two more squares to the first using Tacky glue.
While the glue is still wet, cut the flower out.
Make one more set of petals in the same way.
While glue is wet, shape the flowers, curling petals up slightly.
Make one flower center, following the same procedure as with petals.
Allow all three sections to dry 24 hours before painting.
Spray paint the petals in your matte color and spray the center in a contrasting color.

When the paint is dry, glue the sets of petals and center together.
An old jewel may be glued in the center of the flower, or a tight half-ball of newspaper, just large enough to go into the center of the flower, may be used.
Make the ball by putting Tacky glue onto the ball to hold it together. Let the ball dry and then paint it black. Glue tiny black seed beads to the curved surface of the ball.
Glue the ball to the center of the flower.
Glue a pin to the back of the completed flower.

For a glossy finish, spray the entire pin with several coats of clear acrylic.

HALF-PATTERNS for papier mache flower pins are shown above. To make a complete pattern, fold a piece of paper, and trace the pattern shown with flat edge against the fold. The pattern on the left is for the center; right pattern is for petals.

The George Bauers, Woodward Warricks and Vern Joneses have all recently returned from EXPO 67. They each worked out their own system for "beating the crowds" and they all agree there were crowds--which they pass on to any other Plymouthites planning to attend the fair.
"We started from the amusement park and went in the opposite direction of most people," said Mrs. Warrick. "That way we never had to wait longer than 45 minutes to get in any of the exhibits."
The Warricks recommend the Czechoslovakian, British and Quebec exhibits, and thought the Austrian restaurant was the best.
She and her husband skipped the most popular exhibits because of the lines, but found that even the lesser known displays were excellent.
"We especially liked all the Canadian exhibits," she said.

Life Through The Living Lord

By THE REV. PATRICK CLIFFORD

Jesus said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou has sent."

"He that hath the Son hath life."

From the teachings of Jesus we observe that He was more concerned with man having life than being shackled by certain religious customs and rites.

In this brief message we want to consider the matter of spiritual life which Jesus emphasized in His earthly ministry, both by exhortation and by example. By spiritual life we mean God-consciousness in our daily lives—not just a holy feeling while we are in a service or meeting, but daily knowing the presence and power of God in every aspect of our lives. A very religious man by the name of Nicodemus came to Jesus one night to talk about His teaching, but Jesus immediately told him that he must have new life. He must be born again or born from above by a God-given spiritual birth.

"Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again." Just as we have had a natural birth in the flesh so we must have a spiritual birth. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; that which is born of the spirit is spirit."

The natural birth will be evidenced by our activity and interest in the physical and material side of life. Spiritual life that comes by the new birth causes us to have interest and be concerned about spiritual and eternal matters. The spiritual life will make the physical and material life more meaningful and purposeful.

The need of this new life is even greater today than when Jesus spoke to Nicodemus. With the great increase in moral and mental breakdowns we have evidence that man lacks something inwardly that will bring stability to his life.

To excuse ourselves for the wrong that we are doing some men have introduced a supposedly new ideal called "situation ethics". This same principle has been used down through the ages by men who are willing to deceive themselves. What this principle amounts to is that every man is allowed to do that which is right in his own sight, rather than that which is right in the sight of the Holy God.

The history of the nation of Israel as recorded in the book of Judges would indicate that this was the principle that men followed under the leadership of certain judges. The result was war, servitude and often famine. There was no stability nationally or individually. This we are experiencing today in a large area of our individual and national lives.

As sure as day follows night, mental breakdowns follow in the wake of moral breakdowns. In the June 13 issue of Look magazine Jack Shepherd, Look senior editor, wrote an article entitled "When College Students Crack Up". The article includes this statement: "Some 1,000 kill themselves each year. More drop out for emotional reasons than flunk out. The number of psychotics on-campus rises. For every 10,000 college students, says Dr. Dana L. Farnsworth, director of the Harvard University Health Services: 1,000 will have emotional conflicts severe enough to need professional help; 300-400 will have feelings of depression deep enough to impair their efficiency; 100-200 will be apathetic and unable to organize themselves; 20-50 will be seriously affected by conflicts within the family; 15-25 will need treatment in a mental hospital; 5-20 students will attempt suicide; one to three will succeed."

These facts alone should prove to us that there is a need in the inner life of our young people. If this situation exists among our youth, then it is evident that there is even a greater need among older people. College young people are regarded as average or above-average Americans. If this is the condition with the average or above-average youth, then we must conclude that the situation in the below-average group will be worse.

There is need of this new life that Jesus talked about and imparted to men. He is still able, ready and willing to give this life. This life can be the possession of any person who will turn to God through Jesus Christ by simple, childlike faith, believing His Words and obeying the voice of the Spirit of God.

The Apostle Peter said, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever." The Lord Jesus is no respecter of persons. "He says him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." "Whosoever will may come."

To all that come and receive this new life there will be a new outlook on life and a new experience in life. This new life in Christ gives us a new experience of love, joy and peace, which will be a stabilizing factor in our everyday life.

"God is love." "Perfect love casts out fear." God has promised to keep us in perfect peace as we commit our way unto Him. He will fill our lives with joy unspeakable, and the joy of the Lord shall be our strength.

The message of the apostles and of the early church was of new life through their living Lord. He still lives today in the place of power and is able to impart new life to all that come unto God by Him.

This new life will result in an inward stability in your own life, a greater concern about others, and a life of usefulness in the present, and an eternal hope which will cause you to press on in life regardless of the present circumstances.

The Top Side of Life

By THE REV. DAVID STRANG

The "long hot summer" has begun, in Tampa, Cleveland, and probably all the other places in which there are ghettos.

In these ghettos, in which human beings are shoved together and pushed around, it takes only the smallest incident to set off a riot. And no wonder. How would you act if you and about six other people were locked in a room no larger than a closet together? You would either knock the door down, or tear each other apart. After awhile you wouldn't be human anymore, just animals. That's what happens to people who can't get out of ghettos.

We, in Plymouth, don't worry about it much, though. We don't have to fear long hot summers of racial discontent. What we don't realize, however, is that we are building our own ghetto. The ghetto we are making may not produce riots, but it can create something as tragic: Dull, ignorant, stifled people.

A ghetto is a place in which people are isolated, cut off, from the rest of society. It's a place in which people have little opportunity to know or understand any one but "my own kind". A person who lives in a ghetto may be sure of having only limited opportunities for contact with other kinds of people and ideas. That remains true no matter how good the education system may be.

Plymouth could easily become a ghetto—a white, upper middle class ghetto.

How many of us have any more than a smearing acquaintance with Negroes? How many of us know much more than what we read in newspapers about Negro achievements and defeats? What about our children? Must they grow up, as we have, thinking that Negroes are evil or inferior to us white folks? Must our children be deprived of knowledge and acquaintance with anyone but their own kind? That is what's happening in our growing ghetto.

We could be creating a religious ghetto, too. Most everyone in Plymouth is "Christian"; that means, almost everybody belongs to a church. I, for one, would like to have a few other brands around so my children could understand that there are such people as Buddhists and Hindus and Jews, even atheists. Don't we have some responsibility to realize that only seventeen percent of the world is Christian? Isn't that part of any meaningful tolerance?

We are also in the process of making an economic ghetto. Our children are beginning to think that everyone lives in $20,000 to $30,000 homes. We are wiping out the low income sub-standard housing, which wouldn't be so bad, except that we are not making plans to replace it with anything of quality economically comparable. Where are the people on Shearer Drive supposed to go when industry or an expressway come to town?

We might be making a ghetto out of Plymouth. I hope not. I hope the people responsible for planning, indeed, all of us, will be careful so that as Plymouth grows it remains open and becomes the kind of community in which living can be exciting and meaningful.

Presbyterian Teens Help Mission Church

Twelve teens from the Presbyterian Church have just returned from Morris Fork, Kentucky where they helped fix up the Presbyterian Mission Church.

Every day of their "vacation" the kids started working at seven a.m., painting and fixing up the small mission church. They kept at it until 2 p.m. when the heat of the sun forced them to quit.

Chaperoning the group were Mrs. Gary Pride, Kitty Catlett, the Rev. Lewis Brown, and Bill Silvis.

While it may not have been the most restful trip most members of the group are thinking of going back next year to work on the church or offer their services to the community if needed.

How To Take Up Family Camping ...

By CLAIRE PROCHAZKA
Staff Writer

Rent, borrow, take what you have — but don't think you have to buy a whole camping outfit before you start camping.

"A professional camper," Mrs. Richard (Marge) Schulkins of Farmington, who is a field director for the National Campers and Hikers Association, was asked how a family which didn't know anything about camping could get started.

"A lot of people seem to think they need stacks of equipment before they can start, but that just isn't true," Mrs. Schulkins said.

One of the worst enemies of the first-time camper is his own temptation to be easily discouraged. Being turned away at a state park is often the first big blow to a camping vacation.

"Don't give up and go home," Mrs. Schulkins advised. "Try for a spot in a private campground. These are usually less crowded and the camping rates are about the same as in public parks." Private parks are listed in most campground directories.

A LOT OF FIRST-TIME camping woes can be eliminated by a dry run in the backyard or an overnight in a neighborhood park. Some families are ready to head out on a coast-to-coast trip with no more experience than this, Mrs. Schulkins said.

"Most families begin camping because of the economy factor," she explained, "but a love of outdoors and people is probably what keeps us coming back."

A camping guide, which lists campgrounds throughout the nation, should be part of the camping family library, Mrs. Schulkins said.

BASIC CAMPING equipment can be rented for about $35 a week. Some items could come from camping neighbors or friends. For dishes, cooking utensils, linens, just take what you need from home supplies, she suggested.

"Beginning campers are more likely to take too much than too little."

Any standard list of essential camp and personal equipment will be a big help to the beginner, she said. "But most small things that you forget are available at the small stores near developed campgrounds."

Of course, the lists of camping essentials depend on what kind of camping your family is planning. What looks like a list of essentials to a trailer camping family would be a joke to a man who planned on hiking for a week with all his equipment on his back.

"That's another reason for not buying equipment all at once," Mrs. Schulkins said. "Today there are so many different ways to camp that it really pays to try out several camping outfits, tent, tent-trailer, camper — before you buy."

Basic camping equipment can be purchased for about $300, she said. A list of the really basic items includes: a tent, a sleeping bag for each camper, a first-aid kit, blankets, a flashlight, sanitary supplies, basic dishes and cooking utensils, a lantern, a stove and fuel.

Some items of personal gear are much more important when camping than when packing for a trip. Don't forget: mosquito repellent, sunburn lotion, rainwear, heavy gloves.

OBSERVER NEWSPAPERS

...And How The Veterans Rough It

Ten days in the Northern Ontario wilderness. A five-mile boat ride to the nearest outpost of civilization. Main concern: fishing. Spare time: bear hunting.

Obviously not a vacation plan for the faint-hearted.

Observer Newspapers circulation director Fred Wright and four friends decided that the time had come to escape suburbia. They planned a he-man, roughing-it camping trip in the birch woods of Northern Ontario.

The five, who with extensive experience, packed up some gear and arranged to obtain the rest from a native outfitter of the far north.

They headed for a campsite along the Chapeau River, near the village of Chapeau, about 150 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie.

The five suburbanites cooked over a stone age stove, protected their equipment with a windbreak lashed together from birch poles and 20th century plastic (photo below).

All of their gear was moved to the campsite along the river by boat.

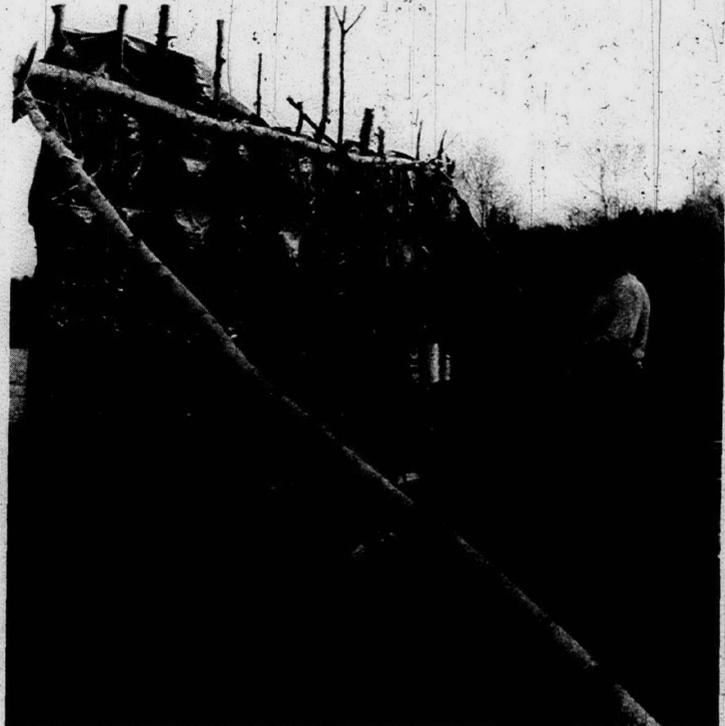

They ate well — fish, eggs, bacon, steaks. "Eating was all we really had to worry about," Fred says.

No bear meat in the pan, though. The five tried stalking the big black bears, but the big black flies got to the hunters first.

What was the worst part of primitive camping? "No ice to keep the beer cold."

Fred Wright stirs the stew.

Many Spots Within A Couple of Hours Drive

The beginning camper doesn't need to plan a month-long expedition to the far north woods to get a taste of outdoor living.

There are 14 state parks with a total of nearly 2,500 campsites in an area bordered roughly by Jackson on the west, Flint on the north and Ohio on the south. All are within an hour or two driving distance from the northwest suburban area.

Most of Michigan's state parks are equipped with bathhouses, flush toilets, electricity and concession stands.

Motor vehicles must have an annual permit ($2) or a daily permit (50 cents) to enter state parks.

Campsite rental ranges from $1.50 to $2 a day, depending on facilities provided.

From June 15 through Labor Day, campers are limited to 15 days in any one state park with an additional 30 days during other months.

State parks with campsites in the southeastern section of the state (see numbered map) are:

1--W.J.HAYES: Nine miles west of Clinton on US-12 and M-124. 202 campsites, with store, showers, laundry, library, boats and bathhouse. Electricity, water, toilets, boat launch site, trailer sanitation facility and bathing beach included.

2--WATERLOO: Surrounds the village of Waterloo, accessible from I-94, M-52 and M-106 over country roads. 450 campsites, with laundry, shower, bathhouse. Includes electricity, water, toilets, boat launch site, trailer sanitation disposal and bathing beach.

3--PINCKNEY Can be reached from M-36, east of Gregory, North Territorial Rd. and M-52, from Unadilla or from Dexter-Howell Road, 314 campsites, with laundry, shower, bathhouse. Includes electricity, water, toilets, boat launch site, trailer sanitation disposal and bathing beach.

4--BRIGHTON: Three miles southwest of Brighton off I-96, US-23 and M-36. 270 campsites, with box toilets, store, bathhouse. Includes boat launch site and bathing beach.

5--ISLAND LAKE: Four miles east of Brighton just south of I-96. 104 campsites, with boats, canoes, stores, bathhouses, water, toilets. Includes bathing beach.

6--PROUD LAKE: 12 miles southwest of Pontiac, accessible from M-59 or M-218. 181 campsites, nearby store. Includes electricity, water, toilets, boat launch site and trailer sanitation disposal.

7--HIGHLAND: 17 miles west of Pontiac on M-59. 60 campsites, with complete facilities except electricity. Includes boat launch site and bathing beach.

8--PONTIAC LAKE: Seven miles west of Pontiac on M-59. 40 campsites, with store, water, toilets, bathhouse. Includes boat launch site and bathing beach.

9--ORTONVILLE: Northeast of Ortonville. 80 campsites, with box toilets, store nearby. Includes boat launch site and bathing beach.

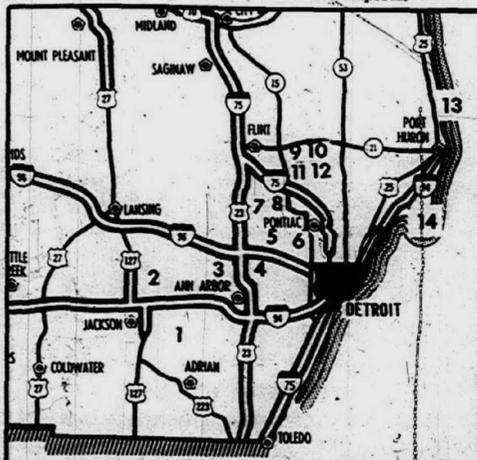

10--METAMORA HADLEY: One and a half miles west of M-24, two miles from Metamora. 240 campsites, with laundry, showers, toilets, bathing beach.

11--HOLLY: 12 miles north of Pontiac off I-75, 190 campsites, with toilets, water, store, bathhouse. Includes boat launch site and bathing beach.

12--BALD MOUNTAIN: Seven miles north of Pontiac east of M-24. 80 campsites, with limited improvements and development.

13--LAKEPORT: 10 miles north of Port Huron on US-25. 257 campsites with store, showers, laundry, bathhouse. Includes electricity, water, toilets, boat launch site, trailer sanitation disposal and bathing beach.

Toddler's Potty Seat Handy Gear

The age of civilized camping, with trailers, tent-trailers and well-developed campgrounds, might not appeal to the old mountain men, but it has been a real boon to suburban families with young children.

Campgrounds with electricity and automatic washing machines help cut routine baby maintenance to a minimum. Trailers and campers make it possible to take along most of the equipment that will keep young children comfortable and out of trouble.

Disposable diapers are frequently the solution to the diaper problem.

ON ANY CAMPING trip, a young child should be portable. A back carrier in which a child can ride, papoose style, is almost indispensable.

Many camping mothers claim that the most important equipment for toddlers out of diapers is the child's potty seat. A child who still isn't sure he likes toilets at all can't be expected to approach a primitive outhouse with confidence.

When The Rain Comes

THUNDERHEAD has a built-in shaped cloud at top. Watch out when it moves your way. Heaviest rain and wind are at peak under bill cloud near tent.

PICK CAMP SITE carefully, avoid nearby slopes, which can release mud and rock when wet, also pass up dry stream beds, river banks that can overflow during storm.

WATER — select for cooking, wash or dry. Be sure it has been all ways, including down each downer, before use.

SHOES — should come below, keep them dry, wash at night, avoid mud, keep shoes dry.

SLEEPING BAG — that is filled with vinyl "Dacron" polyester fiberfill dries out quickly if rained on, prevents long delays on trail to dry out. Be sure of quality filler material, read label on bag.

Patients Pay To Teach U-M Dentistry Students

ANN ARBOR — Would you believe four-thousand "faculty" members are at the University of Michigan School of Dentistry?

Would you believe they pay to teach? If so, you aren't too far wrong.

Reports just furnished to Dean William R. Mann show that the clinical departments of the Dental School will have screened and treated more than 4,000 patients by the end of the present school year.

Each patient pays a modest fee in order to challenge graduate and undergraduate students with his particular dental problem.

For a few days or weeks, the patient becomes the most important "teacher" on the student's schedule. His health history and immediate dental difficulties, his responses to treatment, and his desires and demands show the student the human side of dentistry; typically, a lesson that is never forgotten.

The reports to Dean Mann indicate this visiting "faculty" comes from a wide area of southern Michigan. In a sample group of two-thousand, four came from Grand Rapids; 37 from Jackson; 16 from Lansing; five from Flint; and 183 from Detroit and environs.

More than half of the sample group—1,141—came from Ann Arbor. There were 277 from Ypsilanti. Twenty or more patients came from each of Belleville, Brighton, Inkster, Milan, Plymouth and Whitmore Lake.

The War On Trees

This piece of land looks as though the Arabs and Israelis have been fighting over it. Look again. It's just another new housing development out here in Observerland. As usual, the trees have all been cut down before the onslaught of the bulldozers.

Which makes us pretty sore. It has for some time.

This particular picture was taken at the Old Orchard Sub-Division, which is on Eckles Road between Ann Arbor Road and Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth Township. It used to be one of the most famous orchards in the entire area.

The owner, William Schwartz, says that vandals cut down all the old apple trees and that he's pretty upset about it.

That may be so, but what we can't understand is why in Sam Hill they have to cut down ALL the trees before they build the houses. All the time, it seems.

editorial

Maybe it's easier for the trucks to get around without the trees. And maybe it's cheaper for other parts of the construction process if the land is scalped in advance.

But ask any realtor about the value of a fine old tree on a site. He'll tell you it's worth plenty.

And you can't measure in dollars what trees are worth to a community.

So we wish a few people would take just a moment to think -- and check their pocket-book -- before they cut.

At Schoolcraft Good Acoustics For A Compact Concert

A carefully designed acoustical "cloud" will greatly aid the sound of Schoolcraft College's first Summer Music Festival concert Wednesday evening.

The cloud will seem to float above the Court Orchestra, which will perform in an intimate though outdoor setting between two wings of the Forum building.

The four concerts of the series will take place on the Wednesdays in July. All performances begin at 8:30 p.m. The campus is at 18600 Haggerty Rd., Livonia.

Festival Director Wayne Dunlap points out that the concerts will be unlike almost anything Detroit suburbanites have ever heard or seen.

The orchestra will be small — 25 pieces, much like the compact groups of 18th century royal courts. The music will emphasize the classicist Haydn and the 20th century neo-classicist Hindemith. The seating will be in canvas chairs in the now-popular "continental" style. The area is relatively small — not like Belle Isle or the State Fairgrounds or Meadow Brook or Fair Lane.

Everything — the orchestra, the program, the setting, the budget — are geared to what Schoolcraft College can produce. Dunlap is aiming for something unique, something top quality, something that will catch the fancy of sophisticated suburban tastes.

BUT ABOUT THAT acoustical cloud:

To plan the amphitheater, Dunlap used the services of Paul S. Veneklasen, of Los Angeles, the man who designed the acoustics for the new Los Angeles Music Pavilion. He proposed floating a series of free-form panels over the orchestra area in the court between the south wings of the Forum, one of the large classroom buildings on campus.

These acoustical "clouds" will be suspended from cables secured to the sweeping roof beams that have become a familiar symbol of Schoolcraft campus architecture. Veneklasen suggested three-eights inch plywood; a half-inch, he said, wouldn't handle bass sounds properly.

The Forum, enclosing the court on three sides, forms a natural sound barrier against the intrusion of distracting noise. The "clouds" are designed and hung to project the performance music clearly toward the audience.

Working on Veneklasen's suggestion, Schoolcraft architecture instructor Joseph Fleschner, a registered professional architect, designed the ceiling and the orchestra stage.

In fact, construction of the open-air theater was accomplished entirely by college personnel, including fabrication of the cable fixtures, development of the "cloud" panels, erection of the ceiling and the stage, and the lighting.

Concert audiences will park their cars in the spacious paved parking lot north of the campus proper. Comfortable lawn chairs, arranged on the grassy court, will provide amphitheater seating.

THE CONCERT SERIES opens July 5 when Pianist William Doppmann will perform the Mozart Concerto No. 23 in A Major with the Court Orchestra under Dunlap's baton.

Admission to each performance is $1.50 for adults, $1 for children and students.

In the event of rain, a performance will be moved indoors to the Lois L. Waterman Campus Center. Refreshments will be available on the landscaped mall adjacent to the amphitheater.

Roses Require Plenty Of Sun, Almost Any Soil

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of two articles on America's favorite flower, the rose.)

By BETTY FRANKEL, Special Writer
Roses grow best in full sun, but will tolerate a little light shade. They will grow in almost any soil except light sandy soil, but do best in a rich deep well-drained loam. In addition to good drainage they need good air circulation. Do not crowd them.

Roses are heavy feeders and benefit from having well-rotted manure worked into the soil around them when they are being planted. Also, they benefit from an annual top-dressing of manure.

If this is not available, feed regularly with a commercial fertilizer. There are ones specially compounded for roses. Do not apply fertilizer after the end of July. New growth needs time to harden before cold weather arrives.

MOISTURE IS another essential, but roses should never be sprinkled. Rather, the bed should be thoroughly watered every week by allowing the water to flow onto the ground. Sprinkling encourages the development of fungus diseases. A mulch will help conserve soil moisture.

Roses are attacked by aphids, thrips, rose chafers and other insects and mites and by fungus diseases causing rust, mildew and black spot.

To prevent damage a regular program must be followed. The plants should be sprayed or dusted every 10 days. An all purpose spray or dust is most useful and an aerosol can be most convenient to use although more expensive. Check roses frequently and remove and burn diseased foliage. This will aid in preventing the spread of disease.

ALTHOUGH JUNE is the month when roses begin to bloom and the bloom is most abundant, modern roses continue to bloom all summer. # 11 Innings, No Decision

An 11-inning game should decide something.

But for the Spartans and Plymouth Optimists all it meant was a 4-4 tie and the necessity of replaying their Class D Connie Mack League baseball game at a later date.

Even the extra hour of daylight afforded by the shifting of the clocks ahead 60 minutes didn't solve matters, forcing the umpires to halt the proceedings after the 11th inning with the teams in a deadlock.

The Spartans of Livonia, a team comprised for the most part of players from Stevenson high school, couldn't stand prosperity. They grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first inning, but it eventually was wiped out.

Then in the ninth, the Spartans went ahead again, but the Optimists rebounded to re-tie matters and keep the game going.

Paul Tonnenmacher went the route for the Spartans and scattered nine hits while fanning 13. Jack Robertson from Plymouth High went nine frames and fanned 12. Dan Camp, the all-Observer star from Plymouth high, finished up and added two more strikeout victims.

Between them the Plymouth pair allowed only five hits.

Hits by Cee, Phil Camp and Chuck Sobczak helped the Spartans into a 3-0 lead in the first half of the opening inning. But singles by John Gillis and Bill McAlpine gave Plymouth two runs in the bottom half of the same frame.

Dave Prochazka tied the game in the fourth and the count remained unchanged until Ron Horstman doubled in Sobczak in the top of the ninth. Belts by Prochazka and Dan Camp then re-evened the proceedings and they stood that way until darkness intervened.

The Plymouth Elks meantime earned a 7-2 verdict over the Livonia Elks behind the four-hit pitching of Jeff Gillespie.

Walter Lee slapped a two-run homer in the second inning for the winners who locked up matters with five runs in the fifth when Rick Fillmore, Russ Carlson and Lee slugged hits after Gillespie walked and Gary Robinson was safe on an error.

Larry Draughn was the losing pitcher. Hits by Larry Meyers, Mark Dommer and Wally Wolfe accounted for the Livonia runs in the sixth inning.

The Livonia Phillippi Service Giants were held to only three hits in losing to Earl Morrall, 5-1.

Chris Wendrick worked for nine hits while striking out six. The winner was Redford's Dale Bjerke, who was touched for two hits by Dave Fisher and one by Carl Gulbransen.

Rod Ferguson and Glenn Buckingham each had two hits for the winners who cashed a four-run inning to put the game out of reach. In the uprising, Buckingham, Ferguson and Bjerke singled and Fahey drilled a long double.

South Redford came through with a 4-1 decision against Bentley as Tim Carr from Thurston high held the losers to three hits. The winners likewise managed only three safeties, but two of the blows off Dave Gorton, were triples—one each by Bob Holmes and Paul Santangelo.

The victors scored two in the third when Holmes was safe on an error, Santangelo tripled and Reg Barringer delivered a sacrifice fly. In the sixth, Barringer was hit by a pitch and Holmes walked. Both moved up on a passed ball.

Dan Harris then scored Barringer after his fly and Holmes came home on an infield roller.

Ed Ryan was hit by a pitch and scored Bentley's lone run when Kruger singled.

Observing SPORTS

By George Maskin

Talk to our next door neighbors, the Tom Joyces, and there's no game like golf.

Sit across the copy desk at the Friendly Free Press and have Ken Clover or Tom Jakobowski or Jack Saylor staring away at you... golf again becomes a major topic of discussion.

But you're a guy — remember — who used to shoot about 90 for five holes. You hacked so badly that you gave up golf for easier ventures — like umpiring baseball.

Certainly there's no more frustrating sport than golf, from an individual's standpoint. Nor is there a more challenging one.

And when it comes to booming sports in this land, or others, golf must rate near the top. Take the word of a guy who should know — Stan Jawor, the head professional at the Glen Oak Golf course up on 13-mile Road in Farmington.

Jawor is a member of Michigan's No. 1 golf family. He has four other brothers who are golf pros—Cass, his assistant at Glen Oak; Chet at Rackham in Royal Oak; Frank at Warren Valley and John, bossman at San Marino, a course frequented by many who live in Livonia, Plymouth and Farmington.

"Golf play has risen by 20-25 per cent in the last few years," Stan Jawor tells you. "The number of new players who have taken up the sport is tremendous—especially the number of women."

"It's one of the rare sports, you know, in which you can engage from 4 to 100 years of age (although at Glen Oaks players under 12 are barred because of a ruling from the insurance company).

"The innovation of golf carts has made it possible for many to either take up golf anew or return to the game they once loved. We have ever so many folks with health problems, or bad legs, who can't do much walking, who now appear regularly and play."

"This is also a wonderful game for retirees. They can come out and enjoy themselves and enjoy the fresh air and also get some exercise."

Jawor reports that calibre of play, like the number of participants, has gone up.

"You can credit the junior golf program staged each year by the Free Press, the program the News runs for older players... the more frequent television shows in which the great players give tips."

Jawor might have added, too, the jobs that home professionals like he and Tony Marcelli, the teaching member of his staff, do.

"There's not a golfer who doesn't drive to better his game," he adds.

IN THIS RESPECT, EARL JOHNSON, another member of the Glen Oaks pro-shop crew, points out that perhaps the most important aspect of one's golf game is his (her) grip.

Then, too, posture and stance are very important. And don't forget etiquette and courtesy figure into the game.

Stan Jawor cut in to point out that in golf no two shots are alike.

"You might think that you are in the same spot on a hole and faced with a shot that's as long as the last one you took there," he declares.

"But this time the wind is blowing a little differently. Now it's coming at you. The last time it roared from behind you. Or maybe the contour of the ground has changed a little... maybe it's a little wetter because it just rained."

"Therefore, golf becomes more than a sport in which you swing a club. You have to be a keen student of the game. It's important that you know what your range is with a particular club, what the ball will do in the prevailing weather, how it will roll on the ground at this particular moment... and so on, and so on."

WHAT ABOUT PLAYERS taking golf lessons? Around Glen Oak they don't urge youngsters at five or six or seven, maybe even some nine-year-olds to spend their money.

"We like to be sure that the kids we are working with can benefit from what we have to say and show them," says Jawor.

Older folks can benefit, because as Jawor says, "a little advice can do a lot to keep one cool and save him from some ulcers."

Stan never has been one to hit the touring golf trail too much. He plays in such meets as the Michigan PGA and Michigan Open and the weekly Pro-Amateurs. Cass Jawor has covered the circuit and Stan calls him "the best of the family — golfing speaking."

"DOC" FENKELL (right), Plymouth resident, as producer of Detroit Tiger telecasts, goes over a schedule with broadcaster George Kell.

'Doc' from Plymouth Bosses Tigers on TV

It looks so easy. You flip your television dial to Channel 2 in Detroit, and there they are—the Detroit Tigers playing in Baltimore or New York or Kansas City or maybe at home in Tiger Stadium.

And, in color, too. You relax as Earl Wilson strolls to the mound...you cheer a little when he gets a batter or two on strikes...More shouts when Al Kaline parks one for a homer.

A big smile comes when the final out is made and the Tigers head for the showers, a winner.

There have been no hitches to the telecast. George Kell and Larry Osterman have called the plays...The cameramen have presented all the action...There have been no foul-ups on any of the commercials, even though you couldn't care less about them.

As the final remarks are made by Kell or Osterman, they reel off the list of credits that mark television shows or movies.

You hear the name of Doc Fenkell. He's the producer of the Tiger telecasts.

"Soft job," you might say, "sitting in a TV booth and watching the Tigers play in New York. Travelling with the Tigers in their special plane, etc."

Don't say that to Doc. The gent, who resides in Plymouth with his wife Juanita, and daughter Anne, a junior high student at West, works pretty much the year around to make certain that you enjoy the Tiger telecasts.

"About all I can't do," says Doc, "is to take care of who wins the game, how long it goes, and the weather."

It's Doc's task to sell the telecasts, to get the sponsors who pay the bills. He must arrange for the stations, set up the TV schedule, make sure that there is a crew of cameramen, technicians and others on deck to handle matters.

He has to be sure that telephone lines are set up to bring the games back to Detroit.

Doc has to keep tab on all the commercials. There are six different major sponsors, and they have presented him a total of 75 different announcements.

Naturally, not all are used in one game. But if the beer sponsor has 10 different films, he wants 'em all on over a space of three or four games. He doesn't want the same ones repeated.

Doc Fenkell has been a part of the Michigan sports scene for the better part of three decades. He bowed in as an athlete at Cass Tech High and Marine City High.

After the war he landed at Hillsdale College, where he worked his way through school as a publicity man. He thought he wanted to teach and actually did for about a year in Detroit.

But he found that he had other desires. He went to work in publicity for Ford and latter the now extinct Packard car. He also spent a year with an ad agency before joining the Tigers.

With the Tigers, he has served in many capacities. First he was publicity man. Then he became head man of their very important speaker's bureau. They don't come any better in the speech-making department.

For the last three years he has handled the telecasts.

Stockwell Foots Bill For Team To Battle

It's never easy for a baseball manager to see his team lose. Jerry Stockwell finds it doubly so to accept a setback for his Livonia Pavel-McDonough team.

The reason: Stockwell has a financial interest in the Livonians who battle in the Greater Dearborn Class A League.

Because of his "love" for baseball, Stockwell has kept the team alive this season by digging into his own pocketbook. He has to pay for the umpires, the hats, the caps, the belts, the sweat shirts.

Fortunately, Pavel-McDonough dished up over $350 last season for new uniforms which can last a few more seasons.

"I like having a team," said Stockwell after Monday's 2-1 loss to Ingolf Bach. "I guess that's the reason I spend the money to keep the club going."

Stockwell has been connected with the Livonians since 1963. Before that he played for three years with Plymouth in the old Inter-county League. And before that he was on championship American Legion teams in Detroit.

"The biggest difference between Class A baseball today and a few years ago," says

Stockwell, "is the number of experienced players. We used to have several men around 26-30."

"Now we have to go with players around 18-22. The older fellows would rather play slo-pitch. It doesn't take so much of their time and their wives tend to complain less."

The setback at the hands of Ingolf Bach resulted despite the fact John Breckenridge and Pete Hembrough combined to pitch a one-hitter for the losers. The one safety came in the final inning.

But an error, walk, wild pitch and an infield roller had made it possible for Ingolf Bach to score two runs.

The Livonians themselves were held to two hits—a double by Mike Dodson and a single by Paul Portney.

Golf for Kids

Livonia youngsters interested in playing golf have a chance to perform every Monday at Idyl Wyld starting a week from Monday. They can register before teeing off.

Both boys and girls are invited to play.

A New Village Holds An Election

By Sam Hudson

The wounds inflicted on the nation by the Civil War had not yet healed when Plymouth, Mich. became a village in 1867.

Plymouth, like every other hamlet, had had its share of casualties, as witnessed by documents in the archives of the Plymouth Historical Museum. These include a Plymouth Mail of September 17, 1917 which lists those from Plymouth who were killed or wounded in the Civil War. Particularly interesting in the Museum are letters written by Lucius L. Shattuck. Shattuck, who was born in Plymouth Township in 1836, was killed at the Battle of Gettysburg.

George Burr, curator of the Museum, says E. J. Burr, his father, who was born on Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth in 1845 and who lived to be 87, told him that during the war years, when big battles were being fought, the anxious people of Plymouth used to meet in Kellogg Park to hear reports from those who had the latest news via Detroit or Ann Arbor.

In contrast to conditions in the South, postwar readjustment brought little distress to the victorious North. A railroad boom was gaining increasing momentum about the time Plymouth received its incorporation papers.

In 1867 the right to run the proposed Detroit and Howell railroad through Plymouth's corporation limits was granted although no railroad came through Plymouth until three years later.

Three years before Plymouth achieved village status, the Bessemer steel industry had been introduced to the United States in nearby Wyandotte, Mich. in a move to meet the increasing demand for rails. In 1869, two years after the big event in Plymouth, George Westinghouse obtained the first air brake patent. The Westinghouse invention had a revolutionary impact on transportation; it made high speed travel safe for the first time in history and marked the beginning of the modern railroad.

Plymouth still lacked a railroad, but the sound of the first locomotive was just around the corner.

The First Village Election

This truncated account of the national picture, circa 1867, serves as a backdrop for the event which took place at the Adams House, Thomas Whipple's hotel on Main Street, Plymouth, in the Spring of 1867. One by one, or in pairs or small groups, 129 men of the Village drove up to the hotel, facing the park, called Plymouth Green on a 1904 map, but renamed Kellogg Park in 1909.

Hitching their mounts or teams, they walked into the hotel to cast their votes in the first village election held in Plymouth. An act of the Michigan Legislature passed earlier in the month had made the election possible. The "Act to incorporate the village of Plymouth" had been approved on March 5, 1867.

I say 129 men cast their votes because women had not yet gained the right. It was not until an amendment to the Constitution was ratified in 1920 by two-thirds of the states that nationwide suffrage came into being.

A resident of Plymouth today who had put a year and four months behind him at the time of the 1867 election is 102-year-old Clarence Stevens, who lives on North Harvey Street. Mr. Stevens was born in a house at the corner of Ford Road and Canton Center on Nov. 23, 1865, only seven months after President Lincoln was killed by Booth.

Eighteen years later, in 1883, young Mr. Stevens was among those who graduated from Plymouth High School. The family was then living on a farm on Ridge Road, and Mr. Stevens recalls riding horseback to school. His grandfather lived at the corner of Ann Arbor Trail and Harvey Street. Young Clarence stabled his horse in Grandpa's barn while he attended classes. Mr. Stevens was active in music in the Plymouth area for 50 years. He sang in the choir at the Presbyterian church until he was over ninety. It wasn't until 1957, when he reached 92 years, that he gave up his occupation of piano tuning, because he could no longer obtain a license to drive his automobile.

Bethuel Noyes Plymouth's First President

In the village election, the judges chosen to officiate were Gabriel Youngs and John Rogers. O. A. Frazier was the clerk. When the votes were counted, it was determined that Bethuel Noyes was elected Plymouth's first president. Michael Conner was recorder; A. B. Coleman, treasurer; Lewis H. Bennett and William A. Bassett, assessors; Samuel Hardenburgh, Isaac N. Hedden, Ira M. Hough, Abram Fralick, and Francis W. Fairman, trustees.

Prior to 1867, some of those who now became village officials had been active in township affairs. Michael Conner had been clerk of the Township in 1862. Mr. Conner, who established his hardware store in Plymouth in 1857, was prominent in civic affairs for many years. He served as village president in 1868, 1869, 1884, 1889 and 1890.

Samuel Hardenburgh, another one of those elected, owned the grist mill adjacent to what is now Wilcox Pond. He lived in what was later the Wilcox home on Holbrook Street (now the home of former Mayor and Mrs. Harold Guenther).

Hardenburgh was not the original owner of the mill, Katharine Wilcox Thompson, now the town historian of Penfield, N.Y., whose father, George H. Wilcox, with his brother John, operated the mill from the time their father died in 1902 until 1921, has provided me with some notes written by her mother which indicate that it was built by a man named Rogers in 1850.

Mrs. Thompson writes me that her Uncle John quoted Chris Petersen, who was 10 years old in 1850, as saying that the mill was erected at a building bee attended by 32 men. Some men put up the framework while others dug the tail race. The mill was 35 feet wide, 75 feet long, and four stories high. Beams were hand hewn of oak and white wood. Those of the first floor were 12 inches square. There were three rows of these timbers.

The mill was sold by Rogers to Henry Holbrook, after whom the street not far from the mill is named. Holbrook sold it to Hardenburgh, who lost it on a mortgage. The next owner, John Weinmaster, also lost it on a mortgage. Its next owner, a Mr. Peters, mortgaged it to C. H. Bennett, who later acquired it at a sheriff's sale.

Mr. Bennett sold it to David Wilcox, grandfather of Katharine and Jack Wilcox. (Jack, who lives in the family residence, the imposing white structure built about 1903 on Penniman Avenue by William Markham of King air-rifle fame, has also been helpful in providing me with material about the history of Plymouth.)

(This article about Plymouth in 1867, the year the village was incorporated, is part of a complete history of Plymouth for which Mr. Hudson is now collecting material and photographs. Anyone in the community who has anything of historical interest is asked to get in touch with him.)

John and George Wilcox sold the mill in 1920 to Henry Ford, who was a frequent visitor to Plymouth. Ford tore the mill down in 1921 and built one of his "village plants" on the site. This Ford plant at Plymouth opened in 1923 and closed in 1947. Wayne County now uses the building to house its road equipment.

Karl Starkweather, who worked at the plant toward the end of his 37 years with the Ford Motor Company, recalls that the operation employed about 30 men. It made taps which were used in large quantities at the Ford Rouge plant.

The population in Plymouth in 1867 was less than 1,000. Three years later, at the time of the 1870 census, it was only 969. The 1,000 mark was not reached until about 1880 when it was recorded at 1,025. The State of Michigan had only 749,113 people in 1860 and the population of the entire United States at the time was less than 32 million.

The population of Plymouth Township in 1870 was 3,016, more than three times that of the village. It must be remembered, however, that the township then included Northville and Northville Township, which did not pull away until 1898.

Prior to that in 1834, Canton, which had originally been part of Plymouth Township, was declared a separate entity.

At the time of the village election in 1867, the officials who were guiding the Township were Supervisor Hiram B. Thayer; Clerk Ed. S. Horton; Treasurer Otis Eddy; Justice of the Peace John Rodgers; School Inspector W. M. Osband; Highway Commissioners D. Clarkson and I. N. Hedden; Poor Directors E. Simmons and T. McClumphia; Constables J. B. Berdan, J. F. Starkweather, W. H. Grigham and E. K. Simons.

Recovering From Fire of 1856.

A traveling man, on a sales trip to Plymouth in 1867, would probably have put up at the Adams House in what was then called the Phoenix Block on Main Street — the block facing the park which now houses the D & C Store, Kresge's, Agnew's Jewelry, Davis and Lent, Wiltse's Community Pharmacy, Wiloughby's Shoes, Dodge Drug Store, and the National Bank of Detroit. The Adams House was about where Kresge's is today.

The block is said to have borne the name Phoenix because it had risen, like the fabulous Arabian bird, out of its own ashes after the devastating fire of 1856. The fire, which destroyed almost the entire block 11 years before the incorporation of the village, is described in Silas Farmer's history (p. 1347).

The fire of May 5, 1856, . . . originated about half-past twelve at night in the ball-room of Root's Hotel, on the corner of Ann Arbor and Main Streets. The fire is believed to have been caused by the bursting of a lamp. It spread rapidly and made a clean sweep of the entire block on the west side of Main Street, from Ann Arbor to Sutton Streets.

"Among the buildings destroyed were Collins Kellogg's drug store, J. W. Root's hotel, John Kynock's shoe store, the postoffice, most of its papers and records being saved, Fralick and Crosby's dry goods store, J. Scattergood's dry goods store, Josia Butler's jewelry store, H. Fralick's dry goods store, G. Lauffer's shoe store, and H. Week's tailor shop.

"The two brick buildings at the north end of the block were saved by tearing down some of the wooden buildings on the south, and the fire was controlled after a loss of $60,000."

Karl Starkweather, a descendant of George Starkweather, the first white child born in what is now the City of Plymouth, and a writer of historical articles about Plymouth for many years, searched the files of old Detroit newspapers for a story on the fire until he found a brief account in the Detroit Daily Advertiser for May 8, 1856. Mr. Starkweather, who has been more than generous in giving me access to the information he has about Plymouth, has written me:

" . . . Early the next morning (May 5) at the Root Hotel on the corner where the D & C store now stands, someone fumbling with a whale oil lamp (it was more than three years before the country's first oil well was to be drilled) had an accident. Some inflammable material caught fire. The flames could not be whipped out. There were no fire extinguishers for these had not yet been invented and Plymouth's first water mains were yet thirty-seven years away.

"The tavern, Kellogg's drug store, the post office, Kynock's shoe shop, Fralick and Crosby's general store, Butler's jewelry store, Joshua Scattergood's store and the Myer store all went up in flames. Next to Myer's store a wooden building was pulled down before the flames reached it. This saved Tom May's store and his stock of goods just beyond. But the greatest portion of Plymouth's early business area was in shambles.

"Joshua Scattergood suffered the greatest loss, about $3,500. Most of it was covered by insurance. But Root, Kellogg, Butler and Myer, all heavy losers, carried no insurance at all. Crosby and Fralick were covered. George Starkweather, who was then 30, lost his law office over Scattergood's store, including many private papers and personal effects."

To return to 1867 and to our traveling man: If our visitor had strolled out of the Adams House in 1867 and looked directly across Main Street, he would have seen what was then, and what has remained, one of the chief assets of the community — Kellogg Park. In 1867 the park was more heavily wooded than it is now, but prior to 1858, it was devoid of trees.

Prior to 1858 it was fenced in and used by traveling circuses and for balloon ascensions. The trees, planted two years after the 1856 fire, must have thrived because Silas Farmer, in 1890, in a burst of enthusiasm and no doubt exaggeration, was moved to write:

"One of the beauties of Plymouth is the park of two acres in triangular shape, bounded by Sutton, Ann Arbor and Main Streets. It contains a dense forest of maple and spruce trees which were set out in 1858." Sutton was renamed Penniman in 1910.

If our visitor were fraternally inclined, he might have dropped in to say hello to the men at Tonquish Lodge No. 32 of the Independent Order of Oddfellows. This was the first fraternal society in Plymouth. It began here in 1847. In 1865, the Oddfellows had taken a 99-year lease on the third story of Henry Fralick's building on Main Street.

The Masonic Lodge, also in existence at that time, had leased one-half of this space from the Oddfellows. The Plymouth Rock Lodge No. 47, F. and A.M., was organized in Plymouth in 1851. If you are wondering about that 99-year lease, it probably burned up with the rest of the Oddfellows and Masonic papers when the same Phoenix Block once more emulated that legendary bird and burned again in 1893. But that's another story.

If our visitor had strolled about the streets of Plymouth in the evening, he might have walked into some mud puddles because the streets were not yet paved, and he certainly would have been in the dark. The first street lights — 15 oil lamps — were not installed in Plymouth until 1880.

If he had asked for the nearest bank, he would have been told that there was none. Roy A. Fisher, who was banking in Plymouth from 1917 to 1935, with the Plymouth United Savings Bank, tells me that there was no bank in Plymouth between the time the Wayne County Bank of Plymouth closed in 1838 until the First National Bank of Plymouth was organized in 1871.

If the stranger had asked where the railroad was, he would have received a similar answer — there was none. Karl Starkweather has determined that the first railroad train did not run through Plymouth until 1870.

If the visitor had need for anything in the hardware line, he might have stopped in at Conner Hardware which Michael Conner had established in Plymouth in 1857. In a wood frame building at that time, it stood on the site later occupied by the Conner brick building. Norma Cassady's dress shop later occupied the building.

If the dust from unpaved Main Street had parched our traveling man's throat, he might have stopped in at one or more of the saloons in Plymouth at that time. The business directory on the 1860 map in the Plymouth Historical Museum shows two saloon keepers, J. Barker and L. Lapham. If they were still in business in 1867, it is safe to say that they had successors.

That Plymouth was not a dry town at the time the village was incorporated is indicated in the formation of a local chapter of the Women's Christian Temperance Union a few years later at the home of Mrs. Mary Davis. The date was May 7, 1874.

If our traveling man had walked south on Main Street after he left the Adams House, he would have crossed Ann Arbor Street (now Ann Arbor Trail). Passing the Fuller residence, which stood on the present site of the Mayflower Hotel, he would have found that Main suddenly became South Street (currently South Main Street).

The first street on his left, now called Maple, was then called Bowery Street, a name whose connotation probably prompted Mrs. H. H. Passage and others to petition for a name change in 1912. Beyond Bowery was Wing. Our 1860 map takes us no further south.

If our traveler had turned north on Main after leaving the hotel, he would have crossed Sutton (renamed Penniman in 1910) and then Church Street. Church Street at that time did not bend as it passed the Presbyterian Church, but continued on a straight line, close to the High School, before it connected with Main.

Main, at that point, became the Plymouth Plank Road. This road, connecting Plymouth and Detroit, was chartered on May 5, 1850 by a man named Otis who held controlling interest. A toll was collected at various stations along the road. Toll Gate No. 4 was located at the corner of what is now Main and Nestled in the corridor between Ann Arbor and Metropolitan Detroit, the Plymouth area long has been considered a charming place in which to live and raise a family.

Down through the years, from the time the first settler staked out his home in 1825 until the present, there has been something about Plymouth that made it just a bit different from other communities — and that difference is as pronounced today as ever.

It is close enough to major business and educational centers to be ideal and distant enough to provide quiet, peaceful surroundings far from the roar of the traffic and the crowds.

The charm is noticeable as soon as you arrive in the central business district.

There you will see a replica of the "village green" that always was the center of things in the colonies established by the Pilgrims after their landing at Plymouth Rock.

The sight of Kellogg Park — in the heart of the business district — tells the visitor that this area cherishes its heritage and is proud to boast of its beginnings. As a result there is a certain charm that exudes even before a stop is made.

Kellogg Park is one of the few such reminders of Pilgrim Days in Michigan and it helps stand Plymouth apart.

ON HIS FIRST VISIT to the area, the British Consul, R. V. Juchaw, remarked, "Ah, a village green. What a nice carry over from colonial times. It is charming of you people to have such a reminder."

Plymouth's charm, however, goes well beyond the picturesque setting of Kellogg Park.

It is a city of trees and now is embarked on a program of having a tree on every residential lot.

Working on the theory that tree-lined streets not only bring shade but lend an aura of dignity to any community, the Plymouth City Commission appropriates money each year to remove dead and unwanted trees and replace them with new ones.

"We want to keep Plymouth a nice, charming place," Mayor James Jabara stated during a tree planting ceremony several months ago, "and we can do this by having a continuing tree planting program. Few other cities have such a program."

Because of the efforts to retain the charm, Plymouth now is the mecca for young people interested in raising their families in such an atmosphere. As a result, such a thing as a "rented house" is almost unknown in the entire area.

To meet the demand, apartment complexes are rising in numbers never dreamed of not too many years ago — and there seldom is a vacancy for more than a few days.

THERE ARE MANY OTHER assets that lend themselves to the charm of the community.

First, Plymouth boasts an outstanding school system. Even this will improve with the erection of a second high school within the next year. The educational facilities are second to none.

This is a lure to industry. And because of its location and the dignity of the area, the highest type industry now is moving to Plymouth. Each year finds one or more large plants of national stature gracing the landscape — and adding to the over-all importance of the entire area.

It is also a city of churches. Almost every denomination has a house of worship. Some are traditional, old edifices. Others are new and the most modern. Together, they lend a certain charm in the growing community that seems lacking in many other places.

The people themselves stand apart in many instances for they are lovers of the arts to an unusual extent. The city prides itself in its Symphony Orchestra that provides a series of concerts each year. Long recognized as one of the leading musical groups in Michigan, the concerts are popular Sunday afternoon affairs.

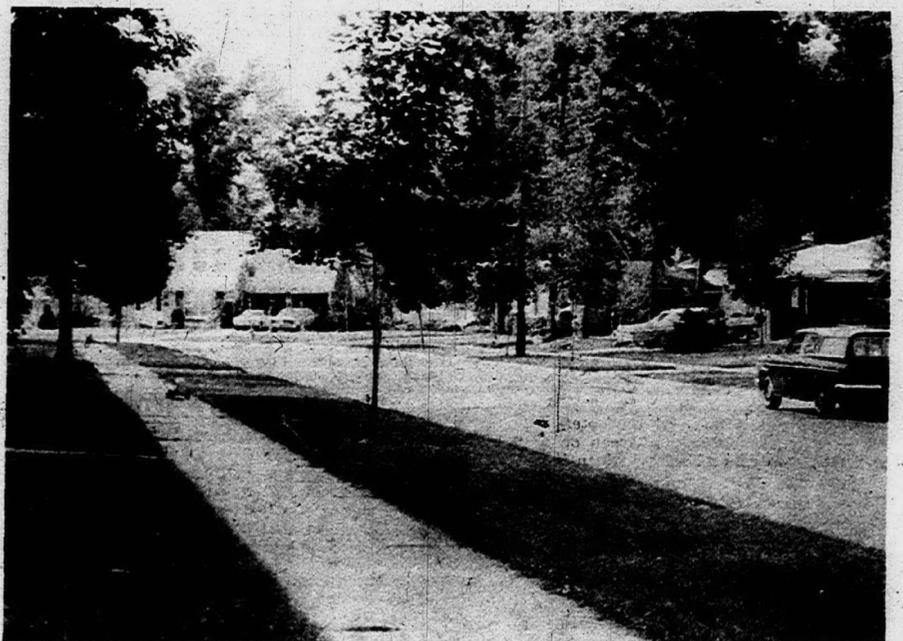

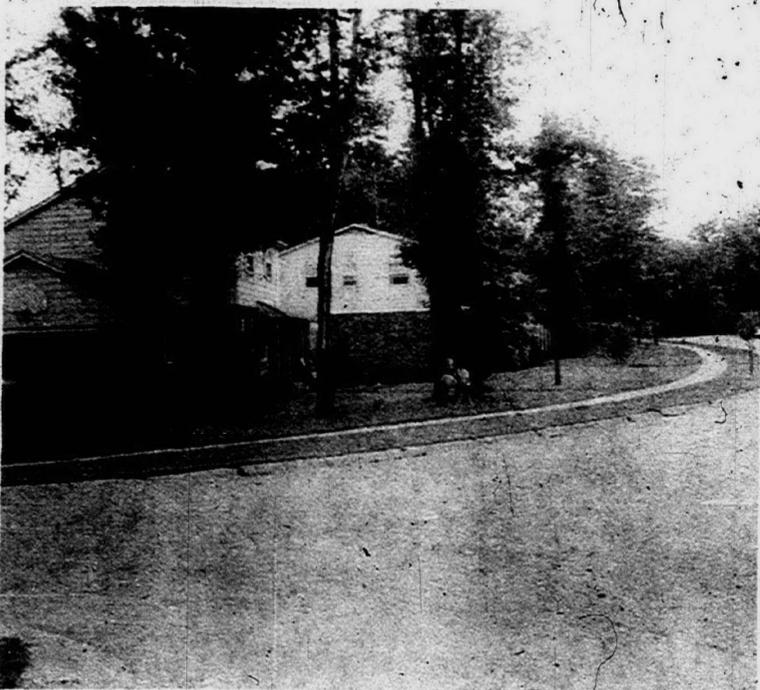

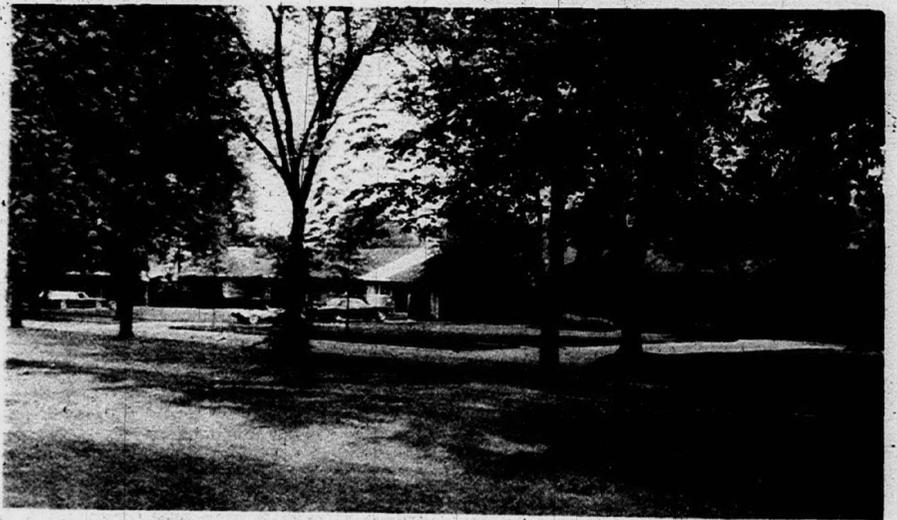

So, adding these ingredients — location, education, industry, music, the arts, and tree-lined streets — results in a charming city.

Nestled, as it is, in an area that is bound to grow in the population and industrial explosion of the next few years, Plymouth has not lost its original perspective.

With such added jewels as Hines Parkway, Cass Benton Park, and the rolling hills of Northville to the immediate north, there is little chance that it will ever change. It will always have a rich heritage.

Plymouth always will be a charming area. The residents will take care of that.

They Like It For Its Charm

Planning For A Bright Future

Leaning back in his chair, Harold Fischer, director of the Area Planning Commission, gazed at the large map on the wall of his office and repeated the question, "What do I think the City of Plymouth will be like 100 years from now?"

He closed his eyes, stroked his chin a minute or two and then answered:

"The Plymouth of the future will bear little resemblance to the city we know today. Of course, you know, I am a dreamer and I like to dream big things."

After pausing for a second he continued, "Here is what I see for the future — and I only wish I could be around for another centennial. It is going to be real exciting."

"FIRST, I HONESTLY BELIEVE the 54 square mile area that now encompasses our school district will be united into one big, major city, possibly the second largest in the state. The present petty bickering over unification will long since have gone and we will have a flourishing city of upwards of 272,000 people."

Getting to his feet, he walked over to the map and pointed to what is now Sheldon Road.

"I think this will be the focal point of all development. As you can see by the map, all the territory east of Sheldon Road is in the river basin and ideally suited for industry. On the other hand the land west of Sheldon is beautiful rolling country and makes for high class residential areas."

"That's the basic pattern of the city I see in the future" he explained, "but it will have all of the modern conveniences and be an ideal city. It will boast such things as a rapid transit system that will take you to all parts of the state. It will have a major park system and a minor league baseball team along with a full cultural program and our own theater."

"Aside from these things," he went on, "we will have an airport. It may not be a large one, such as the Metropolitan Airport, but it will serve the private planes of industry and will provide helicopter service for passengers on hops to other cities and to and from the major airports. There will be no more long drives to and from cities . . . we will be traveling by air or monorail."

"Monorail?" he was asked.
"Yes," the planning director said, "the air over the railroad tracks and expressways will be occupied by rapid transit to all sections of the country. We will have the 600-mile an hour planes and trains they have been hinting about and we will be able to leave our homes and be in most any section of the country in comparatively few minutes."

THE VERY THOUGHT of this kind of transportation excited him, and he went on to point out that, with the advent of the expressways running through the area and connecting with the major cross country freeways, there would be no barriers in the way and both planes and trains could make all sorts of time.

He pointed out again that the Plymouth of the future will have a vast industrial area because of its location and access to major markets. And he envisions a residential area that will be a thing of beauty in the rolling country hillside.

"In this section west of what is now Sheldon Road," he emphasized, "there will be a park system. Not just a park, but a series of them that will provide rest and recreation during the many leisure hours the residents then will have in the modern scheme of things."

"The area has all the assets necessary to be a thing of beauty and can be a modernized version of Hines Parkway throughout the entire area. And it will help to round out a perfect city — one with the necessary industry for a good tax base, a business area in keeping with a city of its size, ideal residential portions and the homes and apartments in a real picturesque setting."

Waiting a moment to get his breath, the planning director who is a great disciple of parks and park areas, believes that at least 25 per cent of the entire land area should be set aside for parks.

"You need land for parks," he said, "whereas when land is scarce you can build up instead of out, and we can have high rise apartments and tall homes. But you can't have high rise parks . . . you need land. That's why I always have advocated the zoning of at least 25 per cent of the land for parks."

"You have mentioned industry, business, travel, recreation and housing, what about education?" he was asked.

His eyes lighted up and he took a deep breath.

"PLYMOUTH ALWAYS HAS HAD good schools. It is the school system that has been one of the greatest lures of industry and business. And this standard will be maintained in the city of the future, as I see it."

"And we will have a lot more than just high schools. We will have a branch of the Schoolcraft College campus in Plymouth. This can serve the southern half of the city I visualize, along with Westland, Wayne and Canton Township. It could be a big branch, too."

Presently, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Schoolcraft College, Fischer's eyes sparkled when he spoke of education.

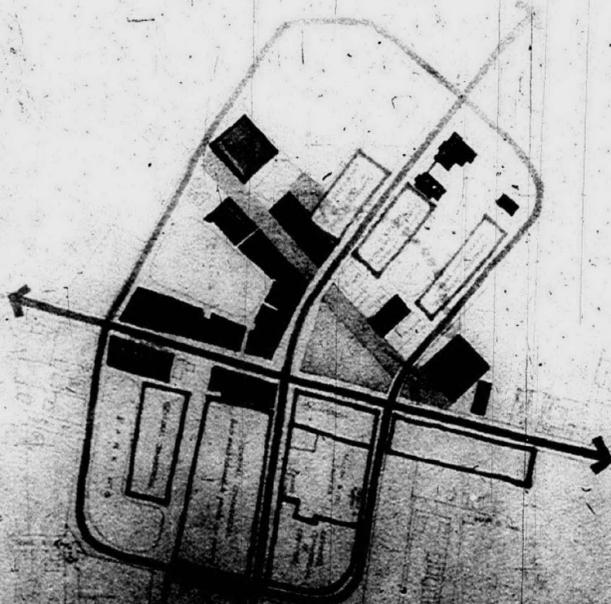

"With the strides we are making in comfortable living" he said, "I foresee a plan where the educational system will be housed in windowless buildings which have temperature and humidity controls and will operate on a 12-hour day basis throughout the year."

"Over and above that," he emphasized by pounding one hand into the other, "every person will go to school without cost through the college level."

Waiting to see if his thoughts and words had been shocking he concluded:

"That's the type of city I see Plymouth becoming in the next 100 years. A city of 54 square miles with a population of more than 270,000 that boasts a major park system, an outstanding residential area, one of the major centers in a rapid transit plan, with outstanding schools and a minor league baseball team."

"It should be an exciting place in which to live."

The light coming through stained glass church windows in Plymouth shines on the somber grey walls in the Presbyterian Church, the bright sanctuary of the Episcopal Church, and massive columns in the Catholic Church.

Crucifixes reflect the light in more than 20 Plymouth churches.

In a spirit of cooperation, most of their ministers belong to the ministerial association, which sponsored the first inter-faith service held in Plymouth last April in Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church.

The eight ministers who walked down the wide aisle of the Catholic Church that sunlit April afternoon were holding a service in the most modern of structures—a far cry from the first recorded church service conducted in Plymouth by Elder Hickox at the home of William Tibbits in 1826.

ELDER HICKOX of the Methodist Church, preached by dim candlelight in homes throughout his 40 mile circuit. Plymouth was a principal preaching stop in his route.

After Rev. Hickox came Marcus Swift. During the 1840s Rev. Swift and several other Methodist ministers from the area broke away from the parent church and formed the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

They did this in order to take a strong stand against slavery as many of the members of the new church were active in the Underground Railroad. A few years later the Methodist Church came out against slavery, and some of the ministers in the new church returned to the old.

However, there were enough who preferred the newer, more conservative brand of Methodism and the new church spread to other areas from Plymouth. Since most of those who founded the church at Thayer's Corners, just west of Plymouth, returned to the Methodist Church, the Wesleyan Methodists became almost unknown here.

More than 100 years later, the Rev. Keith Somers arrived here to start the Wesleyan Methodist Church, which just held formal dedication ceremonies last month in a bright, new church on Five Mile and Bradner.

The Presbyterian Church was started in Plymouth by 17 people on Feb. 23, 1833, in the home of Ira Bronson. Bronson's house was on the southeast corner of Penniman and Sheldon Road.

On Jan. 14, 1835 the church was formally organized. Land for the church and cemetery on Main and Church Streets was donated by William Starkweather. Later, when the cemetery was disbanded, most of the bodies were moved to Riverside Cemetery.

THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN Church, built in 1835, cost $400 and was a small, dark, wooden building. Later the congregation sold it to the Baptists for $110, and in 1847 began to worship in a new brick church which cost $700.

John Kellogg and W. J. Penniman were some of the subscribers to this new church, which was used by the Presbyterians until it was destroyed in a glaring fire in 1936. The present day church was built on the same site.

The Baptist Church was started in 1830 at Shutt's Corners, a small community about four miles west of Plymouth on Ann Arbor Road. About 1840 a small chapel was built.

In 1846 The Plymouth Village Baptist Society was organized, and two years later joined forces with the Shutt's Corners congregation.

They then purchased the wooden Presbyterian Church, which soon became too small for them and was sold to the Lutherans.

In 1856 the old church at Shutt's Corners was dismantled and the material was used to build a new Baptist Church on Mill St.

This building is now the oldest church in Plymouth. It has been enlarged, and a brick veneer put on the outside, but the sunlight that flickers down through the trees still shines on the same church that the Baptist congregation built in 1856.

ST. PETER'S EVANGELICAL Lutheran Church was organized in 1856, and met in members' homes until the purchase of the church first used by the Presbyterians and then the Baptists.

In 1898 the First Church of Christ Scientist was organized with 14 charter members.

After the turn of the century, with the growth of the community, more and more denominations came to Plymouth. The Episcopal Mission was started in 1912 in the small building on Union Street now owned by the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church dates from 1915 when the Rev. Dowdle of Milford came to the Grange Hall once a month to say mass.

Since then both the number and size of the church has grown. The new Catholic Church, dedicated about one year ago, seats 1200.

THE FIRST METHODIST Church of Plymouth is making plans for a new church which will be completed before 1970 and which will represent much of the latest thinking on church building.

Outdoors there will be plenty of room for parking, since the church has bought 15 acres on North Territorial. The land can also be used for an outdoor day camp, scouting and picnics.

One of the prime considerations of the new church will be its use other than for services.

"I'd say it was an unchristian luxury to spend a million dollars on a building just to be used on Sundays," said the Rev. Herbert Brubaker, pastor of the church.

The church itself will seat 500 — double the size of the present sanctuary. All of the churches built in Plymouth in the last few years have been built with an eye to the size of future congregations.

The new church will also include bright, cheery rooms to be used for Sunday school and church committee meetings.

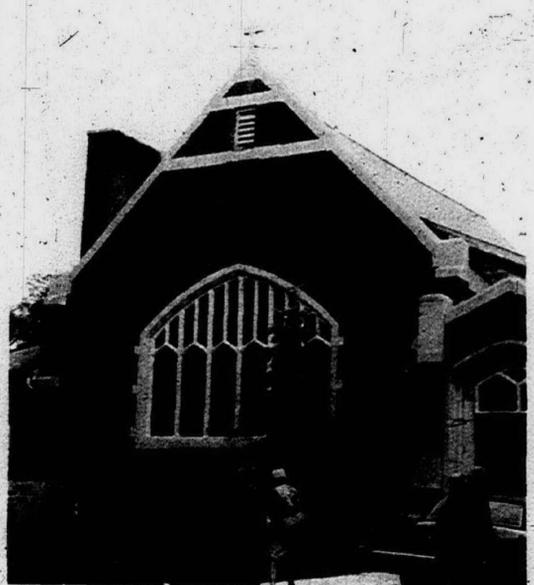

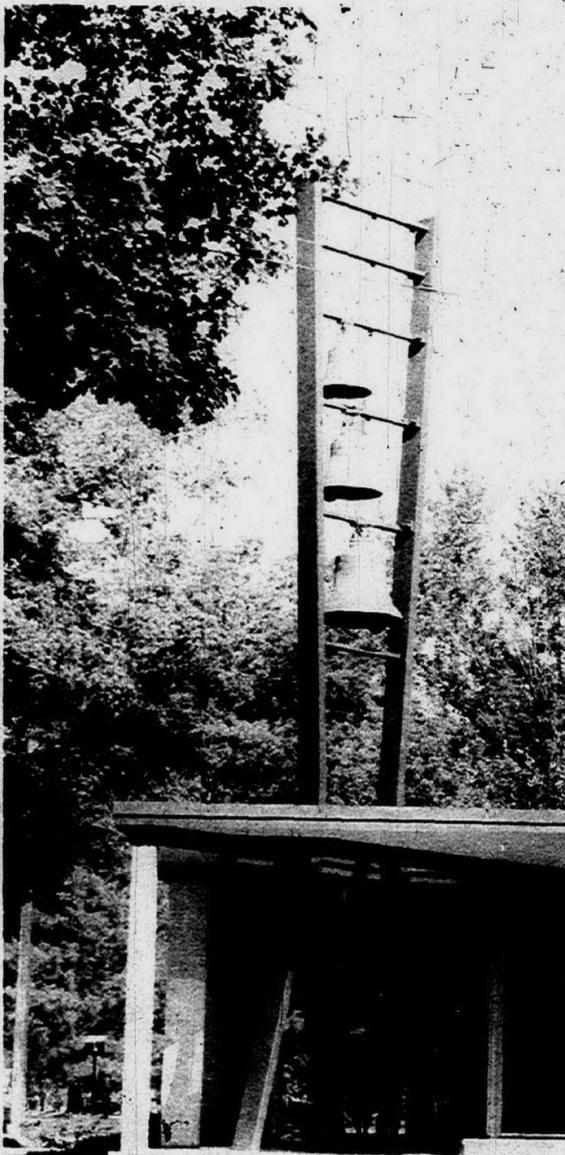

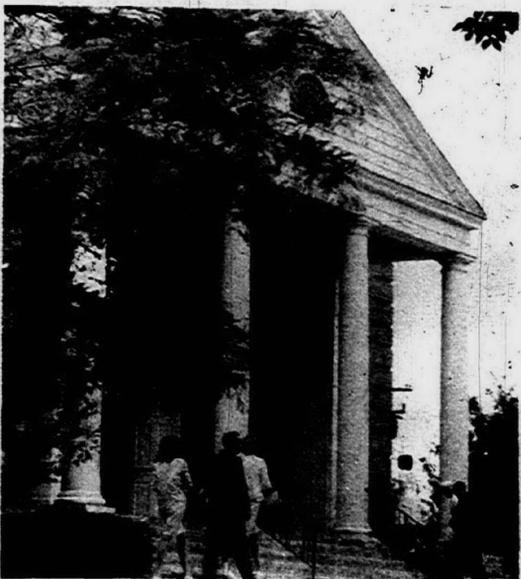

"We hope the building can be used for things like a pre-school nursery, or a meeting place for the Senior Citizens, or other civic groups," explained Mr. Brubaker.

MOST OF THE CHURCH buildings in Plymouth include wide-windowed classrooms for Sunday school as well as the quiet sanctuaries for prayer. Two churches, Our Lady of Good Counsel and St. Peter's Lutheran have parochial schools supported by their congregations.

A Plymouthite can worship in any one of the following churches: Calvary Baptist, First Baptist, Allen Heights Baptist, Main Street Baptist, Canton Baptist, First Free Will Baptist, General Baptist, Church of Christ;

Christian Science, Church of God, Assembly of God, Episcopal, Epiphany Lutheran, Lutheran Church of the Risen Christ; St. Peter's Lutheran, First Methodist, Nazarene, Reorganized LDS, Salvation Army, Seventh Day Adventist, Presbyterian, Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic, and Wesleyan Methodist.

Plymouth: A Suburb With A Rich Heritage

Hardenburgh's Grist Mill in 1860 — Located on what is now called Wilcox Road, this was later owned by David Wilcox and his sons, George and John. Later a Ford "village plant" was built on this site. The plant is now used by the Wayne County Highway Department.

Starkweather, the first settler's child born in what is now the City of Plymouth, is the man in the center with bow tie and top hat. Karl Starkweather dates this before 1870, the year the first railroad came to Plymouth.

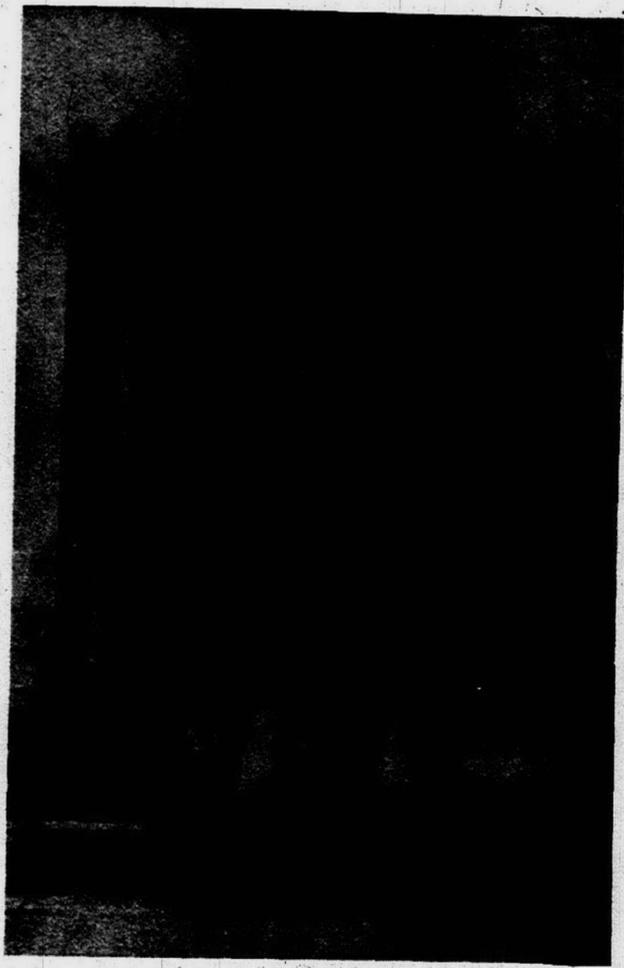

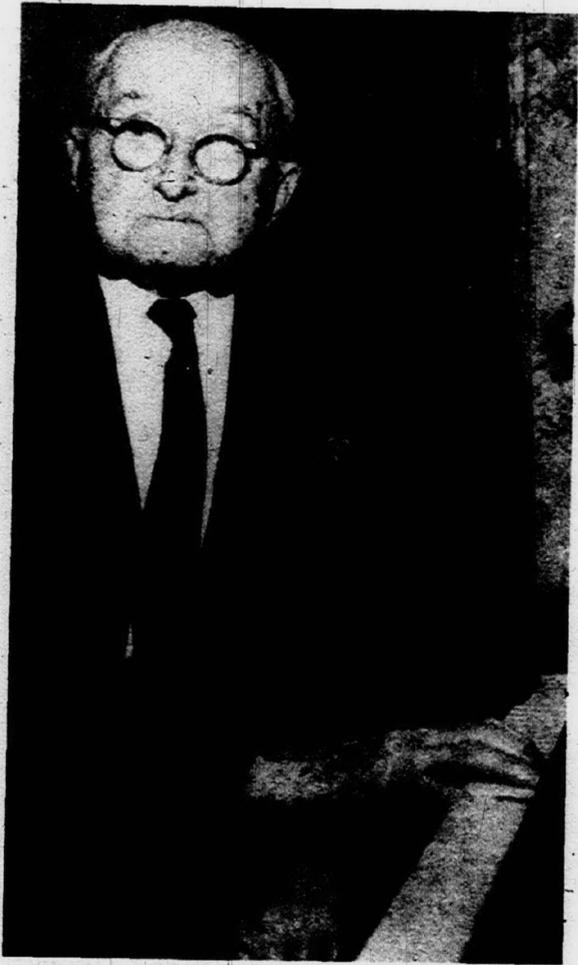

RIGHT, BELOW: The street scene was taken in 1857, a decade before Plymouth incorporated as a village.

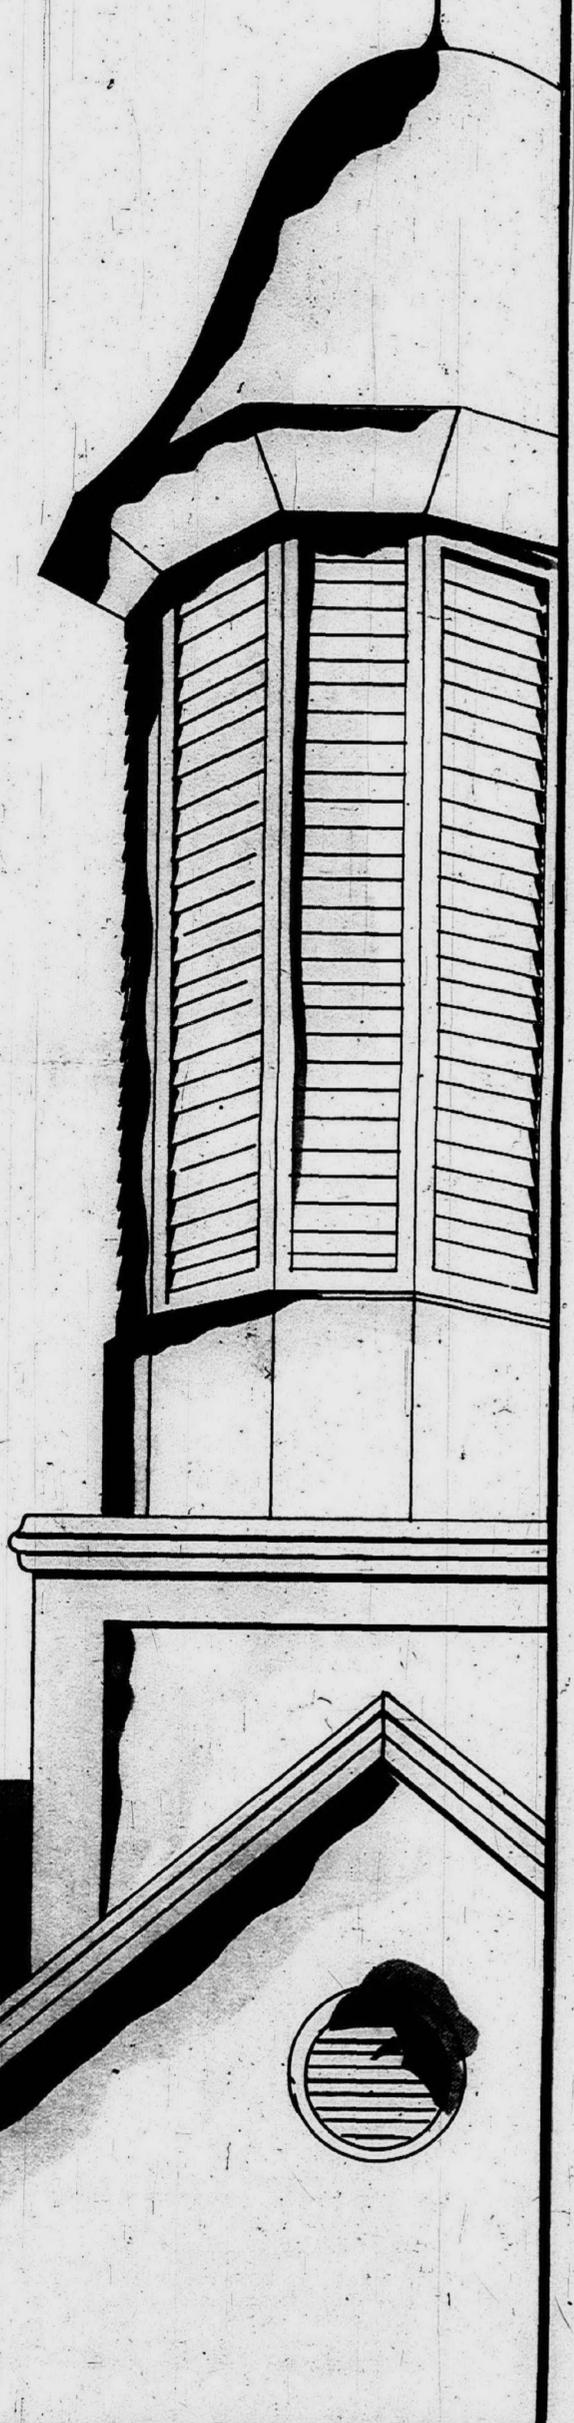

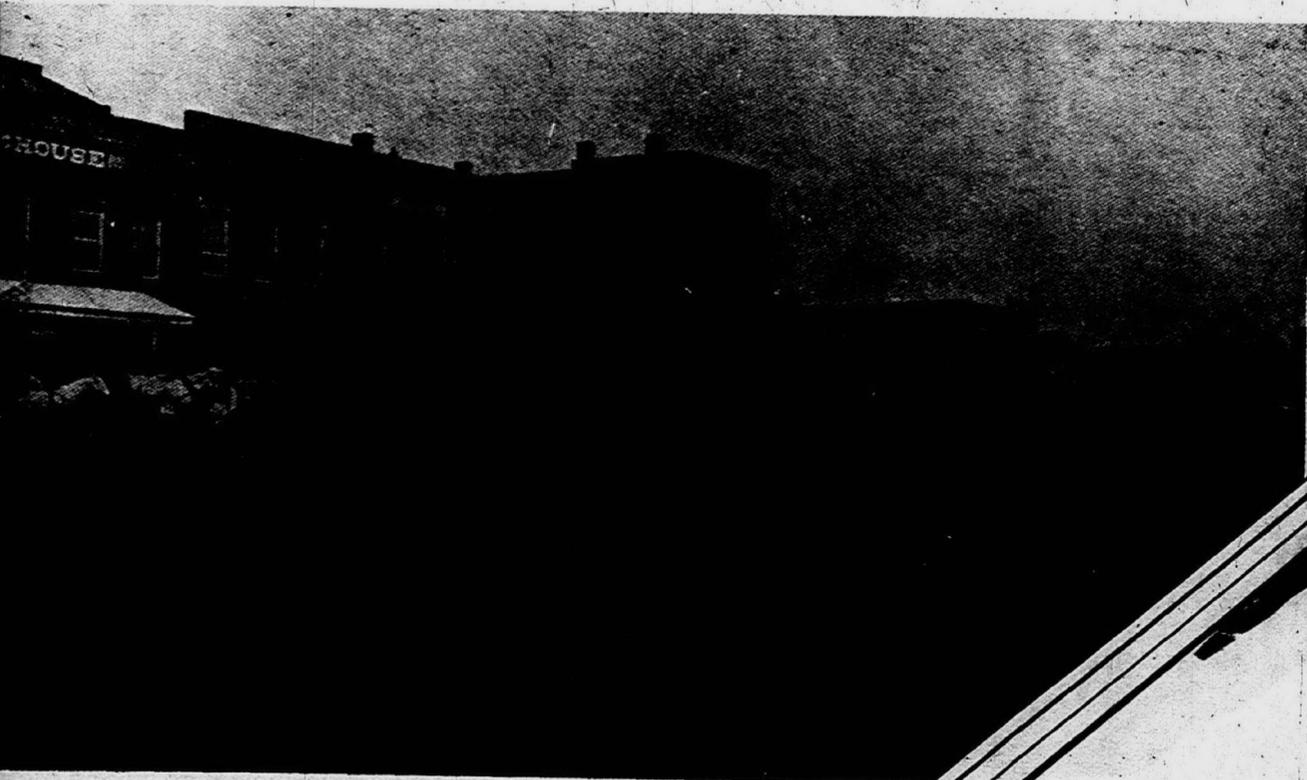

HE STARTED IT ALL — Back in 1835, John Kellogg, pictured here with Mrs. Kellogg, was attracted to the Plymouth area. He not only settled here, but legend has it that he came with a load of gold and purchased much of the land. Once the land was acquired, he laid out a plan for the city, and that plan is still used today. What's more, because of his large holdings, he donated the land for the park that bears his name in the center of the downtown business section, and he also contributed the sites for the churches and schools in the area. A veteran of the War of 1812, he came here from Westfield, Mass., and brought many of the early colonial ideas with him. He built his home on Ann Arbor Trail, on the site of the present Christian Science Church. This home later was remodeled and occupied by his last known relative, Walter Sumner, recently retired member of the Township Board of Review, who arranged for its sale to the church.

Government: A City And A Township . . .

If there's such a disease as municipal claustrophobia, Plymouth has it.

If there's a cure, then the laboratory where the medicine is stored is located in the Township.

Little did the original settlers realize what they were starting when Plymouth Township legally was formed in 1827, with William Bartow as the first supervisor.

Forty years later, in 1867, the Village of Plymouth was incorporated, although already it had existed for some 30 years as a major stage coach stop on the route to Ann Arbor.

IT WAS AROUND THE CORNER of Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail that the general store, the blacksmith and other commercial necessities for the rural folk of the area were located, and where the village left off and open country began didn't matter.

In fact, it really wasn't of much importance until about the time of World War II when an economic industrial boom, and accompanying population explosion, hit the Township, and the City found it had no place to go.

As long as Plymouth retained village status, which was until 1932, its residents had equal voting rights on township matters with those who lived outside the village. Even after becoming a home rule city, the fact of two separate governments was not a burning issue.

There wasn't that much at stake. Today there is.

While the original city did pick up odd bits of extra elbow room through the years, its size has been virtually static since 1956 and currently stands at 2.27 square miles. Its form of government has changed only once in a century, that switch coming with the change from village to city when the strong city manager system was adopted.

City and Township electors had two proposals of consequence before them on the ballot of Nov. 1, 1955.

City residents were being asked to annex the 85 acres where the Western Electric Co. plant now stands, and they approved the annexation, 913 to 246. The owners of the property were agreeable, and the land was formally annexed in January 1956.

However, at that same election, a second proposal was voted upon by residents of both the city and township, and the result gathers significance with each passing year.

BEFORE THE VOTERS WAS the question of whether the City of Plymouth should also annex all of Plymouth Township, but to become a reality the matter needed majorities in both quarters.

The City voted 779 to 373 in favor of annexation. However, Township electors smothered the issue by a 10 to 1 margin.

By 1958 residents of the Township had seized the initiative themselves by proposing that an 8.3-square mile sector, completely surrounding the city, be incorporated as the City of Plymouth Heights.

On Feb. 16, 1959, this proposal for incorporation was approved at the polls, and members of a charter commission were elected.

There has been just one hitch to putting incorporation of Plymouth Heights into effect: Every charter submitted by the first and subsequent charter commissions has been defeated, and until a charter is passed the status quo continues.

The process, nonetheless, has given the City of Plymouth fixed, permanent boundaries that stifle expansion and encourage only one thing — municipal claustrophobia.

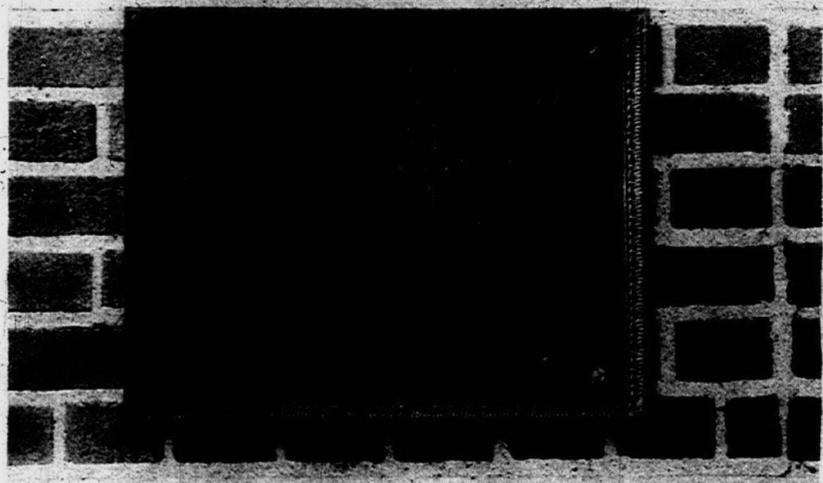

The fourth such commission of nine members was just elected in April, and within two years it, too, must submit its proposal of a charter to a vote. If it meets the same fate as others, the same maneuvering may continue ad infinitum.

MEANWHILE, ON ANOTHER FRONT, there has been 1967 progress toward unification of both the City and Township as one merged municipality. A study to determine the values of such a step will be started in the fall by the Citizens Research Council of Michigan.

The one entity which encompasses both city and township, as well as a considerable part of Canton Township and small bites of Northville, Salem and Superior Townships, is the Plymouth Community School District.

However, any thought of using the boundaries around its 54 square miles as basis for a coinciding city is believed to face too many obstacles for success.

Rivalries of governments aside, the fact is that, unofficially, Greater Plymouth already does exist, and maybe that's what William Bartow and his hardy neighbors of long ago had in mind in the first place.

Greater Plymouth's character as a rural, agricultural center far removed from the pace of big business began to change in 1939, and in less than three decades the influence cast by industry has become the most important force in the community.

Population itself has more than tripled in that span, and far-sighted planners now talk of an ultimate in terms of a quarter-million or more residents!

It was industry that brought the people; in turn, this has meant more housing, added schools, better roads, expanded governmental services, an increase in retail establishments, and a host of kindred evidences of area growth.

BURROUGHS CORP. STARTED the whole thing, and it has no end.

Until this world-renowned manufacturer of business machines built its plant on Plymouth Road, industry to residents of this corner of Wayne County referred essentially to a scattering of small Ford Motor Co. units and the Daisy Manufacturing Co.

Although the latter's air rifles spread "Made in Plymouth, Mich." across the face of the nation, Daisy's work force of an estimated 500 employees now is outstripped 10-fold by Burroughs alone. Ford, Evans Products and Western Electric are other employers on the current scene who dwarf Daisy's old employment figures.

Burroughs started the trend in '39, with Kelsey-Hayes (now Evans Products) and Whitman & Barnes quick to follow.

Today there are 42 industrial plants within the City of Plymouth and Plymouth Township, and the total industrial work force stands at more than 12,000. This figure does not include those employed in the retail, commercial or professional fields.

Experts credit availability of excellent rail facilities, ease of tie-ins to Wayne County's sewer system and "an identifiable address" as the key factors for bringing about the Plymouth Road industrial surge just before and at the beginning of World War II.

The same advantages have held through the years, with another major "plus" coming in 1961 when the Township became linked to the Detroit water system.

Combined City and Township population soared from 7,630 in 1960 to 23,320 in 1966.

Just since 1958, retail sales in the combined entities have soared from an annual level of $26 million to nearly $45 million.

BY THE END OF 1967, a staggering total of 1,400 new homes in the Plymouth School District will have been built and occupied in this one year alone. Not only is this the greatest number for one year of all time, but the fact that it doesn't take new apartment unit construction into consideration demonstrates that the population influx is continuing unabated.

That boom, however, pertains essentially to the Township, not the City.

The City of Plymouth had a 1966 population of 10,620, and it is not expected to rise by more than 400 through 1970. Most of all, there simply is no room within city boundaries for any sparkling growth.

In contrast, Plymouth Township counted 12,700 residents last year, and this is expected to reach 16,000 by 1970, — growing at 10 times the city's rate.

Immediately to the south lies rapidly growing Canton Township, a major part of which is within the Plymouth School District. The population projection for that area foresees a growth from its present 6,000-plus to more than 60,000 by 1980.

That there is a full-fledged boom in progress in Greater Plymouth is obvious.

Furthermore, two key developments within recent months have defined the shape of things to come.

First was the establishment of a positive route for I-275, the super north-south highway that will run from I-94 (the Detroit to Chicago route) along the primary course of Haggerty Road to connect at its northern terminus with I-96 (the Detroit to Lansing road).

Second was pin-pointing the location for the district's new $8.5 million high school, to be built near Canton Center and Joy Roads at the boundary line between Plymouth and Canton Townships.

THE I-275 CORRIDOR along old Haggerty will be the locale for continued industrial location, predicts Harold Fischer, director of the Plymouth Area Planning Commission. An advantageous sewer, water, zoning, rail and highway situation makes this territory to the east of the City of Plymouth as favorable for added industrial expansion as the land to the west of the city is for residential development.

The future center of population, foresees Fischer, will be in the area of the new high school. There will be a natural tendency for this to become the focal point of area activity, and similarly the housing growth will stem outward from that point.

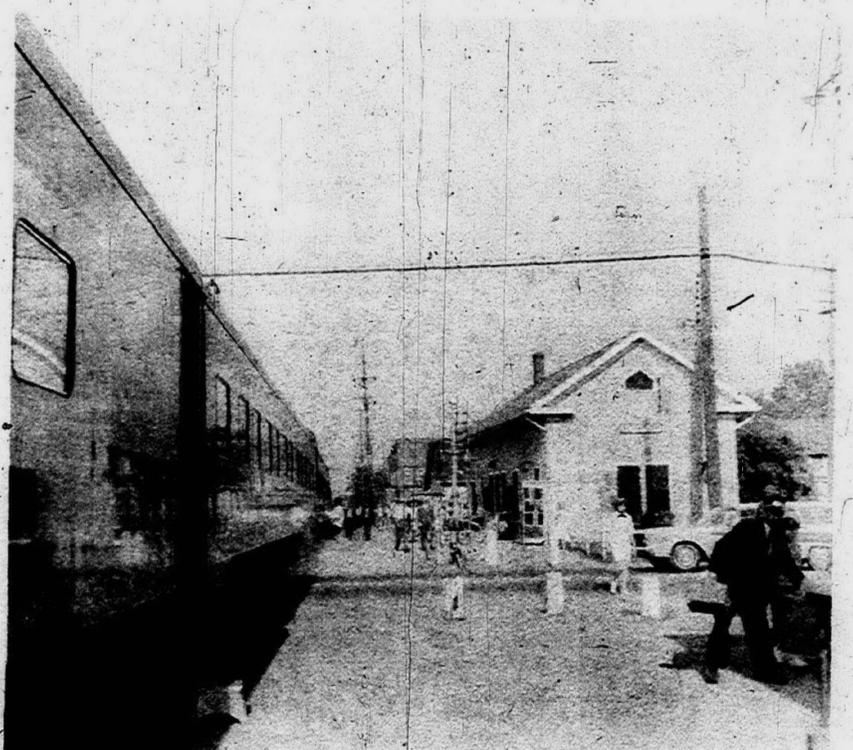

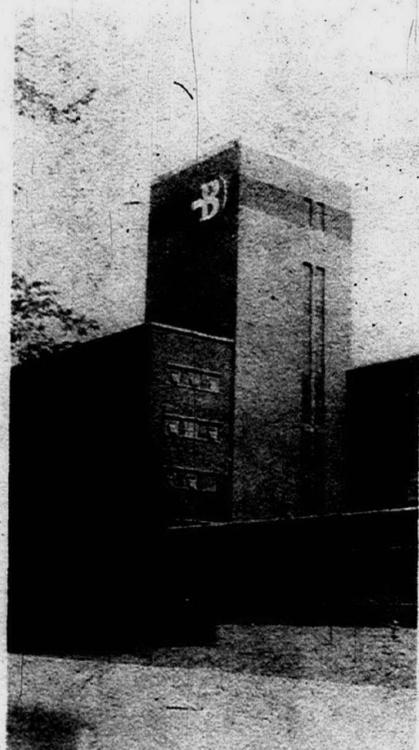

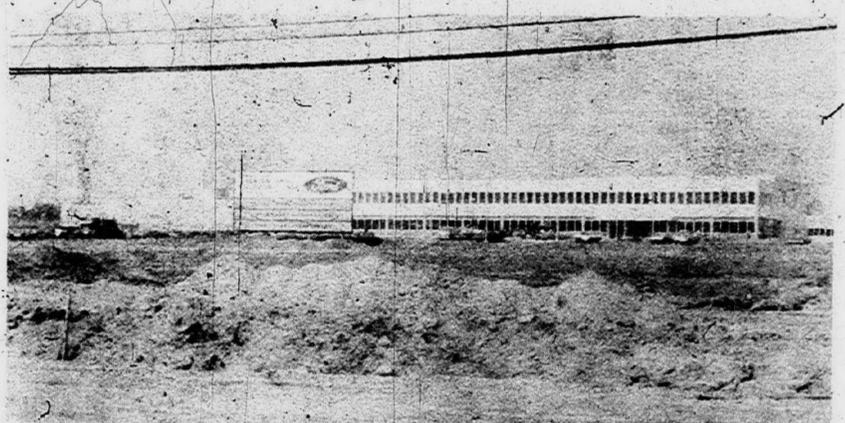

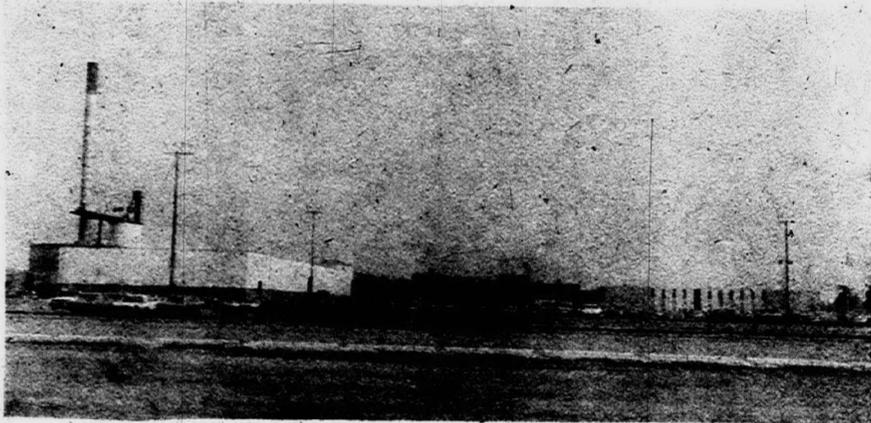

In effect, Greater Plymouth actually is the area of the school district. In addition to the governmental units already mentioned, it includes bits and bites of Northville, Salem and Superior Townships and has a total area of 54 square miles.

At the moment, 4.8 per cent of all that land is being used by industry. Fischer's studies show that 2½ times that is needed for an adequate future tax base.

Alert, far-sighted planning agencies face the challenge of properly coordinating all aspects of the growth that appears to be a certainty.

From the grist and saw mills of more than a century ago — in fact from the quietude of the mid-'30s — Greater Plymouth suddenly has burst its seams in an economic explosion. It bids fair to become one of the great cities of Michigan.

Economy: Small Town Big Industry

American Community, Pioneer In Hospitalization

Twenty-nine years ago four men — Andrew Gump, Wesley McClintock, Kenneth Koppin and Charles Engstrom — joined together to form a new insurance company. From these humble beginnings grew American Community Mutual Insurance Co., with its home office in Plymouth.

The original company formed in 1938 was the first commercial hospitalization company in the State of Michigan and was known as Michigan Hospital Benefit Association. The name was subsequently changed to American Hospital-Medical Benefit and became very popular by offering the "American Plan" hospitalization insurance.

American Community is proud of its background and its steady rate of growth over the last 29 years.

FROM THIS BEGINNING, which emphasized the sale of hospitalization insurance, American Community has branched into group insurance, special risk programs and life insurance of all kinds.

In the past 29 years, American Community has paid over $82 million in benefits to the people of Michigan. Many Michigan families have averted financial disaster due to the fact that they have owned an American Community hospitalization or life insurance policy.

American Community is also proud of its long-standing record of service in the group insurance market. Although the company limits its business operations to the states of Michigan and Indiana, it is ranked in the top 125 companies in the United States in the group insurance category. Among its group insurance customers are Detroit Edison, Michigan State University, and City of Plymouth. Both Detroit Edison and MSU have been customers of American Community for more than 25 years.

American Community moved to its modern facilities at 409 Plymouth Road in 1958. Currently the home office staff numbers 60. The modern, attractive facilities include a complete data processing system which gives American Community the capacity to process claims and serve its policyholders with up to the minute information.

More than 90 per cent of the hospital claims received at American Community are paid within 48 hours. This fact alone gives the company a tremendous edge on the marketplace. Companies and individuals buying hospitalization insurance want to be assured of the fact that if they do have a claim it will be paid promptly.

IN JANUARY 1967, JACK TEMPLE became president of American Community and its chief operating officer. Temple, 42, brings an outstanding management background that should lead the company into new and exciting areas in the years to come.

The management team at American Community is a young, vigorous group of men with varied backgrounds in management, finance, sales and marketing.

Secretary-Treasurer John Herb heads the financial end of the company and is backed up by Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Don Bonner, who is responsible for the operations of the company.

Lyal DeGraw, vice-president, is in charge of group insurance and special risk coverages. The Marketing Department is headed by Paul Reinke and includes Al Kohn, director of sales services, and Richard Schaft, C.L.U., director of advanced underwriting.

The future looks bright. Lyal DeGraw is moving the company into areas of special risk which should produce a high volume of top quality business. Currently, American Community writes more than 40 per cent of all the student accident business in the State of Michigan and is expanding its special risk area to include unique types of college and university coverages.

A New Village Is Born

Mill in Plymouth. A stone marker has been placed near the site by the D.A.R.

The gatekeeper at Toll Gate No. 4 was J. J. Covert who collected a fee from farmers who conveyed their products over it to the Detroit market. Karl Starkweather remembers that remnants of it still existed about 1901 or 1902 when he was a boy. Karl says the toll was two cents a mile for two horses or one cent a mile for a single horse. Farmers complained that the wooden planks were not kept in a good state of repair, and Plymouth voted to do away with the toll gate on July 10, 1872.

A copy of the 1860 map was loaned to me by Sidney D. Strong, civil engineer, land surveyor, and Plymouth's first city manager. This map shows a street named Pearl running north off the Plank Road just before the Plank Road crosses Mill Street. It appears to be located where Starkweather Street is today, and the plots facing it are marked "Starkweather addition" on the map, Karl Starkweather says it can't be the present Starkweather Street because his grandfather did not cut the street through his property until 1865.

Beyond Mill Street, and still going toward Detroit, our traveler, having noticed that the street in front of his hotel was named Main, would have been puzzled to pass another Main Street, running north, which appears to be today's Holbrook. Perhaps the North end of town, not to be outdone by the Kellogg Park section, had a Main Street of its own in 1860. The reader should remember that all of my information about streets and businesses in Plymouth is based on the 1860 map, drawn a year before the Civil War and seven years before the incorporation in 1867.

Proceeding north on Main (Holbrook?), the visitor would have passed Welsh Street. Then he would have found himself in a Public Square about where the fire station in the north end of Plymouth now stands. Subsequently, he would have crossed Spring, Liberty, Division and another street which appears on the map, but which is unnamed.

Eventually he would reach the residence of Samuel Hardenburgh and finally the Plymouth Mill which stood at the south end of what is now Wilcox Pond. If he had borne left after he came to Hardenburgh's house, he would have reached another Plank Road that went from Plymouth to Northville.

Business Men of the 1860's

A look at the business directory, printed on the 1860 map evokes comment on the number of names of British origin, the inclusion of occupations which died out with the triumph of the automobile, and the absence of such familiar modern businesses as gas stations, movie houses, insurance firms, real estate agencies, laundromats, and pizza parlors.

No sign of a mortician, a tonsorial establishment, an optometrist, a photographer or a camera shop. No newspaper, bank, bakery or cocktail lounge (although there were two saloons).

To compensate for the lack of these modern indispensables, Plymouth in the 1860's boasted establishments difficult to find today: leather dealers, wagon and carriage makers, blacksmiths, livery stables, harness makers, millers, tanners, churn-makers, coopers, a fanning mill manufacturer and even a toll-gate keeper.

Here is the complete list of local businesses as it appears on the 1860 map: dry goods merchants; hardware merchants; boot, shoe and leather dealers; wagon and carriage makers; saloon keepers; blacksmiths; painters; carpenters and joiners; livery stables; farmers; hotel; druggist; harness maker; machinist; tanner; churn and cutting box maker; foundryman; tile and brick maker; cider and fanning mill manufacturer; gatekeeper.

Although there is no listing of a lawyer on the map, Karl Starkweather tells me that his grandfather, George A., who was 34 years of age in 1860, had studied under a well-known attorney in New York City and had opened a law office over Scattergood's store prior to the fire of 1856. At the time of the incorporation in 1867, George Starkweather owned a general merchandise store, along with R. G. Hall, about where the Community Drug store is today. In 1871, Starkweather opened his own business in the brick building he built at the corner of Liberty and Starkweather.

Aside from his distinction as the first white child born in Plymouth, Mr. Starkweather was a large land owner; the 1860 map shows his name on several pieces of property, including a large tract facing the Plymouth Plank Road and also running along Mill Street.

In addition to his farming and business activities, George Starkweather found time to be of public service over an extended period in his life. He was a member of the Michigan State Legislature in 1854. He was supervisor of Plymouth Township in 1855, 1858, 1859 and 1862; he was the township justice of the peace in 1853, 1857, 1861 and 1865; he became village president in 1898 and a week later was also elected Township supervisor.

Tonquish Creek which runs through Plymouth was named after the Chief of a local Indian tribe. It runs under the main business of the city today, but in 1860 it was uncovered, except for an occasional bridge where a road crossed it. It shows on the 1860 map as running south under Ann Arbor Street (Trail) about where Carl Peterson's Drug store is now located. It cuts east under South Main slightly south of Wing Street.

Automotive Specialist

Anchor Coupling's Plymouth Plant, Part of an International Firm, Supplies Transportation Industry

Since its founding in 1938, Anchor Coupling Co. Inc., has been a pioneer and leader in the growing fluid-power industry, making high-quality hose assemblies, couplings and fittings for hydraulic and pneumatic control, and for the transfer of liquids and gases safely under pressure.

In a few short years, Anchor has grown from a small machine shop to an international corporation; headquartering in Libertyville, Ill. Their branches and subsidiaries throughout the United States and Canada are located strategically to the markets they serve.

It was only logical, therefore, that the Plymouth plant became the automotive specialist for the company.

THE RUBBER HOSE, metal couplings and fittings and metal tubing that form their products are not glamorous nor are they likely to be found at the supermarket.

But it would be a safe bet the automobile, truck or bus that takes you to work or shopping or on vacation is equipped with an Anchor product.

It could be the power steering hose assembly, the air conditioning hose assembly, the fuel and oil hose lines or the air brake lines which help provide for your safety and comfort while driving.

Safety and quality are synonymous to the Anchor Research Laboratories — from raw material to finished product rigid standards must be met. Where test units were not available, Anchor engineers designed and built their own.

In their modern laboratories they are able to simulate the natural enemies of a hose assembly — heat, cold, age, and corrosion — creating in hours what these elements of nature would take years to accomplish.

ASSEMBLIES ARE BAKED . . . frozen . . . steamed in salt water . . . boiled in oil . . . then tested for hundreds of thousands of impulses under pressure. They are stretched, compressed, twisted and burst to insure the final product has built-in dependability.

In addition to the automotive industry, Anchor products are supplied to dozens of well defined industries — the largest being heavy construction equipment.

Others include farm equipment, material handling, metal working, military surface vehicles, ships and submarines, missiles and missile ground-support equipment.

Schools of 100 Years Ago

In the field of education, Michigan, from its admission to the Union in 1837, had pioneered in the development of what became the typical pattern in the United States of free, non-sectarian, tax-supported and state-controlled boards. We can assume that this was the pattern in Plymouth in the 1860's. It was not until 1871, however, four years after Plymouth incorporated, that the State Legislature made school attendance mandatory.

The buildings in the Plymouth school system grew from simple one-room log school houses to the existing sophisticated structures in a series of improvements made necessary over the years by increasing population, new methods of teaching, and multiplicity of programs brought on by the increasing complexity of the modern world.

About 1830 there was a log school house on the Plymouth-Detroit road on the east side of the River Rouge. This gave way in 1840 to a frame building on lot 6, block 6 of the Bradner Plat, the lot being donated by William Bradner. This building was in existence until Union School District No. 1 was formed in 1853.

Prior to that, in the 1840's, E. J. Penniman had built, as a memorial to his wife, a select school on Church Street at about the present site of the Plymouth High School. It was called the Seminary. In 1853, at a meeting of voters held in the Seminary, Mr. Penniman donated the building and lots on condition that the site be the future location of a school building for District No. 1.

The first Union School opened in the building with three teachers in charge. In 1854-5 extensive repairs and additions were made. This was the state of the schools in Plymouth in 1867. Later, in 1884, a new brick building was erected on the same site at a cost of $18,000.

Social Life in 1867

Much of the social life of Plymouth in the 1860's centered around the church. On Sunday one might hear a sermon of lasting import. On the other hand, the subject of the sermon might be one which many residents listened to politely on Sunday, but paid little attention to on other days of the week: the evils of card-playing. The church was also the meeting place for socials, lectures by touring speakers, musical programs and temperance meetings. Much time was devoted to choir rehearsals.

Riding by horse and carriage in the summer and with a fast cutter over the hard-packed snow in the winter to the musical accompaniment of sleigh bells were among the most popular forms of recreation. Other open air activities included nutting, berrying, and ice skating as soon as the nearby ponds were declared safe. Festivities at the park included numerous band concerts, traveling shows, circuses and balloon ascensions.

At home in the evening, the ubiquitous cards were brought out, and there was corn-popping, candy-pulls, chair-covering, stitching on samplers, fortune-telling, and the interminable sewing. Refreshments would probably be lemonade, angel food cake, and fruit or nuts.

Life for Plymouth residents of the 1860's had its dangers as well as its delights. Fires, with the absence of water mains and the most rudimentary means of fire-fighting at their disposal, was a constant hazard to the people who lived here 100 years ago. After a long spell of bad weather, the chief topic of conversation was probably who was down with "Le Grippe." Cod-liver oil and hot flax-seed poultices were among the home remedies for a variety of ailments.

Much time was spent extricating wagons from the hub-deep mud on Main Street. Many accidents were attributable to horses that had a propensity for kicking at the wrong time.

The good old days had their dark side, too.

It Took A Lot Of People...

This special Centennial Edition of the Plymouth Mail & Observer is the product of many people and much hard work.

Particular thanks should go to Harold Fischer, Chairman of the Plymouth Area Planning Commission, and to Carl Pursell, Chairman of the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, who both were instrumental in planning this special section. We are deeply indebted to those citizens of Plymouth who gave of their time and advice and to all those who kindly loaned us the antique photographs used in this section. Special thanks should go to Sam Hudson of Evans Products, who shared with us his extensive research on Plymouth's history.

The sponsors of this special section are Consumers Power Company, Evans Products, Ford Motor Company, American Plan Insurance Company, Gould Homes, Anchor Coupling, Vico Products Company, and Steel Tank Manufacturing. They have shown themselves to be full and active members of the Plymouth community. Special mention should be made of the Steel Tank Manufacturing, which participated in this section but modestly did not wish any editorial coverage.

The regular staff of the Plymouth Mail & Observer — Editor W. W. Edgar, reporters Fred DeLano and Margaret Murawski, and photographers Jim Hubbard and Bob Dillon — did the bulk of the writing and photographic work for this Centennial Edition.

Special note should be made of our staff artist, David Stribley, who did the entire layout and production, and of our managing editor, Tim Richard, who coordinated the project.

Vico Began In A Basement

Twenty-five years of sweat and dedication have carried Vico Products Co. from a modest beginning in the basement of the owner's private home to an impressive, modern plant of more than 65,000 square feet on Ann Arbor Road.

The growth of Vico (rhymes with "rye-ko") is, in effect, the personal story of its founder and owner, Leo Schultz.

It is a story of perseverance, self-denial, and fulfillment of a family vow to make good.

Vico Products today employs more than 60 individuals, operating primarily in highly skilled trades of tool production and turning out hundreds of thousands of precision items every month for world distribution.

THE COMPANY HAS progressed from its home origination a quarter-century ago to successive plants on Eckles Road, Pearl Street and now Ann Arbor Road.

Ground for the beautiful new plant was broken in 1966, and it was placed in operation last January.

Parts for automotive manufacturing suppliers form the bulk of the company's production schedule; and for at least one current part being ordered by the auto world's "Big Four," Vico enjoys the unique distinction of being sole source.

In the trade, this is possibly the highest compliment which can be paid.

In its simplest terms, it means that one of America's foremost companies is relying day-in-and-day-out on Vico for its total supply of a given piece without which the final product can not roll off the assembly line.

This sort of reliance is rarely given, for any interruption in the flow of parts from Vico would shut down operations in one plant after another across the face of the nation. It is to the credit of Leo Schultz and his employees that there never has been an interruption.

Most of the people who work at Vico live in the Plymouth community, as does Schultz himself.

He and his company are part and parcel of the area's industrial, economic and cultural growth.

BORN OF A LARGE FAMILY in Wisconsin, Schultz had few benefits from a formal education as a child.

Only after Schultz arrived in Detroit at 18 did he renew the formal phase of his education, which had been interrupted in grade school. At Ford Trade School and with other diligent training, he became adept in automotive engineering and the tooling trade, and thus was born a determination to break out on his own.

He achieved that goal 25 years ago, only two years after moving to Plymouth. As personal success has accrued through the company's growth, so has his adopted community itself kept pace.

This Builder Bets on Plymouth

A man whose roots grow deep in Plymouth as one of its native sons, who has been part of the community's post-war transition himself, and who can look with satisfaction upon the past, still believes the best is yet to come.

Loren (Bud) Gould, a dynamic go-getter and community leader, is one of those who foresees the northwestern corner of Wayne County as the eventual hub of a semi-metropolitan, yet still suburban, area which will project Greater Plymouth into a role never dreamed of by its founders.

He has helped lay the groundwork for this himself.

From the time he contracted for construction of his first single-family home 15 years ago until undertaking development of the 100-acre Gould Industrial Park just recently, Bud Gould has been betting on Plymouth to be a winner.

HIS DECISION TO GET into the building business came in 1952 after operating a dry cleaning establishment for the six years following his discharge from the armed forces in 1946.

Over the years he has built an estimated 400 homes and has developed nearly twice that many lots, many as parts of subdivisions of his own creation.

First of his commercial projects was a professional office complex on Sheldon Road, built four years ago and long since completely occupied.

"I am now devoting all of my time and attention to commercial and industrial building," Gould said recently.

"We have big plans for the new Industrial Park and hope to have several more buildings underway there in the near future."

Metropolitan Imprinters was the first company to locate in the park, and ground already has been broken for the start of construction.

THE 100-ACRE SECTOR is considered prime industrial territory. Water and sewer services exist, part of the interior road paving has been completed, highway access is easy, the C & O Railroad bounds one side, and air service is immediately at hand from Mettetal Airport on the south side of Joy Road.

The park itself is divided into 15 parcels of varying acreage and is bounded by Ann Arbor Road on the north, Lilley on the west, Joy on the south and the C & O tracks on the east.

It is exactly the type of development that gives promise of helping to continue the industrial boom in Plymouth Township.

Among installations anticipated for the Industrial Park at an early date is a 200,000 square foot warehouse, plus a second warehouse of smaller dimensions. Efforts to interest other users in the entire area are well underway and are meeting with favorable response.

A particular advantage of the Industrial Park is its dual zoning. Its western portion is zoned M-1, permitting light manufacturing. The remainder is in a classification of M-2, authorizing general manufacturing.

Modern Evans Makes Entire Freight Cars

Railroad executives, traffic officials from companies that are large rail shippers, and even other producers of freight cars from all over the world have been visiting Plymouth with increasing frequency since Evans Products Co. added a new railcar plant to its Plymouth operation.

Prior to 1964, Evans had established its reputation in railroad circles as the leading producer of railcar damage-prevention equipment. In September of 1964, Evans began producing not just components for freight cars, but the entire car. Since then the company has been producing box cars, flat cars, specially equipped cars for transporting coils of steel, bulkhead flat cars for shipping building materials, and a variety of other standard and specially equipped freight cars.

Beginning in 1965 and through 1966 the local freight car plant was considerably enlarged. Total cost of the new building, plus equipment is estimated at $6 million.

THE NEW PLANT, one of the few freight car facilities in the United States which is heated, is also well ventilated, well illuminated, and high-ceilinged. All floor areas in the plant are of concrete, making working conditions superior to most freight car plants in the United States, many of which have large dirt work areas.

The plant contains the latest and most sophisticated welding equipment for welding the complete sides of box cars. Other welding equipment includes modern positioners for rotating complete car underframes. The plant is said to contain the most open aisle space of any car plant in the United States.

Adjacent to the car plant is a new car painting facility equipped with a new type of movable paint booth. As the paint booth moves down the track along side the car being painted, ventilating positions at the top of the equipment suck up paint overspray and fumes so they are not discharged into the plant working area.

Evans' car plant is now producing about ten complete freight cars per day. Approximately 1,500 people are employed at the Plymouth operation. The company's Personnel Department reports that it now has openings for arc welders, electricians, tool and die makers, burners, and general production workers. The company is an equal opportunity employer.

The list of railroads for whom Evans has built cars is a Who's Who in the industry.

Among the new specialized cars Evans has introduced into railroading in the last three years is the company's DF-C coil steel car, expressly built for the purpose of safely transporting huge coils of steel from the steel mills to automotive plants, appliance manufacturers, and other large users of steel. Since it introduced the first DF-C coil steel car, Evans has sold more than 1,000.

Another Evans designed freight car which has recently attracted considerable attention in railroad and shipping circles is Evans' new movable bulkhead flat car. This car, built for shipping building materials and other flat car lading, is equipped with two extra high bulkheads, each of which can be moved either toward or away from the load over a 10-foot range. This eliminates the need for wood bracing to protect the lading from shifting in transit.

Another part of Evans Products Co. located at Plymouth is Evans' Transportation Equipment Division. This division placed in use on American railroads in 1962 five "demonstrator freight cars" which act as rolling laboratories, providing information useful to shippers, railroads, and Evans' engineering and sales programs.

The Plymouth facility of this division also produces the "Hydra-Cushion Underframe," the first modern through-sill cushioning device for freight cars. This hydraulic-mechanical sliding sill device cushions both the freight car and the lading from damaging impacts.

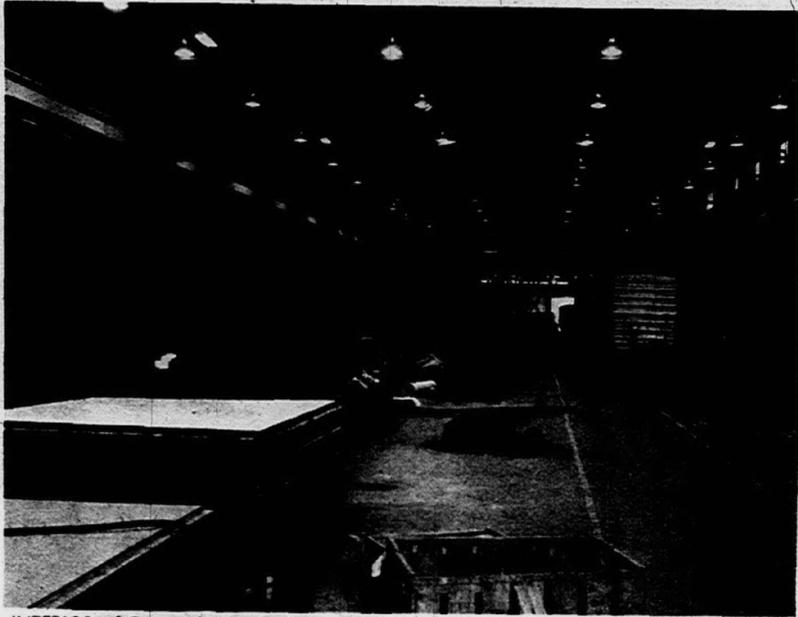

As this is written, the division is testing new railway damage-prevention devices which the company believes will radically change some of the loading and shipping practices now current in the United States.

Through its United States Railway Equipment Company leasing arm, Evans is a major lessor of freight cars. When Evans acquired this company in the Fall of 1965, it had about 7,600 freight cars in its leasing fleet. This fleet has now been increased to about 12,400 cars, including those that are committed for lease in 1967.

THE COMPANY'S BUILDINGS at Plymouth, located on Eckles Road between Schoolcraft and Plymouth Roads, have in excess of 600,000 square feet of manufacturing facilities under roof, an additional 139,000 square feet of outside installation area, 45,000 square feet of outside cranesways, and 250,000 square feet of hard-surfaced outside storage area.

Evans has more than five miles of its own railroad tracks on company property which enables it to install its damage-prevention devices in more than 150 freight cars at any one time.

One of the fastest growing industrial companies in America, Evans now has 18 manufacturing plants.

INTERIOR of Evans plant is high-ceilinged, well-ventilated and well-lighted; work areas are hard-surfaced; plant is heated in cold weather.

OVERVIEW of Evans' grounds shows new plant (huge open doors at left) and Transportation Equipment Division (dark roof, right) which makes railroad and truck damage-prevention equipment.

Ford Returns To The Plymouth Community

Every car and truck produced by Ford Motor Co. for the domestic market has a part made in Plymouth Township.

Ford's Sheldon Road plant produces the heaters and air conditioners for Ford, Lincoln and Mercury automobiles and trucks, and it's an important factor in this community's economy.

The Sheldon Road plant, south of Five Mile Road, employs about 1,300 persons currently. Several months ago, when employment was at the 1,000 mark, company officials figured the projected annual payroll at $8 million.

The plant began production on Feb. 2 and will be completed and at full production by the end of this summer.

IT WAS A BOOST to Plymouth's economy when it was announced early in 1966. The Sheldon Road plant was part of a $2.6 billion world-wide expansion program for the period 1964-67.

Located on a 168 acre site, the plant has 642,000 square feet of space.

A company statement tells clearly why this site was chosen:

"The Ford Motor Co.'s decision to build a manufacturing plant in the Plym- outh community was influenced by a number of factors, such as adequate and stable work force, good access roads, utilities, transportation, availability of land and a favorable business climate.

"In return for these favorable conditions, the Ford Motor Co. expects to provide employment at levels which will represent a significant benefit to the economy of the area through payroll, tax dollars and local purchases."

The plant here is part of Ford's General Parts Division, whose headquarters are in Rawsonville. The division's other seven plants produce, among other things, such parts as spark plugs, batteries, carburetors, instrument clusters, locks, generators and horns.

THE PLANT ALSO REPRESENTED an expansion of Ford facilities. Previously, heating and air conditioning parts had been made in the company's Ypsilanti plant. The Ypsilanti work was transferred here; this freed up 250,000 square feet of space in Ypsilanti and put the work in a plant about 2½ times that size.

The reason: A continuing increase in consumer demand for air conditioners in Ford's passenger car and truck lines. Installation rates are currently running about 30 per cent or more, and the rate is expected to leap substantially in the next decade.

The Sheldon Road plant has 18 lines for assembling the heater and air conditioner units.

Manager is Robert A. Winder, formerly manager of the Ypsilanti plant. He was assigned the post from the planning stage on through.

He has studied mathematics and engineering at Eastern Michigan University, Wayne State University and the University of Michigan, and he has been a production worker, foreman, general foreman, superintendent and production manager.

RECENTLY, THE COMPANY formed a Plymouth Area Community Relations Committee to coordinate its activities in local affairs.

Winder has been named chairman for a one-year term. Other members are Foster H. Bates, plant controller; Harry W. Kampfert, production manager, and Dain T. Pearson, industrial relations manager.

Winder explained its purpose: "In addition to implementing Ford's civic and governmental activities on a local level, Ford's Plymouth Area Community Relations Committee will assist our company in fulfilling its obligations as a community citizen."

The committee will maintain contact with area leaders and organizations to better understand local problems and plans, and it will work to promote a stable business climate.

The new plant is actually Ford Motor Co.'s second in the Plymouth area. From 1923-47, it had what was known as the Phoenix Lake plant, which is now owned by the Wayne County Road Commission.

Although Ford Motor Co. has expanded around the world, its Sheldon Road plant is only 22 miles away from downtown Detroit, where the Ford horseless carriage was born. Organized in 1903 by the late Henry Ford and 11 associates, the company has grown from a small, converted wagon factory on Mack Avenue in Detroit to an international industrial complex that, with its subsidiaries in 1966, averaged 388,000 employees; produced 4.5 million cars, trucks and tractors, and continued its role as a leading contributor to space projects.

On May 3, just three months after the Sheldon Road plant began production, Ford produced its 70 millionth U.S.-built vehicle.

Computers Aid Consumers Power

PLYMOUTH'S KELLOGG PARK will soon have 22 new gas lamps, similar to the lamps of a bygone era. The project is sponsored by the Plymouth Garden Club and financed from funds donated by service clubs and individuals in the community.

Those 24 gently-glowing gas lights to be installed in Plymouth's downtown park in conjunction with the city's centennial this year also mark, in a way, the somewhat shorter history of gas service from Consumers Power Co. in the Plymouth area.

Consumers Power's history in Plymouth dates only to 1934, when it purchased the properties in southern Michigan of the former Michigan Federated Utilities Co., and the history of that firm, in turn, goes back only to the turn of the century.

The first official property records indicating the provision of gas service in the Plymouth-Northville area date only to 1914.

However, there is some evidence that natural gas existing in the area was used on a limited basis by some homeowners and business places long before that — possibly as long as a century ago.

This was not unusual in certain Michigan areas, particularly north of Detroit, where the existence of "seeping" natural gas was common. All a householder did to tap it was drive a shallow well, similar to a water well, with pipe, and then extend the pipe into his building.

THE LARGE RESERVES of natural gas which dotted widely scattered areas of Michigan were not tapped commercially until the 1930's and 1940's, at which time Consumers Power and other utilities in the state began to supply natural gas service. It was at this time, roughly, that the Northville gas fields were more fully explored and developed by Consumers Power.

At about this time, too, Consumers Power came to Plymouth as the gas company. The ensuing 10 years of depression and war saw very little expansion of the business here, where the company continued to supply manufactured gas for some time.

Then, after the war ended and natural gas became increasingly available and grew in popularity as a home-heating fuel, Consumers Power began its most rapid period of growth. In 1950, the company had approximately 10,000 gas customers in western Wayne County. By June of 1967, the West Wayne Division of the company was serving more than 67,000 gas customers.

James P. Thomas, West Wayne Division manager for Consumers Power, remarked briefly on that growth period, and told some of the company's plans for the future:

"Actually," Thomas said, "we are still in the growth period and expect it to continue well into the future. Predictions based on careful studies show the whole Detroit metropolitan complex doubling its population within the next 20 years, well ahead of the growth rate for the rest of the state.

"With this challenge of growth, Consumers Power Co.'s gas department has adopted space-age technology to help us cope with our problems.

"THE COMPANY'S SYSTEM of computers and telemetering devices, and other electronic equipment, ties together our gas service area all over Michigan, enabling us to send the gas supply to the places that need it with a minimum of bother.

"It's a far cry from the days when a man looked at a dial and then telephoned a few miles away to have another man turn a valve.

"From the company's general headquarters in Jackson, gas is not only dispatched to the customer, but it can be sent into and out from our underground storage fields in Wayne, St. Clair, Macomb and other Michigan counties where we hold gas until it's needed.

"In addition, our out-of-state suppliers control their big transmission lines to Michigan on a similar split-second basis.

"And we division people devote our time to system growth and maintenance and helping the customer on a personal basis to get the most value he can from his gas service.

"This applies to the homeowner, the store owner, and the industrialist alike. For example, there are an estimated 1,000 uses of natural gas as an industrial fuel, not only for heat, but as a source of chemicals and other uses for processing."

Thomas said that the total gas send-out for Consumers Power Co. now exceeds in one hour on any average day what it used to total, in millions of cubic feet, in an entire year, back in the days when gas was made from coal.

"WHAT HAS HAPPENED to the gas industry in Plymouth and elsewhere is actually a revolution dating to the late 1930's," he said.

"The revolution took place when the industry learned how to get huge supplies of natural gas out of the gas fields and to the markets by way of flexible, welded-steel pipelines."

Thomas' division headquarters are in Livonia, and the general headquarters of Consumers Power Co. are in Jackson.

The company maintains a retail appliance sales store and customer reception room in downtown Plymouth, just around the corner from the park where those 24 gently-glowing gas lights are helping to mark 100 years of progress for Plymouth and her people.

Down through the years the people of Plymouth be given an idea of what the newspaper looked like "in the old days." With that in mind, through the fitting that during this Centennial Week the courtesy of Mrs. Sterling Eaton, widow of the former owner of The Plymouth Mail, we proudly reprint the first page of the first edition of The Plymouth Mail. It is dated September 16, 1887, which makes it almost 80 years old. It is a fascinating contribution to journalism of that day and is offered now as a real keepsake of the Centennial.

City Backs Suburban Police Riot Squad Plan

Contribute one or two men, and have a skilled emergency police force of 100-plus when you need it. This is the essence of a Wayne County Sheriff's department proposal to some 40 suburban police chiefs—including Livonia, Plymouth, Westland, Garden City and Redford Township.

The emergency force could be mobilized to deal with such major problems as the threatened unruliness of 800 motorcyclists on Hines Parkway two weeks ago. In that case, the sheriff mobilized 120 men, the state police 25, the City of Livonia another 20, Dearborn Heights about 25, and so on. Th gathering of motorcyclists never developed, however, because "spotters" for the gangs saw the police cruising through the area, according to the sheriff's department. The idea of a special emergency force—similar to Detroit's Tactical Mobile Units—grew from that episode. Police department representatives from the Observer area approved the plan a week ago in a meeting with the sheriff's department. Already, the Plymouth City Commission has approved the project. As Capt. Jim Kalil of the sheriff's department outlined the program in an interview: No cash contribution would be required of the suburbs.

- Each department would be asked to designate one man in 10 from its force for this force.
- The department representative would be given special training in this type of work by the State police and sheriff's department.

About This Special Section

This is the second of two special sections about Plymouth on the 100th anniversary of its incorporation as a village—its legal birth as an urban community. In it The Mail & Observer will not attempt the impossible job of chronicling Plymouth's entire history or listing the myriad accomplishments of everyone's ancestors. Rather, we have attempted to capture the flavor of this proud community's life in the past—the newspaper as it was, the stores and streets as they used to appear, the school system as it grew, the practical problems of its local legislative leaders. At 100 years of age, Plymouth is a comparative child among the cities of the world. Yet the modern resident, seeing pictures of the mud and timber of a century or less ago, is awe-struck at what has been accomplished in that period of time. You don't take what you have for granted any more. We know what will happen as soon as this newspaper hits the streets. Many of you will call us and say: "Gee, why didn't you say you were going to do something like this—I have dozens of old photos you could have used." Please do. There's no law or city ordinance saying we can publish fascinating old photos only once a century. If you, the readers are interested and can provide the material, perhaps we can make the publishing of photos of old Plymouth a continuing feature of The Mail & Observer.

THERE WASN'T ANY TV, but the Victorian family had the organ, the bass fiddle, and the old banjo for enjoyment.

While listening to music, they could also look at the John Rogers statuette of "The Favored Scholar," at right.

Victorian Living Room Is Preserved

Horsehair sofas that pricked when you sat on them...a stereoscope to look through and see the "canals of Venice"...the family organ were all part of the Victorian parlor.

A typical parlor of 1891 is recreated in a red-curtained room in the Historical Museum at 157 South Main.

An old organ that the Hartsoughs—one of Plymouth's earliest families once gathered around sits in one corner of the room. During cold winter evenings, Wells and Thankful Hartsough and their three children played the organ and sang together.

The children's interest in music continued throughout their lives. When Palmer, the son, grew up, he toured Michigan as a fire and brimstone preacher, and always carried a portable organ with him.

BELLE BROWN HARLOW'S wedding dress is worn by a figure standing in the room. The silk dress, made in 1882, was originally plum-colored and is now a dull purple, slowly fading to grey.

The historical society first bought mannequins from Hudson's to use for the old outfits given to them. But members of the society soon discovered that old clothes were just too small for models made for modern women.

From her dress, it appears that Belle was little more than five feet tall, and had an 18 or 20 inch waist.

THE ROOM IS filled with things to entertain the 19th century family.

The backs of post cards waiting to be used in the stereoscope explain that they are "a great education for children". "It's just like going around the world without leaving your own home", continues the card telling about the three dimensional effect gained from looking at the cards through the glass.

Selling stereoscopes used to be a great summer job for college students, who would go around with the latest tempting pictures.

Old doll furniture and china head dolls are sitting in the living room ready for some little girl to pick them up. The rest of the museum is also furnished like an early Plymouth house by members of the society which has been in existence since 1948.

Three Country Schools Weren't So Far Apart

The jagged boundaries of the 54 square mile Plymouth School District date back to the days when farm lines decided school districts.

In the middle of the 19th century every township in Michigan was a school district, and each district had five or six schools no more than two miles apart.

So the old stories about pioneer children tramping five miles weren't true in this part of the state. They would have passed two schools if they had gone that far.

Three of the small country schools built before 1900 and still owned by the Plymouth School District are no more than five miles apart on Canton Center Road.

THE BARTLETT SCHOOL built in 1890, is now a storage center for the Theatre Guild. Canton Center and Cherry Hill schools have been leased from the school system by Canton Township for historical purposes.

With an $8 million high school soon to be built and new programs in special education being offered by the Plymouth schools, little is heard of the tiny country schools.

However, three are still in operation — Geer, Stone and Truesdell, which was built as recently as 1952.

Even the oldest of these schools, is far from the first school built on Plymouth. In 1837 a frame school was built on Main Street, just north of the present railroad tracks.

Three years later, E. J. Penniman, a local banker, built a private school on Church Street, apparently on the site of the present-day high school.

IN 1853 PLYMOUTH became School District No. 1, and all 131 voters were notified of a meeting of the district in November.

At this meeting, Penniman offered to give his school building and lot on which it stood to the district. This school was used until 1844, when a new building was erected on the same site at a cost of $18,000.

A fire in 1916 destroyed this school, which housed all 12 grades. Until the new school was built in 1917, students went to school in church basements and fraternal halls.

With the growth of the community, a new school was needed. After fiery debates on the location, the school board decided to build it on the north side of town, and name it Starkweather, after one of the pioneer families.

It took a quarter of a century for Plymouth to grow enough to need another school. When it was built, members of the board decided to name it after long-time principal Nellie Bird.

Hard work and a love of education paid off for five other Plymouth residents who have had schools named for them. Helen Farrand, Edna Allen and Nancy Tanger were all teachers.

George Smith was a superintendent of Plymouth schools, and James Gallimore was a longtime member of the board of education.

SINCE 1950, SCHOOLS have been built almost continuously in Plymouth. Right now, elementary school number 8 is under construction; bids will be taken in July for a new middle school, and plans are in progress for a new high school.

While children are out playing, the administration is working at the board office to improve the curriculum and expand next year's special services.

We Really Are 'Wolverine State'

By GORDON CHARLES M.U.C.C. Writer

Wildlife authorities have argued for years that Michigan, the Wolverine State, has never been the home of the wolverine. They contend that the only wolverines ever found in Michigan were in the form of furs brought in by Canadian trappers.

The authorities are wrong on that one.

It was October 8, 1871, about a week before the famed Peshtigo fire in Wisconsin which burned 1,500 people, that a strange animal came splashing across the Menominee River into Michigan.

A 10-year-old lad, George Primo, was leaning on a stick as he stood on a knoll watching the parade of wildlife fleeing ahead of one of many uncontrolled fires in Wisconsin. Even at this early age he was familiar with most forms of wildlife but now he saw one he couldn't identify.

The peculiar animal came ashore, fairly well spent, then ambled up behind a French trapper's shack where the family dog was sleeping. Immediately, the dog and the animal were battling and the trapper's wife saw the dog was getting far the worst of it.

She grabbed a broom and went to the dog's aid. At the same time, George came running with his stick to enter the fracas and between them they finally killed the creature. Neither, however, was able to identify what it was they had killed.

A few days later George went back and the trapper, who had returned by then, told him the animal was a "carcajou." This still meant nothing to him till years later when George entered a Marquette barbershop and saw an identical animal mounted on a shelf. The barber told him it was a wolverine.

George Primo, a French trapper and hunter, related his story to Ford Kellum in 1945 when the two men were neighbors in the little northern Michigan town of Amasa in Iron County. A keen student of nature, Kellum at that time wrote up an elaborate account of Primo's story for his own files.

We first read this factual account when Kellum was district game manager at Traverse City. He was later transferred to Gaylord by the Conservation Department when the Traverse City and Baldwin district offices were wiped out by ill-advised reorganization efforts.

Thus, it would appear that despite what other wildlife authorities might say, the wolverine did indeed once live in Michigan, the Wolverine State!

OLD STONE SCHOOL, at the corner of North Territorial and Curtis Roads, is one of three tiny country schools which are still operated by the Plymouth Community School District. The original stone section of the building was constructed in 1857 — ten years before Plymouth's incorporation as a village. When the school was built, each township in Michigan comprised a separate school district. The one-room school is now used for a kindergarten and first grade class, composed of students from the Washtenaw County section of the school district. At the end of this school year 10 kindergarten children and 12 first-graders were enrolled at Stone.

Collegians Will Present Pair Of 1-Act Comedies

'The Public Eye' and 'The Private Ear', comic one-act productions written by the noted English playwright Peter Shaffer, will be presented June 30 and July 1 and 2 by the Dearborn Recreation Collegiate Summer Theatre.

All performances, to be produced on a specially constructed outdoor stage at the Edsel Ford High School athletic field, will begin a 8:30 p.m. The school is located on Rotunda Drive near Pelham Road. Admission is $1.

The one-acts are the first of three scheduled performances by the collegiate group as they embark on an ambitious summer theatre bill of fare.

Following, on July 14, 15 and 16, will be another Shaffer-written play, 'Five Finger Exercise', and on July 28, 29 and 30 the musical, 'Once Upon A Mattress', will be staged at the Edsel Ford location.

When The Handsome Stranger Was Really A Prince ...

The back room of the Dunning-Hough library is the storehouse for books that were best sellers just before the first world war, but would now be described as camp.

Stories of romance and adventure in high society was as popular then as James Bond is now. Heroes were either wealthy young rouses waiting to be saved from their dissipated lives, by the love of a good woman, or princes in disguise.

Winston Churchill and a few other authors who made the best seller list in those days are still read. But George Barr McCutcheon, who made the list eight times between 1901 and 1914, is hardly known today.

McCutcheon's imaginary kingdom of Graustark seemed to be teeming with handsome, eligible young royalty. The first in the series, "Graustark--The Story of a Love Behind A Throne", is still at the library, although there haven't been many calls for it in the last 30 years.

It is the story of the romance between a wealthy young American with the improbable, but aristocratic name of Grenfall Lorry and a beautiful, mysterious lady he meets on a train. She is none other than Yette, Crown Princess of Graustark, traveling incognito.

Of course, their romance hasn't a chance since he isn't of royal blood. However, in the following chapters he saves her life so many times that the natives of Graustark decide he is a good man to have around. A popular vote ratifies the marriage, and Lorry and his princess settle down in Graustark. For Americans, accustomed to seeing kings and queens on the front pages of their daily papers, this was a thrilling and romantic story. McCutcheon wasn't the first to capitalize on the human fascination with royalty.

It is still possible to catch reruns of movie made from the 1895-best-seller, "The Prisoner of Zenda", on TV.

McCutcheon had found the formula for success, and he followed it, scrupulously.

"Beverly of Graustark" and "The Prince of Graustark" told of more doings in that mythical kingdom. Poor Beverly had the misfortune to fall in love with a handsome young stranger although she is committed to an arranged marriage with a member of royalty whom she has never met.

Miserably unhappy, the two young lovers part company. But, you guessed it, when Beverly meets her fiance, he is none other than her true love, standing there in full dress uniform, with medals gleaming in the sunlight.

Of course, if members of Graustark's royal family hadn't spent all their time traveling around incognito these complications would never have arisen.

Next to reading about royalty people liked to read about the rich and titled in such stories as "Lady Rose's Daughter", and "The Younger Set" suggest. The type of story where the daughter of a crotchety old Wall Street financier falls in love with her chauffeur, who is actually the heir to a dukedom was read by many a housewife while waiting for her washing to dry on the line.

In "Brewster's Millions", McCutcheon leaves Graustark to recount high life in New York City. Monty Brewster inherits a million dollars from one side of his family, only to learn a few days later that he must dispose of it within the next year, in order to inherit seven million from another relative.

McCutcheon pulls out all the stops. Monty gives fabulous dinner parties, dabbles in the stock market, and takes his friends to the Riviera on a yacht. Even a sheik manages to wander through the pages. In the middle of all this, Monty realizes he is in love with Peggy, a girl-next-door-type. "She cares for me with the devotion of a sister, and that's all," he groans.

Understandably, Peggy is a little upset at the way he is spending his money. However, she defends him to others who call him a spendthrift, because she is deeply in love with him. She overlooks his spending habits, and marries him thinking they will be poor but happy, only to find that he has succeeded in spending the one million in order to get seven.

Even the Plymouth Mail got into the act, carrying serialized stories of romance among the rich. "The Auction Block", by Rex Beach ran throughout most of 1916. It tells the story of how a pure girl helped a wealthy young alcoholic turn his back on demon rum.

But the first world war, which caused the downfall of so many families in Europe, brought about the end of the reign of the fictional monarchs.

The irrepressible heroes and beautiful heroines began to show their age. Now they sit in the yellowed pages in the books stacked in a corner at the library.

A TENDER MOMENT is represented in a line drawing which appeared in "T. Tembarom" by Frances Hodgson Burnett, published by the Century Co., New York, in 1913.

DOLLY, of "The Dolly Dialogues," is reproduced from a sketch which appeared in that book, written by Anthony Hope and published by R. H. Russell in 1901.

ORIGINAL MURRAY farmhouse was the left wing of this house; other wings, typically, were added later. The building burned down in 1961.

A Wilderness Tract

This parchment land grant, signed Oct. 2, 1826 by President John Quincy Adams, gave title to 75 acres to one of Plymouth's earliest settlers, Archibald Y. Murray.

Warren and Napier Roads in northwest Canton Township. Murray, a native of Orange County, N.Y., left his wife and children behind for awhile in 1825 and followed a blazed trail to his farm, which straddled the Wayne-Washtenaw county line.

The pioneer put up a log home first, then built a brick home in 1838 which was added on to later (left part of house in photo). The house burned down in 1961.

Village Council's Woes: Cattle In Streets, Pubs

When the Common Council of the Village of Plymouth first got down to business in the spring of 1867, the major problems on the agenda were cattle in the streets and saloon hours. Saloons and loose animals were apparently constant headaches for the village in the early days. Nearly a tenth of the ordinances and amendments passed before 1900 dealt with saloons and gaming rooms. And beasts in the streets received as much attention then as crime in the streets does today.

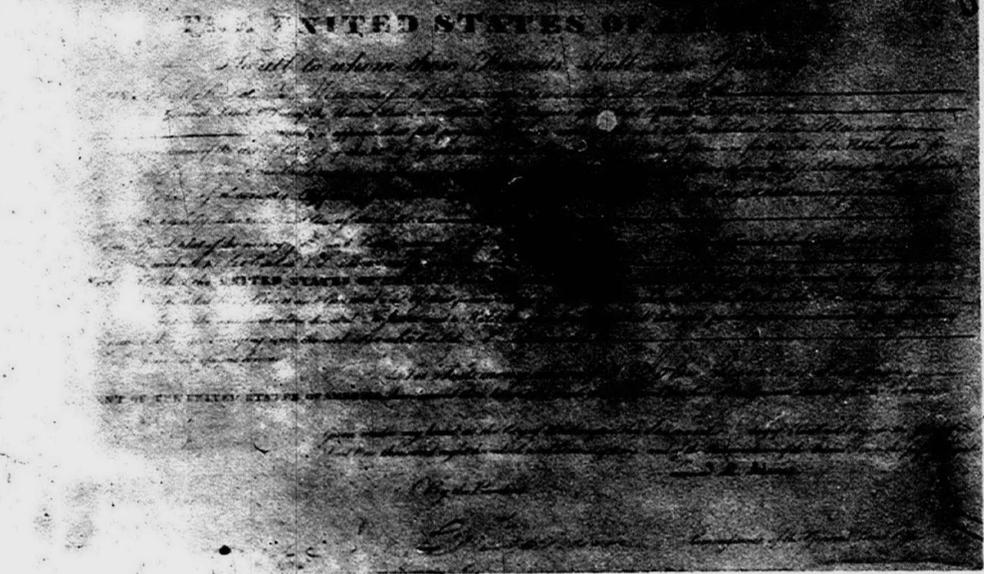

THE FIRST ORDINANCE aimed at solving the cattle problem imposed a curfew on their wanderings in the village proper. "It shall be unlawful to let cattle run at large after eight o'clock p.m. and before five o'clock a.m. And that all cattle be restrained from running at large within the limits of said corporation from the 15th day of November until the 15th day of April each year under a penalty of 50 cents for each offence."

movements within the village until 1902. THE FIRST SALOON ordinance required all public places serving spirituous liquors to close at 10 p.m. Eight months later, in December, 1867, the Common Council added the provision that saloons could not reopen until 5 a.m. Perhaps some saloon keeper had seen the loophole in the earlier law, closing his establishment at 10 p.m. and reopening at 11 p.m.

with a giant front wheel. The Council dealt with this problem swiftly, apparently without benefit of the dictionary. The law, as recorded by the village clerk, reads: "Any person owning or using a velociped or bicycle within the corporation of Plymouth will be hereby notified that it is unlawful for them to run them on any plank sidewalk within the village."

THE BAND WAGON was getting set to haul the Plymouth Band off to a performance, probably at a parade somewhere. A good guess is that the photo was taken in the 1870's. Robert Beyer, who loaned the photo, identified the drummer as his grandfather, Peter Gayde, who died in 1905. Cameras of that era weren't fast enough to stop the motion of a horse's moving head.

PRESIDENT JOHN QUINCY ADAMS' signature is clearly visible on this certificate granting the 75 acres of land in Canton Township (then part of Plymouth Township) to Archibald Y. Murray, whose descendants still hold part of the property.

Dear Fellow Citizen:

Chessie wants to offer a 21-gun salute to your Centennial...

Plymouth was just four years old when trains of the Chesapeake and Ohio's predecessor company began chugging through your then small crossroads.

We've both grown. Plymouth is a bustling, modern city. C&O with its new partner the B&O has become an 11,000-mile transportation network.

During those years Plymouth and C&O have lived together and worked together as friends. C&O/B&O is proud of this relationship.

Our parallel growth has resulted in bigger and better facilities, and, also some growing pains for both of us. Some Plymouth citizens are being delayed at railroad grade crossings. We're sorry for that, especially the 150 Plymouth members of the C&O/B&O family who bring a payroll of $1.5 million annually into the community. But, C&O trains are being delayed, too, as we sincerely try to keep these crossings open for you and at the same time serve your local industries which contribute so much to your area's economy.

Right now, a blue ribbon committee of Plymouth citizens, headed by your City Manager, is studying how best to solve this problem. C&O is cooperating wholeheartedly in this task and is most appreciative of this positive community approach.

With a little patience and some hard work, the City of Plymouth and C&O/B&O will find an answer, we are confident.

Please know of our sincerity in this Centennial message of "better things to come." ✕

Sincerely

AL DIEDRICK, Department of Public Works employee, looks over gravestones in the old cemetery, which is maintained by the city.

Old Cemetery Stands On Site Of A Legend

In a quiet half-forgotten corner of Plymouth on York St. lie the remains of some of Plymouth's earliest settlers. Lilacs and lilies of the valley grow among the worn and broken gravestones.

Originally started in 1845 as a public corporation, the cemetery was turned over to the city in 1891. Plymouth has maintained the cemetery ever since, although no one has been buried in it since the early 1900s. Legend has it that the cemetery is on the site of an old Indian burial ground. Twelve of Plymouth's early settlers bought the acre of land for $75 in 1845.

THEY FORMED the Plymouth Village Cemetery Society, and anyone willing to pay $3 for a lot was automatically a member of the society.

Nine-year-old Asenath Delia Lyon was the first person placed to rest there on April 22, 1845. Although many of Plymouth's pioneers were hardy stock, living to old age, those were the days of high infant mortality, and many of the graves are those of children. Grass has grown into the cracks of one flat gravestone, and only the words "little Freddie" can still be read.

During the 19th century the cemetery continued to grow and the sloping hillside was used by many Plymouth families whose names are still heard today—Holbrook, Kellogg, and Hartsough.

SO MANY VISITORS came to the site that the Cemetery Society felt it necessary to issue a set of rules stating such precepts as "no party with refreshments will be admitted", and "no horse is to be left unfastened".

The cemetery is still remembered by longtime Plymouthites as the "Old Baptist Cemetery", or the "Old German Cemetery", although it never had any connection with either group.

As the years went by, it became evident that the society couldn't continue to maintain the cemetery.

In 1881, J.C. Peterhans, secretary of the society, wrote these terse notes of the meetings.

"Meeting called for the first Tuesday of this month. Present were I.N. Hedden, president and myself. Meeting adjourned one week.

"Next week same results. Present were I.N. Hedden and myself. Went home disgusted."

So in 1891, the city council assumed control of the burial grounds. Today the gate is kept locked so that no vandals can get in and few people remember anyone who is buried there.

But every now and then someone will call at the city hall asking for the key in order to visit an old family plot. And veterans groups put flags near the graves of former servicemen, such as Joseph Tessman who fought in Company 1 of the 4th Michigan Cavalry.

West Plymouth News

Recently Mrs. Henry Wassman of Woodlore planned a surprise birthday party for her husband. After spending the afternoon golfing, Mr. Wassman returned home to find 40 guests waiting for him. They included friends of many years standing, business associates and a few newer friends and neighbors. Cocktails and refreshments were served from five until seven o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Guy have moved here from Dearborn Heights. They have five children, Julie 9, John 8, Jane 5, Jim 2 and Joanna 8 months. Mr. Guy is Manager of Quality Control, General Parts Division for Ford in Rawsonville. Mrs. Guy was originally from Plymouth. Her maiden name was Miss Pat Lidgard.

Within the last month four new families have moved into new Woodbrook subdivision. The Richard Hausmans have moved here from Cincinnati, Ohio, and have four children, Ann 11, Jeff 10, Lisa 8 and Greg 6. Mr. Hausman is Quality Control Manager with Ford at the Livonia Transmission Plant.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Herr have moved here from Livonia and have three children, Fred 12, Karen 10 and Laurie 6. Mr. Herr is Operators Manager in Carburetors at the Ford Plant in Rawsonville.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Wayne Booker have moved into their new home, coming to Plymouth

An unusual custom was started in Woodbrook by Mr. and Mrs. William Sturton who were the first family to move into the subdivision. They gave the second family a plant, the second family in turn gave the third a similar gift and so on. It has become a tradition to present a gift to the newest family in the area by the last one who had moved there.

OU Building Progressing

Despite brief strikes by sheet metal workers and roofers, construction is reported to be on schedule for Oakland University's new $5 million Dodge Hall of Engineering in Rochester. The 135,000-square-foot building is scheduled for completion next spring and will be the home of the OU School of Engineering and department of biology, which are now housed in the adjoining Science Building.

We have been serving the Plymouth Community for the last quarter century and are proud to be in Plymouth for her 100th Birthday.
