No cost to city to OK sewer pact

If a long-planned project to in-their membership in the consortium Wayne and Oakland counties fails to materialize, promoters won't be able to point the finger of blame at the city of Plymouth.

The City Commission Monday agreed to join the North Huron Valley/Rouge River Valley Waste Water Control System.

JOINING the consortium will give the city two benefits it doesn't now have - an annual audit of the system's finances and a voice on a rate review committee, West said.

However, he doesn't expect either of those to happen until the sewer system is built Upgrading the sewer system was proposed to deal with explosive growth in the western suburbs. Plymouth and Canton township officials have maintained that allocation of construction costs is unfair. The Plymouth Township board is expected to receive its latest cost estimate from Wayne County by next Tuesday's meeting, said Supervisor building moratorium as a result. Both Plymouth and Canton townships have filed lawsuits relating to the on-going sewer dispute. Other communities in the service area are Wixom, Novi, Northville, Northville Township, Van Buren Township, Livonia, Redford, Westland, Garden City, Inkster, Dearborn

Sales techniques fascinate businessman

By Susan Steinmueller staff writer

Canton businessman Phil La-Joy's new sales and marketing class, offered by Plymouth-Canton Community Education programs, narrows the gap between the real world and ivory tower academia.

In fact, some of the concepts taught by LaJoy in this "hands on" class are the same ones he teaches when conducting management and sales training sessions for employees of major organizations such as Xerox Corp. - a fact his students obviously appreciate.

"So far it's been a blaring success," said community education job placement coordinator Liz Barker of the new class. "Students are transferring into his class. "We'u like to see more business community members teaching for LaJoy said he accepted the invitation to teach the class because he enjoys serving his community.

I love doing it, and it's lots of fun. I enjoy this kind of thing very LAJOY, 42, a longtime Canton Township resident, is president and owner of Human Resources Development Systems, a sales and management development training company.

Clients include his former employer, University Microfilms Inc. of Ann Arbor, owned by Xerox Corp., for which he was responsible for sales and management training before establishing his own compa-

So, it's probably natural that a lot of his class is oriented toward training

"It's hard to take the trainer out of me. A lot of my class is the practical, hands-on things that I'm trying to give. What I've tried to do is share with them the various kinds of sales techniques that effective salespeople use, and also the kinds of things that management are confronted with in industry. To give an example, last night we had a class in problem solving. I take them through the way that actual problem solving is taught to supervisors and managers in major corporations. There is lots of role playing, simulation and practice.

"Many of the concepts are the kinds of things that are being taught in major organizations in terms of sales and management."

He also incorporates in the class some of his own philosophy, which has helped him to be a success in business - a philosophy that includes hard work, preparation and setting goals.

"If you work hard and prepare for things, you're going to be suc-

LAJOY discovered his penchant for sales training when he conducted training sessions as a personnel manager at United Parcel Service. He was employed at UPS for 10 years, during which time he was transferred to Oklahoma.

"I realized I loved to get up in front of a group, and do that. I just loved training.

He also was successful at it, and came back to Michigan to join Xerox in sales training in 1976.

When I was at Xerox I really got involved in it." Along the way, he founded a chapter of the American Society for Training and Development in LaJoy's latest venture is buying an Ann Arbor franchise of Norrell Services Inc., the world's third largest temporary service agency, according to LaJoy. After only one year, he said, he is looking forward to his company joining Norrell's "president's club" for those franchises with high sales volume. And he expects to open another Norrell franchise in Lansing

COMMUNITY activities for La-Joy include serving as tournament director for the annual Memorial Day Soccer Tournament, in which 200 teams compete, and involvement with area youth soccer programs.

Hey, pumpkin artists, let's go

The Great Pumpkin Caper is back. Buoyed by last year's success during its initial Halloween promotion, the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce will again sponsor free pumpkin carving and costume contests for children who live in Plymouth and Canton.

Pumpkin carvers ages 6-13 are invited to The Gathering near Kellogg Park in downtown Plymouth from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 25.

There is no charge if parents preregister their children by noon Friday, at the Chamber of Commerce office, 188 N. Main. 453-1540. Those who don't pre-register will be charged $2 on Sunday

Pumpkins and safe carving tools will be provided. Children can enter one of two categories - carved only or carved with added decorations.

The three levels of competition are ages 6-7, 8-10 and 11-13. Prizes will be awarded at all three levels. Children must do their own work.

PUMPKINS must be left at The Gathering Sunday for judging. They will be stored then displayed on when winners will be announced Prizes include basketballs autographed by Isiah Thomas, watches and tickets to Boblo.

There's more to Sunday's activities than carving pumpkins.

Free movies will be shown at the Penn Theater from 2:30 to 5 p.m., puppet shows will be presented periodically, and eider and cookies will be available for purchase. New this year is a baking contest for kids 8-13. Pumpkin must be part of the recipe. The finished product - plus a copy of the recipe - are due at a table near The Gathering by 3 p.m. Sunday.

Moms and dads can help on that one. Again, no entry fee.

The Great Pumpkin Caper climaxes next Thursday with free trick-or-treating in community businesses for children 13 and younger who are accompanied by a parent. Consider it a warm-up for the real thing on Friday.

Kids should check in at Kellogg Park 5-6:30 p.m. to pick up a bag for their treats and to have their costumes judged. Trick-or-treating will go 5-7:30 p.m.

EVERYONE is asked to return to Kellogg Park at 7:30 p.m. when the carving and costume winners will be announced.

Carvers also may retrieve their pumpkins at that time.

Chamber chanizers estimate that 3.000 youngsters participated last year. They expect a bigger crowd this year with good weather. "It went fantastic," said David Varga, chairman of the event. "The bottom line is just a safe Halloween for children.

Merchants who help sponsor the promotion and pass out treats to the kids will have a chance to get in on the fun. too. Their window decorating cortest will kick off the festivities Saturday.

Plymouth-Canton musicians defend state title

The Plymouth Centennial Educational Park Marching Band will be among 27 bands competing in the Michigan Competing Band Directors Association State Marching Band Show this weekend.

The competition will be from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. Saturday at CEP stadium on Canton Center Road just south of Joy.

Bands in exhibition will be the Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps. which will start off the evening show at 6:45 p.m., and the Western Michigan University Band at the end of

The CEP Marching Band, directed by James R. Griffith, will be defending the state championship title it has held since 1984.

THE COMPETITION format will include all 27 bands during the preliminary day show, and the top 12 bands - four from each flight during the evening show. The event will begin with those bands entered in Flight II. This classification represents bands with memberships between 86 and 115. Flight II bands in competition will be Ithaca, Southfield, Clarkston, Wyoming Park, Flushing, and Eisen-

The top 12 bands will compete in the evening show for the MCBDA Championship Trophy.

Organizing a state show requires the support of CEP Music Boosters. Every band parent is asked to work on that day, and many of them work from 7 a.m. until midnight. The variety of jobs includes everything from selling food, souvenirs, and programs, to first aid and traffic control. General chairman for the state show is Larry Bowman.

Tickets are available at Sideways on Forest Ave. in Plymouth and at the Trading Post on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth Township. Advance sale price is $4. The day of the show, tickets will be $6.

CEP band sweeps trophies at Durand Invitational

The Plymouth Centennial Educa-tional Park Marching Band marches to a winning beat.

Saturday marked the fourth consecutive year that the band stepped out to win the Grand Champion trophy at the Durand Invitational Marching Band Competition in Durand, in which they competed against 15 other schools.

This also is the fifth week in a row that the band has won the Grand Champion Trophy in marching band competitions. Once again the C.E.P. band, directed by James Griffith, received trophies for best percussion, best winds, best marching and maneuvering, best color guard and best field commanders.

One of the crowd-pleasing musical selections occurs in "Carmina Burana" when trombonist Greg Markley plays a solo from the end zone of the field and the band answers him from

Other musical selections in this year's show include the drum solo "Paradox," "Spanish Dreams" and "Send in the Clowns."

Marching bands in competition are expected to have an improved show each week. The judges review the show from both the field and the press box and record their comments on a tape recorder so that the band's staff can review the com-

The judges also meet with the hand instructors following each competition for an oral critique. These comments are then passed on to the band members so that the show will be even better the next week.

The band now is primed for the state championship to be held this Saturday at the CEP Stadium.

Spook houses scare kids, adults, alike

But area Jaycees and the Wayne County 4-H Club will do their best this week and next to raise the hair on your head and, at the same time, raise money for their community service projects.

Most of the haunted houses opened their doors and coffin lids last week with another set to open Friday

In the meantime, local youngsters and a few brave adults are tip-toeing their way through darkened hallways and corners as they are scared by make-believe monsters in varied costumes and masks, carrying assorted weapons.

At the Wayne-Westland Family YMCA, which includes the Garden City and Canton communities, the haunted house will be open from 7-11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 7 p.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday, through Oct. 31.

The YMCA scares are at the Y barn, 827 S. Wayne Road, south of Cherry Hill. There is an admission.

The 4-H Club will open its haunted house Friday for the weekend and also on Thursday, Oct. 30, at 5454 Venoy, between Michigan Ave. and Van Born, Wayne.

Hours are 6-10 p.m each night. The Westland and Canton Jaycees are again combining efforts to give suburban kids and parents a bit of Halloween fright.

Their haunted house is at Ford near Lilley Road and is open 1-10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 7-11 p.m. Friday and Saturday through Oct. 31.

Kosteva, Jacques vie in 37th state House race

By Diane Gale

Freshman Democrat James Kosteva faces a challenge by Theodore Jacques, a Romulus auto worker, for the 37th District seat in the state House of Representatives.

County 4-H Club.

The district includes part of Canton Township, the city of Wayne, Romulus, Belleville and Van Buren Township.

During his first-term Kosteva, 34, of Canton had four bills enacted covering tax credits, school aid, hunting rules and watercraft registration. He recognizes there isn't "a lot of controversy in these issues," because the bills mainly deal with cutting legislative red-tape.

Jacques, 40, has worked 11 years as an industrial machine repairman at General Motors and serves as vice chairman of the GOP's 15th Congessional District.

He argues the Blanchard administration has an attitude of "spend, spend, spend and that has got to stop. Our current representative is going right along with the program. I think it's time for the meat-axe approach to cut spending.

REFORMING THE public school financing system has been Kosteva's biggest and most controversial fight.

Initially his Tri-Star proposal called for cutting property taxes by about 50 percent and making up the difference by raising the sales tax 50 percent. But the plan has to be changed, Kosteva said, considering the new federal tax law affecting sales taxes

"We could reduce property taxes and reform school finance," Kosteva said. "Right now it makes too big a want to see school districts lose options to pay more to get better schools.

Although Kosteva has rallied a lot of support for his bills, he doesn't consider passing laws the first priority of a legislator.

"Our performance shouldn't be weighed by our batting average on the number of laws we've passed some people may think that's our biggest consideration," said Kosteva, Canton's former planner.

REPRESENTING community concerns during legislative discussions and serving constituents with specific problems are more important tasks than enacting laws, said Kosteva, who has authored 18 bills.

Jacques stresses a need for fewer government rules. Referring to the mandatory seatbelt law he said, "Where do we stop telling people what to do?"

Jacques, who cites his political background as having once worked on the Romulus Beautification Committee, wants to be elected state representative "because I need to give back to my state and country and I think we can do a lot better.

"You can't just sit back and keep complaining without doing anything

If Jacques were elected he promises to work for a smaller and more efficient government that would create jobs.

You start by reducing the tax bill, which will bring more money and create jobs. Reagan is reducing taxes and Blanchard is increasing

James Kosteva

Jacques, who owned Theo's restaurant in Dearborn Heights for five years, said there's a need for stricter sentences for drunk drivers. He called for a ban on allowing offenders to plea bargain to a lower impaired-driving charge.

Crime was identified as the major concern in a poll Kosteva conducted in the district. He supports a need to strengthen the mandatory sentence guidelines and improve victims'

Education, environmental issues, taxes and spending also were top concerns identified in Kosteva's poll.

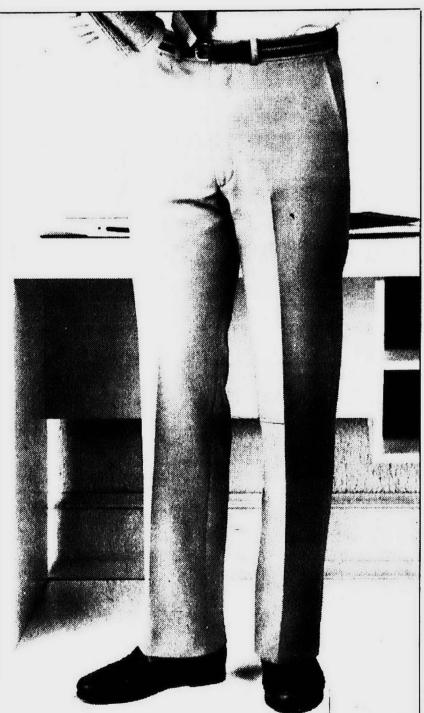

'My campaign has been to ask the people of the district if I've been doing a fair job," Kosteva said. "I listen more and get more feedback from them in this campaign so I can do a better job in the number-one principal role of a legislator."

Proposal D: Voters to decide county drain issue

By Teri Banas staff writer

The Wayne County Drain Commissioner's office is in limbo these days as sponsors of a commission-backed proposal calling for its elimination prepare their case for voters on Nov.

Supporters call the proposal a step toward "total county reform" that would streamline government services by placing the operation under the county's Public Services Department and therefore under direct accountability to the county executive and county commission.

Detractors, principally Democratic Party leaders in Detroit's two Congressional Districts, fear the loss of a historically held Democratic office and plan to campaign against it on election day.

The issue was placed on the November ballot after a yearlong debate among county commissioners, who last May narrowly approved the charter amendment. Some worried openly that state law would prevent absorbing the offices' functions, outlined in the state's Drain Code, by county voters.

In the past year, the office has been criticized for a number of questionable and at times illegal practices, including failure to seek or obtain competitive bids for drain projects, failure to keep accounting records and failure to properly hold public hearings on assessment work.

Since the 1970s, citizens in primarily downriver and western Wayne County communities have organized and filed lawsuits against what they say are excessive charges for repair

COUNTY COMMISSIONER Milton Mack, D-Wayne, who repres Canton Township, said the office lacks a "system of checks and balances" as one single office-holder. decides who will receive drain project jobs, how much will be awarded in each case and how much residents will be taxed for the work. Mack has complained that the office has charged too much, averaging a cost of $100,000 per mile of drain work while individual communities have said they could have done the work for considerably less, or $30,000 a mile.

Under the sproposed change, the commission and county executive would have approval over bid contracts, their cost and the assessment to local residents.

Schoolcraft College trustees have named Jeanne Stempien, an attorney from Northville Township, and Wendell Eugene Smith, a Plymouth resident and the president of a a regional supermarket chain, to two vacancies on the college board of trustees. Stempien and Smith took their oaths of office last night and joined the rest of the board after a single round of balloting.

They were selected from five finalists culled out of a field of 29 original applicants.

Their appointments, which run until the next regular school election in June 1987, fulfill the unexpired terms of former trustees Sharon Sarris and Paul Kadish. Sarris and Kadish resigned last month after announcing plans to move out of the

On specifics, Stempien said: "I would like to see some of the liberal arts programs get combined into technical programs so that people going through a career-oriented, two-year program also get the humanities and communication skills of a liberal arts program."

Before acting on a motion by trustee Laura Toy to record a "unanimous vote" for the appointees, trustees cast five votes for Stempien, three for Smith and two votes for Nancy Kitzman, a Garden City resident who manages a corporate education program for Detroit-Macomb Hospital Corp.

The other two finalists - Thomas Watkins, Jr. of Northville and Robert McMahon, also of Northville did not receive any votes.

Those voting for Smith were trustees Mary Breen, Michael Burley and Harry Greenleaf. Those voting for Kitzman were trustees Laura Toy and Rosina Raymond.

Trustees Breen, Burley, Greenleaf, Toy and Raymond unanimously cast ballots for Stempien

After a short ceremony conducted by U.S. Congressman Carl Pursell R-Plymouth, who conducted the induction, Smith and Stempien joined the board at 8:32 p.m. for the remainder of the regular board meet-

Lucas, Blanchard hit most state issues

By Tim Richard staff writer

The TV cameras were on William Lucas when the Republican challenger said, "The people of Detroit live in fear of crime because (Gov.) Jim Blanchard lives in fear of Coleman Young.'

But the Nov. 4 gubernatorial rivals also covered prisons, economic growth, taxes, local government, abortion and gun control - as well as Mayor Young — in their debate Monday before the Economic Club of Detroit and in a 22-minute news con-

Blanchard stressed his record in economic redevelopment, introducing no new plans.

• CRIME, PRISONS:

Describing the Detroit situation as a "slow, endless riot," Lucas, the Wayne County executive for four years and sheriff for 14 years, vowed his first act as governor would be to issue an executive order "declaring a crime emergency exists in Detroit, taking over the Detroit Police Department and coordinating it with the Michigan State Police."

Lucas said he would deal with young offenders by setting up a new youth detention unit, taking jurisdiction away from the state Department of Social Services.

Blanchard, completing his first term as governor after eight years in the U.S. Congress, said homicide rates rose only 13 percent outstate and 80 percent in Wayne County during Lucas' tenure in county government. "He flunked the test as sheriff," Blanchard said.

The Democratic governor said a high priority is 10,000 new prison cells, "including 5,000 by the end of this year. That's 5,000 fewer crimi-

"COMEBACK STATE?"

Blanchard said studies relating Michigan's business climate 46th really "measured the percentage of unionization

"Michigan led the nation in new manufacturing investment - more than California and Texas combined. It's the small business hotspot of the Midwest," with an "Automation Alley" of high technology rivalling Cal-

Lucas said, "You hear about startups of new businesses. Many are old businesses, Jim, which had to incorporate to avoid liability insurance."

(Republicans charge that many of the 23,000 new incorporations are, for example, taverns that incorporate twice - once for the building, once for the business - in order to reduce exposure to liability suits.)

ECONOMIC TRENDS:

Lucas said 500,000 people and some major companies have moved out of Michigan. "On a clear day you can see Stroh's . . . Wonder Bread . . Vernor's. You can see the buildings, Jim, but where are the peo-Lucas said he would address the cost of doing business - unemployflunked the test as sheriff.' James J.

Blanchard said the state now is gaining population while, on balance, unemployment has been cut in half.

The governor said that in his first term, SBT has been cut $18 million, banking has been deregulated, franchise laws have been eased and securities laws simplified to make it easier for business to lcoate in Mich-

"Our 350,000 new jobs make us sixth in the nation in job growth. We led the nation in new manufacturing investment," Blanchard said, adding: 'Chrysler wouldn't spend $1 billion here and $1 billion in Oakland County if they didn't think Michigan was a good place to do business."

LOCAL GOVERNMENT: At the news conference, Lucas said "of course" he would seek changes in the county home rule act so that Oakland, Macomb and others 'can have what Wayne County has." (Wayne County's reform charter was written under a special act that applies only to Wayne, though other counties would like to follow suit.)

- William

Lucas

Blanchard, eight minutes late, had no chance to answer the question. In his speech, he did say a future priority would be "rebuilding downtowns" in cities besides Detroit, a subject Lucas didn't address.

SCHOOL TAXES:

A bill by state Sen. Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, revives an old idea of sharing industrial property taxes among all school districts. It has many suburban schools up in arms.

Lucas said, "I'm not familiar with the DeGrow bill. I'm very much in favor of a different distribution of school funding. No one has come up with a solution yet."

Late, Blanchard didn't get to address the question. State Treasurer Robert Bowman said the governor hadn't seen the bill yet.

COLLEGE TUITIONS:

Lucas said, "On a policeman's sal-ary, we sent six children to private colleges and most through medical school ... without any government assistance. We made sacrifices."

He said the Lucases couldn't have afforded the BEST tuition investment program that Blanchard has made a top priority for 1986.

Pooh-poohing the idea of a state investment program, Lucas said, "Look at the Zilwaukee Bridge and the People Mover."

Blanchard shot back that Lucas' running mate, state Rep. Colleen Engler of Mount Pleasant, supported the BEST bill, now locked up in the Republican-controlled Senate.

The Blanchard administration

"doubled the number of students receiving grants and increased state support for higher education 45 per-cent," he said.

"In response to our call, the universities and colleges froze tuition for two years so they'd remain truly

FEDERAL-LOCAL RELATIONS:

Citing the strong political support he has received from President Reagan, Lucas said, "Under no circumstances would Gov. Lucas call the president 'Mr. Pruneface,' " as Mayor Young had.

'Nor would I," Blanchard replied, publicly thanking Reagan for assistance to Michigan farmers.

Blanchard cited Livonia Mayor Ed McNamara, the Democratic nominee to succeed Lucas as Wayne County executive, as "part of our winning team."

Blanchard said Lucas had gone "hat in hand" to try to win Young's support and failed. "Hell hath no fury like a politician scorned," he Lucas said he had "co-existed" with Young for 16 years.

Celebration marks SC's 25th

Tie-dye shirts, embroidered jeans and head bands reminiscent of the 1960s are appropriate attire today when Schoolcraft College staff and students kick off the school's 25th anniversary celebration by planting a single blue spruce pinetree on campus at 1 p.m.

The date, Oct. 23, is the same as when the college was founded 25 years ago in 1961, according to Schoolcraft spokeswoman Saundra Florek, and accounts for the 1960s Ceremonies will continue 7-9 p.m. Friday in the Waterman Campus Center, when college officials andguests will fill a time capsule and cut a birthday cake. The five school districts that support the college, Northville, Garden City, Livonia, Clarenceville and Plymouth-Canton, will also be recognized.

THE COLLEGE has much to celebrate. From the handful of students who enrolled in the first courses offered in 1964, enrollment has grown to 11,000 students today.

graduated from the two-year college, 40 percent of whom have transferred to four-year institutions where, Florek said, they normally out-perform other students.

Half of Schoolcraft's students are preparing for immediate employment in the fields of technology, health and culinary arts. "We are well known for our culinary courses," Florek said

She also said Schoolcraft's resource center for women is nationally acknowledged as a model of excellence, and the new business development program, learning assistance program and library are also of noted quality.

THE COLLEGE is funded by money from the state, student tuitions and participating school districts. Voters were asked to consider a millage increase for the college, the first in 20 years, and did so by passing it

Florek said the birthday anniversary celebration is the college's way of "saying thank you to everyone who supports the institution."

The college is on Haggerty, be-tween Six and Seven Mile in Livonia.

Technolgy gets 'extension' help

Michigan Commerce Director Doug Ross said the state is offering a new program to assist small and medium-sized businesses that are considering adopting new, computer-

based manufacturing technology
The Technology Deployment Service (TDS) is designed to assist firms of fewer than 500 employees as they adopt programmable automation.

Like the farmer who has been helped by the Agricultural Extension Service, manufacturers deserve an extension service of their own to assist modernization. TDS is the beginning of that effort," said Ross

He made his remarks at HR Krueger Machine Tool Inc of Farmington, a company helped by TDS.

H.R. Krueger, designers and manufacturers of special machine tools and computer-controlled calibration equipment for the auto industry, received a customized assessment of its operations and a job-training grant for its employees. The company has sales of $15-20 million annu-

TDS PROVIDES clients with several no-cost services, including:

- · A structured review of firm operations and technology.
- · A site visit and written technology assessments by a field representative with a background in private industry and manufacturing · Technical assistance in designing a customized labor training program to support implementation of new technology.

· Grants to help fund customized training programs using a wide variety of public and private training re-

Further, the TDS can also provide access to additional resources that may help Michigan firms to modernize. These may include consultant services and state economic development grant programs.

TDS CLIENTS have the opportunity to utilize five separate stages of assistance. These stages are:

1. An introductory telephone interview with TDS staff in Lansing, consisting of a 30-minute overview of client operations.

- 2. A detailed telephone interview with TDS staff in Lansing, which expands on the introductory interview.
- 3. Visitation to the client site by a TDS field representative of either a one-hour or full-day duration.
- 4. TDS customized written report for the client with further recommendations
- 5. An implementation meeting which is a full discussion of how TDS and other state resources may be used by the client in a modernization project at the firm.

Parsell hits trooper idea

Detroit Police Officers Association (DPOA) and head of a statewide police organization today attacked a proposal by Republican gubernatorail candidate William Lucas to attack the Detroit crime problem by bringing in state

Thursday, October 23, 1986 Q&E

(MAP) and seven-term president of the DPOA, said the Detroit needs funds for more police officers but not state troopers.

(P.C.R.W.G-11A) # 13A

Parsell noted that troopers' top base pay is approximately $2,000 more per year than a Detroit police officers, and that troopers working in Detroit receive an additional 30 cents an hour "hazard Michigan Associaton of Police pay" for working in Detroit.

Auto body engineering now science, exec says

Automotive body engineering has changed from an art to a science, allowing body engineers to play a major role in the future of domestic vehicle manufacturers, according to Chrysler Motors' product development chief. John D. Withrow, executive vicepresident for product development, made the prediction in a recent address at the American Society of Engineers' annual technical seminar dinner in Roma's of Bloomfield.

Withrow said today's body engineers, armed with state-of-the-art technology, can play "a major role in bringing back the dominance that U.S. car makers used to enjoy."

THE REAL KEYS to the survival of the U.S. industry are low-cost, high-quality and innovative products that customers want, he said.

Reflecting on the changes in body engineering from 1958, when he started his automotive career, to 1986, Withrow said body engineering has changed from one of the leasttechnical aspects of the car process to one of the most technical.

"Body engineers, back then, were considered nothing more than tin benders, rags and bags experts.

"Today it's different. Everything is computer-aided design. Computeraided manufacturing. Finite element analysis. Fit and finish," Withrow UTILIZING technology to the fullest is the very heart of body engineering's future, enabling engineers to work quicker and more accurately to accomplish the goals of providing low-cost, high-quality, innovative future products, he said.

Withrow said his remarks applied to body engineers at supplier firms and vehicle manufacturers alike because of the developing long-term relationships between suppliers and original equipment manufacturers. Quality standards will become increasingly prominent for body engineers," Withrow said. "Remember that quality, in its most elementary form, means conforming to the customer's requirements."

Defense, immigration bills split parties

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 6-16.

DEFENSE BILL - By a vote of 283 for and 128 against, the House approved the conference report on the fiscal 1987 Defense Department authorization bill (S 2630).

Area congressmen split across party lines as the bill was adopted.

The legislation continues Congress's efforts to slow the rate of military spending growth in deference to the mounting national debt.

It sets 1987 Pentagon budget authority at $290 billion, only $4 billion above the comparable 1986 figure and about $30 billion below President Reagan's 1987 request. Actual expenditures, approved by separate legislation, are expected to total $274 billion.

Although House and Senate negotiators brought the budget authority in compliance with the 1987 congressional budget resolution, they used what critics saw as creative bookkeeping to achieve the $290 billion figure.

For example, they moved the final military payday of fiscal 1987 to 1988, shifting $2.9 billion in spending to the next fiscal year.

Supporter Les Aspin, D-Wis., said the measure "is probably a very good bill."

Opponent John Porter, R-Ill., said "someday we are going to have to understand that a sound economy is just as important to our national security as a strong military.'

Members voting yes supported the bill. Voting yes: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, Sander Levin, D-Southfield, William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

Voting no: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, William Ford, D-Taylor.

IMMIGRATION REFORM - By a vote of 238 for and 173 against, the House approved the conference report on a bill that attempts to stem the flow of illegal aliens into this country while safeguarding the rights of the millions of foreigners now living here illegally.

The immigration reform measure (HR 3810) is considered landmark legislation because it addresses one of the nation's most pressing problems and ends years of congressional gridlock over the issue. It was headed for likely approval in the Senate and President Reagan's expected signature.

The bill grants legal residency, and a chance at citizenship, to illegal aliens who entered America before 1982, and to undocumented immigrants who worked in American agriculture for at least 90 days in the year ending May 1, 1986.

To remove the economic incentive behind most illegal immigration, the bill imposes civil and criminal penalties against employers who knowingly hire undocumented work-

Supporter Bill McCollum, R-Fla., said the bill's amnesty section was too generous but he would "hold my nose and vote for this conference report" because it combats "the invasion that's occurring across our land

Opponent Edward Roybal, D-Calif., denounced the bill as discriminatory to Hispanics and "designed to provide cheap labor for the farmers and growers of this country." Members voting yes supported the immigration bill. Voting yes: Ford, Voting no: Pursell, Hertel, Broom-

TO LEGALIZE ALIENS - By a vote of 192 for and 199 against, the House rejected an amendment elimireform bill (above) that legalizes the residency of illegal aliens who entered this country before 1982 and have lived here continously.

These individuals are estimated to number several million. After receiving amnesty, they would have to wait six years before seeking citizen-

Amendment supporter Joe Barton, R-Tex., said amnesty would "legitimize millions of unconvicted criminals (and) reward them with the most treasured thing a human being on the face of this globe could have the path toward citizenship of Opponent Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., said the amnesty section "will permit this population to come out of the shadows and contribute more to our country.' Members voting yes wanted to eliminate the amnesty section of the immigration bill Voting yes were Republicans Pursell and Broomand Levin. Not voting Ford. PESTICIDE CONTROL - By a vote of 34 for and 45 against, the Senate failed to table (kill) an amendment allowing states to be stricter than the federal government in regulating the pesticide content of food bound for market. Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegle voted no, thus opposing killing the bill.

Voting no were Democrats Hertel

The bill (HR 2482) was sent to conference with the House, which has voted to deny states the power to exceed federal pesticide standards. The bill updates and tightens the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act to make it a more effective combatant against unsafe pesticide ingredients.

Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., who voted to table, said the federal government should be supreme in setting pesticide tolerance levels, because multiple state regulations would cause "chaos in the marketplace" for the food industry.

- MOCKO JUMBIE -

Mocko Jumbie is the art of dancing on tall stilts. It originated in West Africa in the rich religious and cultural heritage of African life. Literally, Mocko means "to see" and Jumbie refers to "spirits." Mocko Jumbie is the tall character on stilts who is able to see the evil spirits approach an African village and chase them away with his dance.

Mocko Jumbie is alive today in several African countries and one of the few places in the Caribbean -the U.S. Virgin Islands where over the years the dance has evolved and become part of festivals and Carnivals.

"This joint effort between government and the industry, I believe, is a major step in providing a workable solution to this most expensive consumer problem.

"In the coming months, I am hoping that the Legislature will take a hard look at the problem and pass the bills needed to get the job done."

Finish county reform; eliminate drain office

Shall the Wayne County home rule charter be amended to eliminate the office of the drain commissioner effective Jan. 1, 1987, and further to separate and distribute the powers and duties of a drain commissioner between the executive and legislative branches in accordance with the general design of the charter?

HE ANSWER is yes. The drain commissioner's office should be integrated into general government, not just because of the charges of mismanagement that have been leveled against drain commissioner Charles Youngblood, but because all public works functions deserve coordination and unified management under the county executive.

Youngblood's critics have accused him of overassessing, giving out contracts without competitive bids, comingling funds and keeping poor records.

Youngblood faced many of the same accusations in his 1982 renomination campaign and voters paid no attention. So it does no good to make Youngblood the issue.

IT DOES, HOWEVER, make sense toexamine the charter amendment as an important step toward completing county-reform that began in 1981 with voter approval of the home-rule char-

At present, the drain commissioner alone decides what work will be performed on more than 400 drains representing some 700 miles of drainage. He decides what contractor will perform the work. He alone determines the total cost to individual taxpayers who live in the drainage district.

Residents who live in a drainage district and have complaints about the cost or the work are powerless to prevent projects from being undertaken. They also are powerless to control the amount of money that will be spent.

The independence of the drain commissioner has resulted in a lack of coordination of the department of roads, department of public works and the drain commissioner. As a result, work is slowed and tax money wasted.

Proposal D would require approval by the county commission of all projects and all appointments. We believe that combining the office of drain commissioner with the department of public

- Establish control over taxing and spending.
- Provide a system of checks and balances (the county executive and board of commissioners).
  - Avoid duplication of services.

• Promote economic development. When voting Nov. 4, don't forget to examine the entire ballot and vote YES on Proposal D. It makes good sense and it's good government.

Rep. Gerry Law 36th House: is best choice

CANTON AND PLYMOUTH residents have a choice to make in the 36th House District between incumbent Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth Township, and Democrat Kathy Reilly of Plymouth Township.

The 36th District includes all of the ship and hulf of Canton Township.

In this district, voters at least have a choice. Reilly is a well-informed candidate who knows the district and what residents are concerned about. While Democrats have not fared well in the 36th District, Reilly is not a token sacrificial offering but has legitimacy as a candidate. For Democrats who aren't independent enough to vote for a Republican, Reilly's name can be selected with confidence. For anyone who is upset with Law's performance, Reilly certainly would not embarrass the district if she went to Lansing.

However, Reilly is not that outstanding or Law that bad to warrant the Observer recommending that Law not be returned to office. Law came to Lansing with a record of public service on the Plymouth Township Board of Trustees and a business background with Ford

While his first term was rather dull, as freshmen terms sometimes can be. Law has since had his moments. The brightest spot this past term was the leadership Law exercised on the location of prisons in the Plymouth-Northville area and the reconversion of DeHoCo to a state prison. While Law takes a conservative position on many issues in Lansing, he is in step with his constituents.

The Observer would like to see Law become more aggressive and exercise leadership more often. We also have not seen the evidence of Law serving constituents and remaining in touch with voters as do other legislators. However, Law has performed well and, on the prison issue, exercised leadership when it was needed. The Observer recommends Gerald Law as the best qualified in the 36th Michigan House District.

CANTON RESIDENTS have a rather easy decision to make in the 37th Michigan House District.

The district basically includes the southern and western portion of the township, and then runs south toward Belleville, Romulus and other commun-

The incumbent freshman James Kosteva, D-Canton, is being challenged by Republican Theodore Jacques of Romulus. Jacques has been a candidate for public office in the past but has not gained from that experience. Jacques remains an unknown who does not campaign enough in Canton to make himself known and does not make himself easily available for interviews with this newspaper when it attempts to introduce him to our readers. If Jacques is that unavailable to the press and to Canton neighborhoods and/or organizations, we have to wonder how available he would De to constituents if elected.

We probably will never find out, though, as Kosteva has become a fastrising star since arriving in Lansing two years ago. Before being elected two years ago to replace Rep. Edward Mahalak, D-Romulus, who resigned for health reasons, Kosteva had a record of service in municipal government including a stint as planning director for Canton Township.

Kosteva, 34, worked in local government on such matters as roads, job retention, economic development, property assessments and taxes. An area resident for three decades, Kosteva had served on the Wayne County Solid Waste Planning Committee before running for the House.

As a freshman, Kosteva has been assigned key committee positions and has been involved in major legislation. While this has occurred, in part, because we have a Democratic governor, another reason is because lawmakers have recognized Kosteva for his leadership potential. We recommend James Kosteva for another term in the state

Dick Austin's last hurrah?

DICK AUSTIN IS TO controversy what L. Brooks Patterson is to the Committee for Humane Treatment of Prisoners: a stranger.

So when an interview with the softspoken secretary of state scares up a scintilla of scintillating scandal, scoopminded scribes take note.

Here is the scoop: Austin missed a question on his last driver's license test.

"I answered that you should drive to the right if there is a barrier in the road," Austin said during a recent campaign-trail stop. "Apparently, you may drive on either side.

Austin chuc-

"I asked the legislators over there what it would take for me to carry Ottawa, and they said I would have to switch parties. I offered them a compromise. I said I would consider retiring after this next term if Ottawa voted for me."

SUCH TALK is not the only hint that Austin, a 73-year-old Democrat, may be running his last campaign. This election is important to him, he said, because it will allow him to preside over the sesquicentennial celebration of Michigan's "rich history."

Retirement is far more likely than voters to oust Austin. The Republican challenger, Birmingham businessman Weldon Yeager, served with Austin over 20 years ago at the state's constitutional convention. But Yeager has had none of Austin's success at the polls. Austin says he respects Yeager but doesn't expect a tight race.

When he retires, Austin will leave a legacy of an office that has been transferred from the patronage-packed domain of his predecessor, James O'Hare, to an efficient, competent, computer-age system of doling out drivers' licenses and license plates.

Austin took over an operation that would not accept personal checks. Today, most people can order by mail the plates that expire on their birthday, making long end-of-March lines a bygone scene.

AS SECRETARY of state, Austin tries to swamp drivers with a barrage of safety information. He was a strong advocate of mandatory seat-belt use. He thinks the 55 miles per hour speed limit saves lives but he believes a speed limit of 65 would be just as effective if Austin is particularly proud that Michigan was the first state to allow voter registration at secretary of state offices and he speaks fondly of the Canadian system where it is the government's responsibility to register voters. "Registration should not be an artificial barrier to the right to vote," he said.

No matter where they register, most voters this November will likely again cast their ballots for Austin.

"I believe I have established a good record for achievement," he said. Even those folks in Ottawa County would grant him that.

Challenger will not unseat Geake

STATE SEN. Robert Geake, R-Northville, is an entrenched incumbent in the 6th District, which includes the cities of Livonia, Plymouth and Northville and the townships of Redford, Canton, Plymouth and Northville. Would-be opponents have shied away, knowing what kind of money and effort are needed to beat a campaigner the caliber of Geake.

That's unfortunate, because many of his constituents long for stronger representation in the Michigan Legislature.

Geake has been senator since 1977, and due to his senior status is in a position of influence. He chairs the senior citizens and social services committee and is vice chair of the senate appropriations committee.

Despite that, he's exhibited little leadership.

He disappointed Livonians in recent years with his inability to obtain more racetrack revenue from the state.

Plymouth-area constituents were greatly disturbed a couple of years ago by his inertia in keeping prisons out of the district.

While Geake has demonstrated these and other shortcomings, we don't see a panacea in his opponent, Thomas Healy, special assistant to the state attorney general.

Healy, a Plymouth resident, has failed to wage an aggressive campaign against the incumbent. An intelligent and likeable man, he hasn't proved any match for Geake.

Because voters will be asked to make a choice, we recommend they re-elect Geake. But at the same time, we exhort residents and local public officials to monitor the actions of their senator, letting him know of their needs, views and about what kind of job he's doing.

And it's not too early for party organizations to begin recruiting and grooming candidates — serious, civicminded individuals able and willing to wage strong battles at the ballot box.

Geake does offer experience, and is in a position to help pave the way to progress for those he represents.

We urge Sen. Geake to seize his opportunity to lead, and voters to ensure that he does. Many important issues affecting the diverse 6th District will be discussed in the upcoming term. Residents need a representative who aggressively will take the initiative in defending their interests.

Bond forged long ago grows ever stronger

"AND SOFTLY, through a vinous mist, my college friendships glimmer," wrote the great English poet, Lord Alfred Tennyson, more than a century

When I came across that line recently, I realized nothing could come closer to describing the mood that will exist this evening when Mother Goose and I sit down for dinner with a man and his wife who have been among our most treasured friends for several decades.

Hopefully, you have discovered that there were people with whom you have heen out of touch perhaps for months, maybe even years, and then upon getting together again find you can pick up right where you left off.

Ron and her Fred are in that category. The vino may not be of Tennyson's taste, but through the mist there'll be recollections worthy even of a poet through bifocals Fred

laureate. Maybe a few will stir memories from your own life.

THE BOND between three of us, my younger wife having joined that circle some years later, was forged at the University of Michigan in an era that saw the end of prohibition. It also was marked on campus by the ban on student automobiles.

What I'm hinting at is that not all practical knowledge is gleaned from textbooks. Agony of the first hangover were students given directions to find Ann Arbor's downtown bookie joint where Depression wagering of half a dollar on a house was acceptable as the "wire" brought the call from tracks across the nation.

Ron, the obvious nickname for a pretty girl with the maiden name of Ronald, didn't know yet that fate had decreed she eventually would wed a Michigan Daily columnist who reversed Olympic miler William Bonthron's name to write under the pseudonym of Bonth Williams.

Their love affair, which now dates back half a century, survived its cruelest test on the first Saturday in May of our senior year. Thoroughbred aficionados know this is the date when the Kentucky Derby is run. What they don't know is that the spring ball is qually important to the girls of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority at Ann Arbor.

DURING THE year in question, Fred had kept a Ford coupe garaged in Ypsilanti and he and I had cruised to Chicago to see Gypsy Rose Lee in person, and to Philadephia for the Michigan-Penn football game.

In the lobby of our team's hotel in Philly, the first person we encountered was Walter (Bud) Rea, the dean in charge of enforcing the auto ban. The dean's wrath was only a minor hin-drance to our plan for driving to Louisville for the Derby. The real crisis was in the fact that the Theta dance was to be the same date.

Have you ever asked, "What are good friends for?"

To make a long story short, Fred and another pal got to Louisville and Ron got to the dance after all, simply because I was drafted as her escort. If she wept in chagrin all that veekend, she never has admitted it.

However, ever since then she has tried to improve my mind. We have traveled together as married couples, and every now and then she sees that I get a piece of classic writing. James Lipton's "An Exaltation of Larks" was one, and David McCullough's story of Theodore Roosevelt, "Mornings on Horseback," was another

Through the many years after a foursome evolved, the warm friendship led to sharing many experiences and even some professional undertakings. Those pictures will be ever in mind, but guess what pictures will be passed around the table tonight?

The latest photos of all our grandchildren, of course. After all, what are good friends for?

Freedom to read is a basic right

To the editor:

First there was "Gundella," then the "Breakfast Club," now Walt Disney's "Sword and the Sorcerer" and the book "Rules for Radicals." When will Diane Daskalakis feel that the "Wizard of Oz" is objectionable?

This woman is selling our children and all of us short, and she is telling us that we cannot guide our own children. And what about our children? Just because they explore and are exposed to concepts and ways of life, does not mean they will embrace that which is new and forget all that we, as parents, have taught, have lived, have believed.

I have upheld Diane Daskalakis' right to practice what she believes, why can't she let me practice what I believe?

When controversial material is being used in the classroom, why not have a note go home stating what aspect the unit is dealing with and, if the parents feel they do not want their child participating in the class, let them be the ones to notify the school and the teacher.

In this manner, the parents are the ones still responsible for their children's religious, moral, social and educational upbringing.

This country was settled by people escaping religious persecution — escaping because they could not practice what they believed. Diane Daskalakis is a serious threat to freedom - freedom to read, to explore, to view what you want. This woman wants all of us to

Lawyer says 3 qualified for court

As a resident of Wayne County who has practiced law in the county over the past 12 years, I feel obligated to bring to the public's attention the qualifications or lack of qualifications of the six nominees for Wayne County Circuit

After a thorough investigation, the Public Advisory Committee of the Detroit Bar Association rated Gregory J. Stempien well-qualified, John Murphy well-qualified, James Rashid qualified, David Szymanski qualified, Sean Kavanagh not-qualified and Kathleen MacDonald not-qualified.

Of particular interest is the fact that only the first three of these nominees have the background in the law, trial court and community to equip them to deal with the complex legal matters and human problems that face the circuit court judges. These issues include such things as capital crimes, race relations, labor controversies and child custody disputes.

As for the last three nominees, although their youth and untrained ambition are certainly commendable, they are hardly qualified to serve on the Wayne County Circuit Court and their presence on that court could certainly. produce tragic results. A trial judge is guided not only by the lessons learned in law school but the lessons learned through trial experience and the practical experience in life and human en-

The actual number of legal cases tried by the six nominees is not published; however, the date of admission to the state bar is a matter of public record and is certainly a measure of their legal experience respectively. Mr. Szymanski has less than four years of experience, while Mr. Kavanagh has less than three years and, remarkably enough, Ms. Macdonald has less than one year of experience. The present election laws require no minimum level of experience; however, reason and common sense and the needs of an effective judiciary require considerably more than we are seeing from these three candidates.

Although there is a move under way at the present time in Lansing to change the election laws, that will not help to solve the problem we face in November. Every newspaper, every judge and every attorney has an obligation to speak out and assure voter awareness of the serious situation that faces the Wayne County Circuit Court. Life experience, trial background and professional learning are critical to making informed decisions and these three candidates are seriously lacking in all three of these various areas.

I strongly urge your organization to support and help elect three able and experienced trial attorneys to the circuit court and hopefully end the name game selection of circuit court judges which is likely to result in on-the-job training at the expense of the litigants in the Wayne County Circuit Court.

Chiefs rout Farmington

first place in the Western Lakes Western Division, knocking off Farmington 51-38 Tuesday night

The Chiefs' win ties them with Livonia Churchill, which lost 58-52 to Walled Lake Central, atop the Western Division with 7-4 records.

Karen Boluch had the hot hand for Canton. She scored 24 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Penny Piggott added nine points and Michelle For-

"Our girls did a nice job of moving the ball and getting it into the hands of the right people at the right time," Canton coach Rob Neu said. "Defensively, we did a pretty good job of challenging them and forcing them into doing things they really didn't want to do.

Farmington, which is without leading scorer Becky Philp (out for the season with a stress fracture in her leg), got 11 points and eight rebounds from Stacy Swanderski and 10 points from Carrie Hale.

The Falcons are 1-10 in the league. 1-12 overall. Canton is 8-6 on the sea-

NORTH FARMINGTON 43, FRANKLIN 41: North's fourth straight Western Lakes victory was a barn-burner Tuesday night.

The Raiders trailed 41-39 with less than 30 seconds to play. Renee Fishell scored to tie the game with 20 seconds left. Sandy Spahn rebounded a missed Franklin shot and North worked the ball to Rory Talamini. With two seconds left, Talamini sank a short jumper from inside the free throw line to win it for North

Spahn led North with 11 points and 13 rebounds. Jenny Basford added

For Livonia Franklin (4-9 overall, 4.7 in the league), Gayle Cheadle scored 13 Linda McCall and Rose O'Bey scored 11 each.

North, which plays John Glenn, Salem and Walled Lake Central in its next three games, is 6-5 in the league and 7-7 overall.

SALEM 50, NORTHVILLE 30: Plymouth Salem knocked Western Division frontrunner Northville down a peg Tuesday night. Northville had been tied with Plymouth Canton for second place behind Livonia Churchill.

Salem, who has the Lakes Division of the Western Lakes just about wrapped up, got a 23-point performance from Dena Head. Jill Estey added eight points and three assists to the Rocks cause. Rocks led 13-3 after a quarter and 33-9 at the half. Salem is 13-1 on the season, 11-0 in the Western Lakes. Northville is 7-7 overall, 6-5 in the league.

MERCY 62, BISHOP BORGESS 28: Jan Herberholz (16) and Yvette Maison (15) combined for 31 points to lead Farmington Hills Mercy Tuesday in a Catholic League Central Division clash.

Mercy (5-2 in the league, 9-4 overall) outscored Borgess 24-7 in the fi-

Borgess is winless in the league and 2-10 overall.

STEVENSON 68, HARRISON 39: Farmington Harrison didn't snap its losing streak, but it did muster more points than it has in more than two

JUCO athletes battle unjust negative image

Second of two parts.

HE JUNIOR COLLEGE athlete is branded. The best JC athletes aren't smart enough; the smartest JC athletes aren't good enough. So what is John Gelmisi doing at Schoolcraft College? Wasn't he smart enough to go to a four-year college after graduating from Livonia Stevenson? His 3.1 grade point and high scores on entrance exams suggest he was.

So wasn't he good enough? Allstate in soccer, he narrowly missed all-America honors. He was named to the prep all-Midwest team.

So what's Gelmisi doing at a JC? "Some (college soccer) programs automatically won't play freshmen or sophomores," he explained. "I thought, coming here, I would learn more by playing than by sitting on the bench.

GELMISI WANTED to play soccer, not watch it. At Michigan State University, he was told he would watch from the sidelines his freshman season. Plus there was money to consider. Full-ride soccer scholarships are rare; MSU has just one, which is split among several Gelmisi chose to attend and play soccer at SC while living at home. He also has worked and was able to save money for next year, when he plans to enroll at MSU to pursue a business degree.

"I had my fun; I played soccer and saved some money," said Gel-

Gelmisi's choice was based in logic. He had decisions to make. He sorted through them and made the one he felt would be best. At present, Gelmisi isn't even sure he'll play soccer at MSU.

CARLOS BRIGGS had no such decisions to make. Briggs came out of Detroit Benedictine with a grade-point average a bit too low (1.95) to earn him a major college scholarship. So Briggs enrolled at SC and became the school's best basketball player. "It helped me a whole lot," said Briggs, who spent a less favorable two-year stint at Baylor University after his two years at SC. "I think sports in a JC helps guys. It helped me mature, to get used to a college atmosphere and get my goals together, to find out what I want."

Briggs was the top NJCAA scorer during his stay at SC. He went on to enjoy a productive junior year at Baylor before running afoul of a new coach and getting caught up in recruiting scandals as a senior.

Still, he was drafted in the fourth round by the NBA's San Antonio Spurs. He did not make the team, so he will play in the Continental Basketball Association this year.

afternoon at Walled Lakes' Willis that Farmington High School won both ends of the WLAA cross country meet.

> The Falcon boys took top honors with 40 points followed by Walled Lake Central with 67, Northville with 94, Walled Lake Western with 121, and Plymouth Canton with 146. The girls captured the title with 48 points followed by Walled Lake Central with 66. Plymouth Salem with 110. Livonia Stevenson with 144 and North Farmington with 151.

The smooth running of Farmington's Chris Inch astounded many of the competitors. Gliding through the tough, hilly course at what appeared to be an effortless pace, Inch won the boys race setting a new course record of 16:28. Walled Lake Western's Kyle Chura set the previous record of 16:41 in 1983

"INCH WAS incredible. He breezed through the course," said a Western harrier after the race was over. "It was more like he floated through it," replied another.

Farmington's No. 3 man Brandon London surprised race officials by finishing second overall at 16:50. Al Stebhins, who recently returned from an injury, placed 10th for the Falcons at 17:22 followed by Ron Smedley, 13th at 17:29, and Matt Walter, 14th at 17:35.

"I'm very happy to have won," said Inch. "It was a tough, tough course. My time wasn't all that great, but for this course it will do. The hills were really tough. They just killed you. At about 21/2 miles into the race, there was a real steep down hill and I got going pretty fast. I started to get tired but I got my wind back near the end and was able to pick it up."

It was the third league title in as many years for the Falcon boys, which pleased coach Jerry Young.

"WE DID WHAT we were supposed to do. We won it," said Young. "It doesn't always work out that way, but this time it did. The kids are really coming along. They all did real well Brandon (London) did a super job. We were hoping he'd finish seventh or eighth. And Chris just drilled them. He broke the course record by 13 seconds.

"Stebbins, London, Smedley and Walters are the ones that really carry the team. Inch is always in there.

erry and I were classmates at Joan Hill Junior High School in Inkster. We played on the same basketball teams in seventh and eighth grade. Terry Johnson was a supreme athlete, even then. He was bigger than the rest of us back then. And stronger - both physically and mentally. I can't recall exactly, but I think he carried a 4.0 grade point average and was president of our class. I remember I had an embarrassing crush on this girl named Cindy. My first crush. This girl was in love with Terry Johnson.

Who could blame her?

Terry moved away after eighth grade. I went to Inkster Cherry Hill and he to Westland John Glenn. I never saw him again (except the few times Cherry Hill and Glenn played each other in basketball), but I knew what he was up to. All you had to do was read the local papers. He was the quarterback at Glenn. A standout basketball player. A model student.

After high school he went to Wayne State University, football scholarship. He overachieved there as well, earning academic all-American honors.

TERRY JOHNSON died Tuesday. His heart gave out on him while playing touch football in Plymouth. He was 29 years old. Apparently, Terry's arteries closed up. Even now, more than a week later, this seems impossible.

One of the news editors here got hold of the obituary and thought it might make a good followup for the sports section. I was given a sheet of paper with the vitals on it: Terry Johnson, former area athlete 29. married less than a year, still living in Westland, died of natural causes at St. Mary's Hospital in Livonia Oct. 14. Graduated from Wayne State and Westland John Glenn.

My first thought was, "My God, I'm 29 years old and this guy had to have been in better shape than me." Then it dawned on me who "this guy" was.

Terry Johnson was in better shape than me. He was probably in better shape than most 29-year-olds. He played on five softball teams in the summer (this past summer he was the MVP on three of them); he played basketball in the winter and touch football in the fall. He also jogged. His wife, Terri, said her husband wasn't feeling well the day he died. Nothing serious, just under the weather. He collapsed early in the touch football game. He hadn't done anything strenuous at that point. He simply couldn't catch his breath. Then he lost consciousness. By the time he got to St. Mary's, he was TERRI JOHNSON'S life collapsed as soon as her husband did. The last year had been a whirlwind for Terri. She and Terry were married 111/2 months ago. Five months ago the Johnsons bought their first home, in Westland. Last month Terri was appointed to the Wayne-Westland School Board. And now this.

"I feel like this is a nightmare," Terri told Observer reporter Sue Mason. "I feel like my life is over. He was my life. The one good thing I had was I knew he loved me more than anything and we had 11 months together.

There was talk of starting a family. Terri hoped to be pregnant by Christmas.

I wonder if I should be exposing Terri's grief in front of 100,000-plus readers. I wrestled with this for two days. On one hand, it didn't seem fair to limit Terry Johnson's too-short life to a four-inch obituary. He touched too many people. Terry Johnson touched more lives than either he or his wife could imagine. There were more than 1,000 people at Uht Funeral Home last Friday. Twice that many, me included, were consumed by the memory of his life and the utter shock of his death. But is all this fair to Terri and the Johnson family?

I've decided to go through with it. For one, Terri Johnson said that her husband would have wanted it. That's the primary reason.

The second reason is personal. Terry Johnson's death slapped me across the face. It woke me up. It made me realize how much I take for granted: my wife, my son, my family, my home. Two weeks ago I would not have considered myself a luckier person than Terry Johnson.

And I'm not so unusual; maybe Terry Johnson's death woke some of you up, as well. Terry Johnson would have wanted that.

Week 8: playoff spots on line

and Chris McCosky staff writers

With only two weeks left in the regular season, talk turns to the high school football playoffs.

Which Observerland team has the best shot? First, you have to analyze which teams are still in the picture. In Region IV of Class A, unbeaten Grosse Pointe North and oncebeaten Dearborn Fordson appear to have locks on at least two of the four spots. North has only token competition the next two weeks, playing Anchor Bay (2-5) and rival Grosse Pointe South (4-3). Fordson, meanwhile, tackles 1-6 Belleville and 5-2

Dearborn Edsel Ford. Livonia Churchill (6-1), running fourth in Region IV last week, could move up with victories over 6-1 Westland John Glenn and 5-2 Livonia Stevenson, but that appears to be an uphill climb. But a pair of victories would almost assure the Chargers of a post-season

NORTH FARMINGTON, running right behind Churchill in Region IV, must play once-beaten Class B Farmington Harrison two weeks in a row, first for the Western Lakes Championship and then in the regular season finale.

Two victories for the Raiders is paramount, but even a double whammy over Harrison wouldn't assure them of a playoff berth. They'll be losing valuable bonus points by playing a Class B school and must contend with Detroit Henry Ford (6-1), which will pick up additional points this weekend if it wins a first-round Detroit Public School League playoff opener

grid predictions

Glenn could virtually assure a spot in Region II with victories over Chuchill (6-1) and Wayne Memorial (4-3). The Rockets got a boost when last week's top two teams in Region II, Ann Arbor Pioneer and Taylor Truman, both suffered defeats. Glenn was also running behind once-beaten Lansing Eastern and once-beaten Portage Central.

Harrison, running third last week in Region IV of Class B behind unbeaten Melvindale and once-beaten Detrnit Northern, another PSL playoff team, could be a shoo-in with two straight wins over North. But that is a tall order.

The Hawks could be on the bubble with two losses, also having to contend with unbeaten Riverview and once-beaten River Rouge.

Last week, your two expert prognosticators went 11-3. McCosky retains his three-game lead over Emons (56-27) with an overall record of 59-24.

FRIDAY GAMES (all at 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

REDFORD THURSTON at TAY-LOR TRUMAN (3:30 p.m.): The Ea-gles, winless in the Tri-River League, missed their chance to get a league win, losing to former cellar dwellers Taylor Center and Dear-born Heights Annapolis. Once-beaten Truman is coming off a stinging seven-point loss to Melvindale. Picks — Truman in a romp.

GARDEN CITY at BAY CITY JOHN GLENN: The Cougars (4-3), who have won two straight, will have their hands full in Bay City Glenn, the state's No. 10ranked team. Glenn just squeaked by Saginaw Eisenhower last week, 13-7, in overtime Picks — Glenn blasts off.

WATERFORD MOTT at RED-FORD UNION: RU (3-4) lost a heart-breaker last week to Dearborn. 7-6, and should have no trouble with Mott, which is coming off a 32-0 loss to Pontiac Northern - The Panthers reach 500

MONROE at WAYNE MEMORI-AL: Wayne running back Darren Tatum had another good week, topping the 100-yard mark for the fourth time this season. The Zebras (4-3) must not get overconfident, even though Monroe is 2-5. Dearborn Fordson struggled to get past the Trojans last week, 7-0. Picks — Wayne wins a thriller.

LUTHERAN EAST at CLARENCEVILLE: Lutheran East (5-2) struggled last week to beat Hamtramck, 20-13. Clarenceville (4-3) is hurting and quarterback Gregg Buell is doubtful again. Picks — Emons takes Lutheran East. McCosky agrees.

WESTLAND JOHN GLENN at LIVONIA CHURCHILL: Both teams are 6-1 and both are vying for second place in the Western Lakes Conference. A potential playoff berth is at stake. Glenn's offense has been sputtering of late. The team that passes the ball better will w.r. Picks — Emons takes Churchill in a mild surprise. Glenn gets revived, according to McCosky.

LIV. STEVENSON vs. WALLED LK. WESTERN (at W.L. Central): Stevenson (5-2) has been somewhat of a surprise this season, gaining a share of the Lakes Division crown with John Glenn and North Farmington. The Spartans have been struggled offensively. Picks — Stevenson pulls out a victory.

FARMINGTON at PLYMOUTH CANTON: The Chiefs (3-4) have a chance to break the .500 mark for the first (2-5) just doesn't have the offense. Picks -

on the Engineers

By Chris McCosky staff writer

The Detroit Falcons got even with the Plymouth-based Hennessey Engineers Junior A hockey team Sunday night with a 7-2 win in Fraser

It was the Falcons' first win and the Engineers' first loss in North American Junior Hockey League play. The Engineers defeated the Falcons 6-4 last Friday in Plym-

Here's about how it went for the Engineers all night Sunday: In the first period, Bryan Krygier broke in on Falcon goalie Billy Pye. He laked Pye out of the net and let go a slow backhand toward the empty corner of the goal. From out of nowhere, a Falcon defenseman swiped the puck away just as it was about to cross the goal line.

"We just owned the first 10 minutes of the game," said Engineer's coach A.J. Baker. "But we couldn't put the puck in the net. We had all kinds of five on three situations and didn't do anything with them."

BAKER GAVE a lot of credit to Pye, a resident of Plymouth.

"He was a big difference," Baker said. "He made some saves early, and we missed some chances, and he gained all kinds of confidence. He was roaming hither, thither and yon stopping everything."

The Falcons got early goals from Plymouth-area residents Sean Wordon and Tom Yawkey en route

The Engineers made it 3-1 on a goal from Canton resident Eric Kapelanski. Sean Skinner scored the other Engineers goal.

The Falcons buried the Engineers with a three-goal barrage in the final five minutes of the third period.

The loss leaves Hennessey with a 3-1 league record and 9-3 overall. The Falcons are 1-3 in the league, 2-5-1 overall.

NEXT UP: Baker's team faces a stiff test Friday night. Unbeaten Compuware invades the Plymouth Cultural Center to take on the Engineers. Game time is 8:20 p.m.

"Compuware is very quick," Baker said. "We've got speed, too. But we have to put the speed together with some efficiency around the net." Compuware, winners of the Little Caesars Junior Invitational Hockey Tournament, is 5-0 this season. The team has been led by Mike Bobach, Matt Wiljanen (from Livonia) and goalie Jim Dubke. Also, former Engineer Jim Ballentine returns to face his ex-teammates. Ballentine was traded to Compuware last season for goalie Dave Church.

Falcons put slam Big catch for Big Green

There's an easy explanation for Dartmouth College's 0-5 start this football season. Craig Morton knows

"The defense is kind of young," said the Plymouth Salem graduate. "Our offense is doing all right, but we're giving up about 42 points a Morton's facts were fairly accurate. The Big Green have surrendered a whopping 222 points in five games, an average of 44.4 per game. But they haven't exactly been rolling up the points on offense, either.

Dartmouth has scored just seven touchdowns and 52 points (10.4 per game). What little offense the team has generated can be attributed to er has caught 23 passes for 586 yards, an impressive 25.5 yards-percatch average. He has turned those into four TDs, tops on the team. THOSE ARE impressive figures, particularly for a sophomore in his first varsity season. Freshmen are not allowed to play varsity football Green freshmen unit in scoring, punt returns and receiving, averaging 34.2 yards a catch. He caught three TD passes in a 21-17 win over Princeton's freshmen.

"I did really well my freshman year," admitted Morton. "I was ready to play varsity then. I knew I could play (varsity) and I was really looking forward to it this year."

In his first five games, Morton has gone beyond being a threat offensively. He has developed into the Big Green's main weapon.

"It's kind of hard to think that way, but so far it's been true," he said. "I still think of myself as only a sophomore in a starter's role."

WHATEVER MORTON may think of himself, opponents view him differently. In recent games, including last Saturday's 42-26 loss to Harvard, Morton has been double-covered, making his job that much more difficult. He managed just three catches against Harvard. Against Navy Oct. 4, Morton grabbed nine passes for 191 yards.

"When I have a good defensive back in front of me, it really makes it hard to get open," he said. "But it ought to open it up for someone else,

What makes Morton dangerous is his speed. He was clocked at 4.48 in the 40-yard dash earlier this year, and has gone as fast as 4.45. That kind of acceleration prompts defensive backs to play a step or two deeper to guard against the deep

"They're backing up a little more, so I'm open more on shorter routes." said Morton. And running precise shorter routes, so that he can develop beyond being just a deep threat, is Morton's immediate goal.

"I've got speed, that's a gift. But to be a possession receiver you've got to run good routes. That's what I'm really working on now," he said.

MORTON'S SUCCESS, despite his team's failures, has lent itself to lofty goal-setting. "I really want to be all-Ivy League," he proclaimed. "I hope I'm doing well enough. (My goals) are high, but they aren't unreasonable."

Even with his blazing speed, Morton was not heavily recruited out of Salem, a team that relies on the run. Most major colleges figured he was too small. Only Eastern Michigan showed any interest, but Morton opted for a school steeped in academic tradition and further from home.

The academics have been "just incredible," according to Morton, a biology major, but he recorded a 3.2 grade point last year. Athletics, though, are a different story. There are no football scholarships, nor are there spring practices, in the Ivy League.

But Morton will stick it out. There are records to be broken and a team's misfortunes to turn around

Pheasant a hard catch in state

By Bill Parker staff writer

The bad news is that last year's pheasant harvest in Michigan was the smallest since the season opened in 1925 and that this year's flock doesn't appear to be any larger.

The total harvest in 1985 was about 112,000 birds statewide. Twenty years ago, the annual harvest was averaging around 1 million birds. That's a drastic decline in a short period of time and has many pheasant hunters looking to other states when pheasant fever strikes.

The main reasons for this dropoff in the flock size is changes in farming techniques and suburban development which reduces the habitat area. Many farmers are taking advantage of the late winters and doing a lot of fall plowing, which shortens their planting time in the spring.

They harvest the corn in the early fall and immediately plow the stalks into the ground. It's great for the farmers, but disastrous for the pheasants. Without the cut corn fields, the pheasants have no major food source and no major cover.

Add this to the lessening of traditional habitat area due to suburban development and the outcome is a dramatic drop in the total flock size.

THE GOOD NEWS is that the Department of Natural Resources is introducing a new pheasant to the state that hopefully will nest in areas other than the traditional farmland areas.

The Sichuan Province in the Republic of China (a sister state to Michigan) supplied the DNR with 1,000 Sichuan-Ringneck pheasant eggs in 1985. The DNR has been raising the birds at the Dansville State Game Area near Lansing since then and, after releasing 460 hybrids into the wild this spring, still has close to 1,000 Sichuan-Ringnecks in captiv-

"We're trying to find a pheasant that will adapt to the agricultural development we have now," said Tom Nederveld, habitat specialist for southern Michigan for the DNR. "The Sichaun birds nest in areas other than the traditional grass and hayfields the Michigan birds have been nesting in. They've been nesting in thicker areas like raspberry thickets and the edges of fence rows. Hopefully these birds will take to the habitat that is out there and this will bring about a new bird for Michigan.'

Some of the Sichuan-Ringneck were cross bred with the Michigan-Ringneck and 460 of these halfbreds were released into the wild this past

TWO HUNDRED of these halfbreds were released into a portion of Ottawa County lying south of Grand River and 260 birds were released into the thumb in a corner area of Tuscola, Sanilack and Huron counties. These areas along with the Dansville State Game Area are all closed to pheasant hunting this year.

The Michigan-Ringneck population got off to a great start last spring, but due to 10 straight days of rain in late May-early June, many chicks were killed.

"The spring breeding survey showed twice the population as last year which meant the birds came through the winter OK," said Nederveld. "But the rain at the end of the breeding season reduced the total number of chicks that made it. The rain caused a terrific mortality rate. Since the birds were not well fed many of the chicks died of pneumo-

Overall hunters may still have a sucessful season, but they will have to work harder than they would have when the flock size was up. Hunting will be good in spots. There are no entire counties that will be hot this season but rather parts of townships. Areas in Shiawassee, Livingston, Montcalm and Monroe counties Hillsdale, Jackson and Calhoun., counties. The best way for hunters to have good luck is to go out and look around. Try a number of areas. if you don't find many birds, try some where else. The birds are there; they just have to be found.

BIG BUCK CONTEST

The grand prize in the Coors Michigan Big Buck Contest is a whopping ! $25,000. The competition offers $50,000 in cash and prizes for the largest bucks taken in Michigan dur ing the 1986 hunting season. All bucks will be measured using the nationally recognized Boone and Crockett point system and entrants are subject to all Michigan DNR hunting rules and regulations.

Entry fee is $10 for any licenseu hunter and entry forms are available at most sporting goods stores and beer retailers throughout the state.

Bucks must be qualified at one of 60 statewide locations. The Oakland County location is Kelly's Sports Center 7688 Highland Road, Pontiac. 48054 and the Wayne County location is Grand Hardware 12020 Fort St., Southgate, 48192.

In the girls competition, a strong finish by Bonnie Stecker, third at 20:58, and Jennifer Keil, fourth at 21:00, enabled the lady Falcons to run away with the winners trophy.

LIVONIA CHURCHILL'S Karen Kantor won the race with a time of 20:39, followed by Walled Lake Central's Colleen Yuhn at 20:53. Farmington's Nicole Jelley placed seventh at 21:14 and teammate Amy Trunk finished 13th at 21:36.

"We're extremely happy," said Farmington girls coach John Bar-rett. "We really don't have any frontrunners. We usually finish in a pack. We worked together as a team all year. We have a great sense of team attitude.

Image taunts JC players

do too well, either playing or in school," said Briggs. "It's a lot of responsibility for a guy coming right out of high school."

But going to a JC did more for Briggs than just allow him to get his grades in order. He was recruited by several schools for basketball when he graduated from high school, "but not by as many as when I came out of Schoolcraft."

Still, Briggs faced the same prejudice other JC athletes are confronted with. "Some guys look down at a guy for going to a JC instead of a four-year school," he said. "It's hard for kids to accept that, coming out of high school.

"But kids shouldn't be influenced by friends. I'd tell them there's nothing wrong with going to a JC."

Briggs' athletic career blossomed at SC. Academically, he's 17 hours short of a degree in communications. He plans to attend summer classes at Baylor to finish up.

EXAMPLES LIKE Gelmisi and Briggs make JC athletes look appealing. What else could a fouryear coach ask for? An athlete with two years of college playing experience and enough time to adjust to college academics seems ideal.

And yet, most coaches still would rather recruit freshmen. They view JC players as stop-gap or emergency measures who can help a program, but can't provide a foundation for one.

"I'm never going to rely on junior college players. It would hurt my other recruiting, if incoming freshmen felt they might be replaced in a year or two by a JC player," said Oakland University basketball coach Greg Kampe. Kampe came to OU two years ago intent on rebuilding a program. That meant establishing a recruiting pattern.

'I'm not afraid to recruit JC players, and I will supplement my team with one," he said. "Basically, I like to have a player for four years. We feel it takes two years just to learn our system.

"But a great player won't take that long."

KAMPE HAS signed one JC player in three recruiting seasons: Mike McCan, a 6-foot-4 forward from Cherry Hills, Iowa. He could start this year for the Pioneers.

At St. Mary's College of Orchard Lake, the recruitment of JC players follows the same basic guideline, although the Eagles have relied on them far more than OU has. 'We don't want to get too many of them," said co-coach Rich Zalenski, who coordinates recruiting at OLSM. "My policy is they have to be among the top seven players. I don't want them to be just sitting ZALENSKI HAS signed seven JC players in the last two years. Five could be starters before this season ends. The graduation of two forwards and the transfer of a third combined for an overall lack of experience. That prompted Zalenski to concentrate on JC players this

C.J. Risak

But even if such an infusion of JC talent works out for OLSM, chances are slim that their recruiting policy would change. Most four-year coaches want a player to be in their program long enough for them to mold him into something useful. That's difficult to do in two years.

Which is why most JC players will remain second-rate recruits, mere supplements to any basketball program. And they will retain the poor image they've been saddled with.

SO IS IT worth it?

That was the theme of this series. Are community college sports programs worth the trouble, the financial investment? Naysayers will point to almost non-existent audiences. Even at SC, which boasts three teams currently ranked among the top 20 nationally in the NJCAA (men's and women's soccer and volleyball), spectators are sparse.

As for being an image-enhancer, JC sports get little (if any) ink in daily newspapers. And JC athletes are too often labeled as "not smart enough" to go to a major college, an unwarranted - but still widely accepted — depiction that does nothing for school image.

And yet, to accept such arguments would be contrary to what collegiate sports are actually

"If the only reason you're in (collegiate sports) is for the attendance or entertainment value, then you're in it for the wrong reasons," said Mary Gans, SC's athletic director.

OTHERS AGREE. Fred Thomann, currently the Plymouth Salem girls basketball coach and formerly OCC men's cage coach, defines athletics as more than a game.

"If, as I believe, athletics are a part of the educational process, then (athletes) are in a classroom.' said Thomann. "They get immediate feedback on decisions they make, they have goals to strive for. don't differentiate between a classroom setting and an athletic

"I don't think athletics are for the spectators. I think they are for the players."

The JC athletes' image can be improved. And community must be re-emphasized if JC sports are to receive the recognition they deserve. Promotions must be created, interest must be generated to increase fan appreciation.

But even if no improvement is made, even if its status remains unchanged, there will be good reason for retaining JC sports. As Briggs said, "If it helps one or two guys a year, that should negate any money that is invested."

Team effort vaults Mercy to 5th place finish at state

The Farmington Hills Mercy tennis team proved once and for all that it belonged among the state's elite teams, finishing in a tie for fifth with Ann Arbor Pioneer at the state Class A tournament Saturday in Midland.

This did not come as a major revelation to Mercy coach Jim Kerwin. He had maintained all season that his team could play with the best. The state polls, however, didn't believe him until the final few weeks of the season.

"We did as well as we could," Kerwin said. "Everbody earned points. I expected, well, I hoped for them to each get one point. Only one person got to the semifinals and we still did well. If you get this kind of balance ynu'll do well. The team ef-

Brother Rice wins 2nd golf title in 3 years

By Marty Budner staff writer

Birmingham Brother Rice's golf team was ranked No. 1 all season The Warriors showed why Satur-

Rice romped to its third state Class A golf title over the past six years and fourth since coach Jim Rademacher took over the team in Playing on the par-71 Royal Scot Golf Course near Lansing, the Warriors shot a sizzling 301 and won by 17 strokes over runners-up Bloomfield Hills Lahser. Redord Catholic Central was third at 319.

We thought we had a chance to win but to win like that was something else," said Rademecher. "The margin of victory was surprising."

Rademacher expressed some concern before the tournament that the switch in venue - from the Forest Akers private club at Michigan State University to the public course Royal Scot - might serve as an equalizer and work to Rice's distadvantage.

THE WARRIOR golfers were outrageously consistent in posting the lowest state-meet team score over the past 10 years.

Rice's sensational showing was orchestrated by Hank Andries (74), Mike Crook and Rob Morad (75) and Anthony Dietz (77). Dave Brown shot an 80 but his score was tossed out as only the best four scores count toward the team title.

were pretty severe and that kind of kept the scores up," said Rademacher, whose team won five of the seven tournaments they participated in this fall. "It made birdie a lot harder. We're used to undulating greens and we handled them well. Plus the course played fairly long because of the soggy ground, so it favored us because we're long hitters.

"What happened is that the greens

"The depth on our team is so strong and our players are consistent," he said. "That's what helped us. Nobody was really medalist a lot this year. They've all had their moments of glory."

Lasher had its moment of glory Saturday at the state tournament. The Knights, playing without No. 2 golfer Steve Slazinski who was out with a bad back, managed their best state-placing since the 1971 Lahser team coached by Bill Rea also took

JUNIOR GARY Crabb waited nearly four hours to start his round and finished with Lahser's best score at 77. Senior Blake Owen, who won The Eccentric tournament at the beginning of the season, shot a 79 and was one of 20 golfers from across the state to finish with a score below

Senior Greg Scarfe, who broke his driver in warm-ups, and junior Scott Stevens each finished with an 81.

"What we did all season was prepare for the state meet," said Lahser coach Al Kebl. "Our goal was to just qualify for the state tournament.

We peaked at the right time. All five of our golfers shot below their averages and three of the five equaled or beat their best round of the

"I said at the beginning of the season that we had a good team," he said. "I thought we may have been overlooked because we didn't do as well through the year. This is a real boost to our program. It should bring us some respect."

Livonia Churchill senior Dean Kobane, individual runner-up last year, tied Andy Arnold of Grand Blanc with a low-medalist round of 73. Kobane, however, won the state title by defeating Arnold on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff.

Troy, which won the Southeastern Michigan Association and placed fifth at the Oakland County meet, tied Rockford for eighth overall with a 330. Senior co-captain Bob Marzolf led the Colts with a fine round of 76.

"It was a super season. . a real team effort by everybody," said Troy coach Bruce Sergent. "It was the best season I've ever had at Troy in 20 years of coaching golf."

Rochester Adams, state titlists in 1978 under coach Carl Pashjerg, finished tied for 17th. Nick Pompa was round of 79.

INGER-ACTRESS Sheri Nichols came away from her "day of beauty" at the Michel Kazan Hair Salon quite pleased with the changes that had been made in her appearance

The sensational singing star, who will appear Monday in a benefit concert for Detroit's Orchestra Hall, was the first celebrity to receive a complementary day of beauty offered by the Kazan Salon at Bonwit Teller in Troy's Somer-

Both metropolitan-Detroit stars and visiting celebrities from out of town have been invited by the salon to participate in the makeovers that include a facial, hair styling, cut and color and makeup.

Nichols, who had her session in August, said by phone last week that she looks about the same today as when photos were taken of her at the beauty salon. The only dif-ference is, "I have lost about 10 pounds since then."

REASON FOR the weight loss? "It was just time," said the attractive, personable performer, who doesn't go on a crash diet whenever she needs to lose pounds. Instead, "I increase my exercise program. I jog about three miles every other day in my neighborhood - the Boston-Edison District" (in Detroit).

OVIE MARATHON 1986. It's not at your local theater but at the home of West Bloomfield residents Dr. and Mrs. John Alter. For 24 hours, beginning at 1:30 p.m Saturday, the Alters will be showing films non-stop to 20 of their die-hard movie-buff friends.

"It's for the purpose of watching some films and enjoying the experi-ence together and maybe having a discussion about the films," said Alter, a plastic surgeon. His wife, Denise, said they got the idea for the marathon from a friend who is a Starting with an old videotape machine about seven or eight years ago, Dr. Alter has been updating his equipment ever since. At first, he said, "I was like a child in a toy store."

Dr. Alter said he studies the faces of the actors and actresses up on his 6-foot screen to help him in his work.

"WHEN YOU see Kirk Douglas and Burt Lancaster (both in the new movie "Tough Guys"), marvelous actors who have been around for a long time, it's very obvious they have had facial surgery done," said Dr. Alter.

Although the Alters can name their favorite actors (Woody Allen, Paul Newman and Clint Eastwood) and directors (John Huston and Martin Scorsese), they have a hard time coming up with one favorite movie.

"It's very difficult to name one specific film. It's nice to have a variety of films to look at whatever the mood is," said Dr. Alter.

The videos the Alters own range from current releases to films from the late 1920s, and these are all numbered and listed in alphabetical order in a leather-bound film-library book. The book was a Christmas gift to Dr. Alter from his office staff last

Nichols also follows a 20-minute regime of stretching, situps, tummy and leg exercise on the floor.

Of her day at the Kazan salon, she said, "It was a treat for me. Everybody likes to be pampered." Her hair was permed and colored, with highlights added. Nichols said seeing the results of the color work made her a little more brave about the use of color next time.

As for the makeup, "People in the theater do our own makeup all the time. There were some things she did for my face I was able to use She did some sculpting of my eyes, coloring the eyes. I never really look at my eyes. She used different colors to sculpt shapes, to make them look more dramatic."

Some of the techniques will be plcked up for Nichols' stage makeup but not all of them. "You learn to discard things that don't work for you," Nichols explained.

BECAUSE SHE wears so much makeup at night for her stage appearances, she goes to the opposite extreme for daytime. "I don't wear make-up out on the street during the day. I try to let my pores breathe. I'm from that old hippie school. I try to be as natural as I can."

Nichols said that as an actress and singer, she tends to be very dramatic in how she dresses and puts on her makeup. She thought the hair stylist and makeup experts were working to make her appear less severe.

(Kathy Doolittle Wudyka, the salon's style director, said, "We tapered her hair. She already had a nice, short haircut. We brightened her hair and makeup. I saw her perform at the Caucus Club. She had stage makeup - brownish lipstick, black eyebrows. I also would like to cut her hair once it grows out longer. I would like a little softer wisps around the face.") Nichols performs Tuesday-Sundays in the intimate atmosphere of Detroit's Caucus Club. "It's definitely the place to be seen in town," she said. Nichols enjoys the exposure, performing where "movers and shakers come in to hear me."

The concert also will be videotaped but in a casual way.

THE BENEFIT concert is "A Salute to Liberty," with Nichols singing the songs of great American composers such as Gershwin, Kern, Rodgers and Hammerstein, Rodgers and Hart, Porter, Arlen and Berlin.

"It's an immigrant theme," she said. "We also want to evoke a feeling of nostalgia, have people sit back and take a little ride in the richness of America when it was booming."

Tickets for the benefit concert are $25, with sponsor seats at $50. To reserve tickets, call the box office at 833-3700 With Nichols at Orchestra Hall will be her accompanist, Richard Berent, who did all the arrangements for the songs. "He is quite gifted." she said. Along with Berent on keyboards, the hand-picked musical group includes Motown musician Beans Bowles on reeds and Wayne State University students Chris Collins on reeds and flute; Kent Rogers, bass, and Dan Maslanka on drums.

Nichols said she first met Berent when she attended Wayne State University, where he was accompanist in the Dance Department and also was doing musicals. "He has been with me almost exclusively for the last four years," she said.

NICHOLS IS known for her ballads and torch songs but also does jazz tunes. "I'm learning to be as much a jazz singer as a torch singer these days." She agrees with the Detroit newspaper critic who called her a chanteuse. "A chanteuse, to Americans today," she said, "is someone who's a dramatic singer, someone who acts a song."

With Nichols, the actress and singer are always very much together. It's harder for her to be a singer, however. "I really feel that I don't need to work as hard at being an ac tress as a singer," she said.

Nichols has been a veritable whirlwind as both actress and singer for the last two years. Since 1985 she has performed with Phil Marcus Esser of Livonia and Barbara Bredius of Troy in the revue "1946 Detroit," in "Piaf" at the Attic, and in a one-woman show, "Sheri Nichols Downtown," which closed just before she began appearing at the Caucus Club in May. "In between all that, I was working at the Gnome two days a week, plus doing 'The 1940s Radio Show' at the Attic." Her stint at the Gnome, across from Orchestra Hall, led indirectly to her engagement at Detroit's premier-acoustic hall. ("The acoustics at the Birmingham Temple are second to none - except second to Orchestra Hall," she said.)

She said two people from Orchestra Hall came to hear her at the Gnome and subsequently booked her for the hall date.

ASKED WHICH female singers she likes best, Nichols said, "One of my favorite vocalists is Sarah Vaughan." Regarding Barbra Streisand - who sang at the Caucus Club in the days before she became a superstar, Nichols said, "I try not to copy her style." Another favorite: "I love Judy Garland."

"I listen to different singers for different reasons," she said. She listens to Vaughan for the technique, Garland for the drama, and Streisand because she's an actress.

Originally from Kalamazoo, Nichols arrived in Detroit in 1979. "I came with my husband, who is now my ex. He was in law school." Nichols attended Wayne State 1980-85 and received her bachelor of fine arts degree in the theater program.

She worked in the Hilberry Repertory Theatre Company's graduate program, as an undergraduate. But things got a little hectic, she said, and she left in 1985.

"I work like crazy. Since I left Wayne State, I have been able to do it without any problem at all," Nichols said. "I don't, like a lot of show people, have a day job

JAZZ CONCERT

A free jazz concert "Live at Sam's," starring Spencer Barefield and Friends, will be held at 9 p.m. Friday, Oct. 24, at Sam's Jams in Ferndale. Appearing with Barefield will be Tani Tabbal, Anthony Holland and Jaribu Shahid.

Nichols is happy with results of makeovet.

She recently sang in concert at the Birmingham Temple in Farmington Hills. "It's so much different than the club. It's nice to have people treat what I do like going to the theater."

FOR BOTH her club and concert dates, she wears the same amount of makeup because "a lot of the concert sites are very intimate like the Caucus Club. When we do the Orchestra Hall engagement (a 2,000seat venue as contrasted to the Birmingham Temple's few-hundredseat auditorium), we're going to do everything about twice as much."

"I try to make everything bigger, grander," she said. Even so, she doesn't want to overdo. "I'm not a glamour girl up there . . . I like my personality to show through."

One of Nichols' recent triumphs was portraying Edith Piaf, the French chanteuse, in "Piaf" at the Attic Theatre. "We didn't really try to make me look like Piaf," she said. We lined my eyes and plucked my brows but did little to my hair. I wore barely any makeup."

The Orchestra Hall concert will consist of two 40-minute acts.

Disney promotes family cruises

A Cruiser's diary from the Starship Royale:

It is noon on Tuesday and we are pulling into the cruise docks at Nassau. Bahamas. The cruise ships Emerald Sea, Sunward Two and Mardi Gras are all here, their high-mast lines rising above the carved rooftops of the town.

The most visible ship at Prince George's Wharf, however, is the bright red Starship Oceanic, bigger sister ship to the Starship Royale, which is our home for this four-day trip. The tugboat nudging the Royale closer and closer to the dock is appropriately called "Grouper," the fish eaten on all 700 of these Bahamian islands and most islands of the Caribbean.

The Oceanic and the Royale are the two cruise ships of Premier Cruise Lines, founded by two former executives of Norwegian Caribbean Lines during the slump of the early 1980's and now a subsidiary of the Greyhound Corporation. Premier doesn't offer any exotic itineraries, just three and four day cruises every week from Port Canaveral, Fla., to Nassau and back. Both ships follow identical itineraries.

The four-day cruise starts Monday afternoon. The ships sail overnight to Nassau, include a day at play on Salt Cay, spend one full day at sea and return to Port Canaveral Friday morning. The three-day cruise leaves Friday on the same itinerary, skips the day at sea, and is home Monday morning.

Premier is the official cruise line of Walt Disney World, so Minnie one-of-a-kind traveler

contributing travel editor

Mouse and her friends also are aboard. To understand what that means to a cruise line, consider these numbers - 2.5 million people a year take cruises out of American ports; 13 million people a year go to Walt Disney World.

This connection certainly provides one of the best deals in the cruise market for those who are the right customers for Premier, especially families. The price of the four-day cruise, which starts at $495 a person double occupancy, includes three days at Walt Disney World, three days hotel accommodation in Orlando, and a rental car for the week.

This means you can fly to Orlando (the cruise line offers round trip flights from Detroit for $195 but you might do better) pick up a car, go to Walt Disney World for three days, drive to the ship, park there for under $10 and drive back to the Orlando airport after the ship docks. If you buy this package before Dec. 19, you can add two free nights in an oceanfront hotel and keep the car for

I noticed that Carnival Cruise Lines also offers a cruise and three days at Walt Disney World for a very low price, so check it out.

These rock-bottom prices get you the least expensive room, which might be a room on a lower deck, with two single beds and pulloutupper bunks for another two people; it might also be a small cabin with a queen-sized bed on a higher deck. About $650-700 will get you a better cabin; prices go as high as $995 in season for a suite with a sun-

By 1:30 p.m. we are all on Salt Cay. We have finished eating hamburgers and hot dogs, corn on the cob and salad at the beach barbecue and we are either relaxing in hammocks under the shade of palm trees or sizzling on the beach. The two red ships are a constant backdrop to the emerald sea, snorkelers, sunbathers and the volleyball players.

Occasionally a voice booms through the loudspeaker. "Crab racing is about to begin. Come on down to the dock and watch.'

Minnie Mouse helps the captain of the Royale bring the cruise ship into Nassau harbor.

This is our one full day at sea, so the casinos and shops are open early, and a lot of shipboard activities are listed on the daily newsletter slipped under our cabin doors. There is shuffleboard on the Bridge Deck, a children's masquerade in the afternoon and an adult masquerade at night.

There is entertainment every night. The main dinner seating starts at 6, the late seating at 8:15, so a show in Club Universe follows each seating. On our cruise it was Ralph and Valerie Marino on Monday night, none on Tuesday because of the Nassau shows, Little Anthony

Wednesday night and the masquerade Thursday night.

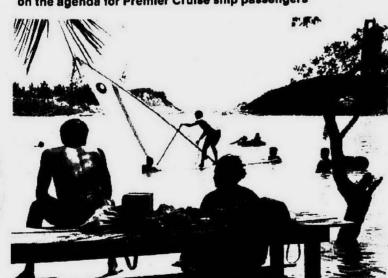

You also can attend regular movies, dance or disco, sing at the piano bar, and otherwise amuse yourself aboard.

Inevitably, you find yourself at the final gala dinner. The waiters have finished singing "America the Beautiful," flaming baked Alaskas in hand, and now there is pandemonium: balloons bursting, applause, horns blowing. It all sounds easy enough until you remember than the waiters are from the Philippines, Mexico, Honduras etc. and none of them were brought up to speak Eng-

Minnie Mouse and the other Disney characters have made their way through the room and we are ready to go into our final course of the day. Actually, 'final' is not quite the right word. As soon as we finish dinner, they will set up the midnight buffet - meats and cheeses, cakes and pasteries, all beautifully displayed between carved ice sculptures.

And if that isn't enough, you can always have pizza on the deck under

Making good cruise decisions

Here are some tips on how to make good cruising decisions.

Pick the right ship by comparing various cruise lines for itinerary, price and cruising style. Whether you want a very casual or a very sophisticated style may depend on how much you like to dress up for dinner.

Your travel agent can advise you, but first check the special cruise advertisement sections in the October 1986 issues of both Travel & Leisure and Travel-Holiday magazines, which briefly describe the various cruise lines. I also recommend Ethel Blum's cruise guide book, "Total Traveler by Ship," available in your library or bookstore.

If you pick Premier Cruise Lines, you can choose between two differ-ent ships following the same itinerary at the same prices.

The Royale was a cruise ship of Costa Cruises until it was refurbished and put into service by Premier three years ago. It is a 21,000ton ship, 606 feet long with a total passenger capacity of 1,100 on eight decks. The double occupancy capacity is 832: that's a better measure because that means two people per cabin, and a ship seldom fills every

THE OCEANIC was the old Frederico C of Home Lines. It was refurbished and introduced by Premier in April, 1986. The Oceanic is twice the size of the Royale: 40,000 tons, 774 feet long, with a total passenger capicity of 1,500 and a double occupancy capacity of 1,100.

Twice the size, but not twice the number of passengers, which means the public rooms are bigger. Cabins are only slightly larger, although the In choosing cabins, passengers generally find the prices are higher as the deck gets higher.

least expensive rooms are bigger than on the Royale. I personally would pick the Oceanic because it's bigger, nicer, has better swimming pool facilities and may have better nightly entertainment. The Royale featured Little Anthony one night; the Oceanic had the Fifth Dimension. On the other hand, some people prefer the intimacy of the Royale.

CABIN CHOICE: Prices generally are higher as the deck gets higher. We were in P51 on Promenade deck, which had two narrow single beds against opposite walls, a three-footwide passage between and another four-foot-wide passage leading to the closets and bathroom.

That was C Class, porthole to promenade deck, and costs $695 on the supervalue season package I described; $795 off season and $835 in season. Your travel agent will give you a booklet containing all that info.

They refurbish some cabins each year, and newer ones have queensized beds. The $495 cabins are inside, no porthole, usually on lower decks, although P37 and P38 on my deck were small cabins with queen beds, a three-foot wide passage, the usual bathroom and a bunk that pulls down if you bring another person. Some people reason that all they do is sleep in the cabin anyway; all the other public facilities, activities, meals, etc. are the same for every-

These are not luxury ships, so they are not luxury cabins. The one lowest-fare inside cabin I saw on the Oceanic was as large as our cabin, had two narrow beds against the walls, the usual bunks that pull down rom the wall and more walking space than we had on the Royale. Higher-priced rooms were not necessarily much larger on the Oceanic.

THE PREMIER starships are family ships, so there may be as many as 400 children on the Oceanic in season. Your children will be supervised much of the time, but don't assume that you won't have to care for them during large blocks of the day, especially off-season.

Finally, do you pick a three or four day cruise. The four-day attracts families and slightly older passengers.

FOR WRIGHT and the company he founded nine years ago, the London trip marks a significant turning

Becoming an international software dealer is something that the Canton native really didn't consider when he left a mid-level management job at Arbor Drugs in

"I guess I just wanted to try something on my own, prove I could do it," he said.

Wright, who received a bachelor's degree in finance from Eastern Michigan University, said he saw running his own company as a chance to demonstrate that hightech businesses can be "people-oriented."

Wright said he has worked to make his company a growth opportunity for others and that he is a strong believer in using "home-grown" talent.

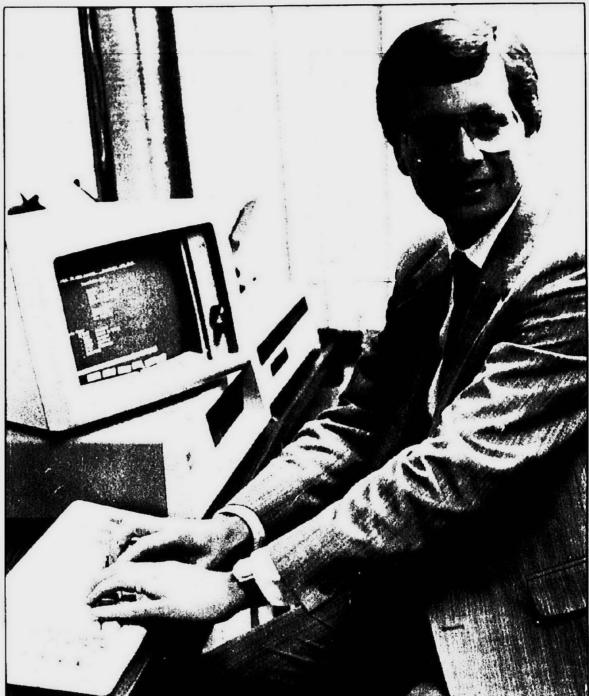

Louis Wright and Associates has 30 employees and is expanding its staff at about a 30 percent annual rate, according to its president. The company concentrates on developing software to help manufacturers with product control, purchasing, scheduling and other management areas. And while the computer boom may have lost some of its luster in recent years, Wright said the outlook for software producers remains bright. "MANY manufacturing companies have, to this point, been a tough sell," according to Wright. "They haven't all jumped on the high-tech bandwagon. But the software developer said that because the auto companies have gone the computer route, parts suppliers and other, smaller firms will be forced to follow

"If you want to sell to the Big Three, you're going to have to be able to communicate computer-to-comput-

MY CANOEIN' buddy and I have more in common than the idiotic risking of our necks on twisting rivers. We share a weakness for German

He works in Ann Arbor. I was there covering the Stanford C. Stoddard trial in the Federal Building.

My friend had his own worries. Three sons will be getting married in the spabe of a year, and the father of the groom is supposed to pay for the booze. A few guys like me could impoverish him or inflict permanent dents in his checkbook.

'You should do it like Stanford Stoddard," I told him. "When his daughter got married, he invited dozens of banking contacts and charged off their refreshments to Michigan National Corp. as business entertainment."

MY FRIEND DIDN'T like that idea. Stoddard, chairman of the state's third largest bank holding company 1972-84, is being charged by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency with misallocating $150,000 of bank money on personal expenses, his residence and Mormon churches.

Richard

Stoddard just spent a bundle on lawyers for a two-months hearing and is now awaiting the administrative law judge's verdict, due in two more months. The controversial banker could be fined $500,000 and barred from federally insured financial institutions for life.

My friend said he didn't need trouble like that

IT'S ODD, the reaction I've seen to the news stories.

Folks like my friend who make less than $50,000 a year are appalled that he would charge wedding expenses to the bank.

On the other hand, there's author-CPA Peter H. Burgher of Utica. So angry was he at what the feds were doing to his old acquaintance from the Art Institute Founders Society that he volunteered to testify as an expert defense witness for Stoddard. No fee.

'He did exactly what he should have done," Burgher told the judge. Burgher cited a law about an employee not having to incur certain work expenses. He made it sound like Stoddard would be a crook if he didn't charge the bank for those expenses.

"People (wedding guests) have gotta know they're coming because they're an important customer - it's not love," Burgher said.

The whole idea of charging country club entertainment to the bank, or using bank carpenters to modify one's house, is "an ordinary expense to free his body to do what it does best," Burgher said.

DURING A BREAK in the trial last week, I asked Stoddard what reaction he had received from Birmingham neighbors, fellow Mormons and business acquaintances

'The response has been excellent. They said, 'We expected you'd have answers. Your answers are factual.' I have no regrets about going public." he said.

'My home was an extension of my office.

"I've had calls from around the nation, from those who have read about it in the Wall Street Journal and the American Banker. They say, 'It's unbelievable what the comptroller is doing.' They cannot believe the comptroller's office, which is supposed to be looking for major things, would spend several million in the pursuit of trivia."

"Trivia." Stoddard has used the word frequently. The comptroller is talking about $150,000 over several years.

Considering Stoddard's salary as board chairman of the holding company and two of its banks, and considering MNC had $5 billion and more in assets, Burgher argues such expenses are "piddling.

Financing college education despite tax law reform

special writer

Thanks to the passage of the new tax law, most of the traditional strategies for financing college education have been rendered obsolete. Here are the key changes:

1. Interest on money borrowed for college education will not be deduct-

2. Scholarship money not used for tuition will become taxable.

3. Money put in a Clifford Trust (10-year trust) will be taxed at your tax bracket.

4. For children under 14, just $1,000 income generated by the money given under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act will be taxed at the child's tax bracket.

Now that the new tax law erases most of the tax benefits of traditional planning tools, here are some strategies still offering tax advantages that you can use to prepare for meeting the mounting college costs.

Taxation

Table 1 presents a taxation policy for a 55-year-old male who invests $25,000 in this policy. He will not only be able to withdraw $1,825 tax free every year for an indefinite period but also will enjoy a sizable life insurance coverage as an added

The investor can never lose his principal, will never pay federal tax-es on either the annual loans or the death benefit, and can take cash distribution any time by liquidating the

But the biggest advantage of taxation is that the investment belongs to the father and the child cannot use it for any purpose he chooses. In short, it is an excellent educational plan-

Auto 7

A relatively new concept in educational financing is Auto 7, an alternative to the venerable Clifford Trust, which is now obselete.

Basically, you buy two annuities from an insurance company. A little less than half of your money goes into an immediate annuity. This portion is used to generate a monthly

The balance is investing in a deferred annuity. This portion grows at a predetermined rate of, say, 7.7 percent so that you recoup the cost of both annuities in seven years.

Table 2 presents an Auto 7 policy for a 55-year-old who invests $25,000 in this policy. He will receive the principal back in seven years.

In addition, for the next seven years he will receive a monthly income of $156. Of that, 77.4 percent ($121) is completely tax free.

STODDARD SHED some light on his personal feelings when he told me, "Few in the comptrollers' office have served 30 years. I've served banking 30 years.'

(The two government lawyers prosecuting him are in their 30s.)

He recited the history of maverick policies he learned at his father's knee: Saturday banking . . . consumer banking "for the man on the street vs. the chosen few" . . . high interest on savings . . . statewide banking. The last opinion wasn't shared by the Michigan Bankers Association, which for decades vehemently and repeatedly opposed statewide banking. Stoddard wouldn't belong to that association. His viewpoint was vindicated last year when Gov. James J. Blanchard signed the statewide and interstate banking law sponsored by Rep. William Keith of Garden City. An executive friend shed some light on the Stoddard personality. He said federal regulators are jealous of their authority and like to be treated with deference. The unorthodox Stoddard probably rubbed them the wrong way, he said, and the banker figures he's being picked on.

I PAID the lunch bill in the Ger-

My share of it I charged to Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. I bought my canoein' buddy's lunch myself.

We spent only about 10 percent of our time — 49 cents worth of his kassler ripchen - discussing the Stoddard case, and I used him as a sounding board for this column. But charging the O&E for his lunch doesn't seem right.

But that's a working newsman's viewpoint, not a banking executive's.

Auto 7, or split annuities as they are sometimes called, has an advantage over another popular collegefunding investment, single-premium variable life insurance.

Such policies let you borrow at very low cost after cash value builds up for a year or so. With a split annuity, however, cash starts flowing during the first month.

Eyes agog, the praying mantis spends most of its time lying in wait for prey to approach.

Praying mantis hunts for prey

By Timothy Nowicki special writer

ALKING between buildings at work the other day, I found a praying mantis crossing the driveway. It was four inches long, light green in color, with two pair of long slender walking legs.

As with all species of mantids, the front legs were modified into folding, snatching, prey gathering appendages.

Praying mantids are interesting insects to observe. Their front legs fold back on themselves giving the appearance of someone praying — thus the common name praying mantis.

They spend most of their time lying in wait for prey to appraoch.

nature notes

Their large eyes enable them to see all around for potential food, and to precisely grasp their prey when it comes within reach.

EDWIN WAY Teale, a famous naturalist and writer, kept a praying mantis for a pet one fall. It spent hours in the window area by his desk, and from his perch on the desk lamp, would watch him write.

He would feed the mantis insects he had caught, but when those were unavailable, ham or even insects that had been killed by chemicals were relished by this ravenous feedTeale relayed the story of his pet mantis on a radio program one day later and received some interesting letters from those who were listening. One writer explained that his dog had recently died, and he was hoping Teale would send him a mantis to take the place of his dog.

As winter appraoches, and frost fringes the fall foliage, adult mantids mate, lay their eggs and die. But during the summer they are very beneficial insects.

Farmers often import them as a natural means to control insects. Even gardeners could use them to protect their crops.

IN MT. PLEASANT, where I went to school, farmers had released hundreds of mantids in their fields.

dreds of mantids in their fields.

My dog found one early in the morning and began barking at it.

From a distance I could not tell what she was barking at, but when I approached, the mantid had all four wings fanned out and was lunging at

Every time it would lunge with those front legs, my dog would back up and bark Eventually, we all went our seperate ways.

Not all insects should be considered with disdain. Just remember, if it were not for the honey bee, we would not be able to enjoy many of our summer fruits.

volunteers

• CEP VOLUNTEERS

Teachers at Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton high schools need volunteers to type, make bulletin boards, help in the reading lab, input for computer circulation in the library, or serve as speakers and resource people in the areas of social studies, German, and French. Native French and German speakers also are needed. If you can donate an hour a week, call Cyndi Burnstein 1-10 p.m. at 459-9435.

The animals at the Michigan Humane Society will do anything for your support because, for many of them, it's the only chance they have.

Animals give so unselfishly, they're begging you to do the same.

'Music at 8'

Pianist opens GMSO series Symphony Orchestra, sponsored by the Arts Alliance Group, will open is '86-'87 schedule with three concerts - all of them on Sunday evening

The series, entitled "Music at Eight," follows the successful and well-received inaugural concert of

Joseph Goldman

Under the direction of conductor Carl Karapetian, the Greater Michigan orchestra will perform at the Mai Kai Theater in Livonia for all three Sunday evening concerts, Nov. 2, Jan. 18 and March 15 and will feature outstanding soloists.

The opening concert will have as guest soloist, pianist Alan Chow, per-

Jonathon Bass 'Emperor' concerto forming the Grieg Piano Concerto in CHOW CURRENTLY is completing his doctoral degree at Indiana University where he studies with the distinguished pianist, Menahem Pressler. He has performed with numerous orchestras throughout the U. S. A prizewinner in numerous competitions, Chow most recently was the recipient of the Gold Medal in the International Piano Recording Competition.

Joseph Goldman will be featured in the Jan. 18 performance with his presentation of Brahm's D Major Violin Concerto. Goldman is the associate concertmaster of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and also served as the GMSO concertmaster. A veteran of solo appearances, Goldman's talents have been widely acclaimed by the reviewing press.

The March 15 concert will showcase the talents of pianist Jonathon Bass in the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto, one of the most wellknown pieces in classical literature. Bass was educated at the Juillard School, Oberlin College, the Moscow doctoral work at Indiana University.

BASS HAS GIVEN recitals in many cities of the U.S. and Europe and has won prizes in numerous competitions, most notably the first prize in the Third American Chopin Competition.

Tickets for individual concerts are $12 at the door. However, advance tickets are $10 each, or $24 for the series of three. Ticket reservations may be obtained from: The Arts Alliance Group, P.O. Box 2412, Livonia 48151. Advance ticket sales are also available through AAA and Ticket World outlets. Ticket or concert information may also be obtained by calling ticket chairwoman Mary Ann LaForest, 525-3010.

The Greater Michigan Symphony Orchestra is the state's newest, fully professional orchestra. It is the fifth music directorship that director Karapetian has held in his native state. He previously served as the music director of the Port Huron-Sarnia, and Grand Rapids orchestras, the Opera Association of Western Michigan and the Detroit Association for the Performing Arts.

Alan Chow will play Grieg concerto

Two hanging scrolls, "Hawks and Pines" are the work of Sesson, a master of gile brushwork featured in the exhibition of Muromachi period paintings at the DIA.

Turbulent weather was the inspiration of this hanging scroll by Sesson, "Stormy Wave."

Japanese painting a fragile beauty

By Manon Meilgaard special writer

TEARLY HALF the works in the "Of Water and Ink:" Muromachi Period Paintings from Japan 1392-1568 exhibition are designated important cultural treasures by the Japanese Government.

Before their arrival at Detroit Institute of Arts, they had never been presented together in one lo-

So precious and fragile are these Japanese ink paintings that DIA curator of Asian art, Suzanne Mitchell, prudently pointed out that museums exhibit their works for a brief period each year, access to private collections is rarely granted and temples exhibit publicly only on the one to three annual airing days.

Consisting of more than 100 hanging scrolls, folding screens, sliding-door panels and hand scrolls executed on paper silk, these exquisite works portray the contemplative, aestethetic side of Japanese life in meticulously observed studies of flowers, birds and animal life, misty mountain landscapes and seascapes, waterfalls, legends and deities Plans for the exhibition began five years ago, during which time Mitchell made several journeys to Japan, selecting work from the various sources. Again, because of the fragile nature of the exhibits, they will be displayed in two rotations-from Oct. 16 to Nov. 9 and from Nov. 16 to Dec. 14.

AS A BRIEF background, the Muromachi period is named after the quarter of the city of Kyoto where the Ashikaga shoguns (members of the warrior class known as samurai) ruled Japan from the mid-14th to the mid-16th centuries. The Ashikaga greatly encouraged the arts, which to a large degree were carried out by Zen monk-artists - especially painting. (Two thirds of the painters in the present exhibition were monks.)

These Zen artists saw the speed with which a painter using brush and ink could communicate his vision as an example of the flash of enlightenment following medition. Suibokuga or monochrome ink painting, an extension of calligraphy, flourished. The technique, which does not permit corrections or deletions, took its model from Chinese painting and during the Muomachi Period artists moved their focus from purely religious Often they are a collaboration between a painter and a poet (or poets) combined in a single work. In a hanging scroll in the exhibition, (attributed to the monk-artist Shuban who was active in the first half of the 15th Century), the painting is confined to the lower third.

Sesshu dominated late 15th century Japanese ink painting. This scroll, "Hui-k'o Presenting His Severed Arm to Bodhidharma," contains brushwork hauntingly similar to such modern masters as

The rest is devoted to a form of poetry known as renka, or linked poetry, which although less economical has some similarities with the more familiar haiku: You depart, I remain:

Tears wet my robe.

Notwithstanding the 81 painters represented from the entire period (including important early artists such as Mincho, Josetsu and Shubun), the exhibition centers around the two great masters, Sesshu (1420-1506) and Sesson (ca. 1504-

SESSHU, A MONK, is considered one of the greatest of all Japanese artists. With his nervous vitality and powerful brush-strokes, he was one of the first to legitimately apply the lessons of Chinese monochrome painting to the Japanese

One of his most striking works is 'Hui-k'o Showing His Severed Arm to Bodhidharma. Hui-K'o, who is intent upon becoming a disciple offers his self-severed left forearm in a gesture of supplication to Bodhidharma (the Indian missionary who brought the Zen teachings to China in A.D. 520, from whence they spread to Japan). The severing of the arm is proof that Hui-k'o is willing to undergo any sacrifice to study with the holy man.

In his posture of seated medition before the wall of a cave, Bodhidharma is portrayed as a white-cowled, swarthy figure, whose expression of intense devoutness contrasts with the more finely drawn features of Hui-k'o, who has the look of a martyr.

Two extraordinary aspects of this scroll are the almost abstract lines of Bodhidharma's body and the modern surrealist, Dali-like depiction of the cave.

Attributed to Sesshu is a pair of sixfold screens "Flowers and Birds of the Four Seasons," (a detail of which is used for the exhibition poster). The mood of tranquility here is beautifully portrayed with mountains, bamboo, water lilies, small birds and cranes.

BUILDING ON the work of Sesshu, Sesson, who lived and worked away from the artistic center of Kvoto, became the foremost painter of the later Muromachi Period. His hanging scroll "Stormy Wave" exploits the dramatic economy of line possible in ink painting, but adds an atmosphere and movement - violence even - rarely found in Chinese painting.

A Lilliputian boat with frail sails runs before the wind. Swathes of light and rain illuminate the scene and fierce waves crash against the rocks. Boat, hut, bamboo and trees brace themselves - all seemingly resolved to endure the onslaught of the storm. This is a masterpiece of minimal brush work and assured technique.

Two hanging scrolls, "Hawks and Pines" is an example of Sesson's contrasts between violent action and harmonious nature; a predatory hawk in search of prey is posed among peaceful pine trees.

To enhance the feeling of contemplation which these paintings evoke, the DIA's resident architect, Louis Gauci, has created a series of small, labyrinthine galleries where the works are presented in single or limited groupings.

Dimmed, low-key lighting casts a luminous glow on the priceless works highlighting the muted tones of charcoal black, soft greys, browns and greens, and honey gold. To complete the serenity of this "mise en scene," Gauci has interspersed three Japanese garden effects with polished stones and running water.

As the birth of the Noh theatre and the tea ceremony took place during the Muromachi Period, demonstrations of these will be presented, together with public tours, on selected works from the exhibition, a course on Renga poetry, documentary films and a series of films by the renowned director Akira Kurosawa (at the DIA auditorium).

"Of Water and Ink" is free to the public and is open during regular museum hours, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday and to 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays.

FTER HOURS of rehearsing my lines and reasons why I wanted an airbrush, I finally hesitantly said, "Mom, I need an airbrush." Without even looking at me she replied, "Well I thought you liked using a comb." "A comb?" I repeated aloud with a puzzled look on my face "Oh no," I said with a grin "I need an A-I-R BRUSH - for art. It's sort of a little spray gun type of thing with a button and a bottle and you - well, I'll show you a picture." So here I am 20 years later trying to describe an airbrush and 'sort of a little spray gun" still comes to mind

Most airbrush manufacturers make the same basic brushes, and it is important to compare them accu-

"Apples to apples and oranges to oranges," as the used car salesmen say. Usually there is a bottom-ofthe-line brush, which is an "external mix" design. In other words, the force of the air blowing out the tip causes a suction, which pulls the paint up from the bottle or color cup. Then the paint becomes atomized by the force of air.

THIS MIXTURE of paint and air akes place outside of the airbrush so compare only external-mix air brushes.

Now we take a giant step when we move to the "dual action internal mix" line of brushes. The internal mix means that the mixture of paint and air takes place within the airbrush.

: The dual action means that you depress the button for air and pull the button back for paint. The less you pull back, the less paint and the finer the line. The more you pull the button back, the more paint and the wider the line

SO HERE, COMPARE only the dual-action internal mix airbrushes. I would like to point out, too, that there is one more feature to confuse the issue You must compare "slow . FAIR LANE TOURS feed" to "slow feed" and "fast feed" to fast feed

'Slow feed" means that the supply areas, which is often the case in photo retouching

Fast feed is more the basic requirement for airbrushing, which allows you the ability to do very small EXHIBIT work and by merely pulling the button back, you can cover large areas

There is one top-of-the-line turbine airbrush, which Paasche offers Its basic operation is that the air paintings and watercolors from appressure drives a small turbine causing a fine needle to go back and collects paint on the tip of the needle and on the forward stroke the paint is blown off the tip of the needle by the air tip. This, of course, makes a tiny spray of paint and is well suited for its primary function, photo retouching.

Here is a good way to look at buying an airbrush. If you are 10 to 15 years old and only like painting models and small items, you need only a $25 set by Badger.

If, however, you like to draw and feel the need to try an airbrush, look into Paasche's "H" set for about $60. This set is great for models, T-shirts. vans, back drops, dying leather, cake decorating and more. It is also versatile and so hardy, I always say you can almost spray cement out of it.

EQUITY LOAN

Unlocking Your

Buying Power ...NOW!

What is an Equity Loan?

Many homeowners have accumulated money value in their homes over the years as a result of property appreciation or a reduction of their loan balance or combination of both. This money value is commonly referred to as Equity. An Equity Loan is a loan given on a percentage of that money value. This loan is secured by a first or second mortgage on the property.

What are the benefits?

☐ You can purchase a new home without having to first sell your existing home.

☐ You can take advantage of the equity in your home without liquidating other investments or drawing on your savings.

☐ You can obtain the loan approval prior to the purchase of your new home, thus giving you a negotiating advantage.

☐ You and your family will have peace of mind knowing the funds are available if and when you need them.

☐ You can use the loan even if you are moving out of town.

What are the features?

☐ One year loan term.

☐ Interest-only monthly payments calculated on an annual simple interest computation.

☐ Repayment of the loan principle balance upon closing of the sale of your home.

OPTIONAL PAYMENT PLANS: 12 equal monthly interest payments or nine (9) equal monthly interest payments which allows for 120 days delay from the date of loan closing before your first payment is due.

☐ An optional payment feature on your present first mortgage for up to six (6) months.

How are loan amounts calculated?

The maximum amount of your equity that can be borrowed is 75% of the market value of your home, less any existing mortgage balance(s).

Depending on the available equity in your home, you'll have access to funds ranging from $5000 to $50,000.

How do I apply for an equity loan?

Real Estate One and its affiliated companies have made exclusive arrangements with a lender for this Equity Loan Program for the purchase of a new residence. Additional information for application can be obtained from any Real Estate One sales associate, or by calling and asking for Equity Loan information.

Bringing history to life

By Julie Brown daff writer

THE WOMEN of Michigan's history come to life when Candace Anderson puts on her one-woman show

The women come alive on stage. and Anderson, a Kalamazoo resident. It's very real and I think that's part of its charm

People are interested, so the audience comes very awake and aware and ready to listen. Each performance every night is different.

Anderson writes and performs a program of songs and stories, "A ampler of Michigan Women Their Lives Through Song "She presented the program Thursday night to a meeting of the Plymouth branch of the American Association of Umversity Women, held in the Little Theater of Plymouth Canton High School In the spring of 1984, Anderson wrote the song. "A Diary of Mary Wallace," based on the journal Wallace kept during the Civil War. Wallace, who lived in Calhoun County, had two young children when her husband left to fight for the Union

Anderson later received a grant to compose additional songs about women in Michigan's history

SOME OF the women Anderson sings about are well-known, while others are less so Some were famous in their own day but are no longer well-known

So it's kind of a mixture

That mixture includes Pamela Thomas, the first schoolteacher in Schoolcraft Thomas and her husband helped an estimated 1,500 slaves from 1840 to 1864 in the Underground Railroad

Sojourner Truth is also included in the program, as is Madelyn Stockwell, the first woman student at the University of Michigan.

A Delta Township pioneer woman. Mary Wiltse Moon, is also included Her son, Darius, later became a famous architect.

He wrote a recollection of his mother, so that's where I got the information for that," Anderson said

The songs she writes and performs are based on extensive research. Anderson relies on diaries, old newspapers and other materials for the re-

She has advisers who help with the research

They know where to look and they tell me. Anderson's own grandmother, Viola Corrigan, is also included in the program Anderson tells the story of her grandmother's coming to Michigan from Illinois - a move that Corrigan didn't much care for

A WOMAN who cooked in an Upper Peninsula logging camp, a fur trader, a Methodist minister and advocate of women's voting rights, and a labor organizer are also included in the 'A Sampler of Michigan Wom-

The singer-songwriter received a sesquicentennial grant from the state Commerce Department, which will allow the program to be put into radio form. It is to be aired on National Public Radio stations during Anderson has also been hired by the State Bar of Michigan as artistic director for a production on the effects of the U.S. Constitution in Michigan Julia Darlow, president of the state bar, was active in getting the project started.

"It was her idea," Anderson said of the "We the People Remember" project. The project is being done in cooperation with the Michigan Education Association and the Michigan Council for the Humanities to cele brate the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

Videotapes and scripts for the "We the People Remember" program are to be made available to schools. Performances will also be held throughout the state. As with "A Sampler of Michigan Women." the program will rely on primary sources for its re-

THE KALAMAZOO resident, who recently returned from a trip to the Upper Peninsula, enjoys her travels throughout the state. Anderson has performed "A Sampler of Michigan Women" for a number of high school students throughout Michigan and for other groups

It's a method of teaching

By capturing the imagination of students. Anderson helps to make history a lively subject. The traditional focus in history classes on presidents, wars and famines can leave students thinking that it's a dull and lifeless subject.

You have to remember most of the people in your class will not be a president." Anderson said. Through her work, she tries to put 'he past in

It just fills history out a little

Anderson has an album and cassette, priced at $10, for "A Sampler of Michigan Women." Those who are interested may write to her at Michigan Sampler," 1616 Jefferson. Kalamazoo, Mich 49007, to request an order blank When she performs for high school groups. Anderson has found that young men are just as interested in the program as are their female counterparts The young men will frequently approach her after the performance and tell her about their grandmothers

It's really across the whole group," she said of the appeal of "A Sampler of Michigan Women

Their Lives Through Song. The program also appeals to middle-aged and older women, said Anderson, who described the 1950s as a difficult decade for women in terms of their self-image. A number of women are amazed that I'm really talking about them

In addition to doing the program on Michigan women, Candace Anderson is artistic director for a project of the State Bar of Michigan. That project will examine the effect of the U.S. Constitution on life in Michigan.

HE STAGE was set for the first lecture in this season's Livonia Town Hall Lecture Series. The podium was bedecked with black widow spiders, a broom, a ceramic skull and a burning candle.

The speaker was Gundella, a rotund witch with a grandmotherly countenance and a lively wit.

Swathed in black, save a huge black widow spider of embroidered orange, and adorned with an oversized necklace and bracelet featuring the same spider, Gundella set forth to charm the audience of 300 or more at the Livonia Holday Inn-West last week.

Gundella's witchery is an upbeat pep talk, a blend of motivation inspired by love and meant to bring happiness. Gundella is definitely a benevolent witch.

GUNDELLA IS Marion Kuclo, a multi-wed mother of four (one a witch), who taught grammar school locally for 22 years before going public as a witch in 1970.

"I am a very ordinary person," Gundella reassured her audience at the beginning of her talk, "and I got into witchcraft in a very ordinary way. I was born into a family that believed in it. My mother was a witch My grandmother was a witch

She joined a coven, a group of two to 13 witches who practice witchcraft at least four sabbaths a year, in 1948, when she was 18 years old. At that time she assumed her witch's

Since then she has met with others in her coven each February to call back the sun, each April to call on prosperity and fertility, each August to give thanks, and each Halloween to assess the past year and make resolutions for the new year.

"WITCHERY," GUNDELLA said, "is a religion. I believe in a universal source of power, God, and we all worship the same one." She also beabout life after death that makes any sense to her, and magic or "any thing that works that we don't under

The most important instrument of her religion is casting spells, some thing, she said, anyone is potentially capable of doing.

Gundella said if one really cares imagines a comprehensive mental image about what is desired and strongly believes, anything is possi Gundella is also convinced every one "needs religion." and whatever its guise, the basic ingredient of all religon is "love. Love is what the world ir all about.

In witchery, whatever is sent out comes back. If a witch hurts another person, the hurt is returned. Likewise, if a witch sends out love, that, too, is returned.

THE PEP talk begins and the message is quite simple. Drawing upon belief in and love of oneself Gundella said, "If you believe you can have what you want, you can get

"Look at me," she said. "I'm nearly 60 years old, at least a hundred pounds overweight. I have a blotchy complexion and hair that is better covered with a wig. But I'll tell you something. Lots of men tell me I am beautiful. I could have a date every night if I wanted. I do have lots of dates. I will it.

"I believe we're suppose to be happy. When you laugh, the world laughs with you. When you cry, you cry

Gundella then shared a magic incantation for happiness, youth and said witches have used since the beginning of time She asked her audience to rise and chant it.

Eeeee," fists holding in the misery; "iiii," arms stretched to let out the misery; "ouuuu," reaching to the heavens and feeling good. In unison, the well-heeled women in the audience wailed, reached to the heavens and agreed they felt wonderful.

GUNDELLA CAN be seen in yet another role Sunday when she appears in a drama she wrote and is directing, "Murder at the Manor." Produced by Homicide Host as a Halloween production, the play will premiere at the Hiram Walker manor home in Windsor.

Gundella plays the role of a dotty aunt who eats worms. Playing her nephew, and star of the production, is Tim Richard, state capital correspondent and columnist for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

THREE MORE lectures are planned in the 1986-87 Town Hall series, including makeup artist Jeffrey Bruce in November, TV personality "Fat" Bob Taylor in January, and syndicated columnist Nickie McWhirter in March. Cost is $24 for the lectures and $10 each for lunch following the lecture.

Proceeds from the series are donated to charity. Money raised last year paid to move the historical Blue House on Schoolcraft and Middlebelt, to Livonia's historical village, Greenmead

In previous years' proceeds helped underwrite the American Field Services foreign exchange student program at Livonia Bentley High School but with the closing of that school, the exchange program ended.

Attitudes on elderly need major overhaul

THE ADVANCE of medical science has increased our life expectancy. At the same time, the likelihood is increased that we will undergo impairment, rejection and unhappiness as we enter the years of advanced

The greatest and most universal fear in our society is the fear of getting old. It is the pervasive obses-

If the past offers any insight at all into this matter, it is that in premodern societies, old age was not separated from the rest of the lifespan.

A generation or two ago, grandparents lived with their families as honored members of the household. They were able to exert beneficial influence upon the lives not only of their own children, but also of their grandchildren, serving as a symbol of the continuity of time and tradi-

In our time, this experience grows increasingly uncommon. There are homes for the aged, hotels for senior eltizens, retirement villages for the elderly. All these meet that need that arises out of the conditions we associate with age. The aged do not fit into the life style of the contemporary family, and everyone knows BIBLICAL faith is clear, unequivocal and insistent on our responsibility for the aged. Created in the image of God, the aged deserve not only love and compassion, but also reverence.

The Biblical pronouncement to "honor the face of the aged" does not have an asterisk with the designation, only if he has financial resources, or children that are able and willing to pay the expense, or if he still has mental faculties or a pleasant disposition.

Older Americans are not a homogenous group. They come in all shapes and sizes, with all kinds of needs and capabilities. The only common denominator is that vertiually all of them are in one way or another disadvantaged.

There are the physically disadvantaged - the millions who are feeble and ill with not enough money for adequate housing, medical care, food, clothing and transportation.

There's another category: Millions of older Americans who are physically disadvantaged. They are healthy, reasonably well-off, but have been segregated from the rest of society by the accident of calendar age. They are eager, competent and willing to serve. They seek to exercise their abilities and talents, but they are denied such opportunities.

AUTHOR JAMES MICHENER

put this issue into clear focus. He wrote: "The problem of caring for the aged looms as the principle social problem of the balance of the century, greater than ecological asphyxiation, greater than overpopulation, greater than the energy crisis."

It is never too late to begin. Contrary to popular opinion, age has little to do with the ability to learn new things or to adjust to new situations. A neurologist once wrote: "At 60 the body has certainly passed beyond its greatest strength, and physical demands should be lessened and changed. But the brain quite often is ready for its best performance in certain fields."

A recent analysis of the achievements of 400 famous people revealed that more than one-third achieved their greatest accomplishments after the age of 60. Twenty-three percent scored their greatest success in life after the age of 70. Examples? George Bernard Shaw was still writing in his 90s, while Verdi created his Othello and Falstaff at the age of 74 and 80. Toscanini was conducting in his 80s. Grandma Moses became a painter when most artists would retire. Pope John ascended the throne of the Vatican in his 78th year and transformed the Roman Catholic nglish essayist Matthew

described . . . as having its origin the love of perfection. It is a study of perfection."

And, in a very big sense, this is what Suburban Pace is all about — culture and the love of perfection.

Certainly, no one is perfect. But is sure is fun to try, at least in the avocations we find most pleasing, to be as close to perfect as possible. Striving to be better, to be the best — a superachiever — is the one thing that sets us apart from the crowd.

As life goes on we often find ourselves lost in a morass of humanity — on the expressway, in the office, at the plant and sometimes even at home. Sometimes we even feel like we may be losing our identities and our appreciation for life.

But then we discover that special something, that one thing we just know can make us a better person — to ourselves and others.

One day we find ourselves going off, most often alone at first, to break ground for that special endeavor on which we will build and reshape our lives. But after a time, we seek out others with similar interests, with whom we can swap stories, exchange information and, if nothing else, give each other little encouragement.

Pace hopes it can be of some assistance in your endeavor. By reading this publication you'll be able to learn not only about those persons who have reached a special level of accomplishment, but you'll find helpful information to make your avocational pursuits more fulfilling and enjoyable

Whether you love the outdoors and all its accompanying enjoyments or whether you find solace and accomplishment in your basement, garage or study, Pace will have a space for you.

Most importantly, Pace wants to hear from you. Not only about how you think we are doing, but ideas on accomplishments and accomplished persons about which and whom you would like to read.

We are sure you will enjoy reading this publication as much as we do putting it toget her. Waiting to hear from you.

Master Shim — helping people overcome fears be it in an alley or a corporate office.

For some, the art of self-defense has become their form of offense in the business world.

While most persons conjure an image of martial artists as frustrated Bruce Lees wreaking havoc on the best of what pine forests have to offer, there are those who derive a deeper satisfaction out of it.

Board breaking and fending off would-be attackers are definitely part of the Oriental form of self-defense. Those only encompass the physical realm of the martial arts.

What few people realize when they first join a martial arts class, but later appreciate, is the mental and even spiritual side of what the Oriental form of self-defense has to offer. Self-defense is usually the original reason they joined the class.

After a while, though, they learn that their most formidable opponent is themselves.

Outer – strength, inner peace

by Larry O'Connor photos by Steve Fecht

The martial arts, according to those who teach it, helps people overcome fears of failure, be it in an alley or a corporate office.

At least that's the opinion of Sang Kyu Shim, known to his students as Master Shim, who teaches Korean Tae Kwon Do karate in the Detroit area. Shim has written two books on the subject, "The Making of a Martial Artist" and "Promise and Fulfillment in the Art of Tae Kwon Do."

He is also president of the World Martial Arts Association, which has some 300 member schools. He's also editor in chief of the national magazine, Tae Kwon Do Times.

Seven United Tae Kwon Do Schools that are owned and operated by Shim are in the Detroit area, including Livonia and Westland. Shim said the martial arts teach discipline, oals in the martial arts are wrapped around colored belts. Each variation of martial arts, be it judo, karate or kung fu, has its own belt system, with a white belt usually for beginners and a black belt for the top achiever.

And it's those three qualities of the martial arts that Shim believes help put Japanese and Korean businessmen at the top of their game.

"Their philosophy of business is based upon the philosophy of the martial arts," Shim said, "(which believes) both men and women should strive to improve both mind and body."

What Shim attributes to the martial arts would appear to some as a heavy-winded sales pitch. There are those, however, who are more than willing to break more than boards to verify the impact the martial arts have had on their lives.

One, for certain, is Vern Buchanan of Bloomfield Hills.

Buchanan, a self-made multimillionaire, heads American Speedy Printing Centers. He grew up in a blue-collar neighborhood in Garden City where "it wasn't a question of what college you were going to, but whether you were going to a college at all."

Buchanan did. He graduated from Cleary College in Ypsilanti with a degree in business administration and industrial relations.

He started his own Success Motivational Institute franchise, which became the largest of all 2,000 franchises in only 1½ years.

Buchanan became involved with American Speedy Center, which had only three shops in the Detroit area in 1977. It has since grown to 500 franchises in 43 states, which accounted for an estimated $50 million in sales in 1985.

Along with that, he's a member of an array of social, business and civic organizations.

Like a majority of success stories, Buchanan's road to the top was paved with a lot of hard work. But, unlike young entrepreneurs of his ilk, Buchanan points to Korean karate and the philosophies taught by Shim for fueling the desire to succeed.

Buchanan, an athletically inclined person, was looking for a new form of physical fitness while in the Air Force. He became involved in Tae Kwon Do, soon earning a black belt.

Buchanan, who still practices the martial arts once a week, worked as an instructor while in college.

"I started to believe I could do anything if I set my mind to it," said Buchanan, 33. "It gave me confidence. Not a cocky confidence, but a serene confidence.

"I think the difference it made for me is that (martial arts) got me to realize that I needed some thought of where I was going, and the confidence to get there."

That's all part of the teachings of the martial arts, which believes a person should strive for total self-improvement, mentally, physically and ethically.

uchanan said the martial arts has taught him to put things into perspective.

"Too many people identify success with involvement in money and business success," he said. "In the process, voids are created (health and family problems). That's when life gets out of balance."

Buchanan said he doesn't preach the benefits of the martial arts to co-workers or friends. But if someone asks him, he gladly relays what he believes helped get him where he's at.

And practicing the martial arts was definitely part of that.

For one, the confidence gained from practicing karate, he believes, gives him a slight edge when dealing with people.

"You are approaching any situation like a winner, not a loser," Shim explained. "We've already achieved that. Failure is a requirement for success.

"We want them (students) to succeed in everything they do." Shim added.

Steven Violante, who teaches Tae Kwon Do at Fitness Empire in Livonia, puts himself in that category. Violante, 32, who works as a supermarket manager, has been in the martial arts since college at Western Michigan.

"I couldn't talk in front of a group without being nervous," Violante said. "It (martial arts) has built up my confidence because I've learned to be very positive.

"When you train in the martial arts, like anything else, your confidence starts to build . . . Being confident and determined, people take notice of that."

iolante, as an instructor, has developed his speaking skills and has gained some management skills in the process.

The discipline involved with the martial arts can indirectly help a person pick up leadership qualities. Students are taught to accept directives without question.

But instead of becoming passive as one might expect, they develop their own resources in the process.

"You use your own mind," said Jennifer Kinchen, 23, of Farmington Hills. "Before, if I was in a group, I would hold back my thoughts on something, thinking that the other person's (thoughts) were better and mine weren't that important.

"Now I think my thoughts are just as good, and at times, better than the other person's."

inchen, who works as a systems engineer at Electronic Data Systems, has been involved with Tae Kwon Do for a year. She is a fifth Gup, which is a green belt with a brown strip in it.

She is definitely committed to the philosophies of the martial arts, saying, "It's not something I go to every week and that's it."

And what she's learned from martial arts is applied on her job. The fear of failure is not present.

"When there's stress at work, such as deadlines, I've been taught not to let it affect me," she said. "I just focus on what I'm doing and get the job done."

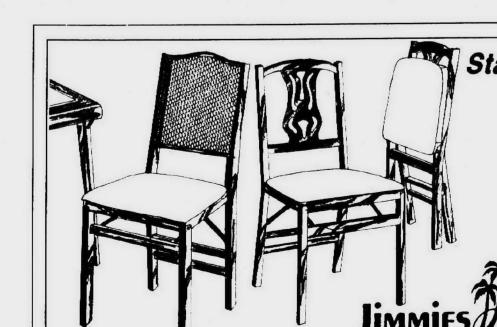

Getting the job done when practicing Tae Kwon Do doesn't involve physically defeating an opponent. It's practiced in non-contact form

"The one who has a better strategy will overcome his opponent," Shim said. "No matter what size his opponent is."

Kinchen puts it even more bluntly. "The art never lets you down. It's the person who lets the art down."

Cost may be a major obstacle for some families on the downhill slopes and to a lesser extent the cross-country trails.

But the Najarians, whose ski bill last year ran into a few thousand dollars say the sport is worth the price.

"It's peaceful. I love the outdoors. I love the snow. You're out there all by yourself. It's just you and the hill," Mary explained.

"It's a solitary thing and yet it's a social thing with all the kids. You see them grow, too. You know, they started out not being able to stand up and now they're better than us."

The Najarian kids were born practically with bindings on their booties.

Mary skied during most of her pregnancies. Berge made equipment out of wooden slats for each beginner's pair of tiny feet.

Taleen is the only non-skiing member, but at 10 months old she has only just mastered walking. Give her another year and she'll be gliding and sliding. Effortlessly.

"It's the one thing we can all do together." soft-spoken Mary explained.

"It's just one of those family things," Berge added with a shrug. "You know, you go boating together, have a picnic together, go skiing together.

"Most of it is where you are and the people you're with and what you're doing - right?"

It happened during a "dental weekend" when the couple, several of their dentist friends and their spouses, headed north.

Later when Berge studied orthodontics at the University of Montreal, the family trained on the campus ski slope.

"The skiing there was so gorgeous, so inexpensive, we just started taking the kids," Mary said. "Sandy was about 2 at that point. Steven was 4. And everyone who came along after that point just fell (no pun intended)

Steven, a tall, sandy-haired freshman at Michigan State University, prefers the "awesome" slopes of Aspen but finds challenge in

"You can test yourself with what the mountain has to offer. There's different skiing for different people. There's easy skiing for the parents."

Does he ski with the family?

he film: "Spies Like Us."

The scene: Dan Aykroyd and Chevy Chase are lost in the Russian wilderness. Peering down from a snowy bluff, they spot a Red Army unit. Near a campfire, the soldiers dance wildly to music blasting from a boom box. The Russians are guarding what appears to be a nuclear missile, half-hidden under a tarpaulin.

"What's that?" Chase asks.

"Why that's 'Soul Finger' by the Bar Kays," Aykroyd responds.

Aykroyd, alias Elwood Blues, knows his records. And why not? A Blues Brother should also be able to rattle off the year "Soul Finger" was released, 1967; the label, Atlantic; and other Atlantic stars of the period: Aretha Franklin, Otis Redding, Sam and Dave, Wil-

Well, you say, knowing one's pop music history may be well and good for playing Trivial Pursuit, but not much else. I mean, everyone has a few records, right? You know, for adding a little background music to important activi-

But, for some, records are more than bookshelf filler, more than a bouncy soundtrack for aerobics, more than an occasional vice. They're an obsession. And we're not talking about those who own 100-300 records. That's peanuts, friends. We're talking people with serious record-buying habits, those with collections numbering in the thousands (count 'em, thousands).

Like other stories of addiction, this one begins harmlessly:

An impressionable youth hears a new song on the radio, say, "Twist and Shout." That "Shake it oh baby, now!" verse begins to pound in his brain. He's moved to pedal his bike to the local Woolworth's, where for 69 cents, a sales clerk puts the record in a sack and hands it to him.

Now there's a memory many can relate to. But unlike most of us, the obsessives - call them record fanatics or vinvl junkies — don't taper off their record buying at a plateau of say, 50-75 records. Oh no.

"I don't count my records," says Garaud MacTaggart. "I measure them in board feet." One room in his Royal Oak apartment is given over to housing his collection, somewhere between 6,000 and 8,000 records.

Most big collectors have a sense of humor about their hobby. "It's a disease," says Warren Westfall, also in the 8,000-record club. When friends happen to walk into one of Westfall's two record rooms at home, "They're boggled. You just see wall-to-wall records."

"Record collectors are nuts," says Roy of

Ann Arbor, who owns a similar volume of vinyl. "They're sick. I know one guy who has a whole garage full of records, all sealed," he

But besides the sense of humor, and jokes about "the disease," collectors show a deep respect for music's power to communicate, its ability to stir the intellect and the emotions.

"Music is a very real language," says Westfall, 36. "Big collectors are obsessed, but they're also totally enthusiastic and passionate. They tend to have a certain aliveness. It's like food and water to them."

"If I had to choose between my sight and my hearing," MacTaggart offers, "I'd lose my sight."

For MacTaggart, 35, the obsession began in the mid-'60s: "The first album I ever bought was the Mamas and Papas first album. The first single was 'Sloop John B.' (Beach Boys) with the picture sleeve on Capitol, with the' Rainbow label. I think the big thing is the harmonies got to me along with some other stuff. Then there was the other side, the Yardbirds, the Stones. It was either a real gut-level guitar, or vocal harmonies."

MacTaggart, who reviews music for the Royal Oak Daily Tribune and the Metro Times, earned money to pay for his fledgling collection from a paper route. "I saved up enough money to buy a Montgomery Ward's 'Airline' stereo. You know, the kind that's a portable and the speakers are above it in the top. It cost about $50."

Westfall applies fluid to a disc-brush, then holds the wetted edge to an album spinning on a turntable. He brushes collected dust from the brush to the floor of his Old Redford business, the Record Collector.

"I just made my hobby my living," he says. "It's effortless for me to know all sorts of things about music. My mind is full of useless information — unless of course you're looking for a certain record by an obscure artist. I

As Westfall speaks, the Dirty Dozen Brass Band blares from wall-mounted speakers. Honking brass blends with the sound of passing cars. A bus slows for a Grand River stop, its brakes squealing just outside the open

"I remember asking my aunt for Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto," Westfall says. "I still have the record. I was probably 7 or 8 years old. I was just hearing classical music someplace - the disease started."

ROY, 30, SMILES uncomfortably as he recalls his first album. "It was a Monkees record. Maybe their second; no, it was their third album, 'Headquarters.'

And why the Monkees? "They were on TV," he says, laughing.

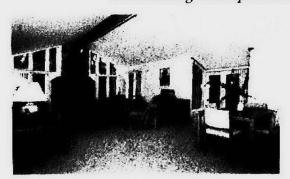

Alan Kovan, who runs Play it Again, a new and used record store in Southfield, has collected more than 1,000 45s.

"They take up the least amount of room. And they're usually worth the most amount of money," he says. Kovan's first record? "I don't remember if I bought CCR 'Willie and the Poor Boys' or 'Abbey Road.'

For some, records are more than an occasional vice. They can become a groovy obsession that has you spinning and flat broke.

Skiing

"We stay on the same mountain," he laughed.

His sister, Sandy, plays soccer with the Troy Lightnings and skis on weekends with

"I'd like to join a ski club but it's so hard sometimes with school because you're gone right after school up until late," she said.

ark describes skiing the way a young bicylist would talk about the art of "popping wheelies," with a lot of "jumpin' and ski'n and bein' radical."

Raffi's technique is more complicated.

"My dad or mom get behind me, and they hold their arms under my arms and I ski down the hill. That's how I do it."

The couple is searching for a ski program that would give Raffi more freedom on the slopes.

"You're determined to give him the same options as everyone else," Mary explained. "You should see the smile on his face."

"You can't leave him behind, you know," Berge noted. "It's hard. You have to be in good shape and everything, but you don't think about it. He goes up in a chair lift and everything else.'

Skiing with Raffi is strenuous, but none of his partners have been injured.

The family has been lucky. In its nearly 20year skiing history, only one member took a bad tumble on the slopes. Steven twisted and tore ligaments in his knee when he was about

Although medical bills have been slight, expenses for the family's weekend trips and equipment have soared.

"I go in here," Berge demonstrated, motioning to his pocket, "And say, how much do we have?'

"We go to Pine Knob this year, guys," he joked, peeking into his wallet. "No, it is terribly expensive. I can't believe it.

"And it's tough, because it's a four-hour drive in most cases. It can be nice weather or bad. You can have a lot of snow and not even be able to make it."

Even the logistics of transporting mounds of equipment and clothing to a weekend getaway can cause headaches.

"If the kids don't help it's a hassle. The skis, the boots - it's incredible you know. Plus you've got to make sure everyone gets in and out." Berge added.

The Najarians cut equipment expenses by maintaining a virtual ski shop of hand-medowns in their basement, adding a new ski outfit, boots or poles to the collection every "Leasing (skis) isn't a bad idea if you don't have a lot of kids to pass it down to. But the stuff we've got has been pretty well worn," noted Mary. She buys a new ski outfit every five years or so, but noted that the oldest children "usually gets the best."

"That's because I am the best," Steve teased. "I have high performance equipment."

ast year the bill for upgrading equipment cost $2,000-$3,000. Sandy and Berge both bought new skis, boots and bind-

"Ski lift tickets average $20 a day. And you buy sunglasses and bindings and this and that," Berge noted.

Cross country skiing saves money on lift tickets and lessons, but the family has only one word for the sport: "BORING!"

By contrast, Alpine skiing "brings out the daredevil in you," according to Berge, who dreams of being dropped by helicopter on a mountain summit.

Raffi expresses a more simple hope.

"I want to schuss right down the mountain someday. I want to go all by myself."

the mid-'60s. "I bought a lot of records during the transition from mono to stereo: The Beach Boys, early Stones, Coltrane, Mingus, Oscar Peterson. I remember going to the old Topps; they had them for 50 cents a disc. It was cheap enough that I could experiment.

"I remember the shock of my mother when I'd come home with Junior Wells and other blues records: 'Where did you hear this?' I literally came home with everything under the sun."

For most collectors, radio sparked their early interest in music. Through Detroit's '60s AM giants like WKNR "Keener-13" and late-'60s free-form FM outlets, they discovered more artists and different sounds.

"I confess a lot of my taste was shaped in the late '60s by WABX," says Westfall. "They'd have Jefferson Airplane followed by Wes Montgomery, followed by hile living in western Michgan in the late '60s, "I used to catch the skip from WCFL in Chicago and WLAC in Nashville, a hard-core R&B station." MacTaggart recalls.

While hours spent listening to the radio can build one's knowledge of music, the big collectors aren't afraid to experiment down at the record store.

"After many years, you sort of have this second sense," Westfall explains. "You get to know something about the label (company), the session players, the prs Westfall to express what could be termed Rule No. 1 for record fanatics: "To be a record collector, you have to part with your mon-

"I remember taking home $300 a week; $100 went to bills, $100 went to savings and $100 went to records. It wasn't unusual to put out $100 a week for records . . . I would go into the used record stores that used to be around, I'd go, 'I heard about this' or 'This looks interesting.'

"Someone said to me, 'You haven't listened to a fraction of those and next week you're out buying more." Westfall recalls. laughing. "It's a disease. There should be a record buyers anonymous like Alcoholics Anonymous. I mean there are people who are obsessed. They need that fix."

ist, but by number . . . They follow scores while listening to music.'

ventually, most big collectors end up exploring all types of music. While many of us, if asked, can name our favorite recording artists, MacTaggart's answer to that question echos most collectors: "Which genre?"

"I listen to all kinds of blues, pop, jazz, reggae," says Westfall. "I have a real love for English and Irish folk music. You buy everything after a while if you're a junkie."

Kovan, 27, who's more into contemporary rock, raves about the Water Boys, an Irish band he compares to U2, Bob Dylan and Van Morrison. Roy, who has been listening almost exclusively to country music, talks enthusiastically about new releases by Rodney Crowell (Johnny Cash's son-in-law) and Nancy Griffith, a darkhaired country-folk singer.

Because pop music tends to appeal to young people, many stop buying records in their late 20s-early 30s. So why do the big collectors keep going, when others their age are losing interest?

t's amazing. After college a lot of people, their interest in music drops right off," MacTaggart says. "They're locked into a certain mind set, like 'The Big Chill.' I mean, my goodness, they're bringing back great stuff! They don't make music like they used too!' It's a paean you hear every decade, you know . . . In the '50s, it was 'They don't make music like Elvis Presley anymore;' And nowadays, 'They don't make music like the Beatles and the Stones anymore,' 'They don't make Motown anymore.'

"It's just a piece of generational wisdom: it's something that always happens, the way people get locked into the music of their time period."

Westfall: "Unless people are willing to be engaged, to make inquiry in what's out there, hey, nothing can show up. And they're right, they're going to be right, it's exactly the way they say it is."

But the collectors are still out there, still making those inquiries. "If you're a music junkie," says Westfall, "you have to go out and find new music."

Summer is over, but we will soon get itchy for another vacation — just a chance to get away from it all whether it be a day, a weekend or a week.

ummer officially ended when the sun crossed the equator during the autumnal equinox in the early morning hours of Sept. 23. It was 2:59 a.m. Eastern Daylight Time, to be exact. Summer is over, but we will soon be itching for another vacation, a way to get away from it all for a day, a weekend or a

Here are three getaways for the fall and winter days ahead. If you only have a day, take an out-of-season excursion to Michigan's favorite summer destination: Frankenmuth. If you can manage a weekend, kick the late leaves or curl up in front of the fire amid the woods at The Homestead, lakeside condominium complex in the northwest Lower Peninsula

You can do both of those things with the kids. You can go to Casa de Campo in the Dominican Republic with the kids too, but you might enjoy that snowbird experience more without them. Casa de Campo is the most complete resort in the Caribbean; Santo Domingo, the oldest city in the western hemisphere is 81 miles away.

FRANKENMUTH

You can drive north under a Michigan-blue sky when the autumn leaves are curling around the bare trees or when the red brick farmhouses make bright patches against the snow. In either season, you will find the horses huddled brown and beige beside the painted barns and kids grinning at you out of the back windows of passing cars.

It is Christmas 365 days a year at Bronner's Christmas Decorations and has been for 35 years since Wally and Irene Bronner started making Christmas decorations by hand in Herman Bronner's basement there in Frankenmuth. Animated figures start talking to you as you enter the 2.5-acre showroom, past signs that say Merry Christmas in 64 languages.

Bronners has the world's largest display of Christmas decorations in a single showroom: 350 animations, 750 separate Nativity scenes from around the the world, 150 one-of-a-kind Christmas trees from 18 inches to 18 feet high and 3000 different Christmas tree decorations, handmade by craftsmen and their elves in Europe.

If you went to Frankenmuth once or twice as a child and haven't been there since, you could easily take it for granted. The tour buses don't; they bring 2 million visitors a year to Bronners from around the world. Visitors watch a film, explore one of the country's most extensive Hummell collections and buy collector's plates or unusual Christmas decorations as gifts. Autumn leaf kickers buy them before Christmas; winter bargain hunters buy them after New Year's.

You could spend your whole day's vacation day at Bronner's, and you're not even into town yet!

HE ICE SAILOR roars across the ice at speeds of 50 to 60 mph.

No engine knocking. No splash of keel against water.

Just the faint sound of the boat's thin blades pressing against ice.

Lying flat in a boat that's just big enough to contain a human body, the ice sailor steers the tiller while making the sail ever slacker for greater speed.

Suddenly land looms ahead. The sailor must quickly turn the vessel or it will smash into the ground and disintegrate.

The turn is made, and the ice sailor heads for the race course's finish line.

"To stop, you have to turn into the wind, and you've always got to give yourself plenty of room because you have no brakes," said West Bloomfield resident Robert Stack.

As his grandfather and father before him, Stack is an ice sailor. Stack, 29, has been tackling the cold winds of Cass Lake every winter

The tailgate can be on a stationwagon — or a van, specially equipped for a feast, can be used.

Whatever form it takes, elegant or casual, simple or extravagant, tailgate parties — those festive, pre-game picnics served from the tailgates of cars — have enjoyed popularity for years around the parking lots of football stadiums.

Now, as fall brings cool breezes, nippy days and swirling leaves, the days are perfect for football and a tailgate picnic.

Ken and Judy Robinson of Birmingham can vouch for that. For them, tailgate parties before University of Michigan games are a family tradition, having started with Judy's parents, Harvey and Mim Rattner of Birmingham and Florida, 35 years ago.

This year, three generations of the family will be tailgating — at the original lot where Judy's parents first let down their tailgate.

That 30-car lot is a choice location, in the backyard of a house near the stadium. Many are friends of the Robinsons, like them returning year after year to the same spot.

For them, a tailgate picnic that pleases the eye and the palate is part of the tradition.

Typical of the diehard University of Michigan football fan, Lou LaChance doesn't let the weather dampen his tailgating plans. The Livonia resident has partied in the same place across from the U-M stadium since 1975.

Judy uses large wicker baskets to pack banquets, which have included beef tenderloin, fresh breads and "always a lot of good chili" for cold days.

Last year, the family feasted on menus put together by and shared with friend Suzy Rosin, who recently opened Suzanne's Kitchen, a gourmet take-out bakery in the CrossWinds Mall in West Bloomfield.

The meals, which were different for each game, included rolled spinach pies, poached salmon with dill sauce, moussaka and stuffed breads.

Plastic champagne glasses, attractive paper goods and flowers set up on card tables transform their patch of lawn into an elegant outdoor dining room.

"It's like an elegant picnic — that's what it is," said Judy. "It always looks pretty. The presentation is probably the best part of it, and everybody has fun doing it."

rinks include beer, and sometimes they'll pack a bottle of scotch or vodka.

The Robinsons are delighted that one of their three sons, David, 24, is now a U-M junior.

"We are real thrilled. It's a lot more fun when your own kids are there," said Judy. "The children bring friends — that's what makes most of the fun."

"It's a tradition that we hope will last through our children and grandchildren. It's nice for them — it's sort of a family thing.

"You know what it is, I think," she said.
"It's alumni just wanting to stay young. It's going back to the carefree life. All that screaming and yelling at the game — if you really think about it, it's kind of silly."

downstream to your left, the 18th-century covered bridge upstream to your right. In summer and fall, when the Bavarian rooftops still poke through a tent of trees, visitors wander in and out of craftshops, taste-test at the St. Julian Winery and eat the famous Zehnder family chicken dinner at either Zehnder's or the Bavarian Inn across the street.

The chicken dinner is the biggest draw in winter, when snow turns Frankenmuth into a storybook town. The carillon rings out from the Bavarian Inn, making tinkling musical sounds across the parking lot to the snowcapped covered bridge. Sunday diners leave their cold breath on the frigid January air and stamp their feet against the cold as they watch the Pied Piper leading his little carved children round and round the Glockenspiel Tower.

Some resorts require warm dry weather or ski hills covered with winter snow to satisfy pleasure seekers. You'll find both things in season at the Homestead, the condominium complex tucked into its own wilderness of trees near Glen Arbor, its beach pressed duneto-dune against the Sleeping Bear National Lakeshore. What is nice about this popular Michigan resort is that it's just as much fun, for the right kind of vacationer, in off-season

The last time I was there it was raining, dripping through the bright forest all around us and hitting the shake roofs of the condominiums. The two blue wooden rocking chairs on my small deck were empty. We sat in our living room, reading the Sunday newspaper delivered to our door about 8:30 a.m. It was still too warm then to use the fireplace, but the coffee was brewing in the kitchen, making a nice homey sound.

That was a one-bedroom condo, but a large ladder rose from the living room to a loft with twin beds, a great boon for families with children. Our condo was in The Village, a wooded setting near the recreation center. I haven't toured the other condos but I have seen them from the outside.

The units at the mouth of the Crystal River, where it empties into Lake Michigan, are popular places to sit on an outdoor deck and watch the kids fishing or climbing over the sand dunes. The units high up on the ridge line rise out of dense trees; from the top units you can see the lake through the tree tops. Hawk's Ridge is literally built facing the ski

On a rainy fall day you can enjoy a cozy closed-in feeling, curled up with a book by the fire. In clear cool weather, you can explore the funky nearby villages or climb the dunes in the National Lakeshore. In winter, it is ski and apres-ski time, combined with out-of-season visits to restaurants in Leland and other Leelanau Peninsula places.

The Homestead is for travelers who might, in another age, have rented an upscale second home, a classy cottage with a maid perhaps. It is for people who like to combine comfort with a wilderness setting, and don't need or want various sizes can be rented by the day, week

Snowbirds fly south to Florida and to the Bahamas but only the knowing traveler has discovered Casa de Campo or the 500-year-old restored buildings of the city of Santo Domingo. Margaret Zellers, author of Fielding's Caribbean, calls Casa de Campo the most complete resort in the Caribbean, and I have never seen anything that proved her wrong.

Most people ride the resort van 81 miles from the airport at Santo Domingo to Casa de Campo, but you can also fly into the private air strip, with a good view of the 7000-acre resort. From the air you can see it all below: red roofed casitas, villas and condos, golf and tennis villas, a small sand beach, a polo field and a crazy Mediterranean "village" called Altos de Chavon set incongruously on a nearby

Casa De Campo was built by the late founding president of Gulf & Western, which was established in a nearby sugar mill. He lured famous people from around the world to build houses there, and hired an Italian movie set designer to built Altos de Chavon as an artist's village. It is now the Caribbean campus of Parson's School of Design, but most resort visitors enjoy it for its boutiques and restaurants.

You can dance in the disco on a transparent glitz. These privately owned condominiums of floor built over live coral or dine to the strumming of guitar players who wander mariachi-style through a clifftop dining room. Frank Sinatra opened the 5,000-seat outdoor amphitheater at Altos de Chavon, a great place for concerts.

The only nearby place to visit outside the resort is probably Baya Hibe, where you can sit and watch the sun go down while drinking beer and eating fresh seafood in an opensided

A van leaves Casa de Campo daily, however, for the city of Santo Domingo, a treasure for history lovers. You can walk through the restored streets to Casa de Colon, built by Christopher Columbus' son in 1510; wander the museum rooms of Casa Reales, which is full of 16th-century furniture, sailing ship artifacts and other wonderful things.

You can photograph the Tower of Homage and the centuries-old cathedral, which claims to have Christopher Columbus' bones. Many places claim them, but this is the most likely site. You will find the young boys of Santo Domingo begging to clean your shoes or show you the town; they are in the plaza outside the cathedral, polite but persistent.

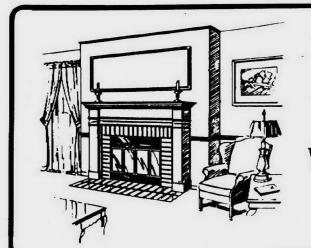

You will also find excellent amber shops, interesting art galleries and tiny restaurants where they will remember how to serve a food

The Dominican Republic is full of friendly people. They like Americans there. The government works hard to make the streets safe. It is an entirely different travel experience than you will find next door in the unfortunate country of Haiti, poorest nation in the western world and recommended to only the hardiest travelers.

For more information on the Dominican Republic, contact your travel agent or the Dominican Tourist Information Center, 485 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

since he was 11 years old.

He is a successful racer too. He has won various ice-sailing regattas across the country and has finished as high as the top five in the Canadian Nationals, eighth in the North American competition and 14th in the world championships.

When not racing in an ice sailboat he's liable to be building one or selling one at his RS Ice Yachts/Coastline Styles store in Keego Harbor. The store is one of four Stack owns, including stores in Birmingham and Rochester (where it goes by the name West Coast Connection). The stores do double duty, offering ice sailboats and accessories in the winter and sailboards and accessories in the summer.

While ice sailing has some similarity to summer sailing, it offers challenges all its own, Stack said.

Both types of sailors have to learn how to judge where the winds are coming from and when to pull in or let out the sail.

But the major difference between the two forms of sailing can be summed up in one word - speed

A summer sailboat has to push against the powerful inertia of the water. But three supersharp skate blades are the ice boat's only contact with anything more solid than air.

"It's about three times faster than regular sailing," Stack said. "You can't believe how fast you can accelerate.

"You're out there, and it's perfectly quiet. You're going so fast, and there's no noise. People don't believe how fast they really go. You go right alongside a snowmobile, and he's really going down the lake, and you're going right

ith all that speed, the

"When two boats hit it sounds like a grenade going off," Stack said. "You can be on the other side of the lake, and you'll hear it."

Stack himself has had two of his own boats never been seriously hurt.

The worst of the two accidents saw him thrown from the boat and dragged across the ice. While he was trying to stop his boat another boat hit him and dragged him even farther across the ice.

"Talk about being scared, I thought it was all over," Stack said.

Yet the dangers of ice sailing can be exaggerated, he said.

"My dad wouldn't let me play football: he thought it was worse. That's because he grew up with his dad with an ice boat, and he thinks it's the safest thing."

Most accidents occur during races, when the drivers are going all out to win.

"Everybody's pushing it to the limit. It's the guy who can push it to the limit the most."

Racers are required to wear helmets for protection. Most also wear goggles against the ice winds, but not Stack. He feels he can trim the sail better without goggles to interfere with his vision.

"When my eyes start watering I know I'm really moving," he said with a grin.

Ice sailors are a rare breed. It is estimated there are 1,500 to 2,000 active ice sailors in the United States, and perhaps 3,000 worldwide. according to Wind Surf magazine.

Stack competes in the largest class, in terms of numbers of competitors, the DN. DN stands for Detroit News, as the boats are based on a design that won a Detroit News ice-sailing competition in 1937.

The wooden boats are anywhere from 141 to 147 inches long and 171/2 to 211/2 inches wide, with pliable masts and Dacron sails.

Stack has taken his DNs to three ice-sailing world championships, which alternate annually between North America and Europe.

Besides offering the chance to compete against the best in the world, these events let racers pick up tips on new techniques and strategies.

The Russians and Poles are the most advanced and serious competitors, Stack said.

"They're professionals, and they get paid by the government to race all year round.

"By doing it every day, they're continually working on all the little things. They've gotten down to taking the temperature of the ice so they can decide what type of runner will melt the ice faster."

t the start of the race the competitors line up along the starting line standing beside their boats. At the gun, the sailors disintegrate underneath him, although he has start running, then jump into the boats as smoothly as possible.

> The racing has gotten more and more competitive in recent years, Stack said. The equipment has changed as sailors look for that one extra thing that will give them the edge over everybody else.

> "People used to wear just regular boots. Then guys started using ice creepers, then golf rubbers with little spikes. Now it's to the point where they use track shoes.'

Stack's dream is to win one of the major events, perhaps the Canadian Nationals or the North Americans. He gets plenty of practice racing on winter weekends with the Cass Lake Yacht Club, an informal group of ice sailors.

Since the ice has to be smooth in order to race, the club travels around to different lakes throughout Michigan and sometimes Ohio and Ontario in search of perfect conditions.

"If you want to be good you've got to travel a lot throughout the winter. You've got to go wherever there's good ice."

Operating his four stores kept Stack so busy last winter that he didn't have time to go to any of the major competitions, such as the world or national championships. But he hopes to break away more this winter.

In fact, if the ice is think and glassy and the wind right, don't look for Robert Stack behind

With wind and ice just right for sailing, the ice fleet gathers at Cass Lake.

How to get involved

By Richard Lech

But it's worth the effort, according to Robert Stack, who races and builds ice sailboats and sells them at his RS Ice Yachts/Coastline Styles stores.

"A lot of people come here and say, 'Can I try it?" Stack said. "Unless you know somebody, it's hard to do.'

It's difficult to "just go for a ride" with someone else to see what it's like, since most of the ice boats are built for only one person, Stack said. And the beginner can't rent a boat since no one rents them, Stack

Stack suggests that someone who's really interested in the sport invest in a good used boat. While a new boat can cost as much as $3,000, a used boat can be had for anywhere from $600 to $1,000.

"All the rigging on the boat is actually what they're paying for," he said. "Rigging, runners and the sail. They can maybe put it on a better boat later, and update the sail."

The beginning racer can go out with one of the informal "fleets," such as the Cass Lake Yacht Club, which regularly take to the ice of such lakes as Pontiac and Cass and Lake St. Clair.

Ice sailors can find out where the action is by calling the fleet captains or by calling hot lines set up by such ice sailing stores as Boston Sails in Mount Clemens and Stack's own stores in Birmingham, Keego Harbor, Mount Clemens and Rochester.

For more information, call Stack at 682-2601.

_Tailgating

of Auburn Hills, a 1981 graduate, and a group of about 15 friends.

This unique dish, said Hans, provides some of the finest tailgate eating. Named after its chef, the recipe calls for bratwurst to be stewed in a concoction of beer and sauerkraut.

The Wally Dog goes well with beer, an occasional mixed drink, and hot toddies or cocoa when it gets cold, he said.

Putting the bratwurst on the grill is the first order of business for the group upon arrival at a pre-selected parking lot, said Hans. Then, "We all kind of gather around the grill and talk about last year and what's going to happen this year."

So loyal is this group of fans, that two of Han's fellow tailgaters, from New York and Florida, come in for every game.

"It's kind of an all-day affair when you have a tailgate," he said. "You have a tailgate before the game, then afterwards you sit there the rest of the day. I've been there many times when it's gotten dark, and we're still having fun."

t Michigan State, festive tailgate parties rival U-M's.

In fact, said Jill Sabiston of Troy, "A lot of times the games are pretty bad - so the parties better be good."

Iill and husband, Mike, who have season tickets to the games, have held tailgate picnics with friends since graduating two years ago.

"We have tons of food - just whatever kind of food you can think of," said Jill.

Their tailgate is a casual one.

"Half the time, we'll get one of those 6-feetlong party subs, or Kentucky Fried Chicken. We also have vegetables and munchies. We bring tables, and set it up on that."

Drinks include beer, wine coolers and "a few mixed drinks, sometimes."

They arrive around 10 a.m. and meet their friends at a "close spot" near Munn Ice Arena. They picnic until the game starts around 1 or 2:30 p.m.

"We usually stay for a little while until the traffic clears out."

Other regular fans of football and tailgating at both U-M and MSU could square off with their vans. Almost celebrities in their own right, these maize and blue and green and white vehicles are fully equipped with tailgate and school spirit paraphernalia.

A tailgate picnic can be turned into something special with a little planning.

Good tableware, attractive paper goods and food can be packed into wicker baskets. Prepare recipes that taste and look terrific.

A folding table and chairs are a good idea. A colorful tablecloth - it can be paper - and flowers can set an elegant tone.

Don't forget the portable barbecue if you're loading the trunk with all-American fare such as hot dogs and hamburgers.

Local stores can provide ideas to help you tailgate in style and ease.

Participants featuring food included:

• Pastissima. At this recently opened Italian gourmet specialty shop, you can choose between 12 different homemade pastas, freshly rolled and packaged to order. Pasta varieties include basic egg, spinach, whole wheat and sweet red pepper. A pound will serve two-three people for a main course. Combine with a Pastissima sauce and salad, a loaf of their fresh bread, and take it home; you can have a tailgate meal ready in less than 10 minutes.

• Michels Baguette. A 6-foot-long sub is offered at $10 a foot. The subs trademarks are fresh baked bread and vegetables, including lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers and alfalfa sprouts. Layers also feature roast beef, turkey, smoked ham, and swiss and cheddar cheese, with Dijon mustard on the top, mayonnaise on the bottom. You might want to order an extra foot to calm appetites after the game.

Success in the kitchen: having the right tools

by Larry Janes

If you're like the national average, more than 62 percent of your holiday shopping will be done the week of Dec. 20.

Too bad.

If only you had known that the ultimate in kitchen sophistication and all-around bon vivant is the new Gaggineau kitchen system. So what if you can write a check for $9,325 on the spot. The wonder stove to beat all stoves probably wouldn't be available until way past Mother's Day. Anyway, how would you fit it under the tree?

Something a little smaller? Come now. You mean you're still interested in Jenn-Aire ranges made into a center island complete with Zero-King vacuum refrigeration system? Hey, dudes and dudettes, that was last year's biggie. Anyway, at a total cost of a little under $7,000 (includes installation), we didn't want to look cheap now, did we?

Something a little more utilitarian? Once again this year, Cuisinart is going for the competition's jugular vein by reintroducing yet another version of what has proven to be the best food processor in the strata. Bigger. Quieter. More options.

IF YOU'RE THE type of person who just purchased a Cabbage Patch doll and finally made it to Club Med, then you probably just purchased a food processor. Even if you don't use it, it's an awesome must for every Coriamclad counter.

Be sure the label says Cuisinart. By the way, write a check for the $140 unless you want all the added toys that you'll never be able to figure out how to use. Then make the check for a little over $375.

As far as cookware is concerned, you can still buy Teflon just about anywhere but if you want something that really shows you've made it, choose Cuisinart. Solid, heavy duty stainless that looks about as pretty as it cooks. I know people who've cooked Budget Gourmet TV dinners, then transferred them into gleaming Cuisinart cookware, brought them to the table to hear nothing but raves. It's true, good things do come in bigger, shinier packages.

OF COURSE, IF you're still one of those people who continue to wear white after Labor Day, then you'll probably be overjoyed to hear that ice cream makers are expected to be hot this gift-giving season.

If the bucks are tight, check out the Donviere model for about $39.95. If you're looking for the traditional best, look for the White Mountain brand. Hand-crank models start at about $50 while the electric models will fetch about $75. Want the absolute best? If money is no object and you want to really impress the friends, the Symac Ice Cream Maker not only makes the best and fastest ice cream but also is numero uno in gelato, sorbets and ices. At about $395, it should be. My opinion? You can but a lot of Dove Bars for that kinda dough.

Once again this year, as in the past, coffee makers seem to be the rage.

Great Euro-styling in addition to great pricing at $60-90 makes Krups and Bunn two of the hottest brewers on the market.

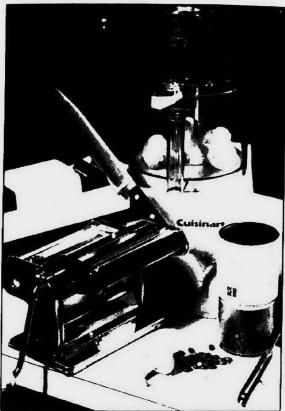

TRUE COFFEE aficionados, however, still go in for the Chemex system. The Chemex Carafe with its unique hour-glass shape and design not only looks good, it makes the best cup of java, in my book. You can't beat the $25 price tag either.

Rumor has it that those under-the-cabinet models that seem to be the rage are more bother than their worth. Contrary to popular belief, unless you have four feet of clearance between counter and upper cabinet, your usable space is still limited and the steam generated from the brewing units is questionable to cabinet fronts and shelves.

Probably the hottest gadget to surface this year is an electric knife sharpener put out by Chef's Choice Electric Knife Sharpener. At $79.95, it was one of the hottest raves at this year's houseware's show.

Sources informed me that the sharpener has special magnets that hold your knife in place and includes diamond grinding heads, which will not excessively damage the blade and composition of the metal. Trust me on this one, folks, I've seen and I've tried. It works. A definite must for the serious gourmet who is in constant need of a good, sharp knife.

Speaking of knives, I'm sure I don't have to tell you that you get what you pay for. Do you still have the "incredible Ginsu" that you paid $19.95 for a few years back? I rest my case. Good Solidgen stainless knives like those made by Wustoph, Trident or Henckles top the quality lists. And rightfully so, especially when the smallest of the paring knives will set you back almost $20. A good starter set consisting of a parer, medium slicer and French chopping knife will tally up to almost $95. But again, you're buying the best and they will last — and last — and last.

IF YOU'RE LOOKING for something to give mom (or dad) for the holidays but you need to gas up the BMW, check out the new silverstone broiler pans. A word of caution here, however, there are many imitators out on the market that call themselves Silverstonelined. But look for the trademark seal. Broiler pans simply rinse off - I love mine and at about $20, it's useful, timesaving and won't get returned like a scarf or tie.

Popular again this year are the raclette pans and pasta makers, woks and electric frypans. You know what I'm talking about, the things that take up so much space in the cabinet that you only use them once to twice a year and after three years as $50 dust catchers, you finally end up putting them in the garage sale to help finance your cruise to Tahiti.

(By the way, Tahiti is this year's IN vaca-

Have a cookbook freak for a friend? This year's MUST books to leave out on your countertops deal with Indian cooking (Madhur Jaffrey's is the best) and something trendies call Spanish Topas. We're still feeling the effects of Thai and fashionable Far Eastern cuisine but the word from the west coast is to begin retreating to a more subtle vein and let the basic food make the statement. Use your herbs in ways to compliment, not mask the flavor of your food.

Keeping Pace with food

Too bad. Here we are, winding down 1986 and you probably didn't even realize that the "in" food trend was regional Thai and Vietnamese cuisine. For that matter, did you really care that the "hot" culinary topic for 1985 was Tex-Mex with a sampling of Dim Sum? Where were you in 1984 when the Olympics started the Yugoslovian and Russian food binges?

Now, this isn't to say that if you missed the boat on this year's Thai and Vietnamese cuisine that you still can't enjoy such Far Eastern delicacies as Xi Hu Yu (a Thai version of boiled fish) or Ru Yi Rou Wan, the Vietnamese answer to lucky meat balls. I mean, let's face it, "Miami Vice" is still the show to watch but check out "L.A. Law!"

So what's hot and what's not for '87?

Well, keeping in the tradition of "high tea" that you can see emerging all around the Metro area hotels and restaurants, believe it or not, this will usher in the era of British cuisine. Now the British have never really been known for anything much more than fish and chips and steak and kidney pie, but after visiting a few of the great Windsor British eateries and discovering the latest hot spot, in Belleville vet, the lean toward the cockneved will surely be taking over the minds and the menus of the great chefs of Detroit.

If you have yet to sit back and enjoy "tea and crumpets" at the Hotel St. Regis, put it on your list of places to be and be seen. Everyone who's anyone in the Motor City knows that tea time at the Regis is where it's happening. Even the "hot to trot" downtown party crowd hits the tea and then makes the rounds of the watering holes.

Here's a hot little tip Molly Abraham hasn't even discovered yet! if you're looking for authentic British cooking, try the just-opened English Derby restaurant just east of beautiful downtown Belleville on the Huron River drive.

It's cafeteria style, but guaranteed to have the best Friday-night fish cakes with a white neys and ghee, watch the local kitchens start sauce that you've ever tasted. This guy is doing so well that he's closed on Saturdays and Sundays (to work on his catering, or so he says). This is the place to go for a cheap date. They don't serve liquor (yet) and fish cakes are only $1.35 each. (Two was more than enough to fill me.)

You probably won't find any steak and kidney here, but you can catch that at Ye Old Steak House in Windsor.

Of course, with British cuisine being the culinary trend, the invitation to Indian cuisine can't be that far behind. Let's face it, with the colonization, along with Andy and Sarah's wedding, this is the year!

The Raja Rani restaurant in Ann Arbor has been dishing up great Indian cuisine for many years and they were content to sit back and do what they did best, without much hoopla and cream sauces, but singularly positioned to add a flavor of distinction. Herb marinades will be the rage. Fresh mint and tarragon will be as valuable as Beluga caviar. Anglehair pasta will sing triumphant with bits of basil, rosemary, fresh sage and pine nuts.

You will continue to see the emergence of specialty game, fowl and seafood never before afforded to the taste of metro Detroiters. Roast loin of lion, fresh bluefin tuna, squab (otherwise known as the pigeons of Plymouth) with sprinklings of rattlesnake meat for the truly adventurous. By the way, bring the American Express or a big wad of 20s.

Although way overdone and always served mushy, pasta will still be prevalent on most menus. Restaurateurs keep it going because they make lots of money by serving it.

Caterers will truly shine in '87, doing everything from intimate and romantic dinners for two (starting at $100) all the way up to catered sit-down affairs for the multitudes, with prices ranging from $6 per plate for the best stuffed cabbage (Mrs. Wiesnewski's) all the way to escargot en phyllo from Tom MacKinnon in Northville - the caterer in western Wayne County (prices by request). Rick Halberg from RIK's Custom catering in Birmingham has the northern 'burbs covered, and I'm hearing great raves from the east siders who are successful in contracting Cafe du Chat to handle all the Pointe parties. Of course, when dealing with these guys, be prepared to have your socks blown off, not only in quality and presentation, but ditto for their pricing. (Remember the old adage - "If you gotta ask, you can't afford!")

Hands can be uncomfortable and even in danger if not properly covered. These Salomons, made of sheepskin leather, do the job of keeping out the cold.

Staying warm in the cold

Layered clothing is always in fashion when it comes to winter sports.

Not only is it comfortable and attractive, but it's great to keep you warm in the cold, according to Sandy Graham, a winter camper, kayak enthusiast and skiier.

Graham's advice for winter sports adovcates is to intelligently layer clothing with the right mix of fabrics and insulation. He endorses a graduated layering system, regardless of the sport. Close to the skin, underwear, socks, gloves and face mask should be thin and porous to hold heat close and keep perspiration away from the skin.

The middle layers, possibly overalls and an insulated jacket, should be medium density fabric that conserves heat and allows air circulation.

The outer layers should form a barrier to contain internal heat and prevent penetration of outside conditions, like water, wind and cold air. This includes lightweight shell jackets and pants.

For camping or hunting, Graham noted, you would layer differently than for skiing. Skiing is very fluid and consistent, he points out. You layer down rather than up. The layers should be thin because you're in constant motion.
