Students wage a quiet attack

By DARLENE STINSON

PLYMOUTH- Students and teachers in the Centennial Educational Park are quietly attacking drug problems at Plymouth-Salem and Plymouth-Canton high schools.

The attacks, launched by efforts of Drug Abuse Reduction Through Education (DARTE) teams at both schools, is channeled through free information about drugs, group counseling and "rap" sessions.

Although some students at both high schools have drug problems, Byron Richardson, job coordinator and DARTE member at Salem, stressed that drug problems in both schools are fewer than at most other high

The two high schools enrolled DARTE last February, a program sponsored by the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

Richardson and eight students were appointed to Plymouth-Salem's

DARTE team, while students, teachers and counselors were appointed to represent Plymouth-Canton in the DARTE program. The teams attended a nine-day DARTE training session, where doctors and resource persons offered instruction in group communication, group therapy, alcohol education and pharmacology.

The teams set up their own programs to combat drug abuse after graduating from the training session.

Salem's program, although just begun, revolves around pamphlets. films, lectures, group counseling sessions and mini-courses about drugs that are offered to students on a "no strings-attached" hasis.

Free pamphlets about the physical dangers and effects of drugs have been available to students in a basement room of Salem High School since September. Richardson said two or three students come in each day to obtain a pamphlet.

"I've never seen these kids before." Richardson said. "I don't know where they're coming from. We haven't advertised. We're not that far along yet. Students seem to find out about things, and, if they want information, they come here. This is a place they feel they can go where they won't be incriminated.

"Students are interested in finding out if drugs will hurt them," Richardson said, "but they don't want to find out in a way that everyone will find out about it. They're afraid to go to someone who will tell their parents."

Industry puts PCF drive on its mark

PLYMOUTH—A characteristic of Community Fund drives in the past has been the last minute contribution which has put the fund over the top.

This year's drive was no different. with the final contribution coming at 11:53 a.m., just seven minutes before the official noon luncheon close of the 1974 campaign.

Announcing that the $220,000 goal had been met, campaign general chaiman Don Fleming noted the industrial division had come through once again, providing $183,500 of the fund drive's total.

That figure is more than $20,000 above the $163,000 goal set for industry's fair share.

Fleming praised the work of the division chairmen and their fellow workers for the effort put forth, adding, "It's especially gratifying to reach our goal, because of the economic crunch we are experiencing. I can't remember where conditions have been as serious in the last 20 years."

The economic crunch was one of the prime reasons the fund drive was extended this year. Originally scheduled to end on Nov. 14, the drive was extended one week, when fund totals only hit $193,000 as the deadline approached.

Fleming was somewhat critical of the results in the business, professional and educational divisions. Receipts and pledges from the business sector totaled $14,200. roughly two-thirds of the $21,000 goal. Division chairman Charles Heidt pointed out, however that last year's goal had been $18,000 and only $10,000 had been raised. He suggested that some of the goals for the Community Fund's divisions may have to be made more "realistic."

In the educational division, division chairman James Leary, reported a total of $6,735 of a $12,000 goal. Fleming said, "It's somewhat of a disappointment to look at the response of the educational field. The educational world has a long way to go to show they really care about their commu-

Fleming quickly added that he was not speaking about all people in the educational division. "We had one group of employes that recorded a 100 per cent participation and it was a Continued on Page 3A

It's another Hall of Fame berth for Eddie

PLYMOUTH-W.W. Edgar, better known as "Eddie," to his thousands of friends in Livonia, Plymouth and the southeastern section of the state discovered he wasn't all alone when he was inducted into the Michigan Amateur Sports Hall of Fame.

Better known to many as "The Stroller," because of the popularity of his column which appears biweekly in the Observer & Eccentric, Eddie was voted into the Hall of Fame last summer and the induction ceremonies were slated for Wednesday night at the Warren Chateau in the city of War-

EDDIE, who celebrated his 77th birthday Tuesday, is the dean of the Observer & Eccentric newspapers' editorial staff. He had been honored previously for selection into the Bowling Hall of Fame and to the Media Hall of Fame at the University of Mich-

This time his many friends in the Plymouth Rotary Club and in the city and township heard of the induction banquet and decided to attend in a body as a tribute to him.

Thus, when R.T. "Tommy" Thompson, executive editor of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, stepped to the microphone for the presentation ceremonies, he had the support of 30 from Plymouth, 10 from the Detroit Women's Bowling Association and 10 from the Detroit Bowling Proprietors Association.

Eddie for years was the bowling moderator for the state of Michigan and also writes a bowling column "In The Pocket" for the sports pages of the Observer & Eccentric.

His Friday afternoon radio broad-cast has been familiar to bowlers for 20 years.

It was quite a tribute to the 77-yearold who received an outburst of applause from the audience of more than 500 as he received the Hall of Fame plaque from his newspaper associate of more than 30 years. The Plymouth delegation, headed by City Councilman Harold Guenther and State Sen. Carl Pursell, made the trip via two buses, leaving the Mayflower Hotel at 5:30 p.m. for the long trip across town. "Imagine," said the almost crying

Edgar, "All of those people came all the way over here to pay tribute to me. I can hardly believe it."

He was still shaking his head but with a wide smile when he sat down with the plaque after the presentation. A wonderful, beautiful tribute to a 77-year-old newspaperman who seems to grow younger with age.

'Bet your life' when driving

Although Michigan motorists will drive about 50 per cent fewer miles this Thanksgiving weekend than on major summer holiday weekends. their chances of fatal accident involvement are as great as during a summer holiday period, according to Automobile Club of Michigan.

"During the last five Thanksgiving weekends, a total of 141 traffic deaths were recorded," said James G. Moffat, Auto Club general manager. "This compares to 124 deaths on Memorial Day weekends. 151 over Fourth of July holidays and 138 during Labor Day periods for the same five THANKSGIVING IS an especially hazardous holiday because most motorists stay close to home, making short trips to see family and friends with a maximum opportunity to overindulge in alcohol.

"Statistics show that about 75 per cent of all fatal accidents on holiday weekends occur within 25 miles of the victim's home. Motorists apparently are lulled into a feeling of false security and become less alert in familiar surroundings."

Motorists are expected to log an estimated 350 million miles on Michigan highways during the 102-hour Thanksgiving holiday, which runs from 6 p.m. Wednesday (Nov. 28) to midtight Sunday (Dec. 1). In comparison, more than 690 million miles were traveled on state roads during the past Memorial Day weekend, 701 million miles over the Fourth of July and 627 million miles during the Labor Day weekend.

TO HELP "Bring 'Em Back Alive!" Thanksgiving weekend, Moffat suggests motorists take these pre-

• Plan trips so they begin and end in daylight. Add extra travel time to compensate for poor weather.

• Don't drive more than 200 miles round-trip if only one day is available for travel. With the 55 miles per hour speed limit in effect, motorists should allow a minimum four hours driving time for travel by freeway and five to six hours for driving on other roads.

· If alcoholic beverages are consumed, remember the "one-for-one" rule: wait one hour for each ounce of alcohol consumed before driving. · Drive with extra care when in familiar surroundings since most fatal holiday accidents happen near home. • If driving between the hours of MOTORISTS driving in downtown Detroit on Thanksgiving Day should time their trips to avoid traffic from two major events. The J. L. Hudson Co.'s annual Thanksgiving Day Parade will start at 9:20 a.m. at Woodward and Putnam. About 500,000 spectators are expected to line Woodward Avenue to watch the 45-minute parade. A crowd of 50,000 is anticipated at the Detroit Lions-Denver Broncos football game. Kick-off time 3s 12:35 p.m. at Tiger Stadium.

VELLA AND TAYLOR are science majors at UM-D and are taking the course on an elective basis with four other undergraduates.

The two part course (there is a lecture and a supplementary lab) is taught in Oakwood Hospital by Samuel Hancock, a medical physicist, and Dr. John Kim, an assistant professor of physics at UM-D.

The scientific theory of radiation is the basis of the course, and students learn how and why radiation works.

But they also learn the practical and medical applications of radiation, and this involves working with highly sophisticated machines.

Vella and Taylor have been learning how to set up and calibrate radiation machines that take X rays as well as 'burn out' internal cancerous growths and tumors.

A University of Michigan program, designed to make it easy for practicing physicians to keep up on advances in medical knowledge is now in its third year and growing.

Pressures are growing from professional organizations and government agencies for doctors to, complete a specified number of postgraduate education hours in their field each year.

Instead of requiring doctors to leave their patients and return to the campus for refresher courses, the project allows staff physicians to catch up on new knowledge in slack

At the rate of 18 per year, slide-film lectures by experts are sent off to 85 subscriber institutions, mostly community hospitals in the U.S. and Canada. The courses can also be used to instruct medical students, interns, residents and other health professionals such as respiratory therapists.

Called Media Library. the courses require a maximum of 20 minutes viewing by physicians and include a self test at the end. Only facilities needed are a slide projector, tape recorder, a white wall, darkened room and 110-volt electrical outlet.

The U-M program is fully accredited by such organizations as the American Medical Association, the American Osteopathic Association, the American Academy of Family Physicians and the College of Family Physicians of Canada.

Fire reporting expected to improve in January

A new computerized fire reporting system which goes into effect Jan. 1. 1975 is expected to provide a more complete record for the state and its 900-plus fire departments.

The benefits of the new uniform system are expected to aid all fire-related activities, including fighting techniques, prevention, fire code improvement, equipment needs and safety promotion, according to Capt. George Catton, commander of the State Police fire marshal division.

The new report, which includes 40 more items of information than the present report, was designed for computerization with the assistance of the State Police data process division.

With the cooperation of all fire agencies, it will make possible a complete statewide report every 30 days.

FIRE SERVICES in Michigan (regular, voluntary, industrial and military) have been or are being oriented in the use of the new report. Favorable reaction to its use was reported after a pilot test this year by about 25 large and small fire departments. The Michigan uniform fire report resulted from a 1973 study by a committee representing fire agencies and associations and the State Police.

The Michigan report is considered compatible with that of the National Fire Protection Association and is expected to be compatible with any future international system of fire data

THE FACILITY occupies 36 acres, formerly held by Fisher Body, and was constructed in mid-1972; it is manned by two shifts, each working nine hours a day, six days a week. The plant is closed between 1 a.m.

In midst of the auto slump,

Livonia plant eyes expansion

About a third of the employes live in Livonia, and many more live in surrounding areas, such as Westland and Garden City.

Most of the employes, such as Edward Morehead, 11413 Deering, have been transferred from the main plant on Clark, in Detroit. Morehead has been with Cadillac 24 years.

Four of the plant's foremen are women-forewomen, if you will.

There are plenty of female employes at the plant to draw into the ranks of foremen, too, such as Stevie Dunavant, a crankshaft inspector who has been with the company 24 years.

PART OF THE reason the plant can function with so few employes has to be found in the extensive use of

As an example, the Cadillac plant machines engine blocks. The blocks are lifted, turned, and finished-all by automated controls.

Other parts, such as crankshafts and connecting rods, are precisionmachined according to computer com-

Though there are fewer employes because of the use of computers, they are kept busy changing tools, inspecting the finished product, and housekeeping. The plant's immaculate appearance is due in part to a system of awards for good housekeeping. A plaque is awarded to the employe who maintains his area best, and the plaque is replaced by a sticker after the plaque is moved to another area.

That is part of the reason why floors are dirt-free, machines have no fingerprints, and there are no oil spots or litter to be found.

"THIS PLANT WAS designed to be a model manufacturing facility." says Cadillac's general manufacturing manager. H. B. ("Bud") Brawner.

"The plant is a one-floor working area concept with service facilities on a mezzanine level above the main work area. We have achieved nearly ideal straight line material flow. Cylinder blocks, bearing caps, cylinder heads, crankshafts and connecting rods are machined on complete lines, utilizing the identical process as the main plant," says Brawner.

An elaborate down-draft ventilating system removes particles from the air, so that the plant leaves the environment just as it found it.

Special wall construction with sound absorption qualities, sound-deadening aisle floors, and enclosures around high sound generating machines help keep noise to a minimum. Even so, a conversation in a normal tone of voice could not be carried on, though the plant is far quieter than most.

PLANT MANAGER BROWNE encourages good neighbor policies among his employes, most of whom he knows by first name.

Browne, a Livonia resident, is a scout leader; his children attend Stevenson High School; and he is active in the Mormon Church in Livonia. "When I first came to Cadillac, I planned to work only one year to finance my schooling," says Browne.

"I began as a hand polisher at 69 cents an hour in 1940 and stayed on ever since," he says.

Production workers are permitted to upgrade their jobs if there are openings, but most employes have been at the same or similar jobs all their lives; about the only real degree of job mobility can be found in the bicycles the workers use to get from one part of the plant to another.

Nevertheless, morale and produc-tion are reportedly among the highest of all Cadillac plants; and the Livonia Cadillac safety record is near the top.

Suggestions, customarily an indication of morale, are three times as numerous as those submitted at an av-

This plant, now 90 per cent automated, with its housekeeping teams, quality control teams, attention to detail, and concern with community and environment, is possibly a prototype of industrial plants of the future.

Unfortunately, the plant employs hundreds, and the unemployed auto workers number in the thousands.

Plymouth once boasted cigar firms

Plymouth was the home of two cigar manufacturers in the 1890s. One was the Plymouth Cigar Company, located on North Mill Street, across from the Hotel Victor. The firm, which employed several cigar makers, was still operating in 1905. In that year young Karl Starkweather attended an auction with his father at which the company put on the block a large quantity of "non-fresh" cigars.

The other operation was a one-man affair. George Springer began making cigars in 1896 in a 22x35 foot shop at the rear of his home. He lived on North Mill within a block of his chief competitor. Springer's brand names included "Our Senator," "The Plymouth Mail." "Springer's Best." "Chief Hunter." "Horseman's Favorite," "Hotel Plymouth," "Hotel Victor," and "Plymouth Belle." His cigars are said to have sold well in Northville as well as in Plymouth. Eventually Springer began to combine cigar rolling with a more eventful career-that of law enforcement officer. He became deputy sheriff of Plymouth Township in 1900 and village marshall in 1912. A one-man police force for several years. Springer evidently impressed the local citizenry with his efficiency. In 1916, the "Plymouth Mail" reported: "Spring-er's clever work has landed many desperate criminals behind the bars and the fraternity of crooks has learned that officer Springer is a good man to avoid."

Springer finally hired Charlie Thurnne to assist him in police work. No uniform came with the job. so Thumme adapted his interurban trolley conductor's uniform for use when he was on police duty. Chief Springer eventually gave up making cigars, devoted full time to law enforcement, and remained in office until 1933 when he was succeeded by Vaughan R. Smith.

One of many livery stables which ex- troit Creamery Company, makers of isted in Plymouth was opened by Czar Penny, in 1892, near the present Mayflower Hotel. Penny advertised that he had "a number of nice rigs and good horses." He made a specialty of tearning and announced that he had "a first class team for that purpose."

The Plymouth Creamery Company. organized in 1901 by a local cooperative group, was off North Main Street. east of the railroad tracks. It was near the McLaren Lumber Company, one of the oldest business firms still existing in Plymouth. Farmers came from miles around to empty their milk cans and to exchange pleasantries with creamery superintendent Matthew Powell. Matt was called "Butter" Powell long after the company was sold. About 1912, the plant became a receiving station for the De"Velvet" ice cream.

In 1908, Williams Brothers Pickle Company was operating a tomato pulp branch along the Pere Marquette tracks in North Village, near the spot where the Jolliffe Cheese Company had been. The pulp was shipped to the firm's main plant in Detroit to be made into ketchup. The company contracted with local farmers to grow tomatoes on an acreage basis. Young Karl Starkweather was one who agreed to grow five acres of tomatoes in 1908. The company paid the grower $6 a ton, or approximately 15 cents per bushel. "None of us grew rich growing tomatoes that year," Karl later recalled.

From about 1914 to 1917. International Milk Products Company had a plant in Plymouth near where the creamery had been located. The firm processed milk into powdered form.

Of the more than 3,000 cars and trucks that have been made in the United States since the advent of the auto, one was manufactured in Plymouth. Plymouth's auto producer, the Alter Company, was organized in 1914 by Guy Harnilton, F.M. Woodward and others. Operating in a 16,000 square foot, two-story building, the firm employed 100 men at peak periods. The Alter, "a medium-priced car," sold in 1916 for $685. It had a wheel base of 108 inches, was equipped with a 27 horse power motor, and had its gas tank under the cowl. The Alter was on the market from 1915 to

The latest addition to manufacturing in Plymouth in 1916 was the Plymouth Motor Castings Company. Started in 1915 by J. B. Hickey and John F. Fitzgerald of Detroit, the firm specialized in the manufacture of gray iron and semi-steel motor castings sold primarily to automobile manufacturers. The plant employed 20 men and had a capacity of five tons of metal per day.

These, and many other business firms no longer in existence, were part of Plymouth's commercial past. The wind passed over them, and they are gone.

Treasure Cay--great island getaway

By ETHEL SIMMONS

TREASURE CAY, ABACO—The opportunity to "get away from it all" is the treasure this Bahamas Out Island holds.

You can fly in luxury on Air Jamaica, a first-class orgy of drinking and dining for the three-hour flight to Nassau.

Then climb on native Bahamasair, to land at Treasure Cay's International Airport, so-called because it has one international airline that flies in, yet is so small there isn't even a public phone.

A Bahamian taxi driver will take you and your luggage on a wrongside-of-the-road (at least to Americans) short trip to "the" hotel.

ONLY ONE on the island, the Treasure Cay Beach Hotel is just two stories high and hasn't got a superabundance of rooms.

But there are lots and lots of villas, mostly owned by landlords who let the hotel complex rent them to tourists.

The hotel and owner split the rents, the hotel taking a maintenance fee and the owner getting monthly purchase payments taken care of.

The development of Treasure Cay (pronounced "key" meaning "island") centers around these real-estate sales. You may want to invest in a hideaway that "pays for itself," allowing you to vacation in your own villa at times you don't wish to rent it out.

THE SPACIOUS two-bedroom, two-bath villas have their own house-keeping kitchens and breakfast bar. Outside the doorwall is a patio with lounge furniture, but you probably won't hang around the villa much.

Just a leisurely stroll away is the beach, which has been called one of the most beautiful in the Baharnas. The sugar sand is almost white and powder fine.

The water along the three and one-half mile beach is clear aquamarine. You'll probably find yourself all alone on your stretch of beach. If you want company, there's a hotel outdoor pool, beach bar and patio dining.

Order up a Goombay Smash (rum and coconut are among the ingredients) and relax by the deep pool.

ACTUALLY, during the day you probably won't even see too many people at the pool. Clay tennis courts, golf course and marina becken the sports-minded.

You can go out in the early morning with a guide and boat for a unique experience—bonefishing. Fishermen claim the sport with these fast-moving fish is exhilarating.

Or, by charter boat you can visit one of the nearby keys. At Great Guana Key, the deserted beach has its bounty of small white shells you can discover. There's also fishing from the moored boat and swimming.

You may want to have lunch at the informal Guana Harbour Club, enjoying conch (pronounced "conk") chowder and a basket of mixed conch, grouper (a type of fish) and turtle fritters. The native food has a satisfying, fillyou-up flavor, "mon."

AT NIGHT, everybody congregates at the hotel dining room for a long, leisurely meal. You may want to try grouper (grouper fingers are served at the weekly manager's cocktail party at the pool) or huge Bahamian lobster for a main course.

The upstairs cocktail lounge provides after-dinner drinks and piano-bar entertainment. Restful close to an unhectic way of life.

Be sure to get to the International Airport at least an hour prior to departure time. Bahamasair flights have a way of leaving as much as one half hour before schedule

Apple for all seasons, happy going into a pie

West winds are blowing strongly now here at Old Arbres on the hill and all the trees around our scenic ravine are blushing their naturally brilliant tones that light the cobalt skies parallel to an inferno of apple red.

Sometimes I get a little jealous because my leaves are not necessarily the colors I want, or perhaps I'm just too picky and want nothing but the very best so I, too, can be admired the year through. In the spring, with all that enervating competition is the most difficult time of all.

The Montmorency blooms are right in front of the entrance and become so pushy around May that I dread the longer days to come at that time of year, and I'm so thankful when eve-

Now don't get me wrong, the Montmorencies are beautiful and I'm tickled pink they are doing so well, but does there have to be such harmony and success with her entire family on both sides of the entrance gate?

LOOK AT Forsythia with her long sensuous arms formally bound into a fortress of bright yummy yellow blooms (even though they are last year's color, she still can be intimidating.)

The French lilacs with their tiny purple flowers are so beautiful, and their foreign scent perfumes the air into a freshness so reminiscent of youth. It makes it impossible after people see the glorious coloration that the month of May brings, to bare face.

Life seems so insignificant to me. Oh, why can't I just pale into a kalei-doscope of unimportance!

June and July aren't much better but the intense heat of August makes tiny droplets form like organic orbs (notwithstanding the May trauma, however)—and soon rain with its natural goodness of iron will give the vital substance required to go on and form delightfully delicious apples.

I CAN SEE clearly now that the people are showing definite interest in

Yes, sir, that's what I am, an island of attraction, with my crown of crimson rubies emanating an aura that will entice Michiganders into a gastronomical festival.

Isn't it great to be alive and want-

I think life is swell; all of us have our good times and I know mine is now. Hard work, good nourishment, a stable diet of fresh fragrant rain kept me going the summer through to only now convince me that there are no short cuts when you want to achieve perfection.

THE NORTH winds are beginning to blow and I'm beginning to bare my fruit as I root here surrounded by a horizon of sunburst flavors knowing soon that all will be gone. . .gone the blossoms that illuminated this picture place into a fascinating French bouquet. . .gone, the times trees would shade the sun for picnic fare on the grape-green grass below.

The finale of good friends and good times in the warm summer sun are gone with the west winds. But my succulent, saccharin snow-like fruit and charismatic absence will live. . . all winter long.

THE APPLE OF MY EYE PIE

8 medium apples, 9 even better (delicious) peeled, cored sliced
1/4 cup brown sugar

1/2 tablespoon cinnamon
1/4 lb. sweet unsalted butter
3 tablespoon apple butter

Toss all the ingredients into a large bowl like you would for a tossed salad. You would probably have better luck if your hands were used to replace the spoons.

(The moisture of you hands will soften the butter and sugar into a sauce.) Pour into a 10" pie dish of glass, that has been lined with dough. Sprinkle with crummy dough topping and bake on a rack, in a low heat oven 325 degrees F. on the bottom shelf for about an hour. The crust will become a gold-

This pie crust is not like the run-ofthe-mill doughs. I discovered this recipe in France at the Ecole Hoteliere de Paris. They call it Pate Brisee.

While Thanksgiving Day is steeped in tradition, many of the old time customs have changed through the years.

We no longer ride out into the country to visit our favorite farmer to purchase a turkey and then go through the barbaric method of preparing it for the festive board.

The Stroller shudders just to think of the manner in which the birds legs were tied together, before it was hung over the wash line in the yard with its head dangling toward the ground.

Then the strongest of heart would grab it by the neck, cut off its head and let it hang there for the bleeding process before the arduous task of removing the feathers-always a painstaking job.

In our modern times we wouldn't think of any such custom. Instead, the turkey is fully dressed when purchased and oftimes it is already stuffed.

IN THE PASSING years a glamorous character also has been removed from the scene. He is the "carver" who always made quite a show of standing at the head of the table, surrounded by his family, and gracefully carved the golden brown bird.

So deft were some of these carvers that not a sliver of meat— dark or white—was left on the carcas.

The mere mention of the "Carver" brings back memories of The Stroller's grandfather, who spent his later years in the role of a professional veteran of the Grand Army of the Republic. No matter where he was you could be sure that he was telling the exploits of the GAR. That is, no matter where he would be you could bet that he was telling about the many hardships suffered at the Battle of Gettysburg-except on Thanksgiving Day.

On this day—one he always looked forward to—he was the main character at the dinner table, and he played the part to the hilt.

He would attire himself in the long white apron and the white cap of a chef. Then he'd have the roast bird placed in front of him while the diners oh'd and ah'd at the sight of it.

THEN, LIKE A GREAT swordsman he'd lift high the emory spear on which he'd sharpen the knife. When this was finished he'd start carvingand no. one ever did a more artistic We'd all pass our plates and announce our choice—white or dark meat—and he would manipulate that carcas until he had, just the part he wanted sliced. What an artist!

And when the carving finally was done the old "General" would take his place at the head of the table, say a bit of thanks to have the family around and then extend the wish that we all enjoyed the meal.

Oftimes he didn't eat very much. He was just satisfied that he had done the job again to everyone's satisfaction.

He's long gone from the scene and will be thinking giving Day.?

with him went much of the old custom carving of the bird at the table. Today, the carving usually is done in the kitchen, where it makes not a bit of difference if the carver misses a joint, or rips a leg off the bird.

Often this amounts to something akin to mangling by the inexperienced. But the diners seldom are aware of this as the platter is brought to the table.

THIS NEVER would have happened in grampy's day. And while he was a great turkey carver, he also was a temperamental artist, too.

There was one Thanksgiving Day when he visited one of his daughter's homes for dinner. And when he wasn't asked to carve he rose from the table, took his coat and hat and went home.

Is it any wonder that The Stroller will be thinking of him on this Thanksgiving Day.?

On behalf of the Plymouth Branch of the American Association of University Women, I would like to thank the communities of Plymouth and Canton for their support, participation and contributions to the 1974 UNICEF drive. The $900 collected will help feed, educate, and treat many needy, starving, and ill children of the world.

I would like to extend a tremendous thank you for a job well done to those youths and adults who canvassed the area. It is great to see such interest and enthusiasm displayed by the com-

Carl Stoddard writes

An ode to little Joe

Folks. this is Joe.

Joe, meet the nice folks. I think you might like these people. Joe. They're like you, only a little older and most of them know how to read. I guess that ability to read puts them into a classification of adults or near adults.

But anyway, a lot of these adults and near adults are worried about you, Joe. They see that you're young and happy and not afraid of much—except maybe the dark.

And they're worried that some day you won't be so happy. They're worried that the world and all it's problems will drag you down. It really worries them, you know.

OF COURSE, you might not understand it all now. I mean, you don't read the papers or listen to the news.

For instance, you don't really know about pollution or inflation or depressions or crime and its resultant paranoia or drugs or lost values. And Joe, you don't know what it was like growing up in the machine age; the age of the flying machine and the automobile and the machine gun and the wireless and the advent of nuclear overkill. You take all those things for granted.

Not only that, but you'll probably accept genetic adjustments, deep space travel, computers and a patterned society as easily as you are accepting color televison, transistorized radios, micro- wave ovens and space flight.

You accept all that because you're part of the electronic age.

NATURALLY, we're a trifle concerned that you will be faced with the responsibility of handling this electronic world. We know you'll have problems. Of course we had problems without the machine age, too.

So Joe, I think you should tell these people not to worry too much about you. Tell them that you can handle the future as well as we have handled the future handed us.

And if that doesn't convince them, Joe, just point out that you and your counterparts can't do much worse than we have.

And Joe, keep on smiling.

Charles Osgood says media must present good and bad news

By SHERRY KAHAN

Charles Osgood used the example of a specially-made mirror costing $650 to explain to his Livonia Town Hall audience the function of the news

"The mirror was so expensive because it had a special handle," said Osgood, a CBS radio newsman. "By turning it, a person could change the way he looked. He could make himself thinner or more attractive.

"That is what people want. They don't want the mirror to show their OSGOOD POINTED out that it is the same way with the news. "You don't like to hear that there is going to be difficulty dealing with inflation and other problems," he said. "You don't like to hear bad news. That is why the media became unpopular during Watergate.

The function of a news organization is not just to relay what the elected official has to say. The newsman has to get more than a public relations view. He has to find his own

While Osgood often handles latebreaking big news on his shows, he has found that his listeners frequently respond more to the human aspect of the news.

"The story I did that got the most attention concerned a girl who showed up for her graduation in a purple dress," he said. "Her teacher sent her home because the girls had been asked to wear blue outfits. The fact that so many people expressed an interest in that story and mailed me letters to send on to the girl suggests things that happen to everyday people are also news.

Also news was a story Osgood told about a man in Iowa who lost his coin in a vending machine and then took out a gun and shot it.

THE BROADCASTER received both a good laugh and a round of applause when he coined a new word about the incident. He called the incident a case of vendicide.

One of his stories happened to Os-good himself. What seemed to be destined to become a frightening incident what could have become a race riot in Patterson, N.J.

Stepping out of his news vehicle, he was approached by a very menacing group who demanded to know if he was the from radio station.

Osgood said he was. "Do you know cousin Brucie?" asked one of the men, causing Osgood to breathe a long sigh of relief. Osgood also related a number of stories and comments about celebrities in the news and political fields. About Ron Nessen, the new presidential press secretary, he recalled this

"DURING THE march from Selma, Ala., I rushed up to interview Martin Luther King after a speech," Osgood

"While we were talking I suddenly felt someone jab my side hard with his elbow. When I turned around I found it was the TV man from NBC trying to terminate my CBS radio interview with Dr. King.

"For a while we dueled with our elbows, forgetting that we were being simulcast - he on my radio and I on took place when he was covering his TV. That was Ron Nessen."

RADIÓ NEWSMAN Charles Osgood exchanges a greeting with Jane Payette, a member of the advisory board of Livonia Town Hall

About newsbroadcaster Edwin Newman, Osgood said, "There is no better interviewer in the business," adding "he's my idol."

About Harry Truman, he recalled placing a eall to him at the Truman Library in Missouri only to have the ex-president himself answer.

Osgood was once part of a covey of newshawks who used to cover Truman's early morning strolls, often walking backwards in order to face the former president.

He sheepishlyly admitted that he had once asked Truman, "What do you think of your grandchildren?" The plainspeaking president then said, "What kind of a question is that?"

TO HIS AUDIENCE Osgood laughingly agreed it was not an outstanding

From the women in his audience Osgood received a wave of applause when it was announced that he is a new father. In an interview at lunch he said that he and his wife participated in the LaMaze childbirth method which stresses special education about childbirth for the couple and breathing lessons for the wife.

"I was present for the whole thing, including the actual birth of my daughter," said Osgood, "I wouldn't have missed it for anything."

Among questions asked him was one wondering why the press did not pursue the incident at Chappaquidick as it did Watergate.

"I thought it was very well covered considering it involved the junior senator from Massachusetts," said Os-good. "In fact, it was covered so well that Kennedy is no longer a viable presidential candidate.

"THE REASON Watergate was coverered so much longer was thay it involved the president and there were all kinds of hearings and developments that kept coming up."

When pressed further as to whether he believed the media had gone to the bottom of the matter, Osgood replied, "I don't think so."

Osgood admits that his job writing and broadcasting three news segments a day (heard locally over WJR), each of which is six minutes long is tension-filled, mostly because he writes for a deadline.

To relax he leaves his home in New York City for a sail on Long Island Sound. He also plays tennis.

Tender loving care comes to Livonia schools

In two of Livonia's elementary schools, small students are soon to be in for a shock. They're going to discover that the school secretary is no longer the school nurse.

Bruised bones and cut fingers will now be taken to the previously unmanned school clinic where they will be looked at by a volunteer health

She will be there because of a program introduced by LOVE (Livonia Office of Volunteer Energies), which is operating under a federal grant to initiate volunteer programs where a need exists. Twenty-one women recently took a LOVE-arranged eight-hour course in first aid, earning an official Red Cross apron to take to their jobs in two elementary schools and one junior high school in Livonia.

THE SCHOOLS participating in this pilot program are Wilson and Randolph elementary schools and Emerson Junior High School.

In their Red Cross classes, these volunteers learned how to minister to minor cuts and bruises and to identify symptoms. They reviewed the taking of a temperature and the reading of a "Half of the healing process is calming the fears of the child," said Lois Wallner, on the day of her "graduation" ceremony. "If you can do that then half the battle is won.'

Mrs. Wallner noted the school secretary used to have to leave her desk to take care of the sick children. "While she was attending a hurt youngster in the health room, her

Mrs. Wallner has had RN training but explained that the job of the volunteer aide would not involve medica-

"Just helping them gives you a feeling of self-satisfaction," she said. "That's enough for me."

MRS. SHEILA OGG, another volunteer, estimated that half of the mothers in her neighborhood work. She became interested in the program because her son was once hit in the stomach with a ball "and there was no one there to take his temperature."

"Now someone will always be there 'during the lunch period when most of the accidents occur," she said. "There is no way some mothers can get to school and we have to have someone who can stay at school with a sick child. Hand-holding helps a lot of problems."

Like the other volunteers, Joy Boase, mother of seven, has spent many hours of her spare time as a school helper. She was then recruited by the school for the medical pro-

JOYCE CANCILLA was pleased to learn in her preparatory course what services are available in the community to help people.
"My kids think it's great that I'll be working in the clinic," she said. The principal of Emerson Junior High believes the plan is "a beautiful idea and so far it is going fine."

Ferl Thomas said, "I feel more comfortable knowing that a student will receive quick attention if he is hurt or sick," adding that previously aiding the sick child " was often held up by the bureaucratic system."

"We had to wait for a counselor or secretary to handle the situation," he said. "Now a mother can receive the student, find out how sick he is, call home if necessary and then quickly check him out."

"The volunteers came in during a small flu epidemic so they were loaded with people. They have already been a big help."

JOAN DUGGAN, program director for LOVE pointed out that a group of registered nurses stands ready to backstop the volunteers in the schools should help be needed.

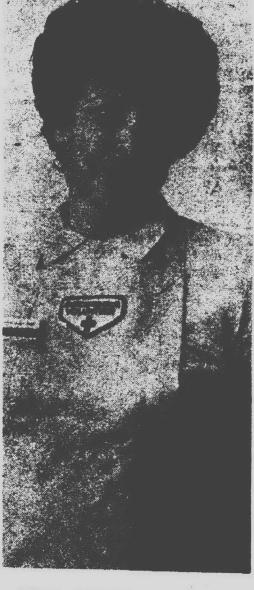

"They also will evaluate health records and give depth to the program," she said. "They taught the volunteers and once this pilot program runs a few months and the problems are ironed out, they will teach other volunteers as the program is expanded into other schools.

"Our women are trained in such things as temperature reading but they also have learned to identify drug users and to know what they can't do. Our course stressed confidentiality. What happens at their school is confidential and this is a

Four registered nurses have volunteered to work with the program, including Pat Price, who is its coordinator, Judy Wright, Sharon Galindo and Betty Tatigian, wife of Harry Tatigian, city attorney. Betty Fairham, Livonia Red Cross representative, also cooperated with the program.

Questioning a man's contributions

Rev. Lester Kinsolving's

Long after he had become a millionaire several times over, comedian Bob Hope continued his entertaining of U.S. troops in Vietnam, a contriburade of millions of Gis overseas durog World War II.

No one during World War II ever juggested that Hope either loved war or was an instrument of President Receivelt's foreign or military policy. But the long U.S. involvement in Vietnam was so controversial that numbers of militant clergy critics concluded that Hope's annually spending Christmas trying to bring some cheer to lonely soldiers was almost a war crime.

Hence, by the narrow margin of three votes, such clergy were able to oblige the Protestant Council of New York to reverse its previously-announced decision to award Bob Hope the annual "family of man" award.

HOPE GOOD-NATUREDLY responded to this monumental insult by remarking that he had already received a great many awards.

For some reason or another, there was no such reversal when this award was assounced as being made to Presidents John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, as well as Dr. Henry Kinninger, none of whom were prominent as Vietnamese war protest-

Rockefeller will be confirmed: Griffin

LIVONIA-Things aren't as bad as they seem, U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin (R-Michigan) told the Livonia Chamber of Commerce at Madonna College The senator even thinks that vice president-nominee Nelson Rockefeller will be confirmed, and admitted that's a rosy outlook.

Griffin himself had questioned the former N.Y. governor during the Senate Rules Committee hearings before arriving in Livonia for the chamber speech.

HIS QUESTIONS had centered on Rockefeller's personal wealth, and "the book" written by Victor Lasky about Arthur Goldberg, Rockefeller's Democratic opponent in 1970. "I think Rockefeller will be confirmed by most of the Senate Rules Committee," Griffin told the Observer & Eccentric following his speech. Griffin would not commit himself to agreeing that the economy is in a state of recession.

"We have a psychological problem in this country, because people think the economy is going downhill. Things will improve when we start President

(Gerald) Ford's 31-point program. "We've got to sell cars and we will. as soon as interest rates come down and cars become easier to finance."

GRIFFIN'S SPEECH was very nearly an analysis of the American psyche.

"We suffer in this country from a horrible guilt complex," he said. "We have a sense of gloom and doom, a self-destruct syndrome."

He had some unkind words for the news media. "The network media," as the senator was careful to add later. "What people know first hand in this country, they think well of. But what information is gathered by the media they think ill of. "The network news philosophy is 'good news is not news'," said Griffin, paraphrasing writer Ben Wattenberg.

Again referring to Wattenber, the senator stated the press corps has "perfected techniques of reporting the bark on trees, but not the forest."

Griffin cited Wattenberg's thesis that there is "a great divergence between appearance and reality in this country.

"THERE IS a difference between mere rhetoric and real guilt," said the senator. "We're told that our society is sick, people are alienated, the gap between rich and poor is widening, that God is dead.

"But in reality despite our real economic problems, our real purchasing power is fantastic. The average income has nearly doubled in the last 20 years, the income of blacks has gone up considerably, the number of women in the labor force has increased steadily, college enrollments have doubled in 12 years, our work patterns have become more flexible. and there are only six per cent unskilled in our work force," said Grif-

"The real facts are at sharp odds with the rhetoric of despair and failure," he concluded.

"The real America is an unprecedented America of real social progress. Americans are pleased with their personal lives and expect their futures to improve. Yet the outlook has been gloomy.

"AS WE look at our lives, we say there is something deeply wrong; we're deeply pessimistic. We believe the country is going to the dogs. President Ford has said that there is a kind of 'self-destruct' attitude prevailing," Griffin said. "Why are we hurting ourselves?"

"I am interested in what people think of Congress. But Congress competes with the used car salesman and the garbage collector for level of pres-

"And yet, most Americans believe their Congressmen are doing a good job; because most Americans really know their own Congressmen," he said.

"I am of the conclusion that our domestic malaise lies in our media system, which undermines progress. Politicians thrive on coverage and our media thrives on conflict. By kicking or criticising the President, by being controversial, a politician can get coverage; a shoot-from-the-hip politician makes a better show than does the thoughtful, inarticulate politician.

"WE MUST demand higher standards from both our politicians and our media.

"We must do more about the network monopoly of news. I am not advocating a monopoly, but I have more faith in the local stations than I have in network executives," the senator

Inflation woes hit animal lovers

By DENNY COFFMAN

There has to be a recession. Why? Because Westland residents are trading in their big dogs for little

Ray Sowards, manager of the Animal Kindness Center, Newburg at Marquette in Westland, says the price of dog food has gone up and this has affected pet-lovers' choice of dogs.

Because the animal center has to feed the dogs in its custody, it is also feeling the economic pinch, and even recycles its trash bags, something no dog haven can do without.

THE CENTER is always busy, with a full waiting room almost any time of the day. But in recent months they've become even busier than "One reason is more persons are moving into apartments and condominiums which forbid pets. So they have to drop the animals off here," says Sowards.

Don Don Dennis, Westland's dog warden, has his office in the center which also serves Garden City, Dearborn Heights, and Livonia.

Dennis points out the center is getting an increasing number of calls about wild animals besides dogs and cats running loose.

He blames the influx of such animals as racoons, skunks, snakes, and deer upon the increase in apartment construction.

"Natural wooded areas used to provide shelter for the wild creatures," says Dennis. "But apartment construction has taken away most of the trees that offered natural refuge, and driven the animals into more densely populated areas."

THE ANIMALS ARE either picked up by Dennis and taken to the center,... or hit by passing cars when they wan-, der out on the roads.

"We try to pick up the animals and drop them off in a wooded area, but. there are fewer wooded areas."

Biggest problem animals are racoons and skunks. Racoons climb into chimneys, but skunks offer another nuisance.

A pet dog may scare a skunk and, when the skunk responds in its usual manner, the dog brings the smell into the house.

Not only do wild animals bother domestic animals, but it works the other way around.

Friday, the Westland office responded to a call that a goat was being attacked by two German Shepherds. The goat was the pet of a Westland resident and was tied in the yard.

The stray German Shepherds attacked the pet goat, which fought the ' dogs off but became exhausted by the

Because the residents were not at home, Dennis had to bring the goat into the kindness center for protection. And there it sat, waiting for its owners.

It's legal to own a farm animal, such as a goat, in Westland, if the homesite is at least a half-acre in ...

But Dennis will try to persuade the goat's owners to build a fence to protect the animal.

Unusual animals are all in a day's work at the center, which has rounded up snakes, lizards, horses, rabbits." and you-name-it.

Another form of "wild" animal that poses a nuisance is the wild dog or

ROAMING DOG PACKS are a threat to other animals and small children in Westland. Unfortunately, it's easier to figure out where they come from than to get rid of them. New construction is partly to blame.

When a dog-owner moves into an apartment or condominium, he must get rid of his dog or cat, because apartments don't allow them.

Where does he take the pet? "Out in the country, of course," says Dennis. "He places the dog in the car and drives out to a secluded area, opens the car door, then drives

"What happens, though, is the dog. joins with other dogs to form a pack and roams the area in search of food. They're extremely dangerous to small children."

The domestic cat gone wild can be almost as troublesome as the dog. Cats breed like crazy, according to my image. "I'm the guy in the black hat to petowners as it is."

Often, the only image the dog warden presents is of the man with the net, snaring Fido or Fifi, and carrying the darling off to heaven knows

In fact, the dog warden is being placed in the position of having to protect the pet from the owner.

"I think 80 per cent of the people who own pets have no business owning pets. They lack the know how to feed and water a pet. They don't realize there are tests and shots that need to be given.

"And they don't realize that a pet needs love and attention."

DENNIS BELIEVES that petowners ought to be licensed, just as " their pets are, after being trained how to raise a pet.

"I'd much rather show people the reasons for laws, instead of having to write tickets. But I guess if you can't listen, then you have to pay."

Dennis would just as soon do without the paperwork that writing tickets causes, too. He has file cabinet upon file cabinet of citations and com-

If an owner's dog is picked up and boarded at the center, the owner may end up paying for a ticket, shots, and impounding fees.

So, by not taking the time to license his dog, the owner may have to pay the center $40 to remove the dog from the center. Licensed dogs are returned to their owners quickly and generally there is no fine involved.

A Tartar bid

In 1974, Wayne State University QB Ed Skowneski will bid to become the first Tartar to lead the team in rushing in consecutive seasons since the great A.J. Vaughn turned the trick in 1965-66-67, the first year as a tailback. Skowneski rushed a record 854 yards

Turf Tips, Quips

By Doc Minard

Just a week ago it didn't seem possible that Hazel Park would drop Sunday racing for the remainder of the season, but that's exactly what happened.

After watching attendance and wagering drop each of the past four Sundays, the Hazel Park management took a good look at the situation and decided it would be better to go dark on Sundays rather than pay overtime at the rate of 134 to all mutuel employ-

The track could afford to pay the start of the Sunday operations when Wilson, who was one of the big reathe handle was up around $1.3 million sons for the approval of Sunday racbut then the weather changed and so ing. did not pick up the option last

Wagering dropped from a high of $1.4 million to slightly more than $800,000 while the cost of operations didn't drop much at all. The mutuel clerks union has a contract that calls for double time on Sundays when the handle is more than $1.2 million and 134 time when it falls below that fig-

Now Wilson has had a chance to see Hazel Park hold Sabbath programs in good weather and bad and knows that they can be a big boost to wagering when the conditions are good and can be a disaster when the weatherman

After two rather poor seasons. Wilson isn't apt to be receptive to demands for double time in February. March and April when Michigan weather is unpredictable. On the other side, the union made it quite clear last spring that it wouldn't accept anything less than double time.

Somewhere between the DRC track in Livonia and the Hazel Park plant in Hazel Park, the union negotiators changed their minds and did accept less than double time.

Unless the legislature acts to give the thoroughbred tracks a bigger share of the mutuel handle, then it appears there is slight chance the DRA will be in any better position than it was last spring.

As much as he would like to have Sunday racing, which he fought so hard to get. Wilson has to use common sense and decide whether it will all be worthwhile. It will be interesting to see what develops when he returns from Florida in mid-January to start making plans for the 1975 meeting and for the meetings with union negotiators.

FROM NORTHVILLE DOWNS, where Jackson is operating a harness racing meeting until the end of the year, comes word that Ms. Nanette Slavin Rakieten, who succeeded her late father. Leon A. Slavin, as president and general manager of Jackson Raceway, will have the usual Turkey Day goodies next Thursday.

It has long been a tradition for Jackson Raceway to have a dinner for the barn area help. drivers, trainers. grooms and their wives and children in the late afternoon and then modestly priced dinners for patrons in the early evening.

That practice will be continued this year, according to Ms. Rakieten. Dinner will be served for the barn area folks at 5:30 p.m. in the grandstand

An Open Letter To YOU The Concerned Public

Nov. 25, 1974

In the Greater Bloomfield / Pontiac Area

This space could be used for a picture advertisement of a Volkswagen product. Instead I am writing this open letter to express clear facts of my automobile business.

I know you are probably considering buying a new car or how long to keep your present one. But, if you are like myself, you are concerned about inflation and today's economy.

As an automobile owner you should know certain facts. You should know that your present car is at a peak trade-in value, and that Autobahn Motors has new products at '74 prices. This means that MOW is the ideal time to trade your present car in on a new Volkswagen.

"* There are only two premises that are tenable as to the future. We are going to have either chaos or recovery. The first assumption is foolish, because if chaos comes nothing will maintain value, neither bank deposits nor gold. Since this is an impossible contingency, it must therefore be predicated there will be recovery.*" With this recovery there will be inflation and prices will rise. Therefore, if your family is in need of an automobile I urge you to purchase one now at our lowest prices.

We at Autobahn Motors pledge our complete and total effort to satisfy your automotive needs whether it be the purchase of a new or used car, or the service of your present Volkswagen.

Sincerely

Paul E. Carrick Provident Autobahn Motors Inc.
