Teacher bargaining still 'far apart' on money

With school set to start in less than three weeks, negotiating teachers and officials in Plymouth-Canton Community school district find themselves "pretty far apart in terms of money," according to Tom Cotner, chief negotiator for the Plymouth-Canton Education Association (PCEA).

A year ago, PCEA ratified a two-year contract. The first year stipulated a wage freeze. Provisions were made to reopen negotiations on salaries and the school calendar for 1983-84.

Talks resumed in May, and recently a calendar was adopted. The latest developments entail a district request for language changes in the contract regarding the school day.

"They're interested in language beneficial to them which (presently) are guaranteed for a year. We told them we could accommodate to an extent some of them," said Cotner.

"But the money difference is so great that we asked them to explore the possibility with the board of education of two-year agreement where we would be free to talk about some language changes and could be a little more optimistic about settling on a salary schedule."

Neither Norman Kee, Plymouth's assistant superintendent for employee relations, nor Cotner would elaborate on proposed salary or language adjustments for fear of jeopardizing progress.

Negotiations are on hold until at least Monday when Superintendent John Hoben is expected back in town. Cotner said he expects things to start happening Aug. 22.

THE DISTRICT is willing to talk about an additional year, said Kee.

"When we meet again we hope to be in a position to have more information and to be able to talk about a year extension," he said.

Kee expects a breakthrough Aug. 24 or 25, "or sooner if we can get more data on our potential for 1984-85. We need to try to estimate the state equalized valuation (property tax assessments and the revenue they produce) and state aid for next year so that we have something to talk about."

However, with the first day of school fast approaching, the teachers' union is becoming increasingly pessimistic about reaching a settlement prior to Aug. 30.

"As far as the general tone of negotiations, (the district) has been accommodating in some things... but our concern is the differences between us may be insurmountable," said Cotner.

Doctor's shooting death linked with Islamic sect

By Arlene Funke
staff writer

Why was 36-year-old Muzaffar Ahmed gunned down Monday night in his Canton home?

How is Ahmed's death linked to a deliberately-set fire at an Islamic temple in Detroit where two men were trapped and killed in the blaze?

And how are these incidents connected to the attempted firebombing of a home in a far east-Detroit suburb?

Canton Police believe the acts are related and stem from a struggle within the Ahmadiyya sect, an Islamic splinter group. The slain physician was preparing to run for president of the organization, police said.

"There appears to be a dispute or a power struggle within that organization that has prompted (events)," said

Canton Police Chief Jerry Cox. "The basic cause, we don't know. It could very well be an organized effort."

ACCORDING TO reports, the following occurred within a roughly 3½-hour period Monday night:

• Muzaffar Ahmed, an anesthesiologist at Wayne County General Hospital, was shot five times and killed in his home on Courtland in Canton. Ahmed, a native of India, was secretary of the sect.

• Someone tried unsuccessfully to firebomb the home of the treasurer of the sect, Laseq Butt, who lives in Clinton Township on the far eastern fringe of Detroit.

• The Islamic temple with which these men were affiliated was set afire. Police found the bodies of two men who had apparently been trapped in the blazing building. Fire accelerants were also found.

Police believe one of the men, 27-year-old Joseph Cain of Akron, Ohio, killed Ahmed about three hours before torching the temple on Wyoming.

Police found the bodies of Cain and Calvin Stanley Jones, 36, of Detroit in the building, where they apparently were trapped by the blaze.

Witnesses found on the bodies which had identification of the gun used in the Ahmed murder, Cox said. Ballistics tests will be performed by the Michigan State Police.

The case began unraveling about 9:45 p.m. Monday, when Canton police responded to a report of a shooting on Courtland.

Murder startles neighbors

By Arlene Funke

Muzaffar Ahmed, 36, an anesthesiologist at Wayne County General Hospital, was shot to death Monday evening in his home on Courtland in Canton.

Courtland is in Pickwick subdivision near Lilley and Ford.

Police said the victim, secretary of an Islamic sect in Detroit, may have been caught in a bloody internal struggle within the religious group. Ahmed was a native of India.

Phones have been ringing and neighbors have clustered in groups to talk about the murder, according to Verna George, president of the crime prevention Neighborhood Watch program in the subdivision. He says he has been fielding phone calls from curious and concerned residents.

"There have been a lot of questions," George said. "People wanted to know if it was a family (dispute) or drug related, or something involving the neighborhood. Nothing like this has happened in the neighborhood."

NEARBY RESIDENTS know little about Ahmed, who recently moved to the area with his wife and a son, around 3 years old.

"They moved in about mid-June," said Lona Leach. "They are very private people. It's all very strange."

"Their little boy played with our children," added Jean Stachura, another neighbor. "They didn't really come and mingle."

The shooting occurred around 9:40 p.m. Monday, according to reports.

"I was in the back of the house, on the deck," Leach said. "We thought the shots were firecrackers."

TWO CHILDREN, 13-year-old Robert Darr III and his sister, Laurie, were standing on their driveway. They reported seeing a man in a blue jogging suit run from the house and jump into a white car waiting at curbside with a driver.

The children provided police with the vehicle's license number.

Moments later, neighbors heard Ahmed's wife and son screaming. The neighbors rushed to call police and the fire department rescue unit.

Family members told police a man had come to the house and spoke with Ahmed about "religious views" moments before the shooting. The physician was dead at the scene.

Ahmed had been employed by University Medical Associates, a group of physicians who staff Wayne County General Hospital. According to reports, Ahmed was born in India and educated in Pakistan. He completed his residency at Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center in Chicago.

Prior to his current position, the physician was affiliated with Wyandotte General Hospital. He became an American citizen in 1982.

"It's unfortunate," said John Kolosvary, assistant administrator for University Medical Facility. "Dr. Ahmad was a real benefit to our staff."

Wait for intersection widening ends

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

A promise that was made by the county to aid Plymouth in widening the most famous intersection in the city — the crossing of Mill Street and Main Street — is now being kept after a 10-year wait.

The intersection, a driving hazard in many respects during the rush hours because it peaks on a bit of a hill, is being widened to five lanes all four ways. A left turn lane in the middle will ease rush hour traffic.

When the promise to widen the intersection was made the city agreed to share the cost, and has repeated the offer over the years. But the county never started work. Each time there was no money available for the project.

No exact date had been set for the completion of the project, but it will be finished in the next month or so.

The intersection has a historical significance: it was the end of the toll road when travel was with horse and buggy.

The Plymouth Plank Road, which often is referred to as the toll road, was chartered on March 5, 1850 and was the site of Toll Gate 4.

It operated from 1851 to 1873. On April 29, 1941 a toll gate marker was placed near there by the Sara Ann Cochrane Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

With the promise from the county to improve the intersection the stone marker was moved. But work never began, and the stone was put away.

At that time, former mayor Harold Guntter asked the city commission for permission to have the stone marker brought up to date and placed on a piece of city property at the rear of the Plymouth Historical Museum.

The shift was never made but the stone is reported to be still in good condition. It is no doubt will be placed at the proposed new site when the famed intersection is widened.

Through the years many plans have been offered for the improvement of the intersection. Among the things suggested was a gazebo that would act as a guard against reckless driving. It was to be copied after the gazebo that has worked so well in Marshall.

Now that county is keeping its promise after 10 years, the traffic will be handled much better and the relocation of the old stone that marked the end of the famous toll road may become a reality.

The county is also widening the intersection of Mill and Ann Arbor Trail. And this summer the city will be paving Main Street from the Mayflower Hotel west to Byron (near Plymouth Glass, almost to Ann Arbor Road).

Michigan Bell workers on strike at the Plymouth office on Ann Arbor Road confronted another worker from Bell's downtown office Monday before letting her cross the picket line. The woman told the striking workers, members of the Communications Workers of America (CWA), that she had been ordered to report for work at the Plymouth office.

Hanging up on Ma Bell

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

Workers from the Plymouth Michigan Bell office on Ann Arbor Road are among the 675,000 operators and technicians on strike across the nation this week.

The Plymouth workers, members of the Communications Workers of America (CWA) Local 4015, walked out at midnight Saturday when their contract with Michigan Bell expired.

The strike came shortly before the planned break up of the American Telephone and Telegraph (AT&T) Company's Bell System. The Jan. 1 break up is part of an anti-trust settlement with the U.S. Justice Department.

Job security — in view of the impending divestiture — along with wages are among the list of issues to be settled.

"They're doing nothing for our job security," said Sharon Rowland of Garden City. "They're telling us to pay your own money and go back to school."

Rowland, an operator at the Plymouth office, also said working conditions for operators need to be improved.

"When a call comes in, we have to handle it and get it off our board in 25 seconds," she said.

"Three-quarters of the people here are on written or verbal reprimands for that (not getting calls off in 25 seconds)."

"They want us to be courteous, and they want us to be accurate, yet the time to do it is going down. You're timed for every second."

"That's why the customers wonder why they're not getting the service they're paying for," Rowland said.

The Plymouth office houses some 500 employees, of which 100 are long-distance operators, said Greg Gordon, a media relations manager for Michigan Bell.

Although Gordon wasn't certain of the 25-second limit, he said "there are performance standards as there are in any business which handles large volumes."

During the strike, work at the Plymouth office is being handled by management, he said.

"By now, people would agree the strike is having some effect on operator service," Gordon said.

Besides the job security and working condition issues, the CWA and Bell System are also at loggerheads over wages and benefits.

"Because of our productivity, Bell made $7.2 billion last year. Now they want us to pay a large percentage of our Blue Cross," said Doris Titus, the Plymouth office CWA steward.

"It's not like Chrysler. Bell made $7.2 billion and we want our part of it — we worked for it," Titus said.

Currently, a top-scale technician makes $1.65 per week, while a top-scale operator makes $389 per week.

As of Monday, the company's last offer would have limited wage increases to 3.5 percent a year for the next three years for experienced workers. Unexperienced workers would receive a one-time raise of $2.50 per week.

Included in the offer was a cost-of-living allowance of three-quarters of the annual increase in the Consumer Price Index.

"They're just playing games," said Dave Cuzzort of Westland. "They just want concessions like the other companies."

Pen and ink have bonded Kitty Morley (left) of London, England, and Canton's Lu Theodore in friendship for 36 years. The two are visiting face-to-face for only the second time since they were introduced as teenagers by a mutual acquaintance who served in England during World II.

Pen and ink cement their friendship

By Arlene Funke
staff writer

Lu Theodore and Kitty Morley have been friends for 36 years, but they've been in each other's company only a few times.

Theodore, a Canton resident, and Morley, who lives near London, England, became "pen pals" when both were teens, just after World War II.

The friendship stuck, overcoming time, distance and change. Through their letters, they have shared the joys of love, marriage and children. They have fretted over health and economic turns.

During the past few weeks, it has been Kitty's thrill to visit her longtime friend in Canton. She and her husband, Peter, have been staying in the spacious Theodore home in the Pilgrim Hills subdivision off Napier in northwest Canton. (The Theodores formerly lived in Westland.)

"It's a lovely experience," Kitty said. "It has been more or less a lifetime dream to come to America."

The only other time the friends have met was during a brief visit 10 years ago at Kitty's home near London.

Lu's husband, Chris, a physical education teacher in the Wayne-Westland School District, busies himself with kitchen chores while Lu and Kitty talk about their friendship with a reporter.

IT'S EVIDENT these women cherish their friendship. Why has it endured?

"The love of each other, I suppose," Kitty said. "There is something special there. We have grown up together."

"We both had humble beginnings," Lu added. "My family got Goodfellow packages and hand-me-down clothes. We're both family-oriented."

Like many other English children, Kitty and her sister were evacuated to the countryside during World War II to escape bombings. Earlier plans to come to the United States were dropped when a passenger ship was torpedoed in the Atlantic.

The two women were introduced, so to speak, by a mutual acquaintance who had served in England during the war. The women — around 15 at the time — exchanged letters about boys, movies and songs.

Both married young, Lu at 18 and Kitty at 20.

"Honestly, Kitty, I was so glad to hear you were getting married, so you and Pete could be as happy as Chris and myself," exclaimed Lu in a 1951 letter.

MOTHERHOOD KEPT the women busy. Kitty worked as a seamstress. Lu, a self-described "late bloomer," obtained a teaching certificate and began teaching business courses at Kennedy High School in Taylor. Lu's letters and beautiful, hand-painted Christmas cards were full of apologies for not writing more often.

"We're going to meet, and that's all that matters," Kitty wrote in 1971, reflecting the hopes of both women.

The chance came about 10 years ago, when Lu accompanied her mother on a trip to Europe. The two friends nourished their friendship during a six-day visit at Kitty's home.

The current trip has been even better, because the pair has had more time together, visiting Lu's neighbors and friends and touring the area. Lu and her husband, Chris, threw a Hawaiian-style luau party for their British guests.

"Everyone has been so friendly," Kitty said. "It's been wonderful."

Following a trip to Disney World, Kitty and Peter will board a plane for London.

One thing is certain: The friendship between Kitty and Lu is stronger than ever.

Roll for research

Roller skaters unite to fight cancer

'Be a Good Skate'... a roller skating benefit for the American Cancer Society, will run this Sunday afternoon as skaters from all over metropolitan Detroit stream through the streets of downtown Birmingham.

Skaters ranging from pre-schoolers to senior citizens are invited to participate in the Cancer Society's 1988 Roll for Research skating party.

Skaters can pick up registration forms and sponsor sheets at the Skatin' Station Joy Road in Canton, Riverside Arena on Plymouth Road near Levan in Livonia, the Bonaventure arena in Farmington, at radio station WNIC, located at 15001 Michigan Ave., Dearborn, or at any Chatham supermarket throughout the metropolitan area.

Registered skaters with sponsors who have pledged to make money for the miles skated are eligible for participation.

A skater who's collected $1,200 in pledges and for months looked forward to the roll won't be participating after all.

Dr. Robert R. Silver, medical director of Detroit Industrial Clinics and a Bloomfield Hills resident, took a tumble while training for the event. While making his daily 8.4 mile roller skating workout through his subdivision recently, the roller skating doctor nosedived, landing in a doctor's office other than his own with a broken shoulder.

"I'm very disappointed. Roller skating is the only athletic thing I've ever done in my life. I was looking forward to the rollathon."

Silver should be one of the most enthusiastic spectators on hand as skaters traverse the 10-mile course beginning at 2 p.m. in the Joseph A. Bank Clothier parking lot.

Registration is $5 by Friday, Aug. 12; $8 after that date. A noon-1:30 p.m. check-in period will be held for late comers Sunday.

Rental skates will be available at $2 through the courtesy of Cosmo's Motor City Skates for skaters who register by the Aug. 12 deadline. Skate rental will not be guaranteed to late registrations.

The Coca Cola Bottlers of Detroit will furnish a Coke for the skaters.

Home Oxygen Medical Equipment Co. of Detroit has contributed prize money.

T-shirts have been donated by Sisters Chicken and Biscuits in the metro-Detroit area.

Prizes will be awarded to the top fund-raisers who submit pledges and money collected to the American Cancer Society office, 59500 Southfield Road (between 12 and 13 Mile) Southfield by Monday, Aug. 29.

Funds raised from the Roll for Research, co-sponsored by the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, will be earmarked for cancer research.

Further details about participation in the Roll for Research skating party are available from the American Cancer Society, 557-5353.

As skaters from all over metropolitan Detroit take to the streets for Sunday's Roll-a-thon through downtown Birmingham, roller skating Dr. Robert Silver, medical director of Detroit Industrial Clinics will be a melancholy spectator. Anxious to his part in the roll-a-thon, which is raising funds for cancer Silver raised $1,200 in pledges. He was working out daily, skating through his subdivision until a nasty spill sidelined him.

Moments later, the man shot the physician. Witnesses said a man wearing a blue jogging suit fled in a small white car. They provided police with the vehicle license-plate number.

CANTON POLICE traced the vehicle to the temple, located on Wyoming near Belton in west Detroit. When police arrived, fire investigators were already on the scene.

Parked nearby was a white Pontiac T-1000 containing a blue jogging suit. Police found the keys to the car, a rental vehicle, on Jones' body, said Davey LeBlanc, one of six Canton officers assisting Detroit police in the investigation.

Officers found two license plates on the vehicle, according to LeBlanc.

"THE GUYS did an exceptional job in chasing the car down," Cox said. "Had they not done that, Detroit (police) would be investigating a fire with two dead bodies and nowhere to go."

The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) is investigating to see if any federal laws were violated during the burning of the temple.

"It's a pretty narrow scope at this point," said Mark Codd, special agent with the FBI. "We're not involved in the murder aspect."

The Akramiyya sect, an Islamic offshoot, arose in the India-Pakistan area around the turn of the century, according to Islamic scholars. The religious group was to have a convention this weekend at Oakland University. The slaying and firebombing may cause the cancellation of the convention due to security concerns, said university officials.

"There appears to be a dispute or power struggle within that organization that has prompted (events). The basic cause, we don't know. It could very well be an organized effort."

Gap in teachers' talks centers on salaries

tion where we might not be able to start school on time."

The FCEA has rented office space for a "crisis center" at 845 Main Street from Aug. 1 - Oct. 1. Teachers will be answering phones and fielding questions. (The center can be reached by calling 459-9101.)

"The problem from our standpoint is that as of Sept. 1, most of our teachers will have had no increases for two years. The majority of teachers don't find themselves in a position where they can wait much longer," said Cotner.

"The salary freeze which we negotiated last year put us a fair amount behind most districts surrounding us. We're interested in coming back into line with them. We understand that may not be able to be done in a year; if it could be spread across two years, it'd be fine."

KEE, HOWEVER, says teachers in the Plymouth-Canton district are not that far behind their counterparts, and is optimistic school will start as scheduled.

"There shouldn't be any work stoppage. How can they make a commitment to a two-year contract and then violate it? We're working to try and negotiate a salary schedule for this coming year — but that notwithstanding, we still have a no-strike clause in there," KEE said.

The existing salary scale places Plymouth-Canton teachers in the upper half of salary ranges in the tri-county area, "even though they took a freeze last year," he added.

A first-year teacher with a bachelor's degree makes $15,992 in the Plymouth-Canton district. With a master's degree and 12 years seniority, teachers earn $31,750. Top of the scale for Livonia teachers with a master's degree and 11 years seniority was $34,190 last year.

"I'm anxious to get in and talk to the powers that be. I don't think we're asking for the sky. It's not like we're saying we want everything you've got, and you owe it to us. This time the situation is altogether different (than a year ago when the district was financially strapped)."

"We shouldn't be at loggerheads," Cotner said.

Also in contract negotiations are bargaining units for the district's secretaries, custodians, educational aides, cafeteria and transportation employees and administrators. No salary increases have been determined for any employees for 1983-84, KEE said.

"We're all in the same situation," said Cotner.

"Unfortunately, we come out looking like the bad guys because they're smaller (units) and don't affect the kids like we do."

"We're center stage."

Lucas dropping hospital subsidy

By Tim Michael
staff writer

County Executive William Lucas has thrown a one-two punch at the Commission over control of Wayne County General Hospital. But a key commission member and Lucas' quest for power will end the hospital's accreditation.

As expected, Lucas this week vetoed the ordinance passed July 23 in which the commission gave itself power to nominate hospital board members.

"Invalid and unenforceable," said Lucas, who wants to sell or lease the hospital to get it from under what he calls excessive labor costs.

The charter clearly states that all facilities, operations and functions are to exist under the supervision, coordination, direction and control of the CEO (chief executive officer). This ordinance is out of compliance with the charter and state law.

THE COMMISSION, meanwhile, has received Lucas' proposed 1984 budget in which he eliminates the hospital's subsidy. In the current fiscal year, the county is paying $14 million to underwrite the hospital's operations. The current fiscal year ends Nov. 30.

The executive's budget recommends $50 million for hospital operations, a cut of 10 percent from the current year's $55.6 million. Hospital administrators had asked for a $4 million increase.

"Wayne County General Hospital will not require a general fund subsidy," he said.

Lucas also trimmed an adult hospitalization item from the current $35.6 million to less than $4 million. The Office of Health and Community Services had requested $42 million.

The items were part of a $354-million budget for the fiscal year beginning Dec. 1. A property tax rate of 7.97 mills is expected to provide $128 million, down $5.2 million because of a decrease in property valuations.

COMMISSIONER Kay Beard, D-Inkster, whose district includes the county hospital and many of its employees, predicted the 18-member County Commission would override Lucas' veto.

Ten votes are needed to override. Beard noted the ordinance was passed 11-2 and that two absent commissioners both favor it.

"Besides the vote, the feeling on the commission is a clear indication that we don't appreciate his need for total authority, particularly when you realize that he has controlling influence in other ways," said Beard, who chairs the board's human resources committee.

As examples, she cited Lucas' coordinating power over the hospital and county board of health and his supervision of hospital spending.

AS COMMITTEE chairwoman, Beard drafted the ordinance and guided it to passage. Ordinance proponents say poor people will have nowhere else to turn if the county turns over the hospital to a new operator, as Lucas advocates.

Beard said, "It is very important to understand that the executive cannot have complete authority over the hospital because it wouldn't be accredited."

It has to be semi-autonomous to qualify for full accreditation."

She said third-party participants (such as Blue Cross/Blue Shield) normally pay unaccredited hospitals 90 percent less than accredited ones.

Beard contended Wayne County General could lose nearly one-third of its income if it loses accreditation from a national commission.

LUCAS' VETO message relied heavily on an opinion from corporation counsel John O'Hair.

O'Hair said the ordinance "effects a total pre-emption in the area of health care services of the county executive's duties."

He called the method of selecting hospital board members a "violation of the charter, which empowers the CEO to appoint members to county boards subject only to the limitation that appointments are to be approved or rejected by the County Commission."

The ordinance specified the occupations of four of the five board members, mandated that two be from Detroit and two from the suburbs, and required the executive to make four selections from people nominated by the commission.

"The commission acts without authority when it endeavors by ordinance to restrict the exercise of the CEO's charter-vested appointment powers to commission nominees," O'Hair said.

Rabies warning: It's happening close to home

A 5-year-old girl who died in March after being bitten by a bat has knocked down the pins of complacency in Michigan over the seemingly dormant, but dreaded disease called rabies.

The girl died in Hillsdale County, the first person in Michigan to die of rabies in 35 years.

But you don't have to go to Hillsdale County in southern Michigan to find a case of rabies. Rabies has surfaced recently in Plymouth, Dearborn Heights, and Livingston County.

Rabies is a potential threat wherever skunks, raccoons and bats dwell. One of these three animals, which fall into a high-risk rabies category, can tangle with an unvaccinated dog or cat, turning the family pet into a carrier of the deadly disease.

Or they can tangle with a wild animal such as a squirrel, guinea pig or rabbit in the low-risk category and the animal could get the disease and pass it on.

Or one of the three high-risk wild animals can attack a human, as happened in Hillsdale County. When the girl showed symptoms of the disease, she was doomed to die, as the vaccine has to be administered before symptoms appear.

"ONCE THE symptoms start, it's 100 percent fatal," said Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk, assistant medical director of the Wayne County Department of Health.

In his job, Lawrenchuk is used to dealing everyday with diseases and is not apt to use the words "serious public health concern" lightly. But those are the words he used to describe the threat of rabies as it now exists in Michigan. Because of the situation which now exists, his words warrant careful consideration.

"Greater than half of the dogs in Wayne County are not adequately vaccinated," Lawrenchuk said. "Only 10 percent of cats in the county are vaccinated. For the unvaccinated, the potential is there for rabies if the pet has an encounter with a rabid wild animal. . . And, in the summertime, kids are more apt to have contact with these animals."

In Canton and Plymouth subdivisions, cute and sassy raccoons can be heard foraging through garbage cans in the middle of the night. But in northern Ohio, and soon to be in southern Michigan, those raccoons are no longer considered cute. They are considered deadly.

"Raccoons carrying rabies have been migrating northward from the south," Lawrenchuk said. "They are now in the northern part of Ohio and there is a marked increase in the number of rabid raccoons near the Michigan-Ohio border. Ohio counted 61 rabid animals in 1981; in 1982, there was 80."

CLOSER TO HOME, a Plymouth cat two weeks ago killed a bat, dragged it home and left it on the doorstep.

Instead of just tossing the bat out, the homeowners were smart enough to have the bat examined. The bat was rabid and the cat was killed.

"The cat became a risk and had to be killed. He had not been vaccinated," Lawrenchuk said.

Animals suspected to be rabid are sent to either the Michigan Department of Health or to Michigan State University, where their brains are examined.

"We're even finding rabies in cows and that means they were bitten by something," adds Lawrenchuk.

BEFORE A dog license is issued the owner has to turn over a certificate showing the pet had received at least a one-year vaccination shot. Shots also are available that last two and three years. Cats require neither licenses nor vaccinations.

"Pet owners might not renew their licenses, or don't get a license in the first place," Lawrenchuk said. "Or people don't keep good records, showing when the pet was last immunized. Cies don't have the manpower to enforce the dog law. And people become too complacent."

IF A BITE does happen and the bitten person is unsure if the animal has been vaccinated, vaccine shots should be started immediately.

An old vaccine, not used much today, was painful and accompanied by side effects. A newer vaccine, given five times within 28 days, is shot directly into muscle tissue and has no side effects.

The Wayne County Department of Health carries the vaccine, which can be given by the family's own doctor.

All animal bites, no matter how seemingly harmless, should be reported immediately to the animal control officer.

Lawrenchuk said pet owners could suspect rabies if a pet changes his or her personality, becomes highly aggressive, acts drunk or foams from the mouth.

Humans with rabies are fearful, get headaches, undergo paralysis, have difficulty swallowing, fear water and finally go into delirium and convulsions.

Better schools will cost people time and money

TWO MONTHS ago I wrote a column on "A Nation at Risk."

That was the report written on the nation's educational system by an 18-member panel commissioned by the federal government. Among other things, it said schools in the United States were threatened by a "rising tide of mediocrity."

The report declared that scores on standardized tests given high school students have dropped consistently over a 20-year period. It noted that the average school year in this country is 180 days vs. 250 in Japan. It said most school children in the United States attend classes for six hours a day vs. eight hours in most of the world.

In that column, I complained that the report would gather dust in the offices of most suburban school districts. From the stories published in our newspapers, it appeared that local districts were doing little to respond to the scathing indictment.

I'M HAPPY to say that since then I have noticed some improvements. Good examples:

- The Wayne-Westland School District studied the report and issued its recommendations. Wayne-Westland will continue making curriculum changes and is now writing five- and 10-year plans for the district.

- Schoolcraft College will increase the number of students in its Learning Assistance Center by 30 percent during the next academic year. This center teaches incoming college students basic academic skills needed to succeed in college.

- Southfield's Dr. Yvonne Walker was among the first in this country to earn a master teacher certificate, a classification recommended in "A Nation at Risk" for teachers of special merit. She received it this summer from Wayne State University.

- Bloomfield Hills started a commission to evaluate "A Nation at Risk." It appointed a former principal to spend 20 hours per week coordinating the work of the commission.

Nick Sharkey

WHILE IT'S ENCOURAGING to see some activity on "A Nation at Risk," I still suspect it will have little effect in most school districts.

Our schools will not improve until education becomes important to everyone. It will take a commitment of time and money to turn our schools around.

As Gerald Boston, Southfield school board president, says, "The different elements that make up the educational community — all citizenry — must agree that education is a priority. That hasn't happened since 1958 when Sputnik was launched."

Schools must be in session longer than 180 days. Children must attend classes for more than six hours a day. Science, mathematics and foreign language studies must be emphasized. That will mean more tax money for schools.

The state must raise academic requirements. Although the state mandates many programs from hot lunches to special education classes, the only graduation requirement is a half-year classroom instruction in U.S. government.

Local businesses must send employees into the schools to teach science or calculus and tell students how their studies will translate into jobs.

All parents, not just those with axes to grind, must become involved in their local schools. They should demand that the flaws outlined in "A Nation at Risk" be solved.

Like motherhood and the flag, it's easy to favor better education. It's different when we are required to commit time and money.

But we'd better start now before it's too late.

Marilyn Fitchett

year is something that will find a lot of opposition — beginning at the bargaining table.

It's predictable that unions would expect to have a say in lengthening the school calendar. And it's the role of the union that conflicts with the idea of merit pay. Union structure rules the professional lives of teachers. Unions tend to lump all employees — good, bad or indifferent — into a single category, namely seniority, and demand that all be paid accordingly.

School districts have the option of evaluating teachers during their non-tenured years, but once a teacher receives tenure, there is little a district can do to either reward or remove a unionized teacher.

LABOR CONTRACTS aside, merit pay has an iffy future. It is an issue which raises more questions than provides solutions.

For instance:

- Who sets the criteria for merit — the state Department of Education or the local district?

- How do you determine successful performance — test results? What about the teacher who "teaches to the test?"

- Is popularity to be a criterion? It's known kids tend to like younger teachers with whom they feel more comfortable. Will this result in age bias?

- What children will benefit from having these teachers? Will it be the gifted student, the slow student or the average student?

- To what lengths will parents go to assure their children will have these special teachers?

- What will be the effect on those who don't rate merit pay? What kinds of morale problems will develop on a teaching staff?

Merit pay opens box of troubles

GIVING MERIT pay to exemplary teachers is like putting new tires on a car that has a faulty transmission and windows that won't roll up.

Yet the idea is being pushed as a panacea to the nation's educational ills. Let's not kid ourselves; merit pay does not begin to address the failures of public education. At best, it touches upon rewarding teachers for going the extra mile.

Everyone agrees that children are a precious resource and, in an ideal world, deserve the best teachers that money can buy. But despite the fact that college graduates are turning their backs on teaching in order to pursue more financially rewarding jobs in the business world, there are a couple of factors that serve to hold down teacher salaries.

One is that in an age of declining school enrollments, demand for teachers is far outweighed by the supply.

The other is that teachers are essentially seasonal workers. The average teacher puts in about 180 days in front of a class. The figures I have read place the average number of days for a non-teaching worker at more than 240.

A solution that might solve the teacher pay issue and upgrade our curriculum is to expand the school year to year-round. The idea of summers off for students found its roots in an agrarian society. Now that American children no longer have to help with the crops, they should be spending more time in the classroom.

More teaching time would justify salaries that

We rode streetcars to work, play

JUST FOR old times' sake, The Stroller took a ride into downtown Detroit a few weeks ago with the hope of seeing some of the old scenes he knew when he came out west from the Pennsylvania Dutch country three-score years ago.

What a change! The streetcars were gone. Even the tracks have been buried. He learned they were covered when the old method of travel gave way to the automobile and buses. But it was interesting just to stand at what was then Kinsel's corner and recall the races for the streetcar at the crossings.

AT THE TIME, The Stroller lived on Delaware Avenue. That was two blocks north of Grand Boulevard on the west side of Detroit.

To go to and from the Free Press office, he had to take a streetcar on the Trumbull line. That was fine, except that the streetcar didn't go as far north as Delaware Avenue. It stopped one block below.

So The Stroller had to walk a block to go to work and then early in the morning — after the last edition — he had to walk over to Capitol Park to get the car at the park.

There is no trace of this line — or any other line — today. And these streetcars are just a memory.

But their memory is strong. And one day we may see streetcars again. In 1984, for instance, a "light rail" rapid transit line is planned between Grand and Gratiot streets. Streetcars would travel in dedicated lanes far as Seven Mile and Woodward, and the termination was marked by a old log cabin. Some of the stores still carry the log cabin trademark.

The other lines were the Detroit Interurban and the Detroit United Line. It was on the interurban that The Stroller spent many of his holidays.

It was the practice then to get on one of the so-called "summer cars" — they were open — and ride to Port Huron. We'd stop for lunch and then take the ride back.

This was in the days when Gratiot Avenue was a dirt road and the I-94 freeway was only a wild dream. But it was an interesting ride, and it's too bad such a trip is not possible today.

GONE, TOO, is the favorite ride to Navin Field (now Tiger Stadium). This was a nice ride from downtown, and the cars were lined up on both Trumbull and Michigan avenues to collect the after-the-game crowds.

On opening day, it was a sight to see the visiting teams oftentimes riding from their downtown hotels to the ballpark while wearing their playing uniforms.

Another fond memory was recalled as The Stroller stood downtown. Because of a quirk, he never had to pay a cash fare while riding to and from work at the office. It so happened that one of the high school correspondents — a fellow named Louis Beckman, who later became a highly regarded attorney — worked as a conductor on the Baker line after school.

This line started at Lafayette and Shelby — one

New Jail's gym

Wayne County's new jail — known officially as the Andrew C. Baird Detention Center — will have floor space for eight basketball courts on its skylighted 13th floor, divided by elevators and security enclosures. Jail administrator Pete Wilson (right) guides county commissioners on a tour. The $90 million facility was named for a long-time sheriff in the 1920s, '40s and '50s and is scheduled to be opened Dec. 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

House backs revenue sharing

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 28 through Aug. 3.

HOUSE

REVENUE — The House rejected, 174 for and 248 against, an amendment to keep revenue sharing payments to local governments at their present level.

Defeat of the amendment allowed a $450-million increase in outlays in each of the next three years. In fiscal 1984-86, payments will total $3.02 billion annually. Localities can spend the money with few federal restrictions.

Voting yes (for cutting revenue sharing) were William Ford, D-Taylor, and William Brownfield, R-Birmingham.

Voting no, and favoring the additional $450 million annually in revenue sharing, were Carl Perrell, R-Plymouth, Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit, and Sander Levin, D-Birmingham.

HELP — By a vote of 252 for and 174 against, the House passed a bill to spend up to $4 billion over two years on health insurance for unemployed individuals who lost their medical coverage when they lost their jobs.

During fiscal 1984 and 1985, states would get block grants to be used to pay the insurance premiums of the jobless, their spouses and children under age 18.

Members voting yes supported the $4-billion emergency health care program. Voting yes: Hertel, Ford and Levin.

Voting no: Perrell and Brownfield.

KING — The House passed, 338 for and 90 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 3704) setting the third Monday of each January as a national holiday honoring the birthday of slain civil rights leader and Nobel Peace Prize winner Martin Luther King Jr.

This would be the 10th national holiday and the first honoring a black.

Supporter Parren Mitchell, D-Md., responded to the argument the observance would cost too much, saying: "What about the cost (to blacks) under that system of segregation that was so rigid in this nation?"

Opponent Herbert Bateman, R-Va., said taking the Monday off would be too costly to government payrolls and the private sector and urged that the next national holiday be for Thomas Jefferson.

Members voting yes wanted the national roll call report holiday for King. Voting yes: Hertel, Ford, Levin and Brownfield.

Voting no: Perrell.

SENATE

STANDARDS — By a vote of 75 for and 18 against, the Senate delayed until Saturday, Oct. 18, or later the effective date of new work rules which the Office of Personnel Management has proposed for civil servants.

The sweeping changes are advocated by the administration and opposed by unions representing federal workers. They would give more weight to merit and less to seniority in determining a civil servant's salary and job security.

Senators voting yes wanted to delay the so-called pay-for-performance rules for civil servants. Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegle both voted yes.

When they're fresh you can taste it handle 'em right.

First I use proper netting — no gill nets on my boats. I bring my fish up live and then I bleed, gut and wash 'em right on board. My fish don't stay out in the air. I pack 'em right away with shaved ice and I make sure each fish is surrounded by ice so it stays between 12° - 15°.

My fish are prime. Few fishermen can say that and few restaurants can boast the best. A restaurant like Joe Muers in Detroit can. Joe insists on the best and is willing to pay for it . . . and I'm proud to give it to him.

Plymouth hits Plymouth in Plymouth

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

"All's well that ends well."
At least that's probably what Wayne County Sheriff's Deputy Walter Holowka and Plymouth officer Joseph Kahanec said Saturday night after Holowka's car hit Kahanec's patrol car.

Following a chase, the deputy's car slipped out of park, rolled into Kahanec's car almost taking the door off, and causing an estimated $500 in damage.

About 8:30 p.m. Saturday Holowka clocked a motorcycle exceeding the speed limit on N. Territorial near Ridge Road, according to Sheriff Robert Ficano.

Holowka's attempt to stop the motorcyclist resulted in a nine-mile chase, lasting 15 minutes and running into parts of Washtenaw County before ending at Napier and Five Mile.

THE MOTORCYCLIST, a 30-year-old Northville man, jumped off the bike at Five Mile and Napier and started to flee on foot, Ficano said.

"At that point the Plymouth officer arrived and helped out on the foot chase. After about two minutes, the car slipped out of park and rolled into the Plymouth officer's car," Ficano said.

The suspect was apprehended and arrested for fleeing and eluding. When the officers returned to the intersection they found that the patrol cars collided.

While the Plymouth car was damaged, the Sheriff's car apparently wasn't damaged, Ficano said.

"Accidents will happen," Plymouth Police Chief Carl Berry said Monday. "The officers were doing a good job, and the accident just occurred."

This was the first time a Sheriff's car has slipped out of park, according to Ficano. He plans to check the car, a Plymouth model, to see if there's any possibility of the same thing happening again.

Bill Boshler/Staff photographer

The mangled door of officer Joseph Kahanec's police car is held open by Gary Chapman of Tom's Custom Auto in Plymouth. The damage was caused when a Wayne County Sheriff's car popped out of park and hit the Plymouth police car.

KofC to sell dogs and fleas

The Father Victor J. Renaud Knights of Columbus Council 3292 will hold its sixth annual flea market and hot dog roast Saturday, Aug. 27.

The flea market and hot dog roast will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 27 on the council grounds at 150 Fair, at the corner of Fair and Mill (Lilley) one block south of Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth.

Grand Knight Joe Brescoll said that all income derived from the sale of booth space, along with the profits from the hot dog roast, will be turned over to Muscular Dystrophy. Dealers will keep all profits from the sale of their items.

Office center tax relief OK'd

Tax relief was granted Tuesday night to one part of an office/retail complex planned for the corner of Ann Arbor Road and General Drive in Plymouth Township.

The 50 percent property tax abatement for 15 years was granted by the Plymouth Township board at the request of developer Eugene A. LeBlanc of Robinson in Plymouth Township.

The abatement encompasses a planned two-story, 25,500 square-foot retail and office facility LeBlanc plans to build on the now vacant land. Currently property taxes on the land are listed at $9,977.

Once construction of the $200,000 facility is completed, the taxes will increase to $20,007 — including the tax abatement.

The board, however, postponed a decision on tax abatement for an adjacent property which LeBlanc is redeveloping. Supervisor Maurice Brown indicated more information was needed on that tax relief request.

The adjacent site, 42331 Ann Arbor Road, was last known as Linwood Associative center. LeBlanc has started re-development of the building to fit into the new office/retail facility and door.

The redeveloped building will offer some 12,000 square feet of space, and would not exceed $2,000 in property taxes with tax abatement.

Construction of the new facility would create jobs for construction workers, LeBlanc told the board.

Once the work is completed, LeBlanc estimated 100 jobs would be created by businesses moving into the complex.

"The facility won't require the expansion of any township services, such as police or fire. However, the facility will add office space in the community, which I believe is needed," LeBlanc said.

Construction is expected to start in September with occupancy in June.

The township board also approved LeBlanc's request to change the vacant site's zoning from C1 to C2, to allow for the two-story structure. The C1 classification allows for the same use of the land; however, only in a one-story structure.

Paper helped locate hosts

To the editor:

As representative for Youth for Understanding I would like to thank the Observer Newspapers of Livonia, Plymouth and Canton for helping me find host families for European exchange students coming to the U.S. this year. It would have been impossible without their help.

I also would like to thank all the families that accepted and inquired about these students. Thank you.

Anyone who would like to host a student next year, please give me a call at 981-2680 and we'll put your request in early.

Care of aged thrust of gerontologist's China-Russia visit

An elderly Chinese woman takes her grandchild out on their daily stroll.

'While there are homes for the elderly in China, they are the exception rather than the rule. The elderly are still cared for in the community. There are intergenerational families, with the older persons staying in the homes to watch the children while the parents both work.'

— Kathy Needham
Madonna College gerontologist

In China, retirees still make significant contributions to society. They may opt to become volunteers, directing traffic or assisting in the schools, and are identifiable by the armbands they wear (right). Others take on the task of raising their grandchildren while their children work (below).

Elderly Chinese residents, some with swords, engage in the early morning exercise ritual of tai-chi.

By Dan Vecchioni
staff writer

IN CHINA, IT was not uncommon for Kathleen Needham to awaken to the sounds of a hundred or more elderly persons — some with swords — exercising outdoors.

In the Soviet Union, she would walk by long lines of mostly elderly persons waiting to obtain items rationed by the government.

Needham, chairman of the gerontology department at Livonia's Madonna College, recently had the opportunity to observe how the two Communist cultures treat their senior members.

With 28 other persons interested in care for the aged, Needham spent three weeks in the two countries as a participant in a cross cultural exchange program, Health Care for the Elderly Leaders Goodwill People to People.

"Here in the U.S., we're beginning to realize the need to address how we treat our elderly," she said. "They (persons 65 and older) are the fastest growing age group in the country and by the year 2000 will comprise over 12 percent of the population.

"It's very important that countries learn from each other. We can adapt features from other cultures to our society. We need to have these exchanges," she added.

NEEDHAM WAS impressed most by the Chinese culture. In China, the elderly not only are respected for their age but also for their wisdom and their contributions to society, she said.

"While there are homes for the elderly in China, they are the exception rather than the rule," she said. "The elderly are still cared for in the community. There are intergenerational families, with the older persons staying in the homes to watch the children while the parents both work."

She recalled one case where a rural family recognized the additional needs of its older member. To help her keep warm at night, the family routed stove pipes underneath her bed. During the day, she cared for the child.

In the cities, the elderly congregated about 6 a.m. daily to participate in the tai-chi exercise ritual, Needham said. As many as 150 people, some carrying swords, would gather for the slow, graceful, ballet-like routine. In the factories, elderly workers would take breaks to perform the exercise to music, she added.

"In the factories, they have charts on the walls showing the exercise movements, but a lot of the younger workers won't do it during the breaks," Needham said. "They said it's an exercise for when you grow older."

Health care, for the elderly as well as the entire population, is provided free in China. However, Needham said, the government does not provide dental care (except for gum disease), dentures, hearing aids and the like.

"MANY ELDERLY prefer Chinese medicine," she said. "As a result, they have both western and Chinese pharmacies, with the Chinese dispensing herbs and so forth. In some areas, they still have the barefoot doctors. They also have a few things we could learn from, like acupuncture, manipulation and reattaching limbs."

"The Chinese look younger than they are, but our culture has the longer lifespan," she said.

Chinese life is not marked by much variety, Needham said. Nearly everyone lives in small apartments, wears the drab clothes of the Mao Tse-tung regime (except the children who dress in bright colors) and eats the same foods: rice, fish, poultry and vegetables.

And, while the people are friendly, they are very curious about Westerners, she said.

"I was walking through a park one day and stopped near a pagoda," Needham recalled. "Within a couple of minutes, a crowd of 150 Chinese had gathered, attracted by my blonde hair. I showed them a card I was carrying that indicated in Chinese that I worked with the elderly. They were pleased. I felt like a movie star."

The opening of China to the West has ushered in some changes, Needham said. "Some older people are concerned with the youth scene," she explained. "And you see a lot of elderly persons running scales and sewing machines on the streets to make extra money."

ACROSS THE BORDER in the Soviet Union, the elderly's role in society is dictated more by need than by respect, Needham said.

"Housing is a very serious problem in the Soviet Union," she said. "Grandparents have the apartments, and the children and grandchildren move in with them. Also, as in China, both parents are expected to work so the elderly have care of the children and must be the primary meat for the family."

"The Soviet Union also has a manpower shortage due to World War II," she continued. "So the government tries to get you to work as long as you can, up to about age 70. The elderly also are used for all types of volunteer work, like picking up debris or grass cuttings in parks."

While in the country, Needham and her party visited the Institute of Gerontology, where longevity is being studied. The Soviet Union is interested in determining the factors that contribute to longevity since a high percentage of the people in several of the country's regions, such as the Georgian Republic, live to 100 or more.

"They are finding that longevity is related to several factors, including biology, heredity, lifestyle, eating habits, stress and more," Needham said.

Elderly persons in the Soviet Union were not as friendly as their counterparts in China, Needham noted.

"THEY TALKED a great deal about war and not wanting a nuclear war," she said. "They didn't seem to enjoy our presence as much. They do a lot of vodka drinking and make pilgrimages to Lenin's tomb. The American consulate told us that everyone has to carry an internal visa so the government will know where you're at at all times."

Needham called her visits to the two countries "both an emotional and intellectual experience. They contrast so much to our lifestyle. Life is not easy in either country. They really have to work hard for what they get. But the concept of a world community is very important. We really need to have more of these kinds of exchanges to learn from each other."

Already, she said, she has adapted some of the Chinese tai-chi techniques in Madonna's therapeutic programs. "These exercises can even be done in bed," she said.

Sneak preview of 'Sesquicentennial' party plans

Get yourself excited folks . . . Canton is going to PARTY! It doesn't start until . . . well . . . actually . . . December.

I know, you're saying to yourself, "Sandy, did you run out of Canton Chatter material? Isn't there something a little more current?"

There are more current things happening, but I want everyone possible to start enjoying this one now because, as you might have guessed already, I am talking about none other than our very own "Sesquicentennial" or our 150th Birthday Party!

The committee is off and running and I think it's time to give you a blow by blow, what I know, report.

Mary Dingeldey is the chairwoman for the gala committee. She is flanked by a crew of dedicated people planning the best party ever. Plans are still incomplete, and Mary has asked me to stress that "we are very interested in any input anyone may have." It's everyone's party so share your thoughts.

FOR NOW let me tease you with some of the happenings. The group has been meeting since January, and the first event planned is set for December when we hope to have the tree outside township hall decorated with old-fashioned decorations. For this we plan to contact the schools and get student participation. Sandy Preblich is the person to contact on this one at 981-6354.

Canton chatter Sandy Preblich

January 1984 — Right now Mary Dingeldey is handling the plans for a open house. I wonder whose house we will open?

February — Suzanne Skubick, programming director for Omnicom of Michigan, is busy organizing a "Treasure Hunt," which is much like an "Elite Flea Market." Sound interesting? Call Suzanne at 459-7521.

March — the 7th marks the day, 150 years ago Canton was incorporated. Founders Day is what we call it, and we are planning a re-enactment of the signing of our original charter, and we hope to have participation of the Scout Troops and as many social and civic groups as possible. While viewing the re-enactment watch the fashion show, being handled by Gloria Hammonds, of period costumes and join your friends for an afternoon tea. Since March does mark the Founders Day itself, it becomes a very active month. We have something elegant and special, the Sesquicentennial Ball, tentatively planned for March 10th and hopefully to be held at a hall in Canton; Connie Carmen can be contacted on this one. Do you have a hall we can use? Finally for March, on the 31st, is the Kite Flying contest with an old-fashioned theme and the Canton Parks and Recreation Department will be handling this one.

April — Once again the Canton Kitchen Band comes through and will put on the Canton Senior Follies. The first performance will be on Thursday, April 12, and again on Saturday, April 14, during the afternoon. You can call Diane Niehagean at 397-1000, ext. 378.

May — In May we will see Michigan Week and perhaps a Mayor's Exchange will occur. We have already extended invitations to 17 other Cantons in the United States.

June — Guess what folks? You're right again . . . the Canton Country Festival and Parade, this year with a Sesquicentennial Theme. Watch for a couple of interesting float entries, or so Mary Dingeldey warns me! And knowing Mary . . . let's hope things work out because it should be terrific! The sealing of the time capsule will occur this month, and Gloria Hammonds (455-9009) is again the one to call with any helpful suggestions. Canton Parks and Recreation will be holding the golf tournament this month. Now how can you give that a 150-year-old theme?

July — Moving right along we have the July 4th Fireworks and for this we call on the ever busy but always willing worker Ernie Rumsbey. What July would be complete without a big picnic? So we are planning a real ol' fashioned family type community picnic, and we hope to have something for everyone, and as much as possible of this . . . free! If you have any suggestions or if you would like to help, just give me a call because this one is all mine and I'm having a ball just planning it! (Anyone know where I can get a lot of empty potatoe sacks?) Oh, I almost forgot! The date is set for July 22 . . . hold that open, O.K.?

August — here we need the help of anyone who would like to jump in. We are really hoping to see a flower sculpture contest this month to complement the flower garden contest being handled by Cheryl Eberwine. By the way, the flower for our party is the Impatiens.

BOW ABOUT the cookbook committee which, headed by Tillie Schultz, has already submitted to the publisher our Sesquicentennial Cookbook. It should be ready for a perfect Christmas gift! The cookbook was actually sponsored by the churches in Canton along with the Sesquicentennial Committee. Again Canton, we proved we are comin' together as I can proudly announce 100 percent participation by all the churches serving our 50,000 strong community.

Also interviews with Cantonites will be seen all year (like the bicentennial minutes we had in 1976) along with special programs about the Sesquicentennial — all this is one of the benefits of having a really "local" cable television coverage. This is naturally being provided by volunteers and Omnicom.

Again let me stress the request for any helpful suggestions, or if you just want to give a hand, call the person heading the event of your choice or Mary Dingeldey (495-0509). See you next week!

Janet Zielasko explains the use of Lifeline to a group of senior citizens at Royal Holiday mobile home park in Canton.

Lifeline available to area residents

A 24-hour emergency communications system, called Lifeline, is now available to Canton and Plymouth residents.

The service, offered by Catherine McAuley Health Center in Ann Arbor, is available to frail elderly, and other medically eligible population groups.

Janet Zielasko, coordinator of the hospital-based program, said Lifeline is an electronic device attached to a subscriber's telephone that provides a communication link to the St. Joseph Mercy Hospital emergency room.

A hand-held portable device also is available.

"In an emergency," Zielasko said, "a subscriber can push the Lifeline button to send an electronic message to the emergency room. Trained personnel then pull an information card field on each subscriber, listing the person's name, address, telephone number, medical condition and the names of responders (nearby friends, neighbors, family) to be contacted."

WHEN A signal for help has been received, hospital personnel first attempt to contact the subscriber by telephone. If there is no answer, the designated responders are then sent to the home of the subscriber.

On arrival, responders reset the Lifeline unit, signalling the emergency room that someone is there. An emergency room staff member then will call to find out what kind of help, if any, is needed.

Zielasko said the Lifeline unit also is equipped with an automatic timer which alerts the hospital if the subscriber has not used the phone or reset the timer in a 24-hour period.

"That feature is extremely important if something happens and the subscriber is physically unable to press the button for help."

The reassurance that emergency assistance is available has had some very specific benefits, adds Zielasko. "A three-year study in Boston showed that users spent fewer days in the hospital, were more relaxed and slept better and were able to live at home by themselves instead of in a nursing home."

LIFELINE IS available at a monthly charge, or will be provided free by the health center to those who cannot afford it. There is no age limit, but candidates for the service will be screened by members of the McAuley staff.

Zielasko said one woman told her, "I have a great sense of relief now. It's like having a friend in the house with me."

The health center now has 34 units in use. The units were bought with funds raised during the 1983 CMHC Radio-Thon Auction.

Zielasko has held a number of demonstrations in the area, and is available for lectures about the service. For more information about Lifeline, call 572-3922.

Szopa earns credit for fashion choices

Many students would be envious of Debra Szopa, 23, of Canton. She goes to work, unseals the latest fashions, chooses the "right" accessories and earns college credit.

For Szopa, who attends Madonna College in Livonia, college life is more than reading textbooks, typing term papers and studying for exams.

In addition to her classes, she is earning college credit while interning at Saks Fifth Avenue.

Szopa intends to graduate next year with a bachelor's degree in fashion merchandising. To earn this degree she is required to take classes in textiles, design and retailing, plus business courses such as consumer behavior, promotional strategy and marketing management.

"I'VE ALWAYS wanted to work in retailing. Right now I'm interested in sharpening my management skills."

The internship is part of Madonna's cooperative education program in which Szopa works 36 to 48 hours a week at the store. Besides her wages, she earns college credit for the experience.

This is Szopa's third co-op placement and her second internship at Saks. She previously interned at Gantco and Saks Fifth Avenue working on customers, creating displays and assisting her supervisor in purchasing decisions.

Through the internship, Szopa is learning the different phases of merchandising. "The internship has taught me skills that are not available in a classroom."

Eventually she would like to go to New York and attend a technical school specializing in fashion design. But, she realizes a fashion merchandising background is essential to any future career in fashion design.

Local Y Travelers plan 10-day 'Golden West' vacation

Some of them returned recently from an Alaskan cruise. Now the Y travelers are planning a 10-day Golden West tour Oct. 3-12. The tour is open only to Plymouth Community Family YMCA members.

Janet Luce, director of the Y, explained that the $1,399 per person fee is for double occupancy. Persons traveling single may ask to share accommodations with another Y Traveler of the same sex.

The Travelers will leave Plymouth Monday, Oct. 3, and fly to San Francisco by American Airlines jet service. They will transfer to their Cathedral Hill Hotel and prepare for an optional night tour of San Francisco with a send-off dinner in Chinatown. The next day they will tour the city and enjoy a 1½-hour narrated Bay Cruise.

On Wednesday morning they will leave their hotel at 8:45 a.m. After passing the San Andreas Fault and Crystal Springs Reservoir, they stop at Paul Masson Champagne Cellars for a tour and wine-tasting. Then it will be through the Redwoods on mountain roads passing Santa Cruz and Moss Landing on the way to Monterey for lunch at the Hyatt DelMonte. They'll have a 17-mile drive after lunch through Pebble Beach, Cannery Row and a stop in Carmel before returning to Monterey for dinner and overnight in Casa Munras Hotel.

THEY WILL travel south through the Big Sur, along the Pacific, with lunch and a tour of the famous Hearst Castle at San Simeon and on through coastal towns to the historic Santa Maria Inn where they will stay Thursday night.

On Friday, the group will stop at the authentic Danish community of Solvang, drive through a mountain pass to Santa Barbara for a visit to the mission and then to lunch at a marina. They will be in Los Angeles until Sunday morning, staying at the Ambassador Hotel on Wilshire Boulevard. On Saturday, they will get an inside view of the world's largest motion picture and TV studios during their tour of Universal Studios.

The remainder of the trip takes them to San Diego by way of Dana Point and Mission San Juan Capistrano. They will visit Balboa Park, and have a tram-bus lecture tour of the San Diego Zoo.

TRAVELING north, they will stop for lunch at Lawrence Welk Country Club, then through the Santa Rosa Mountains to an overnight stop at Palm Springs Spa.

Before returning to Los Angeles Tuesday evening, they will tour Palm Springs to see the homes of celebrities and noted personalities. They will leave the low Colorado Desert through San Geronimo Pass to the Redlands and the unique Edward's mansion Restaurant and Museum for lunch. They'll stay that night in the Ambassador Hotel and fly home the next day.

Four breakfasts, eight lunches and five dinners are included in the deluxe tour as well as baggage handling, except in Detroit.

For information about the tour and Y memberships, call the YMCA, 453-3904.

Stone kissing story's no blarney

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

There is a bit more eloquence in her voice these days as former mayor Mary Childs goes about the city on many of her volunteer activities. And there is a good reason.

She has just returned from Ireland where she kissed the blarney stone.

"It was one of the most exciting experiences of my life," she said while visiting city hall, and I wouldn't have missed it for the world."

She had accompanied her husband, Eric, on a business trip to Ireland and when their leisure time came she noted that they were near Cork City which is only five miles from Blarney Castle. So, there was nothing else to do, but go over to see and kiss the blarney stone that has been part of a legend since 1446.

Getting to the rock was a lot more exciting than she had expected. First of all she didn't realize Blarney Castle was so high or that the steps to the stone were so narrow that she had had to have help up to the top.

"When I got there," she said, "there was a cloth stretched out on the ground. Then I had to lay down on my back. Once in that position an employee of the castle lifted my body and I had to lean my head up and back to kiss the stone."

"I often had thought of kissing the stone and many times I had been accused of kissing it during my campaigns. But I never thought it would be anything like it turned out to be."

AS SHE spoke she opened a photo album and brought out a picture of herself laying on her back with her head to the stone — just for proof that she really had kissed the legendary bit of stone. And she is proud of the fact that she finally had realized an ambition.

According to the legend of the blarney stone, a block of limestone, anyone who kisses it receives the gift of expression.

Saying goodbye

At special services last Sunday, the Grand River Baptist Church of Livonia congregation celebrated with its pastor, the Rev. Dr. Wilbert D. Gough, on the occasion of his retirement. Gough has served the Grand River church for the past eight years, ending 37 years of pastoral ministry. The day began with an inspirational message by Gough, "What God Has Taught Me." Dinner followed the morning service. Dr. William Stahl of the First Baptist Church of Plymouth was the speaker during the retirement program which included a slide presentation on Gough's life. Howard Schonack, a longtime friend, was the featured soloist.

Joins Ward

Rev. Willard L. Davis has joined the staff of Ward Presbyterian Church of Livonia as minister of parish life. He will be responsible for all of Ward's pastoral care ministries, including hospital visitation and providing oversight to the 125-member board of deacons. His other pastoral responsibilities will include teaching, preaching and counseling. A pastor since 1953, Davis has served in five Christian and Missionary Alliance churches. He comes to Ward from Forest Hill Alliance Church in West Palm Beach, Fla., where he served as senior pastor for four years. Davis and his wife, Rosemary, have four children.

Soft sell

Spiritual pitch by huggable cast

"I have become all things to all men, that I may by all means save some."

—St. Paul
1 Corinthians 9:22

By Marie McGee
Staff writer

MEMBERS OF the Livonia Baptist Church's puppet group know full well the meaning of the above Biblical quotation.

In their frequent puppet shows, the group becomes all things to those outside their immediate circle. Sometimes it's as Elmer and Ralph, two funny guys who keep the audience smiling with the famous Abbott and Costello routine of "Who's on First?"

There are other characters. There's Bernie, Skip and Priscilla. And dear old Mr. Quimper. Lots of the stage action takes place in Mr. Quimper's soda shop where the kindly gent dispenses advice along with soda fountain goodies.

Originally called "Sonshine," the puppeteers were organized about three years ago under the direction of parishioner Judy Hollar. Puppeteering came to her attention through the efforts of another church group, Coventry Christian. That led to a link with the California-based Puppet Productions whose techniques the group has studied and adapted.

THE LIVONIA GROUP HAS also sponsored two successful puppet training seminars by Puppet Productions. The latest was several weeks ago and attracted 30 persons interested in the art.

Currently the church group — now known as the LBC Puppeteers — is rehearsing for a show they will present Aug. 28 called "The Music Machine." Its appeal is familywide and they hope to draw a large audience from the community.

Humorous and light, the show will focus on two children's imaginary trip to the Land of Agape and their encounters with the Fruits of the Spirit that are available to all Christians.

Elmer — his hotdog-looking countenance in full grin — will play the role of Self-Contentment. But the LBC puppet crew reckons the real scene-stealers will be the newest members of the cast — two snails who will portray Patience from a young and from a more mature point of view.

AS WITH ALL THEIR SHOWS, music is also an important part of the performance. A lot of it is contemporary. For instance, in telling the Bible story of Jonah and the whale, the theme from the popular TV show "Loveboat" is used at that point in the story where Jonah finds himself a large boat in an effort to avoid the God-commanded trip to the city of Ninevah.

In another instance, when Jonah has been swallowed by the whale, the music is "Help" by the Beatles.

There is no charge for "The Music Machine," and the curtains part at 7 p.m. The church is located at 32940 Schoolcraft, east of Farmington Road.

DAN DEAN/staff photographer

Shirley Martin of Livonia and her daughter Susan, 10, enthusiastically work their puppets during the workshop training.

Cable TV should focus on community

Cable television hasn't come to our community yet. One evening we sampled many channels at the home of a friend. Conversation included the usual efforts to voice prophetic wisdom. One said, "This is so intriguing that regular channels may be gone in a few years."

Easy banter bumped into reality in a few days with news that the U.S. Senate has passed a bill removing most local control over cable TV. A house committee chaired by Michigan's John Dingell is now working on it. The bill deals with relationships between cable companies and program suppliers. Conceivably local TV stations could become victims of cable company policy or even opinion.

The heart of the bill is distrust of local units of government. To control municipal taxation of cable TV, the legislation restricts local control over many matters. If municipalities have no control, we can predict the programming will be mostly national.

POLITICAL RHETORIC has long moral perspectives

Rev. Charles Erickson

tested the virtues of local control of this and that. I have not been much impressed. Reporters and editors see to it that we are much better informed about matters in Washington and Lansing than in city or county government. Millions are spent locally and regionally without scrutiny by experienced sharp-eyed reporters paying attention.

The moral issue is national unity with need for equality across the land. There is virtue in federal laws protecting against selfishness and greed in regional or local provincialism. But the value gives birth to an enormous problem. We are becoming less and less involved in shaping our culture and creating the tone of our lives.

We desperately need to live where we live in neighborhood and community. Focus on national issues and distant events leaves us swamped by massive numbers and dollars. Then we take the next step of not caring about each other. We need information to share interests and knowledge of events to share experiences.

Cable TV has potential for improving the quality of community life and encouraging pride in the kind of people we are. It can entice us to participate in events and programs. At the same time it saves us from the evils of narrow provincialism.

THE WEATHER is a good example of deeper concern. Regular weather reporting is careful about state coverage which creates limits at state boundaries. There is also a fascination with records to make a good show. We know more about a distant spot in our state which is not part of our weather pattern than about Illinois, whose weather we usually get the next day. Cable TV has a weather channel which lets us see the weather for loved ones in distant places, and it sharpens the movements which will change our weather. It lets us be intimately local on a broadly national.

Cable TV is an issue worth a quick note to a representative in Washington. The issue is balancing federal and local control. The need is for us to be involved locally and aware in a truly democratic citizenship. The danger and in the fragile balance of local uniqueness and national unity.

Restaurants have fresh new outlook

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

FRESH FOODS — and all that phrase conjures up — is what many of today's restaurants are after.

With the advent of fast food and the ease of using frozen or prepackaged food for everything from snacks to gourmet-style entrees, the emphasis has shifted to meats, fish, fruits and vegetables that are totally fresh. Everything's fresh from the market and freshly prepared — but not until you order.

Another important aspect of the fresh-foods concept, in many instances, is to accent foods that are free from preservatives and other possibly harmful additives, even salt or sugar.

Restaurants that go for the fresh-food idea don't like to call themselves health-food restaurants, which seems to have a negative image in most people's minds. Often eating places will reflect the concept of simplicity in foods but still have the alternatives — traditional red meat and rich dishes for those who want them, desserts both low-cal and high, beverages with and without caffeine.

TYPIFYING THIS approach are several suburban-Detroit restaurants. The Good Earth, adjoining Tally Hall Farmington Hills, is an airy, attractive spot that attracts a lively crowd, mostly women, at lunch and hopes to build up its dinner clientele more. Breakfast also is served at the California-style restaurant, which opened last year. Miss Miriam's at Oakland Mall in Troy is a fast-food operation with a brightly decorated outdoor cafe setting, indoors. The eatery, which opened about two years ago, is working hard to provide fresh foods served quickly for shoppers, business people and other customers.

Win Schuler's in West Bloomfield isn't new but its menu is. Once having food prepared and brought in from its main-restaurant headquarters in Marshall, the suburban locale has put its kitchen to the test. The dishes all start on the premises and, to prove it, a cart is wheeled to the diner's table by the waitress, who points out what selected

entrees start from, including a live lobster.

Roger Alexander of Bloomfield Hills is partners in the Good Earth with Joe Tocco, who owns the Farmington Fruit Market at Tally Hall.

Alexander explained, over a lunch sampling various specialties, that the restaurant's concept is based on the "philosophy of diet, exercise and mental outlook. Life is a triad. The food is good for you and really good tasting."

HE SAID they start fresh every day with produce and goods for the bakery. Daily, they go to the Eastern Market and the Produce Terminal in Detroit to select fresh foods.

This is the only Good Earth in the Midwest, he said, but another will be opened by him and his partner in Ann Arbor next year. He developed a desire to start the first restaurant after eating at a Good Earth in California.

For breakfast, the Farmington Hills location offers such healthy stuff as 10-grain sourdough buttermilk hotcakes and also French toast from 10-grain bread.

Every day two soups are made from a recipe bank of 22 different ones. That day, the choices were 12-summer-vegetable soup (served daily now) and Armenian eggplant.

There are huge salads, available with Tahini poppy seed or other dressings. The Garden Patch Vegetable Salad includes Jicama, a tuberous plant from South America and Mexico that is popular in California.

SANDWICHES RANGE from meat-filled to meatless for vegetarian diners. "Our most popular menu item is the Cashew Chicken Sandwich," Alexander said. "It's served on 10-grain, molasses-type bread. Of the hot sandwiches, Charlie's Baked Tuna is my favorite. The Big Sur — turkey or roast beef — is the most popular hot sandwich."

Entrees served at dinner include the most popular Garden Fresh Vegetable Saute, featuring crispy fresh vegetables. "We flash cook almost all the vegetables in a wok and use peanut oil," he said. Chicken Marco Polo, the most-ordered casserole dish, combines vegetables cooked in a wok, topped with cheese and baked.

The Good Earth also is proud of its Mexican specialties, fresh juice by the carafe or glass, fruit and frozen-yogurt shakes with HPP (high-protein powder), and house-blend coffees including Swiss Water Process Decaf.

Desserts are plentiful and include ones from the bakery. For yogurt-lovers, there are Yogurt Cream Pie and Yogurt Pie Parfait with fresh fruit and yogurt-ice filling.

The Good Earth, which recently acquired a liquor license, serves beer and wine, specializing in imported beers of the world. Restaurant seating is for 200 persons, and more than 1,000 diners are fed on the busiest days.

MIRIAM KOTTLER of West Bloomfield, who has attended Nathan Pritikin's Longevity Research Institute in California, wanted to start a fast-food restaurant based on the health principles she believes in.

"I don't like additives and preservatives," she said. She opened Miss Miriam's — "all fresh food, made here" — because she wanted to make a statement and stick by it. "It wasn't as easy as my husband thought it would be," she said.

The colorful sidewalk-cafe decor was designed by Ron Rea of Birmingham, who has done some of the Chuck Muer restaurants. "There's no point in just having a pretty restaurant," Kottler said. But she's happy about the way the whole operation turned out. "I did it the way it pleased me."

To help plan the menu she called upon friend Steven Romanik of Birmingham, who runs a private catering business and is a former partner of the Appetizer restaurant in Millford. He also worked as a chef at the Standard Club North. As culinary consultant, Romanik also trains all the restaurant's employees.

BOTH ROMANIK and Kottler stress the importance of providing fresh foods while keeping costs low and the quality high.

Miss M's Blanket Sandwiches are served on pita bread, with her special dressing, alfalfa sprouts, sweet onion and tomato. Kale — a healthful, leafy green vegetable — garnishes all the sandwiches. Imported ham, breast of turkey and white albacore tuna are the choice meat, poultry and fish available.

Her Pastry Baskets contain tuna or chicken salad in an edible, waffle-like basket. The chicken salad has big chunks of chicken, with apple and grapes on the side. Individual salads include garden, julienne and spinach.

Kottler serves 14- to 16-ounce, baked Idaho potatoes with all kinds of homemade toppings, such as Lo-Cal Veggie, Taco Potato, and Beef Stroganoff. She started with the idea of baked potatoes, borrowing it from one of the food boutiques at Tally Hall, where she worked with the leasing agent.

Pizza bagsels, a different quiche each day, cream of broccoli soup and a special soup daily are other offerings.

Of the fresh foods over merely fast foods, her director of operations, Dan Bartoletta, said, "This is the next thing in the restaurant business." Kottler noted, "People are more concerned with what they put in their bodies."

Second runs Tom Panzenhagen

"Father Goose" (1964), 12:27 to-night on Ch. 9. Originally 115 minutes.

Cary Grant as a shiftless, no-account duty shirker in his next-to-last film and Leslie Caron as an overbearing, ethnocentric nanny in charge of a brood of squawking, self-centered girls? No thanks. Trevor Howard co-stars. Rating: $1.40.

"The Mark of Zorro" (1940), 1 p.m. Friday on Ch. 50. Originally 93 minutes.

Veteran filmmaker Rouben Mamoulian's "Zorro" is predictable but stylish, and they really don't make 'em like that too often anymore. Co-star Basil Rathbone by 1940 was making his mark as a film villain, having engaged Errol Flynn in a duel to the death in "Robin Hood" in 1939. He's back for more sword play here with Tyrone Power. Linda Darnell also stars. Rating: $2.80.

"The Enemy Below" (1957), 11:45 p.m. Sunday on Ch. 4. Originally 98 minutes.

Consider the career of actor/director Dick Powell, who outgrew chorus boy parts in such films as "42nd Street" and "Hollywood Hotel" in the '30s and early '40s and went on to star in, and direct, such interesting pictures as "Murder My Sweet," "Johnny O'Clock" and "The Enemy Below" in the late '40s and 1950s. He directed the latter, a taut, World War II yarn that offers a revealing glimpse of our wartime enemies. Robert Mitchum, Curt Jurgens and Theodore Bikel star. Rating: $3.

"Living Free" (1972), 2 Monday night on Ch. 4. Originally 91 minutes.

Unusual selections make tasty 'Nightcap'

By Avigdor Zaremp
special writer

Last Friday the "Nightcap with Mozart" weekly series went ahead without the presence of its founder and director, Milaha Rachlevsky. That is, without his physical presence.

But he was still there in spirit (which proves that living people may have spirits, too). Rachlevsky, at this writing, is on a special classical music cruise to Alaska. With the rest of us sweltering under the prolonged heatwave, the thought of Alaska is tempting indeed.

Before his departure, Rachlevsky remarked that he wouldn't mind the cool weather of Siberia, "but only for six seconds," he hastened to add.

Guest artists on this program were flutist Laura Larson, violinist Darryl Jeffers and pianist Fontaine Laling.

LAING is well known to "Nightcap" audiences, having played there numerous times before. Jeffers, a new viola player with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, was hired by the orchestra last spring. Larson has a music degree from the University of Miami and was assistant principal flute with the Miami Philharmonic.

review

Most of the works on the program were little-known compositions, as is frequently the case in this series.

The one exception was the charming Sonata for Flute and Piano by Poulenc. There also were compositions by Hoffmeister, Mozart, Boehm, Rameau and Peter Nero.

The entire program was characterized by spontaneous, refreshing vigor. While not all the selections were masterpieces in the strict sense, their presentation provided a most rewarding experience, which is quite different from the impact of more conventional compositions.

The opening selection was by Franz Anton Hoffmeister (1754-1812), who is almost forgotten today, except for some of his flute compositions. The allegro performed was from a duo for a rare combination — viola and flute.

THIS was followed by a composition by Mozart — a Sonata in C Major for Piano and Flute K. 14. One very seldom encounters such an early Koechel number, and with good reason.

This work was composed when Mozart was 8 years old. By an absolute standard, it is not a mature composition. But one could hardly notice that from the enthusiastic performance.

Theobald Boehm (1794-1881) isn't recognized as a major composer, but he was instrumental in the invention of the modern flute in the middle of the 19th century.

His set of variations on "Nel Cor Più" features virtuosity of the flute which Larson demonstrated most convincingly. The theme is quite familiar, having been used by Beethoven in his own set of piano variations.

While Boehm does not match Beethoven as a composer, I found these variations more enjoyable than Beethoven's variations on that theme.

FOLLOWING an excellent performance of the Poulenc Sonata, Jeffers joined his colleagues for the two last works. One of these was a rare glimpse at Rameau, with his work in three movements, titled "Premier Concert."

The last composition initially evoked negative reactions in me when seeing the title — "Scratch my Back" by Peter Nero. But its performance proved to be a most delightful parody on Bach's style, featuring jazz rhythm with contrapuntal structure.

The entire group was so electrified by the piece that the vibrations proved contagious and spread throughout the audience.

This piece also contained a couple of surprising quotations from other works. One of them turned out to be from the national anthem of Israel, "Hatikvah."

It could have been an omen for my pending trip to Israel. This was followed by a quotation from "Carmen" by Bizet. Maybe next time I should plan a trip to Spain.

Pianist Schiff delivers rewarding performance

By Avigdor Zaremp
special writer

The Meadow Brook Music Festival is now drawing to an end — with this week left. The artistic director of the festival for the last few seasons, Neville Marriner, came here to conduct the final two weeks of this season.

While his contract should have lasted one more season, he had asked to be relieved of his duties here at the end of this one. Marriner, of course, has a very wide international reputation. His name is mostly associated with the Academy of the St. Martin-in-the-Fields, a prominent chamber ensemble that he founded.

His skill in conducting a large major orchestra, however, is not universally acknowledged. His performance on this latest program was an improvement over his performance last season, which was considered by many to be disappointing.

However, some flaws in this performance still tend to give some credence to his critics.

THE PROGRAM consisted of the "Divertissement" by Ibert, a suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss and the first Piano Concerto by Tchaikovsky. The soloist in the celebrated Tchaikovsky concerto was the young, Hungarian-born pianist, Andras Schiff.

The two compositions in the first part of the program have something in common. Both are compositions by 20th-century composers that reflect a nostalgic reflection of a bygone era, featuring Viennese waltzes.

For Ibert, this is a less characteristic manifestation, since he tended to be more modern in his other works. Strauss, of course, remained an unabashed romantic until his death in 1949.

Of the two compositions, the one by Strauss is, in my opinion, the superior composition. But the Ibert work

review

received a far better performance.

Several themes are well known, in particular the fun-poking quotation from Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The carefree spirit of this composition was well reflected in this pleasant performance.

The Rosenkavalier suite, with its large-scale orchestra characteristics, failed to deliver the appropriate impact. Strauss, who was a master of large orchestration, had the unique ability to combine massive complexity with refinement. While the massiveness was there, at least in terms of decibels, the refinement was missing.

THIS WAS the case in the waltz following the introduction. But even in the more massive sections, the tonal spectrum that came through was narrow and deficient.

The Tchaikovsky concerto is, of course, a popular "war-horse," and it is a major challenge to make it not sound like one. In this respect, pianist Andras Schiff was at least musically successful.

Technically, it is one of the most difficult pieces in the standard piano repertoire, and Schiff was having some difficulties in this area.

SOME of the compounded arpeggios and double octaves in the first movement contained wrong notes, and in the coda of the third movement there were a couple of very rough landings. But there were substantial parts between the flaws that were very rewarding.

Schiff's performance underscored a uniquely refined and reflective approach to this characteristically rough composition, but with no lack of vigor and energy.

2 1-acts: one good, one so-so

Performances of the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford production of a "Pair of Plays" continues at 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday at the Theatre Guild Playhouse, 15138 Beech Daly, just south of Five Mile Road in Redford. Tickets at $2.50 may be reserved by calling 348-2817. By Debi Baranien special writer

"An Actor's Nightmare" and "Black Comedy" are both avant-garde comedies that impact the audience more directly than would more traditional selections.

Both one-acts, presented by the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford, are curiously thought-provoking. The comedies are the culmination of the guild's second annual Summer Theatre Workshop.

The better of the two plays, "An Actor's Nightmare," is the least well-produced. It is a disappointment. Generally, the play is well cast, and the performances are good. Ric Winfrey portrays George Spelvin, a confused accountant, thrust on a stage without knowing his lines or even what play he's in.

Winfrey gives a strong performance. He is confused, humorously pathetic and genuinely entertaining. Other good performances are given by Robin Abrams, Karen Collareno, David Tucker II and Daniel Taylor. Each performs as other members of George's cast.

review

INDIVIDUAL performances are good, but the play's overall presentation lacks energy and enthusiasm. The players' interaction is stilted, and the show's pacing is not consistent.

Marcia Jones' lighting is effective in this one-act. Spotlights and black outs are well timed. For the most part, costuming is also well done.

The components of a good production are evident. More guidance and motivation from the director, and these components would have meshed and become an exciting presentation.

The second one-act, "Black Comedy," is really well presented. The cast is wonderful. They interact well and perform with zest and enthusiasm.

Special mention goes to Carol Loomis in the role of Mrs. Farnival. It is Loomis' debut as an actress, and she is simply great. Loomis is a genuinely funny character actress. You won't get enough of her.

DENNIS KLEINSMITH is a completely believable homosexual art dealer. Wendy Milano gives a good portrayal of an obnoxious debutante. Tom Loomis is wonderful as her overbearing father. Stephen Bell and Daniel Taylor present solid characters in their roles.

Colleen Hackney is almost frightening as a vindictive drunk. Alan Madeleine is really outstanding as the poor, bewildered artist trying to please everyone but only finding himself in more hot water.

The set is well done. It is an important facet of this play, and it functions well. Lighting for this show is complex and difficult. There are moments that lighting cues lag, but these only detract slightly from the quality of the show.

Of the two scripts, I liked this one-act the least. Its basic gag becomes tedious, despite the fact the production is so good. Still, the play offers artistic and technical challenge, and the cast and crew rise to the occasion with flair.

Congratulations to Judy Pierson. It is her debut in the role of director, and she shows great potential. Pierson can be proud of her first effort. This production is worth seeing.

Youth Symphony sets tryouts

Metropolitan Youth Symphony has slated auditions for its 1983-84 season Saturday, Aug. 27, at Nardin Park Methodist Church in Farmington Hills.

Young music students from the Detroit area are being invited to join this new youth organization, which completed its premiere season last year.

Interested music students in grades 5-12 should call for an audition appointment by Monday, Aug. 22. Contact persons are Martha Stefanko or Betty Navey, at 561-7242.

Rehearsals are Saturdays from September-May at the Southfield-Lathrup High School on 12 Mile Road. Three formal concerts and a mid-year scholarship competition are planned.

The three conductors who shared the podium last season are returning. Leif Bjaland will conduct the symphony orchestra, Douglas Bianchi will lead the concert orchestra and Judith Culler again will guide the youngest musicians in the string orchestra.

5 Hats plays Mountain Jack's

The group 5 Hats will play jazz and rhythm and blues from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Mondays-Saturdays beginning Monday, Aug. 29, at Mountain Jack's on Rochester Road in Troy. The band will continue through Oct. 1.

Singing under the stars

Soprano Kim Mansian and baritone Mark Vondrak will perform highlights from Broadway's best with the Oakway Symphony Orchestra, directed by Francesco DiBlasi. The show starts at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 23, in the open court of historical Botsford Inn, Grand River at Eight Mile, Farmington Hills. Tickets at $8 are available from Hammell Music and Madonna College in Livonia, and from Botsford Inn and Executive Office Supplies in Farmington. Jazz-pop star enjoys Michigan

By James Windell
special writer

When the crossover king of jazz-oriented pop music says he enjoys playing in Michigan, it's not just your usual hype intended for local consumption.

Bob James really means it. On a tour that started at the National Music Camp at Interlochen last Monday, James and his band will end a six-city tour of the Midwest at 8 p.m. Monday at Meadow Brook Music Festival on the Oakland University campus near Rochester.

The Columbia Records artist is currently one of the hottest musicians in jazz, with three albums on Billboard's Best-Selling Jazz Chart.

Last week he and his family vacationed in Traverse City as they do every summer. James says Michigan is very special for him.

"My daughter Hilary, who's 17 and a singer, is in camp at the National Music Camp, and we've got relatives in Michigan, so we naturally gravitate here," keyboard player and arranger James said by phone from Traverse City.

"WE THINK the area is beautiful, and all year long we can't wait to get here, and at the end of the summer we hate to leave."

James graduated from the music department at the University of Michigan, even though he was born and raised in Marshall, Mo. While in college in Ann Arbor, he met his wife, Judy, who's originally from Plymouth.

Since moving to New York, James established himself as a fixture in the music world in the late 1960s through sparkling piano backup work on albums by Dionne Warwick, Roberta Flack, Aretha Franklin, Grover Washington and Maynard Ferguson.

That he hasn't lost touch with the area also is reflected in his touring band. Among the seven musicians who tour with him are guitarist Bruce Dunlap, who hails from Plymouth and graduated from Interlochen Arts Academy, and Alexander Zonjic, Zonjic is the flutist who lives in Windsor but was discovered by James at Baker's Keyboard Lounge in Detroit.

"Word had got out to me in New York," James said, "that there was this guy around here I should check out."

"One night that I didn't particularly feel like hanging out I decided to do it anyway, and I heard Alex. I was very, very impressed with him."

THAT WAS almost two years ago, and Zonjic has accompanied James on tours ever since.

Also in the band are saxophonist Mark Colby, trumpeter Bret Murphy, drummer Harvey Mason, percussionist Leonard "Doc" Gibbs and bassist Gary King.

Although the repertoire for this tour hadn't been set by last week, James said he will showcase some new compositions. The band also will play some of the Bob James favorites from his present album, "The Gentle," as well as from past LPs.

Bob James and his band are on a six-city tour of the Midwest that will include a stop at Meadow Brook Monday night.

Although that music has been castigated from some quarters as being crossover, commercial and impure, James wouldn't have it any other way.

"For the last 10 years that's been one of the things that's intrigued me about jazz," he said, "I think we have a whole new idiom that came about because of a combination of influences on musicians."

"I THINK IT has been exciting, and it has definitely changed the face of jazz, and while doing it has brought it to life."

"The public had lost sight of jazz during the rock revolution in the '60s, and it took something like this to get jazz back into the mainstream of society, which I think is a healthy thing."

The articulate and always friendly James — ever the impeccable spokesman for jazz-oriented crossover music — adds the historically correct kicker.

"Before jazz became a serious form of music, it was dance music and entertainment. Those were the valuable roots of jazz as far as I'm concerned."

At a concert, James prefers an audience that is reactive rather than one that regards jazz as a "serious art form." "I'd rather have people react instinctively," he explained, "because all reactions are valuable, even those that are a gut-level primitive, as long as they come naturally."

AWARE THAT not everyone, especially jazz critics, reacts positively to his music, James thinks he must be doing something right, as his albums have appealed to a large audience since 1975. Success to James only means he gets to keep doing what brings him pleasure, however.

"That's the best part," he said, "I guess the first few solo albums I made had a built-in pessimism that was based on many years of thinking that my type of music would not bring me success."

"But I had so much fun making those records I hoped I could get to keep doing it for a while, even though I knew eventually things would have to change around."

"As it's turned out, this period of doing my own thing has lasted longer than I ever thought it would. I just try to enjoy it while it lasts."

Besides enjoying doing his own thing with his music, James doesn't take his recordings lightly. When it comes to making an album, he attempts to avoid complacency.

"LISTEN TO the new, young players, and I realize that there are a lot of exciting fresh ideas and that music is changing all the time."

"To some degree, I'm trying to keep up with those changes by listening to young musicians and trying to relate to them so my music moves ahead."

Even more important than moving ahead is James' own sense of musical integrity. "I try to stay with what naturally appeals to me," he said.

"When I get to the end of a new album, and I like it, I feel like there's a good chance that other people will respond in the same way."

Mime's play debuts

'Old boy network' gets results: jobs

By Tim Richard
staff writer

"I've had 11 or 12 jobs, and I got all but one through word of mouth," counselor Judy Hoppin tells job hunters at Oakland University's Continuum Center.

"The old method of sending out 100 resumes isn't doing it. The same with job placement agencies," says the Birmingham resident who has a private personal and career counseling service besides teaching at OU.

Here is the kind of advice one would expect in a small town, where "it's not what you know but who you know" that counts. But in a decentralized megalopolis, with big corporations, giant institutions and affirmative action programs?

"Eighty percent of jobs are found by personal contacts," answers Hoppin, who will conduct a workshop in how to create an "old-boy network" to get job leads.

HER WORKSHOP is one of a Job Hunting Series which began Tuesday in 209 O'Dowd Hall on the Oakland University campus near Rochester.

The remaining four workshops may be taken individually ($15 each) or as a group ($55). They meet Tuesdays and Thursdays. Registration information is available from the Continuum Center at 377-3033.

The other workshops:
● Resumes — their necessity, how to catch an employer's eye, format, content and style.

● Packaging yourself — appearance, projecting the right image.

● Job interviewing techniques — what to say and not to say, leading from strength, anticipating difficult questions, negotiating salary and benefits, also an opportunity for videotaped practice with professional critiques.

HOPPIN FINDS her groups are almost equally divided between men and women.

She admits women who have been out of the work force raising families have a slight disadvantage in developing job hunting contacts. But only a slight disadvantage.

"It's a matter of attitude. Your attitude has to be that it's OK to ask other people to help you," she says.

She uses herself as an example. She once listed several relatives who might have leads — an uncle at Chrysler, a brother at Gulf + Western, a mother in advertising, a husband in business. Just asking them, she found 50 sources.

"It's amazing who other people know that you didn't know about," she says, a tone of amazement in her voice.

Over the years, she has had jobs in a foundry office, an insurance agency, as a teacher aide (while raising her own children), and as a tester for vocational rehabilitation operation in Detroit. She now has a master's degree in counseling from OU.

OTHER TECHNIQUES are to ask for contacts during job interviews and join professional associations. "Almost every occupational group you can think of as an association," she said.

As a workshop exercise, she sometimes asks, "Who wants information on a particular job and company?" When a participant names a job or company, she asks the class, "Can anyone help?"

"Do you know that in a group of 20, five hands will go up?"

Red ink may sink All-Stars

"We're committed to it. It's just going to take a few years to get it going."

— Armand Vigna

BEFORE WE GET into the meat of this one, I want to make it clear that the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association should be commended for the work it has put into its annual all-star football game.

Those who questioned whether or not the game would fly seem convinced now that it can — evidenced by the exciting 24-10 East victory Saturday at the third all-star game in East Lansing.

Gentlemen like MHSFCA president Dick Harris and secretary-treasurer Don Lessner (to name just two), have put a great deal of time into staging the game, which showcases some of the best high school football players from the previous season.

The game should continue. That's all there is to it. But making it work is the problem with which the association is confronted. And when it has its annual meeting Nov. 30 to pick the regional football coaches of the year, it must make decisions as to how the game will make money.

THE BIGGEST enigma is finding a way to beef up the attendance for the games. In each of the three contests, attendance figures fell well below the number the coaches hoped to get. In 1981 at the inaugural game, approximately 7,800 were on hand to see the East pull out a 6-3 victory. The following year, about 7,200 fans showed up, and the coaches association was sacked for an $8,000 loss.

This year, an even sparser crowd (5,708) saw the all-star game, and the association can expect an even bigger loss in the numbers column, since Lessner said it would take between 12,000-15,000 fans just to break even.

There have been a couple of suggestions for eliminating this problem. One is to get McDonald's to underwrite the cost of the game, then lifting the burden off the coaches' backs. Proceeds — so far there haven't been any — would go to support the Michigan Ronald McDonald House. Certainly the association isn't to blame for the lack of fan support. Press releases far in advance give notice to media in the state. There's even a press day a week before the game. Hometown newspapers eat that stuff up, though the same isn't true with the dailies.

Another possible alternative is moving the site of the game from Michigan State University to a facility nearer the Detroit area where it's more populous. That's not to say MSU hasn't been a gracious enough host. It just seems people from the Detroit area are not willing to travel that far on a Saturday afternoon in August to watch an exhibition football game.

THAT WAS my number one concern when the game originated three years ago. The attendance figures since then reinforce my belief. Sunday, I bumped into my former high school coach — Jack Bridges from Edsel Ford — and we got talking about the possibility of moving the game. Bridges was one of those coaches who was apprehensive about the game from the outset, but is all in favor now.

"As far as making it a financial success, they have to come to where the people are," Bridges said. "Now, arranging a facility, that's going to be a stumbling block."

Akin to the "State's Great" bumper stickers, the coaches have discovered an overwhelming satisfaction with the facilities on the East Lansing campus. Everything is available to them — from dorm rooms and food commons to the practice facilities and Spartan Stadium.

"We get great cooperation from Michigan State," Lessner said. "They're first class all the way. We've had no problems, there's just not enough attendance."

Farmington Harrison head football coach John Herrington, who also is public relations director for the association, echoed Lessner's sentiments.

"MICHIGAN STATE is so good in giving us room and board ($135 per athlete for 10 days), and I doubt we could get that somewhere else, but I don't know," Herrington said. "A move is possible, but it seems the outstate people support it more. I think unless we get a sponsor to underwrite the game, we won't have a game."

Lessner also indicated outstate people are more supportive, and a move to the Detroit area isn't necessarily the answer.

"We have clinics for the coaches association, and our worst attendance is in the Detroit area," he said. "We've had them at Troy Athens and in Southfield, and there weren't very many coaches. Outstate coaches support them (the clinics) better."

Livonia Franklin coach Armand Vigna sees a move as a possible alternative, although he's not convinced a journey this way would solve the problem either.

"A move to a big center of population that's easier to get to possibly would help," Vigna said. "I have mixed feelings. Michigan State has treated us real nice. It's a nice place to play the game, but at the same time, you recognize you have to put people in the stands to make the game."

"DON'T FORGET the people from the western part of the state and the Upper Peninsula. A central location is fair. But if it means (moving the game) to continue it, I'd be for moving it."

All-Stars shine, but no one sees

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

"Ladies and gentlemen, the attendance for the third annual High School Coaches Association All Star game . . . 5,708."

A queer silence spread across spacious Spartan Stadium on the campus of Michigan State University in East Lansing after MSU sports information man John Pearson read off the day's attendance figures.

In the press box, several high school coaches lowered their heads. For the third straight year, their game — the showcase of Michigan high school football — had failed to win the support of the fans. It had again lost money.

The coaches were not pleased. They had put on a good show and nobody saw it. They put the best football players in the state on the same field and let them go at it. The result was an intense, exciting football game.

But, hardly anybody saw it.

"I WISH WE'D have had more people out there," said Livonia Franklin head coach and offensive coordinator for the East All-Stars, Armand Vigna. "The kids deserve it. I thought it was a great football game. It was a wide-open affair on both sides. There was a lot of passing, a lot of sacks. There were long kick-off returns. People would have enjoyed watching this game."

The East, led by the strong and accurate arm of Farmington Harrison quarterback Ken Kish, prevailed over its opponents from the West, 24-10.

Kish, who leaves next week for Albion College, completed six of 14 passes good for 191 yards and two touchdowns. Kish gained more yards passing than the West squad gained in total, 191-143.

The West took the opening kickoff and promptly marched down to the East 18-yard line before the East defense stiffened. After West quarterback Marcelle Calverton of Lansing East ern was sacked by Westland John Glenn's Jack Walker and Brother Rice's Mark Nichols, Lance Loughman kicked a 45-yard field goal to stake the West to a 3-0 lead.

ROCHESTER ADAMS' split end Terry Allen, who didn't find out he was playing in the game until a week before practices started, hauled in a 43-yard strike from Livonia Franklin quarterback Richard Popp to get the East offense moving. Allen was a last-minute substitute for Kevin Harris of Fordson. Allen's catch set up a 15-yard touchdown run by Riverview fullback John Blackwell. Farmington Harrison kicker Dave Blackmer added the point after.

On the West's first play from scrimmage after the touchdown, DuWayne Pitts intercepted a Carruthers' pass. Five plays later, it appeared Allen had caught a 30-yard touchdown pass from Popp. The referee, however, ruled that Allen pushed off on the defender and the score was nullified.

Kish came in at the start of the second quarter and promptly turned the ball over to the West by fumbling a bad snap. On his next series Kish atoned for the mistake.

Kish, with the help of two outstanding catches by Dan Glidden from Owen-Gage, marched the East 80 yards in seven plays and capped it off by firing a 39-yard strike to Glidden. Blackmer hit the extra point and the East led 14-3 with 3:49 left in the half.

TWO PLAYS LATER, Pitts picked off his second pass of the half. That set the stage for the state's premier place-kicker Blackmer. From 44 yards out, the University of Wisconsin-bound kicker split the uprights with plenty of yardage to spare.

The next play alone was worth the price of admission.

Elks self-destruct in Mack regionals

By C.J. Rieck
staff writer

The Plymouth-Canton Elks were "as good as anyone there" according to coach Dave Racer, but the team couldn't overcome itself as it dropped out of the nine-team Connie Mack regional baseball tournament with consecutive losses Saturday at Marshall High School.

The game that ended the Elks' season was a 3-1 loss to defending champion Saginaw. Earlier in the day, the Elks lost to Grand Rapids, 5-1.

Mike Battaglia hurled a three-hitter against Saginaw but five errors proved costly. All three Saginaw runs were unearned. Plymouth-Canton rapped out seven hits but self-destructed before taking advantage.

"WE HAD THE leadoff man on base in four (of seven) innings," Racer said. "And we had the first two men on base in three innings. We just were not playing heads-up ball. I think the kids were mentally tired."

What hurt the Elks' scoring chances was having a pair of baserunners picked off base. The team's only run crossed the plate in the second inning as Marty McCarthy singled and scampered home on Don Taylor's double.

Taylor finished the game with three hits, while Tim Collins had two.

Saginaw scored twice in the second on one hit. A walk, an error by shortstop Mike Scarpello, a passed ball by Collins, a sacrifice fly and a single got the two Saginaw runs in.

A single, a sacrifice, a second Scarpello error and a squeeze bunt gave Saginaw an insurance run in the fifth. Racer had snuffed out the squeeze play and called for a pitchout, but Battaglia failed to execute.

THE ELKS had seven hits against Grand Rapids but again failed to take advantage.

Grand Rapids scored three runs in the first and added single tallies in the fifth and sixth.

Plymouth-Canton got its only run in the sixth on a double by Jim Dillon and a single by Collins. Dillon was the only Elk with two hits in the contest.

John Nissen started for the Elks and was saddled with the loss. Mark Bennett relieved in the fifth and finished the game.

Racer was at a loss in trying to explain the setback against Grand Rapids.

Erika vows them for 3 U.S. titles

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

HEADLINE: Local girl wins gold in Cerebral Palsy Games.

It may not be the biggest story in the world of sports but there are few more touching. Cynics might argue it doesn't belong in sports at all, that it should be in the feature pages somewhere. But if the cynics don't think that Erika Benjamin's accomplishments are big enough or sporting enough, if they don't think she's truly an athlete, well, they've probably never seen her struggle to run 200 meters around a track or pull herself exhausted out of a pool.

They've never seen her riding her bike to her summer job at Westland John Glenn High School, either, where she pulled weeds under a hot sun when the temperature and humidity were often both in the 90s, for the money she needed to make the trip to the CP Games in Fort Worth, Tex.

They never saw her stroking through the water in practice, making muscles work that have never worked right; and they never saw her stroking through the water during her heats at the games; and they never saw the look on her face when she won, the unbelieving, joyous face with a smile that made a Cheshire cat's look like a grimace, expressing so clearly the pure thrill of victory for someone who has so often known its opposite, the agony of lifetime physical failure.

ERIKA DOESN'T speak very well. Her story isn't filled with quips and good quotes. Verbally, she often answers with simple words or phrases

gold medalist

that won't be misunderstood: yes, no. But expressively, ah, that's another matter. There, her answers are heavy with meaning; when she talks about her physical successes, of winning three gold medals and one silver medal after 18 years of struggle, the words are short but the face is sweet. Joy is so thick on her face, it might have been painted on.

Erika, and the 1,000 other athletes at the Cerebral Palsy Games early this month, compete according to the severity of their palsy, which is a birth defect. Erika walks well and is physically stronger than many with CP, but she has limited use of her hands and speaks poorly. She probably will never drive a car, and language problems have delayed her graduation from Glenn (she will be a junior this fall).

After his field goal, Blackmer kicked off to Dean Altobelli of the West. Altobelli handed the ball off on a reverse play to Glennard Smith and Smith zigzagged 98 yards for an apparent touchdown. Unfortunately for the West, clipping was detected on the play and the score was nullified.

The half ended with the East ahead 17-3.

The tension between the two squads became visible in the second half. Several shoving matches were broken up by the officials. Catholic Central's Jeff Gatt broke up a pass intended for Kelly Spielmaker and the two became entangled.

"I HIT HIM and we got tangled up. My leg was between his knees and he started twisting it. I pushed him off me because my knee was starting to give a little. He came back at me and I just sort of lost my head," Gatt said.

Gatt, who will attend Hillsdale College next year, was slapped with a 15-yard penalty.

"You've got to remember," said Vigna about the skirmishes, "these kids are thoroughbreds — they came here to compete. You put these kids in pads and they're going to go out and get it. You're going to have a little jawing back and forth, and you're going to have a little roughness."

The West got back in the game early in the third quarter following a fumble by Roland Stevens. Altobelli scored on a 17-yard run and Loughman converted the point after.

After getting sacked six times, four times in the third quarter, Kish connected again with Glidden, this time good for 89 yards and a touchdown. The score tied the game for the East.

THE OBSERVER & Eccentric area players performed well in the contest. Besides Kish, Popp, Blackmer, Gatt, Walker, Allen, and Nichols, Brian Munson from Bloomfield Hills Lahser carried the ball four times for 34 yards and caught a pass good for 15.

David Houle from Plymouth Salem and Bob Stebbins from Franklin, both tight ends, did not catch any passes but blocked effectively for the East.

Bob Martz, who played tight end for Lahser and will be a defensive tackle at Notre Dame this fall, played offensive tackle for the first time in his career. The 6-foot-8, 250-pounder played a solid game.

Walker and Nichols were each in on a pair of quarterback sacks for the East.

As good as the game was, there was a pensive feeling among the members of the Michigan High School Coaches Association afterwards. Many were discouraged by the lack of fan support for the game. Many were angry that television station WDIV decided not to televise the game. Many wondered whether the coaches could afford to host the game next year.

"We can't keep losing money year after year," said Vigna. "I wish the people would have come out. This was an entertaining football game. Not a high school game, but a college freshman game."

A decision by the coaches' association will be made at their annual meeting in November as to whether or not the game will continue to exist.

"We're committed to it," said Vigna. "It's just going to take a few years to get it going."

In pool and on track, Erika wows 'em

She has been swimming in the backyard pool of her Westland home since she was a little girl. And she wears her official Tortoise and Hare Track Club running shirt as if she were a veteran of the track. But she has been competing for less than a year, so you can forgive her when she admits she was too excited earlier this month in Fort Worth to notice how many people she had to beat out for the gold in her various events.

"I was too nervous," admits Erika while posing for a photographer in the family pool. She pauses. "I'm sorry I didn't count." She isn't really sorry. It's a joke, not a big one, but it's funny at the time and the photog. hard-bitten reporter and her mother, Helga, break up.

She was nervous before she left for Fort Worth, too. "Oh, she didn't want to leave home," teased Helga, a native of Germany who has been in the U.S. for 19 years. (Erika's dad, Richard, is an assembly worker at the Ford plant in Ypsilanti; sister Kimberly, who was born without cerebral palsy, will be a sophomore at Glenn this fall.) "She cried and cried."

Erika laughs at the thought. Was it worth the tears? "Yeah. I enjoy it."

"She enjoys the attention," chips in mom. "You guys are here. The Free Press called. She's the big star." Not to mention the neighborhood kids hanging around, oohing and aahing over the medals Erika wore around her neck for the picture session. She was used to being noticed perhaps, but not used to being noticed for her prowess.

FOR THE RECORD, Erika, who qualified for the nationals during regional competition in Ypsilanti, won her gold medals in the 200-meter run, the 25-meter freestyle and the 25-meter backstroke. Also for the record, Erika wants it known she has no intention of quitting on top. She's already training for next year's regionals and nationals. Next year, too, is the Cerebral Palsy World Games in New York City.

"So, maybe next year, if she does good, you can come back, eh?" says Helga.

Definitely. Sorry, feature department, sports has first dibs.

Salem is ousted, champs advance

The Wayne-Ford Civic League (WFCL) Mickey Mantle baseball team is on that road again.

The Westland-based squad rolled to the World Series championship of the National Amateur Baseball Federation (NABF) a year ago, beating Baltimore in the finals. Now the WFCL team will once again gun for the NABF title, but this time it will have to eliminate Baltimore in the first round.

WFCL, a member of the Little Caesars Baseball Federation, earned its berth in the World Series by beating Detroit PAL champ Frank's Stadium Service, 13-2, in Saturday's NABF junior regional tournament final at Plymouth Stadium.

WFCL plays Baltimore in the first game of the series today, following opening ceremonies. The team will then play two games tomorrow, with the tournament's final round scheduled for Saturday.

Regional host-team Plymouth Salem DiPonio was ousted from the tournament after losing its first two contests, 6-4 to WFCL Thursday and 8-5 to Frank's Stadium Service Friday.

WFCL CLAIMED its second straight regional title with five straight victories in a three-day span. Pitching proved to be instrumental; the Detroit PAL team ran out of arms and the final contest turned into a rout, ending after five innings due to the mercy rule.

"It was a combination of things," reflected WFCL coach Jerry Pitcher. "We got some pretty good pitching out of everybody, though."

In the finals, Jeff Golding started and went the first 2 1/2 innings, giving way to Steve Irwin, who finished up. Irwin was the beneficiary of an eight-run fourth inning that led the victory for WFCL.

Bob Tansey doubled in a pair of runs in the uprising and Paul Oster added a two-run single. Both players finished with two hits and two RBI. Derrick Dowling collected three hits, including a run-scoring single in the fourth, and Steve Radomski contributed a pair of safeties.

ON FRIDAY, WFCL edged past the team Pitcher called "the tournament favorite" — Macomb County League champs Utica Technical Services. WFCL came up with three runs in the sixth to top Utica, 7-5.

Tansey got the pitching win, but he needed relief help from Glenn Belcher in the bottom of the sixth.

WFCL took advantage of Utica's pitching generosity to score its three runs on just one hit in the sixth. Belcher started it with a walk and Gerry Wnuk doubled. Utica pitchers then walked Stan Laffery, Case Simpson, Jason McArge and Darryl Brees to force in all three runs.

Earlier on Friday, WFCL dusted off Allen Park, 7-4, behind Oster's three hits and two apiece by Brees and Dowling. Belcher relieved Dave Jensen in the third and went the rest of the way for the victory.

ON THURSDAY, WFCL got past

DAN DEAN/staff photographer

Wayne-Ford Civic League reliever Steve Irwin shut down the Detroit PAL champs over the final 2 1/2 innings of the NABF Junior Regional championship contest, enabling his team to retain its tourney crown.

Detroit Renaissance, 2-0, and Plymouth Salem DiPonio, 6-4.

WFCL scored five times in the first, then held on to beat DiPonio. Tansey and Oster each had RBI singles in the rally before Belcher unloaded a three-run homer. Radomski doubled in another run in the third.

Salem scored four times in the seventh on four hits, a walk and two errors. Key blows in the frame were run-scoring singles by Mike McKinney and Jim Rosabacher and a two-run triple by Chris Belhart. Belhart gathered three hits for DiPonio.

Wnuk went the first five innings for the win, with Golding finishing.

Simpson provided the heroics in the Renaissance triumph, singling in Belcher with two out in the third and driving in Glenn Arquette with a double in the fifth. Steve Irwin fired a two-hitter, striking out 14, to claim the victory.

Belhart again topped the Salem hitting attack in the loss to Frank's, going two-for-four. Brian Tiller, Dan Knapp and Doug Wester shared mound duties for DiPonio throughout the tournament.

Will game go on?

My personal feeling is to give it a shot closer to the Detroit area. Possible alternatives would be Eastern Michigan University, the University of Michigan, or the Pontiac Silverdome. Eastern and U-M have the facilities, it's just a matter of making it economical for the association.

The Silverdome would cause some problems since the players would need room and board near Pontiac — and at that time, the Detroit Lions are stationed at Oakland University. Cranbrook may be the answer there, again — if it's affordable.

I certainly would hate to see this game go down the tubes. It's a great experience for the kids, and a fitting conclusion to their high school careers. It would be a shame to lose it, especially after all the hard work the coaches association has put into the game.

I wouldn't want to bet on the likelihood of a fourth all-star game. But I am willing to bet the association will do everything it can to preserve it.

Crowe tough in Mack

It was mercy time Saturday at Ford Field in Livonia when the sluggers of Crowe trounced Sterling Heights, 13-0, in a Connie Mack state tournament game halted for humanitarian reasons after five innings.

Bill Hayes went three innings and gave up just one hit in picking up the win, and John Williams pitched two innings of hitless relief.

The pitchers had plenty of support — catcher Mike Johnson was 2-for-3 with two runs batted in, designated hitter Larry Barbarich was 2-for-3 with two RBI, and first baseman Jim Prokes had a two-run triple.

Crowe takes on Dearborn at Ford Field at noon Thursday in the single-elimination regional, then, if it wins, plays immediately in the title game against an opponent yet to be determined.

Final perfect cap to summer season

By C.J. Rieck
staff writer

What more can one ask in a championship game?

This one certainly had just about everything: top-caliber talent, lots of scoring but still some good defense; a hair-raising comeback; heroics by players on both teams; even a post-game due to "fog".

The game was hockey, and the league wasn't really a league at all — it's called the Michigan Summer Hockey Conditioning Program (MSHCP). Players were selected to play in the MSHCP and were assigned to one of six teams.

The Green team won the regular season title with a 7-1-2 mark. The Black team was second (6-4), followed by White (5-4-1), Gold (4-8), Light Blue (3-5-2) and Dark Blue (2-7-1). Only the top four finishers had a shot at the overall championship.

AND, AS ONE might have guessed, when it was time for the finals, the top two regular season squads had survived.

But "Favorite's-ism" ended there, as the Black team, second during the regular season, quickly jumped in front and then held off a furious Green comeback in a 7-6 title triumph.

It was a spectacular end to a season Black team coach Dean Lucier termed "a tremendous success."

"We probably have two of the best examples of the value of this program. Two of our team's kids were invited to the Herb Brooks Invitational Hockey Camp. At the camp, John Collins was named to the All-Stars first team and Mike Hartman made the All-Stars second team."

As Lucier explained, only the top high school juniors and seniors in the country are invited to the camp, and Collins and Hartman were the only two asked from Michigan. Collins, a Farmington Hills native, will play this season for Detroit Country Day, while Hartman, a left wing from West Bloomfield, will play for a AAA travel team.

STILL, THE MSHCP did not escape its first season unscathed. The Black team bested the Gold, 7-4, in its first round playoff contest, but the season champ Green team had to rally from a 6-1 deficit after two periods to move into the finals with a 7-6 heart-stopper.

So the two best teams were still alive for the finals, but that game was nearly never played. Scheduled for July 31 at the Plymouth Community Center Ice Arena, the championship game was called due to a fog on the ice. The consolation contest between the White and Dark Blue teams was stopped with the score tied at 6-all.

MSHCP officials were forced to reschedule the final game for last Sunday. And the more than 200 fans that showed up were treated to a wild, nonstop skate-and-shoot display.

MIKE NEFF, a West Bloomfield native playing for University of Michigan, and Rich Kromm of Livonia each tallied two goals as the Black sped to a 7-1 lead. Dave McIntyre of Fraser and U-M John Doehr of West Bloomfield and Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook, and Left Sell of Clawson added single goals.

But the Green team made a change in the nets, bringing in Tom Knowland of Ann Arbor and Michigan State University for Dave Cowley of Ann Arbor Pioneer, and it paid off. Knowland shut down the Black team the rest of the way.

THAT'S WHEN the Green team made its move, narrowing the gap to 7-4 after two periods and to 7-6 with five minutes left. Troy Thrun, whom Lucier called "probably the best player in the league," led the Green surge with three goals. An Ypsilanti native, Thrun will attend Western Michigan in the fall.

As close as the Green team came, it couldn't crack Black goalie Jeff Savitsky for the tying goal. Savitsky, who will be a senior at Milford this fall, "made a couple of saves on breakaways when the score was 7-5," Lucier said.

The victory earned the Black team more than bragging rights. This weekend, the squad will travel to Chicago to play the Windy City Summer Hockey League champion and a Windy City League all-star team.

Payne pays despite deckings

By C.J. Rieck
staff writer

Craig Payne flunked another major test last weekend in his quest to represent the nation as boxing's super heavyweight in the Los Angeles Olympics.

But as Payne explained, he failed this exam before the first question was asked. And if the boxing hierarchy that controls the destiny of our country's Olympic fighters maintains its power, Payne feels he may never get back inside the classroom for a retest.

FACTS ARE FACTS, and the fact is that judges ruled Tyrell Biggs, the darling of his amateur boxing class, as winner by decision in the U.S. Pan American Team Trials Saturday in St. Louis, Mo.

In a telephone conversation Monday from Columbus, Ohio, Payne claimed that the fight was decided before he stepped into the ring.

"They already had a press conference set up with Biggs before the fight even started," Payne said.

Which, Payne said Monday, changed his approach to the fight. Only the two top-rated fighters in each weight division were invited to the Pan Am trials.

"I let him off the hook," he said, talking about his two knockdowns of Biggs in the second round. Wire reports Sunday said Payne knocked Biggs down just once.

"At that point, I was there to fight Biggs and nothing else," Payne said. "He was going to the Pan Am games no matter what."

"I KNOCKED him down twice, and he was so hurt he couldn't throw any punches," Payne said. "And you know what? They still gave him the round."

"If they can reasonably explain to me how that can happen, when he didn't even hit me, I'll quit boxing today."

But Payne's answer, when asked why he didn't put Biggs, an adversary he has long been gunning for, away, if he had the chance was a startling revelation.

"The drive to go to the Pan Ams wasn't there, because I knew I wouldn't go," Payne remarked. "I could have put him away but I didn't put him away."

The question then was why didn't Payne finish Biggs off? A third knockdown in the second round (the second, according to Payne, came with nearly two minutes left in the round) would have earned him a technical knockout. Did he let Biggs recover?

"You could say that," the Livonia fighter said.

Craig Payne
no chance to win?

"I'M NOT UNHAPPY with my performance in St. Louis," Payne said. "I wanted to prove something to the people and to Biggs, and I did. I'm playing their game because when it comes right down to it, I'll be on top."

It should be noted that in amateur bouts, knockdown punches score as many points as a jab that hits its target. Still, Payne said that the deck was stacked so high against him he had little, if any, chance to win.

Which explains why he plans on dropping his weight some 20 pounds to fight in the heavyweight class. "The reason I'm getting down that low is that I'll have a choice then, and they won't be able to screw me out of my shot at making the Olympics. I can go in either class."

"That's what I'm getting ready for now — the Olympics. I'll be busy for the next 10 months, but you tell all my friends that I haven't forgotten them. I want to say 'thanks' to all those who helped and supported me."

Payne was in Columbus for the Ohio State Fair, an event he won't fight in due to a sore spot over his left eye. After that, he will meet any of the top-10 rated Michigan challengers in Lansing Sept. 9-11. He'll also fight in the North American Games in Houston Sept. 22.

What Payne is really aiming for, however, is perhaps another shot at Biggs in the USA Amateur Boxing Federation tournament in November.

"That's the only tournament I haven't won," Payne said. Also figured to compete in the tourney is Al Evans, who knocked out Payne at the National Sports Festival in June.

Women topple Guinness record

The women bowlers of America have finally placed bowling in the Guinness Book of World Records.

This recognition came with the final figures of the recent tournament in Las Vegas when 73,760 women competed in the annual event.

According to the Guinness Book this is the largest event held in women's sports. The largest event ever held is the Round The Bay 6.5 mile run in New Zealand.

Along with the final count of participants the prize fund for the women's bowling event reached a new high with $1,627,815.23 being mailed to the prize winners.

THE SALE OF HOT DOGS reached a new high in the Detroit area's Good Old Days promotion over the past weekend. It is estimated that 20 tons of weiners were dispensed over the three day period. While final reports aren't in, Merri-Bowl has the biggest sale with 3500. Next came Woodland Lanes and Westland Bowl each with 2500.

The proprietors were pleased considering that the weekend was one of the hottest of the year.

EDDIE LUBANSKI didn't let the hot weather and the humidity stop him from knocking over the pins in large numbers.

The veteran who was the first to bowl back-to-back perfect games on television paced the trio league at Bel-Aire.

In the four game event he opened with 279, followed with games of 192, 225 and 190 for 886.

His closest rival was Dave Hamilton, the young star who rolled an 802 count.

in the pocket

by W.W. Edgar

WONDERLAND Scoring again was in the men's trio and Dennis Seaman missed the coveted 900 by a single pin. He had games of 222, 226, 217 and 226 for 899.

WONDERLAND LANES The trio league again produced same fancy scoring with Walt Smith pacing the group with 886, but Mike Campton had a 288 for high games. In the men's league, Rudy Schroeder had a 223 and Charlie Celester inserted games of 213 and 222.

Finlan correction

Oops, we goofed. An inaccurate story appeared in the Thursday, Aug. 4 editions. The following is a corrected version.

Laura Houle, a Central Michigan standout during the college season, was named most valuable player in a regional major fastpitch softball tournament in Wisconsin July 23 and 24, though her team, Finlan Agency of Plymouth, was eliminated before the title game.

Finlan played exceptionally well at times during the tournament, beating by a 3-0 score in the first round the Greater Milwaukee Bankettes, the Wisconsin state champions in the Major Division. Finlan's beat a strong Nakoma team, 2-1, and upended The Farm, 3-0.

Finlan's, the Detroit major fastpitch champions for 1983, lost to the W.K.s of Flint, 2-0, and to C&S Products of Buchanan, Mich.

C&M Truck wraps up softball title

C&M Truck Collision of Canton captured first place in the Canton Men's Class C Division One League with a convincing 13-2 thumping of Big Bill's.

C&M, managed by Ken Zawlocki, finished with a record of 15-1.

Leading the way at the plate in the big game, as they did all season, were Charlie Riffle, Steve Nyquist and Al New.

C&M joins Ed Sports, Big Bill's and Superbowl Red in representing their division in the Class C playoffs.

Take another look at your pension

Part I

If you are, like millions of Americans, you are probably counting on your company pension plan to provide a comfortable retirement income. It's time you recognized that when you retire you might be in for a big surprise.

The long recession we have experienced has shaken the foundations of many pension plans. In addition, there are some potential problems in the government's insurance program that is supposed to protect you.

Actuaries periodically publish studies demonstrating that corporate pension plans are soundly financed and are able to meet their obligations. But that blanket assurance conceals several new developments:

- Much of the overall improvement in corporate pension funding reflects increases in the assumed rates of return on investment of the funds' assets. A company that assumes a higher rate doesn't have to put aside as much to pay future benefits.

- The government's Pension Benefit Guarantee Corp. (PBGC) has had to take over several hundred plans that were terminated without sufficient assets to cover pensions employees had been guaranteed. Those bail-outs have seriously drained PBGC's resources.

- There is a trend among corporations to move away from the traditional type of plan that guarantees the employee a predetermined retirement income toward less certain "defined-contribution" programs.

Although it is certainly good to have government insurance available, PBGC's payout might fall short of what a pensioner expects. Note that the PBGC covers only vested benefits. If the plan terminates before you have enough service to become vested, PBGC is not required to pay you for finances and you

those preceding years of service.

For pension plans terminating this year, the agency will not pay more than $1,517.05 a month, no matter how much your vested pension may be. If the plan was amended within five years of termination to provide higher benefits, PBGC will pay only an additional $20 or 20 percent of the monthly increase, whichever is larger, for each year since the change in the plan. Thus, 60 percent of the increase or $60 would be added for a plan terminated after three years.

To be on the safe side, it is best to review your plan to make certain where you stand now and take whatever protective measures you can believe are essential.

Next week, we will provide some guidelines for checking your pension plan.

Buy after study, not on tip

Upon the recommendation of a friend, I bought shares of American Solar King Corp. $36 a share. It came down to $29, but now back up to $26. Do you think I could sell?

This stock for some reason or other has been a popular favorite with a lot of investors. I have been trying to think of some good reason you might have had for buying it in the first place. Was it because it came down from $48 and that made you think it was a good buy?

As I look at the company, I can't see any good reason why anyone would pay as much as $36 a share for it. The company is an excellent illustration of a company with a good story, but no record of earnings, but in which investors are currently speculating.

A year ago, when the stock market was down, it sold at $14. In view of the company's record, even that was a generous price.

SOMEbody IS DOING a much better job selling the company's stock than the company is doing selling its wares. The only report I can find on the company shows that it had a deficit of $1.13 a share in 1979, lost $2.25 a share in 1980, made $.02 in 1981 and lost $.04 a share in 1982.

The recent speculation may have been supported by the fact that for the six months ended January 1983, the company reported earnings of $.55 a today's investor

Thomas E. O'Hara

of the National Association of Investment Clubs share. The company's chairman has been quoted as estimating earnings per share for this year at $1 to $1.33.

THE COMPANY was the subject of comments by Gary Putka in the June 30 Wall Street Journal. This report says the company indicates it has made a sale which will soon be announced in the sum of $25 million. Such a sale would, of course, add enormously to the corporation's value.

The report also brings out the point that a number of the company's past sales are not producing the cash that was expected of them, and that the earnings being reported by the company are not backed by cash receipts.

While we wish this company well, $26 is a lot to pay for the record.

If this was your first stock purchase, I would strongly recommend that you get a good book at your library to give you some of the basics that determine stock value. Before you buy your next stock, look for one where sales have increased at least 50 percent in the last five years, earnings per share are up at least the same amount, and the price of the stock is not more than 15 times last year's earnings.

Everyone in this picture shares something in common. They've all had cancer, and are leading happy, normal lives.

Through progress in treatment, knowing the risks and early detection, over two million individuals have survived cancer.

But most people don't know that. They still think cancer is unbeatable.

A fact which over two million people would like to dispute.

Should you wait for a problem to get your family's eyes checked?

You get your teeth checked regularly. Remember, without fail, to get the kids' booster shots. And yet, most people don't stop to take care of their family's most precious gift—eyesight—until there's a problem.

But the truth is, your eyes can change in a matter of months without your even knowing it, keeping you from seeing things as clearly and crisply as possible.

That's why a regular eye exam is so important. It helps keep your eyesight sharp. And it can correct a little problem before it gets started on its way to becoming a big one.

At Pearle we set aside August as Family Eye Care Month in the hopes you'll make this regular eye exam a habit. And, along with this special month, we'll give you something else to help you remember. A Family Health Record Booklet.

KEEP UP WITH YOUR CHECKUPS.

With this booklet you'll be able to keep your health appointments separate from all the everyday notes jotted down here and there. So you'll always be on top of dental appointments, physicals—and from now on, a yearly eye checkup.

After all, there are so many beautiful things to be seen every day. Make sure you're seeing them the way they're meant to be seen.

*While supplies last.

August is Family Eye Care Month at Pearle.

Foods put these towns on the map

©1983 NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY

IN CASTROVILLE, Calif., they have a saying: Anything you can do with potatoes, you can do with artichokes and you can do it better.

Castroville is the artichoke capital of the world. In Vidalia, Ga., Dick Walden says that when his wife bakes Vidalia sweet onions, he sometimes thinks that she has secretly sprinkled sugar on them because they are so sweet and mild.

In Jay, Okla., youngsters protect the locations of their wild huckleberry patches so they'll have a steady supply to sell to Kelley's IGA, which makes huckleberry preserves.

Jay is the huckleberry capital of the world. And in Gilroy, Calif., the worst recipe using garlic they've collected was for an aphrodisiac: slice a banana lengthwise, slather it with peanut butter and cover it all with whole garlic cloves.

THERE ARE TOWNS like this all over the United States, all with the title of "something or other capital of the world." There is nothing official about such designations; they are self-awarded, and other towns would probably quibble about some of them.

But they often play a major part in establishing a town's identity, in recognizing a unique crop and in promoting tourism.

The way capital status is conferred varies widely. Jay began calling itself the huckleberry capital 16 years ago when it launched an annual huckleberry festival. Until then, the berry had been popular in the town of 3,000 but was rarely eaten elsewhere.

Now, according to Ann Kelly, who runs the IGA and makes the preserves, people drive 90 miles from Tulsa just to pick up a jar.

"And some of the best restaurants in Tulsa come to the festival to bid on huckleberries at our auction, then advertise them for the rest of the year," she said. The sweet, tiny berries are used in jams, cobblers and cakes, but are no longer fried, Cherokee style.

'There's lots of towns say they're for progress, but I bet we're the only one named after an onion.'

— Dick Walden of Vidalia, Ga., the Sweet Onion City.

A SIMILAR TALE is told in Houghton, Mich., the thimbleberry capital of the world, which celebrates a deep red berry unique to the Keweenaw Peninsula, the Copper Country of Upper Michigan.

"This is the only place the thimbleberry grows wild," said Linda Johnson, office manager of the Copper Country Chamber of Commerce. "It tastes like a raspberry, but it's not as seedy. The whole thing comes off the plant shaped like a thimble with no stems."

Houghton's bushes, like Jay's, produce only a small amount of berries. But in some capitals, the local product is the pillar of the economy. Vidalia was on the verge of becoming a depressed area, its traditional products like tobacco and peanuts dropping in value, when its sweet onion, produced since the 1930s, began receiving national attention and distribution three years ago.

Now the price of the Vidalia sweet onions is rising, said Dick Walden, executive vice president of the Vidalia Chamber of Commerce. Full consumer potential is still untapped, and the town of 12,500 has changed its motto from "City of Progress" to "Sweet Onion City."

"There's lots of towns say they're for progress, Walden said, "but I bet we're the only one named after an onion."

IN CASTROVILLE, where the first artichokes were planted in 1924, some 9,000 acres within 15 miles of the town are planted with artichokes. The town has a population of only 4,200, but it and the surrounding area produced 37,630 tons of fresh artichokes last year, with a cash value of $28.4 million.

A town can get to be a capital in a serendipitous way. Take the case of St. Johnsbury, Vt., the maple capital of the world. It earned its status because a local grocer was broke.

Tradition has it that George Cary, representing a wholesale grocer, called upon a St. Johnsbury retailer to settle an account back in 1898. The local man had no cash, so he paid with 1,500 pounds of maple sugar he had.

"Cary's boss didn't think that was so great, so he had to unload it," says Terry Hoffer, executive director of the St. Johnsbury Maple Festival. Fortunately, he ran into a tobacco company salesman and learned that tobacco was packed for shipment with imported cane sugar. Cary persuaded tobacco growers first to use his maple sugar instead, and a capital was born. Cary gave the town its maple sugar capital status.

STILL, IT'S EASY to win such a title, harder to keep it. Hope, Ark., population 10,300, is the watermelon capital of the world because it grows them so big. The Guinness Book of World Records says the champion watermelon, all 200 pounds of it, was grown in Hope by Ivan Bright.

But last year, that distinction passed to a grower in Bigsby, Okla., who produced a 219-pounder. Lloyd Bright, Ivan's son and a high school administrator who "fiddles around" with watermelons during the summer, is confident Hope can win the crown back, justifying its other motto: "A slice of the good life."

Things aren't so ho-fel in Hopkins, Minn., formerly the raspberry capital of the world. That was in the days when, as Clint Blomquist, 79, curator of the Hopkins Historical Society, recalls, "We'd ship raspberries out by the freight carload, and we had to import people 40 or 50 miles away in season to pick berries."

Now suburbia has overtaken Hopkins, nine miles west of Minneapolis, and there are no berry patches. Well, there's one, Blomquist says, "but the lady who runs it is in her 80s, and her daughter says that when she dies, the berry patch dies with her."

So now when Hopkins holds its annual raspberry festival in spite of changing conditions, it has an ignominious task to perform:

It has to import raspberries from California.

The last frontier

Wild Baja opens to tourists

BAJA CALIFORNIA — The Baja is a 1,000-mile strip of desert surrounded by a magnificent siege of water. The rich have flown their private planes into this Mexican hideaway for years, to watch whales leap out of the Sea of California, to go deep-sea fishing where the Sea of Cortes meets the Pacific Ocean, to hide.

It is also very easy to drown in that magnificent siege of water, especially in the late summer and fall when the storms at sea send mountainous waves against the rocky shores and up the sandy beaches of the Baja. I came within seconds of being washed out to sea while standing on a beach at the southern tip of the peninsula last September.

Baja is still a rich fisherman's paradise, but the Mexican government is developing extensive tourist facilities through a federally appointed organization called Fonatur, assigned to coordinate the use of both public and private money for tourist development projects throughout Mexico.

Fonatur was the moving force behind the development of Cancun, where President Reagan met with other heads of state in 1981. It is also the prime mover in Baja, where Mr. Reagan will meet Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid on Sunday.

THE SPANISH conquistador Hernan Cortes sailed these waters in 1535, and rumors of great wealth drew the Spanish back for a century before Jesuit missionaries settled the desert peninsula in 1633.

There are a few historic remnants of Spanish colonization, but the only wealth that most Mexicans the Baja ever saw was that of rich, often famous, American fishermen, usually from California.

Their favorite piece of paradise was Cabo San Lucas, a tiny fishing village with a few small posh edges on the very southern tip of land. They would motor out, fishing poles high, past the world-renowned stone arches that grace the sea there, where the Pacific and the gulf waters meet.

It was easy to keep ordinary travelers out. There was no road. Nowadays, you can drive the 1,000 miles from the border to the southernmost tip on Mexico Highway 1. Smart drivers carry water, and expect 150-mile stretches between gas stations, but they don't worry about getting lost or stranded. The Green Angels, part of the tourist detachment, ride the road daily with fuel and spare parts.

There are good hotels and campgrounds all the way down, and government-sponsored tourist development at both Loreto and San Jose del Cabo, neighbor village to Cabo San Lucas (together they are known as Los Cabos.)

Aeromexico and Mexicana airlines fly regularly into Los Cabos. The Baja is about 50 miles wide at its southern end, so when you follow Highway 1 south from the airport you drive through desert land that prickles between the dry hills of the gulf side and the black mountains of the Pacific side.

THE LAND MAY look barren to you, but desert lovers will tell you that there is a riot of life in there for those who look closely enough. When one road bears right to Cabo San Lucas another curves uphill through the small town of San Jose del Cabo.

You drive past the whitewashed shape of St. Joseph's Cathedral, shops lined with cars on either side of the street and the tread shape of a town square, a sight always familiar in Mexico.

At the square, you turn sharply right down a boulevard street to the hotel area. Fonatur develops a town like this for tourism by first providing the support systems: roads, good telephone service, health care facilities, and new housing for those displaced by hotels.

Several fine hotels line this coast road, brand new and luxurious but small enough to avoid the high-rise look of Miami. You can choose any rate-level from the excellent budget facilities of Nuevo Sol to the deluxe facilities of El Presidente, built and run by the government at the end of the coastal road.

Although San Jose Del Cabo is on the sea, fishing boats go out from Cabo San Lucas, a half-hour drive away. Los Cabos, the cape, spill in dry rocky splendor into the sea there: high, rocky hills, glorious sand beaches and the famous arches that separate the Sea of Cortes from the Pacific.

On a single chimney of rock rising out of the sea at the very tip of the Baja, a young sea lion curls gleaming and alone in the Mexican sun. The area is deserted and beautiful, with only a cluster of Cabo San Lucas hotels and the occasional boxy shape of a new building to make minor color patches in the wilderness.

The sun blazes hot even in a boat in September. It gleams on the white foam wake foaming against the blue sea and on the sand-fringed rock hills of the Baja as they rise against the sky.

If you tire of all this splendor and fishing, you can drive or fly north to the capital city of La Paz or to some of the small but interesting communities of Baja Sur and Baja Nord.

Baja California is a 1,000-mile strip of desert surrounded by a magnificent siege of water. In the late summer and fall storms at sea send mountainous waves against the rocky shores and up the sandy Baja beaches.

Baja's giant waves can prove deadly

Don't plan to swim in the ocean off the southern Baja at this time of year. Tom Miller, guidebook author and expert on Baja California, says that people should be warned against swimming there in the fall because tropical storms create great crashing waves on the beach, and it's very dangerous. It is calmer in winter, but it still could be dangerous. Stick to the hotel swimming pool.

Last August, a woman who was collecting shells close to the water's edge was swept out to sea from the beach in front of the El Presidente Hotel in San Jose del Cabo. When I was in the same hotel last September, I was foolish enough to walk onto the beach during a storm and nearly met the same fate.

We were all watching and marveling at the huge waves at about 11 p.m. one night. I walked about 20 feet towards the sea, but was still 50 yards away from where the waves broke. A rogue wave suddenly came higher and higher, prompting us to run for safety; the wave was only inches deep but it knocked me down and pulled me with incredible force.

Only my proximity to a low brick wall and the quick action of a hotel employee saved me. My companion broke her cheekbone when the same wave rolled her against a palm tree. When the wave retreated, it pulled a heavy metal table into the sea.

These swimmers are taking in the southern Baja surf from the right vantage point — a nice, safe swimming pool.

The wild, rugged beauty of Baja California can be enjoyed by horseback, but the Mexican government has taken steps to make the Baja accessible by more conventional transportation too. In the past it was easy to keep ordinary travelers out. There was no road. Nowadays, you can drive the 1,000 miles from the border to the southernmost tip on Mexico Highway 1. 5 named to jobs council Five people from Plymouth are among those appointed to the Private Industry Council (PIC) by Wayne County Executive William Lucas.

Among the appointees are: Maurice Breen, Plymouth Township supervisor; Victor Wilkinson, general manager of the Metal Products Division of Howmet Corp. on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth; Ralph Lorenz of the Mayflower Hotel at Ann Arbor Trail and Main in Plymouth; and two Plymouth residents, Eugene Jacoby, director of Chrysler Institute, Chrysler Corp., Detroit, and Charlotte Mahoney, a senior area development specialist for Detroit Edison Co.

The formation of the council is a requirement of the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) which became effective in 1982 as the successor to the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

JTPA is designed to prepare youth and unskilled adults for entry into the labor force and to provide job training for economically disadvantaged individuals and for people facing serious barriers to employment.

Wayne County has been designed as one of the service delivery areas effective Oct. 1, 1983. PIC and Lucas will produce a plan for the service area which will include a program for people unemployed or who have received lay-off notices because of plant closings or a change in the kinds of jobs available.

Wayne County's service delivery area includes western Wayne County communities, Highland Park, Hamtramck and Grosse Pointe but does not include Detroit or the downriver area.

Versatile stained glass offers a colorful outlet

By Mary Klemic
staff writer

The expression "looking at the world through rose-colored glasses" usually refers to optimists. But these days, more and more persons are literally looking at their surroundings through glass that is rose colored — and almost every other tint as well — as the art of stained glass becomes popular.

"It's a very creative form of art," said Maria Ortega, manager of Delphi Stained Glass, 6018 N. Wayne Road, Westland.

"You can do a lot of neat things with it. Its popularity has increased with the new homes they're building. It goes anywhere in the home."

STAINED GLASS has been around for centuries. Churches in Rome and the Near East featured stained-glass windows before the year A.D. 500. Glass with figures was found in Germany in the year 1100, and in France 50 years later. By the late 1200s, the great cathedrals of France, England and Germany were devoting more of their space to stained glass.

The early stained-glass windows contained few colors, but later ones began to imitate oil paintings, using flesh tones and perspective.

Now, stained glass can be found anywhere around the home, from windowpanes and doors-to-room dividers, cabinets and lamps. The glass is just as durable as "regular" glass and doesn't require special care, Ortega said.

"I couldn't even think of a place you wouldn't want it," she said. "I have a table made out of stained glass. You can go as far as your imagination can go."

STAINED-GLASS designs are made by first outlining a pattern, once on a base and once on paper. Individual pieces of the paper pattern are cut out and stuck to the glass. The glass is then cut, using a grinder to smooth the edges so they fit together neatly, like a jigsaw puzzle. The pieces can be fastened together with copper foil or grooved pieces of lead.

Bevels and other techniques create different effects. Glue chip adds a frost-like pattern to the glass. Sandblasting, using a compressor, etches designs into it and gives it varying textures.

"Once you learn the business, the more you do it, the easier it becomes," Ortega said.

THE COST of stained glass depends on the size and manufacturer. Red and yellow glass are more expensive, because more gold is used to make those colors.

As with other goods, buying in bulk usually saves you money, Ortega said. "It could be less per square foot. For example, if you bought one square foot, you could pay $5. But if you bought a one-half sheet, you could get four square feet for $4 per square foot."

Most stained glass is made in the United States as well as imported from France, Germany and England. Generally, the American glass is made by machine, while European glass is hand-blown, Ortega said.

THE BIGGEST expense in stained glass work is the tools, Ortega said. Necessary tools include a glass cutter, different pliers, a soldering iron and a glass grinder. Their total cost can run $60-$150, Ortega said.

"It depends on what you buy."

Classes taught by Delphi, lasting 2½ hours each and running for four weeks, demonstrate what tools to buy and how to use them. The business sells all the necessary equipment. Sandblasting uses regular air compressors that are also available at hardware stores, Ortega said.

ANYONE INTERESTED in stained glass should take classes on the subject, Ortega said.

"It's easier to learn through a class than on your own. You learn all the business that way. You'll work with the basic tools at the first class (at Delphi) and make a suncatcher so you know what's involved."

"You can go over your problems and see other people's mistakes, and learn from each other."

Persons of all ages are attracted to the craft of stained glass, Ortega said. "It's definitely a growing art. And it's enjoyable, too."

"It adds so much to a room. It looks really nice."

Debbie Rosato (left) and Maria Ortega, of Delphi Stained Glass in Westland, put together a stained glass design. Pieces of glass are cut to fit a pattern, smoothed so they fit like a puzzle and held in place by copper foil or grooved lead strips.

Family stories become basis for a book

By Corinne Abett
staff writer

The lives and family of Gloria Kurian Broder and Bill Broder are so closely intertwined with their new novel, "Remember This Time," that sometimes they seem to merge, separate and merge again.

The book, published by Newmarket Press, hardcover, $14.95, is the story of a Jewish family, the Chodorovs — father, Naftali, mother, Malkah, and daughters, Ruth, Kala, Sophie and Ekaterina — who lived in the small village of Lyest, Russia, near what is now the border of Poland just before and during World War I.

Mostly it is the story of Kala, who becomes a refugee after the town is burned to the ground by the Russians in advance of the invading Germans.

"The Russian government had a scorched earth policy," said Broder. "They thought nothing of evacuating 3.5 million people. They thought nothing of burning Polish and White Russian towns to protect Greater Russia." The authors drew heavily on their own family backgrounds for resource material, inspiration and documentation. No, the novel isn't history, but, certainly, it should be classified as historical fiction. Bill Broder's grandparents emigrated from Lithuania, so he too has roots in that part of central Europe.

BOTH BROTHERS are professional writers who grew up in Detroit about three blocks from each other. They didn't meet until they were in Cambridge, Mass. She was doing research, he was with the Armed Forces.

Her cousin, Esther Margolis, who founded Newmarket Press in 1981, after being senior vice president at Bantam Books, asked the Brothers for help in finding someone to write a novel based on the family history.

Margolis, also from Detroit, had grown up listening to her mother's stories of life in Russia as had Gloria Broder with her parents and relatives.

Margolis, realizing that the sources of first-hand information were mortal, made some eight hours of taped remembrances by those who had come to the United States from Russia in the late '20s.

MARGOLIS'S MOTHER, TEIBEL, was the model for Kala.

Mrs. Broder said, "She was sort of a tomboy — adventurous, active. She actually drove a car and horse and went across the war lines. (She went many times when she was 14 or 15 to get hay for the animals and supplies for the family). She was very close to the peasants and she loved her town just as Kala did. She died in an auto accident

Bill and Gloria Kurian Broder documented the history of both their families as they worked on the research for their historical novel, "Remember This Time."

Accept the challenge of 'terrible' watercolor

This is another in a series of lessons on art and drawing by special columnist David Messing. He has taught for eight years and operates an art store, Art Store and More, 18774 Middlebelt, Livonia. Messing encourages questions and comments from readers. You may write him at his store or c/o Observer Newspapers, 23352 Farmington Road, Farmington MI 48024.

By David Messing
special writer

We own a parrot named Sidney. He (or she) is beautiful, all blue, green and red, but he has the personality of a snapping turtle.

He is usually OK with me and my 4-year-old son, Adam, but if anyone else in the family or friends try to handle him, he is terrible at worst and unpredictable at best. And this is my introduction to watercolor... "terrible at worst, unpredictable at best."

You see, much of getting along with Sidney is learning how to handle him, knowing what to expect from him and never forgetting how unpredictable he can be. Some readers are probably thinking, "Terrible? ... how can watercolor be terrible?"

WELL, IF YOU have ever clocked in several hours on a watercolor and an accidental flick of your brush sent a sprinkle of paint across your paper (and there was little or nothing you could do to fix it...) then to me that is terrible.

Or perhaps one wet color got too close to another wet area and your beautiful "Sunrise over Silver Lake" turned into "Sunset over the La Brea Tar Pits," then you, too, might mutter, "How terrible."

Now, let's consider "unpredictable." Several months ago, I painted a cute little snowshoe rabbit all huddled in the snow.

AS A FINISHING touch, I painted a shadow across his back. I am not sure if the shadow was too dark or the paint was too wet, but I know it was too late and, it was just too bad for the rabbit.

I sat there with eyes glazed, mouth opened, and palms sweating as a gray wash devoured my bunny in slow motion. Even though I handled the medium correctly to produce the rabbit, the unpredictable nature of watercolor caught me unaware.

And caught me, it did, because watercolor is my favorite medium.

I OFTEN TELL my students that they can brag about their own watercolors because much of the time it was out of their control. If, for example, you paint a blue wash into an already wet area, there is little you can do to control the spread of color.

Even though you guide it along, there is still little you can do to control it. How good it is if it all flows together into a pleasing painting.

I was once standing near one of my paintings in an art show when I overheard a teacher pointing out to his students how I washed an area, allowing certain colors to flow together, adding colors here and there, etc., etc.

OF COURSE, I was flattered, but in truth I, myself, was delighted and somewhat surprised at the outcome. This is why I am fascinated with watercolor.

Most media you can do over and over with repeated success. If I drew 10 pencil or pen-and-ink drawings, most of them would be successful. If, on the other hand, I painted 10 watercolors, maybe five would end up at the bottom of Sidney's cage.

Now, I don't want to frighten any away from watercolor. I just want you to know that it is a definite challenge.

SO HERE IS the best way to start. First, draw your picture on cold press (rough) or hot press (smooth) watercolor paper with an "H" or "2H" pencil.

Then draw over your pencil lines in pen and ink. After your ink is dry, erase your pencil lines with a kneaded eraser or a white rose eraser.

Now, with clear water and a brush, wet the area you wish to color. As the water begins to dry, it will turn glossy to a satin sheen.

At this point, you dab in your brush full of color. The color will flow quickly out of the brush and bleed toward the outer edge of the area you previously wet with clear water.

THE WATER THAT you painted first is the carrier (vehicle) for the color. The color cannot flow any further than the clear water boundary.

Family stories are basis for book with her husband five weeks ago. They didn't have a chance to read the book, but they liked the idea."

Telbel is the young woman in the lower left hand corner of the photograph on the front cover.

MRS. BRODER'S MOTHER left her home in Lunyetz, Russia, when she was 16 and came to the United States. She, too, died while the book was being written.

"She wanted to go around the world. She got as far as Detroit," said Mrs. Broder adding, "she wanted to see everything . . . In the tapes, my mother said 'you must write about the Revolution.' She was passionately against the Bolsheviks."

Margolis's mother, however, remembered those same times with warmth and affection.

THE DIFFERENT points of view about the Revolution and the turmoil show up in the sisters in the book. Ekaterina and her father looked rather favorably on the Germans, Sophie had eyes for a Polish officer and Kala was involved in the politics of the Revolution.

As he commented on the complicated politics of the time, Broder said, "The Jews really wanted the Germans coming in. They were less anti-Semitic than the Russian government which was inciting the peasants against the Jews. So they were looking forward to the Germans. And then there was the similarity of language (Yiddish and German)."

Feelings in the book were as mixed as they were in real life. Kala decided her place was with the refugees and the Russian peasants, the rest hid and waited for the Germans to arrive.

But, it was this very independence of spirit, the freedom and conviction which these young women had that was one of the motivations for writing the book.

THE FOUR daughters each have a strong identity, but the overriding strength that nourishes it comes from Malke, their mother. She, who owns and operates the village bakery, wields the power not only in her family but among all the villagers as well, Jew and gentile.

"My grandmother," said Mrs. Broder, "was a lot nicer, but every bit as strong . . . I always thought she could have been prime minister. My grandfather, I took as a model for Natall. He retained his physical elegance. What he is in the novel is what he became, but he had evidently been a great deal more than that in Russia. He never knew the language here, but my grandmother picked it up fast. Even here people still came to her for advice and counsel."

IN THE BOOK, Natall is almost always overshadowed by his wife, but in one sequence, when he goes alone to Moscow to bring Kala home, he grows dramatically in color and stature.

Once back in the village, seated in the bakery, telling of his adventures in the big city, he reverts to his old self — an ineffectual boaster whom nobody really pays much attention to. But he had his moment, and Kala and her husband, Mikhail, learned to appreciate him.

In addition to dispelling myths about the dependent, subservient role of women in the Old World, the Broders wanted to do a book that detailed the lives of people before they came to the United States as opposed to the more common formula of using the arrival here as the take off point.

MRS. BRODER said, "Even with the stories, we had only a vague notion of who we were and where we came from. One of the greatest rewards in writing the book is that now we have the whole picture."

Broder added, "This real family of five sisters and two brothers grew up right in the midst of history. America has this great island status. We wanted to show the conjunction of history and the personal life and the choices they had to make . . . Lyesk was our image of what Lunyetz was. We placed it a little differently, but it was a railroad town and a border town just like Lunyetz was."

BOTH STRESSED THAT they did a lot of research to establish geographical and political facts that were vague in the tapes, but the tapes, both said, were invaluable.

In the book, Kala is a watch repairer. And on the tapes, someone remembered a young woman from one of the villages who was trained to repair watches.

In the book, the family owns a bakery — Mrs. Broder said her grandparents really owned a small hotel.

THE BOOK, which flows well and reads easily, drew its most treasured praise from those most closely associated with the original events.

Mrs. Broder's father, born in raised in Bialystok, Russia, had ridden through Lunyetz once on the train. He knew the area well and remembered the turn of political events.

He told his daughter and son-in-law their book was "absolutely as it was."

"Remember This Time" is available through the Jewish Community Center, West Bloomfield or local book stores.

Q. Could you please explain to me what is an airbrush?

A. An airbrush is nothing more than a glorified paint spray gun. The difference is that an airbrush can spray a line about the size of a pencil stroke. It also can open up to spray a pattern from 2 to 3 inches.

There is nothing like it. An airbrush makes your work so soft and shaded that it is a temptation to use it in every media. As a matter of fact, it works so well in sprucing up your artwork, it's almost like cheating.

I feel the best all-around airbrush "for the money" is the "V L Paasche," which comes in a kit for $78.

This technique allows you to control the flow of color and the pen's ink gives your work a definite structure. If you are having trouble seeing where you are painting with the clear water, simply add a light tint to the water similar to the color you wish to paint.

One of the first problems with watercolor is structure. In the beginning you have water dripping off your elbows, your paper looks like a geology relief map, and your palette looks like the bottom of a sign painter's paint box.

SO IT IS very helpful to have some pen and ink to structure your first few works.

For an interesting effect, instead of using permanent ink for your outlines, try using watercolor ink as in a fine-line felt-tip pen.

Then, when you add your watercolors over the ink, it will bleed into the color and thereby soften the effect of the line. If you wish the ink line to bleed a great amount, use the Pilot razor point ($0 cents). If you wish the line to bleed only slightly, then use the fine point system ($1.25).

Watercolors come in pans or tubes. Pans are little cakes of dried watercolors. Most manufacturers of watercolor package both.

PANS, HOWEVER, ARE much less popular than the tubes — probably because people mistake pans of high quality for children's watercolor sets.

Come to think of it, I have had a few customers take a backward step or two when they see what they thought was a child's set of 18 colors cost $18.75. The truth is, pans are very intense in color, portable and clean to work with.

A minute or two before you begin painting, simply moisten all the pans with a wet brush and soon you have a fine palette full of a variety of rich colors to work with.

Tube watercolors offer a great variety of colors to choose from and a tube of paint is presently about $1.40. What I recommend you do with watercolor tubes is first of all buy whatever assortment you desire.

THEN, BUY A palette with many deep wells and squeeze out each tube into each well. After these wells of paint dry, you have in effect made your own pans of the colors you prefer.

As to what is the best brand of watercolor I couldn't say . . . or wouldn't say, that is. The "best" is what you like the best.

I haven't seen any brand that would make me throw away my Grumacher set. I prefer the "academy" line, which is less expensive than the "finest" series. In any media, it is best to buy the middle grade and then upgrade if or when you feel the need.

I have to close this article today but will continue on watercolors in the next installment of Artifacts.
