Era ends: City axes medical services

By Emory Daniels
staff writer

Ambulance service in the city of Plymouth now will be furnished almost exclusively by a private company.

Monday night the Plymouth City Commission voted to have paramedic-type ambulance service provided by Community Emergency Services (CEMS), a subsidiary of Botsford General Hospital in Farmington Hills.

At the same time, the commission voted to dissolve the city-operated ambulance service in the fire department with CEMS providing backup. When CEMS is unable to provide its own backup, explained City Manager Henry Graper, Canton and Plymouth townships will respond through the mutual aid pact.

After the meeting, Graper disclosed that a buyer has been found for the city's ambulance which will be gone as soon as the papers are signed, in about a week.

The city commission approved the change by a 6-0 vote, with Commissioner Mary Childs absent.

DURING THE DAY Monday, the city administration and firefighters union officials were in Detroit at a hearing on unfair labor practice charges filed by the union.

Graper said that at the hearing the union admitted it walked out of a meeting and refused to negotiate the change to CEMS as a provider of ambulance service.

The city manager told the commission he expects the city will be cleared. "If they don't negotiate there's no basis for an unfair labor practice charge against us."

Graper added a ruling has not yet been given on the charge and it could take three or four months before the judge decides. "I will proceed with the plans. I don't expect we will be forced to get back into the ambulance business."

The city manager added that any risk of a lawsuit will belong solely to CEMS. "We are exposed to potential liability only if our firefighters show up," he added, stressing there would be no liability against the city if it did not provide backup.

CEMS will keep its ambulance vehicle in the former Fire Station No. 2 in Old Village. If CEMS goes on an emergency run in the city, explained Graper, a backup vehicle will be on alert at the CEMS site at Five Mile and Sheldon Roads which serves Northville, Northville Township, and Farmington Hills.

If another backup is needed, said Graper, it will be furnished by Plymouth Township or Canton. He said both Maurice Breen and James Poole assured him the mutual aid pact will be honored for ambulance calls.

In case CEMS responds as a backup in Plymouth Township, as part of the mutual aid pact, the city will pick up the bill and township residents will not be billed, added Graper.

'We are exposed to potential liability only if our firefighters show up.'

— Henry Graper
city manager

A HISTORICAL note was added by Commissioner Bud Martin who pointed out that ambulance service in the city had been provided by Schrader Funeral Home.

"When Schrader's got out of the ambulance business because it was not profitable, the city took over the need and the fire department was designated to provide the service. But any department could've handled the job. At that time there were no private organizations around to do the job."

Martin said the commission a year ago reviewed the ambulance operation and cost from a budget standpoint and decided to limit firefighters to fighting fires and to get the city out of the ambulance business.

Mark Wehmeyer, former commissioner, commented that the city firefighters did an excellent job for what they were expected to do but were not trained to operate as paramedics. It would take two years to train firefighters to become paramedics, he added, and the city cannot afford the cost for that training.

A resident asked how much cheaper it would be to go with CEMS for ambulance. Graper said the first year the savings for vehicles and equipment would be $25,000 and less thereafter. But the real savings, he added, would be in self-insurance expenses as the city now is removing a potential liability.

Another resident objected to the age and low hourly wages paid paramedics by CEMS. A company spokesman said the employees meet the state guidelines for paramedics and are paid wages starting at $18,000 a year.

Bob Degan, city firefighter and union spokesman, commented that Plymouth Township does not want CEMS to provide assistance to township firefighters. He suggested there would be a problem with township residents being billed if CEMS provides backup to township ambulance crews.

COMMISSIONER Ron Loiselle then asked a few questions about calls assigned to CEMS which had a response time of 10 minutes or more.

The company spokesman said most of the responses in question were non-emergency calls, including one on March 8 on Haggerty Road. Since Feb. 3, he added, CEMS had only two responses over 10 minutes. The other was when the vehicle got stopped by a train on Main Street and immediately a call went out for back-up.

A resident asked all commissioners whether they received any phone calls from other residents expressing concern about the change in ambulance service. Commissioner Bill Robinson said he received three phone calls, while the other five commissioners said they did not receive a single phone call.

Resident Greg Green asked if it would be guaranteed CEMS always would station its vehicles in the city.

Graper answered that CEMS was lining up contracts with other municipalities and it was possible its vehicles would be located at a more central location. That site might be out of the city limits, he added, but most likely would be within a quarter of a mile of the city.

Mayor Dave Pugh commented that the city never has had an ambulance parked on both sides of the railroad tracks, and so trains always have been a problem which must be dealt with in providing ambulance service.

When the city first made the change on a trial basis, a subsidiary of St. Joseph Hospital in Ann Arbor operated the life-support ambulance service. That trial was followed by CEMS as Huron-Arbor could not get enough municipalities in Wayne County to sign up for the service to make it economical.

Finishing touches

It took eighth grade students from our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic School in Plymouth six hours to paint a wall mural for the residents of Whispering Willow Manor, a nursing home in Canton Township. The students volunteered their time to paint the 9 feet by 9 feet mural. Involved in the project were Karen Finnegan, Nancy Rekuc, Kim MacIarz, Christina Lopez, Ann Marie Zimmerman, Jim Sullivan, Mike Szott, Adrian Cotter and Kelly Daoust.

Teaching teens to say 'no'

By Margaret Neubacher
staff writer

Statistics about alcoholism can seem meaningless until they hit close to home. The other day a Plymouth-Canton teacher got a jolt she won't soon forget.

Her 28 sixth graders had recently heard presentations from the National Council on Alcoholism regarding alcohol abuse. In a follow-up discussion, the teacher asked how many students knew someone personally who was having a problem with alcohol. Eleven students raised their hand.

"That's really remarkable," said June Schwartz, West Middle School counselor. "Not long ago, no teacher would have asked that question, let alone dreamed of seeing such a big response."

ACCORDING TO Schwartz, in the past alcohol education relied on facts and scarce tactics to make point with students.

"We are finding out that's not effective today," Schwartz said. "We live in a drug using society and advertisements are bombarding our children with this fact."

"Taking things to feel better is the American way. The underlying message here is it's not OK to feel depressed."

"Given the number of hours students watch television these messages are having a powerful impact on them," Schwartz said. "and if we are to reach them with alcohol education it must have a new approach."

A variety of new alcohol awareness programs specifically designed for today's students are being tested and enjoying good results with students says Gale Allen, deputy director of metropolitan Detroit's National Council on Alcoholism.

The drinking driver

"Teaching children about the effects of alcohol on the body is only a small part of these new programs. We realize it's more important to teach them how to deal with the peer pressure to experiment with alcohol and drugs. We want to help them learn to say no," Allen said. "And just as important help them find alternative activities that are alcohol and drug-free."

But getting people to change their approach to alcohol education was not easy says Allen.

"When we first presented parents and educators with these ideas we were met with a lot of resistance," Allen said. "They were uncomfortable with such a direct and frank approach."

One new program known as BABES (Beginning Alcohol Addiction Basic Education Series), is designed for children ages 4-8. It uses puppets and colorful posters to teach about alcohol abuse.

Teachers and parents questioned the wisdom of exposing young children to that information.

Ken Kaminska of the Wayne County Intermediate School district said many attitudes were changed when adults witnessed young people abuse alcohol when Michigan lowered its drinking age. "The number of teen-age deaths from drinking and driving also changed some attitudes," Kaminska said.

"Slowly people have realized the age of innocence for our youth has all but vanished," said Allen, "and experts now agree the earlier children are exposed to alcohol education the better."

ALCOHOL EDUCATION at Plymouth-Canton Schools is a standard part of seventh, eighth, and ninth grade health classes. Next year ninth graders will choose health as an elective.

"We are presently piloting alcohol education programs in our fifth and sixth grades," said Schwartz, "and encouraging more alcohol education in other grades by a process called infusion."

Infusion means to incorporate components of alcohol education with other subjects and activities.

"Teaching students to say no is a decision-making skill that can be taught in a variety of ways and does not have to be labeled alcohol education," said Schwartz.

"When we help students gain a better self-concept we could say we are doing alcohol education, as we know some students will turn to alcohol as a way to feel good. If a student already feels good about him or herself they may not become involved with alcohol."

Nick Cooper, who coordinates the alternative education classes for Plymouth-Canton junior and senior highs, speaks from ten years experience with kids and alcohol.

"We used to believe that it was the student with a lot of problems that got involved with alcohol. But that's not always the case. Good students from good families can become involved with alcohol," Cooper said.

"This idea is hard for many to believe and we spend a lot of time fighting against what I call 'the conspiracy of silence.'"

"THE STUDENT feels too guilty and embarrassed to admit he's having a problem with alcohol. Their parents usually feel worst. They believe they have failed somehow as parents."

Cooper helps to coordinate a variety of programs that help students deal with alcohol and substance abuse.

Students who need emotional support and coping skills can elect to come to the Student Service Center one hour per day. Enrollment is limited and the student must want to come, says Cooper.

Intervention is an education program for students caught using substances. The program requires the student and the parent to sit down together and talk about what happened. They also attend informational presentations, which are open to the public.

There is also a substance abuse support group for students committed to abstaining from substance use.

For students who have been unsuccessful in their regular middle or high school environment, full-day instruction can be arranged at an alternative school.

"I don't know of any other school system in the state that has as much to offer in the way of alternatives for students," Cooper said. "I feel we are able to help them deal with their problems in a productive way."

"We know that when a kid gets involved with drugs or alcohol they stop maturing," cautions Cooper. "It keeps them from dealing with the conflicts and problems that are part of growing up."

Schwartz contends that the purpose of alcohol and drug education should be to help students make responsible decisions.

"Drugs and alcohol are always going to be around. This is a people problem. We must help kids deal with these choices rationally."

Hines Park to be 'family oriented' as of May 5

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Since the late '70s, Wayne County's Hines Parkway has been known as a haven for weeds (the green kind), weed (the smoking kind) and young party-goers.

Last year police agencies began cleaning out the party-goers. This year the 22-mile park along the Middle Rouge River is due to become a haven for family picnics, if local and county officials have their way.

"The kickoff is Saturday, May 5," said Kathy Kanable, Garden City resident in charge of parks coordination in County Executive William Lucas's office.

THE HINES Park Task Force, chaired by Sheriff Robert A. Ficano, Tuesday heard these announcements:

• May 5 is "Activities Day" at Hines. The parkway will be shut to motorized traffic from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. so that groups may conduct fund-raisers and bicyclists and walkers may have free rein, Kanable said. (Rain date will be May 12.)

• "As soon as there is warm weather, there will be an early show of law enforcement," Ficano said. Any police agency making a "sweep" will warn all others by the law-enforcement teletype so that neighboring communities are prepared for any outflow of troublemakers.

• The Wayne County Road Commission, trustees of the park system, will cut grass and reopen about half the battered comfort stations.

"If you get anything out of this today, it's that the parks will have a family orientation," said Ficano, a Livonia resident.

HINES PARKWAY is a 1920s-style "drive in the country."

The Middle Rouge valley is a designated floodplain, not to be developed. The drive roughly parallels the river from Seven Mile Road in Northville Township, south and eastward through Plymouth Township, Livonia, Westland, Livonia and Dearborn Heights.

Before 1983, park users could park anywhere along the road or in a lot, making crowd control difficult.

Local police praised the county's effort to prohibit parking on the drive and confine it to lots, much like state parks and Huron-Clinton Metroparks of more modern vintage.

Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry said, "If you posted 'no parking' signs on the road, kids tore 'em down. But if you posted signs saying 'parking in designated areas only,' there was no problem."

"If we have as good a year as last year, we'd be happy," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen.

POLICE WERE cool, however, to the suggestions of county commissioners Mary Dumas of Livonia and Kay Beard of Inkster that vehicle-entry permits be used to raise revenue for park maintenance.

"We have applied for grant-funded projects for Hines and Elizabeth Park (on the Detroit River at Trenton)," Kanable said. "We're close to securing funding sources."

Police also were cool to random suggestions that beer be prohibited. Beer and ale are allowed in cans and bottles.

Wine, liquor and keg beer are prohibited. Also prohibited are open beer containers in motor vehicles and along the roadside.

One inspector also told of adults bringing in keg beer in the back of a pickup truck, selling to 13- and 14-year-old girls at $1 a cup and then taking advantage of the girls' intoxicated state.

Ficano praised Livonia police for their program of speaking to high-school seniors about the hazards of graduation-time parties.

KANABLE SAID the Activities Day declared by Lucas stemmed from a series of requests to use the park for walkathons, bikeathons, other fund-raisers and the mid-1970s Bike Days.

Ficano himself will have a fund-raiser to support the horses used by his mounted patrol.

Working with the Road Commission, all the requests were consolidated into a single day. Each group will have a designated section of the parkway.

A second Activities Day is scheduled for Sept. 15, she added. Groups wishing to hold activities then may contact her at 261-1990.

"I've personally used county parks all my life," she said. "My daughter and son are active in sports. We are into jogging and bicycling — just like families are supposed to be. I pay for it, and I take a personal interest in it."

The wife of a sheriff's deputy, she got active in Lucas's 1982 campaign to be Wayne County's first elected executive and went to work for him as parks coordinator.

The Observer on Thursday, April 12, incorrectly reported that school-board hopeful Lea Walker of Plymouth had previously been a candidate for the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education. Walker, in fact, has never been a candidate for the school board, but is a first-time candidate in the June 11 balloting. Any confusion caused is regretted.

Seniors sing and dance to songs from the 1830s

By Jean Adamczak
staff writer

Canton Township residents were treated to another Senior Follies program over the weekend. In keeping with Canton's 150th birthday celebration, this year's show had a sesquicentennial theme.

A cast of 83 Canton senior citizens performed to standing-room-only audiences songs, dances, and skits depicting lifestyles from 1834 to the present.

"They're really terrific, there's a lot of talent among this group and the show is a truly original work," says Canton Senior Citizen Coordinator Diane Neighagen.

"We researched, trying to get songs from 1834, but the only one we could find from that time was 'Turkey in the Straw,'" said Doris Begg, musical director and accompanist for the production.

BEGG, 71, directs the Canton Senior Kitchen Band which also participated in the Follies. "It's very interesting and a whole lot of fun," Begg said.

Cooperation is the key in producing a show such as this, says cast member Maurie Walker of Canton.

"We've had such a good gang to work with. Diane Neighagen has done a beautiful job with this — it's a cooperative venture."

Walker, 67, and his wife Rose, 68, enjoyed performing in this year's show so much they plan to take part in future shows. "It's so much fun, I hate to see it end — we're having a ball," said Walker.

Mrs. Walker, who also is a member of the Canton Senior Kitchen Band, did a fine job of pantomiming Kate Smith in the show.

"Everybody calls her 'Kate' now because she did such a beautiful job of it," said her husband proudly.

Neighagen says money from the production will pay for costume purchases, rentals and the cast party.

"Any profits realized from the event will be spent on the seniors one way or another," she said.

Township files lawsuit to get sewer refund

By Marie Chestney

The townships of Plymouth and Canton don't intend to get burned twice.

To insure that the proposed "Son of Super Sewer" sewer project, if built, meets federal clean-water guidelines and to be repaid $826,664 they have already spent on Super Sewer, the two townships filed a lawsuit Tuesday in both the Michigan Court of Claims and in Wayne County Circuit Court.

The lawsuit names 15 defendants: the state of Michigan, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR), Wayne County, the Department of Public Works of Wayne County, the city of Detroit, the Detroit Water and Sewer Department, seven downriver communities and the cities of Novi and Wixom.

Last August, the two townships and five other northwestern Wayne County communities were eliminated from participating in Super Sewer when it was made smaller, apparently to meet clean-water standards.

The cutoff came, the lawsuit charges, after the two townships already had been told they had to join Super Sewer or have their future community growth stunted.

Since 1980, Canton has paid $476,129 into the project; Plymouth Township, $150,535.

"IF OUR objections had been met, there would have been no lawsuit," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen.

"We are seeking reimbursement and we are seeking assurances that this project will be satisfactory with the Environmental Protection Agency."

At a March 15 public hearing before SEMCOG, Plymouth Township attorney Brian James submitted a list of 10 questions the two townships had about the Son of Super Sewer project.

The project, estimated to cost $110 million and designed to alleviate over-capacity sewage problems in the seven communities, would build a sewage line to Detroit that would run parallel to the existing Rouge Valley interceptors.

The Super-Sewer split left the Northern Huron Valley communities without a plan to increase sewage capacity to Detroit's waste-treatment plant.

In a letter to SEMCOG, James wrote:

"Unless these objections are implemented, the townships of Canton and Plymouth will not only refuse to execute the contract, but they will also be forced to pursue other remedies."

SOME OF THE questions James raised were:

- Is the money already paid to Super Sewer going to be repaid? The lawsuit charges the funds were to be reimbursed to any participating community which didn't use the Super Sewer system.
- Is Canton Township eligible for a grant to build its local interceptor?
- Will all communities involved in the project agree to complete the project?
- Will the DNR, the city of Detroit and the Detroit Water and Sewer Department certify that Detroit currently has sufficient sewerage capacity to collect and treat all wastewater flows generated by the project through 2025?
- Will Michigan and the DNR certify that no building ban or sewage-extension ban will be imposed on the two townships after they join Son of Super Sewer?
- Will the DNR certify the project can be completed and implemented?

Breen said the townships want to be a part of Son of Super Sewer, but they also want assurances the project, once started, will be built.

"We want assurances that there will not be another project down the line," he said. "We need definitive answers now. We haven't been able to get these assurances yet through non-legal means."

BEFORE JOINING the project, James said, the two townships also want assurances that the Detroit waste-water system will have the capacity to treat water generated by the new system without Detroit having to build an additional treatment facility.

"They tell us they can handle it, but if the system becomes too much, it will get discharged into the river," he said. "They will end up building another treatment plant, and that would cost us."

In January both townships granted conditional approval for participation in the Son of Super Sewer project. Two of the conditions, Breen said, were getting assurances the project would be built and assurances that all participating communities would share in construction costs should federal grant funding be unavailable.

The lawsuit filed by the two townships charges that Super Sewer was backed by the state and was the only system allowable in the Huron Valley watershed. The two townships had no option but to join the project or face a ban on the issuance of sewer permits, according to the lawsuit.

The lawsuit charges that Detroit maintained it had sufficient capacity to process the extra wastewater, while the state said it didn't. At that point, the lawsuit states, the two townships were chopped from the project, after having paid $826,664 into it.

Among other things, the lawsuit asks that an order be issued preventing the defendants from discharging improperly treated sewage and waste water into Michigan rivers and lakes.

Great Scott expands store in the township

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Canton resident Michele Liebert and relatives waited in line since 5 p.m. Monday to win Wednesday's three-minute shopping spree at the Great Scott grand opening. The Liebert family, working in 12-hour shifts, needed a lot of coffee to weather the week's cold, rain and snow. The family plans to have a party to celebrate their win.

The Great Scott grand opening has created a bit of excitement this week as at least one family has "camped out" at its doorstep to win a shopping spree.

To observe completion of a $2 million expansion, the supermarket offered a three-minute shopping spree to the first person in line when the store opened Wednesday, and $25 gift certificates to the next nine persons in line.

Michelle Liebert of Canton got in line at 5 p.m. Monday at the store at Ann Arbor and Sheldon Roads in Plymouth Township. She set up a card table and chair and reserved the spot until Wednesday morning, with the help of four sisters and a brother.

More than $2 million has been invested over the past six months in the 14-year-old supermarket to expand to 30,000 square feet and add features and departments. More than 15,000 different items now are in stock.

Besides wider aisles the store has added seven talking cash registers to reduce customer checkout time by 20 percent. New features include an in-store bakery, and a deli department with sliced-to-order meats and cheese, party trays, hot foods, spiral-sliced honey-baked ham, pizza and live lobster plus a soup and salad bar.

ENERGY-EFFICIENCY HAS been added in the produce, fresh meat, dairy and frozen food departments. A new decor features brown, beige and natural oak.

Building construction started last fall, but the store remained open during expansion. Parking also has been expanded.

"More than 65 experienced employees are eager to get the construction behind them and get on with business," said Tom Rempert, manager. "We've added 8,000 square feet to our store so you'll find more variety down every new, widened aisle. And don't miss visiting our soup and salad bar. There's never been anything like it in a grocery store."

The management team working with Rempert include: Ray Palmer, co-manager; Shelby Short, meat manager; Harold Kleinow, produce manager; Jean Linger, dairy manager; Regina Kelly, deli manager; Mark Trombly, frozen food manager; and Bill Retell, head baker.

Allied Supermarkets Inc. of Detroit is the parent company of Great Scott supermarkets.

The "ribbon-cutting" ceremony for the expanded store was held this past Sunday. Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Brown, assisted by Township Clerk Esther Hulsing and Joseph Moczak, vice president and general manager of Great Scott, participated by cutting a link of Italian sausage with a meat cleaver.

County task force vows to make Hines family park

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Since the late '70s, Wayne County's Hines Parkway has been known as a haven for weeds (the green kind), weed (the smoking kind) and young party-goers.

Last year police agencies began cleaning out the party-goers.

This year the 22-mile park along the Middle Rouge River is due to become a haven for family picnics, if local and county officials have their way.

"The kickoff is Saturday, May 5," said Kathy Kanable, Garden City resident in charge of parks coordination in County Executive William Lucas's office.

THE HINES Park Task Force, chaired by Sheriff Robert A. Ficano, Tuesday heard these announcements:

- May 5 is "Activities Day" at Hines. The parkway will be shut to motorized traffic from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. so that groups may conduct fund-raisers and bicyclists and walkers may have free rein, Kanable said. (Rain date will be May 12.)
- "As soon as there is warm weather, there will be an early show of law enforcement," Ficano said. Any police agency mak-

'As soon as there is warm weather, there will be an early show of law enforcement.'

Wayne County Sheriff

ing a "sweep" will warn all others by the law-enforcement teletype so that neighboring communities are prepared for any outflow of troublemakers.

- The Wayne County Road Commission, trustees of the park system, will cut grass and reopen about half the battered cement stations.
- "If you get anything out of this today, it's that the parks will have a family orientation," said Ficano, a Livonia resident.

HINES PARKWAY is a 1920s-style "drive in the country."

The Middle Rouge valley is a designated floodplain; not to be developed. The drive roughly parallels the river from Seven Mile Road in Northville Township, south and eastward through Plymouth Township, Livonia, Westland, Livonia and Dearborn Heights.

Before 1983, park users could park anywhere along the road or in a lot, making crowd control difficult.

Local police praised the county's effort to prohibit parking on the drive and confine it to lots, much like state parks and Huron-Clinton Metroparks of more modern vintage.

Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry said, "If you posted 'no parking' signs on the road, kids tore 'em down. But if you posted signs saying 'parking in designated areas only,' there was no problem."

"If we have as good a year as last year, we'd be happy," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen.

POLICE WERE cool, however, to the suggestions of county commissioners Mary Dumas of Livonia and Kay Beard of Inkster that vehicle-entry permits be used to raise revenue for park maintenance.

"We have applied for grant-funded projects for Hines and Elizabeth Park (on the Detroit River at Trenton)," Kanable said. "We're close to securing funding sources."

Police also were cool to random suggestions that beer be prohibited. Beer and ale are allowed in cans and bottles.

Wine, liquor and keg beer are prohibited. Also prohibited are open beer containers in motor vehicles and along the roadside.

One inspector also told of adults bringing in keg beer in the back of a pickup truck, selling to 13- and 14-year-old girls at $1 a cup and then taking advantage of the girls' intoxicated state.

Ficano praised Livonia police for their program of speaking to high-school seniors about the hazards of graduation-time parties.

The 22-mile-long Hines Park will reopen with an emphasis on controlled parking and family orientation, according to county officials.

'Watch Your Pants' on opening day

FROM HIS vantage point in the plush press box high atop the third deck in Tiger Stadium, The Stroller couldn't help recalling his first trip there as a recognized major league baseball writer.

It was back in 1924 — 61 opening days ago — when he was a rookie on the staff of the Detroit Free Press and was assigned to write some notes on the Tiger opener.

It was a far cry from the present facilities at what is now Tiger Stadium. In the first place, we had to climb a ladder and then travel along a catwalk to get our positions.

But it was a thrill, for it was the first time he could sit with equal rank as far as baseball writers were concerned.

IN THOSE days, the stadium had a far different appearance.

The stands ran only as far as third and first bases. The outfield had a background of cement walls, and there was only a small section of bleachers in right field. The seating capacity was less than 30,000 compared to today's more than 50,000.

Ty Cobb was manager. He was an unforgettable sight as he strode to the plate swinging three bats and with his spikes flashing each time he got on base.

But it was an opening game several years later that still is recalled with a laugh — and it was the talk of the town for years. In those days, Cherry Street was right behind the center and left field wall.

There also was a home that faced Trumbull Avenue. It had a long, V-shaped roof that was a good background for the hitters.

AS OPENING day approached, John Rosink, a downtown clothing store operator, was owner of the Detroit Stars, a the stroller

W.W.
Edgar

black team that played at Mack Park on Sundays. Rosink conceived the idea of using that roof to advertise his shop.

Rosink was a frequent visitor to the sports department and was a great fellow for evoking smiles when talking of his team. So it was not surprising when he hired a painter to write "Match Your Pants at Rosink's" in time for the opener.

The night before the opener, Rosink's friends, just for a joke, hired the same painter to change the letter "M" to "W" and have it ready for the big day. The painter worked most of the night.

When the fans gathered for the big game, the sign on the roof said, "Watch Your Pants at Rosink's."

IT WAS the bright spot of that opener, and no one enjoyed the joke more than Rosink. That night he visited the sports departments of the papers and asked them to print a "thank you," saying he got more results from that ad than any he ever had used.

And the late Frank Navin, then owner of the Tigers, agreed that the sign had caused more comment than any ad ever displayed in the ballpark.

Opening games have come and gone for The Stroller for six decades, but of all the memories he carries, that sign on the house on Cherry Street in full view of the opening day fans is the one that is best remembered.

House majority fails test

MAXINE BERMAN, state representative from Southfield, gets an A on her report card for voting against House Bill 5219.

Reps. Justine Barns of Westland, Ruth McNamee of Birmingham and Wilfred Webb of Hazel Park get Cs for being absent that day. It takes 56 votes to pass a bill, so an absence is as good as a negative vote.

Nevertheless, the state House of Representatives passed HB 5219, a crippling amendment to the state's Open Meetings Act. It would allow boards to do annual performance evaluations of school superintendents, college presidents and city managers behind closed doors.

The vote was 75-17 with 18 members absent. The bill goes to the Senate.

THE PURPOSE is to take away by law what the public won from the Michigan Court of Appeals in a 1981 suburban Wayne County case.

The Dearborn school board, as trustees of Henry Ford Community College, got sued for trying to close the doors on the president's evaluation. Said the court:

"People have a strong interest in public education. Because a large portion of the tax dollar goes for the support of the schools, the taxpayer is increasingly holding the boards and administrators accountable for these moneys."

Tim Richard

"Further, the public continues to have an increasing interest in the educational process and expects this public body to be accountable for its actions."

Shooting down the board's alibi that matters of a private nature "might" come up, the court found, "There was nothing in the public notice, nothing presented to the court, of a specific privacy nature which would outweigh the interest of the public to know how their public officials were performing."

Oh, and the appeals court made the college pay the plaintiff's attorney costs.

The appeals court panel consisted of three suburbanites: Walter Cynar of Warren, Dorothy Comstock Riley of Grosse Pointe Farms and Hilda Gage of West Bloomfield. (Riley is a candidate for the state Supreme Court. Gage is an Oakland circuit judge who was filling in on the appeals court.)

A STRONG and vocal minority of local public officials in Michigan just can't adjust to the idea of doing the public's business in public. It concocts one bad idea after another to achieve official secrecy.

Kathleen Strauss, representing the Michigan Association of School Boards, told the House committee that a performance evaluation discussion "can be more open and honest" if the doors are closed to the public.

It was an incredible admission. Strauss is saying local boards are less than honest when they hold open discussions.

If her appalling assertion is correct — that closed discussions are more honest — how can the public ever learn what happens? In the Strauss-MASB book of politics, the public is fed pap in open meetings, gets shut out of closed meetings and loses both ways.

THOSE FROM the Observer & Eccentric area who flunked the test by favoring HB 5219 are: John Bennett of Redford, W.V. Brotherton of Farmington, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion, William Keith of Garden City, Jack Kirksey of Livonia, Gerald Law of Plymouth, Robert McGee of Union Lake and Gordon Sparks of Troy.

In the Senate, the bill goes to the Administration and Rules Committee chaired by Majority Leader John Engler of Mt. Pleasant.

Let us hope for a better decision from the upper house.

Chump to champ, Blanchard on rise

A POLL reportedly done by an independent Connecticut firm indicates that Gov. James Blanchard's popularity is edging back up the likeable side.

A little more than a year ago, Blanchard was only a few steps ahead of a lynch mob in most parts of the state.

The recent poll, however, shows that 53 percent of those asked indicated a "favorable" or "somewhat favorable" view of the governor.

State Democratic Chairman Rick Wiener says the results indicate a "stunning reversal" of the public's perception of the governor from a year ago. In a July 1983 poll, only 34 percent of the respondents approved of Blanchard's performance while 54 percent disapproved.

THE RECENT poll — based on 600 phone calls March 24-28 — also showed that 14 percent indicated an "unfavorable" view of the governor while 25 percent replied "somewhat unfavorable."

Despite the fact that 39 percent of the populace think of the governor unfavorably or somewhat unfavorably, he appears to be making a comeback.

Previous polls also have indicated that Blanchard is regaining lost luster.

From lower than a rattlesnake in the grass to a point where at least half of the people think he's doing an all right job in one year — that is quite an accomplishment.

THE QUESTION is: Why? Wiener contends that it is "greater understanding on the part of the public that the temporary tax increase not only was temporary but necessary."

That sounds like something any accomplished drum major would say under the circumstances. But an accompanying poll shows the public is any less disenchanted with the "temporary" tax increase than it was in the first few months after its enactment.

Perhaps time heals all wounds. Perhaps a good percentage of the public thinks that Blanchard's efforts to provide temporary jobs through the much-publicized Youth Job Corps is a step in the right direction — a direction in which he promised to take the state when campaigning for governor.

Perhaps the public has become aware that Blanchard has taken a number of steps to try to cut the state budget by not filling job vacancies. Perhaps the governor's proposal to aid higher education has struck the right chord with parents of college-age children. Perhaps Blanchard's talk of a "zero growth" state budget warms the cockles of some hearts.

It could be some, or all, or maybe none of these things. Polls don't really determine what makes people think they way they do.

IT APPEARS from this corner, however, that Blanchard is gaining from some changes in style, and more from a public perception which gets more comfortable with a leader the more he is seen on the tube.

The governor's early image was one of a man who couldn't seem to get a handle on his new job. Many of his staff appointments were lambasted or questioned. He had to defend using a state helicopter for travel (sometimes personal) and his appointment of relatives to jobs.

Of late he hasn't looked as snappy by having to defend such frivolous misdeeds of office. As his administration has jelled, Blanchard seemingly has learned to steer clear of the bog.

We have become used to seeing Blanchard on television making snippets of statements about his programs and budget. He has become that wonderful persona which only repeated television appearances can properly create — a leader who delivers in simple, guileless, forceful and direct 30-second statements purported resolutions to our most complex problems.

Despite our misgivings about taxes, Blanchard has, for many of us, taken on the appearance of a leader.

WITH APRIL comes the organizing of kids' baseball and softball leagues.

Much has been said and written about the benefits and disadvantages of such competition. Criticism has focused on the over-involvement of some parents.

As this new season begins, I thought I would reprint this poignant article:

DONALD JENSEN was struck in the head by a thrown bat while umpiring a Little League game. He continued to work the game, but later that evening was placed in the hospital by a doctor. While being kept overnight for observation, Jensen wrote the following letter:

"Dear Parent of a Little Leaguer:
"I am an umpire. I don't do it for a living, but only on Saturdays and Sundays for fun."

"With all the fun I've had, there is still something that bothers me about my job. Some of you feel I'm here to exert authority over your son. For that reason, you often yell at me when I make a mistake."

"Yet no matter how hard I try, I can't be perfect. I counted the number of calls I made in a six-inning game today. The total number of decisions, whether on balls and strikes or safes and outs, was 146."

"THERE WAS one real close call that ended the game. A runner for the home team was trying to steal the plate on a passed ball. The catcher chased the ball down and threw to the pitcher covering the plate. The pitcher made the tag, and I called the runner out.

"As I was getting my equipment to leave I overheard one of the parents comment, 'It's too bad the kids have to lose games because of rotten umpires. That was one of the loudest calls I've ever seen.'"

"I wanted to quit umpiring, but fortunately, my wife reminded me of another situation that occurred last week."

"I was umpiring behind the plate for a pitcher who pantomimed his displeasure at any call on a borderline pitch that was not in his team's favor. One could sense that he wanted the crowd to realize that he was a fine, talented player who was doing his best to get along, but that I was a blackhearted villain who was working against him."

"For two innings the manager watched this. When the kid returned to the dugout in the top of the third, the manager called him aside. In a voice loud enough that I was able to overhear, the lecture went like this:

"LISTEN, SON, it is time you make a decision. You can be an umpire, an actor or a pitcher. But you can only be one at a time when you are playing for me. Right now, it is your job to pitch. And you are basically doing a lousy job. Leave the acting to the actors, the umpiring to the umpires, or you won't do any pitching here. Now what is it going to be?"

"Needless to say, the kid chose the pitching route and went on to win the game. When the game was over the kid followed me to my car. Fighting his hardest to keep back the tears, he apologized for his actions and thanked me for umpiring his game. He said he had learned a lesson that he would never forget."

"I can't help wonder how many more fine young men are missing their chance to develop into outstanding ball players because their parents encourage them to spend time umpiring, rather than working harder to play the game as it should be played."

The following morning Donald Jensen died of a brain concussion.

DID YOU know that in 1671 France issued a proclamation which laid claim to all of the country around the Great Lakes "which drained into the St. Lawrence River?" It is not believed the French ever dreamed of the vastness of the territory they claimed — but this is of little importance today because France eventually lost the entire territory.

We live in an engineering capital

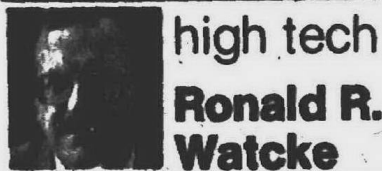

High tech is a relatively new phenomenon in our culture. But a basic tenet of high tech — engineering — has been around for more than 100 years.

For the past 89 years, since the birth of the automobile industry, metropolitan Detroit has been well served by the Engineering Society of Detroit (ESD).

Since 1898 ESD has been a leader in providing services to individuals and the community through technical programs developed to enhance the professionalism of its members.

For many years ESD played a vital role in the area of technological transfer, applying scientific knowledge from one field to another. Although ESD is regional in nature, it has built an international reputation with the excellence of its programs and attracts attendees from as far away as Germany and Japan.

IN 1895 the dean of engineering at the University of Michigan decided to cut programs sharply. Thirteen graduates organized a protest group to stop the cutbacks. The following year this group became the Engineering Society of Detroit.

high tech
Ronald R. Watcke

The society's first headquarters was located on Alexandrine Street. In 1942, in recognition of the society's contribution, Horace Rackam built the Memorial Building in his name which has housed the ESD for the past 42 years.

Current membership is 3,100 and growing. Regular membership is open to all those at least 21 years of age with a degree in engineering, architecture or the allied arts and sciences or equivalent program.

Technical membership is open to those at least 21 years of age with an associate degree in technology or equivalent experience.

MORE THAN 36 percent of the members are associated with the automotive industry.

The next two largest groups include 16 percent from the construction industry and 14 percent employed in public utilities. The remaining members are from the fields of architecture, education, materials and general manufacturing.

Three-fourths of the members are graduate engineers; 91 percent of the members are male, reflecting the current image of engineering as a male-dominated occupation.

Almost one-quarter of the membership is under 30 years of age. Approximately 20 percent are between the ages of 31 and 40, and more than 55 percent are 40 years of age or older.

Ten percent of the members live outside the state of Michigan. They represent 40 states and 20 foreign countries. This statistic attests to the international appeal of the society.

Ronald Watcke is dean of liberal arts at Wayne County Community College.

Kids' cable TV needs monitoring

By Dennis P. Sugrue
special writer

We had cable television installed in our home last year. It took some adjustment that first evening of cable viewing.

I saw a graphic rape scene, two college sweethearts learning more biology and anatomy in the dorm than in the classroom and enough bare breasts to bore a voyeur.

Ed Sullivan was not. But as the argument goes, mature adults should be free to choose their entertainment.

A FEW NIGHTS later, our 15-year-old neighbor came over to babysit. Until then, I hadn't had reason to worry about the implications of a youngster having easy access to "mature adult entertainment."

Suddenly I felt a wave of responsibility: Did I want to potentially expose this adolescent to objectionable material? "Well," I reasoned, "she'll probably watch 'Love Boat' and 'Fantasy Island.'"

Who was I trying to kid? If I were 15, I'd probably be flipping the dial to "Beach Girls" or "The Sensuous Nurse" as soon as the adults walked out the door. Short of hiding the remote-control box or disconnecting the cable, I didn't feel I had many options.

I suspect many households now are facing similar dilemmas.

ADULT ENTERTAINMENT, via cable, is readily available to all family members and is extremely difficult for parents to monitor.

Parents ask whether they should take a strong stand and impose strict, rigid standards for their children's television, or whether they should exercise benign neglect in efforts to avoid

With this installment, Dennis P. Sugrue begins a series of columns for the Observer newspapers on psychology and daily living.

Segue, who once studied to be a priest, is senior staff psychologist at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit.

Future topics will include stress, grief and bereavement, and the need to say

"no" — as well as topics suggested by readers. Address your questions to this newspaper.

A onetime Redford Observer carrier, Sugrue, 43, holds a number of degrees: bachelor's degree magna cum laude from Sacred Heart Seminary College in Detroit; master's degree in experimental psychology from Eastern Michigan University; master's degree in theology from the University of Detroit; and doctorate in clinical psychology from the University of Windsor.

He is a Farmington Hills resident.

blowing the issue out of proportion.

Little or no research exists which demonstrates that viewing an erotic bedroom scene on television has a detrimental impact on children or adolescents. This absence of evidence is not necessarily because there is no detrimental impact. More likely it is because this is an extremely difficult issue to research.

We therefore have to infer the impact of "adult entertainment" on children from what we know about child development and attitude formation.

MOST IMPORTANT attitudes which are developed during childhood are not the result of any one discussion with a parent, or of any one lesson in a classroom, or of any one event witnessed by a child.

Rather, attitudes are gradually shaped by a multitude of experiences. A parent may tell the child about sexuality in terms of the beauty and responsibility of sexual behavior. The child also is exposed, however, to the locker-room snickers, off-color jokes and four-letter words which all portray sexuality in a different light.

Conflicting messages about the nature of sexuality are unavoidable in today's society. But if they are minimized, the odds should be much better that the child will be able to sort out the conflicting messages and develop a wholesome sexual attitude.

BUT FLOOD the child with constant, subtle, yet persuasive messages that the world revolves around sex; that sex can be used to manipulate others; that one's self-worth is associated with bedroom performance and physical proportions, and what then are the odds of the child developing healthy attitudes?

Some readers may accuse me of advocating that parents attempt to shield their children, to keep them pure, innocent, ignorant of sexual matters until their proverbial wedding night. Not at all.

On the contrary, I am simply advocating that parents do not abdicate to cable television their role as sex educator.

I suggest that close monitoring of television viewing and open-minded, honest dialogue with the child about sexuality can be valuable steps toward helping our children develop into mature, well-adjusted adults.

From her soapbox She rallies aging to youth

By Shirlee Rose Iden
staff writer

'My mother instilled in me that everything I do, I do a good job. So everything I ever did was stimulating and exciting. I have soap boxes I'm on, still.'

— Dr. Wilma Donahue

CREDIT A CONCERNED teacher with saving Dr. Wilma Donahue's student career, which might have been cut short at the undergraduate level.

Back up to 1923, when Donahue was a student at the University of Michigan. An Iowa native, she came to Ann Arbor when her husband was transferred there.

"I had accumulated one year of college credits but transferred to U-M to continue my studies in psychology," Donahue said. "I had a stern professor in Iowa who came to Ann Arbor, too, so I studied with him."

"I was sure I failed my lab final, so I put away my notes and didn't register in psychology for the next semester. One day crossing the diag, I met my teacher and was asked why I wasn't in class."

"I found I had gotten the highest grade in the class. But if I hadn't met that teacher on the diag, I wouldn't have become a psychologist."

DONAHUE NOT ONLY became a psychologist, but earned a bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Michigan. She was awarded her undergraduate degree magna cum laude in 1926; her MA in 1927; and a Ph.D. in 1937. She remained at the university until the age of 69, when she retired, only to get remain involved and active.

She was a graduate assistant, research assistant, instructor and served successfully as clinical psychologist in the psychiatric unit of the student health service for 12 years. Later, she was on the graduate staff of the Rackham School; director, Bureau of Psychological Services; research associate in gerontology; and director of the Division of Gerontology.

In 1947, Donahue became interested in aging, which she calls "a new frontier for me and in psychology."

A pioneer in the field of gerontology, Donahue will join a distinguished panel in the seminar "The Art of Maturing" to be presented Thursday, April 26, by the National Council of Jewish Women.

For her 84 years, she has a Phi Beta Kappa key, two honorary doctorates from Western Michigan University and the St. Thomas Institute of Advanced Studies.

She has been honored with many awards for her pioneer efforts in gerontology and is a member of the Michigan Women's Hall of Fame (Lifetime Achievement Award).

SNOW WHITE hair done in a knot, dressed in a brown suit and beige sweater ornamented with silver beads, she has clear blue eyes, well-earned age lines across her brow, and a ready smile. Sometimes the right word won't come to her at once, and her hearing is diminished, but Donahue is as sharp and incisive as she is concerned about aging people, and those who need help.

"My mother instilled in me that whatever I do, I do a good job. So everything I ever did was stimulating and exciting. I never really retired. I have soap boxes I'm on, still."

She's been part of conferences on aging in the community, the state, and at the White House. For several years before returning to Ann Arbor, she worked in Europe. In Ann Arbor, she lives in the same house she has lived in since the 1940s.

"I'm an isolate, no family."

Her family have been the blind for whom she researched and tolled and now the aging about whom she agrees "It's never too old to be young."

Donahue believes in keeping busy and living with a purpose. "You might say confronting life after gainful employment. I believe we can enjoy fulfillment all along in our lives."

"SOMEONE ONCE ASKED my mother what was the best time of your life — she said 'Whatever time you're living'."

One of her recent interests is the Eckard College at St. Petersburg, Fla., a college for older professionals. It's a place where a person can join the academy and do what they want in "productive leisure" in the college setting.

Donahue has been named a fellow of Eckard College.

"The French government has set up a Department of Leisure. They are setting up centers where employees can get credit for vacation studies. It's quite advanced."

"The New School for Social Research has older people serve as their own faculty. One has to have purpose all the time. It's better to be purposeful than just play golf."

Donahue dreams of communities encouraging "productive leisure" here in Michigan.

"The demographics indicate an extreme stretching out of life, so middle-aged people are stretched, too, and still active."

Donahue believes there's a great need for housing with small space for people, particularly women who are widowed and live alone.

"THIS OPENS the possibilities of areas for purposeful retirement, a need being recognized by the innkeepers of America. We should be developing facilities like this in conjunction with hotels."

She contends we begin with babies in the crib to say "This is old, throw it away" or "Cut down this old tree," and this distresses her.

"If education were to do something to improve the image of maturity, it has to start by showing old not as bad."

Another of her "soapboxes" is the one she climbs to speak of her dismay at seeing people turned out of mental hospitals into the community.

'Maturing' theme at seminar

"You're never too old to be young" is the theme of a seminar on the art of maturing scheduled from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Thursday, April 26.

Sponsored by the National Council of Jewish Women and its Public Affairs Department, the session will take place in the NCJW offices, 16400 Twelve Mile, Southfield.

Harold R. Johnson, dean of the school of social work, University of Michigan, joins Dr. Wilma Donahue, director of the International Center for Social Gerontology, Washington, D.C., and Dr. Ronald E. Trunsky, associate director of the department of psychiatry, Sinai Hospital, as guest speakers.

They will discuss the Art of Maturing from a world, national and personal perspective.

Lunch will be served. Reservations and check should be sent by Monday, April 23, to "You're Never Too Old" at the NCJW office. Members and older persons pay $3, non-members $4.

It's all relative Modeling sisters find success

By Richard Lech
staff writer

THE THREE Taran sisters of Westland have really been going places in their brief careers as models and entertainers.

The places include the Playboy Mansion, the Lee Strasberg School of Acting and the pages of national magazines.

"It's been a great learning experience for us," said the oldest Taran sister, Susan. "It doesn't seem like work."

But the sisters — Susan, DIAnna, and Marlene — hope to sound a new note in their careers.

They want to break into show business as a musical group.

The women — all graduates of Livonia Franklin High School — feel the time is right for them to put together a musical revue, possibly Las Vegas-style.

THE TARANS have plenty of musical experience, having sung and danced together since they were children. Marlene plays the flute and DIAnna the trumpet. Susan is planning to learn piano.

An official of a top record company has expressed an interest in the sisters because of their unique look, they said.

"We're three sisters with three different looks, personalities, and voices," Susan said. She said people often find it hard to believe that they are sisters.

Susan is a 5-foot, 8-inch, green-eyed brunette; DIAnna a 5-foot, 7-inch blonde with hazel eyes; and Marlene, the youngest, is a 5-foot, 9½-inch blond with green eyes.

The Tarans caught the eye of an RCA record company executive during the filming of a recent rock video for the nationally popular Detroit rock band The Romantics. The three sisters "slept" in the background while the group sang "Talking in Your Sleep."

"Someone said, 'Those three girls are sisters,'" Susan said. "He (the record executive) said, 'If they could sing one note they could make a lot of money.'"

The Tarans now plan to go into the studio, cut a tape to send to that record official, and, they hope, reach new heights of success.

IT'S NOT that they haven't been successful already.

Susan, whose main interest in acting, has been accepted into the prestigious Lee Strasberg School of Acting in New York City, the school that has turned out actors Al Pacino and Robert De Niro.

She won praise for her performances as Gladys, "the sex-charged secretary," in a local production of "Pajama Game." And her face is seen in stores across the nation in picture frames being sold by Intercraft Industries.

DIAnna, who is engaged to Detroit Red Wing goalie Greg Stefan, was an English Leather calendar girl in 1981 and first runner-up for the Miss Michigan United crown in 1982.

More recently, she was the "Matinee Lady" to Jerry St. James' Johnny Carson in a recent Alan Ford and Ray Whitfield Ford commercial spoofing Carson's "Tea Time Movie."

Of that commercial, Detroit Free Press columnist Bob Talbert wrote, "the guy does a good Carson, and she does a sensational Carol Wayne."

Marlene, as the youngest, is just getting a start in modeling. But she already has appeared as the "star" of a Heidi's Salons advertisement that has appeared in Vogue and Metropolitan Detroit.

From September to March, the Tarans are on the road as spokeswomen for auto companies, mainly Ford and Lincoln-Mercury, at auto shows around the country. Between that, their modeling, acting, commercial work, and song-and-dance revues, the Tarans very rarely are able to be home with their parents, Joseph and Jacqueline Taranowsky.

"We've led a full life and met a lot of people," Susan said.

ONE OF those people was Hugh Hefner, who was so impressed with the Tarans' look that he asked them to pose for his Playboy magazine.

A shot of the three sisters in bikinis in the Silhouette/American Health Spa Spa News caught the attention of Playboy officials. The magazine flew the sisters to California last August, where a limousine took them to the surrealistic splendor of Hefner's Playboy Mansion.

The Tarans stayed in the cottages where the Playmates stayed, swam in the cavern-like pools on the mansion grounds, and just in general enjoyed themselves in the sun. But after several days on the mansion's grounds, they decided they had to find out exactly what they were there for.

They went into the mansion and spotted Hefner, clad in the pajamas that are his customary wearing apparel around the house, eating lunch. Hefner was "certainly the nicest man you'd ever want to meet," the Tarans recalled, but they turned down his request that they appear nude in the magazine as a sister team.

"We told him that we just felt that at this point in our careers we were not ready to do any sexy poses with any kind of nudity because we felt we had something more to offer than that," Susan said.

"He said they had done sisters before but never with such different looks and personalities. He said, 'Why don't you go into the studio anyway? You don't have to do anything.'"

So the Tarans posed for Playboy, but in T-shirts and body suits for the magazine's "Flashdance" issue. But the photos were never used.

WHILE THEIR look is different enough to intrigue even Hugh Hefner, the Tarans are a lot alike. They room together on the road, work out together, vacation together, even date together.

"We'd like to have a triple wedding, but I don't think that's going to work," Susan said with a laugh.

DIAnna is the only one with wedding plans. She and Greg Stefan plan to be married sometime next year. She met the Red Wing goalie through a mutual friend on her birthday last May, and they were engaged on Valentine's Day.

"It really works out good, because I travel when he travels," DIAnna said. "We don't have the situation where one sits home while the other one travels."

While Marlene cites her older sisters as her main inspiration, Susan and DIAnna said it was her mother who was

Canton's cutest babies

John Kline and Anthony Bence won Canton's cutest baby contest, sponsored by the Canton Jaycee Women and held last weekend at the Spring Craft Fair.

John, 8 months, won in the 0-18 months category while Anthony, 20 months, won in the 19 months to three years category.

Votes were taken by money contributions from shoppers at the fair. Approximately 30 babies were entered in the contest.

The two winners will receive either a $50 savings account from National Bank of Detroit or a $50 savings bond from Plymouth Community Federal Credit Union; a homemade Care Bear; dinner for two at Steve's Restaurant or Mr. Steak in Canton; and a box of stuffed animals and photo album from Santa Gene Reeves.

Prizes were subsidized by the Canton Jaycee Women. The project raised $123 for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Carnival a sure sign of spring in Canton

Spring has sprung and the Canton Historical Society intends to get you rolling with its annual carnival in the K mart shopping center.

May 5 is the day the Historical Society once again will offer the visit from Du Mouchelles Appraisers who will be an hand at the Historical Museum on Canton Center Road to estimate the value of any treasure you bring in — for the low cost of $3 per item. Prepare to bring in all those "diddle-diedems" that you keep putting aside and saying "I wonder if this is worth anything?" If you should have any questions call Elaine at 981-1480. This is one of the young good traditions started by our young but talented and enthusiastic society.

Joining our Historical Society on this traditional weekend is the Friends of the Library once again holding its annual book sale, also to be held at the K mart Plaza. If you're looking for a particular book, shop early. However, if you just want to get your hands on as many books as possible for the best price possible, wait until Sunday when they will once again offer their famous "Shopping Bag" of books for only $1.50. Now where can you beat a bargain like that? You could even shop early for your favorites and return on Sunday, May 6, to scoop up a real bargain. Remember, too, it's all for the good of our library.

BEFORE I LEAVE the subject of the Friends of the Library, I was reminded this week by a member of the Friends about my writing to you earlier about the need in Canton for volunteers.

As advanced, cultured and educationally interested as we profess to be... the Friends of the Canton Library is one more committee that may soon bite the everlasting dust due to lack of interest.

Canton, how can this be? We insist on performance from our teachers, students, public leaders, and we even have petitions to recall school board members. All this from a community that is about to let its very own, single branch library be abandoned by its only public committee. Perhaps if the professed intellectuals cannot get in there and support the library, we could form a grass roots committee. Quite frankly, from the looks of the different public service groups, and the plight of same, we may soon see a whole new outlook brought to Canton.

Now I'm not going to use names but as one hard-working but depressed volunteer put it, "It's like the people in Canton just don't care." I'm sure that isn't true, but I do know that because we have grown so fast, people are confused. Also due to the economy many of the housewives are out there 9-to-5ing it, and while they normally would have been in their homes more hours and better able to see where they could serve, they just haven't had the opportunity or time to make that determination. Well, there always is a committee of some sort that can use an hour, a day, or a week of your time. Try.

Canton chatter

ONE COMMITTEE hanging in there is the Fashion Show — Sesquicentennial, that is.

So how about your dresses? I suppose it's too late to ask you to start making one now. If you sew like me it is. However, if you have talent and you're planning on having something available for the show, please call Kathy Freece at 981-2027. Phyllis Redfern at 453-6900 or me, 981-6354. Don't forget to call for tickets. Even if you don't have a dress to show, we'll show you what we already have, as you sit graciously nibbling on your salad while catching all the beautiful "new" things for the season being shown by Winkleman's.

This should be a nice swing into spring, at only $5 per ticket for lunch and fashion show, new and old fashions. Come on down to the Roman Forum on Saturday, May 5, at noon and join our hosts and co-chairwomen Greta Poole and Maria Sterlini for a lovely afternoon. Call Greta at 455-4660 or Maria at 981-4547 for reservations.

Easter is coming and many people will be giving live animals to children. Sometimes this doesn't work out, though, and what is a cute fuzzy chickie becomes a noisy, smelly chicken. Take heart, Canton, for right here we have some very kind gentlemen willing to give a hand. If this should happen to you, call Dan's Pet Shop on Ford Road at 459-4670. Placement depends on available room, naturally, but it's good to know there is someone to call. Working closely and just as generously are two veterinarians of the Canton Center Animal Hospital.

I mention them not only because I take my pets there and have for years, but they too offer special help. I know them to be kind, caring individuals who truly like small creatures. They seem to find something special about pets, and take the time to listen to your story about why your pet is sooooo wonderful. But even more important is the service they provide to our community for stray or wild animals. Like the time my children brought home an injured wild bird. We took in Robbie Robin (catchy, huh?), whom we let go when it was well, and they never charged us. They said since we were kind enough to stop and care for it and bring it to them, they would do all they could as doctors and nobody owed anybody. We were all just working together to help the little creature. Now that's nice people.

They remind me that no matter who your vet is, now is the time to get your pet in and get it vaccinated. Parvovirus is deadly and quick. Heartworm is easy to catch, and fleas and ticks are trouble for the whole family. They ask that you take a day and get your pet ready. If you get a pet you can't handle, for whatever reason, call Dan at 459-4670 or Canton Animal Hospital at 459-1400. They care.

ON A PERSONAL note, a fond bon voyage to my son Brian's girlfriend and a treasure to our family — Ronnie (Veronica) Roman.

Ronnie is traveling with a group of talented students from the French classes at Centennial Educational Park who will be traveling to such places as London, Paris and Switzerland. So have fun, kids, and enjoy all the glorious adventures that await you! A small hint from one foreign traveler to another: In all the countries you visit, try to speak their language. The natives appreciate it and will return the kindness. It's all out there, and it won't come and get you, you must find it. Have a ball!

I wanted to give this surprise message to Ronnie and I didn't think to get the names of the other students. If your child is one, please call me and I'd love to include them in the Welcome Home! For now, to a beautiful, kind girl, with gracious manners to match... au revoir!

Well-placed trees can keep house warm or cool

By Penny Wright
special writer

"Buy it like you buy a car." With those words, horticulturist Nancy Butler emphasized the worth of one of nature's finest gifts — a tree.

Butler, who works for Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension Service, and others in her field say trees can do more than add beauty to the environment.

They say trees can reduce energy needs.

FEW PEOPLE are aware of the energy-conserving potential of trees, she contends.

Studies show that carefully locating trees and other plant materials on a building site can significantly reduce heating and cooling bills.

In their book, "Design with Climate," Victor and Aladar Olgyay estimate that with good protection on three sides of a building, fuel savings might run as high as 30 percent.

Butler believes that with analysis trees can be selected that will enhance a site and will also reduce the effects of the two prime energy-grabbers: winter winds and the summer sun.

She described the principles involved.

WIND FLOWS in layers of air over the ground following a path of least resistance. When the air stream hits a barrier, it exerts a pressure against that surface. In the case of a building, a positive pressure builds up on the windward side.

At the opposite end of the building (the leeward side) a negative pressure is created. This pressure difference causes air infiltration — the scourge of every heating bill-payer.

A key element to reducing the heat-stealing properties of winter winds is a good windbreak. Trees planted perpendicular to the windstream divert the air flow over and around a building.

According to Butler, the denser the barrier and more graded in height, the more effective the windbreak will be.

Butler advises using multi-rowed windbreaks to force the wind upward for longer distances. "With one tree, the wind goes up very quickly and the comes down very quickly," she said.

WHILE DENSELY branched evergreens make the best wind barrier, large shrubs, especially on a berm, will substantially reduce air flows.

Deciduous trees also provide wind control even though they lose their leaves in the winter. Butler recommends combining faster growing deciduous trees with slower growing evergreens to allow the windbreak time to mature.

Perimeter wind screens aren't the only type of air stream blockage available to property owners. A row of evergreens planted next to a building, at a distance of approximately five feet to avoid foundation damage, will create a dead air space between the wall and trees.

The undisturbed air space will have a higher temperature, which in turn modifies the temperature difference between the inside of the building and the exterior air. Similar to a layer of insulation, the dead air space will reduce the amount of heated air escaping from the building.

AIR CONDITIONING loads and warm weather discomfort can be reduced by modifying the amount of summer sun reaching a building. Deciduous trees prove most popular for shade because they provide access to the sun during the spring and autumn months when warmth is desired.

Leaves reflect and absorb the sun's radiation. Depending on the density of the foliage, they can completely block or filter solar rays. The effect is a reduction of air temperature near the ground.

Butler says that on a hot day, it may be as much as 25 degrees cooler under the canopy of a tree than in full sun. Since the east, south and west faces of a building bear the brunt of the summer sun's heat, he advises planting trees to shade these sides.

Trees with large, round crowns and dense foliage will throw the biggest shadow.

HOW CAN an energy-conscious shopper maximize the benefits of a tree purchase?

"By taking the time to research and narrow down the options," says David Golab, a designer with Plymouth Nursery and Garden Center in Plymouth.

Golab maintains that designing an energy-saving landscape is basically a four-step procedure.

First, shoppers should assess their sites to determine wind flow patterns and the movement of the sun across the lot. While winds move in a westward direction across Michigan, local areas tend to get winter winds moving from the northwest.

In the summer, the winds mostly come from the southwest. Site conditions such as hills and buildings can change wind patterns.

Similarly, property owners should know the position of the sun as it moves across the site at different times of the day and during different seasons. This can be done by observation or with the use of a sun angle chart.

THE SECOND step involves analyzing the trouble areas of the lot. This means finding the places that are most vulnerable to the harsh effects of the wind and sun.

As a third step, property owners should make a concept plan of proposed solutions. Making a drawing of the site can ease the task.

The final step is to go shopping. This is the time to talk to professionals to determine what types of trees will fit site needs as well as your pocketbook.

Golab emphasizes that the decision making process should not be rushed.

Butler concurs and says to new homeowners especially, "I would say live in a home for a year, find out where the energy inefficiencies are and then pick the trees."

Butler adds that local Cooperative Extension offices offer pamphlets and advice on tree selections. Call these offices for information: In Oakland County, 853-0880 and in Wayne County, 721-6550.

Little Miss

Devon Cunningham, 5, has been selected as a contestant in the 1984 South Michigan National Little Miss Pageant, to be held May 19 in Plymouth. The pageant is the official preliminary to the state National Little Miss Pageant, to be held in August in Grand Rapids. Devon is the daughter of Dennis and Denise Cunningham of Ann Street, Plymouth.

Sisters hit a new note their role model. Trained as an opera singer, Jacqueline Taranowsky was a stage mother who prodded her children to sing, dance, and perform from early childhood onward.

"Our mom knew that ballerinas wouldn't be performing in nightclubs," Marlene said. "At recitals, everyone else would be in tutus, we'd be in grass skirts."

The Tarans still put on the Hawaiian song-and-dance shows they performed as youngsters. They do the shows throughout the summer at country club affairs, company parties, and other occasions across Michigan.

AS FOR modeling, the aloof, condescending attitude of the typical model is not for them, they said.

"Some models, even local models, are real snooty," Marlene said. "But we're down to earth."

"We'll go on jobs and people will say, 'more than anything else, you girls are nice,'" Susan said. "We always find that the compliment we like the best. It's better than 10 beautiful compliments any day."

Much of their work for auto shows, conventions and trade shows takes advantage of their personableness. They usually dress in demure business suits for these assignments.

"We learn about the company and get all the information we can on it," Susan said. "That way, you don't know if it's a model or just a pretty girl who happens to work for the company. They don't want a girl who just stands there and smiles."

But not all auto show work calls for austere dress. Working at the New York Auto Show in February 1983, the Tarans posed in bathing suits and high heels in the New York Post to promote the newspaper's Triple Chance Wingo game. Their photo took up most of the tabloid's Page 3.

In one of their most unusual assignments, they were among a group of women who were painted gold and posed as Grecian statues during a banquet at the Hyatt-Regency Hotel in Dearborn. But while the other "statues" rushed to shower afterwards to get the gold paint out, the Tarans rushed home first in excitement to show their parents.

"It took days to get that gold out," Marlene recalled.

IN THE next few weeks, DiAnna and Marlene will be traveling to Los Angeles, Las Vegas and Chicago as spokeswomen for a computer company, Data General of Massachusetts.

Susan hopes to work as a receptionist-messenger at the Republican Convention in Dallas, repeating a job she had four years ago when the GOP met in Detroit. That year, she met such notables as soon-to-be-president Ronald Reagan and evangelist Billy Graham.

The Tarans also plan to squeeze in a vacation — together, of course — this summer before the auto show schedule starts in the fall. And in the meantime, they'll be working on that musical tape.

"We've met all these people over the years, and now we're going to start calling them," Susan said. "Because we're ready to go and do it now."

roll call report

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes April 5 through April 11.

HOUSE

PANAMA CANAL By a vote of 186 for and 214 against, the House rejected an amendment to reduce the fiscal 1985 funds for the Panama Canal Commission by $8.3 million or two percent. The House later sent to the Senate bill (HR 4900) appropriating $443.9 million for the canal.

Under 1977 treaties turning over the canal to Panama, the U.S. commission is to administer the canal until 2000. Congressional appropriations are supposed to be offset by canal revenues. Chiefly at issue on this vote was whether U.S. employees in Panama deserve a cost-of-living hike to offset their loss of commissary privileges, and whether the U.S. administrator's perks, such as a rent-free house, are excessive.

Supporter William Carney, R-N.Y., said the U.S. canal zone administrator "should be paying approximately $3,000 a year rent (for) that gorgeous home he has down in this little kingdom."

Opponent Norman Shumway, R-Calif., said any budget cut might jeopardize a cost-of-living hike "which I think is essential to keep those employees in place."

Members voting yes wanted to cut the Panama Canal Commission budget.

Voting yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth.

Voting no: Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

TAX BILL By a vote of 318 for and 97 against, the House passed a tax bill to cut $47.2 billion from the $600 billion deficit that is projected over three years beginning Oct. 1. The measure (HR 4170) was sent to the Senate.

Most of the bill's revenue would come from the corporate sector, through a partial crackdown on tax shelters, loopholes and questionable accounting practices. Its most visible everyday consumer provision would increase telephone, liquor and cigarette taxes. Its most prominent features affecting individual income tax returns would tighten rules for "income averaging" and lessen the interest income and income earned abroad that can be excluded from taxation.

Supporter Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., called the bill "a pretty good piece of work" and noted that President Reagan supported it.

Opponent Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., said "the deficit must be attacked with responsible spending policies, not just higher and higher taxes."

Members voting yes favored the tax bill.

Voting yes: Ford and Broomfield.

Voting no: Pursell and Hertel.

Not voting: Levin.

SENATE

NICARAGUA The Senate passed, 84, and 12 against, a non-binding resolution condemning the CIA-supervised planting of mines in Nicaraguan harbors. The CIA has acknowledged it acted with White House approval. The vote occurred during debate on a tax bill (HR 2163).

Supporter Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, said "participation in mining the territorial waters of another country is considered an act of war" in the international community.

Opponent Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., said "we in the Senate tread upon dangerous, dangerous (constitutional) ground when we interfere with the authority and the responsibility of the president."

Senators voting yes wanted to register opposition to U.S. involvement in the mining of Nicaraguan harbors by anti-Sandinista rebels.

Carl Levin, D, and Donald Riegle, D, both voted yes.

INDEXING By a vote of 57 for and 38 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to delay from 1985 to 1988 the start of "tax indexing," the mechanism to keep inflation from pushing taxpayers into higher tax brackets. The vote came during debate on HR 2163, a bill to cut the deficit by $62 billion in fiscal 1985 through tax hikes and spending cuts.

Indexing will raise tax brackets by the same percentage as the rate of inflation. It is designed to thwart the "bracket creep" that causes individuals to pay higher taxes even though their real earning power does not increase.

Martin Feldstein, the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, was quoted in debate as saying "the long-term success or failure of President Reagan's economic program is likely to hinge more on retaining tax indexing than on any other piece of legislation."

Divorcing parents owe their kids

Marriage counseling is seen by some as a luxury. Others accept it as a necessity. And still others claim that it is a total waste of time.

The reluctant spouse will often tell his or her pleading partner: "I don't have a problem, so if you want to go, then do it alone." More threatened types will even try to stop the partner from reaching out.

Such refusal to work on a relationship is sometimes brutal, often painful and usually sad. But when the refusal for help is detrimental to dependent children, it is criminal.

The research on children and divorce is quite definitive on three counts. Divorce does make a difference in the life and development of a child regardless of age.

CONFLICTED marriages can be more harmful to children than some divorces. It has also been shown that the behavior of parents during and following a divorce has considerable impact on children.

Unfortunately, the anger and hurt often linger long past the court date.

Children are unwittingly or on purpose pulled into the middle. They become the pawns in a game of "I'll pay you back if it is the last thing I do!"

They are also often the innocent and helpless objects of anger from parents who have never learned to deal with what they feel. Regardless of their age, they are ill-equipped to deal with parental adolescence.

Child abuse of this sort is not relegated to the uneducated. It has nothing to do with social class, race or religion. Rather, it is the legacy of those children whose parents are more concerned with their own jealousies and hurts than they are about the children for whom they say they would die.

TWO POSSIBLE dynamics lying behind such cruel behavior would appear to be meanness or helplessness. The harming parent(s) is either mean and simply does not care or is helpless in controlling the harmful behavior that even she or he abhors.

In the case of the meanness, there may be a challenge for the legal system. Certainly the rights of parents moral perspectives

need to be protected. Parent-child contact is important enough that it must be provided for. However, when such provisions or their denial take into consideration the wants of the parent over the needs of the child, we need to think in another direction.

A plea of helplessness rings rather hollow unless the pleading parent is doing something more than making another resolution. Some kind of professional help for such a parent is indicated — not because he or she wants it but because the child(ren) involved has a right to something better.

It may be that the couple who were unable to learn to relate as husband and wife need help to relate as parents. The level to which they learn to do that directly affects the level of healthy emotional growth available to their child.

STRUGGLING to grow up in an age obsessed with ways of blowing each other to kingdom come in the name of defense is difficult enough. The other complexities that threaten to overtake the opportunities available to children often make for an anxiety-ridden journey.

Those who claim to love them first have a choice to make. Either they can contribute to the pain that already exists or they can work to diminish the burden. If such work entails putting pride in one's pocket and reaching to learn a new way of relating to the child and the other parent for the child's sake, so be it. A refusal at this point can never be the right of any parent.

Toxic-waste cleanup will be slow—EPA chief

By Penny Wright
Special writer

"Sporting a maize-colored tie and a 'Mister Clean' smile, William D. Ruckelshaus, head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, breezed into southeastern Michigan this week with a message:

"The United States is dealing with problems of the environment in an orderly and forthright manner — be patient."

"We are in the very early stages as a country in deciding what to do about hazardous waste," Ruckelshaus told a conference in Southgate Monday on "Alternatives to Landfills."

"Society has paid very little attention to dealing with hazardous waste from literally the dawn of industrial civilization," Ruckelshaus said in an appraisal of where the nation stands in solving waste problems.

PROGRESS HAS been achieved, the EPA chief said, in the area of non-toxic solid waste disposal.

When the Indiana-born lawyer first headed EPA 10 years ago under President Nixon, programs on solid waste were all focused at the national level. Since then, the federal government has pulled back from direct involvement in the decision-making process.

"What can be done about solid waste is often a local question," said Ruckelshaus. "The choices have to be tailored to problems that exist at a local level."

The EPA chief admitted that after a decade absence, he is struck by the toughness of controlling hazardous waste. "It's difficult to arrive at a judgment of precisely what ought to be done," he said.

Ruckelshaus was a vice president for law and corporate affairs for Weyerhaeuser Co., Tacoma, Wash., a paper manufacturer, until last year. He was recalled to government service by President Reagan after Anna Gorensuch was forced to resign during a flap over the so-called EPA "Superfund."

LOCAL REACTIONS to his speech were positive.

Wayne County Planning Commissioner Maurice Roach of Plymouth said he hoped the Ruckelshaus visit would underline the importance of the proposed Wayne County Solid Waste Management Plan, currently receiving public review.

"Ruckelshaus said said things (about waste disposal) that needed to be said," Roach added.

Pam Frucci, Grosse Ile and president of Concern Detroit Inc., conference sponsor, hoped the "recycled" EPA head would spark more public interest in waste disposal than his predecessor, the "Ice Queen."

CURRENTLY, Ruckelshaus said, EPA uses two main tools for grappling with hazardous waste problems:

• The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA).

• The Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act — alias "Superfund."

He said EPA is in the early stages of implementing RCRA that pertain to hazardous waste use. While the agency has yet to define hazardous waste as opposed to other wastes, attempts are being made to monitor dangerous substances.

A nationwide "cradle to grave" tracking system is moving into place to monitor the movement of hazardous wastes from production to disposal, but Ruckelshaus cautioned, "It isn't going to happen overnight."

PROGRESS in implementing Superfund is equally slow, Ruckelshaus said. With $1.6 billion, Superfund gives the EPA authority to handle cleanup of old and abandoned waste sites that pose a public health threat.

Presently, Superfund money is doled out for 546 sites around the nation — 44 in Michigan.

The country is clearly committed to cleaning up these abandoned sites, but this will take more time than anybody would like and more money," the EPA chief said.

He closed on a note of optimism: "We discovered these problems late, but we have now unquestionably made the commitment to deal with hazardous waste, and we have the government programs in place to deal with them."

Detroit: an engineering capital

High tech is a relatively new phenomenon in our culture. But a basic tenet of high tech — engineering — has been around for more than 100 years.

For the past 88 years, since the birth of the automobile industry, metropolitan Detroit has been well served by the Engineering Society of Detroit (ESD).

Since 1896 ESD has been a leader in providing services to individuals and the community through technical programs developed to enhance the professionalism of its members.

For many years ESD played a vital role in the area of technological transfer, applying scientific knowledge from one field to another. Although ESD regional in nature, it has built an international reputation with the excellence of its programs and attracts attendees from as far away as Germany and Japan.

In 1895 the dean of engineering at the University of Michigan decided to cut programs sharply. Thirty graduates organized a protest group to stop the cutbacks. The following year this group became the Engineering Society of Detroit.

The society's first headquarters was located on Alexandrine Street. In 1942, in recognition of the society's contribution, Horace Rackam built the

high tech
Ronald R. Watcke

Memorial Building in his name which has housed the ESD for the past 42 years.

Current membership is 8,100 and growing. Regular membership is open to all those at least 21 years of age with a degree in engineering, architecture or the allied arts and sciences or equivalent program.

Technical membership is open to those at least 21 years of age with an associate degree in technology or equivalent experience.

MORE THAN 36 percent of the members are associated with the automotive industry.

The next two largest groups include 15 percent from the construction industry and 14 percent employed in public utilities. The remaining members are from the fields of architecture, education, materials and general manufacturing.

Three-fourths of the members are graduate engineers; 91 percent of the members are male, reflecting the current image of engineering as a male-dominated occupation.

Almost one-quarter of the membership is under 30 years of age. Approximately 20 percent are between the ages of 31 and 40, and more than 55 percent are 40 years of age or older.

Ten percent of the members live outside the state of Michigan. They represent 40 states and 20 foreign countries. This statistic attests to the international appeal of the society.

Children to benefit

To the editor:

On behalf of all the needy families in the Plymouth-Canton community, I wish to thank all who attended the Spring Arts and Easter Arts and Crafts show at West Middle School. Your donation at the door totaled $475. Sue Vogel of the Olde Goose Barn sponsored it and turned these funds over to the Clothing Bank. Thank you, Sue, for all your work.

The Clothing Bank also received a donation of $40 from the Beta Omicron Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi. Thank you very much.

Some $100 was received from the Apple Run Garden Club in Canton. This club has made donations to the Clothing Bank before and we are very grateful that they keep us in mind when making donations to the community.

We have received a total of $615 the last two weeks. We hope to use it to purchase new socks, underwear, hats, mittens and shoes for the children when school starts in September.

A big thank you to the Community Crier, and the Plymouth and Canton Observers for promoting the Spring Arts Show and for making the needs of the Clothing Bank known to the community.

Due to the illness of my husband I have not been able to help with the many duties of the Clothing Bank, but with the hard work and many hours donated by Helen Decker, Pauline Hadingham, Pat Zaidel and Lee Campbell the Clothing Bank is continuing to serve our many families.

Heavy traffic on main street along the river

The main stem at Detroit in 1700 was not a road but a river, and heavy traffic marked its passage night and day.

When evening came the river came alive with the sounds of life after dark — the music of the night. Many Indians came gliding by, headed for their camps or their favorite fishing places.

Overhead was the occasional whistle of a crane or the call of a dove. In the background was heard the staccato chop of thousands of fish jumping in the shallows along the shore.

From the fort nearby we hear the sound of a violin and the insistent pounding of a dozen feet dancing French roundel. Occasionally a bateau loaded with merchandise would slip in through the watergate at Pontchartrain.

SOUTH OF the fort there is another rhythm somewhat alien to the music of the violin.

The sound is a primitive, insistent pounding of an Indian drum. This tom-tom beat is echoed and re-echoed from a camp across the river. What does this mean? Is it peace or war?

We are hearing the drums of the Potawatomi from their camp about where the Ambassador Bridge crosses the river today. They are signalling to their friends, the Hurons, who live directly across the way where the bridge enters Canada.

The Hurons are Iroquois and the "Pots" are Algonquins. How can these two traditional enemies find so much to talk about? For many years they have enjoyed a kind of drumbeat communication that seems to be meaningful to both of them, but no white man, as far as I know, has ever translated it. Maybe its only purpose is just friendship, communication, peace. And it worked!

When the Iroquois of the Lake Ontario region invaded this territory the Hurons were forced to flee, and they found shelter with their Potawatomi neighbors across the river. That is how the Hurons came to settle in the valley of the Rouge.

CADILLAC WROTE to his king, Louis XIV, in 1701:

"We have fish in great abundance, and it could not be otherwise, for this river is inclosed between two lakes." (The Cadillac papers may be found in Volumes 33 and 34 of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical Collection). Cadillac's inventory showed more than 1,050 barbed fish hooks, and they were not all for barter. Every day the runabout canoes, or Piroques, of the French were out on the river fishing for their supper. The piroques were dug-out canoes made of logs and were in daily use for traveling between the little ribbon farms and the fort.

Bateaux, large flat-bottomed boats, were used for transport. Often one Frenchman in a piroque would be towing a bateau loaded with farming tools and seeds.

Cadillac's river, the old records say, had more fish of a greater variety than any other place in the world. It teamed with salmon, muskellunge, wall-eyed pike, catfish, bass and dozens of other varieties. It was not uncommon for the Indians, who spearfished more than they used hooks, to impale two or three fish with one stroke. Gill nets also were commonly used.

At dawn the marshland air was filled with the rushing wings of thousands of birds. The settlers' records speak of a sky alive with the morning sound of singing birds. Cadillac wrote, "Game is very common as there are wild geese and all kinds of wild ducks. There are swans everywhere. There are quails, woodcocks, pheasants. There are so many turkeys that 20 or 30 could be killed at one shot. There are partridges, hazel hens, and a stupendous number of turtle-doves.

"I have seen birds of rare beauty. Some have a plumage of beautiful red fire color, the most vivid it were possible to see. I have seen others all yellow with tails bigger than their bodies and they spread out their tails as the peacocks do. I have seen others of a sky blue color with red breasts. There are many cranes, grey and white; they stand higher than a man. The savages value these greatly on account of their plumage with which they adorn themselves."

BEFORE WE leave the river we must interview the gossiping women washing on the dock.

What is story of the day? It's the impending arrival of Mme. Cadillac and Mme. deTonty. They are coming from Montreal with their children and plan to make their home in Ville d'Etoit or so the story goes. Why would they leave the luxuries of their own manors to live in this wilderness, one wonders. To be with their husbands, one replied. Another one said, it is to give the lie to the Jesuits who have said that this place is not fit for man or beast.

What is she like, this Mme. Cadillac? "Til tell you. She is greedy like he is. I knew her in Ste. Ignace. She got control of a boatload of furs from an old Indian who did not intend to give them away. A shrewd trader that one. Sharper than he. Watch out for her."

"I don't believe, it," another one said. "She has a lovely face. Not evil that face."

And so the wild speculations went, on and on. Half-truths, more lies, repeated over and over. How much did they know? How much did they really believe? Time will tell.

In September 1702, Cadillac wrote to the court, "You are convinced, My Lord, that I have never had in view anything save the propagation of the Faith, the glory of the King, the care of his interests, and the benefit of the colony."

And, Cadillac continued, "How can these barbarians be made Christians, unless they are made men first? How can they be made men unless they are humanized and made docile? And how can they be tamed and humanized except by their companionship with a civilized people? How bring them into subjection and make them subjects of the King, if they have neither docility nor religion nor social intercourse? All that can be done easily by the means set forth in my memorandum; and in perfecting the settlement of d'Etoit I have done for my part all that is necessary. It remains on yours to carry out what you have promised me."

But Louis XIV did not because he could not afford the expense. He did not give Cadillac absolute control or the supplies he had promised. So trouble brewed in paradise. And the story of that conflict is the subject of the next chapter of these annals of old Detroit.

In choosing bank, consider money availability

For years, we have been conditioned to give our banking business to our friendly neighborhood banks. That may still be a good policy.

However, in choosing a bank, you should put some weight on how long it takes your bank to make money available to you.

New York's State Banking Board has just set the first rigid rules. From March 8 on, commercial banks must credit accounts within one business day for all government checks and any other under $100.

ON LARGER ACCOUNTS, the maximum is three days for local checks, six days for out-of-state ones. Savings institutions get three, four and eight days, respectively.

finances and you

Sid Mittra

Hoping to ward off similar mandatory legislation by other states and at the federal level, the American Bankers' Association is urging its members to speed the clearing process and to make sure each bank's policies are plainly stated.

ONE WAY you can speed clearance: Avoid depositing a check at a credit union or a small mutual savings and loan association. Most need a day or two just to forward it to a bank that is in the Federal Reserve clearing system.

That bank takes another day to send it to a Fed branch — which electronically credits the check amount to the depositing institution, usually within 48 hours.

STILL, YOUR bank may not want to make the money available for you to use — by a cash withdrawal or writing a check — until it is sure that the original check-writer's account has been debited for the amount in question.

If the account shows insufficient funds, a week or more could pass before your bank gets word that it has to give the money back to the Fed. That uncertainty is what leads banks to impose delays in making good on a check you deposit.

IN RESPONSE to protests that they profit unfairly from the "float" — the interest banks collect by investing depositors' money that are frozen during the check-clearing — some institutions now offer instant credit.

Ask your bank if it will give immediate cash status for any check you deposit, as long as you have a savings account at the bank with a balance larger than the check.

CITIBANK DOES this by putting a hold on your savings account for the amount; if the check eventually is returned as uncollectable, it reduces your savings account to reclaim its money.

If your bank has such an arrangement, get clear on what happens if your security is a time deposit. A check that bounces could trigger one of those "substantial penalties for early withdrawal."

A bank naturally performs many services besides clearing your checks.

However, if you worry about having one of your checks bounce, it would pay to take the steps suggested here.

WE SUPPORT BETTER HOUSING.

We know how tough it is to jump on the home improvement bandwagon with traditional loans. Especially if you don't like applying over and over, then waiting for approval.

That's why we think you'll like The Home Improvement Loan Account from your First of America bank. Because you apply just once, then use it as often as you like up to your credit limit, just like a charge.

What's more, you don't have to stop with fixed improvements like remodeling and room additions. You can also enjoy on-the-spot financing for items like appliances and furnishings. Better yet, you'll pay interest only on the balance you owe with no prepayment penalty, at an interest rate lower than both VISA and MasterCard. So you can save even more in finance charges when you pay above your monthly minimum.

So drop into your First of America bank or call us toll-free, 1-800-222-1983. We'll give you an application and list of participating stores.

The Home Improvement Loan Account. When we work together, we think it's a better way to pay for a better home.

Hopes replace dashed dreams

SPRING IS A SEASON we can't do without, although we'd like very much to try. It's a tease, spring is. One day it masquerades as summertime, bright and sunny and warm, with birds chirping and children gleefully marauding over greening lawns. But spring is two-faced. The warmth and promise of one day is disfigured the next by cold winds that whip snow down a loose collar, a savage reminder of a winter thought left behind. Spring is hope, always and eternal. It's a sign that, surely, things will improve. But just as the season often disappoints, the hopes that accompany it can also be mercilessly squashed.

PAUL JOKISCH and Dave Hall have seen their hopes, once high as the sky, plummet under the weight of reality. And yet for both the hope for another future blossoms this spring, once again bright and promising. Jokisch grew up in Auburn Heights and graduated from Birmingham Brother Rice. Hall is a Livonia native and Stevenson alumnus. Both were supreme prep athletes. Both received scholarships at the University of Michigan, fulfilling childhood dreams and saturating their egos with visions of glory. Both saw those visions fill with promise like an expanding balloon, then burst and disintegrate. And yet they have persevered, seeking — and finding — other outlets for their talents.

JOKISCH IS NOT dismayed. Not any longer. A mere six months ago he was a confident sophomore on the Michigan basketball team. He spoke about the possibility of starting. Even if he wasn't among the first five, he would contribute mightily. Of that he was certain.

But he didn't. Jokisch rarely got off the bench. A thumb injury that required surgery in December set him back for a month and when he returned, Wolverine coach Bill Frieder had a spot determined for each of his players.

Jokisch's was at the end of the bench. "I was very optimistic," Jokisch said of the season's start. "And I think I could have contributed a lot more than I did."

"It just didn't work out that way." The 6-foot-8 forward didn't agree with the way Frieder used — or, rather, didn't use — him. But as Jokisch said, "It's his decision. He's the coach."

WITH HIS VALUE to the team apparently diminished, Jokisch sought another answer.

"I had thought about leaving and going somewhere else to play basketball," he said after his disappointing season. "But Bo talked to me and convinced me to stay."

Bo — Schembechler, that is — knew Jokisch had other abilities, namely in football. He had demonstrated it as an All-Stater at Rice.

"Playing football was in the back of my mind when I first came to Michigan," Jokisch said. After the basketball season, he talked to Frieder about switching and the coach voiced no opposition. So this spring Jokisch embarked on a new career at U-M: as a wide receiver.

Even after a two-year layoff the skills remained. In Michigan's spring scrimmage last Saturday Jokisch hauled in three passes for 44 yards.

"He's got real fine potential," said U-M receivers coach Bob Thornbladh. "Technically, he's not as far along as some of the other players. But he's big, he's got good speed and he's shown a willingness to learn."

A 6-8 target for Michigan's young quarterbacks is what makes Jokisch so attractive to Michigan's coaches.

He is enjoying the switch. "I'm having a good time, but it's quite a step," he said. "Learning to read coverages is what I really have to work on. I'm done foolin' around. I've got to get something done (in my athletic career)."

HALL, TOO, ENVISIONED a bright future before last football season. After all, he had done better than anyone might have hoped when he replaced an injured Steve Smith at quarterback in the 1983 Rose Bowl game. Certainly his playing time would increase. He might even unseat Smith as starter.

Then the roof fell, in the forbidding form of a teammate banging into Hall's leg just after he released a pass in last April's drills. His right kneecap dislocated for the second time, sliding all the way off his knee before sliding back.

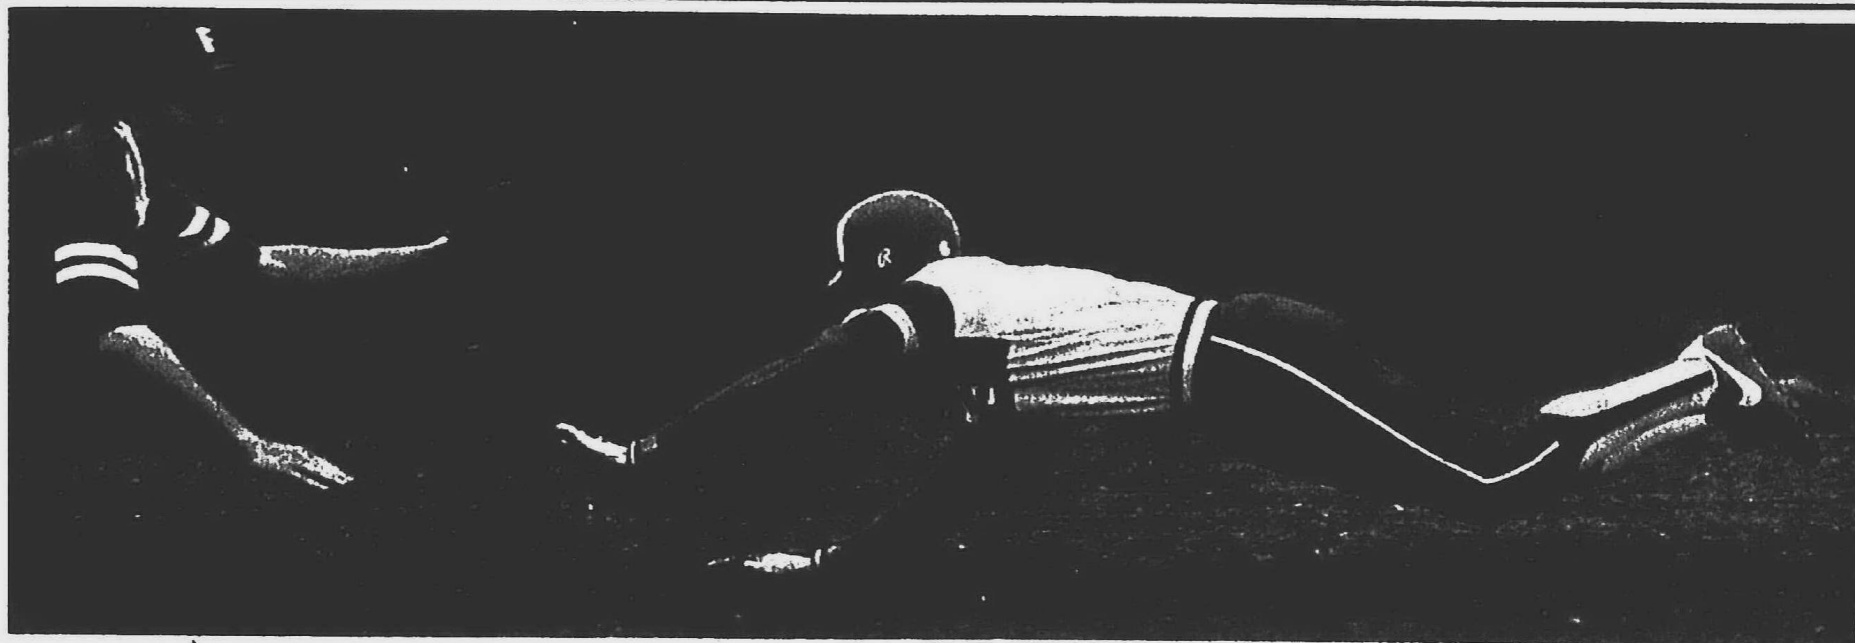

"It did a lot of damage to the tendons and cartilage," said Hall. He had arthroscopic surgery in August and tried to rehabilitate it, but the knee never fully responded.

In January, doctors said Hall, who was a leading candidate to start at quarterback for the Wolverines this season, had to give up football or risk permanent injury.

"I THOUGHT OF PLAYING anyway," Hall admitted. "That was my initial reaction. But when the doctors explained to me what the consequences were, what might happen if I dislocated it again... I could be crippled 20 years down the road. The doctors were adamant about my not playing."

Schembechler never knew how much the knee bothered Hall last season. When Smith hurt the

Bennett red-hot on cold day

Canton late-inning barrage stops Falcon upset bid, 8-0

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

On a cold, gray, blustery day, Plymouth Canton's Mark Bennett was steaming.

The senior pitcher mowed down all but one Farmington batter Monday in the Chiefs' 8-0 victory.

The one batter — Neil Davis — stroked a fourth-inning single. That single stood between Bennett and a perfect game. The hard-throwing right hander with a Juan Marichal-like leg kick, fanned 13 Falcons and walked none.

"Mark pitched a real nice ballgame," said Canton coach Fred Crissey. "He only threw 79 pitches the whole game."

Davis, Farmington's pitcher, was working on a one-hitter himself after five innings. But, he ran into a peck of trouble in the sixth.

CANTON BROKE the scoreless tie in the fifth without the benefit of a hit. With one out and Dan Martin on first, Bennett dropped a bunt. Davis came off the mound, fielded the ball, but threw low to first. The ball bounded away allowing Martin to go to third.

Martin and Bennett then worked a perfect double steal to score what proved to be the winning run. Bennett took off for second. When Farmington catcher Jim Zang fired to second, Martin broke for home and beat the return throw.

In the sixth, the roof fell in on the Falcons. The Chiefs sent 11 batters to the plate and scored seven times to turn a close pitchers' duel into a rout.

"I was real pleased with the performance of Neil Davis," said Falcon coach Tony Wenson. "For a kid that's never pitched before, he did a heckuva job. To hold this team (Canton) to one hit after five is a tremendous effort. He got hurt by some boots by our fielding in the sixth, too."

John Longridge opened the Canton sixth with a single. Tim Collins was safe on an error. Designated hitter Jeff Olson, then stepped up and ripped a long double to right center scoring both runners and the Chiefs were on the warpath.

Jim Dillon's second hit of the game, followed by Canton's second run-producing execution of the double steal, forced Wenson to make a pitching change.

He called on his brother, Joe Bob Wenson, and the Chiefs greeted him rudely.

A WALK, AN error, a sacrifice fly RBI for Bennett, and a long two-run home run by Jeff Wittner capped the seven-run outburst.

"The key offensively for us, I think, was that we only had two strike outs," Crissey said. "We're hitting the ball. And we got the key hits when we needed them. Olson got the big double and of course the home run."

Defensive lapses may have led to the Falcons' demise in the fifth and sixth innings, but it was the sparkling defensive play by fleet-footed center-fielder Chris Green that kept the game scoreless early on.

With a runner on second and two out in the Chiefs' third, Longridge ripped a shot to left center. Green got a late start on the ball, but caught up to it and made a nice across-the-body grab to save a run.

Then in the fourth, Green robbed Olson of extra bases with a diving grab of his sinking liner.

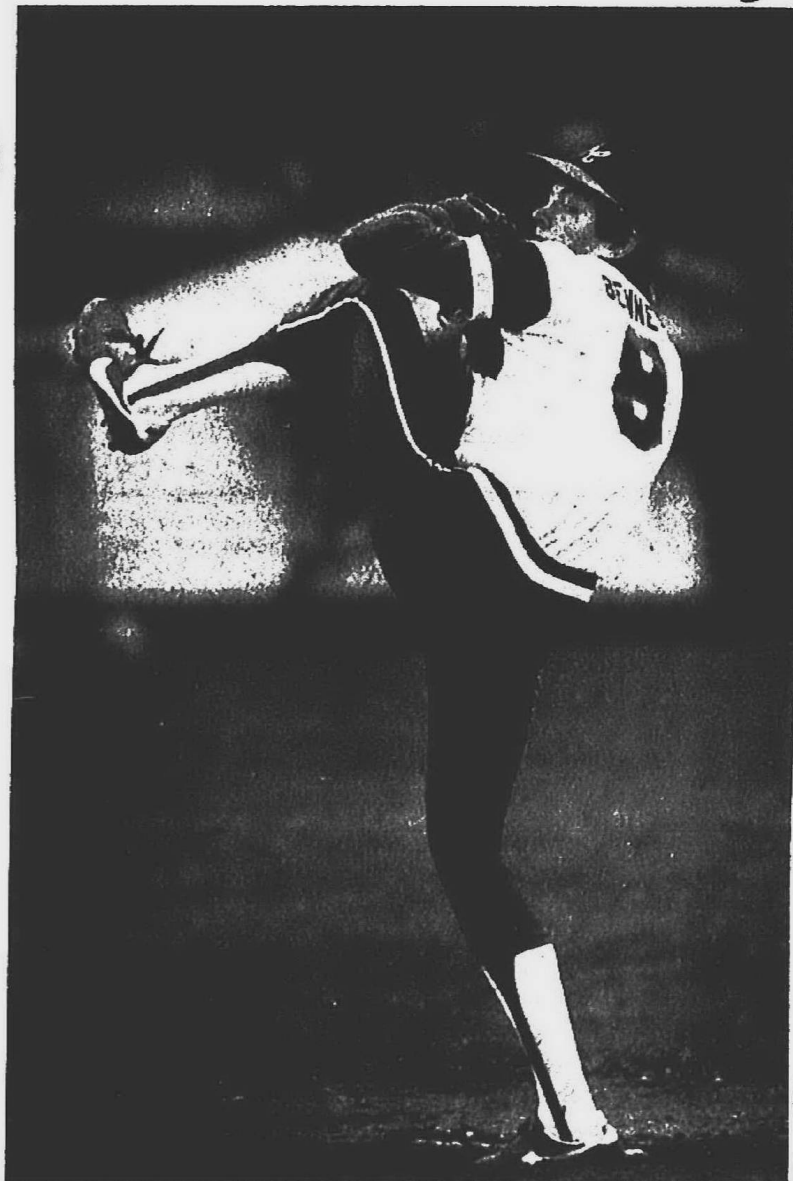

"Their center fielder made a couple of outstanding plays," Crissey said. "But, we kept our poise. We stayed within ourselves. With the score 0-0 in the fifth, the tendency is to press. We didn't press at all."

Crissey said under normal circumstances, he would have canceled the game because of the bad weather. But, it was only his team's second game of the season and the Chiefs had a bye yesterday.

"We just had to get this one in. We had to play," he said.

The game was played at Central Middle School instead of on Canton's field. Despite the cold and the weekend rains, the Central field was in good shape.

The Chiefs (2-0) won't play again until Friday, April 27, when they host Wayne Memorial. Farmington (0-2) traveled to Walled Lake Central yesterday. They play at Plymouth Salem after Easter break, Monday April 30.

Mark Bennett had all the heat on a cold, blustery day. Bennett struck out 13 Farmington hitters and allowed just one base runner — a fourth inning single — in Canton's 8-0 win.

Rocks win a wild one

If it isn't one thing, it's another. Don't be surprised if you start hearing Plymouth Salem baseball coach John Gravlin muttering that to himself. After what happened Monday, who could blame him?

The Rocks finally got their bats working against Walled Lake Western, banging out 12 hits and scoring 10 runs. But the pitching and defense, which had been flawless in the first three games, broke down.

The Rocks outlasted the Warriors 10-8 for their fourth straight victory, but Gravlin was far from satisfied.

"This will be the one game I'll attribute to the weather," he said. "It's nice to get the win. Anytime you can go into Walled Lake and come out ahead, you'll take it. But we've got a lot of work to do."

THE ROCKS were coasting along behind the pitching of senior Rick Berberet for 5½ innings before things got ugly. Gravlin decided to rest his talented right hander after he finished the fifth. The score at that point was Salem 5, Western 1.

"It probably would have been a one-run game had we left Rick in," Gravlin said. "But with the cold weather and Stevenson coming up on Wednesday, I wanted to save him. I just can't believe it all caved in like that."

Ken Harmon, who has been effective in relief for the Rocks, got hit hard. He also didn't receive much support from his defense. In 1½ innings, Harmon gave up seven runs.

Robbi Woolard calls it "a neat way of competing."

A mother of two who competes in triathlons, Woolard wasn't getting enough out of club level racquetball. That's when she decided to join the Tri-County Women's Racquetball League.

Classified as an "A" level player at Rose Shores Center in Canton Township, Woolard quickly learned she was "B or C" caliber in the new circuit.

"We wanted to improve the competition," said Woolard, who will take over as league president next year. "We were all playing in-house at the top. This level of competition is great. We hope to bring in more teams next year."

The Tri-County circuit consists of six people in sports

teams from five different clubs.

The Coliseum team of Westland is in first place. Rounding out the league are Rose Shores of Canton, Court Time of Farmington, Imperial of Ann Arbor and the Ann Arbor Court Club (two teams).

THE LEAGUE was organized by Martha Scharchburg with hopes of giving intermediate and advanced players an opportunity to compete in MRA and AARA tournaments.

League play began last October and concludes later this month. League matches are held twice a month at area clubs.

"Each team has 12 players and six are seeded (or play) in matches," explained Woolard. "We play Thursday nights. When we don't play we're practicing. We try to encourage in-house challenges."

The format is singles — two games to 21 with an 11-point tiebreaker.

"It takes a few matches to get acclimated," Woolard said. "We also have to referee the matches when we're not playing. It's a good experience and it teaches you a lot about the game. It keeps them involved."

"IT'S ENJOYABLE. It's good 'C' and 'B' competition without blood-letting, but it's competitive."

Each player pays for court time and a $10 entry fee.

"It's a reasonable cost," said Woolard, who plays No. 1 for Rose Shores. "At the end we have a party and give out the traveling plaque."

Woolard's goal for next season is expansion.

"We definitely want more players at the top (of the clubs) to compete," she said. "Then maybe we could have a 'C' League and a 'B' League."

Want to get involved?

Woolard said it's as simple as calling one of the five clubs associated with the Tri-County circuit.

Volleyball is the means for cultural exchange this weekend as teams from six different nations will compete in the Livonia Rotary Club's invitational tournament for girls.

The opening ceremonies, scheduled for 9 a.m., kick off the festivities at Schoolcraft College. Exhibition action begins immediately after the parade of athletes.

The opening match features Nagoya Gakun High School, league champions from Japan, against a team of all-stars from Grand Rapids. Meanwhile, host Livonia and Lapeer square off on adjacent court.

volleyball

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for students. The other foreign squads begin round-robin play at 3 p.m.

"We'll have matches going all day on four different courts," said tournament organizer and Rotarian Bill Cameron. "I saw the Japan team (on a recent trip) and they're very good."

Twelve teams will compete the following Saturday (April 28) in a single-elimination tournament at two different sites — Schoolcraft and Churchill High School. The championship final (best 2-of-3 format) tentatively scheduled for 3 p.m. at Churchill.

"WE'RE EXCITED," Cameron said. "All the teams arrived yesterday."

Rounding out the field is Kyung-Bok Commercial High School, second in the South Korean nationals; Munich, West Germany; Kolbacks, Sweden, age-group division champs; Toronto Titans, Ontario Provincial champions; Brighton (Ont.); Ann Arbor and Walled Lake. The Livonia team, featuring some of the area's top high school players, is coached by Garden City's Tom Teeters.

The Japanese team will be housed by the Livonians and will be treated to a Rotary luncheon, an international banquet on Friday, April 27, at Madonna College, and a trip to Greenfield Village.

"They'll be playing throughout the state during the week," Cameron said. "On Saturday, we'll be videotaping all the matches."

CAMERON SAID everything is in order except one minor detail.

"We needed housing for the Munich team on Saturday, Sunday and Monday," he said. "They have 10 youths and three adults."

Those interested should contact Cameron at 522-2643.

Krafchak new S'craft coach

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Let it be known...

It's true, the Detroit Pistons have made that their calling card for this season, but once they're finished with it Schoolcraft College's new cross country coach might be able to use it.

While Mike Krafchak may be new to Schoolcraft cross country, he isn't new to the area. He coached cross country and track at Redford Union 1973-79 and was cross country coach at Garden City East in 1980. In 1982 he moved to Livonia Ladywood, heading both the cross country and track programs.

THE MESSAGE is that Krafchak knows his stuff, and he knows the area. Now he wants local high school coaches to know he's around, too.

"We need to establish ourselves with some consistency," said Krafchak of first objective. "They haven't had coaches here for awhile. I will be."

"Last year (at season's end), there were three girls on the team and no boys. This year we're going to have full boys' and girls' programs. That's our goal."

That's why Krafchak is getting off to a quick start. He's already sent letters to area coaches to let them know that, yes, there will be a cross country program at Schoolcraft in the fall for men and women.

KRAFCHAK KNOWS his task won't be easy. In 1982, Steve Montgomery headed Schoolcraft's program and did a good job, getting a pair of runners to nationals. But Montgomery resigned and last year's program, under John Dunn, fell apart.

Krafchak isn't concerned, however.

"Every program I've been associated with has been a success," he said. "I sure didn't come to Schoolcraft to fail."

Krafchak left coaching after his stint at Ladywood because of increased duties in his job at Harper-Grace Hospitals. Krafchak is an administrator in the Human Resources department at the Grace Division.

His work load has eased up since, allowing his return to coaching.

"I'VE BEEN ACTIVE in track and field in this area for years," he said. "Anybody who's been around for five or more years knows who I am."

"I think that'll help. High school coaches can say to an athlete, 'Go to Schoolcraft, get some decent coaching and a good education.'"

Krafchak plans on "beating the bushes" in his search to build both teams at Schoolcraft. His recruiting tools include a limited athletic scholarship budget — "We do have some money we can offer. It's never enough, but we'll offer it for both the girls' and boys' teams" — and a plan to make running a year-round program at Schoolcraft.

"NONE OF THE (previous) coaches have tried to make a year-round program out of it," he said. "There's no chance we'll have an officially school-sponsored track and field team. But we will have, I guess, a club program."

"If they want to be a year-round runner, we will give them that opportunity."

Now all he needs are some decent runners who want to make the commitment. Anyone interested should contact the Schoolcraft athletic department at 591-8400, ext. 480, for further information.

Money woes aside, Farris can coach

Where would Wayne State football be without Dave Farris? Done, gone and forgotten. Farris isn't your typical head football coach. He's been required to do more than recruit, X and O plays and coordinate a staff of coaches.

The 36-year-old Farris spends most of his time fund-raising. It was his task to save Wayne State football to the community when the school's administration and Board of Governors were giving the program its last rites.

Farris, who arrived at WSU in 1980 as the school's defensive coordinator, took over the sinking program when Steve Fickert abandoned ship for Western New Mexico in 1981.

Farris pounded the streets of metro

Detroit, organizing huge fund-raising dinners and golf outings, while appealing to the school's successful alumni and Detroit's prominent business clientele.

HE GOT such people as Bo Schenckler, Muddy Waters, Thomas B. Adams, Lem Barney, J.P. McCarthy and Gil Mains to stump for the program, "The only game in town," as he called it.

After struggling two years in the won-lost column, Farris' team finished second last year in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference with a 7-3 overall record.

Monday night, Wayne State held its annual benefit football dinner in the

Brad Emons

Grand Ballroom of the Book Cadillac Hotel. The participants paid $100 per plate and the event was a rousing success as some 250 WSU supporters attended.

That night, Wayne State football recognized members of the Gas House Gang, former athletes and friends of Tartar athletics.

Among those receiving "Leadership" awards were Bill Foley, former football and basketball coach at Catholic Central and Redford Union high schools; and Jack Cotton, recently retired physical education and athletic director for the Farmington Schools.

AS THEIR contributions were mentioned, I couldn't help but think of the job Farris has done in turning the program around.

Next season, Farris believes the Tartars can win the GLIAC title and better their 7-3 record.

A resident of Troy, Farris believes in recruiting the tri-county area — Wayne, Oakland and Macomb. His ultimate goal is to raise more money for scholarships.

Monday night, scholarships were awarded for four incoming freshmen, those which demonstrate not only ability on the field, but in the classroom.

One of the four recipients is Steve Sapientza, a linebacker from Livonia Bentley. (Six Bentley players are currently on Wayne's roster).

Farris also recognized 10 seniors, including academic All-American Lenny Jacosky, who maintained a perfect 4.0 GPA while playing football. The Tartar tight end now works for a Birmingham accounting firm.

WAYNE STATE will hold its second major fund-raiser with a golf outing

June 25 at Lochmoor Country Club in Grosse Pointe, Maine, the ex-Lion, is the honorary chairman. The cost is $100 per person. (For more information, call the football office at 877-4388).

On Sept. 1, Wayne opens its 1984 season at Indiana State, a Division I-AA school (Wayne is Division II). The Tartars are guaranteed $22,000 to play in that game.

With a pair of successful fund-raisers this year and another $22,000 under his belt, Farris should be able to concentrate on coaching, instead of worrying about raising money.

That in itself, should put Wayne State on the Division II football map and that would make somebody such as Farris attractive to a number of Division I-type programs.

I'd hate to see their current head coach leave, but some day, the Board of Governors and the administration will have to come to grips with the job Farris has done.

That day is coming soon, sooner than you think.

Rock, Chief kickers keep winning

Granted, the teams the Plymouth Salem soccer team have beaten thus far have not exactly been state powers — the manner in which the Rocks are disposing their foes, however, has been ultra-impressive.

Livonia Franklin was the latest victim. On Monday, the Rocks beat the Patriots 9-1. It was 8-0 at the half.

The shots on goal statistic tells the real story of the Rocks' domination. Salem outshot the Pats 30-8, and most of Franklin's shots came in the second half when the Rocks were playing their third and fourth line people.

"We just have some real fast people in our midfield. They are tall and rangy and they get to the ball quick," said Salem coach Ken Johnson. "And our forwards move like lightning."

Julie Tortora, a sophomore, again led the Salem goal barrage. She tallied three times, giving her eight goals in three games. She also had a pair of assists.

Fran Whittaker had a goal and two assists and Dani Morin added a goal and an assist. Tracey Greenhalge had two assists.

Single point producers for the Rocks were: Suzie Balconi, Pam Mayer, Kris Johnson and Kris O'Connor. Tracey Hall and Cheryl Truskowski each added assists.

Sarah Wallman went all the way in the nets for Salem.

Salem (3-0), missing three key players all of whom were enjoying a Florida Easter vacation, took on No. 1-ranked Livonia Stevenson yesterday.

Details of the match will be in Monday's Plymouth Observer.

PLYMOUTH CANTON held off a second-half rally from Farmington to win its third match of the season Monday 5-2.

Canton, like Salem, has been a dominant team in its victories. Against the Falcons, the Chiefs enjoyed a 28-7 shots on goal advantage.

Rocks stave off Warriors

The Warriors scored two in the bottom of the sixth to cut the Salem lead to 5-3. The Rocks rallied for five in the top of the seventh to go up 10-3. Western came back again with five in the bottom of the seventh and had the tying runs aboard when Dan Knapp came on to get the final two outs and his first save of the season.

BERBERET gets the win, his second, and Western's Mike Gabrielle suffered the defeat.

Chris Mowers led the Rock hitters going 3-for-4 with a double and a two-run home run. Mike Cindrich ripped a two-run triple (the senior center fielder has two hits this season, both triples) and second baseman Chris Belhart went 2-for-4.

The Rocks were scheduled to play Livonia Stevenson Wednesday. After Easter break, the Rocks travel to Redford Union for a double-header Wednesday.

Marathon champ repeats

Several local runners had excellent runs in Sunday's eighth annual West Bloomfield Half Marathon.

Former Schoolcraft College standout Jeff Bristow, 20, of Livonia toured the hilly 13.1-mile course in one hour, 11 minutes, 49 seconds, good for second place, less than 1 1/4 minutes behind defending champion Larry Fisher, 28, of Royal Oak.

There were roughly 840 entrants in the race and 714 finishers.

Geoffrey Cooper, 28, of Canton Township was fifth in his division (ages 18-29) and seventh overall with a clocking of 1:15:10. Other standouts were Jeff McCormick, 15, of Farmington Hills, who won the junior division (under 18) in 1:29:50, and Dick Man, 15, of Farmington Hills, who was second in junior in 1:38:04.

Hall will forego final grid year

same shoulder he injured in the Rose Bowl, Hall started. He didn't tell Schembechler about the knee until January. Both decided the only answer was to pass up his final season.

It was a devastating blow to Hall, even though he knew lateral movement was painfully difficult. "I was never better than 70 or 80 percent" in his final season, he said.

Hope returned, however. As Hall described it, "all is not lost because I can try track. I'm on the track team right now."

AN EXCEPTIONAL ATHLETE in several sports at Stevenson, Hall is trying to make it in the decathlon, a series of 10 different track and field events. While the knee cannot stand the contact of football, it can survive straight-ahead pressures of running track.

Hall has yet to compete for Michigan. He was on the indoor team a year ago but missed the outdoor season after hurting his knee. Still, the track coaches are optimistic enough that they've convinced Hall to return for his fifth year and compete in 1985 as well as the current season.

How well Hall fares is open to conjecture. But, for him, the hope to continue an athletic career has returned. As for football, he'll always have the Rose Bowl and other fond memories.

"Yeah, I'll remember the Rose Bowl, all the wins and, mostly, my teammates," he said. "But 10 years down the road at least I know I'll be able to walk."

SPRING AND HOPE, Jokisch and Hall. Spring flourishes, hopes blossom. Some hopes will survive the torment of disappointment and heartbreak.

After all, as disillusioning as spring can be, we endure knowing that summer will arrive, sooner or later.

Bowling at Olympics?

After pleading for the past 50 years to have the game of bowling made a part of the official Olympic Games, the American Bowling Congress got some results during the past week.

For the first time the American Olympic Committee approved the 10-pin sport and thus paved the way for possible acceptance by top brass to grant the request in time for the 1988 games.

With the United-States-committee OK, the top body will vote at the games and convention in Los Angeles this summer and the American bowlers will be welcomed if the plan now under way succeeds.

TITLES — Bob Goike, present leader in the ABC all-events and favored to win the title, added another honor to his long list over the weekend. He won his second Michigan Major title in Lansing by conquering Bob Schaaf of Saginaw, 223, 201 in the final.

BEL-AIRE — Ed Lubanski, showed off his old-time form in the classic last Thursday night when he posted a 707 series. Even at that figure he finished in third place. Tony Stepeck was high with 775 and was followed by Tom Highley with 730.

WONDERLAND — Two more members were admitted to the 700 club. Bowling in the classic, Carl Gallette posted a 767 and Bob Pniowski was the other inductee with a 747.

WOODLAND — Scoring was high during the week and three bowlers broke the 700 barrier. In the St. Edith league, Jerry Tomczak had a 266 in 713, and Tim Ross posted a 707. In the Ford league Bruce Ladd had a 702. In the women's singles, DeLores Tricke rolled a 258 in 636.

MERRI-BOWL — Bill Gerglis broke the 700 barrier with a 701 and Chuck O'Rourke joined with him when he rolled 721 with the handicappers. In the ladies top league Carol Russell was high with 642.

Farmington rips Chiefs in walkathon

Rocks stay unbeaten with 22-0 rout

Chief hurler Monika Benedict fields a bunt during a dismal outing against Farmington Monday. The Chiefs lost 18-2 to the Falcons.

Coach Rich Roy told his Farmington softball team that they were going to struggle this season. He has a young team and he didn't want them to get discouraged when they lost a few.

Well, the Falcons lost their first two, but have come back to win their next two, including a 16-2 whipping of Plymouth Canton on Monday.

"I'm almost embarrassed to talk about this one," Roy said.

His team was the beneficiary of 15 walks from Canton pitcher Monika Benedict. The Falcons scored their 16 runs on just five hits.

Senior Jill Waterman got two of those hits and knocked in two runs. Julie Ingalls knocked in four runs, two with a bases-loaded single in the Falcons' seven-run sixth inning.

Roy warned his team not to get too excited.

"We are still very young," he said. "It's not like we're playing the Livonia Stevensons or the Plymouth Salems. It'll be a different story when we play them."

Still, Roy is very pleased with the progress his team has made.

"We started a sophomore pitcher and a freshman catcher so I'm not too discouraged," he said.

Lisa Edwards, the sophomore pitcher, went the distance for Farmington. She gave up four hits and walked just three, picking up her first win of the season against one loss.

Margaret Gilligan had the only RBI for the Chiefs, a run-scoring single in the third.

The Falcons' next action will be Monday, April 30, when they host Salem. The Chiefs (0-2) will host Livonia Churchill that day.

PLYMOUTH SALEM took advantage of 19 Walled Lake Western walks to rout the Warriors 22-0 Monday in a game that saw the invocation of the mercy rule after 4½ innings.

"It wasn't a lot of fun, but we won. I would've hated to be on the other end of it," said successful Salem coach Rob Willette, whose team is the defending Western Lakes champion.

Pitcher Sue Carlson worked five scoreless innings to get the win. She allowed just two hits and walked three.

"Sue pitched real well and we played good defense behind her. We didn't make any errors," Willette said. "That's what we are going to have to do when she's pitching. She won't strike out too many." Salem only had six hits, two by Cheryl Vile. Leslie Plichta added a two-run double to the attack.

photos by RANDY BORST/staff photographer

Canton first baseman Kristina Wines juggles a throw allowing Farmington's Kelly Devine to get back to first safely. It was that kind of afternoon for the Chiefs.

Pioneers sign pair of volleyball stars

A 20-win season, the first in Oakland University's history, was just fine for coach Bob Hurdle's volleyball team — last year.

Hurdle is not about to rest on his laurels after a 22-15 year.

The OU coach has signed a pair of local stars who are expected at least to add some much-needed depth to the Pioneers' team next fall.

Noelle Graham, a 5-foot-7 hitter/setter from Ferndale, was an All-Southeastern Michigan Association choice and could, according to Hurdle, crack the starting lineup.

Lori Quinn, a 6-foot hitter from Clawson, was an All-Macomb Oakland Athletic Conference choice who Hurdle thinks "could be a real find."

"A lot of people have overlooked her," the OU coach said of Quinn. "Her lateral speed is outstanding and she jumps quickly."

Hurdle called Graham "one of the top setters in the state. She has excellent hands and fine foot skills. She should provide immediate help for us." OU enjoyed its best season ever with a team of underclassmen.

Alone in France — une aventure

Itinerant traveler Iris Jones has traversed the Himalayas and crossed the Indian Ocean but never, before now, attempted traveling alone by car in France. Despite trepidation and travail, she survived and enjoyed herself.

IT is important to scare yourself a little sometimes when you travel, to take a small risk so that you can enjoy a new experience. Those risks are seldom in the category of physical adventure, like climbing a mountain in China or sailing alone around the world.

In travel as in life, the things that frighten us are often small things: traveling alone for the first time, finding your way from one terminal to another at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport, driving on the "wrong" side of the road.

What scared me recently was renting a car and driving alone through France. I am an experienced traveler. I've traveled on six continents, slept in a tent in the Himalayas and crossed the Indian Ocean with two infants, but all of those adventures were experienced with other people.

I wasn't entirely responsible for every move. Even when I travel alone, the hardest thing I usually do is haul over-packed bags through unfamiliar airports or decide where to eat alone.

Driving a car by myself in Europe was another matter. I wanted to do it because it would allow me to explore an area of France for a few days after an organized tour was over, but frankly it scared me silly. I had never driven alone in a foreign country, and I hadn't driven a stick-shift car for 25 years.

I PICTURED myself lurching through town and countryside trying to remember how to use a clutch. If you drive a manual-transmission car every day you will certainly be laughing by now but remember that every person has a different set of fears and they are seldom logical.

If you usually travel in a group, you will understand the temptation to stay a few days after the organized tour is over. You've been bused or flown from one tourist attraction to another. This is your chance to spend a few unstructured days visiting small vineyards, sitting in sidewalk cafes and wandering country roads.

My desire was to spend three days in the Loire Valley, visiting French chateaus. My first problem was to change my air ticket (not all tickets bought for package tours can be changed). My second and biggest problem was transportation. France, like most European countries, has excellent train service, but my chateau destinations were on small country roads, out of the towns. The only sensible way to get around was by car.

1-of-a-kind traveler
contributing travel editor

Automatic-transmission cars are available in Europe but they are hard to find and expensive. I knew that I couldn't count on getting one, and I was right. It was a holiday weekend and there seemed to be only one rental car left in the city of Tours.

My irrational fears were so strong that I nearly gave the idea up and came home with the group, but there was that other voice in my head: "Are you really going to give up this wonderful travel opportunity because you are afraid to drive a stick-shift car?"

A YOUNG man from the car-rental company picked me up at my hotel in Tours. I watched carefully as he drove "my car" into the city office. By the time we arrived, I at least knew how the lights, heater, window washers and turn-indicators worked and had refreshed my memory about how to use a clutch to shift gears.

Unfortunately, he didn't mention and I didn't notice the manual choke, which should be pulled out judiciously on a cold morning to feed extra gas to the carburetor. Most chokes are automatic these days.

After a quarter of a century of driving an automatic transmission I had completely forgotten about the choke. I didn't remember it until I was on the plane home to New York several days later, long after my early morning lurching was over.

I had not committed myself to the idea enough to do any advance preparation for this car rental, so I was lucky to find a membership card in my purse that allowed me a 20-percent discount. Even so, the car was very expensive, $150 for three days.

There is a 33.3-percent tax in France (no discount on that), and my bill included about 20 cents a kilometer plus $2.75 a gallon for gasoline. That part of the bill would have been less if I hadn't gotten lost on every country road in France.

We went through the paperwork but eventually the moment of truth was there. I had to drive out of the garage directly into the noontime traffic of Tours. The clutch worked all right but the car wouldn't move.

Traveling in France by car one experiences a feeling for the country — outdoor cafes, picturesque villages, a chateau in Blois.

I HAD the emergency brake on, another small matter I had forgotten. Put an automatic in Park and it stays there. Forget to use the emergency brake on a manual transmission and it will back up and run over you while you are searching in the trunk for a map.

Everyone had assured me that driving a stick shift was like riding a bicycle; you wouldn't forget it, it would all come back. I didn't believe a word of it, but it was generally true. By the time I got lost for the first time I was getting used to it, and I wasn't at the outskirts of Tours yet.

My route was from Tours through Chinon, Saumur, Sable. I missed Saumur completely, and I stopped before I got to Le Mans.

One memorable hour near Chinon, when I had visited a castle and was

I had a wonderful time and experienced France in a way that no group tour could offer.

headed for Saumur, the road suddenly forked. Neither fork said "Saumur," so I turned left. At the top of a hill it forked again and I turned right. All my scenic vistas disappeared — stone villages, castles hidden on hilltops, clustered medieval farmhouses — and I found myself driving slowly downhill on a dirt road through a beautiful cow pasture.

I hadn't really learned to back up yet so I went on in hopes of crossing another road. A mile downhill, when the track turned to mud, I began a long backup through the cow pastures of France, the road curving like a snake. I didn't need a choke then. I needed a friend with a big broad shoulder to cry on.

When I got back on the road and continued uphill I waved down a French farmer passing on a tractor. He didn't speak English but he suffered through my fractured French. He couldn't keep the amazement out of his voice, however, when I asked him if I was on the road to Saumur.

Saumur was northwest, and I was going due south. I nodded my head as if I understood every word of his instructions, followed the direction in which his finger pointed and ended up two hours later in Chinon, where I had started hours before.

THE WHOLE three days was like that, getting lost, talking to amiable farmers, buying bread in village patisseries, eating bread and cheese in my hotel room because I missed lunch, but after the first rush of cursing and regret, it didn't matter. I had a wonderful time and experienced France in a way that no group tour could offer.

My only real problem, other than getting lost, was getting the car started in the morning. On my last day, as I was leaving a chateau hotel near Angers, a pleasant young woman stood in the parking lot. I was in the plane over the Atlantic, somewhere between dinner and the movie, when I realized why the car wouldn't start. I had forgotten about the choke. C'est la vie.

P'Jazz on way: Series to begin 13th year of concerts at the Pontch

MARVIN TEEPLES

WITH A GENEROUS mix of local stars and national headliners, the new season of P'Jazz opens Wednesday, June 6, at the Pool Terrace of the Hotel Pontchartrain in downtown Detroit.

Attractions slated for this year's series include Flora Purim, Lionel Hampton, Maynard Ferguson, Stanley Turrentine and Spyro Gyra. Metro-Detroit favorites sprinkled among the nationally known names are saxophonist Norma Jean Bell, singer Ursula Walker, the Austin Moro Band and flutist Alexander Zonjic.

Despite restaurateur Chuck Muer's departure from the Hotel Pontchartrain scene, general manager Bill Ebersol said, "We want to assure the world out there that people can count on P'Jazz again in 1984."

Sylvia Gershenson, chairman of the board and president of Hotel Pontchartrain, said, "It's our 13th year of P'Jazz, and we hope this year will be more exciting and better attended than ever."

Information about the complete series is available by calling 965-0200, Ext. 3988.

SOMETHING ELSE you can count on in 1984 is Bess Bonnier. The long-time Detroit jazz pianist will be holding down the piano spot in the Detroit Institute of Arts Crystal Gallery every Sunday afternoon.

On a recent spring-like Sunday afternoon, Bonnier took a break between Charlie Parker's "Yardbird Suite" and some decidedly spring-like piano to talk about her new album.

"Isn't it a beautiful cover?" she asked, handing me a copy of the new recording called "Duet to Quartet."

The jacket cover, drawn by Kitty Green, who is with an area advertising agency, is indeed striking. More important, though, is the music inside, which ranges from Cole Porter's "Every Time We Say Goodbye" to Chick Corea's "Tone for Joan's Bones." Bonnier's piano is as sprightly, playful and relaxed as ever.

She once referred to "Tone for Joan's Bones" as a "gauzy-textured series of chord changes." When she plays it, she weaves the chord changes together into a fabric that's imaginative and beautiful.

"Duet to Quartet," so-called because it features various combinations of accompaniment, is Bonnier's third album and boasts liner notes by renowned jazz critic Ira Gitler. The new album is available at many local record shops.

LISA LI GRECI'S records aren't available to the public yet. In fact, the Canton Township singer hasn't made her first recording.

However, the 24-year-old — who was featured a few months ago in an Observer & Eccentric article I wrote about local musicians and singers on television — may soon appear on a record.

She was taped for one of the WDIV-TV "Saturday Night Music Machine" segments and won the talent contest on that particular show. Now she's entered the semi-finals. "If I win," she told me recently, "I get a trip to Hawaii."

Not bad for a former band singer who's staying home these days to care for her baby and who did the TV program just to get a "little exposure."

In addition to having a shot at winning the title of Saturday Night Music Machine Entertainer of the Year, Li Greci has had other good things happen to her as a result of the locally aired TV show.

"I've had quite a few band offers," she said, "and I've even had a man offer to finance a 45 for me. I'll probably sign a contract and make the recording."

WHAT DO BESS Bonnier, Bugs Beddow, Ron English, J.C. Heard, Dennis Rowland and Pamela Wise all have in common?

Besides being top-notch Detroit-area jazz musicians, each of these talents will be among the more than 300 musicians named in the forthcoming book "Detroit Jazz Who's Who."

The book is definitely one that could be subtitled "It's About Time Someone Wrote This Kind of Book." Author is Herb Boyd, who has been listening to and writing about jazz in metro Detroit for several years. He was co-author in 1980 of the highly regarded book "Jazz Space Detroit."

Copies of the book are available by mail for $10 (plus $3 for postage and handling) from: Jazz Research Institute, P.O. Box 32006, Detroit 48232.

Ballerina dances expressively in 'Swan Lake'

By Mary Jane Doerr
special writer

It must be every ballerina's dream to dance the part of Odette in Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake." The ballet movements that imitate the slow and graceful swans culminate in all the beauty and elegance that ballet itself represents.

Kathryn Cooke danced the role, with New York dancer James Dunne as her Prince Siegfried, members of the Rose Marie Floyd Ballet Company and the Oakway Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Francesco Di Biasi, Sunday afternoon at Mercy High School.

Dunne was a handsome prince, a precise dancer and a dramatic interpreter. His third-act solo was too short for him to have come all the way from New York for. His turns and his jumps were clean but what I admire most was the elegance and professionalism he gave the entire production.

That is not to mention the support he gave his ballerina, Detroit's Cooke. Cooke had most of the solos, proving to be powerful, strong and very expressive in the dual part of good and evil. Her artistry was highly acceptable and very sound.

THE 44-MEMBER troupe gave an evenly danced performance to balance the duo's strong leadership. For the most part the groups danced precisely together and with complete confidence in their parts.

Costuming for the troupe was a variation of German-styled "Bavarian" peasant dresses and traditional white ballet dresses for the swan dances, accented with the allegorical meaning of black and white as symbols of good and evil. Backdrops were simple but lovely — painted blue-green pictures of the forest and the ballroom of the castle.

Mary Jane Doerr

Emily Fromme's oboe motif blended with harpist Patricia Terry-Ross' arpeggios and concertmaster Emily Mutter Austin's violin solos, leading the orchestra in the musical aspect of the performance.

With Di Biasi conducting the orchestra and artistic director Floyd's traditional choreography, the combination of music and dance, expression and drama, gave us a fine performance.

THOUGH OVERSHADOWED by the successful "Swan Lake," Karen Clegg, principal violinist of the second violin section of the Toledo Symphony, gave a stunning rendition of the nine-minute "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso" by Saint-Saens. This brief introduction to her style and technique was dazzling and certainly worth another opportunity to hear her.

Bruckner's music was in good hands

Maestro Gunther Herbig has proven himself to be extremely capable in his few previous programs with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. His latest program showed this capability is solidly rooted.

While most new appointees might tend to show their best side during their initial engagement, with the full cooperation of the musicians, the ability to sustain that quality is what makes the difference in the long run.

While predicting the future is always a risky business, Maestro Herbig has demonstrated his skilled leadership, this time with a work that isn't universally embraced — the Symphony No. 5 by Bruckner.

Ironically, this long work turned out to be more convincing, in terms of performance, than the far more familiar opening selection — the Piano Concerto No. 3 by Beethoven.

The Beethoven Concerto was played by Andre-Michel Schub, winner of the Van Cliburn competition in 1981. The shortcomings in this performance weren't due to Maestro Herbig or the orchestra, however.

In fact, the orchestral aspect of this work was among the highest in quality that I can recall in live performances. This emphasized even more the weakness in Schub's playing.

While there is no doubt in my mind that he is a very capable musician, that particular evening wasn't one of his best.

HE SHOWED good technique with all notes in place, but there was a lack of eventfulness. The dynamic changes, while following the general recommended trend, didn't go beyond the call of duty.

A case in point was the end of the development section of the first movement. This is one of the dramatic, climactic moments in that movement and calls for more than a mild crescendo.

Another example is the new theme in the middle section of the final movement (A flat major), which should depict a distinct, darker element, rather than follow the pattern of the rest of the movement.

Avigdor Zaromp

The Bruckner Symphony was one of the rare successful attempts to breathe life into this style, which isn't appealing to everybody. There was a constant awareness of the grand design of this work, a concept that didn't fail in being projected and communicated to the audience.

The brass sound was exceptionally clean and well-phrased. The sonorities were all-encompassing, overpowering and without unnecessary "cobwebs." This is one work by the composer in which the global structure is more explicitly emphasized by references to previous movements.

WHILE NO single performance is likely to turn me into an instant Bruckner fan, this one at least made it easier to understand what this style has to offer and why some listeners find it so appealing.

To be sure, not everybody shared in this enthusiasm. Following the second movement, many people, obviously bored and frustrated, left. It was their loss, however, since they missed the best portions. These included the masterful double fugues in the final movement and the dramatic, powerful conclusion.

That final portion gave even more meaning to the previous three, well-shaped movements. There was the feeling that Bruckner reached his carefully designed goal on this occasion, even though he took a long path to get there.

Bruckner might not be for everybody, and I don't feel yet ready to listen to him too frequently. But in the right hands, his music can be a rewarding learning experience. On this occasion, one could hardly have hoped to find Bruckner to be in better hands.

"The Greatest Story Ever Told" (1965), in two parts at 1 p.m. today and Friday on Ch. 50. Originally 141 minutes. TV time slot: 240 minutes.

Hollywood salutes the Bible, starring Max Von Sydow, Charlton Heston, John Wayne, Sidney Poitier, Carroll Baker, Angela Lansbury, Jose Ferrer, Dorothy McGuire, Van Heflin, Claude Rains, Shelley Winters, Ed Wynn and — er — a host of others. If that sounds like this George Stevens' film manages to trivialize the old and new testaments, you're right.

Rating: $1.19.

Footnote: Prints of "The Greatest Story Ever Told" that run longer than 141 minutes are in limited circulation. Ch. 50 either has one of those prints, or it's allowing for an awful lot of commercial time.

8 p.m. today and Friday on Ch. 50. Originally 174 minutes. TV time slot: 240 minutes.

John Huston salutes the Bible, starring Michael Parks, Richard Harris, George C. Scott, Stephen Boyd, Ava Gardner, Peter O'Toole, Franco Nero and John Huston as himself — oops, make that as Noah. Sorry, but it's sometimes difficult to sort out these biblical epics. In fact, Huston's "The Bible" is better, in part, than Stevens'

"The Greatest Story Ever Told," which manages to be twice as supercilious as the former. But "The Bible" is episodic and sections of it are terrible, too. In other words, the films don't quite live up to the book.

Rating: $1.89.

"Ben Hur" (1959), 12:45 Sunday night on Ch. 7. Originally 212 minutes. TV time slot: 255 minutes.

The most compelling of this week's Easter films is "Ben Hur," directed by William Wyler. Charlton Heston overacts more than usual, but action and pathos carry the day. Also intriguing is the treatment of Christ, whose screen appearances are shrouded in shadow or filmed from long distances, creating an otherworldliness about this Jesus sadly lacking in other films. Stephen Boyd, Hugh Griffith, Martha Scott and Sam Jaffe co-star.

Rating: $3.10.

"Jesus Christ, Superstar" (1973), 12:30 Monday night on Ch. 7. Originally 103 minutes. TV time slot: 130 minutes.

There's nothing otherworldly about Christ in Norman Jewison's "Jesus Christ, Superstar," from the Webber and Rice musical. All the scripted regulars, in fact — from the time they step off a bus in Galilee — are down to earth, which makes this film compelling in its own way and toe-tapping enjoyable, too. Ted Neeley and Yvonne Elliman.

Orchestra plays rewarding program

By Avigdor Zarnop
special writer

One of the axioms of classical music is that an orchestra has a conductor, at least when it is beyond a minimal size.

There are some exceptions to that, of course. Some groups play without a conductor and manage reasonably well.

The Orpheus Chamber Orchestra proves to be an exception among the exceptions. It maintains an uncompromised chamber quality with all the fine ramifications.

This group was the latest of fine features presented by the Chamber Music Society of Detroit (CMS) at Orchestra Hall.

The Orpheus Ensemble is a totally self-governing group that manages its own repertoire and touring schedule. While individual responsibility for musical interpretation varies according to expertise, each member of the group shares some of the responsibilities and has a stake in its success.

The program included works by J.C. Bach, Mozart, Schoenberg and Bartok. The least familiar among these works was the opening Sinfonia in B Flat Major by Johann Christian Bach, youngest son of the great master.

HIS STYLE is closer to that of Mozart than to his father — and his music, to a large degree, fell between the cracks in the period between the two more successful masters.

This performance helped explain why his music had such a great influence on Mozart. This piece was treated like a masterpiece and sounded like one, even though it doesn't alter the designation of Mozart as the superior composer.

review

Mozart's Bassoon Concerto, together with Weber's concerto comprise the entire standard repertoire for the instrument. To be sure, Mozart wrote two more concertos for the instrument, which didn't survive, amounting to 50 percent of a precious commodity.

Bassoon player Frank Morelli showed great skill and depth in this performance. The lower notes resounded and reverberated due to the rich acoustics of Orchestra Hall. The playing was unpretentious but penetrating, with the second movement and its moving cadenza providing a rare forum for the instrument.

Schoenberg is primarily recognized today as a pioneer in atonal music. One of his most appealing works, however, is his extremely tonal "Verklarte Nacht."

IN VIEW of the fact that the work was conceived in its original form in 1899, one might say that Schoenberg was trying to avoid 20th-century music as long as he could.

The inspired performance, portraying the shifting and transforming moods, attained its ultimate in moving the audience. The chromatic modulations and dynamic fluctuations were conveyed as if formed by a collective mind.

The concluding work on the program was Bartok's famous suite of Roumanian Folk Dances. Traditionally it is performed with a solo violin and piano. But Bartok himself arranged it for full orchestra.

Such an orchestral version curtails some of the spontaneity, like the fiddling in the last dance. But within these limitations, this performance was remarkably fresh and invigorating, with penetrating subtleties in the slower dances.

In view of such a rewarding program, what more could one expect? To answer that, one will have to hear the Tokyo String Quartet on May 4 — the final program in this season's Chamber Music Society offerings.

Olympic art

Athletes express spirit in fund-raising paintings

The Budweiser Olympic Art Collection, original paintings created by six U.S. Olympic gold medal winners, will be on display in Westland April 30 to May 5.

The paintings will be exhibited at the Westland Center, 35000 W. Warren Road at Wayne Road in Westland, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

1980 U.S. hockey team captain and hero Mike Eruzione, basketball great Bill Russell, sprinter Wilma Rudolph, discus thrower Al Oerter, marathon runner Frank Shorter and swimmer John Naber were commissioned by Budweiser to create the art using the tools of their athletic specialty. For example, Russell used a basketball, Eruzione used a hockey stick and Oerter used a discus.

THE ARTWORK is part of Anheuser-Busch Inc.'s commitment to the 1984 Olympics, company representatives say. Anheuser-Busch Inc. brews Budweiser and Budweiser Light beers.

"Proceeds from the sales of the original artwork and reproductions will help raise more than $1 million to help finance the U.S. Olympic Team's preparations for the 1984 Olympic games in Los Angeles," said Brian Porter, manager of Olympic marketing.

"Budweiser initiated this program in 1981 to help sustain the financial recovery of the United States Olympic Committee, which was set back significantly due to the U.S. boycott of the 1980 summer games in the Soviet Union," said Jack McDonough, vice president of brand management.

Christie's of New York auctioned the original artwork for a total $86,500 in 1981 at a $100-per-plate fund-raising luncheon for the U.S. Olympic Committee. Proceeds from the sales were donated by Budweiser to the committee. Order forms for lithographic reproductions and poster reprints of the originals will be available at the mall.

ERUZIONE, captain of the U.S. Olympic hockey team that dramatically captured the gold medal at Lake Placid in 1980, calls his painting "Mayhem."

"It depicts my winning goal against the Russians. You can see the path of the puck," he said. "When I put my signature on it, I said, 'Geez, it's an Eruzione.'"

"There are dozens of Picassos, but only one Eruzione."

Russell's work, measuring 10-feet-8, depicts the U.S. victory over Russia in basketball in 1956.

"I can be humble about my painting," said Russell, who led the American team to the gold medal that year in Melbourne, Australia. "I knew mine wouldn't be the most creative, so I made it the biggest like a basketball court."

RUDOLPH PAINTED a butterfly, representing the freedom of the sport of running. She won three gold medals in track and field in the 1960 Olympics in Rome.

"It's an expression of me coming out of the starting blocks, that was the slowest part of my running," Rudolph said. "I call my work 'Madame Butterfly.'"

"When I was competing, they called me the 'Black Pearl' and the 'Black Gazelle.' In the same spirit, I wanted to create something graceful and beautiful. I'm really happy with it."

WITH HIS painting, Oerter tried to show the intensity of training and the impact the discus makes with the colors radiating upwards and out, he says.

Oerter is attempting a comeback aiming toward an unprecedented fifth gold medal in Los Angeles in 1984. He was a gold medalist in the discus in 1956 at Melbourne, in 1960 at Rome, in 1964 at Tokyo and in 1968 at Mexico City.

Marathoner Frank Shorter shows his running form in creating his Olympic painting.

Shorter tried to create the "sense of the race situation" in his work, he says. "A mass of people at the start, funneling down to one winner at the finish more than 26 miles later," explained Shorter, who won the gold medal at Munich in 1972 and the silver medal at Montreal in 1976.

NABER CALLS his painting "The 100-Meter Backstroke." He won four gold medals and one silver medal, and set four world records in swimming in the 1976 games at Montreal.

"At the top are the three flags, the second place American, mine on top and East Germany," Naber said. "You see a splash of blue as I enter the water; it narrows as I approach victory."

Swimmer John Naber, who won four gold medals at the 1976 Montreal Olympics, calls his painting "100 Meter Backstroke."

New products make framing easier

This is another in a series of lessons on art and drawing by special columnist David Messing. He has taught for eight years and operates an art store, Art Store and More, 18774 Middlebelt, Livonia. Messing encourages questions and comments from readers. You may write him at his store or c/o Observer Newspapers, 23352 Farmington Road, Farmington MI 48024.

By David Messing
special writer

At first glance framing hasn't changed much over the years. I mean a hammer will always be a hammer, nails still look like nails and wood is not yet an endangered resource. But if you look a little closer you do see some definite improvements in technology, procedures and products.

Occasionally someone will bring in an old frame they found at a garage sale and ask us to fit their artwork or photo into it. The glass from these old timers is often rippled and striated. The single strength or float glass used by framers nowadays is of superior quality. It is thin lightweight and relatively free of defects. One other improvement of glass is in the quality of non-glare glass.

It is true that it was non-glaring, but the grainy surface of the glass greatly distorted the image of the work of art or photo. Maybe it will help if I explain that non-glare is now regular float glass merely dipped into acid which bites into both surfaces of the glass merely dipped into acid which bites into both surfaces of the glass evenly and smoothly.

It was once and many still consider it, a "no-no" to frame a watercolor in non-glare. But with the clarity of modern non-glare I always use it in framing my own watercolors. Glass is, was and always will be fun stuff to cut. Unpredictable is the best term. Last week I dropped and 8 by 10 piece of glass on a concrete floor.

I FELT as if I was watching it in slow motion. It landed directly on one corner, bounced up about four inches and then fell flat. To my surprise, the glass was neither chipped or cracked. I had a large 18 by 24 piece of glass laying on my frame table, and as I carefully slid my metal ruler to one side, the corner of the ruler slightly tapped the edge of glass. The result was that funny little "tick" sound that glass makes as it cracks, and it did. Right through the center. One good tip in glass cutting, is to always keep your glass cutter well oiled with a light weight oil, like household oil.

Mat boards have improved in their quality and greatly improved in color availability. I practically go color blind trying to distinguish between pearl, and stone gray and warm gray, bar harbor gray and blue gray, mist, copley and extra light gray.

And folks, there are at least fifteen more shades of color that most would simply look at and call gray. The greens are forever, the browns never end and the blues? Well there are more than enough of them. Sometimes customers get so frustrated by reason of the quality of colors that they say, "you pick it out, it's your business."

All mat boards that are not "high rag," (which is at least 70 percent rag) or 100 percent rag content will in time yellow and in turn, stain the artwork. I know that Crescent and Bainbridge now offer a vast selection of colors in the 100 percent rag acid free mat board. If however you use a regular matboard you may use a barrier paper or single ply museum board between the regular mat and your artwork. It is also important that you mount your artwork on an acid free board as impurities may stain the artwork from behind. Crescent offers a three ply museum mounting board which is white on one side and gray on the other, white and cream or cream and gray.

It is odd that in this "now" generation, there are those who work to preserve their artworks for generations to follow. Museum mounting seems to be quite popular. I would like to lightly touch on this topic of museum mounting. I have read books and articles on museum mounting. I have also asked information from 30 year veterans in the business and I have done it myself.

WHAT I have learned is that everyone has their own little differences but they are all basically following the same general rules. The main objective is to surround the artwork with 100 percent acid free materials. The mounting board is three ply or four ply museum board. The tape used to hinge or mount the artwork to the museum board should be linen tape which must be moistened, filmoplast which is pressure sensitive or mulberry paper and rice glue. The mat if not acid free must be separated from the artwork by one ply museum board. This allows the artwork to be viewed while protected from finger prints and contaminating surfaces.

Any artwork or photo that has the potential of increasing in value should be museum mounted, matted and framed. It is interesting that museum mounting is not the best looking means of framing a work of art. Museum mounting by its procedure only hangs the artwork behind the glass. Just as if you held it between your thumb and forefinger of each hand.

The tape holding the artwork in place is so delicate that if the frame should be dropped the tape would tear before any damage could be done to the print. Since the work or print is merely hung in the frame it is relatively free to react to the atmosphere. Sometimes the print will buckle slightly and other times it will lie flat. Hopefully it will lie flat and pretty when your company arrives. If, however, it is slightly buckled, maybe your company will think "now this is a classy place, they even museum mount their artworks."

I will continue on the basics of framing artwork next week.
