A Birthday Pledge To Keep Public's Faith

On September 16, 1887, J. H. Steers published the first edition of the Plymouth Mail. Today, 80 years later, the Plymouth Mail & Observer is celebrating the 80th anniversary of its distinguished ancestor.

Eighty years is a long time. Much has changed since the first appearance of The Mail.

As a community, Plymouth has grown and prospered in ways unimaginable 80 years ago. A rural and farming town has been transformed into a center of industry and manufacturing which retains still the humanity and charm of an older time.

Over the past 80 years, The Plymouth Mail has grown and changed with the community. Starting as a small weekly published with equipment now regarded as antique, it is now printed twice a week with the aid of modern computerized machines.

Outer changes, yes. But the inner core of the paper has remained the same over 80 years: Concern for the Plymouth community.

Over the coming years, we pledge, this concern will remain unchanged.

It will be a constructive concern, alert to help the growth and promote the future of the Plymouth community.

Moreover, it will be an active concern, not merely a passive expression of good will. The discussions concerning the C & O railroad tracks, initiated in July by The Mail & Observer, give some hint of the ways we hope to demonstrate our active concern for Plymouth.

Most of all, this concern will be vigorous but fair and impartial.

he Plymouth Mail & Observer will play no favorites. It will criticize when it thinks criticism is needed, praise when praise is called for, but always in an attempt to be constructive.

It will attempt to live up to the key ethics of a newspaper: That there is a difference between fact and opinion. Both are needed, but facts belong on the news pages and opinions belong on the editorial page.

It is only by being of true service to the Plymouth community that the Plymouth Mail & Observer can live up to the stern and honorable heritage of its past.

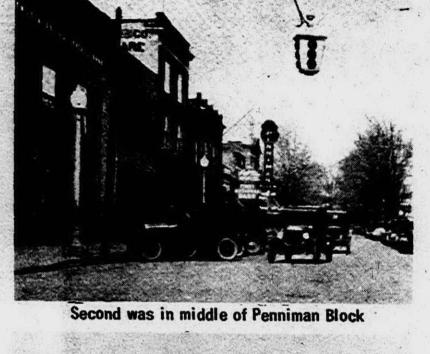

It's an exciting challenge. On the occasion of our 80th anniversary, we look forward to meeting it.

decades away from the automobile and paved streets and such things as radio, television, airplanes and satellites were just figments of the imagination.

But as these things developed to elevate our way of life The Plymouth Mail was on the job to bring the news of the developments to the area.

Through the years since that first issue The Mail has survived four wars, two great depressions, has guarded the scene through the rise of union labor and the great advancements of mass production and the elevation of the country's school system.

THE MAIL was less than a decade old when Teddy Roosevelt lead his forces up San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War. Following that triumph The Mail recorded the events of World War I, World War II, the Korean war and the present disturbances in Vietnam. It also was on hand to bring the glad tidings of good news -the triumphal conclusion of wars, the highest economy the nation ever has known and the rise of the United States to a world power. When J.H. Steers pioneered with The Mail, it was located in what was known as Punches Block, opposite City Hall on Main Street. The building has long since burned down.

From that location it was moved to the Taylor Block, just across the street from the Post Office on Penniman Avenue. From there it was moved to the present building at 271 South Main Street and it has been a beacon in the community through the years. The first time the young paper changed hands was in January of 1894 when Steers sold it to M.F. Gray. Gray later took in a partner named Baker, and finally split with him and attempted a paper of his own that had a short life.

THE ORIGINAL Mail changed hands again in 1899 when F.W. Samsen, and his son, L.B., purchased it and retained possession until October 31, 1930 when it was purchased by the Eaton interests who also were publishing the Northville Record. Sterling Eaton left Northville to take charge of ed in Northville

Plymouth Ministers Adopt Statement On Civil Rights

The Plymouth Ministerial Association, at its meeting last Tuesday, adopted a statement of conviction on open housing and civil rights.

The statement was adopted with a unanimous vote of all present. These included 11 in attendance and five other clergymen who weren't able to attend.

Those clergymen who signed the statement are: David Strang,

In the years following this move Sterling founded a paper called The Livonian in the City of Livonia. The elder Eaton then passed on and Sterling took over as Editor of the Mail until 1956. In that year he sold both papers to a group beaded by Paul M. Chandler. After five years the paper again came into possession of the Eaton family and it was held until June of 1964 when Russell Strickland purchased the interests and operated The Mail until June, 1966 when Philip H. Power purchased it. Since then The Mail has been expanded and recently began publication twice weekly in the

On the heels of the new wage contract between Plymouth School District teachers and the Board of Education, salary increases for members of the administrative staff were authorized this week and made retroactive to July 1.

Except for Supt. James H. Rossman, who came to Plymouth July 1 under a threeyear contract calling for a salary of $21,000 per year, all of the 27 individuals who hold executive positions will get pay boosts averaging more than $1,000 each.

As with the teachers under their new working agreement, each of the administrative staff also will be given a $3,000 life insurance policy, with premiums to be paid by the Board of Education.

Steele Examination Reset For Oct. 5

A request by defense counsel for a three-week postponment of the preliminary examination of Harry T. Steele, Jr., on a felony charge of cruelty child was granted to a "reluctantly" Thursday by Judge John C. Seiler in Romulus Justice Court.

Attorney Frank Prebenda, who represents Steele, a resident of Plymouth Township, told the court he had been retained only last Thursday and was "inadequately prepared.".

He said he had not been able to conduct a proper investigation on behalf of his client because he had been blocked from obtaining medical records concerning the condition of five-year-old Michael Steele, the lad who has been a patient in Children's Hospital since being thrashed by his father Aug. 26.

Judge Seiler declared he would subpoena medical records, if necessary, and told Prebenda he would grant the adjournment "with reluctance" to permit proper preparation of Court by the Women's Division the case for the defense.

Judge Seiler occupied the bench in a pinch-hitting role for Romulus Justice Felix F. Rogalle. The new examination date was set for Oct. 5 in the same court.

Thursday's session in the tiny courtroom adjacent to Rogalle's personal law office saw the prosecution ready to proceed with two physicians and three Sheriff's Department officers present as potential witnesses. In view of the postponement, none was called.

At Children's Hospital late this week a spokesman said that young Michael's condition is somewhat improved.

A Sheriff's representative stated, however, that the boy still is unable to communicate as to his version of what took place the night his father whipped him with a belt, the boy falling unconscious a few moments afterward in the family's home at 9033 Elmhurst. A formal petition to make the youth a ward of the court has been submitted to Juvenile

Leaders Offer Aid In Planning

A new high in enthusiasm for planning the future of Plymouth was reached last Wednesday morning when 64 of the business, civic and industrial leaders attended a meeting at breakfast time--6:30 o'clock.

For more than two hours every phase of the city's needs was discussed and, in many cases, solutions were offered. "We wanted to find out if there was any real enthusiasm for planning the city's future," Carl Pursell, President of the Chamber of Commerce, commented, "and this is the result. It is the greatest display we ever have had."

His remarks were echoed by Harold Fischer, Director of the Area Planning Commission, who served as the moderator of the session in the Meeting House. The meeting was sponsored jointly by the Chamber and the Area Planning Commission. and both groups were more than pleased with the results. In fact, there was general feeling that the attendance will be even greater at the next meeting on Wednesday morning, September 27.

Despite the early hour, those in attendance rejected an idea for a later meeting. "This is fine," they chorused, "as it gives us time to get to our places of business -- and still take part in the planning." More than a dozen items were listed as the problems now confronting the City. They ran from the long waits at the rail crossing to the lack of public wash room facilities in the downtown area. With them, parking was given a high place, and the proposed downtown traffic loop came in for considerable discussion.

U-220

The group was divided into small divisions for a discussion period and each was asked to list potential problems. Most agreed on the crossing, parking and the others, but the surprising thing was that all agreed that the future of the central business district lay in the direction of a Fashion Plaza.

This sort of plan has been offered by a developer some time ago, but was passed off slightly. Now, it is being discussed on a serious basis.

Some definite direction will be taken at the next meeting.

The Stroller

The bright sun had begun its slow descent in the west. The shadows over Kellogg Park were lengthening and the annual Fall Festival was coming to a close when one of the greatest moments in the long history of the event arrived.

The judges had just finished the task of rating the exhibits in the farm produce show in the big tent and the winners were being announced.

When the call went out for Mrs. William Kelly, 11449 East Side Drive, as the winner of the old fashioned flower arrangements, an elderly lady stepped to the front in almost

Only a week before she had been told of the contest that was part of the festival for the first

"I never won anything in my life," she confided to friends who had urged her to enter an

They finally convinced her it would be fun to have an entry. So she got one prepared and saw that it was taken to the right place. She smiled as she placed it on the table and said, "There it is-but it won't win anything."

Now, the judging was over. She had been declared the winner and she stood there in disbelief.

Finally, she clutched the blue ribbon and the $15 prize that went with it and walked away-the most surprised and the happiest woman in the Park.

It was a big moment for her. It was one she will never forget.

And it was one of the most emotional moments of the entire festival-far removed from the noise and the glamour of the food and entertainment activities.

It is such moments as these that add to the lore of the event that is now becoming one of the big celebrations of the year in lower Michigan.

FISH STORY WITH A SPLASH

Some of the city's leading piscatorial experts were discussing their experiences the other morning and trying to outdo each other with fish stories.

After listening for a short time Doc Salan spoke up and with a smile a mile wide, he remarked, "Ever hear of a fellow falling off a limb while fishing?"

No one answered for a moment. Then he said, with a certain degree of pride, "I did."

Seems he was fishing and something happened that caused his guide to ask him to grab hold of a limb of a tree that was close by. He did. Then, as he was hanging on, a motor boat went by. The waves caused an up and down motion on the boat while "Doc" was clutching the limb. As might be expected, the pressure finally broke the limb-and Doc, limb and all, hit the water. What an experience for a fisherman!

WHILE OTHERS SLEEP

The Stroller got to wondering about several things the other morning and then attempted to get answers. One of the thoughts was how much corn was left over Sunday evening at the Fall Festival and what was done with it.

Checked with Wilford Bunyea, a big amiable lad, who teams with Don Lightfoot in such things as corn raising.

"We had about 17,000 ears when we started," he said, "and I guess we must have had a couple thousand left at the finish-that is, if they sold 12,500 chicken dinners."

Then he chuckled a bit over the phone and said:

"But we got rid of it in a hurry-and at a good price."

Where could that much corn be sold on Sunday evening or Monday?

"Don took it to market and sold it first thing Monday morning. And because of the cold snap that stops corn from growing, the market was up and we got a good price."

Imagine this-and in the dead of night.

WHERE IS THE CANNON NOW?

After reading last Sunday's issue of the Mail & Observer and learning that several teen-agers had attempted to steal the cannon in Kellogg Park, some folks think they got away with it-on a second try. For the cannon is missing.

Don't be alarmed. The DPW crew has taken it to the City garage to await a decision on where to re-locate it. Its old position was on a spot marked for a gas light.

So, a new location must be found-possibly will be on the other side of the park. Nice to know it wasn't stolen.

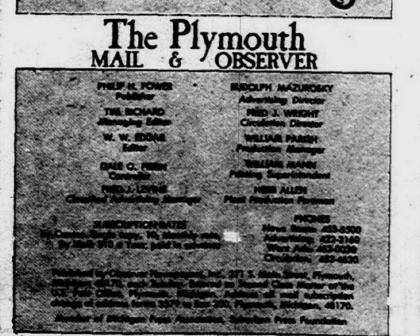

DID YOU KNOW:

When Judge Dunbar Davis held the suspect who is charged with robbing the National Bank several weeks ago, over for court, it recalled what happened in another such robbery.

The man who tried it 30 years ago was sentenced to 30 years in Alcatraz. Can't happen again. Alcatraz is no more.

* * * * THOUGHT FOR THE DAY:

It is always well to remember "you meet the same fellows coming down that you passed going up."

Success Of Fall Festival Places More Emphasis On Area's Biggest Question

Despite the fact that the annual Fall Festival again proved an outstanding success and shattered all records for attendance in all categories, it left one burning question:

If the residents of the entire community can join hands and work in unison to bring about such a fruitful event why can't the same thing be done on the political level and thus eliminate the barrier between the City of Plymouth and Plymouth Township?

This is a question that has been bandied about for years and has been shrugged off by the powers that be. But the time is about here when it has to be answered and the petty jealousies and ambitions eliminated.

When one can visit an event such as the Fall Festival and see city and township officials working side by side at some refreshment stand—and enjoying it—there is cause to wonder why there is a rift when it comes to government.

And when one sees the leaders of business and industry standing over hot stoves for hours and helping to serve the public at the festival there again is cause to wonder why some pressure isn't brought to bear so that all hands can join in helping the Plymouth communityall 54 square miles of it-to reach its potential.

The evidence of being able to work together made its presence known long before the festival. In the planning stages there was a unity of purpose. This came to light forcefully when all hands joined in cleaning the old P&A theater to make it presentable for the Flower Show that was sponsored by the Garden Club as part of the Festival.

Some of the leading citizens in the area willingly-and enthusiastically-joined hands in scrubbing floors, wiping down walls, and moving seats in the theater. Never once was there the thought of a barrier between the city and the township. There was a job to be done-and they did it.

Had the question ever been raised about the division of benefits and whether the township would obtain a larger share than the city, it possibly would have sounded the doom of the festival.

Yet, it is that question of the division of benefits that is helping to keep the two units of government separated.

It has come up in the discussions involving the projected Community Center. It even was mentioned in planning for the annual July Fourth parade.

political barrier between the City of Plymouth and the Township were allowed to stand and retard the distribution of benefits. It would be a downright calamity.

No longer can it be said that the two groups cannot work together. The Fall Festival, among other things, has proven that they can.

Just why they won't cooperate at the government level is one of the big questions that should be answered—shortly.

Crime In Old Plymouth? Not A Bit Of It

By George Mack Adams

I see by The Plymouth Mail and Observer that crime in Plymouth Township has increased 200% in four years compared with an increase in population of only 50%. I presume that it is far less in the City of Plymouth itself. Let us all hope so.

As MAIL-OBSERVERS read the interesting article by Fred DeLano they probably said to themselves "It wasn't like that in the old days." And it wasn't, thank our stars, or we wouldn't have known what do do under such circumstances.

In this day and age of modern conveniences when almost everything around the home is controlled by a switch except kids: when gas, electricity and lung and air pressure have taken the place of kerosene lamps and candles, those who have come upon the scene in the last half or even quarter of a century, might well wonder how Plymouth folks got along, or even existed, way back in the 1890's when I was a kid with all the ambitions, yearnings and "what-the-hellis-ahead-of-me," that most kids have today.

WELL, I AM still here 70 years later to tell you in all seriousness and with the utmost honesty, that we got along pretty well, and were a damn site happier, individually and collectively, than people are today.

For one thing there was practically no crime of any kind in those days. Crime as we know it today was practically non-existent. Plymouth had a little jail but it was unusual to hear of anyone being in it, Every now and then an obstinate or obstreperous tramp or hobo was locked up on a blizzardly winter's night but that was about all.

As I look back now, it seems to me there was a reason for this. The Mammas and Poppas in those days brought their children up to respect their elders, get as good an education as was possible under the circumstances, go to church and Sunday school every Sunday and to mind their P's and Q's as we used to say, which interpreted by a teen-ager meant: "Be courteous and friendly ALWAYS, respect other people's do not know it all; don't drag your feet; keep your nose, your ears and your mind clean; treat other people as you would like to be treated, and make friends of everyone, and, having made them hold on to them by being friendly, respectful and interested. Rember they are entitled to their opinions, too." And for these reasons and perhaps a few others, everyone got along fine with his friends, his neighbors and the world in

OUR ONLY LAW enforcement officer in the late 90's was a Town Marshal who was paid the munificent salary of a dollar a day, 365 days a year, He had practically no vacations and over-time was then not known. Wages in general were low, the Markham and Daisy air rifle factories were the main employers here at that time and their wages varied from 90¢ to $1.10 a day, and paid only when a man worked. Almost every kid had an air gun in those days which shot a little BB pellet that was used principally against crows, that particular time, but no sparrows and stray dogs chas- soap. The job was considered ing stray cats. When these a political plum as all city, harassed animals were in short state and government jobs are supply we set tin cans up on so considered today, and the first to knock it off.

As a result there were no hold-ups, no robberies, no muggings and no rape or murder cases. Hardly anyone in Plymouth--or elsewhere--in those days even took the trouble to lock their doors, day or night. In other words we weren't crime oriented. We thought of crime as something that maybe happened in Detroit, Chicago, or New York, but never here. People didn't need to lock their doors for most folks were like the soap that floats -- 99 and 44/100 per cent pure. By pure I mean honest.

I have raked my mind many times to conjure up the man that was the Town Marshal at a fence to see who would be job changed hands with the spring election and friends were rewarded for their sagacity.

THE ONLY REAL criminal case I recall was when Ed. (I think that was his first name) Pelton, F. & P.M., night railroad telegrapher and station agent in North Plymouth, was shot and killed while at work one night. The Peltons lived next door to us on Starkweather Avenue and I was therefore more acquainted with that because of being a neighbor and a up-and-coming young reporter on the Plymouth Mail.

My story as I remember it was a humdinger with big headlines that would attract a hobo that couldn't read or write. I still am a firm believer in big headlines for big stories on the front page, for the front page of every paper is that paper's show window.

James Wellman, of Penniman Ave., is proud of his collection of unusable tools. He works with the finest modern power equipment, but on the walls of his workshop hang primitive wooden tools which early craftsmen used to fashion today's heirlooms.

Some of the early implements were used for the basic necessities of the pioneers' lives. There are augers, and heavy mauls used in barn building.

Old barns were built by simply putting the sides together, drilling a hole with an auger, and driving a square peg through the holes to keep the boards together.

The cumbersome maul used to drive pegs into wood has now been replaced with metalheaded hammers.

But even in pioneer days farmers and merchants prospered and began to want nicer things. Elaborate molding and woodwork began to be used in the Victorian houses around Plymouth.

Today's molding is made with power-driven equipment James Wellman cherishes the old planes used to make decorative molding of the 19th century.

"See," said Wellman, taking one of the planes off the wall, "each of these planes is shaped differently inside, according to the kind of molding it would form."

Cabinet makers spent long hours planing the wood by hand Slowly strips of wood were shaped into the elaborate moldings found on old furniture and in old houses.

Along with his antique wooden tools, Wellman has also collected early metal implements made by blacksmiths. Mrs. Wellman has hung many of the iron implements around their living room fireplace.

'You can always tell pieces that were made by a blacksmith," said Wellman pointing to a dark compass-like tool. "That divider was used for marking metal and, since it was made by hand the two prongs aren't even. One prong is longer and thinner than the other.

"Here are some tongs used by blacksmiths to hold metal that he put into the fire. The blacksmith wanted the handle to be round but the only way he could do that was pound it with an anvil, so it is really more flattened out than round."

Many of the old iron pieces were found in barnyards all rusted and pitted but they have been cleaned up and are now a part of Wellman's collection of tools used before every house had electricity.

The Top Side of Life

A few days ago a high school girl said to me, "I'm about ready to graduate, and I have never met a Negro or even talked to one." She said she thinks segregation is wrong, but she has never been given the opportunity to decide for herself. She wants that opportunity. The only problem is that she must drive at least twenty miles to get it.

Right after that conversation. a woman who had just moved into Plymouth told me, "If our family had known before we bought our home that Plymouth was all-white, we would probably have gone somewhere want her children to continue growing up in a sheltered kind

Last week, a Plymouth City Commissioner said that if the city ever adopted an open housing ordinance, we wanted to be sure it protected the rights of white people.

I am not sure which "rights" he was talking about. The implication was that no law should be enacted which forced (whatever that word means) a white resident of the community to sell his home to a potential Negro resident if he didn't want to. But that is else." She said she didn't the subject for another column. free citizen of this country

The point of this bit is that there are some white people who believe their rights have not been protected.

The high school girl, who has been raised in an allwhite community, has not had the right to know Negroes. Somehow that right has not been given her. Perhaps by her parents. Perhaps by the schools. Perhaps by a community which has for too long remained white.

The parents think her rights have been violated, too. She hasn't had the right to choose a home in a community which provides all the services a might reasonably expect.

As long as that family continues to live in Plymouth, a right they do have, the rights of their children to grow-up free from prejudice is limited simply because there are no Negroes here for them to meet and know and understand.

The City Commissioner was right, I guess. We need to make certain that the rights of white people are protected.

In addition to police and fire protection and other community services, we need to find a way to protect the rights of our citizens who like it here, but think something (or someone)

Dehoco Tries New Project On Prisoner Rehabilitation

By MARGARET MURAWSKI

The five people who sat around the lunch table at the Detroit House of Correction were staff members of Project Return, a rehabilitation program for men in the prison. "This is the first rehabilitation project in a local prison as far as we know," said the Rev. Stephen Knight, an Episcopal priest, who directs this program which is funded by the Catholic archdiocese of Detroit.

"Eighty per cent of the prisoners in Federal institutions have served sentences in local prisons," continued Mr. Knight, as the smiling waitress, an inmate of the women's prison, distributed

"Many prisoners have a low expectation of life," said Hall. "We try to help a man realize his dignity and potential.

"Suppose a man says he wants to be a jet pilot, but he realizes that is an impossible dream. Maybe we can't help him get a job as a pilot.

But we might be able to get him a job driving trucks at an airport, so he will be around things he loves. Then he will get both personal and economic rewards from his job." The staff stresses the importance of finding a man a place in society that will increase his self-respect. "I can find a man a job," said job coordinator Alice Bowers, "but if the counselor hasn't done his job, the man will work one week and quit."

"A long complicated job application form can be a frightening thing for someone without much education," she said. "If necessary I tell the men things like fix your teeth, take a bath, polish your shoes. They don't realize how much these help when applying for a job." Most job applications also ask about prison records, something the men often lie about for fear they won't get

The staff urges them to tell the truth, and often Alice helps out with a phone call to the personnel department.

After the men leave prison, their relationship with their counselor continues on a voluntary basis.

"Many of the prisoners haven't had a chance to establish adequate relationships with other people before," said Hall. Most of the staff members are on leave from other higherpaying jobs. Besides Mr. Knight, Hall, and Mrs. Bowers, others on the staff are Charles Carboneau, Jerry Vincent, Richard Humphrey, Mark Sisco, and Terry Cuson.

Off The Road, Death By Design

There's a story about a dentist who examined a patient, shook his head sadly and said: "Your teeth are all right, but those gums have to go."

What Congressman Jack McDonald is saying is that our roads are pretty well designed, but the roadsides are incredibly dangerous.

Highway designers have neglected, McDonald says, what can happen to the motorist who, because of accident or his own negligence, suddenly leaves the highway.

"In hearings before the special sub-committee on the federal aid highway program," the Redford Republican said in a House speech, "we have heard experts testify that some 16,000 lives could be saved (out of 50,000 highway deaths in 1966) if the off-road portion of the highway was designed and constructed with the same degree of safety as the roadway itself."

So McDonald introduced a bill giving the Department of Transportation a congressional mandate to issue directives requiring better design of the area off the road. The penalty for failure to comply: Withholding of federal highway aid.

WHAT KINDS OF HAZARDS was Mc-Donald talking about?

 "Guardrails that constitute hazards because of improper location or installa-

 "Guardrails that protect highway structures from damage rather than motorists from death." "Culverts and bridge piers so located as to kill people who, perhaps momentarily, lose control of their car and leave the road." "Ditches and cut-and-fill banks so steep and so close to the highway as to make it virtually impossible for a driver to avoid overturning if he leaves the traveled lanes." "Unnecessary signs which can kill motorists who run into them." • "Trees and other highway beautification projects placed in such an indiscriminate manner as to pose hazards."

BUT AREN'T THOSE hazards in other states? Are Michigan's highways that bad? Well, we took a trip with the congressman one day last week, starting from his 19th District office located in downtown Farmington. Within five miles from the starting point, McDonald pointed to one example after another of what he called poor off-theroad design.

They were things one had seen dozens of times but never really noticed. "It's so obvious when you think about it," McDonald said.

"I could show you 400 examples between here and Lansing. Or take the Edsel Ford and Lodge freeways in Detroit — the light poles are battered all the time, and you can always see the last two or three days damage that they haven't repaired yet.

"In one year, 16,000 deaths could be averted by better design off-the-roads. In Viet Nam, we've had 12,000 war deaths in four years.'

is within inches of death. They own all this prop-

'This is a good attempt at a guard rail, because it doesn't go into the bridge pier. But the pier is much too close to the road. The cost of this is only slightly less than to use a stronger steel and a wider bridge span. That would keep the pier away from the road." Scene I-96 at the Haggerty Road overpass. Farmington Township.

'Two faults here. First, here's a sign within a few feet of the roadway. The sign is embedded in concrete, and this type of sign costs about $2,000. A break-away sign would be cheaper, or the sign should be well off the road. "Second, a rail had to be put up to protect the sign-not the motorist. The front of the guard rail (toward camera) has a knife-edge. It should be flared and the edge buried. I have a picture in Washington, D.C., where over 75 feet of this kind of rail have gone into a car." Scene: 1-96 in Farmington.

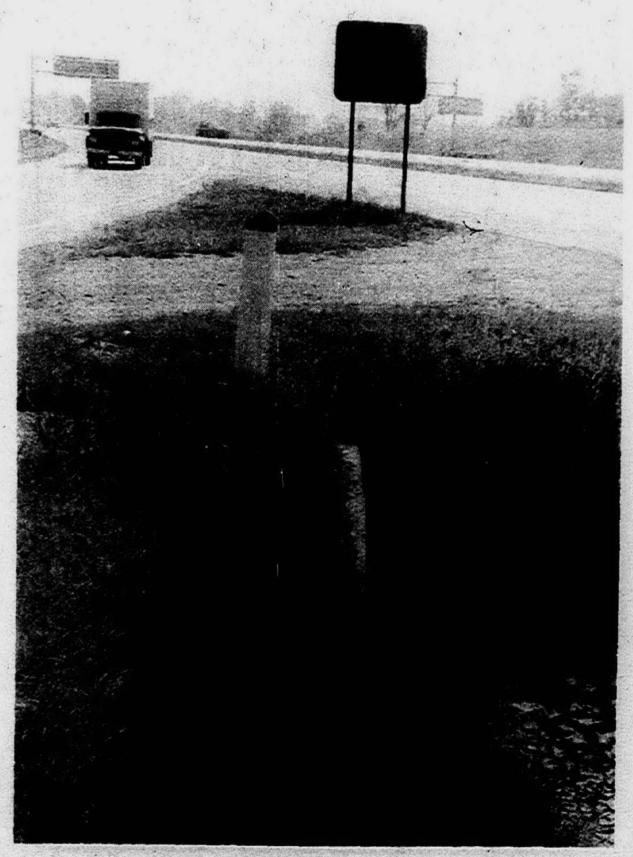

"All these light poles along Farmington Road going into town are within two feet of the road; they're all too close. Look! This one here has already been hit." Scene: Farmington Road between Nine Mile and Grand River.

Left: "This bank is too tip over. If there were a gentler slope, the car would come down onto the shoulder again without tipping." Scene: 1-96 in western Farmington Town-

"Here's a glaring example of misuse of a guard rail. A driver going off the road would be forced by the rail into this concrete abutment. The rail should go out to the front of the abutment, not into the side." Scene: I-96 in Farmington.

"Terrible. That sign is right out where it can be hit. That post can also be hit. That drain (lower right) ought to be filled up and tiled so that the driver wouldn't go into the ditch." Scene: I-96 at Novi exit.

observing sports

Sports are infectious.

There's nothing like a winner - and sometimes a loser - which can send an entire community into hysterics.

Take the current Tigers, as an example. They have just about everybody in the state mad - talking about the greatest pennant race the American League ever has known.

There are those days - like a week ago Saturday - when just about everybody went daffy the way the Tigers rallied to beat Chicago. Then there was the next day, when all of us, including the Tigers, figuratively died. What sports can and often do outmatches just about anything else you can think of. Consider those moments when the Lions are up, or down. Nothing, next to the Tigers' double loss at Chicago, could match the feeling around town after the Lions wound up on the short end of the score in their exhibition game at Denver. Imagine being beaten by an American League team! Well, it happened to the Lions, and all their fans reacted in groaning fashion.

THE ATHLETIC IMPACT on schools - colleges and highs - is no different than what you have in the professional phase of operations.

When there's a winner at Michigan Stateand when isn't there one? - the students whip frantically around the Spartan campus.

What happens in the arts, the sciences, the languages, etc. . . . seems to matter little. The BIG thing is what Duffy Daugherty's characters are doing on the gridirons.

In contrast, when a college team goes sour for a few years, the students take the situation to heart. They burn or hang the coach in effigy. Moving into the prep ranks, a championship team in football and basketball, especially, seizes the spotlight from everything else. It's particularly true if your school's basketball team should happen to reach the semifinal or final round of the state tournament. In many smaller areas, whole towns and villages have been known to close shop, except for maybe a policeman or fireman, to troop to East Lansing to watch the heroes in action.

BOASTING SUCH a winner provides something to talk about for weeks, months and even years.

It makes it easier for school officials, desperately in the need of extra money, to get the folks to kick more dollars and cents into the pot. All of this isn't meant as a slap at the music departments, the theater groups, the algebra groups, or what have you. Needless to say, they all contribute to making our schools what they are.

But we can't deny that a star in math, or in physics or in home economics or in science doesn't stir the school, the community and even the state the way a triple-threat quarterback on the football team might.

Or a prep basketball the likes of which Dave DeBusschere or Reggie Harding were at Detroit Austin and Eastern, respectively, or Lou Alcinder was at Power High in New York City.

ONE SUPPOSES that's just the way the cookies drop.

But sports - be it football or golf or swimming or basketball or hockey - personify action. We, as a nation, are action conscious.

Most of us are constantly on the move. The automobile has a lot to do with it. So have airplanes, like the one our better half buzzed from Detroit to London in the other afternoon in under seven hours.

Hence, you perhaps have the answer why why we scream with every big hit stroked by a Tiger these days . . . cry when there's a strikeout with two or three on . . . or an error . . . Athletes require strong hearts. So do their the championship flight. Ironically, on the final day, Miss Gaymer wasn't low. Her 56 for nine holes took second behind Shirley Adams with a 55. Faye Reinardy had a 58 for third place in the championship

IN SPECIAL contests, Miss Gaymer connected for the longest drive in the championship flight. Mrs. Nelson was tops in Flight A, while in the other flights, Mrs. Custer and Mrs. Howarth and Pam Demeres whacked 'em the farthest. Jeannette Davies was elected new president for 1968, Verna Kendrick was named secretary and Wanda Hall treasurer.

Millie Phillips was named as rules chairman while Mrs. Nelson again will be in charge of prizes and publicity.

It's Franklin By 33-0

It was a walk-away for Frankfootball game Friday.

The Livonians, showing much of the power that brought them a share of the Northwest Suburban League championship last year, made a shambles of Romulus, 33-0, to get off on the right foot.

Franklin took command from the opening kick-off.

Never relinquishing the ball, the Livonians marched from their 40 to the Romulus 32. Then Gary Sica slipped through on a dive play, cut to his right, and instantly was in the clear as he went all the way to put Franklin in front 7-0.

By halftime, it was 13-0 for Franklin, as Bob Santilli capped a 45-yard march by plunging across from two yards out.

Sorrows Coach In Big Spot

Herb Coleman will have his work cut out when his Our Lady of Sorrows' football team 1 ushers in the 1967 season, hosting St. Rita at Farmington High School at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Sorrows won the divisional championship last season, then triumphed in the Second Division semifinals before losing to Wayne St. Mary's in the title encounter.

Coleman, who has replaced Bud Webster as head Sorrows coach, must replace last year's entire starting backfield. However, the Sorrows team boasts a strong line, led by Frank Walsh, a 243-pound tackle, who barring injury figures to rank as one of the area's top performers.

MIKE BRIOLAT is slated to direct Sorrows from quarterback with Tim LaFond, the last of a great contingent of brothers, also working in the backfield. Tim's brother, Cliff, won All Catholic and Suburban honors last season.

Round two of the prep schedule for the area's public school teams will find Bentley at Dearborn next Friday afternoon at 3:30 p.m., while Clarenceville hosts Milford, Farmington goes to Plymouth, and North Farmington visits Kettering in Friday night action.

On Saturday Franklin entertained Redford Union at 10 a.m. while Stevenson had a home date with John Glenn at noon.

Kaline Gets

A Franklin High School junior Saturday presented Detroit Tiger star Al Kaline, whose fan club she heads, a trophy and gift for his runner-up finish in a 'King Tiger" fan club contest.

Livonian's Gift

Janice Rosenberg, 31395 Hathaway, and co-president Val Fischino of Detroit made the presentation in Fan Club Day ceremonies at Tiger Stadium.

The gift, paid for from club dues of members all over the country, was a sterling silver tie pin and cuff links.

Bob Rogalski, whose brother Gary was one of the big stars of last year's team, smacked from the five-yard line for the pay-off touchdown. The fifth Franklin touchdown resulted from another long march, this one covering 40 yards. On a series of power plays, Franklin reached the Romulus two from where Bill Hellstein smacked over. Rogalski plunged for two of the extra points, while Dennis Hopkins booted the other one. Jeff Trick, Mark Belchenko and Santilli were the big guns on defense for Franklin.

Bags Ace

William Bobier of 3028 W. Seven Mile in Livonia enjoyed his visit to Northville GolfClub. A six-year veteran of the links, Bobier scored the first hole-in-one of his career on the 130-yard, fourth hole, with a No. 8 iron. He had an 89 for his round.

Oakland GOP Chief Hits Huber

Oakland County Republican Chairman Joseph R. Farnham has responded to statements made by State Sen. Robert Huber (R-Troy) at the first meeting the conservative GOP splinter group the senator formed.

In answering Huber's statement that "the split in the Republican Party in Oakland County is not a Huber-Farnham quarrel, as many have tried to present it," Farnham said he was "delighted that the senator is coming around to our point of view.

"For the past 18 months, Huber has told the press and public that I was the only obstacle to party unity," Farnham said. "We have maintained constantly that the split had nothing to do with me and that Huber would fight any county chairman who did not agree with him, as has now come around to our point of view, that shows some progress," Farnham said.

Gardening

Fall Work Is Leisurely

By BETTY FRANKEL Special Writer

It's time for the gardener to bring in any house plants that spent the summer in the garden or on a porch or patio. Before bringing them in, clean off the pots and inspect the plants for insects and diseases. There's no point in providing a warm winter home for such Cuttings can be made of geraniums, coleus, lantanas, begonias and other tender perennial plants, Many will bloom indoors in a sunny window by mid-winter, and a supply can be obtained for next year's garden. It is less successful to dig up the established plants. They suffer severe shock at the transplanting and have to be cut back sharply.

IT IS FUN, though, to dig up a few small annuals to pot for bloom indoors. They will last for a month or two, probably, before they get so scraggly they have to be discarded. Try potting dwarf marigolds. lobelia, annual phlox, and even sweet alyssum.

Surviving are her husband, Bernard D.; her mother, Mrs. Rosa Lutz of Solingen; two daughters, Mrs. James (Norma) Patterson of Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Ned N. (Annaliese) Kuehn of Birmingham; four brothers, John and Henry Lutz of Farmington Township, Theodore Lutz of Livonia, and Herbert Lutz of Redford Township; two sisters, Mrs. Hugo Petonke of Fremont, O., and Mrs. Olan Foster, of Farmington; and six grandchildren.

The gardener can provide some protection for a few favorite annuals or treasured tomato plants and have blooms and vegetables late in the sea-

Cardboard cartons, large paper bags, or old bed-sheets can be used to make "tents" over individual plants or over a small bed. Keep a check on the weather reports, and when frost is predicted cover the plants by early evening and remove the covers the following

There is much more likelihood of frost on clear starry nights. Clouds tend to blanket the earth so the warmth of the day is not dissipated.

Fall gardening is a more leisurely procedure than is spring gardening. There is more time, less to do, and the soil is in better working condition and often the weather is more cooperative. Schedule your work so it is spread out over the entire season.

this area around the middle crowded and choked can be of September. This is the aver- reworked. This is also the prime month for planting needle evergreens. Plant lily bulbs if they are available, and daffodils and the various small bulbs that bloom early in spring.

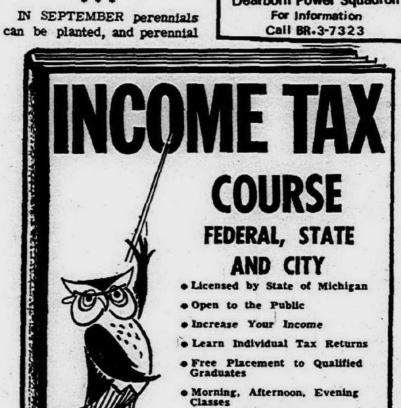

In October plan to plant hyacinths and tulips. Trees and shrubs can be transplanted when their foliage turns color and starts to fall. Roots will have plenty of time to grow still before the ground freezes.

Another chore for early October is to dig up and store the tender bulbs that bloomed in summer. In this category can be included gladiolus, canna, dahlias, and tuberous begonias.
