Another try to limit voter lists

staff writer

It's back to work for supporters of a proposed new bill that seeks reform of the state's voter registration law

Advocates of a new law - including Plymouth Township Clerk Esther Hulsing and State Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, who represents Plymouth and Canton - hope the third time's the

This is the third go-around with voter registration reform for the Senate. Geake and several bipartisan co-sponsors have introduced the latest bill, their third

Two previous bills were passed with bipartisan support in both chambers of the Michigan Legislature, but were vetoed by Gov. James Blanchard.

Geake's new legislation, entitled the Voter Integrity Program, has been cosponsored by the majority and minority leaders in the Senate.

The current bill, Geake said, should be acceptable to the governor.

'I addressed the concerns expressed by the governor, but he raised new ones in his second veto message. This third attempt responds to his latest obstacles," said Geake.

HULSING SAID she supports the latest bill, as she did the previous one. "It will keep voters on the active voting list for five years, before they are removed," said Hulsing. "It's better than 10 years

Plymouth Township voters now are carried for four years on the active list and another six years on the inactive list. During that period, they can vote without having to reregister.

The procedure in effect allows a voter to remain on the voter rolls, even if the person has long since moved out of the township. After a voter has been inactive for 10 years, the clerk sends a 30-day notice informing him he will be placed on a canceled list

THE CLERK then is required to carry the voter, who had not voted for 10 vears on a canceled list. Person the canceled list can vote only if they reregister. Under Geake's bill, clerks would be allowed to place inactive voters on the canceled list after five years, rather than 10, after written notice has been sent and a 30-day period of reapplication is completed. "I am all for an 'active or not-registered' method," said Hulsing. "By waiting five years, we would allow for the overlapping of the Presidential elec-

She said fraud often results in larger cities, in cases where inactive voters' names are used to pad elections.

California has perhaps the quickest inactive voter cancellation. That state removes voters from the rolls after two years

Wisconsin and Minnesota have one of the most lenient - and taxing for clerks. They permit voters who have been inactive to reregister on the day of the election. In Milwaukee, that provision resulted in 65,000 persons registering during a recent election day.

'Michigan is far longer than most states, on the average," said Hulsing.

THE TOWNSHIP goes out of its way to sign up voters. "We will register them at home," said Hulsing. "There is no reason why anyone eligible in the township should not vote.'

township hall or at any secretary of state office.

Hulsing also suggested that the postal service be required to inform the clerk if a resident moves out of the township, but conceded such a procedure might place too great a burden on the post office.

The township has 14,664 registered voters. "I don't count the inactive list," said Hulsing.

Following a purge, Hulsing said she was able to whittle the number of inactive voters down from 3,000 to 2,500. "I have a whole file full of canceled voters," she said.

GEAKE'S BILL also provides training procedures for deputy registrars, allows cross-jurisdictional registration by agreements through clerks, and creates standardized voter registration

The Senate Local Government Committee will hold hearings around the state this summer on the Geake bill.

This is a simple, honest bill which would make voter registration more accessible and help alleviate concerns expressed by certain groups that sponsor registration drives," said Geake.

"Simply, we are making registration easier and cleaner, without creating unnecessary administrative burdens for local clerks."

Geake's proposed legislation is supported by the Michigan Townships Association, the Michigan Municipal Clerks Association, the Michigan Municipal League and the State Chamber Eighteen police officers and 15 Community Service Officers took their oaths of office during the ceremony at the township park. A 23-year-old Southfield woman said she was raped in her car early Monday morning in Plymouth Township.

The woman told officers she was assaulted shortly before 1 a.m. by a man she picked up to help her with directions. The incident reportedly happened along either M-14 or I-275.

Garbage collection fee stays same

The cost of getting rid of garbage will remain the same for another year in Plymouth Township.

Supervisor Maurice Breen announced to trustees last week that he negotiated another year on the solid waste disposal contract with Canton Disposal Recycling.

The board earlier had authorized the supervisor to meet with the garbage collection company in an effort to extend their contract, which would have township will continue to pay $3.26 per to continue charging residents $4 a month for the service.

THE GARBAGE collection program was started in 1982. Prior to then, township residents were responsible for obtaining their own garbage collecvice, mostly based on subdivision lines.

A committee, headed by then-trustee Gerald Law, studied the possibility of combining all the work under one township contract at a lower price.

All of the collectors were given an opportunity to bid on the contract — with some combining to submit a bid.

Under the terms of the extension, the from the collectors and some residents, the board decided in 1982 to award a stop, per month, allowing the township townshipwide contract to Canton Recycling - while allowing residents to opt out of the service.

Suburban Republicans had mixed feelings as the Michigan House of Representatives passed its version of an income tax rollback and sent it to the state Senate.

'It was the Republican position," said freshman Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, a supporter.

'If we'd voted against it, we could have got a cleaner bill," said veteran Rep. W.V. (Sandy) Brotherton, R-Farmington, who opposed it. "This isn't just rolling back the income tax. It's raising other taxes.

"My people wanted the income tax rollback," said Rep. Gordon Sparks, R-Troy, "but they didn't want the complicated 'fairness plan' of Gov. Blanchard." Sparks voted no.

BOTH HOUSES have passed separate bills rolling back the 1983 income tax increase to 4.6 percent. Neither chamber seems in any rush to act on the other's bill

The House version passed Monday blended some elements of the tax rollback passed in February by the Republican Senate with some elements of the "tax fairness" program of Democratic Gov. James Blanchard.

· Roll the tax rate back to the original 4.6 percent effective May 15, 1986. The Senate bill's date is Jan. 1, 1986.

• Raise the income exemption per person to $1,700 vs. $1,750 in the Senate bill. Current exemption is $1,500.

• Tax many capital gains as income. This wasn't included in the Senate version.

· Give homeowners in high property-tax areas rebates of $65 million. The Senate bill had no such provision. Gov. Blanchard had sought $140 million.

THE HOUSE bill was passed 88-20. Supporting it were:

Republicans - Bankes of Livonia. Gregory Gruse of Troy, David Honigman of West Bloomfield, and Gerald Law of Plymouth Township.

Opposed were four Republicans Brotherton of Farmington, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion, Judith Miller of Birmingham and Sparks of Troy.

Brotherton, who attended a small group meeting last week with Blanchard, said the governor was far from distressed over long delays in the rollback measures. "There's no rush. He figures the revenue picture will be clearer later," Brotherton reported.

The House simply hasn't touched the Senate-passed tax bill, he said. The Senate is due to return Friday, but may not act on the House bill until fall.

BANKES SAID her Livonia mail showed "people wanted both property trict. I suspect not a helluva lot. tax relief and income tax relief." The "Republicans feel very strongly that Senate revenue projections are closer to reality than the House's," she said. The Senate Fiscal Agency projects a $500 million surplus next year and the House a $300 million surplus if the income tax isn't rolled all the way back to 4.6 percent.

Bankes was troubled at Blanchard's advocacy of "hidden taxes" on insurance companies and banks. She said Republicans believe Blanchard misread a federal court opinion in an Alabama case saying domestic and outof-state insurance companies must be taxed at the same rate.

"I'll vote against insurance and banking taxes," she vowed.

BROTHERTON OPPOSED "tinkering with the property tax" in the House bill because:

In this year's tax law, the property tax rebate is paid to homeowners whose homestead property taxes exceed 3.5 percent of household income. The rebate is equal to 60 percent of the excess property tax.

More than half of Michigan households receive such rebates, state Treasurer Robert Bowman said. He and Blanchard say most beneficiaries would be in the highly taxed suburbs of

Teacher & student of democracy retires

By Sandra Armbruster staff writer

The classroom erupted in commotion as students transformed themselves into America's "greatest heroes." From presidents to an astronaut to an Indian princess, the third graders lined up for

"Where else would you see all this excitement?" said Paul Nastoff, a resident of Plymouth and teacher-turneddirector for the morning. He didn't wait for an answer.

"What causes the biggest pollution?" Nastoff asked the students as they assembled.

"Gas and oil," answered one.

"Yes, but what else?" "Noise," said another student.

"Oh, thank you," responded Nastoff as the class quieted down.

IT WAS TIME for an annual event in Nastoff's life: a performance that would show parents what their children had learned that year at Wildwood School of Wayne-Westland Community Schools.

It also would be the last show for Nastoff, who is retiring after 36 years of teaching in Wayne-Westland.

Framing the production were walls plastered with maps, pictures of presidents and the words democracy, initiative, responsibility.

They weren't just words to the students. One by one, the children ex-plained what they had learned that year about the "greatest country in the NASTOFF, OF MACEDONIAN descent, spent his early years living in the "only Christian village in Albania." Fleeing from religious persecution, Nastoff escaped to Yugoslavia with his younger brother, grandmother and mother. His father had disappeared earlier.

His mother died two years after they escaped. Nastoff ended up living with an uncle who "didn't want to raise someone else's child."

"In Yugoslavia, there was no compulsory law for education. When I was 10, I was working on a farm as a shepherd boy. When I threatened to run away, an old man told my uncle, 'If you don't send him to school, I'll send him.' So my uncle allowed me to attend half-

BUT THAT WASN'T the end of Nastoff's saga

"I could not prove I was me. I had no birth certificate. My village had burned."

So Nastoff had to "pay dearly" a man who sneaked back into Yugoslavia to get a birth certificate. By the time Nastoff received the certificate, however, he had turned 18.

"I couldn't get a passport. No one was allowed to leave (after age 18) until they had served in the armed forces, but I couldn't do that without losing U.S. citizenship.

"So we had to send the gentleman back into Yugoslavia to say that they had issued the birth certificate with the wrong date and that I was born a year later. That made me 17, and then I was able to leave Yugoslavia."

THE NEXT FEW years would find Nastoff an incredibly lucky witness to history.

He passed Hitler, who was on his way to Vienna, while going to Hamburg, Germany in 1938 to board a plane for the United States. He landed in New York in May of that year.

Nastoff managed to complete the 11th grade at Fordson High School before being drafted into the U.S. Army in 1941. When he completed basic training, he was sent back to Europe.

His company was scheduled to be part of the D-Day invasion, but the troop transport he was on — the Susan B. Anthony — was torpedoed before it could land. The men were transferred to a new ship and landed a day after the first troops landed.

"She typed all my papers," he said. It was through his instructors at Wayne that he developed a love of teaching and a philosophy that would carry him through his career.

Those instructors told him, "Whatever students you look at in front of you, be concerned with the living spirit of people, not just the books. Information is secondary to people."

With that in mind, Nastoff said he has never met a failure in all his years of teaching.

NASTOFF HAS BECOME recognized for his theories on teaching. He presented a program before the Michigan Education Association in 1962 on effective learning and how to teach what democracy does.

The three key words, he says, are choice, initiative and responsibility.

"You must love what you choose You must take action when you love. Once you have taken initiative, you must be responsible." How much responsibility should a child have?

"As much as the child can use at his level of understanding," Nastoff said. That can mean, for third graders, choosing whether to study 10 or 11 spelling problems or the number of math problems on a page.

"It's so much fun voting," he added. "I'm a very strong believer in the principal of learning by doing, instead of telling. Education should have interac-

Job licensing moratorium proposed by Law

By Deb Sherman staff writer

The Department of Licensing and Regulation, which presently regulates over 40 professions, would be prohibited from administering any new licensing programs for two years if legislation co-sponsored by Rep. Gerald H. Law, R-Plymouth, is passed.

The bill proposes placing a temporary moratorium on new occupational licensures and requires an evaluation of present licensing acts every 10 years by a proposed joint committee.

"The main reason for having licenses is for consumer protection, but the state simply can't investigate all of the complaints that are coming in because there is a lack of personnel. The complaints are snowballing. We can barely check on malpractice complaints," said Law, vice chairman of the Committee of State Affairs

LAW SAID the moratorium would give the department time to review all of the groups presently licensed and make an evaluation of whether they do in fact protect the consumer.

Law said regulation of some groups, such as massage parlor operators, should be abolished so more attention could be afforded to the more critical areas, such as health and public safety.

"But, once we give someone a license under the due process of the American democracy, we can't just take it

"The problem is that too many groups are coming to State Affairs wanting licensure and we're trying to deal with each individually - we just don't have the personnel to handle the paperwork involved," Law said.

State employees have been cut, and they're not being replaced. Law said state employees have decreased from 70,000 to 50,000 over the last five years. As a result, the more licenses granted, the less protection the consumer is actually getting.

'Doctors are able to hold on to their licenses for years after wrongdoing because there are so many complaints and so few people to investigate," he

"There really isn't any consumer protection in licensure anymore."

A LICENSE SHOWS the operator has completed the education and the bare requirements necessary to obtain the license, Law said.

But a license holder could be the worst operator in the world," he added. Money isn't the problem in licensure,

Law explained. The state actually makes money on - the problem is that state there's a freeze on hiring."

The Department of Licensing and Regulation supports the proposed moratorium. Law said he cannot speculate on the

Programs aim to reach youthful offenders

"Too often youth have been able to slip through the system avoiding responsibility for their delinquent behavior.

- Plan for Juvenile Justice in Wayne County, January 1985

By Teri Banas staff writer

A big problem in the criminal justice system has been that youngsters responsible for committing crimes haven't been "accountable for their actions.

That is the opinion of presiding judge of the county's juvenile court operations, Y. Gladys Barsamian.

To try to do something that will change this, two separate county operations will begin programs aimed at making youngsters who have had brushes with the law change their behavior.

Barsamian's juvenile court division will oversee one while Wayne County Executive William Lucas' office will supervise another program funded by the county commission.

Barsamian has questioned the need for two separate programs and charges that political posturing has played a role in creating the two programs (See gram will be patterned after a tried and proven program run for the past three years by the city of Livonia's Department of Community Resources.

The program, using volunteers to work one-on-one with the kids and relying on parent participation, found that it was able to reach youngsters who had been in trouble.

Department statistics show that better than 85 percent of those who have been in the assistance program do not get into trouble with the law again. This is a high percentage, according to juvenile authorities.

The juvenile court program and the county commission's program both rely on "early intervention" and deterrence, volunteer support and parent cooperation. Each group says its program will involve children as young as age 8.

BARSAMIAN says the juvenile court's plan will begin in two highcrime police precincts of Detroit, the 16th and 14th, which border Redford Township.

"Eventually we'd like to see a Youth Assistance Program in every community in Wayne County," she said. Other nia's have been started in Redford Township and Garden City.

BARSAMIAN SAID her court will ask the Livonia Youth Assistance Bureau to train its volunteers.

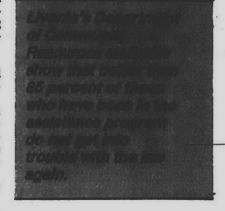

"We've been meeting regularly with Joan Duggan (the Livonia mayor's executive assistant who supervised development of the progam), and we'd like to use the Livonia program as a blueprint," Barsamian said.

The court plans to hire a director for the program shortly, she said. Wayne County Commissioners, meanwhile, approved a Youth Corps Ordinance to get early intervention program off the ground. Commissioner Arthur Carter of Detroit said this program is based on one in Oakland Coun-

THE COMMISSION'S plan is to launch the program in four areas of the county, so far identified only as two areas of Detroit, the Downriver area and the Inkster-Westland area.

In addition to training volunteers to offer "advice, guidance" to troubled children, Carter said, the program will enlist the help of established support parents' efforts with their children.

"In order to get at crime, you can't just treat the individual in isolation. Dealing with the parents is very important," he said. A third element to their plan is to establish a hot-line service to take calls from parents seeking help and direct them to existing agencies.

The county plans to hire four directors for each region and begin in Aug-

Why 2 youth programs? Politics, judge says

By Teri Banas staff writer

Two county agencies have announced the start of youth assistance programs to try to make a dent in the rising incidence of juvenile crime.

Will either, or both, be successful? Are two different programs necessary? Or, is politics rearing its ugly head to create unnecessary programs?

These and other questions may be answered as the programs take shape.

In the meantime, however, a prominent juvenile court judge charges that politics is playing too big a part in the decisions leading to the separate pro-

Our freedom

We would do well to heed Jefferson's words today

the Declaration of Independence and founder of the University of Virginia, was proud of a third great, original, contribution to the United States of America.

As a state legislator, Jefferson in 1779 drafted and won passage of the Statute for Religious Freedom. Amended, it was adopted in 1786.

As our nation today wrestles with governmental Nativity scenes and the notion of "voluntary" prayer in public schools; as right-wing religious groups seek the teaching of "creationism" in public schools; and as left-wing religious groups equate their brands of pacifism with God's word, we need to look back to Jefferson.

THE IDEA of religious freedom was controversial even in Jefferson's day. In his "Notes on Virginia," he observed heretics, under common law, could be burned. He recalled that public law provided for punishing a person who denied the being of a God, the Trinity, the Christian religion or the divine authority of the scriptures.

For his beliefs, a person could be ineligible for civil or military office. "By the time of the Revolution," Jefferson wrote, "a majority of the inhabitants had become dissenters from the established church but were still obliged to pay contributions to support the pastors of the minority."

And so, in observance of Independence Day 1985, we reprint, not the Declaration with which most of us are already familiar, but Jefferson's own draft of what he considered to be his equally noteworthy contribution to American thought.

THE STATUTE OF VIRGINIA FOR RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

"Well aware that the opinions and belief of men depend not on their own will, but follow involuntarily the evidence proposed

"That Almighty God hath created the mind free, and manifested His supreme will that free it shall remain by making it altogether insusceptible of restraint;

"That all attempts to influence it by temporal punishments, or burdens, or by civil incapacitations, tend only to beget habits of hypocrisy and meanness, and are a departure from the plan of the holy author of our religion . .

"THAT TO compel a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions which he disbelieves and abhors is sinful and tyrannical. .

"That our civil rights have no dependence on our religious opinions, any more than our opinions in physics or geometry

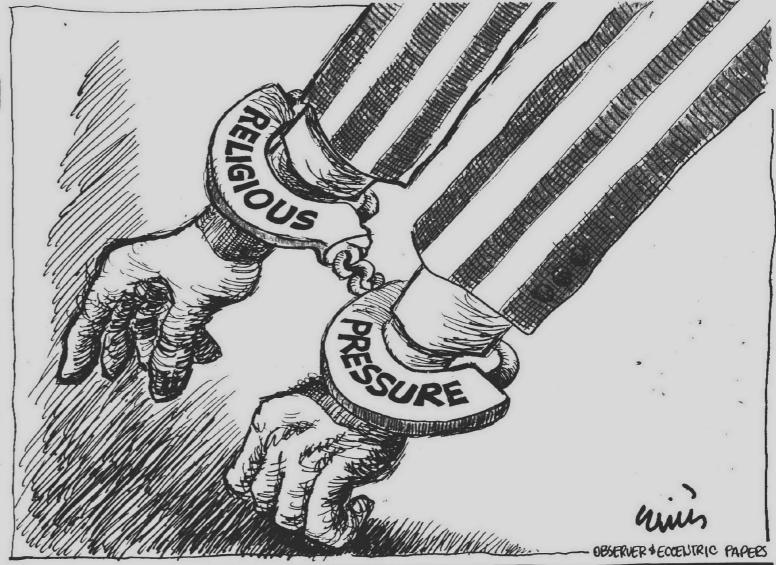

"That the opinions of men are not the object of civil government, nor under its jurisdiction.

"That it is time enough for the rightful purposes of civil government for its officers to interfere when principles break out into overt acts against peace and good

"And finally, that truth is great and will prevail if left to herself; that she is the proper and sufficient antagonist to error, and has nothing to fear from the conflict unless by human interposition disarmed of her natural weapons, free argument and debate, errors ceasing to be dangerous when it is permitted freely to contradict

"WE THE GENERAL Assembly of Virginia do enact that no man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place, or ministry whatsoever, nor shall be enforced, restrained, molested, or burdened in his body or goods, or shall otherwise suffer, on account of his religious opinions or belief;

"But that all men shall be free to profess, and by argument to maintain, their opinions in matters of religion, and that the same shall in no wise diminish, enlarge, or affect their civil capacities."

How to comply with the law

IT HAPPENED in Redford Township, but it should be happening statewide.

A local unit of government held a conference for all its boards and commissions on how to comply with the state Open Meetings Act.

The attorney conducting it was former state Rep. Robert Law, crown prince of a political family whose members hold office in Plymouth Township and West

IT'S BEEN suggested in some quarters that school districts consider sharing high schools to meet the soaring costs of edu-

In an era of declining enrollments and school closings, it might seem like a natural for neighboring school districts to share schools. Schools in Oakland County are already sharing high schools through their southend and north-end vocational high schools. And shared programs for the handicapped and special programs have been in operation for years.

But shared high schools?

Bill Keane, superintendent of the Oakland Intermediate School Board, sees little possibility of it, although he is optimistic about the use of shared programs and classes

KEANE RECALLS what he terms the "essential prototype" of such a proposal. Involved were two small school districts on the west side of the state, one with a new high school, the other with a new middle school.

. The two superintendents came up with a merger plan in which middle school students in the two districts would attend the middle school and high school students would attend the high school.

Elementary school pupils would continue to attend school in their home districts. "It didn't happen," said Kean. "You know why?

"The older community didn't want to give up its football team. The same went for the band and other special programs.

"The only one I ever saw close in Oakland was a high school in Waterford. And it took about four years of trauma."

KEANE NOTES that sharing facilities is not a new concept. He points out that Plymouth in Wayne County already buys warehousing space from Livonia, and that Oak Park, Ferndale and Berkley run a joint program for the gifted and talented at the Clinton Community Center in Oak ing into what she calls "edu-trends" futuristic changes that schools may need to make down the road.

She suggests looking at the sharing of individual duties school boards are saddled with and foresees the possibility of shared high schools or at least shared facilities.

She says that will take some "gutsy" boards. "People tend to protect their own territory and sometimes that gets in the way of what's best for education."

KREINBRING INSISTS that consolidation and shared programs is something neighboring school districts are going to be forced to explore in coming years.

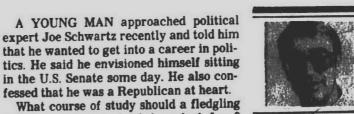

"It would make me an unpopular individual to say that we have neighboring districts that are too small to be in the education business. But maybe the answer is to consolidate."

School boards must look down the road, she says. "Some people call it futuristic; I call it realistic," she adds. "eople have tended to just do what's convenient, but that's not going to work anymore."

Keane said he's not certain where a move to share high schools would come

"I do see some possibility of sharing vocational offerings and the possibility of shared programming," he said. "With enrollments declining, it may be wise to offer a joint class in physics, or a shared program as the cycles move through the grades," said Keane. "But I don't see any great demand for shared high schools.

"I think you'll see all sorts of cooperative programs rather than the merger of high schools. If you're going to merge high schools, you might as well merge the dis-

Bob

"They must have figured that even this ruy Headlee was limited. After all, he was only the head of an insurance company.

"SO TWO years ago when they were faced with putting up a candidate against Carl Levin they went on a talent search and found an ex-astronaut from Michigan in Texas. Well, this Jack Lousma never went to the moon, but they figured he had the right kind of background and TV appearance to attract voters. He was blond and blue-eyed and tall and all that and Carl Levin was balding and sort of rumpled looking.

"But, that didn't work out either. Now the party is looking at running a candidate against Don Riegle and they are thinking maybe Lousma can beat Riegle, even though he couldn't beat Levin. After all, he is still an ex-astronaut and he could take acting lessons so he can read the lines better on TV.

"But there is also the possiblity that Pete Dawkins might be a good candidate. Somone figured out that he was raised in Michigan before he went to West Point and became a football star and Rhodes scholar at Oxford and he even came back to Michigan for a visit a few times in the last 25 years.

"HE'S A retired general now and he could be the one, figuring that the only thing better than an ex-astronaut is an ex-general, ex-football player, ex-Rhodes

"You see this is the trend. People who get their names in athletics or entertainment, something like that: Look at Ronald Reagan — ex-actor who's great in front of a camera. Reagan got his start because of George Murphy, ex-actor who became California senator. How about Bill Bradley, the ex-Nick star who is now a U.S. Senator, or Jack Kemp, ex-quarterback who could be president?

"OF COURSE, sometimes political people make good candidates, but it's not as likely. The Republican big-wigs see a chance to make some gains with Bill Lucas, the Wayne County executive. His case is somewhat different, though, in that he was chosen because he might help the party draw all the black votes they've been missing. He's also good on TV, even though he wasn't an actor.

"If you really want to be successful in state politics, think about being a bigtime athlete, an entertainer, like a movie or TV star, or a minority who makes good, maybe in the military.

"And, one other thing. Try to visit Michigan once in a while while you're making a name for yourself."

VETERANS PROGRAM EXTENDED

Area Vietnam era and disabled veterans should be aware of recent changes affecting the Veterans Readjustment Appointments (VRA) program. VRA is a federal hiring program providing special, non-competitive hiring of these veterans. Originally scheduled to expire Sept. 30, 1984, the program has been extended through Sept. 30, 1986, through passage of the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act (PL 98-543). It is not expected that the VRA program will be extended beyond that

In addition to extending the program, PL 98-543 raised the entry grade level maximum from GS/WG-7 to GS/ WG-9 and also provided limited appeal rights during the first year of appointment. A Vietnam era or disabled veteran who has completed no more than 14 years of education may qualify for a VRA. (This restriction may be waived for disabled veterans). For further information, interested veterans may call the logal American Legion hotline To the editor: at 453-9494 and leave a message regarding information desired.

UICIDE IS a cry for help many kids are in need of help," said Bill Steele of the Suicide Prevention Center of Wayne County.

'Suicide is definitely preventable, but it's important to take immediate action," Steele added.

Steele recently gave that urgent message to 50 local school counselors and guidance officials who attended a workshop on preventing the rising number of teen suicides and attempted suicides

The workshop was sponsored by the Northwestern Guidance Clinic of Garden City in response to an increase of referrals of teens who had threatened or attempted suicide. The clinic is a mental health agency serving chil-

SUICIDE IS a "scary issue" for both adolescents and adults, said James Morche, a staff psychologist at Northwestern Guidance Clinic. The workshop was designed to help officials recognize and deal with potentially suicidal behavior.

"This is a very serious problem and growing in proportions," Morche said. 'It needs to be talked about."

Steele, clinical supervisor of the Suicide Prevention Center's 24-hour telephone hot line and author of "Preventing Teen-age Suicide," quoted statistics showing 6,500 annual suicide deaths among American youth ages 19 and under. Only automobile accidents claim more lives among

According to Steele, many accident deaths may be hidden suicides because of a high correlation with alcohol and drugs - risk factors for suicide as well.

The accident-death link may push the number of actual teen suicides to a much higher number, Steele said. In addition, the numbers may be lowred because death certificates some-

"For every completion (death) there are 30 to 50 attempts," Steele

COUNSELORS CAME from Livonia, Redford, Wayne-Westland, Garden City, Northville, Plymouth-Canton and Dearborn. Several knew firsthand of a teen who took his or her own life. Most knew of youths who had attempted suicide.

"We want to get to the facts quickone counselor said. "We don't have the luxury (of a lot of time)."

Counselors say recent TV movies have helped focus attention on teen suicide. A 16-year-old Livonia Franklin High School girl committed suicide last December. Suicides or suicide attempts have a shocking effect.

"I think it's very sad that kids in our society are hurting themselves in so many ways," Steele said in an in-terview. "Suicide has a brutal effect on the family. The family experiences a tremendous amount of guilt. It stays for a long, long time."

Currently, around 10 youths per month are referred to Northwestern Guidance for help with possibly suicidal behavior, Morche said. Most referrals come from schools and hospi-

"That number is up about double from last year," Morche said.

SOME WARNING signs of potentially suicidal behavior among adolescents include: drinking or taking drugs, boredom and a decline in school grades, change in eating or sleeping habits, daydreaming, threats or talk of suicide, personality change, absenteeism from school, feelings of isolation and helplessness, and the giving away of personal belongings. Often, a suicidal teen exhibits an-

"All these clues are indicative of sucide - maybe yes, maybe no," Steele said. "But certainly, that something is wrong." Many suicidal teens are intelligent, active, high-achieving, popular people who "seem to be doing OK," Steele

Why do they feel so hopeless? Steele cited many factors, including extreme pressure to win high grades and enter college. Other reasons may include fear of failure, pessimism about their own future, the threat of nuclear war, a sense of loss because of divorce or death in the family or a recent break-up with a sweetheart. 'Adolescence is a time of loss," Steele said. "Kids aren't taught how to cope, how to solve problems. Talking really helps." ALTHOUGH A single event may appear to trigger the suicide or attempt, often a series of losses or fears may have occurred months or years previously. Statistics show more females attempt suicide, while males are more likely to complete the act. A person who appears to be less depressed may still be suicidal, Steele said.

> UICIDE IS a final statement to the world.

When a teen-ager take his life, he could be saying: "I was lonely. I felt isolated. There was too much pressure on me to achieve beyond my abilities. My parents and I don't really communicate. No one cares for me.

Sad comments like these from area students are heard in increasing numbers by school counselors, who are the first line of defense against teen

The counselors of Livonia, Clarenceville, Wayne-Westland, Garden City, South Redford and Redford Union school districts all respond in a similar way when a student gives hints or make actual threats about

They take it very seriously. They move quickly, bending every effort to see that the student receives immediate attention from a professional that very day if possible.

The counselors usually hear about troubled youngsters from the people who see them every day at school. A teacher may pick up a signal from a written assignment. Fellow students may notice a wide change in behav-

Most counselors check back later on to see how treatment is going. Counselors have another role if a student takes his life. Richard Morrison, counselor at Thurston High School, said that such a tragedy is devastating to the student body. The kids associated with the person are affected deeply."

"The kids do suffer about this." commented Garden City High School counselor Margaret Pheney. "Young people are very sensitive, very caring and loving toward each other. They can't absorb loss easily. We help them understand it was not their fault."

In several cases, counselors have arranged for friends of the deceased to talk to a professional.

Morrison remembered that several years ago after two suicides of Thurston students, help was brought in. "The kids most affected by the deaths met in a group setting with a social worker, psychiatrist and psychologist," he said. "I think the students found it very helpful."

GENERALLY THE counselors favor more education on the subject for themselves, students, parents and school staff

Recently Franklin counselors and administrators met to review school policy on suicide and to discuss ways to identify a possible victim. Several counselors from area districts attended the recent in-service conference on suicide sponsored by the Northwest Guidance Clinic. (See related story elsewhere on this page.)

'I can't think of anything more vital in terms of suicide prevention than communication will parents. Many parents think they are communicating. But what I meen is deal with feelings of their child in a respectful. sensitive way."

Churchill psychologist

The number of suicide threats continues to rise, pointed out Churchill High School counselor Bob Marks, who nevertheless does not consider it "an epidemic."

"I've had only two or three students make suicide threats in the last few years, said Denis Ringle, who counsels Clarenceville High School students. "A lot of things seemed to be coming at them at once. They were depressed.'

John Wood, Churchill's psychologist, noted that suicides in the 15-24 age group in this country have increased 300 percent in the last 20

"Increasingly we're getting more suicide threats and actual suicides in younger kids, those 12-14," he ex-

Wood has had personal experience with suicide in the death of his 19year-old son.

Jim McIlvain, counselor at Stevenson Junior High School in Westland, said there had been no suicides this year among the 12-14-year-old population of his school. "But there have been more threats this year than any other," he added.

WHAT'S GOING ON? What's happening in their world to make young people decide to end their life?

It may have to do with the era in which they live. Parents in the '60s and '70s had to be satisfied if the children didn't drop out (of high school) and turn on (with drugs). But it looks as though the '80s are going to be an achievement decade, with parents expecting much more from their chil-

It is also a single parent decade with 62 percent of children living in a single parent home. Both parents work, so children find themselves alone more, their friends become their family.

Then, too, adolescence has always been a difficult time what with physical changes, peer pressures and broken romances. It is tough enough to be a teen-ager without the new outside baggage.

"I see so much emphasis on kids making A's,"said junior high counselor Jim McIlvain. "That alone is an unrealistic goal. Lots of kids are average and can't achieve the high expectations of their parents. Not everyone can be a doctor or a lawyer. There is nothing wrong with average work.'

"When they can't do what their parents want," he continued, "the students get discouraged and withdraw. Then we tend to hear suicide threats.'

WOOD DECLARED: "I can't think of anything more vital in terms of suicide prevention than communication with parents. Many parents think they are communicating. But what I mean is dealing with feelings of their child in a respectful, sensitive way.

"Many times parents are afraid of feelings, afraid to hear what their children are feeling. So they cut them off in various ways.

Listening is an important skill for parents to develop, emphasized Marks. "A feeling of isolation is characterstic of a suicidal student. When a parent or teacher, friend or counselor breaks this isolation, the process of healing begins."

Wood has had a wide range of responses from parents who were informed their child was suicidal.

"Some were angry, some disinterested and some unbelleving," he said. There were those who minimized it. There were also those who were very grateful (for help) and ready to get involved." Dr. Ruth Daniels-Kingsbury, psychologist and consultant with the Wayne-Westland school district, wishes parents would realize that their teen-agers go through difficult times. "They should ask routinely how things are going and how they feel about their friends," she stated. "Kids are too important not to get the help they need. The most important thing for parents to do is to let their children know they care about them, that they are important to them."

Because part of the counselor's role is helping students deal with problems, 50 percent of their college preparation should be in psychology, in the opinion of Daniels-Kingsbury. She also thinks that clerks should be doing such routine tasks as making school attendance checks so that counselors can spend more time observing and dealing with student behavior.

ED HAMEL, COUNSELOR at Wayne Memorial High School, observed that it is important not to cast counselors in the role of disciplinarians "so students will feel free to come

He added that it often the job of the counselor to break through the don'tbother-me, it's-none-of-your-business attitude of the suicidal student and establish a caring relationship.

"The self-concept of adolescents troubles them constantly," he said. "They lack confidence. If someone says something mean to them, it is terribly upsetting. They go through a lot of crises, whether real or imagined. To them, it is critical. Everything is life or death.'

The counselors also had some advice for students to follow:

• Be aware of signs. If someone speaks of committing suicide, take it seriously. Don't ignore or challenge

"A lot of times people seem to be doing very well after a series of rough times," Steele said. "That is the most vulnerable time because if something happens they may say, 'It's hopeless' (and commit suicide).

A teen's willingness to talk varies, said Denise Collins-Robison, a Northwestern Guidance counselor.

"Some kids want to spill everything," she said. "Others are angry and obstinate."

COUNSELORS EXPRESSED concern about the "contagion" factor, in which other troubled adolescents see suicide as the answer to their problems as well.

'It (suicide) is an acceptable deviant behavior by kids, simply because they are seeing it as their only option," Steele said.

Suicidal teens may feel they are going crazy or are out of control.

'It isn't so much they want to die," Steele said. "They want to stop feeling (bad). Ambivalence is constantly

As an example of ambivalence, a teen most commonly attempts suicide between 3 p.m. and midnight, in his or her own home, Steele said. During this time, the act is more likely to be discovered and stopped.

Don't laugh off talk of suicide, Steele advised. Don't mouth platitudes such as, "You'll get better." Don't minimize the teen's agony or avoid discussing the issue.

BE DIRECT, Steele said. Try to get the teen to talk about the feelings. Empathize. Persist, even though the youth may deny suicidal thoughts.

"It's a myth that if you ask (about suicide) you'll put ideas into their heads," Steele said. "You cannot tell by behavior alone. You have to ask."

Canton's loss is Livonia's gain

It has long been the joyful task of this column to keep you advised of who is doing what . . where.

The writers of this column must care about you, and want to share everybody's good news with everyone else. They must truly enjoy spreading good news; they must work tirelessly to get everyone excited about the good things in life, particularly in Canton. Well, as the song goes, "Nobody does it better" than my predecessor, Kathy Freece

I have tried to keep you up to date about what was happening to Kathy since she left Canton Chatter to take on new challenges. And now it is time to pass on to you the latest and perhaps even the greatest report yet. Good for Kathy, sad for us, lucky for Livonia!

You guessed it. Kathy is or has moved to Livonia.

As many of you may remember, Kathy was married to Jay Healey not too long ago. And as life will have it, the children, Krista and Steven, keep getting older and larger, then you add a new husband. What you then need is to pack it up and get on with it in Livonia

SO THAT IS where they are now, not that far away, but they are out of our

As I sat talking with Kathy's friends, we were trying to recall some of the things she was involved in. Our biggest problem was sorting out which came first. To really understand what we are losing, one need recall only what Kathy wrote about:

WHEN WE WORK, we work hard. When we play, we enjoy it.

This could be seen in every line she wrote. Kathy had faith in our community, she enjoyed it, and always managed to find something to keep herself, her children, and even us, busy.

Kathy would encourage you to get your child involved with the summer book club at the library. At the same time, she would tell you all the exciting details of the most recent bash, be it neighbors getting together to surprise somebody, a pet project of one of her clubs or organizations, or the homecoming of a child, parent, friend, or otherwise related person.

Whatever caused Cantonites to celebrate, Kathy loved it. She truly enjoyed spreading the news to anyone who chose to read this column.

Recently Kathy's neighbors gathered for a sad-to-see-you-going-away party. They certainly will miss her. Who is going to start all the fun? You see, you and I are losing a bit of sunshine, her

Everyone brought a dish to pass and then they talked, laughed, and talked, played some invigorating volleyball and presented Kathy and Jay with a beautiful large oval oak framed mirror for their new home.

SO, KATHY, this is from the Newcomers, remembering the charity auctions where you put in so much work and fun, from the many friends you made there. From those who remember that you organized the local babysitting co-op; from the many parishioners of St. John Neumann, especially the cook-book committee, which you chaired, and the many friends you made there.

And we will remember your TV program, "Single Touch." Originally started through Denny Campbell on his channel Metro 13, it later expanded through Omnicom when you changed the format to include a co-host, J.P. McCarthy. J.P. is still on the job since you quit because you aren't single anymore. That program, which is now expanded into 12 cable markets, has touched and encouraged so many singles. Some of them needed a push back into the flow of life; some of them were just open to new opportunities and found many within that program.

Because you never ran out of good things to say about everything and everyone, because next to our supervisor, Jame Poole, there is no one who believes in Canton the way you do, and because you always knew just when to call me and give me a word of encouragement in my writing career, for these and for so many reasons I don't have the time or space to mention, we wish you the best.

Another neighbor is providing a picnic on the Fourth, and if you get enough neighbors together you can work it to one meal the whole weekend.

So that about does it, the parade, the hot air balloons, the chicken, the friends, the fun the Happy Birthday Party.

Teen suicide threats rise

• Tell a counselor about them even if you believe your friendship with the student might suffer. He will probably be relieved.

 Don't carry the burden yourself of suicidal plans of a student. It might be tragic.

• If a student is seen with a weapon, inform a counselor or school administrators.

· Avoid alcohol and drugs. (According to counselor Bob Marks, half the young people who commit suicide have been involved with these substanc-

• Don't ridicule or humiliate a fellow student, especially one who is already depressed.

· Don't forget that help is as close as a counselor's office or call to a crisis hotline.

vacation bible school

ST. PAUL PRESBYTERIAN

St. Paul Presbyterian in Livonia will have its vacation church school from Monday through Friday, July 8-12. The school is for children ages 3 through those who have completed first grade. The theme is "Through the Christian Year." The church will have a summer camp from Sunday through Saturday, July 21-27, at Camp Westminster on Higgins Lake. The camp is for children who have completed second grade through those who have completed eighth grade. They will be studying "God's love throughout the world."

• GARDEN CITY PRESBYTERIAN

Garden City Presbyterian Church, 1841 Middlebelt, will have an outdoor marketplace of Bible times from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, July 9-11. At shops set up under tents, students will learn how to make bread, candy, baskets, bricks and other items. The event is for children ages 4 through those in sixth grade. Children should bring a sack lunch. For more information, call the church office at

• FIRST PRESBYTERIAN/OUR LADY OF GOOD COUNSEL

"Marketplace 29 A.D.," a vacation Bible school co-sponsored by First Presbyterian Church, Plymouth and Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church, will be held July 22-24 on the ground of First Presbyterian, 701 Church Street, Plymouth from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for children in grades 1-6 and 9:30 a.m. to noon for preschoolers ages 4 and 5.

Registration is $ per child, or a maximum of $10 per family. "Market-place" is a hands-on experience which recreates daily life in Bible times. For more information, call 453-6464 or 453-

Fr. Caln honored at anniversary

The late Father Thomas J. Cain, pastor of St. Maurice Catholic Church, Livonia, from 1960 until his death last Octo-ber, was honored by the parish during the church's 25th anniversary observance last week. A plaque in bronze (shown at the left) bearing his likeness was installed in the vestibule of the church. Currently serving as pastor is the Rev. John Malerie (right). A Mass in celebration of the anniversary Sunday was followed by a reception in the church hall.

Kid exchange could promote peace

Many people the world over are fa-miliar with the work of Jacques Cous-

The work he has done in the depths of the ocean has been seen on many a television screen and described in a variety of languages. His contributions are as informative as they are enter-

French frogman Cousteau continues to show his interest and concern for the environment and those who live in it.

Standing recently on the banks of the Potomac in Washington, D.C., he made a proposal to the governments of the world. He asked that each government set aside 1 percent of its military budget for a children exchange program.

By his suggestion, the program would be a one-year foreign exchange program for all 7- and 8-year-olds. This, he went on to say, might prevent future wars supposedly because today's youngsters in that age group with such an experience would be less likely to be interested in building machines of destruction tomorrow.

On a few counts this proposal may appear bizarre. Parents would not stand for it. The administration and logistics would appear overwhelming.

moral perspectives

Rev. Robert Schaden

And the cost effectiveness would take sist on building new bombs — as if last too many years to assess.

BUT ONE DOES wonder if maybe this expert of the deep has not zeroed in on the depth of the problem.

As it is, children are taught much more about international mistrust than about sisterhood, brotherhood and living together. Video games as well as television programs do a very effective job of portraying a kind of mistrust that is equated with national security.

There is a big dollar in the toy business for those who supply military toys both conventional and nuclear.

Perhaps this is the problem at its deepest level: Although we talk peace, we teach war.

We speak of building peace, but in-year's model was not horrible enough! We speak of forming children with a respect for the value of life, but seem to prefer a curriculum which at times smacks of a kind of twisted national-

It is obvious that war games, be they for keeps or child's play, hold the possibility of a quicker dollar more any program aimed at understanding. Whether the issue be plastic models of GI Joe with tanks that run on AA Duracels or MX missiles with enough punch to blow up every kid who has ever played any game, the dollar bill continues to hold greater importance

PARENTS WOULD HAVE reason to be upset if they were forced to have their children go half-way around the world for a year.

But perhaps such an experience may prove to be far less damaging than what we allow these same kids to be taught seven days a week in one way or

Maybe we write it off as beyond our control. That, my friends, is called slavery, and isn't it ironic that the whole mess we have gotten ourselves into has been sold in the name of preserving freedom. It is also true that the administration of any children exchange program would be astronomical. Somehow the administration of deadliness has never been reason enough to cut back even when toasters do cost more in the military than at K mart.

As for the cost effectiveness, it is true that only a long period of time could tell.

But those who learn the value of living know that cost effectiveness can not always be measured in dollars or rubles or any other artificiality that has been given the power to run a world whether parents like it or not.

Tire company founder's home is now in village

YOU DON'T often see these famous people together, especially on the porch of a 19th century farmhouse that is surrounded by a picket fence.

People in T-shirts and caps, with cameras ready, leaned over that white picket fence, or sat on the grass around the Firestone Farm, as former president Gerald Ford stepped to the microphone last weekend.

rubber tires. The Firestone Farm opened as a permanent part of Greenfield Village in Dearborn on June 27.

Harold Skramstad, president of Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, had already started the dedication speeches.

William Clay Ford, chairman of the museum and village, and husband of Martha Parke Firestone, had presented memberships in the Edison Institute to Harvey's two sons, Raymond and Leonard Firestone. Then it was Gerry Ford's turn, as speaker of the day, to tie all this official activity together.

It was Raymond and Leonard Firestone, both in their late 70s, who donated the farm and the money needed to restore and move it to Greenfield Village, which was founded by Harvey Firestone's close friend, Henry Ford, in honor of their mutual friend and idol, Thomas Edison.

HARVEY FIRESTONE was selling carriages for the Columbus Buggy Co. in Detroit when Henry Ford bought a set of tires for his mental gasoline huggy in the mid-1890s

Ten years later, after Firestone had founded The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. in Akron, Ohio, and Ford had started the Ford Motor Co. in Detroit, they met again.

Ford awarded Firestone a contract for 2,000 sets of tires and began a friendship that lasted a lifetime. They were both young entrepreneurs, intrigued by the inventiveness of the much-older Thomas Edison.

If you have ever visited Henry Ford Museum, you may have seen the elaborate camping equipment the three men used on their annual camping expeditions in the late 'teens and early 1920s. Their camping guests included presidents Warren Harding and Calvin Coolidge.

EACH OF the three industrialists was named a Pioneer of American Industry at a New York dinner in 1931: Firestone for rubber, Ford for automobiles and Edison for invention. The three met regularly until Edison died in 1931; Firdstone and Ford were fast friends until Harvey died in 1938.

Moving the Firestone Farm to Greenfield Village was a two-year project. The farmhouse was dismantled, every brick and board numbered, and the building reassembled on seven acres of the Village grounds. The project required that several existing buildings be moved to give the Firestone Farm its prominent place close to the Village entrance.

The farm and outbuildings are not just for touring. They will be run as a working farm of the 1880s, with chores done on the day of the week and during the season when they would have been done in the late-19th century.

THE FARM was built in 1828 by Harvey Firestone's greatgrandfather. Harvey was born in the house in 1868 and spent his

Visitors who peer into the living room, kitchen or upstairs bedrooms can be heard to say "there's Aunt Marion's chair" or "My mother had a quilt like that!"

An interpretive staff which represents the age groups that would have been present on a 19th century farm will operate the farmhouse, fields and outbuildings on a day-to-day basis.

Stephen N. Eastman, who spent 18 months with Norlands Living History Center in Livermore, Maine, and lives in a farmhouse built by his great-grandfather more than 100 years ago, is the chief farmer and the head of the interpretive staff.

Al Sebastion of Livonia might be working in the field with Eastman or chatting in the kitchen with Elizabeth Houserman or Jennie Brandolino as the roast pork is being lifted out of the oven.

Ellyn Cameron Levack of Detroit might be sitting in the corner shelling peas, or washing the oven pans in a pail of water on the back porch.

For further information on the Firestone Farm or any of the other exhibits or events at Greenfield Village, contact the Village at 271-1620.

Visitors to Greenfield Village lined up to be among the first to see the farm home of Harvey Firestone, founder of the Firestone tire company. It was built in 1828 by Firestone's greatgrandfather. Harvey was born in the house in 1868 and spent his childhood there. The farm, which includes a horse and carriage, will be run as a working farm of the 1880s.

Jack Jones to a not-very-romantic vein ing. created by comedienne Maureen Murphy at Friday night's Meadow Brook Music Festival concert.

The pop series at Baldwin Pavilion on the Oakland University campus near Rochester featured Jones, singer of the "Love Boat" theme song, and Murphy, a "Tonight Show" standup comic. Murphy's kind of comedy was a rather dubious prelude to Jones' intensely romantic mood for the second half of the Backed by his 17-piece orchestra, Jones sang in a voice that has a wide range of style, moods and sound. He can be soft, loud, velvety, guttural, trumpetlike, raspy, clear, easy and

"What Are You Doing for the Rest of Your Life" was highly romantic and slow but ended with a jazzy sound. "When the Moment Arose" ended in almost a rocklike beat. "The Race Is On" brought the large-capacity crowd to clapping and foot stomping.

JONES' SONGS were enhanced by the extremely talented planist Dan Kelly, who always provided Jones with a lyrical accompaniment and conducted the orchestra at the same time. He shares a large part of the success of Jones' arrangements.

Only once did Jones depart from his love-song theme, to sing the hit song from "A Little Night Music," "Send in the Clowns." The melody was beautiful, but the lyrics belonged to the first half of the show with Maureen Murphy's

With this visual image, she spit out 45 minutes worth of monologue of unprintable jokes, all without using a foul word in the English language.

Nothing escaped Murphy's satirical wit: commercialism, women's rights, male chauvinism, social mores, religion, the fitness craze, politics, and dating, sex and marriage.

Hmm. Why does this movie remind one so much of "Support Your Local Sheriff" (1960)? Undoubtedly because both star James Garner, Jack Elam, Harry Morgan and Henry Jones, they're both directed by Burt Kennedy and both are western spoofs. Other than that, and the fact that they're both pretty funny, there's no connection.

Growing pains beset WLAA

M WORRIED about the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Observerland's premier league is experiencing some growing pains (from 10 to 12 teams) and I'm not confident that the area athletic directors are dealing well with them.

Case in point: The ADs sat down as a unit last month and devised a basketball schedule that included 17 league dates - the final date being a crossover title game between the two divisions. The first-place team in the Lakes vs. the firstplace team in the Western and on down the line.

The plan, which is supposed to be in place a minimum of two seasons, calls for each team to play intra-divisional rivals twice and crossover

What's wrong with that? A simpler question would be what's right about

FIRST OF ALL, it gives teams all of three nonleague dates on their schedules. The state allows but 20 regular-season scheduling dates for basketball.

Second, the ADs' plan eliminates the Western Lakes post-season tournament. This is the part

The tournament was special. It provided a fitting climax to the season. It gave incentive to the teams that had finished second, third and fourth. With the tournament, every game wasn't do or die, as it will be for teams under the new plan. Coaches could use the first 10 games of the year to juggle lineups and look at every player on the squad under game conditions.

Without a tournament, only the first-place team in each division has a chance at winning the conference. If you lose three or four games early in the season, forget it. Start thinking about the

Think about what might happen under this plan next fall in the girls' season. In the Lakes Division you'll have John Glenn, North Farmington, Livonia Stevenson and Plymouth Salem - four perennial powers — duelling for first place. The Western Division, most likely, won't be near as Conceivably, then, you could have the best four teams in the entire conference in one division. You could have a 14-2 team playing an 8-8 team for the conference title, while teams with records of 12-4, 11-5 and 10-6 are playing for second, third and fourth place. WORSE, YOU could have a situation where the division champ is decided by a coin toss. Say Salem and Glenn tie in the Lakes. Each has 13-3 overall records and 9-1 division records. They split the two games against each other. After 16 ough games, the division champ, and in effect the WLAA champ, could be decided by a coin toss "No, no, no," said Walled Lake AD John Fundukian, an argumentative but not altogether unpleasant man. Call him feisty. "You have three tie-breakers. The division record, the overall record and head-to-head competition. Then, we gave the coaches a fourth option to come up with something other than a coin toss if they wanted

What other option is there? The one the coaches would want, a playoff, is impossible. The only other option would be to add up total points. Then coaches are in a position where they have to bury opponents every game. That would keep them from substituting during lopsided games.

No, the real solution to this dilemma is to have a post-season tournament. Think of how terrific an eight-team (top four teams in each division) tournament could be with the type of teams we have out here. Within a couple of years, the WLAA tournament could be on a level with the PSL tourney and the Catholic League tourney.

BUT THE ADS seem dead against the tournament. Apparently, many of the ADs didn't like the old WLAA tourney.

"How are you going to set it up?" Fundukian asked.

Like this. You don't need 17 league dates. You play everybody in the conference one time. That's 11 games. The top four teams in each division will qualify for a three-game tourney. That puts teams at 14 games and gives them the option of six non-league games.

"What do you do with the bottom two teams in each division?"

Same as we did under the old set-up. Let them play a round-robin mini-tourney. It would be a nice, competitive way to close out their league schedule. More attractive than having the battle of the cellar-dwellars, as would be the case under the new plan.

"We were always confused (in the old tourney) as to who played who and where after the first round," Fundukian charged.

It's really not that tough. One division is selected as the host division, like the WLAA does in football, and alternate it every year. The firstplace team plays the fourth, the second plays the third. The winners of the two 1-4 games play the winners of the two 2-3 games in the second round. If the host side team wins, it remains the host. If not, the team with the best conference record host in second round games.

A NICE touch for the title game would be to either have it at Schoolcraft College, or move it around to a different gym within the conference

Why do the ADs prefer their new system to the

"Because it's much simpler," said Fundukian. Simpler? Perhaps. But it sure as hell isn't

Junior crisis: tennis burnout

By Tom Panzenhagen staff writer

"Tennis is a lifetime game," the United States Tennis Association (USTA) spokeswoman said.

"But pressure on junior players can be devastating; they can be damaged and turn away from the game. We're not too positive about that.

Tricia Keeler's comments came in response to an International Tennis Federation (ITF) committee proposal to restrict the number of professional tournaments in which 14- and 15-yearolds may compete. The ITF plan also would ban players 13 and younger from professional competition.

The sanctions, proposed last week, primarily would affect girls because few boys under 16 are capable of playing professional tennis, Keeler said. The sanctions could take effect Jan. 1.

"There's been a lot of concern about young tennis players who are coaxed into turning pro at an early age, when their bodies and minds are not mature enough for competitive struggles on the pro tour," Keeler said.

TRACY AUSTIN and Andrea Jaeger often are cited as examples of teen-age tennis players who burned out or quit due to injuries before their 20th birth-

According to Diane Dyla, who has served as an official on the USTA juniors tour, "I've seen too many girls go down the tubes like Austin and Jaeger.

"I don't feel because a player is physically ready (to play professionally) that she is mentally ready to take that type of competition. It injures them later," said Dyla of Bloomfield

Carole Frazier, whose daughter, Amy, 12, was ranked No. 1 nationally in girls 12-and-under last year, said she doesn't like the burnout label, especially when applied to Jaeger.

'Anyone who makes as much money as Andrea Jaeger made in her career or achieved as many goals or got the ranking in the world that she had maybe has the right to call her a burnout.

Anyone else should keep their mouth closed.

"Jaeger achieved more than most people achieve in their lifetime . she was among the top three in the world, she made millions — and people have the gall to call her a burnout because she decided to leave tennis and go to college."

But young players are susceptible to burnout, conceded Frazier of Roches- hit fessional tournaments to burn out. If a arship." kid loves tennis, he's going to play no matter what it takes. You're not going to stop him by taking away tournaments," she said.

FRAZIER SAID her daughter already has played one pro tournament but didn't win any money. "She has no aspirations to turn pro right now but getting the experience (of playing in pro tournaments) is super for her," she

Frazier added that Amy, at 5-feet-8, is one of the taller, stronger players in any tournament in which she plays. Those proposing sanctions on younger players "don't look at that," she said. 'A lot depends on what the body is like, what you do for training the body.'

Don Brown, pro at the Cranbrook Tennis Club, said injuries and burnout can be problems.

"Girls may have the physical development to match them with women, but the question is whether they have the mental attitude at that age.

"Once you step into that big arena, there's a lot of pressure," he said.

And Brown said injuries also may result from too much tennis at too early an age. "A number of younger players have lower back problems, and this goes back to Tracy Austin," he said.

"A lot of people say that the only way for a kid to start playing tennis is to use the two-handed backhand (as Austin did), but this puts a lot of stress on the lower back, especially when you drill four or five hours a day.

CARRIE CUNNINGHAM of Livonia was ranked fifth nationally in girls 12and-under last year. She said she has had her share of injuries.

"I've had a lot of injuries, and one was a pulled muscle in my lower back," said Carrie, now 13. "I also had a major problem with my shoulder, and I've had to do a lot of strengthening ex-

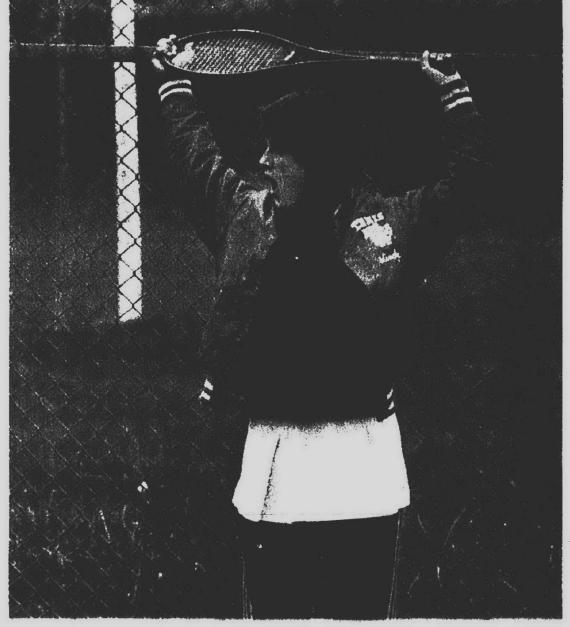

Hot baths and physical therapy also have been part of her training regimen, which included two or three hours of practice daily during the school year and three to five hours of daily practice this summer.

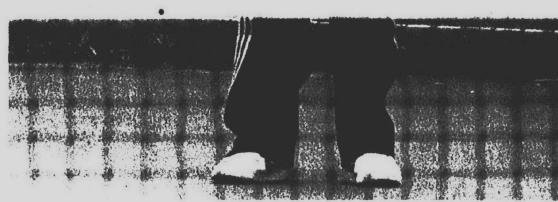

Carrie said she doesn't support restrictions on younger players, but said "there'd definitely be more pressure (in pro tournamentss) because you don't have time to make up for your losses." She said she probably wouldn't consider turning pro before age 18. Her mother, Carol Tenerowicz, said, We've put things pretty well in perspective for ourselves and Carrie. School is very important to us, and Car-

6 runs, 0 hits, Krumm wins

Despite throwing a no-hitter, Todd Krumm and his Livonia Adray teammates had to rally for an 8-6 victory over Northville in a bizarre Livonia Collegiate Baseball League (LCBL) game Friday at Ford

Krumm, a sophomore at Michigan State, was the victim of six unearned runs in the second inning thanks to four walks and three errors.

Although Northville capitalized on the mistakes, Krumm was unhittable, striking out 10. He struck out the side in the first inning after walking the Adray had to score three runs in the top of the seventh to pull out the victory.

A walk to Pete Rose, a single by Dave Austin and a wild Northville throw led to two runs. Krumm, who also singled, then scored what proved to be the winning run as Northville pitcher Mark Persall Krumm and Austin each had three hits as Adray pounded out 13 for the night.

LIVONIA ADRAY stayed one game behind first place Walter's, in the loss column, with a 5-3 triumph Sunday over the Angels in a game played at Bentley High School.

Austin and Bill Ulle each collected two hits for the winners, but the key hit of the day was Greg Kuzia's two-run homer in the second inning.

Jim Lasota rapped an RBI single in the third inning and Chris Parsons followed with a two-run single in the sixth to account for all the Angels' runs.

Kevin Harrah, who gave up only one run over the first four innings, was the winning pitcher before giving way to Rick Rosman,, who finished up.

Mark Zlomek went the distance for the Angels, allowing eight hits.

The last-place Angels were beaten Friday by Walter's, 8-2, as Leo Lanigan belted a three-run homer in the first followed by Dave Donigian's tworun shot in the third.

Bob Cox (3-0), the winning pitcher, scattered seven hits and fanned five in going the distance. Lasota's two-run homer accounted for all the Angels'

Bob Copciac was the losing pitcher.

REDFORD LITTLE CAESARS split a doubleheader Sunday at Capitol Park with Northville.

In the opener, Caesars hurler John Rogers fanned 13 in tossing a three-hitter as Redford cruised to a 4-1 triumph. The only run the University of Detroit sophomore allowed was a solo homer to Tom Cotter in the second inning.

Rogers also helped his own cause with a two-run double. Dan Michaels and Mike Betz also added run-scoring singles as Greg Ryba took the loss.

In the nightcap, Northville scored in the bottom of the ninth off Caesars reliever Derron Armstrong to claim a 3-2 victory

Armstrong, in relief of starter Dan Michaels who pitched 81/2 strong innings, walked the first man he faced, Eric Engel, who then scored all the way from first base on a stolen base attempt thanks to a pair of subsequent Redford throwaways on the

Engel singled, stole second and scored on a Redford error in the fifth to force the game into extra

DAVE KIMBALL, a hard-throwing right-hander from Windsor, went the distance for Northville. He fanned seven, walked four and allowed six hits.

Michaels, meanwhile, was heroic in defeat. He fanned 13 and allowed just three hits. He also went two-for-two and had two stolen bases.

Don Taylor collected an RBI single and Betz belted a solo homer in a losing cause.

The loss drops Redford to 14-5 in LCBL play.

Officials battle tennis burnout

Tenerowicz said she doesn't support restrictions because "there'll always be 40 tournaments a year for juniors to enter. A lot of it has to do with parents and whether they rush children into tournaments," she said.

JO ANN ASHARE of Bloomfield Hills does not support the restrictions either. She's the mother of six tennisplaying children, four of whom are involved in the game at the club, high school and college level.

"Young players should be able to compete, and certainly they have the right to compete, even though emotionally it is tough," she said.

"Physically, I don't think playing professionally hurts. They're going to play a lot regardless of whether it's professionally or on the junior circuit, and you have a lot of injuries on the junior circuit too.

"If Austin played college tennis, she might have come down with the back injury anyway," Ashare said. She said competing in junior tennis might be more difficult than turning "In juniors you're competing against the same peers all the time, always trying to be the best of that age so it can be a relief to get out of juniors and play pro or college tennis." Ashare suggested there may be another motive behind the proposed restrictions. "The ladies (on the pro tour)

just don't like the kids taking over," she said

Dyla doubts that Members of the ITF and Women's Tennis Association (WTA), which also backs some form of restrictions, are genuinely concerned with player burnout, she said.

be very careful before doing anything like this. They don't want to bring sanctions they can't uphold," Dyla said.

TENNIS MOTHER Candy Gilles of Plymouth said, "The pro circuit is really grinding - I know that for a fact because my kids are so close to Lisa Bonder.

Bonder, who turned pro at 15, is going strong at 19, although she was defeated at Wimbledon by Martina Navratilova in first-round play last Gilles' daughters are Chris, who plays tennis at the University of Wisconsin, and Wendy, a highly ranked juniors player. Their mother said:

"I think kids should finish high school at least before turning pro. It can be really tough and lonely on the tour with no friends. I know Lisa has had a tough row to hoe, living and working out of a

John Fisher, now with the Franklin Racquet Club, has been called "the driving force behind Lisa Bonder." He began coaching her when she was 5

Yet Fisher said he supports restrictions on younger players. "I see a cou-ple of problems with turning pro too early," he said.

"FIRST - AND this showed up with Jaeger and Austin - you run into the "And as I understand it, they want to injury problem because the pros very careful before doing anything they're up against hit the ball that much harder, and the travel can be rugged.

"Second there's the social problem, being away from friends and social ac-

He added, "You're not talking about limiting that many players. At most you're talking about one or two players in the world who could turn pro, and you're helping them in the long run."

He doesn't doubt, though, that Bonder was ready to turn pro at 15. "She had proven herself in the juniors and had already played a number of road tournaments. And by the time she turned pro, she ranked high enough on the WTA computer list to get into the main draws in tournaments.

"She also had endorsements - a financial base to build upon - so she didn't have to play every week. She could take time off to let injuries heal," Fisher said.

According to Gilles, turning pro at a young age "is not a question of skills but a question of money, because mon-It's a well-known fact that kids turning wants to play."

pro have an awful lot of money behind

Tenerowicz also added, "One reason so many turn pro at an early age is, unless you're from a wealthy family, it's very expensive to compete."

JOCIL ROGUS, pro at the Rochester Hills Racquet Club, agreed. "It's a twofold problem," she said.

"You do get injuries playing against adults who are more fully developed. On the other hand there's the case of Camille Benjamin, a black girl, who was forced to turn pro becuase her parents couldn't afford to finance her ca-

Rogus said it can cost about $20,000 a year to keep a young player on the juniors circuit. She called that "an outrageous amount unless you're from an upper-middle-class family or can earn your way."

Rogus said she supports restrictions on 14- and 15-year-olds but added, "Someone should establish a fund to make certain younger players can afford to compete."

While the sanctions have yet to be formally approved by the ITF or WTA, Rogus and Dyla said they assume the sanctions would be challenged in court.

Dyla added, "By the time the law suit gets to court, they'll probably stop ey brings out skills and opportunities. the restrictions and let anybody in who Livonians, and every year Livonians "bring basketball back" to Scandinavia.

The Livonians in question are eastern European Livonians - Estonians, Latvians and Lithuanians who learned to play basketball from U.S. servicemen during World War II; and the Livonia Cardinals, a team of 13- and 14-year-olds who recently journeyed to Sweden to vie for the Stockholm Basketball Tournament Cup.

The Cardinals, coached by Dearborn High School assistant basketball coach Dennis Nazelli, included only two Livonians. But Nazelli, who's been taking teams to Sweden for six years, always calls them the Livonia Cardinals because of the connection with eastern Europe.

"In essence, we always claim to bring basketball back to Scandinavia from Livonia," he said.

This year the Cardinals also brought basketball to the Soviet Union. They became the first junior team to play in the U.S.S.R. when they took on Spartak, the Soviet junior championship team, June

THE CARDINALS lost, 61-47. They fared better in the Stockholm Cup, advancing to the semifinals before falling to the Taiwan national team. The Cardinals also played two exhibition games against a team of Stockholm all-stars, winning both con-

The Livonians on the nine-man squad were Brad Moulton and Chris Mazelli. Other players came from Dearborn, Detroit, Woodhaven and Lichfield (near Jackson).

Teams from Egypt, Iceland, Israel, the Scandinavian countries and six from the United States -112 in all in four age brackets - also played in the Stockholm tourney.

"The boys I took this year were absolutely phenomenal in terms of behavior, personality and basketball," Nazelli said. "We practiced only six weeks before going over, and that's a short time to get to know each other.'

The team traveled for three weeks at a cost to each player's family of only $450, Nazelli said, thanks to fund-raising efforts and sponsorship by a Dearborn American Legion post.

Chiefs get 'Neu' coach

staff writer

One of Kent Buikema's last acts as principal of Plymouth Canton High School was to select Rob Neu to head up the girls basketball program.

"We are very pleased to get some-body with his enthusiasm and dedication," said Buikema, who will take an administrative role in the school district next year.

Neu is no stranger to Plymouth-Canton basketball. The blond-haired 23-year-old was the starting point guard for Fred Thomann at Plymouth Salem in 1979 and 1980.

After graduation, he coached a year at West Middle School. In 1981-82 he served as Dave VanWagoner's assistant on the Canton boys basketball team. After a year in Arizona, Neu worked with Thomann and Bob Blohm with the Salem boys program.

Last year, Neu was the junior varsity and assistant varsity coach at Detroit Benedictine, compiling a 13-4 record on the JV level.

"I'M GOING to be student-teaching at Canton next year, so I'll be in the building," said Neu who expects to graduate from Eastern Michigan in December. "I'm really excited."

Neu is not at all concerned about his lack of coaching experience in the

"I think when you break it down, it's basically the same game," Neu said. "It's basketball. You still have to get the kids to step out and play. It's the same concepts, same fundemen-

His biggest problem early on will be establishing a summer program for his team. All seven of his returning starters from last year's team will be attending the Hoosier Skills Camp in Indiana "That shows me that they are excited about playing," Neu said of his players. "I like their attitude."

Neu has also been busy trying to line up summer scrimmages and

"I met with the kids this morning (Monday) and they're ready to go. The enthusiasm and desire is there," he said. "And I'll tell you, Phyllis Mulroy did a real nice job with these kids."

Mulroy, along with her husband, John, co-coached the team last year.

THE HIRING of Neu will add some more fuel to the already-hot Canton-Salem rivalry. Both Thomann and Blohm campaigned hard for Neu to get the Canton job.

"They were very instrumental in me getting the job," Neu said. "When the time comes for us to play, it's going to be a lot of fun. The way I see it, we'll be able to help each other with the other teams in the league. But, when it's time to play, we'll

Neu has yet to name his assistant coaches.

So, with the hiring of Tom Niemi (Canton boys basketball) and Neu, all coaching jobs at the Centennial Eduacational Park are filled.

Cut whopping estate tax on business transfer

First of two parts

Recently, someone in our office bitterly complained about the massive estate tax bill his father left him. He was left with no choice but to sell the business his father had built over a life-

Often, upon death, a "forced" sale to raise cash is precisely what happens, since the IRS tries to place a high value on a decedent's stock interest in the

THE BUY-SELL Solution. There is, however, a way to keep the IRS straight when it comes to valuing your interest in a closely held business. This requires a properly drafted buy-sell agreement

A buy-sell agreement is a contract

under which either the corporation or the remaining shareholders are obligated to buy the stock of a deceased. retired or disabled shareholder at a price established by a formula in the

If the corporation is required to buy back the deceased shareholder's stock, we have a stock redemption or "entitypurchase" agreement. If it is the surviving shareholders who are obligated to acquire the stock, the buy-sell agreement is termed a "cross-purchase."

WHEN CROSS-PURCHASE is the only choice. Business owners often select the entity-purchase because they prefer to have the corporation pay the premiums on the insurance policies needed to pay for the agreement. But if you are part owner of an S corporation; the entity-purchase does not make sense. Here is why.

An S corporation does not pay corporate income tax. All of its earnings are taxed to its shareholder whether those earnings are distributed or not.

Since the premiums on an insurance policy used to pay for a buy-sell agreement are not deductible, S corporation shareholders end up using the same after-tax dollars to pay premiums, re-

Laura Facione of Canton has been named public relations coordinator with Kolon, Bittker & Des-gardless of the type of buy-sell agreement they choose.

BUT WHILE there is no difference when it comes to paying premiums, the cross-purchases can't produce a big tax savings if you later decide to sell or liquidate your S corporation.

When you buy the stock of a deceased, retired or disabled shareholder, you get a basis for that stock equal to the price you paid for it. If you subsequently sell the stock or surrender it in a liquidation, your taxable gain will be "less" because of your increased basis.

· However, if you let the corporation buy back stock from a deceased, retired or disabled shareholder, you will not get the benefit of this increased basis, and you will have a bigger capital gain when you sell or liquidate.

Clearly, then, with an S corporation, a cross-purchase buy-sell agreement is really the way to go.

Next week: Benefits of Buy-Sell Agreement.

Flute Players gather for music fun

Sandra Armbruster editor/591-2300

By Mary Klemic staff writer

While the delicate tune of the flute seems to beckon many of its listeners, it exerts an even stronger attraction on

It drew 17 musicians from throughout Michigan to Madonna College in Livonia recently. They traveled to the college from Indiana, New Jersey, Alabama and New York for a one-week flute seminar, presented by the Flute World Co. of Farmington Hills.

Among the teachers at the seminar were Jacqueline Hofto, professor of flute at the Interlochen Arts Academy; Shaul Ben-Meir, Detroit Symphony Orchestra flutist; and Sheryl Cohen, professor of flute at the University of Ala-

"Flutists are a unique bunch of peo-ple," Cohen said. "They go to this type of thing more than any other instrumentalists. They gravitate to workshops. One of the things that they like to do is come together to play in ensembles like this. They love to get together with other flutists and play this kind of music."

PERSONS ATTENDING the seminar ranged in age from 13 to adult. Each paid $150 and submitted a repertoire of selections he would like to play, which was approved by the instructors.

The seminar dealt with various aspects of flute playing, such as perform- octave higher.

ance skills, practice techniques, breathing and posture, career planning and basic repair and maintenance. It ended with a free public recital one afternoon on the campus.

A flute choir was held for an hour or so every morning. In one session, Ben-Meir led the participants through a piece called "Cloud Forms."

AT TIMES, IT seemed the flutists were magicians as well as musicians. Their instruments were like wands that could make the listener think of clouds

"In this kind of music, you can use a little more imagination," Ben-Meir said as he worked with the group on a particular sequence of notes. "This is maybe a puff of wind, so don't start so harsh. Make it a nice crescendo. It's not a storm, it's a little breeze."

Soon after that, Ben-Meir encouraged the group about a tricky passage.

"You can play anything if you play it slowly enough," he said. "You can play the most difficult passage if you play it

"That's the thing about music," Ben-Meir said as the session drew to a close. "Just talking about things is not enough. We just have to drill it until it becomes secure."

Some participants played the alto flute, which is in the key of G. Others played the bass flute, which is one octave lower, or the piccolo, which is one

The flute is an easy to play, versatile instrument that has won wide popularity in recent years.

Jane Lewis of Waterford performs on a bass flute.

THE FLUTE is one of the most popular instruments in the world today, according to Cohen. Such musicians as James Galway, Jean-Pierre Rampal and Paula Robison have encouraged the flute's popularity.

"It's easy to play," Cohen said. "It is one of the most agile instruments. There are many new sounds that a flute

"It's just plain fun to play. Some of the instruments hurt to play. The flute feels good to play. They like to play the music written for the flute. It's easy to play, so the composers made up for that by writing much more difficult music for the flute than for other instruments."

The instrument has a long history.

"In the Baroque period (300 years ago), the flute was as popular as tennis is today," Cohen said. "So much music had been written for the flute. Then the piano was invented, and people found new ways to express themselves. They ignored the flute for a while."

ONE OF THE seminar participants, Rochester resident Sonja Gayles, never ignored the flute, even as she works for a master's degree in chemical engineering. Gayles, who has been playing the instrument for 15 years, also teaches flute playing.

"I wanted to get back in shape, perfect my skills again and be a better teacher," she said. "I just love the way it sounds. "I'm not going to be a virtuoso on the flute, but I can be a decent flute teach-

At the seminar Gayles learned how to develop a good tone.

"How you hold the flute affects the tone, and how your mouth is shaped,"

Dance master finds new home for his art

By Lisa Simon staff writer

When Iacob Lascu emigrated to Detroit 13 years ago, he thought he had left his well-seasoned career behind in Bucharest, the capitol of Romania.

A renowned master, choreographer and artistic director of classical ballet, Lascu never dreamed he might also make a name for himself in the West. Lascu's brother-in-law, a State of Michigan social worker, tried for three years to bring his sister, a classical ballerina, and her husband, Lascu, to his home city.

When he finally succeeded through the efforts of former U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin, Lascu expected to spend his time in Detroit working as a tailor. His father had been a tailor in Transylvania where Lascu was born and Lascu was familiar enough with the trade to be able to find work.

"I came to give my son the opportunity of growing up here," Lascu said. His intention was not to further his career in ballet.

"Everyone was very happy. All three members of the family were bringing home a little bit of money."

WHILE the small family was establishing itself in Detroit, Lascu's brother-in-law wrote a resume for Lascu, outlining his impressive career in Romania.

From the age of 15, Lascu studied classical ballet and character and folklore dance with such Romanian masters as Dumitrescu, Romanofski, and Danofski of the Romanian Opera in Bucharest, and Vasile and Pavelici of the Romanian Theatre for Opera and Ballet of Timisoara, Romania.

Lascu noted that Westerners are more familiar with Russian classical arts and artists than other East European talent.

Lascu's brother-in-law mailed his resume to some 50 dance companies and schools within the metro-Detroit area. Of the three responses he received, Lascu decided to join the Harbinger Dance Company of Oakland Community College Lascu said he was free to leave work and pursue interviews at his leisure because the tailor he was working for was very nice to him. His brother-in-law would attend interviews with him and act as a translator. Lascu's English is still shaky. Lascu eventually left his job with the tailor and began teaching classical bal-let methods for the Harbinger Compa-

At the first performance under his direction, recruiters from the then-combined, University of Detroit/Mar-ygrove College were astounded. They wanted to know more about the ballet master who had instigated such a significant change in the company in only

After this recognition, Lascu was hired part time by the University of Detroit/Marygrove. The following year he was hired full time and presently, he is a tenured professor of dance.

He also teaches at his own school of ballet in Birmingham. (It was previously located in Southfield.)

THE IDEA for running his own ballet school stemmed from Lascu's highly acclaimed direction of the "Nutcracker Suite," a 10-year Christmas time tradition for the City of Detroit and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Lascu explained that in order to produce classical performances like the "Nutcracker Suite" or "Swan Lake," well-trained children dancers are a ne-

Before the Lascu School of Ballet opened, children from different schools throughout the city were recruited for large productions.

"It was very difficult to have a consistent style," Lascu said.

After last year's record 17 performances of the "Nutcracker Suite," Lascu acknowledged that it is the parents who make the greatest sacrifices, not the children. The parents are the ones that have to car pool and organize their children for so many days in a row.

"To be a good dancer, it takes eight years of study and that means every y," Lascu stressed.

Last year, 16 of Lascu's 100 students were accepted to exclusive summer ballet programs including American Ballet Theatre, the New York City Ballet and the San Francisco Ballet. This year, three of those 16 students were accepted for a second time.

At the Birmingham location, there is one large studio and one smaller one. Lascu has divided his students into six different class levels.

"It is ideal like it was in Romania to divide it into eight, but that was an impossibility here," he said.

There are less than 20 people per class as a rule. Isabelle Vilensky, a recent immigrant from Russia, plays piano for all class levels.

LASCU'S teaching philosophy is that "both technique and feeling go together." These two traits are parallel and necessary in classical ballet. In the United States, there is a tendency to perfect technique and do something marvelous exclusively for applause, he

An affinity with music and movement is something Lascu has nurtured from a young age. He was the only member of his family involved in the arts. But, he knows he inherited a musical gift from his father. He remembers watching his father dance and sway to music at weddings.

Lascu was also trained as a classical musician. He knows how to work with conductors and how to read and arrange musical scores, both essential skills for a choreographer and director.
