Keep drugs out of schools McClendon

By Kevin Brown staff writer

Nancy Reagan's Just Say No" approach to drug abuse among the young may be suitable for educating elementary pupils. But state educators must do more to keep drugs from undermining middle and high school education

E.J. McClendon, president of the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education, recently made these points to educators gathered at Lansing's Clarion Hotel for the annual Middle Cities Education Association meet-

A professor of public health at the University of Michigan, McClendon urged the representatives of middlesized school districts to establish policies geared to dealing with kids who abuse drugs, and to provide counseling for kids with emerging substance abuse problems and these returning to the schools from inpatient treat-

McCLENDON a former Wayne County director of school health who in the inid-60s wrote the first guide for teachers dealing with student presented a four-point proposition

· While drug abuse may not origmate in the schools, administrators should shoulder some responsibility for fighting it "Kids doing drugs can't get an effective education." McClendon stressed. And because so ciety invests heavily in the schools, educators should feel justified in assuming this responsibility he added • Educators need to understand kids motives for using drugs, and know what drugs are in vogue McClerdon said he asked the school district representatives if they knew

One hand went up. I asked them if they knew what 'angel dust' was We can't guide them if nobody we don't know

· School boards should set policy geared to the premise that students with alcohol or drug problems shouldn't be allowed to "visit problems on their peers," said McClendon, quoting 1973 state guidelines for dealing with students' substance abuse problems. Telling students to "Just Say No" isn't enough, "when they're saying 'where can I get it,' he said. And warnings of the evils of alcohol often met with laughter, may be more effective if the cumulative effects of drinking are

· With concern about drugs in the schools rising among parents, school administrators should provide better education on drug abuse prevention, and also provide after-care counseling for students with substance abuse problems returning to school.

McCLENDON SAID alcohol-related problems shouldn't be downplayed in relation to drug abuse. with an estimated 11 million to 14 million alcoholics in the United States, compared to an estimated 1 million addicted to drugs

In the Plymouth-Canton schools We're ahead of the game a great deal on this," said McClendon, following a period in the late '70s when the district's two high schools "were drug stores," he said

With the help of the Canton Police Department, the schools then adopted a stiffer policy related to drug use in the schools. If you were caught using or holding a third time, out you go If you're caught selling, out you go: McClendon said

The center recently reopened its obstetric-gynecology unit, which it was forced to close last year when doctors from the University of Michigan withdrew from the hospital in December 1985. Though it lost its ranking as a teaching institution, it bounced back a few months ago by hiring outside private physicians to staff the unit

staff writer

Blanchard Administration officials, responding to Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara's request to salvage the failing "Son of Super Sewer" project, are drafting plans that may offset development costs for participating western Wayne and Oakland county communities.

Talks with high-level state sources were held a few weeks ago when McNamara, the Democratic nominee for Wayne county executive, organized a contingent of County officials to seek state money for the

Today, county sources say a response could be forthcoming within days, putting back on track plans for the $110-million sewer project. Designed for 16 area communities, the project would increase sewage capacity and direct sewage flows to the Detroit Wastewater Treatment

"THE STATE is very anxious to help," said Michael Duggan, a county attorney and spokesman for McNamara.

"I don't think they want economic development in western Wayne County to stop. The state is genuinely convinced that construction will soon stop if this doesn't get ap-

Timing, though, is critical.

Of the 16 communities included in the plan, only four have signed service agreements presented by the Wayne County Department of Public Works. And one major dissentor, Canton Township, has formally withdrawn, stating that its cost-share is

An overriding concern is whether county officials have enough time left to convince the remaining communities to continue in order to take advantage of available U.S. Enviromental Protection Agency funding.

The deadline for applying for the federal money, designed to pay for about 55 percent of the project, is Nov. 1. There appears to be no incen-, tive to build the sewer project without federal support.

Until two years ago, federal offi-cials were committed to paying for

THE DECISION to renege on 20 percent of the cost has angered some local community leaders.

According to Duggan, state officials suggest a flat out appropriation would not be likely, but they may be able to deliver a funding plan that makes up the difference.

"I think we're making some headway," McNamara said on Tuesday. McNamara said the aim was to strike a financial package that could answer the objections of dissenters like Canton Township, and convince them to rejoin the project.

Blanchard aide Greg Morris confirmed talks were under way and the reception "positive."

commissioner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, whose district includes Canton, and staff officers with the county's public services department to meet with state representatives from Blanchard's inner circle and the attorney general's office.

Mack said he found the state's interest encouraging toward developing a rescue mission for the project.

"A red herring." That's how state Treasurer Robert Bowman describes Senate Republican questions about his boss's tuition investment pro-

Bowman, a former Wall Street investment banker, is the chief architect of what Gov. James J. Blanchard calls "BEST" - for bacclaureate education system trust.

Senate Republicans, saying the plan is "hype" without substance, are holding it in Sen. Norm Shinkle's finance committee and publicizing a list of questions they've addressed to Bowman.

"I've answered them," Bowman said in an interview. "It's not my style to publicize my letters to sena-

UNDER BEST, the family of a potential college student would invest a small sum in a state-managed trust fund, where it would earn compound interest.

The state would guarantee the mature fund would pay four years of tuition at a Michigan public college estimated at $20,000 by the time a newborn youngster raches 18.

There are political complications. The House of Representatives last spring gave 89-11 bipartisan support to the BEST bill. (Its sponsor, Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, last month became the father of twins.)

Among House supporters was Rep. Colleen Engler, now the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor. Her husband, Senate Majority Leader John Engler of Mount Pleasant, is now the program's chief critic, calling it "nebulous at best, a deception at worst."

The Senate version was introduced by Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn, and had 26 co-sponsors (out of 38 senators).

Blanchard is making it an issue in his re-election campaign. Shinkle's finance committee hasn't held a public hearing on the bill and probably won't until the Legislature reconvenes Nov. 12, following the election.

Here are the questions (in boldface type) raised by Sens. Shinkle and Engler, followed by Bowman's quoted That's irrelevant to the bill," Bowman said. "It's an important question but irrelevant now.

"The bill requires me to get a ruling from the Internal Revenue Service (before the state sells contracts). IRS often waits 'til they have a bill before ruling. It's a red herring to say we can't move on the bill before the IRS rules."

2. Will the contracts be in violation of federal securities law?

Important but irrelevant to Senate debate, Bowman said. "It's in the bill that we have to have a ruling on transferability of contracts from the Securities Exchange Commission before we offer contracts." The plan contemplates that contracts can't be transferable. For example, it would be unfair and actuarily unsound for a parent to try to transfer a contract from a 4-yearold to an 8-year-old sibling.

3. How many advance tuition con-

A governing board would assure each year that the plan is fiduciarily sound, making adjustments in new contract prices.

"If there's an unfunded liability, it's to be made up by new participants," Bowman said. "Any corrections will be so minor that we don't think they will keep people from getting in.'

He calls the BEST plan better conceived than Social Security, which didn't require annual adjustments in taxes to cover costs. "That's why you and I are paying so much for Social Security today," he

Sewer politics raises big stink

Susan Roslek assistant managing editor

ESTERN WAYNE County communities long have become adjusted to the political maneuverings of county government, particularly the county Department of Public Works and drain commission office. Until recently the state government had removed itself from that nonsense. Last week the Michigan Department of Natural Resources entered the fray of backroom politics.

The latest is a threat from the DNR to fine Canton $10,000 a day for violating the Water Resources Commission Act unless the community agrees to participate in Son of Super Sewer. Actually the threat is not as ominous as it sounds. Canton could pay the $10,000-aday fine for more than four years and still not reach the $17 million cost the state and county want to assess.

True, Canton would pay all that money and not have a sewer at the end of five years. Yet Canton has tried being a "participant" for the past 20 years with Super Sewer and doesn't have a sewer anyhow.

That's one reality the DNR and DPW need to recognize. Western Wayne has been waiting for two decades for Super Sewer and the county and state have been unable to deliver. For two decades the quality of water in western Wayne has been threatened by lack of Super Sewer; now, at the midnight hour, the DNR would fine Canton $10,000 a day and absolve from guilt itself, the county, and '15 other "participating" com-

For two decades, throughout western Wayne combined sanitary/storm systems have existed - to the full knowledge of the state and county - and there has been no outcry from the state that the threat to public health is such that it warrants a $10,000-a-day fine.

The truth is that Canton's refusal to "participate" in Son of Super Sewer does not represent any significant threat to water quality or public health in comparision to the collective harm done by 15 other communities over two decades with combined systems and/or under-capacity sewers. The truth is that the DNR's threat is politically motivated blackmail aimed at forcing "participation" instead of facing reality and dealing logically with the issues.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE of irrational political maneuvering by the DNR is letters of "non-compliance" to 11 alleged "non-participating" communities to force review of their individual sewer systems. More nonsense.

The city of Plymouth, a decade ago, was brow-beaten and maligned by Wayne County DPW when it tried to blackmail the city into participating in Super Sewer. Under such pressure, the city established some 8-10 years ago that it had all the sewer capacity it needed for the future and would not benefit in any way from Super Sewer. By agreement, though, the city signed some sort of statement of need (for the benefit of the federal government) making it a "participant" on paper. In return the county agreed the city would not participate in the cost since it would not reap any benefit.

Now the DNR apparently is suggesting the city of Plymouth might be at or near or closer to capacity and somehow ought to review its position as a "participant." The reality is that the city's population has declined over the past decade. If it was under-capacity a decade ago it clearly remains under-capacity today. The only reason the compliance letter was sent is that the DNR is fishing for a 17th community to share in the cost. What's involved is not need but the politics of finance.

And like other evils, money is at the root of what stinks about the present Son of Super Sewer shenanigans.

Look at the numbers. The project cost is some $110 million of which Canton's "share" as one of 16 "participants" is $17 million, If Canton drops out, the DNR pontificates, the share to the other 15 will increase 17 percent and that wouldn't be fair or equitable.

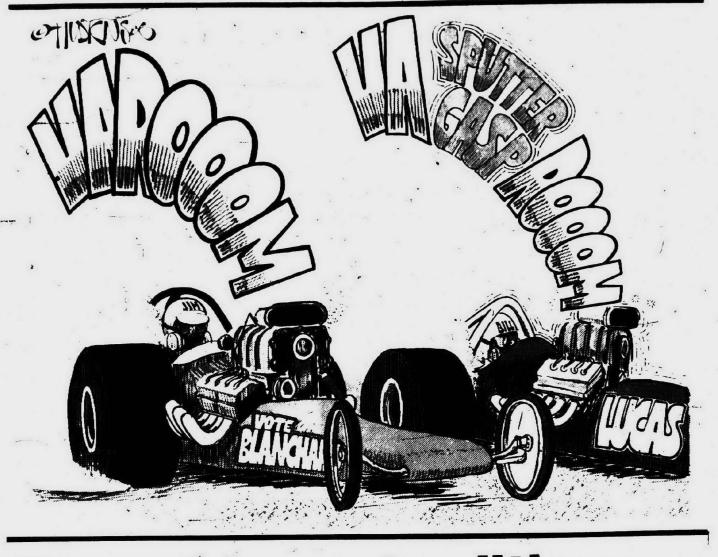

The DNR does not address the equity or fairness of a downstream muncipality paying $17 million to dispose of sewage, part of the volume of which comes from upstream. Yet Novi, one of 16 participants farther upstream, is being assessed much less. Has Novi experienced less development than Canton over the past 10 years? Has Canton somehow contributed that much more to the problem than Novi that it warrants a $17 million assessment.

But the county and state do not want to discuss fairness and equity. Instead both allowed Plymouth and Canton townships to file lawsuits, both failed to work out a compromise during those intervening months, and then at midnight both cock the gun and hold it to the head of "non-participants."

The issue is complex. To insist on participating without realistically looking at the equity of how the costs are assessed is high-handed. And to attemp to drag in municipalities like the city of Plymouth, with no demonstrated need, at the midnight hour is a sham.

Many regionalists argue against Super Sewer or Son of Super Sewer because increasing sewer capacity will foster further development in the western suburbs at the expense of Detroit and its inner city. Maybe the solution the state should accept is for Canton to refuse to participate and let Detroit pay the $10,000-a-day fine. That makes as much sense as last week's posturing.

Given the sordid history of Super Sewer over two decades, being a "participant" almost makes one guilty of perpetuating a myth.

Preserving a tradition

Metropolitan Detroit never was nor is it in any danger of having just one newspaper.

Don't you believe it. Metropolitan Detroit has many, many newspapers - even if you have been led to believe recently that we just have. two and are in danger of having just one if the government doesn't cave in and allow the two metro-papers to operate newspapers. Besides the two metro papers, at least five other daily newspapers exist. In the six county area, 81 weekly and twice-weekly newspapers do business.

NOT EVERY TOWN has such a proud newspaper tradition. But the tradition has survived cause we realize that none of our publications is sacred. We aren't the Holy Grail. Neither is the Detroit News or the Detroit Free Press.

Newspapers exist to serve the public. If the readers and advertisers choose to withhold their support, another newspaper will fill the void.

JOAs, while ostensibly saving a second editorial voice, actually tend to thwart competition and put smaller newspapers out of business. Readers

A national study reveals that the average cost of a line of display advertising costs $11.21 for locally competing newspapers. In cities with JOAs, the cost is $20.20.

And in many of those cities, advertisers are paying more and getting less. Circulation does drop. In Seattle, it's off by 63,000. In Cincinnati, 51,000 fewer readers read the metro dailies.

And there's a reason for that. For the past 20 years or so, as the suburbs have grown, suburban newspapers have grown and prospered. For every daily newspaper that has gone out of business, a suburban publication has taken

Times change, so do communities, so do newspapers — many newspaper. It's a fine tradition. So be it.

Worst tailgaters here

AN EXPERT, as they say at business conferences, is a speaker who's more than 100 miles from home.

Having driven more than 100 miles from home, in all four directions, within the past few years, I guess I qualify.

The scuttlebutt is true. Southeastern Michigan drivers are the worst, the rudest, the most obsessed.

You already knew they were heavyfooted because of those federal studies on the average speeds on our freeways. For awhile it looked as if we might lose our federal road aid because of our speed.

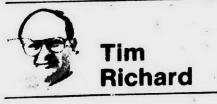

In the western plains states where there are more antelope than motor vehicles, 55 mph is a joke. In southeastern Michigan, 55 is a joke during rush hours in urbanized areas.

TAIL-GATING is the most characteristic phenomenon — the practice of following a car within a quarter of a car length at 62 mph, edging to the left and then passing before the car ahead has swung into the right lane.

It's intimidation, it's reckless, and it's a southeastern Michigan habit.

Take I-80 east of Toledo, and tailgating disappears by the time you're halfway to Cleveland. You see virtually none of it around Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Take I-94 west, and it stops before you reach Battle Creek.

A year ago, the practice was confined to young men. Now, young women are doing it. Women's lib, perverted.

CENTER LANE driving is a favorite bad habit of Michiganians, though the practice isn't confined to us.

The rules say that normal traffic uses the right lane, and the center lane is for passing. The British observe the rule religiously on their motorways.

On I-75, particularly the traffic bound for Florida, it's the opposite. Frequently I've counted 18 or 19 cars (many with Michigan plates) in the center lane for every one in the right lane. As near as I can figure out, Michigan drivers are abnormally fearful they'll get stuck behind a slow driver in the right lane and be boxed in by passing traffic, so they travel in the passing

There's sound reason for that fear. When the drivers in the passing lane are tail-gating, as many are, there's only 10 feet of space between cars. At 70 mph, it's kinda hard to squeeze in.

Bob Wisler

liam Lucas and the nature of the television advertising being put forth by the opposing camps.

SOME REPUBLICANS decry the general appearance of the Lucas campaign. Too nice, too soft, a critic complains. It's not a smashing tackle that leaves the opposing runner sprawled on the ground. It's more like a beauty contest where one well-dressed dude tries to out-articulate another well-dressed dude. It's not the stuff that enables an underdog well behind in the polls to overtake an incumbent governor.

The critics have a point. There may have been a time when pollsters were way off, but not in recent years. There may be some truth to the statement that polls only measure attitude on the day they are conducted and that public opinion can have shifted in between the day the poll is taken and the day the results are announced.

But the polls consistently say Lucas is way behind and with less than five weeks before election day, Lucas' camp must be like the punt receiver waiting for the ball to drop listening to the footsteps of four behemoths bearing

HE NEEDS an issue to carry the campaign. Alas, there is none that will capture the public's imagination. The problem is that despite every candidate's effort to speak to issues that will influence voters, voters pay little attention to most so-called issues. They mostly vote for candidates they feel comfortable with. The governor does not make people feel uncomfortable.

In this political contest, there are seemingly no issues that will enable a candidate to pick up the kind of ground Lucas needs to make up. Even the oftdiscussed 38-percent tax increase that Blanchard wrested from the state Legislature in 1983 fizzles as an issue. According to the same Detroit News poll, 50 percent of the voters contacted approved of the tax increase.

WHAT'S LEFT for Lucas to come out with? He can't compare his record in office with Blanchardis because Blanchard's statistics are better. He can say that this is a chance to make history, but are voters really ready to throw out an incumbent governor during relatively good economic times to make history for some future generation to read about?

History would indicate that incumbents don't have to fear being ousted if they they stay free of scandal and economic depression. This year doesn't appear to be any exception. Of course, this is all conjecture.

Sometimes road turtles have last laugh

WHY IS EVERYBODY in such a hurry? You can see it on the highways, in shopping malls and even in restaurants.

This is getting to be such a frenzied world that stopping to take a deep breath or smell the roses seems to be out-of-fashion.

Nowhere can this societal trend be more readily seen than in the daily commute to the office. Everything taught in driver's education class, which stressed getting from point A to point B safely, has apparently been tossed out of the window.

Instead, commuters will routinely find hot-shot drivers on their tails with bright lights flashing them over to the "slow" lane, or others with more cuts and weaves from lane-to-lane than a football running back.

THOSE WHO still drive the speed limit must put up with blaring horns and glaring from the fast-laners.

But the road turtles sometimes have the last laugh at their impatient commuting comrades.

Many times, a hurried driver makes finish line, even if it means leap-frogging one car at a time.

That speed demon often doesn't get very far ahead thanks to the law-abiding commuter's best friend — the traffic light.

You see, after all that weaving and leap-frogging, the light turns red and the fast-tracker is stuck with all the plodders.

It's justice at its best, with the plodders turning toward their fuming comrades in the next lane and saying, "All that fancy maneuvering didn't get you that far ahead of me, did it?"

ALL RIGHT, I will admit there are some "plodders" who give the rest of us

55-mph'ers a bad reputation. I'm talk-it obvious that he has to heat you to the ing about those folks with diminished reflexes who can't go faster than 35.

They're the ones who should frequent service drives instead of the freeway itself. They typically leave a string of frustrated drivers behind them and also make the task of merging onto the freeway almost impossible.

That behavior is as much a violation of good road manners as those movers and shakers in their darting yuppie machines, who always have to be first, even if only by a single car length. believe that manners in today's society just don't matter anyhow.

Instead, it seems that winning is all people care about, not being decent human beings.

Everything is a competition, and time is money.

YOU SEE IT on the highways, byways, and even the restaurants, where high-powered business execs can't even consume a bowl of soup without bantering about beating this guy or that guy in the board room.

Where has all the talk gone about the wife and kids? The golf game? The leaky kitchen faucet?

I get the feeling some of these people But maybe that is one more reason to have computer data about their socks and underwear.

But that's alright with me. I'll just keep plodding along through life at the right speed, with the windows open just enough to smell those roses.

Memories of racial prejudice rekindled

THANK YOU, GERALD Rudolph Ford, 38th president of the United States. Thank you, Carol Teegardin. Thank you, Detroit Free Press.

Let me quote the 62nd and 63rd paragraphs of Teegardin's question-and-answer interview with the former president, conducted recently at the Ford home in California.

Teegardin: "Are you the kind of husband who helps Betty around the Ford: "Oh, I used to. My principal responsibility was picking up dishes and cleaning up the kitchen after a family meal. That's not so bad."

Gentlemen and ladies, just savor that reply for moment.

Granted that the Fords probably now have a domestic staff to handle the menial chores, the king of the castle remembers that in the old days scraping garbage off the plates and defusing the kitchen clutter was his household speciality and his alone.

I would like to think that he said this for my benefit. Or at least for my

Prior to publication of the Teegardin piece, quite a few students of Bifocals had told me they got several chuckles out of my Sept. 11 essay about our home cookbook library and how Mother Goose rules our kitchen. I went so far as to say, "I eat, but I don't cook."

WHAT I DIDN'T write, fearing perhaps my lot in life is unique, was the fact that once the victuals have been eaten, it's good ol' Fred who turns bus boy and mops up the remains.

Now comes a man who ascended to the presidency of the greatest nation in the world who seems to affirm that this is one avenue to marital bliss.

The Ford archives at Grand Rapids may never give this statement top billing, but selfishly I consider it Jerry's second best. The first best, if you will permit such phrasing, came when he addressed Congress and the nation for the first time as our president, in Aug-

That's when he expanded on his belief in "basic decency and fairness" and told us he would be president of "black, brown, red and white Americans alike."

He preached "communication, conciliation, compromise cooperation". . . and "reasonableness and fairness" for the whole world, concluding, "We have a lot of work to do; let's get on with it."

You may have forgotten, or may not have known at all, that Ford had firsthand evidence of the toll a lack of decency and fairness can take. The evidence came from the most racially shameful moment in the University of Michigan's athletic hisotory.

It was in Ford's senior year when he was first-string center on the Michigan football team. A classmate named Willis Ward was the best end and halfback, equally capable in either role. Also, he was black, the first of his race to win'a berth on the Wolverine varsity since the turn of the century.

THE OPPONENT on Oct. 20, 1934, at Ann Arbor was to be Georgia Tech, and Ward was sacrificed at the altar of racial prejudice when Michigan's athletic hierarchy acquiesced to George Tech's demand that the black man be kept out of the Maize and Blue lineup.

I talked with Ward 40 years later, the week Ford became president. By then he was Wayne County Probate Judge and he had this to say:

. "Jerry Ford was the first one to make me feel welcome at Ann Arbor. We were close all the way from freshman orientation week together to our graduation together. From a colored-white standpoint, he is one of the finest, most decent sort of guys I know.

'The Georgia Tech game hurt Jerry, it hurt the whole team; it split the team spiritually, I understand indirectly that Jerry called his father to talk over whether he should quit the team because of it."

To report that the Wolverines beat Georgia Tech, 9-2, even without Ward, seems ludicrous. it was their only victory of the 1934 season and was achieved before a "crowd" of 20,901.

Sure, as a student I sang the "victors." But looking back on that week, I think it may have been one of the first times many of us, Gerald Ford included, learned that not all garbage originates from the dining room.

Liability issue probed

Job providers in Michigan blame attorneys and jury awards for skyrocketing commercial liablity rates That was the result of a recent survey sponsored by the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce and the Michigan Association of Insurance

"The results of this survey indicate that the legal profession is perceived as having the greatest negative impact on the liability crisis in Michigan," said James Barrett, president of the Michigan State Chamber.

"This statement by Michigan business should give the Legislature and administration the encouragement and support they need to take the next step toward tort reform product liability legislation."

CONDUCTED BY Marketing Resource Group, Lansing, the survey revealed:

 Attorneys were most often blamed for increasing commercial liability insurance rates (33 percent).

Survey blames attorneys, juries for high rates

- · Jury awards, 29 percent. • Insurance companies, 9 per-
- Judges, 7 percent.
- State government, 3 percent. • Injured parties, 2 percent.

THE HIGH COST of litigation has had a definite effect on the availability and cost of insurance to Michigan businesses, the survey found. More than one of every five surveyed had difficulty finding commercial insurance in the past three years. In addition, 41 percent said the cost of such coverage made obtaining insurance very difficult. The survey reported the most difficult type of insurance to obtain was lia-

But 81 percent of those responding to the survey said rates should be set by free market competition, not through state government control.

The liability crisis remains a major problem for Michigan businesses," Barrett said. "Although the recently passed tort reform package was an important first step, more has to be done. The issue is far from being resolved."

THE TELEPHONE survey of 370 Michigan State Chamber members was conducted in mid-August: Respondents included business and industry of all sizes representing all areas of the state.

The Michigan State Chamber of Commerce is a non-profit business organization representing a crosssection of employer interests. Its membership includes more than 8,000 business firms, local chambers of commerce and trade and professional organizations.

You know how brothers are. Art Kramer wanted a 20%-off Cabin Crafts carpet sale. His brother, Mike, dared him to go up to 30% off. To prove he wasn't chicken, Art went one step further.

"I'll take up to 40% off," he replied. "But don't tell Mom!"

And, luckily for you, the battle still rages. Because now through October 4th, you can save 20%, 30%, even up to 40% on Cabin Crafts carpet featuring wear-dated Monsanto fiber. It resists soiling, abrasion and wear and comes with a lifetime static control warranty. And, because it's wear-dated, you can be sure the Cabin Crafts carpet you choose will last a long time.

Come to A.R. Kramer and choose a side (and your carpet). With 20% to 40% off, this is one fight where you can't lose!

RIDAY NIGHT'S performance of "Harry and Sylvia" at Centennial Educational Park was a good one for the Plymouth Park Play-

"It went fine," said Gloria Logan, theater arts director. "They did a really good job of coping with the dangers of live performance."

Richard Strand's "Harry and Sylvia" is both an actor's dream and a nightmare, Logan said. Its wonderful characters make it a good play to perform. The unpredictable props - such as cigarettes that must shoot out of the pack just so - make it a difficult production.

"They were absolutely wonderful with that, thinking on their the theater arts director

Children can learn to put their money to good use right from the start. Opening a savings account can help a child learn to

Saving for a rainy day is a good habit

N ALLOWANCE is more than a collection of coins or dollar bills given to a child or teenager. It's also a learning tool.

"It teaches them an appreciation, first of all, of the value of money,' said Vanessa Harris, extension home economist for the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Service. Receiving an allowance can help children learn the basics of money manage-

The amount of an allowance will vary from family to family. Generally, children in the second grade or thereabouts should receive a maximum allowance of $2 or $3 a week, Harris said.

That amount can be increased to approximately $5 a week by the fourth or fifth grade, particularly for children who are responsible for paying for their school lunches.

Household chores can be combined with receiving an allowance.

"That certainly could be a part of it," Harris said. Doing such chores also helps give youngsters an understanding of what the world of work

CHORES FOR younger children can include taking out the trash, keeping children's bedrooms neat, picking up toys and helping with dishes. Younger children can also help with the care and feeding of a household pet.

Older children can tackle more demanding tasks, such as doing heavier cleaning, mowing the lawn, doing laundry, cooking, "perhaps even helping with the grocery shopping," Harris said.

Jobs outside of the home can help teach teenagers how to manage money wisely. Such jobs also help teach other levels of responsibility.

Teenagers with baby-sitting jobs can learn how to care for young children and how to handle emergency situations. Jobs outside of the home also help teenagers develop their interpersonal skills.

"It's a good learning experience," the home economist said.

Confining the hours of work to Friday through Sunday is Ideal, she said, in that it leaves the rest of the week free for school responsibilities. If that's not possible, it's best for teenagers to work no more than three or four hours a day during the Having some days without any work hours also will help teenagers keep up with their schoolwork.

Once teenagers or younger children have earned that money, it's important to put it to good use.

OPENING A savings account is a good idea, Harris said, although par-ents will have to help younger children keep track of the account and handle transactions. Having such an account will help children learn to save money right from the start.

Older high school students in the 11th or 12th grades may want to open their own checking accounts. They're more likely than younger students to have sufficient earnings to merit opening such an account.

"Again, (it's) teaching them the responsibility of a checking account," Harris said.

Teenagers can also assume some responsibility for paying their own way in recreational activities, she said. Doing so will help them understand that if they want to go to the movies on Saturday night, they can't spend all their money by mid-week.

Learning to save money will help teenagers who wish to purchase a high-cost item, such as a stereo.

It's also helpful to have teenagers take some responsibility for the cost of proms or other special activities, she said. They can also pay for an item of specialty clothing, "as long as it has their parents' approval."

Teenagers should also participate in major financial decision-making in a family. Harris said. Doing so will help them understand the family's financial situation.

Parents need to communicate with their children, she said, helping youngsters learn how to handle money wisely. They have to be the guiding force.'

Dan O'Kennedy said his daughter had a vast potential for leadership. To say Sheila was a casual political participant would've been an understatement.

She was president of the Gaelic Societies for a United Ireland at WSU along with being treasurer for the Justice for Ireland Committee. She was also delegate for the United Irish Societies and belonged to the Irish National Caucus.

HER FATHER recalls when Sheila was in Ireland five years ago riding with a carload of British students. It was announced over the radio one of the hunger strikers had just died and all the British students "That left an impression on her," comes with the loss of someone he said.

Though Sheila had a vested interest in the politics and the troubles of Mothers Against Drunk Driving Ireland, her family said she was concerned with the welfare of people in general.

Jewish holidays to begin Friday

Year, begins on the first day of the first month of the Hebrew (lunar)

This year, as for thousands of years, the ram's horn, or shofar, will sound to begin the new year and the High Holy Days, on Friday. Jewish holidays begin at sundown and end

In ancient times, the shofar was an instrument of communication to reach the entire nation of Israel in a matter of moments with shofar calls from a row of mountain peaks.

The shofar is one of man's earliest musical instruments still in use.

Rosh Hashanah will be observed on Saturday and Sunday, in homes and in the synagogue. It is a time both of solemnity and of joy, and sharing between families. A festive meal is enjoyed before sundown on the evening of Rosh Hashonah.

AT THIS meal, it is customary to dip a piece of apple or bread into honey symbolizing hopes for a sweet

Relatives and friends greet one another with the Hebrew expression for "May You Be Inscribed in the Book of Life for a Good Year."

During synagogue or temple services, Jewish people are called upon to repent for their misdeeds of the past year, to return to God in humility and to distinguish between the trivial and the important in life. So the next 12 months máy be richer in service to God and man.

The Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur, begins at sundown Sunday, Oct. 12, continuing through sundown the next evening.

Before sunset, families gather for a festive meal with candles lit. Every member of the clan asks for forgiveness of one another for the wrongs committed against each

Then begins 24 hours of praye and fasting. Fasting is the symbol of man ability to conquer his physical appetites, a demonstration to God that the individual is able to deny the natural cravings for food and drink and willalso try to control all of his self de-

Kol Nidre prayers begin the service on the eve of Yom Kippur with the chant led by the congregation's cantor. This is a prayer for absolu-tion for the breaking of vows made

Prayers are recited in terms of "we" rather than "I" because collec-tive responsibility is taken for the shortcomings of mankind.

JEWS will be absent from school and work on Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur. On Sukkot, a harvest festival compared to Thanksgiving, a booth or hut is erected near synagogues and at many homes.

This is done as an eternal reminder of the temporary dwellings used by the Israelites during 40 years of, wandering in the desert after captivity in Egypt.

The holiday begins five days after Yom Kippur.

Services are held on the first two days of Sukkot and the last day, Hoshana Rabbah.

Shemini Atzeret and Simchat Torah are the final holidays of the season. The last chapters of the Torah are read and readings begin again with "Genesis," declaring that the Torah is eternal with no real begin-

Torah processions with children and adults take place in the synagogue. Children carry banners and kiss the Torah scrolls receiving

So we are tired and we get discouraged. But the hungry people are no less hungry because of our tired-

show us the way

walk for hunger treking its way around a six-mile course in the city of Livonia. It did not seem as though there were as many walking as in past years. And the reasons could be

Those who work in the cause of arms reduction are also experiencing something of the same fall-off in numbers of people actively involved. Again the reasons are many, but perhaps some of those reasons are held in common with those who work to diminish hunger.

Let's face it, even when we care, we are vulnerable to overload. Disasters that are specific like an Ethiopian famine or a Mexican earthquake are much easier to respond to than the ongoing disaster of world hunger or the ever-threatening oblivion offered by a socially accepted arms race.

So one of the difficulties in maintaining people power for ongoing worthwhile causes is simply that people get tired. And many of those tired people are us. We do not need someone to convince us that many of us are already on overload.

AND THEN there is the issue, "What good does it do anyway?" Some of us have worked in hunger issues and peace issues longer than we care to think about. And we know that despite the efforts the arms race is moving at a faster pace than ever. We also know that the numbers of hungry people continue to multiply. And who wants to throw their efforts in the direction of something that does not seem to make a differ-ness. And our grandchildren are no insisting on waking us.

THIS PAST Sunday saw the CROP less vulnerable to the fallout of an arms race run amuck.

Perhaps what we need to know is that even our apparently ineffective? efforts have made a difference. More people are becoming aware that diminishing hunger is more a matter of dismantling and changing those systems which contribute to an unequal distribution for this world's resources, than it is simply giving a food basket to one or another of the victims of those systems.

IT IS JUST as true that the issue of arms reduction is much more on top of the table than in years past. The marchers and the talkers, the demonstrators and the voters are no longer relegated to the ranks of hippies and yippies. They are grand-mothers and retired factory workers. Some of them wear blue collars, and some are dressed in white. The word is out, and more poeple are beginning to see more things.

They are becoming more aware of the connection between an arms, race and hunger problems. They are beginning to understand the economic incentives to exporting arms over food. They are more aware that their power in the voting booth extends beyond whether or not their subdivision will be black-topped or their property taxes raised.

We need the CROP walkers, regardless of their numbers, to keep us awake. We need women the likes of 91-year-old Clara Vincent of Livonia. to nudge us out of our lethargy on an arms race in which men who play Star Wars games hold the future of our progeny in their hands. So even if we do have other concerns the voices that seem to cry in the wilderness deserve a nod of gratitude for James Hess: Houses he sells at auction typically require $6,000 in repairs and redecorating.

Going once... Auctions clinch home sales

special writer

A Livonia businessman has sold 380 homes in the last six months. Matching efforts could have posed quite an endurance test to several real es-

But James Hess, president of Bankers Real Estate Outlet, did his work in a new-fashioned way: He sold all the homes at auctions.

Products of foreclosures, they are considered "real bargains" on the auction block, Hess said. The bank, savings and loan institution or mortgage company saves about $1,000 per month in holding costs, plus the expense of repairs and other contingencies by selling the houses at auction. "That means a big savings to the buyer as well." Hess said.

The typical second- or third-owner home will require about $6,000 for repairs including new carpeting, paint, modest decorating and remodeling. "We tell the bank not to repair, just mow the lawn. Let the purchaser do it. That alone is a tremendous saving to the seller and the buyer.

Hess has been in the auction business for 15 years, netting more than 2,500 home sales. He opened the Livonia office about 11/2 years ago. "I wanted to start managing house auctions better than I'd seen them done here and elsewhere in the country," he said.

Although Hess holds most auctions in the metropolitan Detroit area, selling an average of 70 each time, he also manages auctions out of state.

He lists the homes much like a real estate agent with newspaper and direct mail advertisements. He holds one- or two-day open houses, depending on the weather and time of year. A prospective buyer may bring any real estate specialist or inspector to the home. There are no price

At the auction, bidders view slides of the homes. There are no minimum bids, and the highest bidders win property rights. The average sale is for $17,000. Bidders must post $2,500 in earnest money which is used to supplement the down payment on a successful bid.

Hess cautions every buyer: "If you back out, we'll take your money and keep it." And he tells sellers before each auction: "Without fail, there are four or five properties on which you're going to have to take a loss, make it up on others." More often than not, he added, the buyer and the seller are pretty happy.

Bankers Real Estate Outlet also arranges for home financing. Buyers intending to live in the home must post a 5 percent down payment; others must post 10 percent. A closing date is arranged at auction, and closing is usually within 40 days.

MAJOR ADVANTAGES of buying a home at an auction include price savings and an ability to control spending, Hess said. "If your budget won't allow you to spend more than $30,000, you won't be bidding $50,000.

There are four different types of buyers: • The speculator, who repairs and resells the

• The investor, who rents it for specific returns on the investment. · The casual investor, who usually lives in the same neighborhood where the home is located Often, the person buys the home for a relative or rents it for additional income. Forty percent of all home auction sales are made to casual investors.

• The owner-occupant, who wants to save money on a home purchase. "We try to market the homes to this type of buyer, but he or she represents only 25 percent of our sales," Hess said.

"I take a certain segment of the population out of the real estate market on the sound assumption that everybody likes to save money," Hess said. But he thinks there are certain people who should not buy homes at auction.

"If they don't have a grasp of a value - or what it costs to get repairs done - they shouldn't bid. And if they're not ambitious or skilled in home repairs, they should seek other ways to purchase a home.'

Although most homes Hess sells are in the city of Detroit, he said every scheduled auction includes homes in the suburbs. Within the Observer & Eccetric circulation area, he has sold them in Plymouth, Livonia, Garden City, Westland, Farm-

Real estate rebel heads own camp

By Carolyn Smith special writer

J.R. Paine worked three years for two major real estate companies before deciding what she and her colleagues were doing was "a ripoff" to people whose homes they sold.

So Paine, a self-described maverick who prefers using initials to her first name, Joyce, founded Home Marketing Specialists in Southfield. Only a few months old, it is an association of 10 real estate specialists including attorneys, brokers and marketing, advertising and financial experts who have "200 years of real estate experience among us."

The company's fee for selling any home is a flat $1,400 "or less if the selling price is under $50,000," Paine

Paine also wrote and had published this year a 77-page paperback guide, the "Smart Homeseller's Sale by Owner Kit," which she markets from her office for $19.95 plus sales

The book details steps to take to sell a home - from pricing and advertising to financing arrangements, tax laws and the closing. It offers righted. tips on "action ads" and holding open ments of a valid contract and remedies if a buyer breaches it.

SO WHY DID Paine leave the traditional real estate fold? She begns slowly.

"For 95 percent of the people, a home is the largest single financial investment. Let's say a home was purchased five years ago at $65,000. The owner put in an average $10,000 in improvements over those five years, boosting the value to $75,000. The home sells for $100,000, leaving a total capital gain of $25,000.

"But," she says, raising a finger. The pace quickens, her tone a bit more strident. "But out of that $25,000 comes a $6,000 commission to the Realtor (based on a 6 pecent fee), and the seller is left with only Paine recalls her days as an agent: "I saw unhappiness on the faces of my clients, which made me feel miserable. I and some of the other Realtors felt our system was unjust. No one, myself included, had put in that kind of time and effort to warrant that kind of money . . . We've got a helpless public. It's time a wrong be tax? "Well, what else is it? A tax ents. also can be levied without passing a law. This is taxation without representation."

Paine stressed it is illegal to set a standard rate of commission for real estate agentss. "But in practice, everyone charges 6 percent. That's been the case for years."

Another complaint of Paine's is that real estate agents are not properly trained, saying that they take 30 hours of classes and "a simple test."

Paine's business and her book were met with mixed reactions, she said. There were some threats against her. There was some quiet praise from people in the business. But mostly, "there was this 'How could you do this to my bread and butter?' complaint."

JEROME DELANEY, vice president of the Western Wayne Oakland County Board of Realtors, said he hasn't heard of Paine or read her book. But he called her thinking part of "a long, ongoing debate" between the real estate industry and its ad-

Delaney produced an internal memo to office colleagues in which he suggests they point out several services available to those selling their homes themselves. Among them is a weighty list of legal services Delaney claims can't be done by homeowners themselves.

'That's the tack they always take," Paine said. "They are trained to tell clients how stupid they are, to intimidate them."

Delaney takes issue with Paine's charge that most Realtors charge a 6-percent commission. "Some charge more or less than 6 percent, depending on the situation. There are so many types of business transactions, it's hard to say what the commission rate should be.'

The Realtor's greatest advantage, Delaney said, is the ability to communicate with buyers and sellers as an objective third party. "If I were seling my own home, I don't think I'd be objective," he said. "That kind of communication is very important. And we happen to do it very well."

Housing sales vary

Residential sales data collected by the Western Wayne-Oakland County Board of Realtors shows a 9 percent gain in sales over 1985, with prices rising 17 percent over last year. The South Oakland board reported sales slipped by 4 percent, while prices increased 20 percent. The Traverse City area leads the state in increased sales, registering a gain of 39 percent. But prices there have fallen 3 percent since last year. Statewide totals, reported by the Michigan Association of Realtors, show an increase in sales volume of 14 percent, with the price of the average home rising 10 percent over 1985 figures.

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

"Wall Street Week" panelist Frank Cappiello, disputing current pessimism among economists, told a seminar at Oakland Community College Saturday that the U.S. economy's glass is half full, not half empty.

"You're hearing a lot of recessionary talk now," Cappiello told approximately 175 people attending a Financial Independence Week seminar at the college's Orchard Ridge Campus in Farmington Hills.

"But there is a minority of us who believes this is nonsense.'

Cappiello said his upbeat prediction for the next 12-18 months was based on the current "bicoastal boom" and a midwestern industrialagricultural sector that has hit bottom and will soon rebound.

Cappiello, who delivered the keynote address at the daylong seminar, said that the New England states were the "hottest area of the country" in terms of economic growth. And the western U.S. with the exception of oil-dominated Texas, continues to hold its own.

But because the emphasis of

"TEN OR 15 years ago, if we had these conditions the country would have been on the throes of a deep recession," Cappiello said. "But the service sector on the west coast and heavy consumer spending on both coasts are responsible for keeping the rest of the country afloat."

At the same time, the nationally known financial analyst said conditions in the energy, agriculture and manufacturing segments of the economy have "bottomed out."

He predicted a rebound in the America's economy is shifting away price of oil from the current $12-$15 from heavy industry and toward per barrel to the low-$20 range by Cappiello, who has served as both host and a panelist on PBS television's "Wall Street Week" and as a financial expert on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," was chief investment officer of a New York insurance holding company for 12 years. He also served as research director for a major stock brokerage firm.

In addition to Cappiello's address, the seminar featured workshops on basic financial planning, retirement needs, evaluating investment options, tax planning and insurance.

JANICE SCHWEIZER, a certified financial planner with offices in Plymouth, said planners are not a tool only used by the wealthy.

In fact, Schweizer said it is middle-income people who should seek out a good financial planner because they are the ones who "can't afford to make mistakes with their money."

Schweizer said a planner will go through six steps with a client: collecting data, setting goals, analyzing data, providing a written plan, implementing the plan and periodic review and revision.

Another organizer of the seminar, Thomas Brubaker, presented participants with a list of 10 questions they should ask when hiring a financial planner.

The list included questions on professional background and experience, services offered and risks in-

Car firms oppose bill about emissions

The environment would benefit little or not at all under a proposed Senate bill to tighten emission standards on motor vehicles.

That's what the head of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association told a congressional panel in Wash-

The bill seeks to control the pollutants contributing to acid rain.

It demands technology that has not been proven feasible, Thomas H. Hanna, president of MVMA, told the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works.

"More stringent motor vehicle emission controls are not warranted," Hanna said, noting the more than 90 percent overall reductions that already have been made in automotive emissions.

ONLY 3 PERCENT of the cars tested and no light-duty trucks or heavy-duty gas engines meet all of the standards proposed, Hanna said.

"Because the present levels are so low, the incremental air quality benefits that could be achieved by further tightening are minimal," he

"But the task that SB. 2203 would impose on manufacturers is enormous - requiring a further reduction of 60-75 percent of emissions from today's low levels for both passenger cars and light trucks," Hanna

Furthermore, the legislation seeks to impose a burden on an industry that is actually responsible for very little of the acid rain problem, he

"ALMOST 90 percent of the acid rain precursors in the Northeast region originate with sources other than cars and trucks," he said.

"Motor vehicle emissions will continue to decline as passenger cars meeting the 1.0 gram-per-mile nitrogen oxide standard replace older, higher emitting cars, and light and heavy-duty trucks meet new, more stringent nitrogen oxide standards."

To improve emission performance only slightly would require an increase in the precious metal content its cost. The metals, platinum and rhodium, are available only from South Africa and the Soviet Union, according to Hanna.

The 11 member companies of MVMA produce more than 98 percent of domestic motor vehibles. They are: American Motors, Chrysler, Ford, General Motors, Honda of America Manufacturing, LTV Aerospace & Defense Co., AM General Division, M.A.N. Truck & Bus, Navistar International Corp., PACCAR Inc., Volkswagen of America and Volvo North America Corp. Building in Detroit. About 150 nomes will be offered including homes in Farmington Hills, Berkley, Oak Park, Southfield, Dearborn Heights and three in Westland.

Bidders and spectators can expect a crowd. "I thought there would be a few hundered at the Fairlane Manor in Dearborn. But I ended up renting all the rooms I could get, playing to 2,300 people. Home auctions are very popular," Hess said.

His compay donated $3,000 on June 9 to the Detroit Ronald McDonald House for parents of seriously ill children. The money represented $5 for each bidder at one of his auctions. Hess said he plans to select another charity for the Octo-

Some of the deals: A century-old house in Plymouth worth an estimated $150,000 with repairs, sold for $89,000 at the Aug. 11 auction. Then, there was the 14-room, 21/2-story mansion on Ponchartrain on the Detroit Golf Course. "One of a kind," Hess recalled. "A brick home, 7,000 square feet with everything imaginable - a barber shop, sauna, projection room, maids' quarters. Over 1,000 people looked at it - not all of them serious buyers, of course . . . We got $90,000 for it."

Hess said dull work is against his better nature. "Last Saturday in Waterloo, Iowa. Sept. 15 in Denver. Probably next winter somewhere in Texas. I never stand still."

Each auction is a "special thrill" to this 39-year-old. "I maintain a fast pace, which is a pretty high price to pay for success. But I'll admit one thing. I'm really a hyperactive child who never grew up.

As I see the record, you have bought shares in one of the really outstanding growth companies in the country. RPM has not failed for 38 consecutive years to increase both its sales and earnings per share. I

YOU ARE right in being skeptical when a company tries to catch your interest by announcing the purchase of a new business. A great many companies do not have a good record of turning such businesses into great-

Zero percent pays for AMC

American Motors posted an 84 percent increase in domestic car sales and a 92 percent increase in Jeep vehicle sales in the second 10 days of September, compared with the same period in August.

Reason is the successful 0 percent financing program, Peter G. Guptill, group vice president for North American Sales and Marketing, announced from AMC's Southfield headquarters.

"The response to our 0 percent financing program has been fantastic and our sales volume continues to increase even though the supply of vehicles is diminishing," Guptill said.

The program, which includes 0 percent on 24-month contracts, 2.9 percent financing on 36-month contracts, and 5.9 percent on 48-month contracts, also includes rebates ranging from $600 to $800.

Golf, fishing or B&B—state has a book on it

The Michigan Travel Bureau has blished several guide books about pecial travel interests in Michigan. State tourism director John Savich has sent these books about fishing charters, golf courses and bed-andbreakfast inns to editors nationwide.

Most Americans travel within their own state of to adjoining states, so these practical guides will be of even more interest to Michigan travelers than they will be to out-ofstate visitors. All of this activity is a warmup to the sesquicentennial activities that will be held when Michigan celebrates its 150th birthday statewide in 1987.

GOLF IN MICHIGAN, a guide to the 10,000 greens of the Great Lakes State, lists golf courses region-by-region and county-by-county throughout Michigan. A quick count of golf courses listed in the index, from A-Ga-Ming in Antrim to Ye Olde CC in Roscommon, looks more like 500 than 10,000 to me, but I guess it is OK to exaggerate a little when you are celebrating your birthday.

In case any of you golfers have not been paying attention, we have several championship golf courses, especially around the Grand Traverse Bay area and promoters are beginning to compare us to Myrtle Beach.

MICHIGAN FISHING AND SPE-CIALTY CHARTERS is of special interest to me, since I have been bragging for several weeks about the big salmon I caught in August under the capable supervision of Captain Joe Wolff of the Ginger Brandy out of Manistee. Joe is the president of the Michigan Charter Boat Associa-

The state booklet lists fishing charters on lakes Erie, Michigan, Huron, Superior and St. Clair. Each listing includes the size and type of boat, months of operation, number of passengers, name of captain and a reservations contact.

MICHIGAN'S BED & BREAK-FAST AND HISTORIC INNS is the publication that will probably get the most use. It has an old photo of the Botsford Inn, Farmington Hills, on the cover, the Botsford celebrates its sesquicentennial this year.

The first section, called Bed &

Breakfast Lodgings, lists private homes in Michigan that have up to seven rooms to rent. Breakfast is included in the price of the room.

The charm of these lodgings is in the personal touch given by the owners. Remember, however, that this is not a guide book with the accommodations checked out by an independent traveler. Most of the descriptions were probably written by the own-

In the description of the Plum Lane Inn in Northport, for example, "A Victorian house, surrounded by gardens and shaded by tall trees." Friends in Omena told me about the wonderful collection of Victoriana to be found in this house and about its owner, Beatrice Bowen, who really launched the B & B movement in Northport. They said she, and her house, were wonderful.

I have not stayed in the house. I drove off the highway to look at it from the outside. The treed description above is certainly true. The clapboard house is aging gently into a grove of trees that really cuts it off from the sun. Some people will like that; others won't. It is hard to imagine that 'a screened veranda offers unique views of Grand Traverse Bay etc.' Let me know if you have stayed

My point is that you are always exploring when you stay at a bed and breakfast. Some explorations pay off, some don't, but that is what adventure is all about, isn't it?

You should also be aware that bed-and-breakfast is not necessarily inexpensive. Prices are not included in this booklet but I have seen many of them charge $65 for a room with a bathroom down the hall. It may or may not be worth that to you. Others are, of course, less expensive; check

One of the best ways to check it out is with a book called Bed & Breakfast in Michigan and surrounding areas by Norma Buzan and Bert Howell, available for $8.25 (which includes postage) from Betsy Ross Publications, 3057 Betsy Ross Drive, Bloomfield Hills, Mich. 48013.

This guide book doesn't really give you pro and con information either, but at least it gives you rates. The Plum Hollow Inn above, for examis listed at $45-55 per room in the last edition on my book shelf; it was published in 1985.

You should also check your bookstore for a book called "Michigan Towns and Country Inns" by Susan Pyle, University of Michigan Press also check out the well-known national publications, although you will find that they list only the betterknown, usually historic, places.

Most fishermen wouldn't mind a catch like the one netted by Capt. Joe Wolf (above) of the Ginger Brandy. The new book published by the state gives a list of where to go for fishing

The second section of the state its historic rooftops. book, Michigan's Bed & Breakfast and Historic Inns. is about time inns that contain eight to 20 rentable rooms. It includes, for example, the Hotel Frankfort, the lovely Victorian hotel that graces the main street of Frankfort.

It also includes the National House Inn in Marshall and the Garfield Inn in Port Austin. I toured the Garfield Inn recently, as well as a B & B called the Lake Street Manor across cost about $65 a night, including breakfast.

The Lake Street Manor is a nice looking red brick Victorian house run by a young woman from Florida. The rooms are about the size of your bedroom at home, clean and well furnished; there is a nice garden outside and a charming atmosphere

If it was less expensive, I would choose it, but frankly for the same money I would go across the street to the Garfield Inn, which has large beautiful rooms (the bathroom is still down the hall) as well as a dining room and friendly bar to go with

The Garfield Inn, built in 1830, is named after President James A. Garfield, who once made a speech on behalf of Ulysses S. Grant from its balcony. The Inn is registered as a National Historic site and is featured on the cover of a magazine called the Innsider, a publication of Country Inns Unlimited, in the winter 1985 issue.

The final pages of the state book on B & Bs and historic inns is a list of areas. Please note that many bed and breakfast places are not listed in this book. The Lake Street Manor in Port Austin is not in it.

For your free copy of these state books on golf courses, fishing charters and B&B historic inns contact the Michigan Travel Bureau, P.O. Box 30226, Lansing 48909 or the Southwest Michigan Travel and Tourist Assn., P.O. Box 1590, 64 Park St., Troy, Mich. 48099.

Members of AAA Michigan also have access to a list of bed-andbreakfast places; it is kept in your AAA office, where you can get a copy of the B & B that interests you.

Hey, Plymouth – say hello to your new hockey club

By Chris McCosky staff writer

The Hennessey Engineers' North American Junior Hockey League season opens tomorrow - that loud sigh of relief you just heard came from A.J. Baker.

It has been a long, long struggle for Baker and all others concerned with the Junior A club since Baker accepted the head coaching job after last season.

Talk about having to start from scratch. First thing Baker had to do was find a place for his team to play. The Engineers, the successor to the Redford Royals, moved out of the Redford Arena where it had played for nine years.

After an agonizing search, the Engineers were taken in by the city of Plymouth and will play their games out of the Plymouth Cultural Center. Secondly, the club lost its financial backing. Hennessey Engineering, who had put up close to $38,000 to run the club last year, backed out last June.

Baker set out, virtually alone, to find a sponsor. He's still searching.

Meanwhile, the Engineers Hockey Club, in effect, has gone into receivership. The North American Junior Hockey League will allow the team to play this season. If no sponsorship is gained, it could be the Engineers' final season.

BUT THAT is in the background for now. Baker's attentions, at last, focus on the ice. And happily, what Baker has on the ice is far more encouraging than the club's financial ledgers.

The Plymouth-Canton community should have itself an exciting Junior A hockey team.

"I'm very optimistic about this team," said Baker, who helped coach the team to a second-place finish last year in the four-team NAJHL. "We have two outstanding goalies and with some work, the defense will be strong. Our team speed is good. We're not big up front, by any means. But our defensemen make up

Baker has brought together a solid mixture of experience and youth. He has six players back from last year, plus eight high school-aged draftees.

"Hockey Weekly Magazine made a big deal about the fact that we drafted a lot of high school players," Baker said. "They were comparing Midget AAA hockey to high school hockey in Michigan. They feel that Midget AAA is head and shoulders above high school.

"I disagree. If you put the topnotch high school players together, they would have no problems competing with the Midgets. The trick is knowing where to find the top-notch high school players."

Baker ought to know. He organizes the annual All-Stater High School Hockey Classic and keeps very close tabs on the high school talent.

"A LOT OF the players we drafted ended up going to college or are playing in Canada," Baker said. "But many players that had fallen through the cracks, the unknown quantities, ended up in our camp. Those players, even though they weren't drafted, will benefit our team and the league."

If a team's strength can be determined this early, the Engineers might be tough to score on. Goalies Dave Church, who played last season, and Doug Brown from Ann Arbor Huron are expected to be among the league's toughest

On defense, Baker has Tom Mad-

THE LEAGUE

The North American Junior Hockey League is the only Junior A hockey league in Michigan. The league is for players between the ages of 17 and 20. Teams may keep three 16-year-olds on the roster. The league has been in existence since 1975. It was formerly called the Great Lakes Junior A Hockey League. It became the North American Hockey League in 1984 when teams from Buffalo and Chicago joined.

This year, the league features the follow ing teams: Compuware (Oak Park), the Fraser Falcons, the Chicago Patriots and the Hennessy Engineers (Plymouth) Teams will also play games with Miami University, West Point and a team of Junior B all-stars.

THE PURPOSE

The North American Junior Hockey League exists for two reasons: to prepare players to compete at the college level and to provide players exposure to both college

THE ARENA

The Engineers will play their 17 home games Friday nights at the Plymouth Cultural Center, located at 525 Farmer Road in Plymouth. The arena, which seats 1,200, is supervised by Chuck Skene and the Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department.

Farmington boots Canton; Rocks on a shutout spree

About the only thing harder than winning for the Farmington soccer team this season has been scoring

The team overcame both obstacles Monday, defeating Western Lakes foe Plymouth Canton 3-1.

"We're starting to get the ball into the net." said Falcons' coach Ed Bartram. "This was the most goals we've scored in one game this year."

Canton's Todd Nichols scored the game's first goal off an assist from Farmington tied the game before the half on Tom Gammerath's goal from Darrin Magera.

"The first half was pretty much a tossup," Bartram said. "We played more aggressively in the second half and got to the ball better."

Joey Crow, off a pass from Tom Hanson, scored what proved to be the game-winning goal. Pete Frauenheim scored an insurance goal off an assist from Gammerath.

Farmington enjoyed a 19-11 edge in shots on goal.

Farmington is 3-5-3 overall, 2-4-2 in the conference. Canton falls to 3-7-2 overall, 3-5-2 in the conference.

SALEM 3, HARRISON 0: It's amazing how a tiny lineup adjustment can spark a team.

Plymouth Salem coach Ken Johnson last week decided to move Mike Zaretti from midfield to defense and anointed Dave O'Malley as his No. 1 goalkeeper. Since the change, Salem has posted three consecutive shut-

"We're rolling now," Johnson said. Against the resurgent Farmington Harrison Hawks (ranked among the top 10 in Class B), Salem got second half goals from Ted Hanosh, Andy Sharma and Jeff Gold. Hanosh also had two assists. Randy Balconi also drew an assist.

Salem outshot Harrison 26-10. It was the first time this season Harrison (6-4-1 overall, 4-4-1 in the Western Lakes) has been shut out.

On Saturday, Salem blanked North Farmington 5-0.

Hanosh and Zaretti scored early to give Salem a 2-0 lead, then Dennis Reynolds and Joe Cosenza teamed up on three tallies in the final four minutes of the match. Reynolds scored one off Cosenza's assist. Then Reynolds set up two Cosenza goals. O'Malley preserved his shoutout by stopping a penalty kick in the Salem, which had lost to North earlier this season, is now 7-3-1 over-four times to lead the win. Pete Keller and Dave McGrath also scored. Tim McMinn chipped in with two assists.

North Farmington is 7-3-2 on the season. Northville falls to 3-5-1.

Ladywood wins overtime thriller

staff writer

Somebody played a cruel trick on the Farmington Hills Mercy basketball team Tuesday night.

Imagine how Christopher Columbus might have felt if, after finally sailing across the ocean, he discovered the earth really was flat. Ouch. Mercy may know the feeling.

The Marlins, with great determination, climbed a tall mountain against arch rival Livonia Ladywood. But when they reached the top, the final step was missing. Down came the Marlins.

In front of more than 1,000 enthusiastic fans at Birmingham Brother Rice, Ladywood outlasted Mercy 62-54 in overtime. It was Ladywood's third consecutive victory against the Marlins and Mercy's third consecutive loss this season - both firsttime occurrences in Mercy basketball history.

"Two good basketball teams, one great game," said Ladywood coach Ed Kavanaugh.

It was every bit that.

LADYWOOD LED from midway through the second quarter to the final 27 seconds of the game. The Blazers led 52-44 with 1:52 left in the

But Mercy, energized by the unrelenting hustle of Jan Herberholz. forced Ladywood to turn the ball over in its final five possessions. Herberholz, in the meantime, drained six consecutive free throws to pull the Marlins within a basket: 52-50 with 41 seconds left.

Jenny Slosar then picked up an errant Blazer pass and was fouled. With 27 seconds left, she calmly made both free throws to tie the Mercy forced two more turnovers in regulation, but failed to win the game. Yvette Maison crashed into the lane and put up a running layup as she was falling to the ground. No basket and no foul call. With one secrejected Mercy's final shot.

At that point Mercy might have realized that final step to the top of the mountain was missing. Ladywood owned the three-minute overthe final seconds.

"I THINK what happened was we free throws. went into a stall (with just under six minutes left in regulation) and we League season for both teams.

Said Mercy coach Larry Baker: "Certainly, we feel no shame in losing this game tonight. In one sense, we had some had breaks. We executed two good offensive possessions in the overtime and I'm pleased with that even though the shots didn't fall.

"But I'm mostly pleased with the heart and character we showed, giving it everything we possibly could to claw and scratch our way back into a position where we had two opportunities to win the game."

It was McNulty, Ladywood's 6-2 junior center, who put Mercy in the hole in the first place. In a two-minute stretch of the second quarter she blocked five shots (in five consecutive possessions) and scored six points. Her effort transformed a onepoint Mercy lead into 32-23 Ladywood advantage.

"The only thing that disappointed me was that we went through a spell in the middle of the second quarter where we just checked out mentally. We didn't set up our defense, we wasted a timeout, we made a couple of poor shot selections. We got into a position where the best we could hope for was to tie," Baker said.

LEADING THE Blazers (5-2) on offense was Chandler, who pumped in 20 points before leaving. McNulty scored 14 and Julie Oaks added 14. Oaks didn't miss a shot all night, hitting five field goals and four free throws. She scored four points in the overtime. Anne Marie Thomas, with a steal and a basket, and Monica Gall, with a pair of clutch free throws, also bolstered the Blazers in

"I think the fact that we scored first helped us settle down in the overtime," Kavanaugh said. "About a minute had run down before we ond left, Ladywood's Katie McNulty scored, then they turned the ball over a couple times and we got some easy baskets."

Herberholz scored 20 points to pace Mercy (4-3). Maison chipped in points, seven assists and five time period, scoring 10 unanswered steals. What Mercy lacked in field points before Herberholz scored in goal shooting proficiency (the Marlins made 15 of 57 shots) it made up for at the line. Mercy hit 20 of 25

End of the line? Churchill puts streak on line vs. Hawks

and Chris McCosky staff writers

T'S TIME TO sit back, reassess and try to figure out what's going on in Observerland football.

Forget the thunder, lightning and storms last weekend, which caused five games to be postponed for one day. There were some startling developments over the weekend, and going into Week No. 5, we find some revelations.

Livonia Churchill is the only unbeaten team left in the area. And let's not be too quick to point the finger at the Chargers' weak schedule. Churchill's opponents are 5-11 overall.

Churchill's upcoming opponent, a 3-1 Farmington Harrison team, has played the weakest schedule among the contending teams in the area. Harrison's opponents are 3-13

LIVONIA STEVENSON at WESTLAND JOHN GLENN: Stevenson, which held on last week to beat Plym Salem, 16-15, is all alone in first place in the Lakes Division with a 2-0 record. Glenn is coming off a galling two-point loss to North Farmington. Picks — Two home losses in a row isn't likely for Glenn.

NORTH FARMINGTON at WALLED LAKE CENTRAL: Scott

satzer, who proved use week that he is the premier back in the area, is by no means a one-man show. The Raiders also can play defense, led by pint-sized 154-pound nose guard Scott Sinanis, who disrupted Glenn's offense last week. Picka — North has a picnic seasont Central.

FARMINGTON at PLYMOUTH SALEM: The Falcons got their first win last week thanks to a blocked punt. Fam defense is better than adequate, but can Farmington stop Salem's wishbone? The Rocks are coming off a one-point loss to Stevenson. Picks - McCosky takes the Rocks. Emons goes with the Falcons in an upset.

GARDEN CITY at REDFORD UNION (Hilbert Jr. High): Both teams are 1-3, and both are reeling from losses last week. Garden City's offense, led by running back Joe Petruski, is slightly ahead of RU's But the Panthers' defense is not bad, led by linebacker Kevin Messner. Picks — Emons takes RU because of the home field advantage. McCosky agrees.

WAYNE MEMORIAL at BELLE-VILLE: Wayne hopes to snap a two-game losing streak against the winless Tigers, who were blanked last week by Southga Picks — Wayne gets back on the right track.

CLARENCEVILLE at DETROIT LUTHERAN WEST: This is yet another lest for a young Clarenceville team, which is getting better every week. The Trojans (3-1) are facing a Lutheran West team (1-3) that was bombed last week by Lutheran East, 37

SATURDAY'S GAMES

PLYMOUTH CANTON at LIVO-NIA FRANKLIN (1 p.m.): The only way the Patriots can win is if their defense posts a shutout. The Patriots have lost by scores of 8-0. 7-3. 14-7 and 9-6. How can a team contin ue to lose when it gives up so few points? Canton, losers of two straight, put up a fight iast week in a 16-6 loss to unbeaten Churchit. This should be a defensive delight. Picks — Fmons has a hunch, goes for the Chiefs McCosky takes the Pats.

REDFORD THURSTON at TAY-LOR KENNEDY (1 p.m.): Both teams are 1-3, but Kennedy appears to be much stronger after taking unbeaten Taylor Truman to the wire before losing 14-6. Picks - Ken BISHOP BORGESS at HARPER WDS. NOTRE DAME (1:30 p.m.) First-year coach Dan Henry has brought some fresh air to Observerland, using a wide open offense last week to stun rival Catholic Cen tral, 25-6. This is a team building confidence each week. Last week, the unsung heroes or defense were linebackers Ron Cade and John Campbell, end Mike Joiner, tackle Maurice Cummings and safety Jason Caizadillas. The Spartans must guard against a letdown against 1-3 Notre Dame. Picks - Borgest keeps the 'mo' going.

CATHOLIC CENTRAL VS. BISH-OP GALLAGHER (7:30 p.m. at Clarenceville): Everything went wrong for the Shamrocks last week in a stunning loss to Borgess. CC made more turnovers in one game than they did all last season. Gallaghe be a defensive gem. Picks - CC wins a close

ST. AGATHA VS. MT. CARMEL (7:30 p.m. at Wyandotte Roosevelt): Penalties killed the Aggies (2-2) last week in their 15-0 loss to Ann Arbor Gabria Richard. Mount Carmel (1-3) was hammered last week by Pontiac Catholic, 48-0. Picks -

The game, postponed because of heavy thunderstorms Friday night, was rescheduled for Saturday on Stevenson's muddy field.

The Spartans were losers in nearly every statistical category but the scoreboard.

Salem racked up 327 yards in total offense and missed getting off a 22-yard field goal in the final minute because of a bad exchange on

The Spartans then scored the next 10 points, all coming in the second quarter on Joe Carter's 87yard kickoff return, Sean Emery's extra point and Mark Wolter's 26yard field goal.

Baker's biggest concern is whether the team will score goals. He is banking on the experience of Darrell Sattler (Trenton), Larry Pilut (Detroit), Steve Ramberg (Farmington) and Lief Gustafson (Lansing).
"These are take charge guys and I hope they will be able to provide some leadership for our younger players," Baker said. "Gustafson could be a big plus for us. He played on our fourth line last year, but he's worked very hard over the summer. He has a great shot and he's very intelligent on the ice." .

Brennan proves pro value

Yeah, that's it. First and foremost, Brian Brennan is aggressive. He's always known what he wanted, from his days at Birmingham Brother Rice to Boston College to the Cleveland Browns, and he always went after it.

No, wait. What about depend-able? That's what his coaches call him - dependable. Steady. A surehanded receiver who'll catch anything within a fingertip's reach.

Of course, that doesn't say enough about his smarts. Isn't that his most notable quality? He knows how to get the job done. He knows how to survive. He sees things on a football field that would escape the most astute players.

And then again, he contributes in all sorts of ways. He's a great influence in the locker room, a leader even though he's got only two years of experience. He's a contributor.

WELL, THERE you have it. A bundle of reasons why Brian Brennan is a quality pro football player.

Which is what Brennan must have - a multitude of different qualities. Because, you see, he lacks the innate physical attributes possessed by most pro players.

In pro football the greatest needs are size, speed and quickness, all natural abilities that can't be taught. A college player might get by with two of the three, but it takes an exceptional person to make it in the pros without vast reserves of all of them.

Brennan has quickness. His speed is ordinary — actually, he's slow by wide receiver standards. And size? He's 5-foot-9, 178 pounds. In a world of Refrigerators he's the size of a popsicle.

But 'everything Brennan does makes him valuable to the Browns. Actually, invaluable.

You and a dozen buddies can argue for the next decade which is Brennan's greatest quality as a proplayer and not reach a consensus. above the rest. It's really a combination of all his talents.

Because what Brian Brennan is, first and foremost, is a winner.

HOW MANY times does he have to prove it? At Brother Rice, he helped the Warriors win a state title. At Boston College, he combined with Doug Flutie to help bring respectability to a struggling

The Browns, for years one of the doormats of the NFL, went to the playoffs last season. It was Brennan's second year with the team.

"Whoa there, pardner," you say.
"You tryin' to tell me Brennan was the main reason these teams became winners? You sayin' he's a franchise player?"

No, I'm not. Brennan's physical abilities are too limited to turn a loser into a winner.

But wherever he's been, his teams have won. Brennan gets the job done, one way or another. And it's guys like him, players who always find a way to win, that make winners out of losers.

SUNDAY'S GAME against the Detroit Lions was proof of his influential capabilities. On 17 of the Browns' 24 points, Brennan played a vital role.

• With 11:41 to go in the opening half, the Lions' Devon Mitchell cracks into Cleveland's Kevin Mack at the Lions' 2-yard-line. The ball popps loose, rolling free in the end zone. The inevitable pile-up follows, but when the bodies are unraveled, Brennan is the one clutching the ball. Touchdown.

"I basically missed my block," Brennan said afterward, a smile creasing his face. "I was saying to myself, 'I'm going to hate to see this on the film.' The ball popped loose and I fell on it."

· Fourth quarter, score tied at 14. The Browns mount a drive that results in a 24-yard field goal by Chris Bahr. The drive goes 58

yards in 10 plays, including two clutch catches by Brennan. Both are good for 10 yards and a first down. His second catch puts Cleveland in field goal position at the 19. It raises Brennan's receiving totals for the season to 12 catches, 154 yards, best on the team among wideouts. • Fourth quarter still, with the Browns chinging to that 17-14 lead. Their ball, first down at the Detroit 49. As the ball is snapped, Brennan, flanked left, steps back a few yards to grab Kosar's lateral. He cocks his arm and flings a perfect 35yard strike to Herman Fontenot, who is tackled at the Lion 14. Three plays later, Curtis Dickey punches in from the 1 for the deciding TD.

"We practiced that twice this week," said Brennan of his clutch toss. "Yes, I thought it was (going to be) a touchdown. We'd run a screen pass to set up the play."

Did he have anything to do with the call? "It's not my place to make play suggestions," he answered modestly. Prompted further, Brennan added, "Earlier I said (to the coaches) the defensive backs were reacting quickly. I thought the double-pass, might

THAT PLAY and Brennan's fumble recovery for a TD brought a bevy of reporters to the Browns' locker room searching for him. They all asked the same questions. and with little variation Brennan patiently supplied the same an-

Describe your fumble recovery, Brian: "A tremendous play?" he said sarcastically, his grin widening as the TV cameras rolled. "I the right time."

What about playing against the Lions, Brian? Weren't they your childhood idols? "My rookie year it might have meant something," was his polite reply. "I've been in the league three years now. It was no

And the pass play: "I was a quarterback in high school at Brother Rice. I like to throw the ball, I threw it a lot at Boston College. The only guy I had to worry about was the safety, and I led (Fontenot) away from him."

CLEVELAND HEAD coach Marty Schottenheimer called the option pass "well-executed by Brian and William (Fontenot)."

Cleveland assistant coach Joe Pendry (formerly an assistant at Michigan State) had this to say about Brennan: "First of all, he's a very good athlete. He has great quickness, coordination and agility not great speed. But he's very dependable. He'll catch the ball, and we recognize him as a big-play type of guy."

Here's Fontenot's description: Brian is a very smart player. Most of the things he does are very intelligent. He's always there - a very reliable football player. He keeps everybody going and he gets the job done. He's a hard worker."

SO, THERE you have it. And there you don't have it. What makes Brian Brennan - small and slow by accepted standards in his line of work - successful is nothing. Or at least no one thing.

He works hard, he's good with the public and his teammates, he's dependable, he's smart, he's aggressive. What he is not is a loser.

As Brennan was attempting to make his way to the locker room door, he was sidetracked by yet one more reporter. "Were you lucky to win, Brian?" he asked, poking a microphone in Brennan's face.

Schoolcraft spikers stay on course

A year ago, Schoolcraft College's volleyball team lost to University of Michigan-Dearborn in the finals of the UM-D tournament.

On Saturday, the same two teams met in the finals of the same tournament. And the host Wolves fielded the same team that won for them last year.

The only difference this time around were the results. SC displayed the new, improved version of the Lady Ocelots with a 15-13, 15-12, 15-12 victory.

'We are definitely stronger than The Engineers open their 40-game last year's team," said SC coach Tom Teeters. "We do lack in a couple of areas, namely consistency and

"But one of our strengths is our gan-Dearborn, we were down 7-0 and 12-3 in the third game and came back to win it. The score does not affect our play."

ANOTHER SC strong point this season is its hitting. In the final match, Kim Relyea - who together with teammate Patty Kozicki was named to the all-tournament team had 15 kills in 30 attacks with three errors. Jill Ehlert had 14 kills in 27 attacks with just one error and remained one of the team's top passers.

Sue Cyrus, a Garden City native just rounding into shape after offseason knee surgery, had 11 kills in 32 attacks with three errors and scored the final three points of the match. Kozicki enjoyed her best day of the season setting, and Diana Dietz contributed seven kills in 30 attacks with just one error against

Theaters look to lively seasons

By Cathie Breidenbach special writer

THE UPCOMING theater season offers dozens of comedy and musical productions to tickle your funny bone and set your feet tapping.

To balance the lighter fare, professional and community theaters will produce a number of classic dramas and mystery intrigues during the season. In recent years the divisions between drama, comedy and musicals have blurred, as more and more productions integrate music, serious drama and comedy into the same show. It's not a new idea. Will Shakespeare was a memorable master of the technique, but the results of the trend make for a theater season both rich and lively.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE GUILD opens with Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite," three one acts about married life, which take place at different times in the same suite at the Plaza Hotel. "Plaza Suite" runs weekends Nov. 7-15 at the Plymouth Central Middle School on Main and Church streets in Plymouth.

When the glamorous leading lady is murdered at a community theater, "Murder Takes the Stage" weekends Jan. 30 to Feb. 7. Plymouth Theatre Guild's final show of the season will be Herb Gardner's "A Thousand Clowns," which will run weekends May 8-16. This heartwarming comedy tells of an unemployed comedy writer who tangles with a sociologist over the unconventional upbringing he's providing for his nephew.

SPOTLIGHT PLAYERS of Westland will open with Mary Chase's "Harvey," a comedy about an invisible six-foot rabbit. "Harvey" will run weekends Friday, Oct. 10, to Saturday. Oct. 18, at John Glenn High School on Marquette Road between Wavne and Newburgh roads in Westland. In January, Spotlight Players will produce Tennessee Williams'

lowed in April by Neil Simon's "Star Spangled Girl."

THEATRE GUILD OF LIVONIA-REDFORD opens its 33rd season with two one-acts, "Laundry and Bourbon" and "Lone Star," on Friday-Saturday, Oct. 10-11, 17-18 and 24-25. The first play is about three wives who trade front-porch gossip in a small Texas town. In "Lone Star," two good ol' boy brothers and their nerd companion reminisce in the backvard of a bar.

The theater guild season continues with "Fool for Love," Sam Shepard's spellbinding drama about the love affair between a half brother and half sister. The play will be presented Nov. 21-22, 28-29 and Dec. 5-6.

The theater guild's major production, the musical "Nine," will play weekends from Feb. 13 to March 1 at the guild's playhouse on Beech Daly Road south of Five Mile in Redford. Based on Fellini's "81/4." "Nine" tells of a film director's midcareer spiritual crisis as he remembers all the significant women in his Neil Simon's "Brighton Beach Memoirs," a young man's story of the struggles growing up in a Brooklyn household in 1937, ends the season April 24-25, May 1-2 and 8-9.

SCHOOLCRAFT COLLEGE PLAYERS opens its theater season with "The Man Who Came to Dinner" weekends Friday, Oct. 31, thorough Sunday, Nov. 9. On the nights of Friday, Oct. 31, and Saturday, Nov. 1, dinner will be served before the production. Sophocles great classic, "Oedipus the King," will run weekends March 6-15, with dinner theater an option for the March 13-14 performances only.

Call 591-6400 Ext. 265 for ticket information on productions at Schoolcraft College on Haggerty Road between Six and Seven Mile. roads in Livonia.

MEADOW BROOK THEATRE, at. will produce Tennessee Williams' Oakland University in Rochester steamy "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," fol-Hills opens with "Richard III," Shakespeare's tale of the hunchbacked king who reputedly had his nephews murdered in the Tower of London. In this powerful drama, which runs Thursday, Oct. 9, to Sunday, Nov. 2, Shakespeare created his most fascinating villain.

The Detroit-area premiere of "Foxfire," written by Susan Cooper and Hume Cronyn and billed as a folk comedy with music, will run Nov. 6-30. Ebeneezer Scrooge will be back Dec. 4-28, by popular demand, in Dickens' joyous holiday story, "A Christmas Carol." Meadow Brook begins the New Year with the passionate conflict of Sicilian fisher-folk in Tennessee Williams' moving drama, "The Rose Tattoo," which runs Jan. 1-25.

George Feydeau's hilarious French farce, "A Flea in her Ear," tells a tale of a wife who suspects her husband of fooling around. "Flea," set in Paris at the turn of the century, runs Jan. 29 to Feb. 22, to be followed by the Detroit-area premiere of Hugh Whitemore's "A Pack of Lies." This engrossing drama about Russian espionage in Britain centers on a Scotland Yard investigation.

Woody Allen puts his comic genius to work on the subject of romance in "Play it Again, Sam," which runs March 26 to April 19. Meadow Brook will end the season with the Agatha Christie thriller, "Go Back for Murder," set to run April 23 to May 17.

THE BIRMINGHAM THEATRE steps lightly into its season with Bob Fosse's exhilarating dance extravaganza, appropriately called "Dancin'," which runs Sept. 30 to Oct. 26. Neil Simon's "The Odd Corple" gets a new twist when Oscar and Felix become Olive and Florence in the classic comedy to run Nov. 4-30. "Fiddler on the Roof" comes to the Birmingham Dec. 30 to Jan. 25, with the incomparable music of Block and Harnick and the warmth of the unforgettable farmer/philosopher,

Will-O-Way Repertory Theatre, which had troubled finances, is back for another season in Birmingham. Carl Fishe (Jeft), Louis Jaros,

C.J. Nodus and Robert Dunn perform in the season's opener, "A Touch of Spring," continuing through Saturday, Oct. 25.

The singing and dancing little sisters of Hoboken make light in "Nunsense" to run Feb. 10 to March 8. Then "Evita" commands the Birmingham stage March 17 to April 12. The fascinating tale about Argentina's controversial Evita Peron is set to music by the composer of "Cats." "Little Shop of Horrors," to run May 5-31, closes the season on a funny high note.

For ticket information about productions at the Birmingham Theatre on Woodward Avenue just south of Maple Road, call 644-9225.

THE ACTORS ALLIANCE THE-ATRE COMPANY is pursuing new ventures this season including a revival of last year's successful Christ-mas production, "Miracle on 34th Street," which will play at Detroit's Orchestra Hall during Thanksgiving

Week Nov. 23-25 in three matinee performances for student groups. The limitations of Actor Alliance's previous home in the gym of the International School in Southfield led artistic director Jeff Nahan to revamp plans for this season and find larger houses to stage productions. Other season plans include reviving the thought-provoking play, "The Women Here Are No Different," during Women's Awareness Week Most promising of the theater's special projects is a Festival of New Michigan Plays, which Actors Alliance will stage in conjunction with Michigan's sesquicentennial in June and July. The company will select four plays from those submitted and produce them to honor Michigan art-

Despite a distinctly pretty leading lady (Sally Dubats) and a set with some panache, the Will-O-Way production of "A Touch of Spring," directed by Celia Merrill Turner, lacks sizzle in the romance department. A romance without sexual sizzle is like flat champagne, no matter where it's served. The play by Samuel Taylor is a frivolous little love story made palatable by the decadent charm of an Italian P.T. Barnum named Baldessare Pantalone (let that name roll off your tongue with all eight syll-ables to get the flavor of the man's Italian brand of chutzpah).

This story takes place in romantic Rome in the springtime when a supposedly dynamic American businessman (Robert Dunn) comes to find the body of his father who died in a car

He finds instead a lovely English girl whose mother died in the same dence turns out to have been a hot "same time next year" kind of affair between her mother and his father. Under the influence of the outra- freelance writer.

ous Italian huckster named above (played with sleazy charm by C.J. Nodus), the American busine and the English girl fall in love.

ROBERT DUNN lacks the impatient mastery his character demand both in love and in business and he's no match for his wife (Francine Hachem) who's capable, pushy and not particularly likeable. Why he opts to get away from her is obvious. Why he stays with her at all is not.

With great good humor, the play pits the righteous Type A American way of getting things done against the relaxed Italian lifestyle where lunch takes three hours and love is a time - honored excuse for nearly anything. The Italians may have something there, even if the Antidefamation League would argue with implications in the play.

"A Touch of Spring" seems designed to showcase hearthrob leads who radiate romantic energy. As diligently as the leads try in the Will-O-Way production, the chemistry between them just doesn't work.

Homey-rama

Idea homes get 'lived-in' look

Don Lonski (left) and Carl Freiwald are part of the design team that did three of the 12 houses in this year's Homearama, held in Livonia this year. Believability is the design firm's trade-

LOT OF clients of the interior design firm of Perlmutter and Freiwald never live in the homes decorated for them. In fact, they never intended to. The Franklin firm has become of the area's foremost designers of builder developer model

For the fourth straight year the designers have been selected to furnish model homes in Homearama. This year the showcase of homes is being held in Livonia, continuing through Oct. 12.

Three of the dozen models are Perlmutter and Freiwald creations - Bonadeo Builders' Tudor, Biltmore's Dorchester and Curtis' Newport.

The specialty accounts for 25 percent of the firm's business according to Carl Freiwald, half of the partnership of Perlmutter and Freiwald. With Jack Perlmutter and 26 employees, the designers operate from a Franklin road address with warehouses in Oak Park and Farmington.

WORKING WITH builders requires a little more than just being a good interior designer, Freiwald

"Our objective is to sell their product - the home. We work with the same builders over and over again, so we must be successful. A lot of 'decorators' just want to show their designs.

To sell that product, Freiwald said, requires looking at the people who are likely to buy it. "We look at the product. Who is it targeted for economically? What's the age, life style, part of town? We try to key that toward the builder's market.

While the majority of P & F's regular individual clients own homes of $200,000 and up, Homearama models and other builders' projects undertaken have ranged $150,000-$175,000, a prime consideration in planning.

"Livonia, for instance," Freiwald said, "is a family area. We wouldn't out in slick marble and glass tables with white leather couches. We're creating warm, comfortable, family-oriented homes for Livonia."

P & F's contract with builder/ developers ideally begins before the construction crews ever see the site. The consultants often advise on architecture, room-planning and exteriors as well. Involvement in the early stages allows the principals to buy furniture and accessories specifically for a project. They visit New York, Dallas and other design centers frequently on buying trips for models.

"THE BOTTOM LINE is will the customer buy the home. A lot of times it's the interior that sells a home. We give them what they want and expect in that home. Are they expecting marble in the master bath? In West Bloomfield it's a must. Is it a $160,000 home in Farmington Hills? Ceramic baths are a must."

A potential customer must feel comfortable in the home and able to relate to living there, Freiwald said. "We have to make the models believable. We rarely use way-out furniture forms; the average cusshow a floating bed and electronic gadgetry. It has to be conservative, within the realm of believability, without being boring."

Part of the trick of believability are the little touches, said Dan Lonski, P & F's "ace in model design." Once the tone, direction and color have been selected and the floor, and wall coverings and major furniture chosen, Lonski steps in to add the final touches - towels, soans, flower arrangements. For a recent Sterling Heights condominium project, he stopped at a local flower store to see "what was desirable for that area. It was not orchids. In Bloomfield, you can get a little wilder."

Lonski's touches are evident in the Homearama models - sports posters in a teen boy's room, a doll's tea set and fashionable barrettes in a young girl's room, oven mitts on a kitchen counter, a knitting basket of yarn and needles.

The idea is to give it a unique character, something to remember, Lonski said. Several years ago it was a bedroom scenario - a bedtray with stationery on it and a half-finished letter extolling the new home. It ended "Whoops. There's someone at the door to deliver the Seville . . . " There was a Seville in the garage, and the idea, Freiwald said, was a real showstopper. "It sounds dumb, but it's interesting that people notice that attention to detail.

THIS YEAR'S showstopper is likely to be the life-size plaster monkey installed by Lonski in the greenhouse of the Dorchester mod-

'We have to make the models believable. We rarely use way-out furniture forms: the average customer has to be able to project themselves there.'

- Carl Freiwald

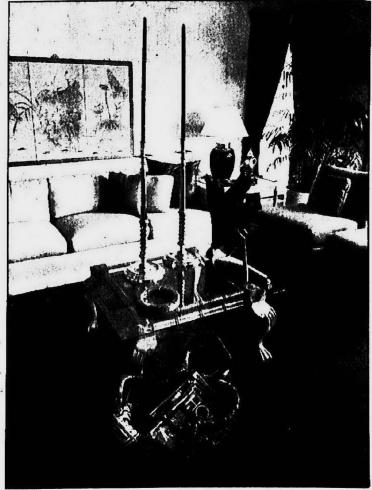

Occasionally the designers are too successful and model viewers relate too well. Freiwald tells of the time they filled empty brandname perfume bottles with colored water to put on display. The bottles were pilfered. "Next time we filled them with vinegar."

Model visitors have also poked holes in lacquered bread on display and even taken bites. Small strips of wallpaper have been ripped off the walls for samples.

Builders' schedule delays have also meant times when P & F staff people have worked right up to the time of the model opening, and sometimes beyond. In one Southfield project, scheduled for a VIP open house at 6 p.m., they started bringing the furniture in at 5 p.m. while 10 guests stood around waiting for entry.

The delay posed little problem for the designers, except for the canvas covered couch, which was to be hand-painted. The couch was completéd, guests were let in and two staff people were posted to prevent guests from sitting on the

Rolling Mennonite interest gathers Moss fans

By Ariene Funke special writer

HE PAINTINGS of P. Buckley Moss draw the viewer into a peaceful world filled with gentle people and Moss, a Virginia artist who has won international acclaim for her paintings of Mennonite people, recently visited the Frame Works Gallery in Plymouth to publicize her work and meet with fans.

"I don't do anything to order," explained the 53-year-old artist. "I have to be inspired. If I'm inspired, I will do it.'

Moss, who likes to be called Pat, grew up on Staten Island, N.Y. For the past 20 years, she has lived in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, where she became acquainted with the simple, deeply religious Amish and Mennonite people who live a bygone lifestyle.

"I WAS ATTRACTED to the Mennonites," said Moss, who expresses her own spiritual beliefs through her art. "I admire their wholesomeness and goodness."

The Moss paintings of Mennonite themes, often in pale green and purple hues, evoke peace and tranquility, a haven from the often-frantic modern pace. Moss allows the viewer insight into a private, littleknown people.

Mennonite men are depicted with beards, their heads covered by large black hats. Women and girls wear demure caps, long dresses and aprons. Typically, they are shown in 'a rural setting, riding in horse-drawn buggies, standing in front of church, clad in wedding garb or making quilts.

Often the backdrop is stark, windswept or snow-covered.

"She has a strong following here," said Alvin Larson of the Frame Works. "We've drawn people (customers) from the western suburbs, Rochester and Birmingham."

MOSS ASKS EACH person buying a print of painting: "Where did you first see my works?" She seems genuinely interested in their answers, and they discuss titled paintings as if they were old friends. A relaxed and unpretentious Moss makes suggestions on how the paintings should be displayed.

Her works are available as watercolors, original prints (lithographs, silk screens and etchings) and offset lithographs. Only selected galleries carry her pieces. Prices range from around $20 for a small print, to several thousand dollars for an original watercolor.

Moss also has created collections of porcelain collector plates and figurines. One example of her Mennonite theme is "Country Road," which depicts a Mennonite couple riding in a horse and buggy. It costs $375 framed. Another piece shows a Mennonite mother with baby standing in front of a plain, white church. A large original watercolor, entitled "Unity of Joy," carries a $15,000 price tag.

This was a Mennonite boy dying of leukemia," she explains while signing her name to a print showing a youth in a rural, Mennonite setting.

MOSS ALSO IS fond of painting stately geese and horses, because they are "symbols of stability. Canada geese stay together for life."

In her porcelain plates, Moss is challenged by the necessity of developing harmony and perspective within a small, rounded space. For Buckley, the round plate duplicates an endless circle, symbolizing family and love.

Moss attended Cooper Union, a prestigious art school in New York. During this time, she transcribed and illustrated Thomas Aquinas' "Book on Man."

"I was a very idealistic person," she said.

She married and had six children. Although busy, she always squeezed in time for her art.

'I got started the very hard way," Moss said. "I had my family and painted. You like doing your work and enjoying your family. And as your family grows, you can move

AFTER MOVING TO Virginia, Moss began showing her work at sidewalk art shows and mall exhibits. At that time, her watercolors sold for around $10 each. After meeting some Mennonite people while attending country auctions, Buckley found a tranquil world to reproduce on canvas.

The Coca-Cola Co., headquartered in Atlanta, boosted her career by buying several of her paintings. Today the highly successful Moss tra-ventensively, both in the United States and abroad, promoting awareness and culture. She works in a converted barn studio in Virginia and another studio in Florida. As has been her lifelong habit, she often naps in the early evening, then paints through the night and early Success has given Moss the freedom to do the kind of work she most enjoys, but it has placed heavy demands on her privacy and her high work standards.

So much can be said for art history

person you are talking to starts a sentence with "Of course, you know . . ." For example, a woman recently said to me, "Of course, you 're familiar with Malevich."

Malevich? I thought to myself, I wonder if he is a hockey player. Placing my hand to my forehead, I said something brilliant: "Er . . . Um . . . Of course."

"Oh, I'm sure you would know his style," she continued. "Early on, his work was fauve, then cubistic and finally he was the founder of superma-

"Oh, yes ... Um ... sure. Malevich..." I sputtered, praying all the while that someone or something would interrupt this conversation. In desperation, I asked some fake-out question like, "His most active yers were in early . . . or was that late?"

"Early 1900s," she beamed with joy believing that I recalled Malevich's work. Finally, I cut the act and admitted that "art history classes for me were a great time to catch up smarter?

on my rest. I am the worst when it comes to history."

Sure, I felt like a dumbhead, but at least my confession left me with a clear conscience. Art is such a vast subject. You could spend a lifetime trying to learn just the different styles and techniques and terms. So, from time to time, I will interject into my column a definition of a particular technique, procedure or material - maybe even a little art his-

For example, pointillism.

Pointillism is a painting procedure in which dots or spots of color are used to create colors and values by optical mixing. For example, dots of red and yellow used side by side blend optically to create orange when viewed from a distance; closely linked with impressionism; also called divisionism, simultaneous contract, neoimpressionism, and chroma luminiarism; prominent artist involved include Surat and Signac. Since this is the time for program changes on TV, I thought it might be a good time to make format changes in my column. I receive so many questions that, I would like to devote more space to questions and answers. Incidentally, I love to receive questions in the mail. In case you are bashful, I will not print your name with the question.

By the way, I will be interviewing my attorney soon. His specialty is patents, copyrights, trademarks etc., so if you have any questions on this subject, send them in or call me at 522-6311.

Tips and hints are such timesavers and I know everyone enjoys them so I will be including some of them. Here's some examples:

When a stretched canvas is out of shape, lay it down on a flat surface, wet the spot with clean water and let dry. The stretched spot will be flat

In the coming weeks, we're going to answer lots of questions, teach you terms and define techniques, give you some tips and hints and even . . . ugh, throw in a little art
