Schools advance construction plans

By Susan Buck staff writer

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Monday approved the hiring of an architect for construction of an elementary school and a middle school renovation project.

The architectural firm of Wakely Associates Inc. will be paid a fixed professional fee of $95,000 to adapt and reuse, with minor revisions, drawings used to construct Boyne City Elementary in Boyne City, Mich. It major revisions are necessary, the additional fee would be based on time and materials, not to exceed an additional $30,000.

IN MAKING its selection, the architects selection committee visited five elementary schools in Michigan. All agreed that the Boyne elementary school is well-designed and a good model for Canton Township's new elementary school.

The Mount Pleasant office of Wakely Associates Inc. will handle the Saltz Road Elementary School project in Canton, while its Warren

Building costs for Canton Township's sixth elementary, which will house 650 students, are projected at $4.5 million, said Raymond Hoedel, associate superintendent for business. Construction of the rectangular-shaped elementary school is expected to begin in spring, said

By selecting a facility that already has been designed and built, rather than designing a new facility. the district is saving money, said Hoedel. The budget for the new elementary school was $240,000. Architectural fees quoted from $95,000 to $125,000 will realize a savings of $115,000 to $145,000.

"It's just like buying a new house. It's less expensive to build a home from a model than to draw up entirely new blueprints," he said.

The school district is studying internal construction modifications like changing office size and increasing classroom size from 900 square feet to 950 square feet.

THE SAME FIRM will be paid $78,000 for a project that targets $1.65 million for general plumbing and electrical improvements at Central Middle School. An elevator will be installed at the school to provide access for the handicapped. Both schools will be barrier free.

In June, voters approved the Board of Education's $13 million bond issue request - the first to succeed since 1974. Nearly half of this Slightly more than $4 million is targeted for equipment and technology improvements. Another $3 million will pay for renovation projects.

The board also awarded the contract bid for construction of a sixclassroom addition at Gallimore Elementary school to TMP Architects of Bloomfield. The construction will cost almost $600,000, which will be under budget by about $20,000 or about three percent.

Delaney loved to weave stories packed with intricate details. He drew from a rich understanding of history and from his avid love of reading classical books.

Delaney's son, Stuart, said he would like to be remembered as promoting a need "to never lose the desire to learn. He was always fascinated with kids, and he loved to talk to kids in school.

Delaney graduated from Yale University and Virginia Law School. He easily recited countless facts about geology, mathematics, astronomy and history.

Study weighs drug education

The federal government is launching a costly war on drug abuse to be carried out largely in the schools, but that may be throwing money around with a blindfold on, according to a University of Michigan researcher.

A recent U-M study of 126 alcohol and drug education programs in elementary schools, high schools and colleges shows that there is still very little understanding of what constitutes an effective prevention program, said Robert Bangert-Drowns, a researcher at the U-M Center for Research on Learning and Teaching.

Even though the programs have been promoted enthusiastically in schools for the past 15 years," he said, "there has been no systematic attempt to determine just what works and what doesn't.

BANGERT-DROWNS said that the evaluations

he studied were a "hodgepodge." Only 14 of the 126 measured changes in substance abuse after the programs were completed. Eighteen measured shifts in attitudes toward drug use and 26 tested for knowledge of drugs. The rest were flawed or inconclusive in their measurements.

Of the 14 that measured actual changes in behav ior, only seven showed drug use had been cut. Four others showed it going up, one had mixed results, and two showed no change.

Bangert-Drown's findings, however, are not all bad. Of the 26 programs that measured knowledge about drugs, 24 were extremely effective in giving students information about the effects of drugs and how they can be misused.

We are doing this as a community project, not to sell clothing.

Every child needs to open a gift at Christmas. The Canton K mart, Plymouth Salvation Army and local churches believe that the people of Plymouth-Canton will pull together and help each child's memory of Christmas be a pleasant one."

• "I'm Terry and I'm 17. My drug of choice is pot, and I started using when I was 13. I've been straight for two years."

· Mary started using alcohol and mescaline when she was 111/2. She went to Straight Inc. in Plymouth and has been straight for five months.

• Beth started doing LSD when she was 10, is 17 now and has been straight for six

• "I'm Traci. My drugs of choice were alcohol and pot and I've been straight for six months, 21/2 weeks."

"Her drug of choice is sugar," hollered

Going straight, with help from some friends out Terry and they all laughed. They finish each other's sentences, punch each other in the arm good-naturedly, laugh loudly and contagiously, fitting together like fingers locked in prayer.

WHAT IS THE toughest thing they deal

"Avoiding using friends and dealing with the boredom," said Mary. "Saying no and people saying you're brainwashed.

"Handling the same pressures that made you want to drink."

"Finding new friends." They holler out answers so quickly you can't put the names with the voices.

AND WHAT'S the best thing about their new-found sobriety? "Not being tired all the time."

"Being able to tell my parents where I'm "Not having to put eyedrops in my eyes and not being paranoid," said Mary. Fred can't think of anything he likes about being sober. He is the newest member of the group and misses his old friends and ways. "Everything is harder, at least for me. Before, if I did anything, it didn't take any work because I was too drunk to know. It was easier when I was ---ed up. Does that make any sense?" "People have higher expectations," said Terry. "When I used to get a C, my parents were real happy. Now I get a C and they're upset. If my parents got one call a week from school about me, that was great. Now,

"DON'T YOU feel like we're the lucky ones, now, though?" someone threw out for

"I do," said Ben, taciturn up till now. "I don't have to live in fear anymore. If I'm going to have an accident. How I'm going to get home. Are my parents going to find out I'm drunk? I'm almost positive I'd be dead by now if I had been doing those things these five months.

"I'm lucky," said the student with braces. "I learned a lot of things, and not just about my addiction, but how to deal with life."

Later she admits she sold herself for drugs and booze. Now, she's getting A's and B's and proud of it. She laughs and giggles like a 16-year-old does and prostitution seems like a word she'd have to look up in the dictionary.

Fred still isn't sure. "I see it both ways.
But in my insides, I feel unlucky. These are the only years I can be irresponsible... I wished I could have screwed up for two more years and then got straight." So why did he go straight? "The court would have ordered treatment if I didn't do

"I wish I wasn't addicted so I could go out and party and have a good time," said Terry. "But I'm a lot more responsible person. My day trusts me with his house, now. And he doesn't have to worry about his liquor

"MOST OF the time I'm happy," said Mary. "I have better friends, like Traci over there. Now I have people to talk to when I have problems. But sometimes I'm mad I'm a druggie 'cause I want to go out and get high. Why do I have this damned

Fred adds: "My old friends don't have time for me anymore because they're out getting drunk. I envy them. They're doing my drinking for me."

Some of them always hated school and still do. Some have found a thrill in good

"I like seeing A's and B's on paper," said Traci. Chris had a .8 average on his last report card before therapy. That's a Dminus. Now he's pulling down C's. Mary got five E's and a D last year. This year, she's got a D, an E and the rest B's and C's. "My grades have gone up big time," said Terry.

"Big time." "SCHOOL SUCKS," says Fred. "Before, when I was using, school was a place to get away from my parents and get high. Being drunk made things so much easier.

"I can't imagine myself using," said Terry. "One, I'd feel so guilty about my parents and everybody who's helped me. Two, I have better self-esteem, now.

"I won't use," said Mary. "I'd never be able to face anyone."

"DAY BY DAY, one day at a time, AA all the way," hollered out Traci, who said she had to fight to convince her parents she needed help to get off pot and booze. "They thought it was just the usual teenage stuff."

A bell rings. A non-stop hour has gone by like a non-stop minute, and it is time for their next class. Laughing and giggling the way kids in high schools have always laughed and giggled at the bell announcing a five-minute break between classes, they gather up their books and rush out the door.

Programs try to help

"Right now, there are some junior high kids selling caffeine pills as speed. It isn't speed, but the buyer doesn't know it," said Woliung.

And there is the realization that drug use often grows out of boredom. To help give kids things to do, Rochester High has instituted Gym and Swim on Saturday nights, which draws about 200 kids a week Maplegrove in West Bloomfield, run by Henry Ford Hospital, has programs for kids from kindergarten age through high school. Its five-part series, "Are You Concerned?," has been at schools in Birmingham, West Bloomfield, Livonia, Wayne-Westland, Clarenceville and Redford Union. "My whole feeling is it's the breakdown in the family system," said Jerry Kwas, a supervisor with the Livonia Counseling Center. "Kids are more lonely, more unsupervised. They have a feeling and no place to deal with that feeling, no one to talk to. Kids want to belong.

"Education is the key," said Carl Berry, police chief of Plymouth Township. "People have to understand what choices they are making. You get back to the grassroots level. Educate parents, educate educators, educate kids. I believe once people understand what substances will do, they'll make the right choice.

Bangert-Drowns found one more encouraging fact some of the alcohol and drug education programs have a delayed impact. Reduced drug use showed up as much as a year later in five of the programs.

Apparently, Bangert-Drowns concludes, drug abuse projects are most effective in increasing students' knowledge, less successful in changing their attitudes and least successful in changing behavior.

"ALTHOUGH the accumulated evidence suggested that substance abuse education has not been effectively used or evaluated in the schools," Bangert-Drowns said, "there are positive indications that they can work.

"Since that is the case, experts in the field had better start asking hard questions, doing thorough evaluations, and setting up programs they know will actually change

Despite the lack of hard data, substance abuse programs may serve other functions, Bangert-Drowns suggests. "A significant service of the programs is to reassure parents that the schools are at least trying to control the problem."

Drain proposal E back in court

Despite an everwhelming defeat in the ballot proposal earlier this month to eliminate his job, Charles Youngblood continues his fight in the courts to remain as Wayne County drain commissioner.

Youngblood's attorney, Jeffrey Supowit, confirmed Monday that he recently filed his latest appeals brief with the Michigan Court of Appeals seeking to overturn Proposal D, which ousted Youngblood from office by a countywide tally of 289,734

Assistant Wayne County attorney Michael Duggan said Tuesday that he would file his brief by the end of the week and would ask for "a hearing on an expedited basis. I would hope the court would hear arguments by December," said Duggan.

There is no basis whatsoever to their arguments," said Duggan. "My only fear is that the courts might leave him in office while they sort this out. But I don't think they will."

Youngblood's term of office had been scheduled to expire Jan. 1, 1989. According to Proposal D, his office will be abolished Jan. 1, 1987, with its duties being absorbed by the office of public service under direction of the county executive.

YOUNGBLOOD WAS turned down by the state appeals court in September on a motion for an immediate reversal of Wayne County Circuit Judge Charles Farmer's decision approving the ballot proposal.

The next stage in the appeal process was reached Oct. 31, when Supowit filed a brief asking the appeals court to rule the ballot proposal illegal. Judge Farmer had ruled before the election that "since there is no guarantee that the voters will approve the proposal, any alleged invalidity of the substance or content is only hypothetical . . : at best, pre-

When asked what would happen if the appeals court hasn't ruled on the appeal by Jan. 1, when the proposal ends Youngblood's job, Supowit said: "That's a good question. I don't know the answer to that."

Under the Charter Counties Act of 1966, the state Legislature mandated the election of the drain commissioner. But that act was amended in 1980 and reads in part: "A county charter adopted under the provisions of this act may provide . . . for the election or appointment of a drain commis-

Milton Mack, a Wayne County commissioner who helped lead the ballot initiative to strip Younglbood of his job, said Monday: "I'm not surprised they have appealed . . but the law is very clear. I don't Locally, Proposal D was overwhelmingly supported. In Redford Township, it passed 12,473 to 3,417; in Livonia 21,354 to 4,619; in-Garden City 4,431 to 1,430; in Plymouth, 2,033 to 434; in Plymouth Township, 5,116 to 1,012; in Canton Township, 7,203 to 1,651; and in Westland, 9,916 to 3,743.

Ochman, a social worker, said, problems of daily living.

"We are all exposed to stress, environmental pressures, all kinds of changes that can sometimes be overwhelming. When a person has difficulty coping, there's a place he or she can go for help."

Ochman has been on staff at Sinai since 1984 as a social worker in the medical social work department. She chaired a committee responsible for the research and development of the proposal for the Employee Assistance Program.

Ochman says the program will help employees with everything from family and marital pressures to alcoholism and drug abuse, legal and financial problems, loss, stress and depression.

"It's important to look at a person's mental health as well as physical health because they are often interrelated. It only makes sense for a hospital to provide the same type of quality care for employees that it provides for patients.'

In August 1984, Ochman completed the post-master's program in management from the University of Michigan School of Social Work. She earned her master of social work degree from U-M in 1980. In 1977, she earned her bachelor's degree from Madonna College.

Though Wayne County's Alternative Community Work Force program has cost 17 times more per worker than expected, county officials said they will continue the program because of severe jail overcrowding.

By Tom Henderson

staff writer

They admit mistakes in running the program and publicizing it have resulted in far fewer workers than expected, but said active participation by Detroit judges and the Wayne County prosecutor will result in drastically lower costs in its second year of operation.

The Prosecutor's Office said Sheriff Robert Ficano is to blame for not publicizing the program. Ficano said he has met with area judges personally and written them letters about the program, which is administered by the county's Office of Public Ser-

The program began operation in April and was designed to provide a cheaper alternative than jail in punishing those guilty of misdemeanors and some non-violent felonies.

The program allows for prisoners to spend the day in various work details and the night in their homes.

Though the program began in February, County Prosecutor John O'Hair said Wednesday that he didn't know the program existed until several weeks ago. And Judge Adam Shakoor, chief judge of the 36th District Court in Detroit, said he and many of his fellow judges weren't aware of the program until late October.

It was originally estimated that the cost of the program would be $30 a prisoner, compared to $75 a day to house them in the Wayne County jail. Instead, the program has cost $130,000, an average of about $500 per prisoner per day; $65,000 has succeed." come from a state-adminstered grant funded by the U.S. Office of Criminal Justice.

In the first nine months of the program, only 80 prisoners worked a total of 258 days. Projections were that the program would involve 14,600 work days a year and a savings to the county of at least $1 mil-concept to programs run by many suburban courts.

Work program: high cost, little work

A weekend program has operated in the black for 17 years in Livonia, according to 16th District Judge Robert Brzezinski. In lieu of jail time, those guilty of misdemeanors spend Saturdays and Sundays doing odd jobs around the city and pay the court $15 a day for the privilege.

"We put 60 of them to work on Saturday and 60 on Sunday," said Brzez-

Such work-detail programs have proven successful in Redford Township, Plymouth, Canton and Westland, at a cost of $15 or $20 per per-

Though most judges prefer to sentence the guilty to local programs, Judge John MacDonald of the 35th District Court in Plymouth said he uses both a local program and the county program.

"It depends on economics," said MacDonald "Our program is $20 a day and some offenders can't afford $30 for the county program. And if it's a local violator, we usually assign them to work here. But if it's a drunk driver from Belleville, say, we'll send them to Wayne County.'

DESPITE SUCCESSFUL work-detail programs in the suburbs, judges in Detroit's 36th District Court have just recently begun participating in the program. Judge Shakoor said they were unaware of the program.

Ficano said that he met personally with Shakoor's predecessor as chief judge, Theresa Doss, who was to pass on information about the program. "They preferred sending people to jail," he said.

"Detroit has got to use it, because that's where most of the detainees come from," said county commissioner Mary Dumas of Livonia: "If they won't use it, it's not going to

On Oct. 22, Judge Shakoor wrote his fellow judges urging them to use the work-detail program because the Wayne County jail is at full capacity of 2,000 and under a court order prohibiting it from accepting mis-

FICANO SAID that the program is administered by the county's Office of Public Service, the successor to THE PROGRAM IS similar in the old road commission. "All we do is provide deputies as guards," he

"I don't want to lay blame," said Jamers Vollman, deputy director of the Office of Public Services. "I will take some of the responsibility for not informing (the prosector). We involved John O'Hair in the planning, and I should have gotten back to him. But it was up to the sheriff to inform the judges. He spent more time in the suburban areas.

"In hindsight we should have involved the prosecutor much earlier because his people are involved day to day with the courts. Hopefully, if you call me back in six or eight months, I'll tell you that we have 80 people on the program, that the freeways are clear and that Hines Park won't be flooding anymore because they've cleaned all the brush out." O'Hair said Wednesday that he likes the program and thinks it will succeed.

We've got to have something as an alternative when there's no room in the jail. You simply can't permit people to violate the law without punishment. But the program's been terribly expensive so far, which doesn't bode well.

"It's had no visibility whatsoever. I was unaware of the existence of the program and everybody in law enforcement should have been aware of it. I thought it was in the planning stages," O'Hair said.

He said his staff would be actively involved in recommending to judges that they use the program in sentencing.

Under terms of negotiations between Ficano and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, workers in the program will not be allowed to use power tools.

"They can do only the most menial labor, which I don't have any problem with," said Vollman. "I don't think I'd be comfortable with having a convicted felon using a power saw, for example. And it should be menial, tedious work. After all, this is punishment."

Ficano said an application for a second grant was made in October. We should put everything behind us and cooperate together," he said. "I plan to reach out to the road commission (OPS) and say, 'Let's make

Feds use national, not local, data

By Tim Richard Rich Periberg staff writers

Federal economic policy will be made with national data, despite wide differences between such regions as the "sun belt," "rust belt" and "Appalachia."

"The 12 Federal Reserve branch banks do a great deal of regional analysis," said Dr. Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers.

But the federal government's top economist said he works almost entirely with nationwide gross national product, income and employment

U.S. SEN. Carl Levin, D-Mich., thinks more emphasis should be placed on available regional data.

"When you look at per-capita income as the measure for certain programs, then you ought to look at the cost of living in a state," Levin said. That cost is much higher in Michigan and New York than in Mississippi or West Virginia. Thus, a Michiganian with a higher dollar income may be in worse shape than a Mississippian with a lower income.

Sprinkel was interviewed after he spoke Monday to the Economic Club

In the post-World War II era, the southeastern states limped along economically and lost population, giving a negative connotation to such terms as "Appalachia" and the "boll weevil belt."

Sprinkel, a conservative Republican from the University of Chicago school of monetary economists, and Levin, one of the Senate's most liberal Democrats, agreed that plenty of regional data is available.

Sprinkel added that the U.S. Commerce Department issues industry over a period of years. Countering the argument that many new jobs are in fast-food chains at minimum wages, Sprinkel said, "The real standard of living has gone up. It's wrong to argue that service jobs are all low-pay and manufacturing jobs are high pay," citing bankers and news people as being in from the University of Chicago, was executive vice president and economist at Harris Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago when the Reagan administration tapped him for public service. But he pointed out that the nation's No. 1 automaker is investing heavily in new plants and jobs, adding, "I can't take just this one piece of the picture and say that's the whole album."

He said Senate Democrats would aim their trade bill at "countries which discriminate against us," notably Japan, and promised to "protect my auto workers."

Reports of an arms-for-hostages swap will doom future Americans and should be denied or repudiated immediately, according to U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich.

Levin also said he would press for an immediate congressional inquiry into reports that the American government traded arms to Iran in exchange for the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon for more

"I just think we've made a major blunder," Levin said Monday morning in an interview with the Observer & Eccentric newspapers.

"We've guaranteed that they'll take more and more hostages. If you can accomplish an end by taking hostages, then you are going to take hostages. We can't reward hostage taking."

THE WHITE House has not responded to much publicized stories about dealing with Iran other than to say the government has done nothing illegal or improper in arranging for hostage relea

Levin said there is no reason for President Reagan not to deny the story if it is not true. If the story is true, he said, the practice must be halted in order to send a worldwide message that "the moment it was discovered . . . the American people

A former Detroit city councilman, Levin is in his second term in the

"This is an economic issue. I'm not mad at the Japanese. I admire the Levin said trade rules in other nations restrict free American trade in areas "where we are most efficient" such as beef, telecommunications, rice, citrus, some auto component and lumber.

Japan, he said, subsidizes rice prices at $1,400 a ton even though Americans could export it for sale at $400 a ton.

"They want to keep their farmers in business," he said. "I want to keep my auto workers in business."

LEVIN SAID Washington is still struggling to face up to the national tax bill," he said. "We should have closed the loopholes and taken the revenues and used them to reduce the deficit." He said 69 percent of the public favored such action but added that the House leadership chose not to stand up to "Reagan's rhetoric." Levin also said that some of the benefits of a new $1.7 billion drugfighting bill included more money for jails, local law enforement efforts and border patrols.

Levin sponsored an amendment to the bill that requires mandatory jail sentences for those convicted of selling drugs to youngsters or of selling drugs near schools.

Not all movies worth defending

Susan Roslek assistant managing editor

N RECENT weeks the administration of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools has been beseiged with requests from a resident to review curriculum materials used in

16A(P)

Diane Daskalakis first became involved in October 1985 when she objected to the appearance of Gundella the Witch as a speaker at the Centennial Educational Park. After an unsuccessful run for the school board in June 1986 she objected to use of the movie "Sword and the Sorcerer" at East Middle School and then this fall to the showing of "The Breakfast Club" to a high school English class at the CEP.

Then, as October came to a close, she filed formal complaints against three movies ("Excalibur," "Teen Wolf" and "Ghostbusters"), two books ("Rules for Radicals" and "Introduction to Zen Budhism"), against an excerpt from a publication called "Kids America" by Steven Caney, and against the use of a ouija board at the CEP .-

The administration is in the process of establishing review committees to make a decision on whether the above materials are objectionable and ought to be removed as learning materials. "The Breakfast Club" originally was banned by the superintendent but later turned over to a review committee for final determination.

The issue now at stake is whether the materials are offensive enough to community standards to ban their use in the curriculum of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. Because the film media is involved, what is developing is a balancing of rights between academic freedom and freedom of expression.

FRANKLY, complaints against the two books should be dismissed quickly as the objections are without merit.

Room must be provided in our public schools for competing ideas, and books simply cannot be banned because ideas expressed in them run contrary to established beliefs. It matters not whether those ideas being challenged are related to Christianity, democracy or free enterprise. Students must be exposed to a wide range of ideas and values to determine which ideas and values really have merit

The formal complaint against use of a ouija board also should be discarded quickly as being too trivial to contend with. The community need not bother itself with something so trite as debating the merits of a ouija board.

The issue we face, then, is the use of movies in the classroom. Movies, unlike books, involve the spoken word and so the applicable test becomes freedom of expression — a First Amendment issue. When looking at profanity, it matters less if objectionable language is contained in a book because the written word is not "broadcast" over an entire group but usually read singularly by one individual.

Words read silently by one person is totally different than words "spoken" to an entire class. Community standards come into play exactly because movies involve the spoken word. If the script of "The Breakfast Club" were assigned as reading material, there would be less grounds for objection. But that is not the case.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM is not an education.

absolute freedom anymore than freedom of expression.

In fact, academic freedom historically grew out of freedom of expression and finds its basis in freedom of speech. The curb on the First Amendment is the "yelling fire in the theater" - the safety and welfare of a group can restrain the rights of an individual. Out of this the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that community standards can be used to determine whether alleged obscenity will be allowed, controlled or banned.

The main question is: Would the school district allow students to use the objectionable language in front of the classroom? If not, would the students be disciplined for continually using the same language in the classroom? If the community standards are such that students are not allowed to use those specific words then by what stretch of the imagination can we allow the exact same words to be "spoken" by other voices via cinema?

The superintendent made an individual decision that such language was not suited for students to use on school property and, therefore, was not suitable for classroom use via a movie. In general, he recommended against use of 'R-rated" films in the classroom.

The flipside is that if R-rated films with strong language continually are used in the classroom then the faculty, district and community at-large should be prepared for students to use that language in the classroom and hall-

NO ADMINISTRATOR in the school district seriously is interested in promoting censorship.

An educator always will be sensitive to the attacks of self-appointed censors such as Daskalakis and will be prepared to ward off attacks on academic freedom. But to turn down every single objection she has, without consideration of merit, would be silly and legally foolish.

To defend the use of the language used in "The Breakfast Club" under the cloak of academic freedom is a dangerous argument in that it suggests that the freedom is absolute and any material a teacher selects should be allowed. That is not reality. Reality is that academic freedom is not absolute and not all materials are suitable for classroom use.

"The Breakfast Club" is a worthwhile movie with an important message. But it has made its run of the theaters and has been shown and reshown many times on cable television. Students certainly will not be deprived of its message if it is not shown at the CEP. In this case the cries of censorship have a rather hollow ring. The issues are different with "Excalibur," "The Sword and the Sorcerer," "Ghostbusters" and "Teen Wolf." With these movies the objections, apparently, are related more to ideas expressed than to obscenity issues. The community likely can tolerate each of these four films without risking any harm.

"The Breakfast Club," however, is another matter. A continuation of the ban would not involve censorship because the Supreme Court's test could be met. If the review committee should reach that decision, then so be it. Let's set aside the other objections and let's return our attention to the quality of

Complaints are time-consuming

To the editor:

How much longer is our community going to allow one woman's activities to take up so much of our school administrators' time?

I suspect that I am not the only person in town who is very irritated by my tax dollars being spent to pay administrators to talk to Diane Daskalakis, to talk to the press about Diane, to evaluate the "complaints" by Diane, to talk to teachers about Diane's charge of devil worship, to set up committees to study Diane's charges, to serve on panels to evaluate Diane's charges, etc.,

These administrators are highly paid professionals whose time could be far better spent on administrating our school district, not worrying about Don Quixote's windmills! I would like to have their time spent on their appointed as a Christian, as she should respect the values of other choice of worship. Her attempts to block out of our schools teaching of the goodness of other faiths, or viewpoints different than her own, violates our Constitution. I thought our Founding Fathers settled this whole problem 200 years ago!

The problem of inflicting the "right" idea and excluding the "wrong" ideas (translated as those which do not agree with Diane) is . . . who is to decide which is "right" and which is "wrong"? It smacks of Nazi Germany!

I strive to be a Christian but that does not mean I cannot respect the beliefs of others and their right to their beliefs.

Please allow our voted tax dollars to be spent as the voters of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools intended to educate our students.

Judicial election criticized

Attorneys throughout the area are grousing about the election results which put an attorney one year out of law school and rated unqaulified by a Detroit Bar Association rating committee on the Wayne County Circuit Court

Cause of the concern is Kathleen Macdonald, who was one of three persons elected to vacancies on the circuit `court.

Macdonald received her law degree one year ago, passed the bar examination and was admitted to practice less than a year ago and has been working as a clerk to Recorder's Court Judge John O'Brien since then.

Macdonald said she has had enough life experiences to make her a good judge. She is 40 and has been married to a well-known trial lawyer of 22 years experience, Larry Macdonald.

MORE THAN ONE influential bar figure thinks that the Macdonald ascendency to the bench will prompt lawyers to recommend that the Legislature demand more qualifications from prospective judges.

As it is now, any candidate for judge in a state court - district, circuit, appellate and supreme - needs to have no more than a law degree and Michigan residency.

Candidates for circuit court must get 5,000 signatures of registered voters to put themselves on the ballot and supreme court candidates need the sworn statement of only one person attesting that he or she thinks that Mr. X is a fine fellow (or woman) and, indeed, would make a fine judge.

The problem is, according to some attorneys, that lawyers themselves haven't insisted on any real qualifications, feeling, perhaps, that voters will in their wisdom select the most qualified candidates.

proven that theory wrong again and again and have elected to the bench many well-known hacks as well as qualified and even outstanding jurists.

It's obvious to any political watcher that voters are amazingly indifferent to learning anything about judicial candidates and tend to vote for names they think they have heard before in connection with something or other judicial.

That's why there are so many Brennans, Cavanaghs, Murphys, Rileys, Kaufmans, etc., either are on the bench or loooking to get on the bench.

In most cases, the would-be judges with the right Irish or Jewish names wait a few years between the attaining of a sheepskin and the declaration of candidacy, as, for example, did the son of longtime circuit judge Charles Kaufman when he successfully ran for the circuit bench. Son Richard had been a lawyer for several years when he was elected a judge at 28.

MY SUSPICION is that Macdonald ran with the knowledge that she had an Irish name and might well count on "the women's vote." Of the six candidates vying for the three seats to be filled she was the only woman.

Women, more and more have a tendency to vote for a woman candidate for office on the theory that "it's about time" women got some of the prestigious positions that men have held for

But the latest field of six also includ-THE VOTERS have, however, have ed a 28-year-old lawyer with two years experience who had never tried a case in circuit court (another Kavanagh), and two lawyers with less than six years experience apiece.

Former state representative and Circuit Court Judge Marvin Stempien (brother of losing circuit court candidate Greg Stempien) has drafted a bill calling for a minimum of ten years experience for circuit judges.

The drafted bill is now in the hands of state Sen. William D. Faust, D-Westland, who has promised to introduce it.

The bar organizations ought to get behind this kind of legislation, some attorneys feel, since they have been remiss in not taking a stand for judges who have more than a law degree and a willingness to learn.

Pundit proposes populist plank

OK. THE ELECTION IS over. The defenders of truth and justice have beaten back the forces of darkness and evil. The newly elected may now get down to the serious business of their august positions: getting re-elected.

As distasteful as it sounds, politicians do have to go before the voters now and then. Since drug abuse and the deficit are going to be wiped out by Valentine's Day, new issues are needed. If they wish to keep the populace happy, politicians should pay attention to these planks I am suggesting as the foundation for a winning platform:

 Public floggings should be advocated for those drivers who whip down lanes that have barricades and then rely on some namby-pamby driver to let them into the main traffic flow. Habitual offenders should be given minimum sentences on the Lodge with no early release for good behavior. • It should be a misdemeanor to try to sneak through the express lane at the grocery store with more than the maximum number of items. Those arrested for this heinous crime should be made to stand next to Salvation Army bellringers from Thanksgiving to Christmas. • The governor should issue an executive order that tells suburbanites to quit terrorizing Detroit.

 A resolution should be passed by the legislature forbidding the use of "rebuilding" and "Detroit Lions" in the same sentence. The Zilwaukee Bridge is being rebuilt. The Detroit Lions are perfecting mediocrity.

• A constitutional amendment should be passed to prevent any more banks from changing their names. How can you trust your money to an institution that doesn't even like its own

• Gum chewers, particularly those who face the public, should be forced to listen all day to Madonna records accompanied by fingernails screeching across a blackboard. Punishments should fit the nuisance value of the

• In a First Amendment effort to save newsprint, L. Brooks Patterson should be quoted only when he agrees with a judge's decision and Frank Kelley should be quoted only when he agrees with a utility rate hike. • Exit polls should be protected by law but pollers will no longer be able to ask voters which children of which candidates their children will likely vote

• It will be necessary to repeal the law of gravity. Leaves would then fall

• The following law must be passed: No candidate who sets new election spending records will be allowed to campaign on a pledge of fiscal respon-

• It should be a federal offense to say "the computer is down" when trying to explain a problem. • It should be unlawful to say "uh, oh" if you are a mechanic looking under a car's hood, if you are a doctor looking at an X-ray, or if you are a broadcaster getting ready to read the stock report.

• A referendum is needed to outlaw all calories in chocolate eclairs, nutty doughnuts and ice cream sundaes. The calories shall be transferred to celery, lettuce and Brussels sprouts.

• Finally, a strong education effort should be mounted to teach baseball fans why they should never, ever get their hopes up about the Boston Red

FOR A LONG time I thought I was virtually alone in the irritating affliction of frequently awakening about 3 a.m. and then not being able to resume normal sleep almost until the bedside radio starts blaring with the 6 a.m. news and weather reports.

I was mistaken. An unscientific survey among acquaintances leads me to believe there are hordes of humans who are unwillingly awake at about the

I have no trouble dozing off after lunch, or while watching some dumb TV show in the evening, so why does nature penalize me when the world is its quietest?

These are mankind's worst hours, the time when every trifling sound magnifies and every worry multiplies.

Whle researching the topic, I read that indigestion, overexcitement, pain and discomfort, stimulants, frightening dreams, fear and certain drugs all can can a number of mental illnesses, a detail about which I hesitate to spectulate.

What I was really looking for, but couldn't find, was a remedy, a reliable process apart from simply answering nature's call to the bathroom that would assure instant resumption of peaceful slumber. I pursued this with a few

Remember, this is at a time of the night when one must be cautious not to awaken others of the family. Walk softly, keep the lights dim, and don't slam any doors are basic rules.

Len Widman, in groping for the same answer, has become an authority on allnight radio talk shows. John Hayes relies on crackers and milk. In contrast, a lady we'll call Angie prefers a slug of brandy. Other suggestions included working on tax forms, reading a dull memorizing a choice bit of poetry.

I TRIED reading a few nights ago and chose the new 1987 edition of "The Old Farmer's Almanac." I learned that Friday the 13th will pop up on the '87 calendar three times (February, March and November), that the weather forecast for this section of the nation for Nov. 13-17 is "Cold wave, light snow;" and that one alleged way to cure a toothache is to run three times around a church without thinking of a fox. But I didn't sleep.

It is my practice in these stressful moments to depart from the marital mattress, stretch out on the living room sofa and concentrate on listening for the musical chimes of the 70-year-old pendulum clock that hangs on the wall.

What this turns out to be is an inter-book, recounting life's love affairs or esting exercise in arithmetical gymnastics because of the clock's peculiarities.

For instance, if I hear the clock bong 12 times as though it were midnight I can calculate that it's actually 2:30 a.m. If I'm still awake at the real hour of 5:30, the clock will try to convince me it's only 3.

You see, the part that strikes the hours is out of sync with the part that keeps time. How it got that way is a mystery and the family is divided as to having it repaired.

There are three reasons for my "no" vote: First, it's more interesting as a conversation piece than as a timepiece. Secondly, as a target of concentration it does aid in inducing sleep. Finally, I dream that its erratic habits will some week be mimicked as the key clue that allows Angela Lansbury to solve another crime on "Murder, She Wrote."

Winds of war blow through the Ohio Valley

world on fire," stated Horace Walpole, the Earl of Oxford, in his "Memoirs," a study of 18th century history.

George Washington was the young "Virginian" Walpole referred to, and the fire began as a small brush fire in the mountains about 60 miles south of Fort Duquesne (Pittsburgh).

That fatal volley killed a man from Michigan, Joseph de Villiers Jumonville. He and his brother, Louis, were sons of a prominent Michigan French family. Their father had been commandant of the Fort of St. Joseph from 1724-30.

With the death of Jumonville and others from d'Etroit, the French had a new cause for complaint and they made the most of it. The internecine holocaust that followed this incident was called the French and Indian War.

The conflict eventually involved most of Europe where it was known as the "Seven Years War." Its outcome had a great bearing upon the future of America but it is not a part of our story at this

LET US RETURN to Alexandria where we find George Washington right where we left him at Gadsby's Tavern (Tonquish Tales, Observer, Oct. 30).

Several weeks have gone by. It is early March 1754 and the word has been received here that 500 French, armed to the teeth, are moving down

"A volley fired by a young Virginian Gist and Lt. William Trent and about in the backwoods of America set the 100 volunteers are trying to put together at the forks of the Monongahela and the Allegheny.

After weeks of "hard sell" Washington and his aides were unable to enlist more than 25 young Virginians. First of all, the men wanted to know what the pay would be and if it would be guaranteed, and if it would be as much as the British Army received for its service.

These "sunshine patriots" had their own interests in mind and had no intention of risking their necks in a hazardous march over the mountains to be shot at by an unknown foe unless there was something in it for themselves and their families. The recruiting did not speed up until the governor promised to set aside a "fair division" of free land in the Ohio Valley.

Privately Washington called his enlistees "loose, idle persons" of little worth. About Feb. 11 he became so disillusioned that he wrote Lord Fairfax that the draft was a "failure." Then he left Alexandria to confer with the governor at Williamsburg. He wrote: "You may, with almost equal success, attempt to raise the dead to life again, as the force of this country."

Washington petitioned the governor for uniforms for his lackluster volunteers, and suggested that the cost could be deducted from their pay. He added that he regretted that he was unable to advance the money. Recently he had rented Mt. Vernon from the widow of the river toward the fort Christopher his half-brother, Lawrence Washington.

Along with the rental agreement went 18 slaves to do the work on the plantation along the Potomac.

(It is interesting to note that Mrs. Lawrence Washington's maiden name was Ann Fairfax. She was the daughter of William Fairfax, and the sister-in-law of Washington's friend, Sally Fairfax. The genealogy and social inter-relationships of the ruling class in Virginia and elsewhere in the south is a fascinating subject for research).

While in Williamsburg, Washington learned that the governor had been told by South Carolina that they would sent a thousand Cherokee and Catawba warriors to aid the cause. General Dinwiddie also asserted that they could count on one independent company of regulars from South Carolina. Two companies were coming from New York.

Dinwiddie also enthused about the prospect of assistance from Massachusetts. Their Governor Shirley was considering using the Massachusetts militia to make an attack on Montreal and Quebec and thereby draw some of the French fire power away from the Ohio

All this was good news, but it was based upon promises. These were not the facts they had to deal with immediately; the reality was here and now.

The basic problems were recruitment, equipment, and finding a way to transport heavy cannon on a wilderness trail over a trackless mountain. In the midst of these worries came word that Gist and Trent had surrendered their fort at the forks to the superior fire power of an army of French.

Scarcely a shot was fired but Gist and Trent with their troops were allowed to retreat back across the mountains. The French got what they wanted. They tore down the little fort the Americans had started, and nearby began the construction of their own stronghold — Fort Du-

BEFORE WE MOVE ahead in this story let's take a good look at some of the basic facts underlying America's shaky beginnings as a world power.

The story is clearly defined in Douglas Freeman's masterly study of Washington. Among other significant things, Freeman states: "Thus began the adventure of Virginia and this son of her's in colonial defense that soon might be the bloody business of war. It was new to the people and vastly more complicated than Dinwiddie or young Washington or any of the others realized.

"Virginia had trained no officers, had kept no troops, had organized no wagon train, and had possessed few arms. There probably was not one man in Williamsburg, if indeed in all Virginia, who could say how long it would take 200 troops to march to the Monongahela, or how many wagons and horses would be required to transport over the mountains the food, the equipment, and the ammunition needed to sustain this small force. Novices were inviting war in a forbidding land."

For example, they counted on the socalled militia in Lord William Fairfax's town of Frederick. But the truth is that there was no roll of the men obligated to serve. There were no records. And in county after county the situation was the same. The only way a roster could be prepared was to go to the tax lists. And there was defiance of the proposed draft. American liberty and freedom was, to say the least, in jeopardy. It hung on the frail reed of Washington's faith and determination.

(The next edition of Tonquish Tales will find Washington's ragtag army building a road over the Allegheny mountains and constructing a stronghold aptly named "Fort Ne-

Path to money is full of bad turns

IT CAUGHT me by surprise. The elderly couple in the car ahead of me stopped very quickly and drove only partially off the road. I could not pass because of oncoming traffic. She stepped out of the car and picked up a crushed beverage can. They continued on for a short distance when the action was again repeated.

I should not have been surprised. The basic premise of the bottle deposit legislation cleaning up our roadway and thoroughfares is the power of money to drive the engines of care and regard for our landscape. Make it costly to throw bottles away and profitable to return them, and you have the secret for humans cleaning up their habitat. It's a formula that should be more extensively applied.

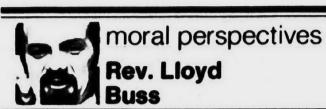

I had not expected this either. It concerned another senior citizen

Rev. Lloyd D. Buss couple. Some years ago, when the husband retired from his work, he and his wife said they had written their will so that the church would receive their home after their death.

They had no children. They wanted their possession to make a contri-bution to the well-being of life. It would be an unrestricted gift. It was never disclosed to the congregation.

He died shortly afterwards, and the widow continued active in the church. Then her health began to fail. Members of the church cleared her drive of snow, raked the leaves and helped with other chores. She was deathly afraid of being incapacitated. She was deathly afraid of being taken to a public institution. She asked the husband of her one niece to be a co-signer on her bank account. If she were ever unable to sign her own name, he would be able to sign for her. She wanted always to be in control of her life.

THE NIECE'S HUSBAND began to do chores around the house. She would tell me how he was charging an hourly fee . . . that he would be paid out of the estate. It was not a happy relationship, but there were few alternatives. She complained of how he would charge her even when visiting with her in the home.

She's been dead a number of years. Almost 10. Several months ago I stopped by the county office to check out a hunch. I was right. The property was registered in the name of the niece's husband. It had never been through probate. The joint signature passed all the assets from one to the other without court action. The couple's will had meant nothing. I should not have been surprised.

A basic premise of capitalism is the power of money to drive the engines of care and regard for life. Make it costly to neglect one another and profitable to offer assistance, and you have the secret for a rudimentary order of society.

Dare we hope for anything better? Perhaps not. As long as we rely on money to organize our lives there should be few surprises over its control of our whole world.

Expo to showcase local businesses

By Marilyn Fitchett taff writer

Don't look for area business people to be working on heir b. sketball skills when they show up at the Schoolcraft College gyms early in May

Instead, the "picks" they'll be setting will have to do with choosing business equipment and services at the Greater bayonia Expo May 5-7, sponsored by the Livoma Chamber of Commerce

The chamber is hoping the show will host close to 150 businesses that will display services and products ranging fron real estate and financial planning to health care plans, computers and industrial cleaning supplies.

The theme of the expo is networking. What we're trying to do is tell area businesses that you can get mything you need right in this area." John White, champer executive director, said.

THE CHAMBER has hired trade show consultant

James Skinner of Livonia to map the show's strategy Skinner coordinated Downriver's business expo last

Local expos are patterned after those like the Detroit Business Expo held annually at Cobo Hall. But Skinner sees the smaller regional shows "taking the steam" out "At the local shows, people can deal with businesses that are within a 10-15 mile radius. It's done much more on a person-to-person basis.

Skinner sees the incentive for businesses to participate in terms of dollars saved and sales made. There was a study done by 3M which showed that it costs them a minimum of $200 to make a sales call $1.000 if equipment is used. At a business expo, it costs

10 cents to $1 to do the same thing," Skinner said.

People are coming in to see what's new and what they can buy. They are in a buyer's mood."

FOR THE FIRST night of the show, the chamber will mix business with pleasure. On Tuesday, May 5, it will host a cocktail party featuring hors d'oeuvres from 20 area restaurants.

said. "These usually turn out to be the social event of the season, and it builds community spirit."

By week's end. White hopes to have rounded up 10 companies willing to pay the $2,000 major sponsor fee. Health Alliance Plan, Michigan National Bank, Consumers Power, Allmand Associates, Air Gage, and Burland, Reese, Murphy & Rembiesa have already stepped forward.

Companies interested in display booths will be charged $595 for a 10-by-10-foot space or $495 for a 10by-8. Skinner will offer his expertise to busineses needing help in setting up their booths.

The show will feature approximately 25,000 square feet of carpeted exhibit space filled by a mix of trade, service and industrial companies from the western suburbs. There will be no admission charge, and the chamber expects attendance to be composed of 60 percent business and 40 percent general public.

Schoolcraft College is at 18600 Haggerty, west of I-"It will be like a taste of greater Livonia," Skinner 275, between Six and Seven Mile. For more information, call the chamber at 427-2122.

New beginning

Standard Federal seeks diversity beyond single-family home loans

By Tim Richard

staff writer

In the high-interest rate year of 1981, Standard Federal Bank found itself taking a double beating.

Diversifying, "but conservatively"

Thomas R. Ricketts, board chairman and president of the Troy-based thrift institution, put it in perspective:

Historically, thrifts made 30-year mortgage loans with passbook money. We had to compete (for deposits) with the money funds."

As depositors were wooed away by money-market funds. Standard Federal peddled $1 billion in long-term, fixed-rate loans at a $300 million discount and took a total $335 million earnings loss for the year.

"We decided," Ricketts said solemnly in an interview last week, "we never would tolerate that to happen

THE 93-YEAR-OLD Detroit-born savings bank embarked on a seven-step restructuring. When it's completed by year's end. Standard Federal will look more like a general purpose bank.

The final step will come in the next month as the former mutual bank (owned by its depositors and borrowers) offers to sell 23 million shares of stock at a hoped-for $15 a share.

The stock sale is the last item in our restructuring," said Ricketts, "because we said 'let's get our operation in perfect condition first."

Not only will it become a publicly held corportion, as many other thrifts have become. But with the "thundering herd" of Merrill Lynch, along with Salomon Brothers, as its underwriters, Standard Federal also will seek an immediate listing on the New York Stock Exchange

Beginning today through Dec. 5, Standard Federal will hold a series of 30 community meetings for eligible depositors and borrowers. Stock then will be offered to residents of Michigan and Indiana, where it does business through 83 ofices.

THE INDUSTRY trend, as University of Michigan business economist Ross Wilhelm used to point out, is for once-specialized institutions to offer a full range of services - mortgage loans, commercial loans, checking accounts, credit cards, IRAs, brokerage services and so on. Wilhelm predicted that one day institutions would look much alike.

"There has been a removing of the distinctions," agreed William J. Murray, senior vice president for corporate planning. "But homogenization won't occur quite so quickly. We can grow and diversify within reason.

"But conservatively," Ricketts interjected. "Our bread and butter is single-family home loans," he said, noting Standard Federal records more mortgages in metro Detroit than any other firm. "We have the contacts. We have fast service.

'You see some pretty strange game plans, but we will stick to our business. No condos in Arizona or office buildings in Houston. We've stayed home," said Ricketts, a Bloomfield Hills resident who earned business and law degrees at the University of Michigan and who started at Standard Federal in 1956.

The partial "homogenization" of institutions was aided by two federal deregulation acts, most notably the 1982 Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act, named for the chairmen of the two congressional banking committees.

STANDARD FEDERAL'S game plan looks like this. according to Murray:

• Sell fixed-rate loans and match the maturity dates of assets to match those of liabilities, thus minimizing the interest rate risk. "We won't be back in that (1981 92) kettle again," said Ricketts.

• Continue to service home loans, generating a recurring income through servicing fees.

• Tightly control overhead and operating costs. "We've automated almost everything that could be automated. We have lower operating and administrative expenses than the industry average. We have low asset problems." A new building will help efficiency.

· Maintain a large liquidity flow.

• Sell stock publicly. The sale is expected to net $238 million to $326 million in capital. (Current "regulatory net worth" as a mutual bank is $244 million. With midyear assets of $7.2 billion, Standard Federal is the second largest Michigan-headquartered thrift.)

TOO MUCH systematic planning and structured management, Meyers stresses, have obscured ways of dealing with change and impending crisis. Tighter controls and more open communication are needed to deal with the nine crises he outlines: change in perception, sudden market shifts, product failures, management succession, cash drain, labor strife, outside attack, adverse international events and regulation or deregulation of an industry.

While trite, this truism is practiced by money managers who specialize in investing in stocks when the market is too low - likely to rise - then investing in liquid assets when the market is too high likely to decline. This investment technique is knows as timing.

In choosing market timers, specialists say you should ask for brochures the investment manager is required to give you as part of a timer's registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Make sure you feel comfortable with the timer's techniques and investments. Also, because timing is a defensive strategy, look for an established history of steady gains and limited losses.

Meyers said.

Identifying two kinds of change,
"gradual and evolutionary, known as 'We had maybe six competitors in the auto (manufacturing) market in the '70s. We'll have 25 to 30 of them known as a crisis," he claimed GM is in the throes of the fast, radical type, and is experiencing a crisis in public in the 1990s, all well heeled and ready to grab any piece of the mar-ket they can. They'll be building in our own backyards and beating the hell out of the U.S. producer who can't shed costs or cut demands from unions."

> FOREIGN-BASED automakers will continue to hire and train young workers in the U.S., free from pension expenses domestic car producers find so burdensome. Elimination of excessive labor and inefficiency will be a blessing in disguise, Meyers said. "We will get leaner and mean-

On effects of deregulation of the airline industry, Meyers asked: "If we end up with 10, maybe 15 or 20 airlines in this country, who are we to complain?" The industry doesn't need heavy competition, he insisted. "The right to die is part of the free market. As long as we have healthy competition and free (market) entry, the airline industry is in good shape.

In the years just ahead, there will be a "mobility of labor and people," Meyers predicted. "Industrial manufacturing union (leadership) know there's a need to accommodate the new work and be more flexible to meet competition. The alternatives, especially continuing unemployment, are terrible."

Meanwhile, "all the auto companies are catching the same social disease. It's called 'Gone to Korea,' toughness."

The book details good and bad corporate responses to crises, though the bad far outweigh the good. As the author acknowledges, know-how is sparse on the subject. Apparently, most executives have acted accord-

Meyers praises Johnson & Johnson for managing two crises involving deadly poison found in its Tylenol capsules; Chryler Corp. for resolving its cash-flow crises; and Proctor & Gamble for removing Rely tampons from the market, once executives conclusively linked the product to Toxic Shock Syndrome.

By contrast, Meyers claims A.H. Robins Co. allowed its attorneys to mishandle advice on tragedies that arose from its Dalkon Shield contraceptive device. Many women became infected and miscarried, and some died, before the company withdrew the product from the market. Mevers also contends that contempt for the media and stonewalling led to the demise of William Brown, president of the Bank of Boston. In February 1985, the bank was fined $500,000 after pleading guilty to charges of failing to report to the Internal Revenue Service $1.22 billion in cash shifts from overseas. The bank was laundering drug money from alleged gangsters. With a sullied reputation and constant inspection by regulators and investigators, the bank is suffering what the author calls "intense pain."

THE BOOK OFFERS concrete examples of how the nine crises can be handled before they threaten survival. Meyers delicately dissects one case after another, analyzing what went wrong and what could have been avoided with the proper preparation. He doesn't leave himself out of the crisis scenario, confessing how his ignorance of Russian customs and U.S.-Soviet relations soured an AMC partnership he wanted to make with Russian auto officials.

THE COLUMBIA RIVER GORGE By a vote of 111 for and 272 against, the House rejected substitute legislation for protecting the 510-square-mile Columbia River Gorge in Oregon and Washington.

The substitute was the weaker of two alternatives before the House for protecting the natural values of the scenic but populated area.

For example, it prohibited federal land condemnation and asserted the pre-eminence of existing state landuse laws over tough federal controls set by the proposed new law.

Following this vote, the House and Senate passed the Columbia Gorge National Scenic Area Act (S 2055). At an initial cost of nearly $100 million and with federal condemnation powers, the legislation establishes federal-state mechanism for limiting development of the area and protecting its environment. The measure faced a possible veto by President Reagan.

Members voting yes wanted to weaken the proposed Columbia Gorge National Scenic Area Act. Voting no: Pursell, Hertel, Ford,

Not voting: Broomfield.

THE RECONCILIATION BILL -By a vote of 61 for and 25 against, the Senate passed and sent to the white House the conference report on a bill to achieve $11.7 billion in fiscal 1987 savings. Following House approval of the same measure (HR 5300, above), this vote appeared to bring projected congressional spending in compliance with the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law's requirement that deficit spending for the year not exceed $154 billion.

Supporter Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he reluctantly backed the bill because all steps must be taken to control a national debt that has increased from $999 billion to $2.1 trillion since President Reagan took office in 1981.

Opponent John Glenn, D-Ohio, complained that the bill met its Gramm-Rudman-Hollings goal by 'accounting gimmicks and fiscal flim-flammery.

Voting yes: Levin. Voting no: Riegle.

"BUY AMERICA" - the Senate voted, 63 or and 31 against, to keep a catchall fiscal 1987 approrpiations bill (HJ Res 738) free of a "buy American" requirement for offshore oil drilling equipment, now supplied mainly by Japan and South Korea.

As later enacted into law, the $576 billion spending measure was without the requirement, which the House had advocated as part of U.S. trade policy.

To clear the way for the 99th Congress to adjourn, the House stopped insisting on the requirement that rigs and platforms used in offshore oil drilling on federal tracts be made with at least 50 percent American labor and material.

Voting no: Levin, Riegle.

Our 1986 Carriers of the Year are...

PICTURE PERFECT

hroughout this year these 12 Observer & Eccentric carriers have delivered their hometown news twice each week, rain, snow, or shine. They also delivered some good, hard workbehind the scenes. Our 1986 Carriers of the Year have won their laurels by settling their accounts promptly, organizing their route books neatly and keeping them up to date.

When considering candidates for this award each year, we check their length of service and the amount of their collections. We also make sure they've been Carrier of the Month. These young people represent diligence, character and the kind of commitment to their work that will make the difference in whatever they choose to do with their lives.

To say "Thanks" we've given each of them an engraved trophy. congratulated them with a dinner, and printed their pictures in the newspaper they deliver so well.

And we've enjoyed every minute of it.

Hearing set on state officials' pay

By Rebecca Haynes staff writer

Residents with an opinion on whether state officials should receive a pay raise will have a chance to voice those views next week at a public hearing.

At stake are the salaries and expense budgets for governor, lieutenant governor, Michigan Supreme Court justices and state legislators. Since local judges' salaries are pegged at a percentage of the Supreme Court salaries, the state-level decision can have an impact on local budgets, too

The State Officers Compensation Commission will conduct the hearing at 7 p.m. Wednesday, in the Law Building Auditorium, Capitol Complex, Lansing.

This commission is placing a special importance on public input," said Edmund Perkowski, executive assistant to the commission. "They (the commission) really are representing the will of the people, and if they don't hear from them, it makes it rather difficult to make a deci-

The commission meets every other year, and this year's group will determine salaries for 1987 and 1988. A final decision and recommendation must be sent to the state Legislature by Dec. 31.

The commission's decision takes effect Jan. 1, but the Legislature has until Feb. 1 to reject it.

This, however, has never happened, according to Perkowski. If a recommendation should be reduring the early 1980s when the state was experiencing severe financial problems. Five percent raises were granted in 1984 and 1985. 'I'm sure they'll (the SOCC) consider things such & General Motors' the hearing may telephone or write recent cutback decision and the impact it'll have on the state," he said.

Current salaries for these Michigan politicians are as follows: governor, $85,800; lieutenant governor, $58,850; Supreme Court justice, $81,400; and state legislator, $36,520. Supplemental salaries for legislators include: $18,000 for the Speaker of the House; $16,000 for the Senate Majority Leader; $14,000 for the Senate and House Minority Leaders; $7,500 for the Senate and House Majority Floor Leaders; $6,000 for the Senate and House Minority Floor Leaders; and $3,000 for the Senate and House Appropriation Committee

Statistics gathered from other states put Michigan's salaries for all of these positions above the average. However, that gap is closing as large pay increases have been granted in other states.

"Down through the years I'd say the salaries for the state legislators elicit the largest amount of comsaid. "These comments are usually negative, with people saying their particular legislator doesn't do anything for them or isn't very effec-

"The commission isn't deciding the salaries based on the person who holds the job, they're deciding based on the job responsibilities. State legislators have a lot of responsibility and they do things that affect all of

If a voter is unhappy with the job their legislator is doing and thinks he or she does not deserve the salary, they can use their vote to oust that person from office, he said.

The commission has so many things to consider and if we keep salaries low like the public seems to want, we really restrict the people who are able to go for the jobs," Per-kowski said. "Many of these positions, such as a Supreme Court justice, are supposed to be the crowning achievement of someone's career.'

If that person must take a drastic pay cut to take the public job, it can be difficult to attract the best candidates, he said.

Dec. 3 is the deadline to send comments to the commission. A preliminary decision is expected then.

Send comments to Edmund Perkowski, State Officers Compensation Commission, Department of Civil Service, Lewis Cass Building, Lansing, Mich. 48909. A phone call to Perkowski (517-373-3072) also will get your opinion

WSU's Adamany asks tuition hike

ask the Wayne State University Board of Governors to approve a tuition increase averaging 2.5 percent for winter semester classes starting next Jan. 12.

If approved today at a special board meeting, it will become the first general increase in tuition rates at Wayne State University since the fall 1982 semester. "That's the longest period of tuition stability for any of the state's public colleges and universities," Adamany said.

The hike means that the typical part-time student will pay about $12

President David Adamany will more next semester, while the average cost to full-time students will be about $25. We hope that no student will be prevented from getting a WSU edu-cation because of it," he said. To offset the effect of the increase for the neediest students, 13 percent of the revenue will go back into a fund for financial aid based on need.

THE PROPOSED increases for residents per credit hour are: · Resident freshmen and sophomores - $1.50, from $56 to $57.50. • Juniors and seniors - $1.75, from $66 to $67.75

• Graduate students - $2.25, from $82 to $84.25.

• Law students $115 to $117.25. • Medical students - to $5,505 per year from the current $5,330. More than half of Wayne State's students are part time. The new rates are well below the 4.3-percent ceiling on tuition increases recommended by the state of Michigan. ADAMANY CALLED the proposed increase painful but neces-

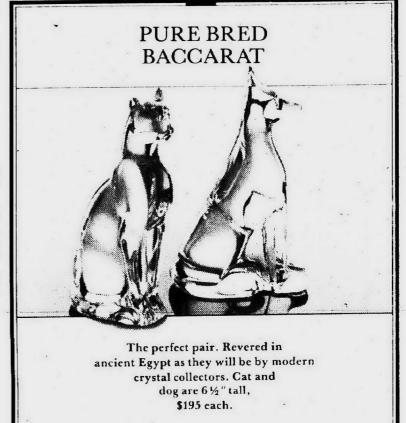

"After four years of determined effort to hold the line against any cost increases for our students, we are now compelled to ask for a modest tuition increase.

'The higher cost of wages for employees, as well as dramatic and unanticipated cost increases for liability insurance and increases in health insurance make the hike necessary," he said.

Tuitions in Michigan continue to be higher than in the rest of the nation," he said.

Visitors to Pennsylvania get a close look at religious society

By Arline Zatz special writer

ORE THAN 14,000 Amish live in the heart of what is called Pennsylvania Dutch County, and their towns - Mt. Joy and Bird-in-Hand - are as quaint and colorful as they sound.

The Amish are classified into two groups known informally as "plain" and "fancy." The "plain" make up the Old Order Amish, strictly adhering to religious rules. The other group — Mennonites, Moravians and Lutherans - make up the "fancy," or more worldly sect.

Visitors to this scenic area of Pennsylvania will notice an absence of utility lines and telephone poles, as the Amish do not use automobiles, telephones, televisions, radios, or any other electrical appliances because it is against their religious be-

Yet they survive, and very well, using horses and buggies, muscle to till their rich farmlands.

Once married, the men do not shave; and feast with other family memwomen wear the same clothing worn bers, gathering at the home of either enerations ago; and buttons, buckles and belts are forbidden on trousers or other clothing.

Though this may sound strange, it's understandable. The Amish don't want to resemble the military with uniforms sporting big brass buttons, belts and buckles because the military had persecuted them in Europe.

The Amish and more liberal Mennonites in Lancaster County share a common background originating in Switzerland during the sixteenth century. Fleeing religious persecu-tion in Europe, they came to William Penn's newly settled land of freedom, Pennsylvania.

Here, quickly adapting to Lancaster County's rich, fertile land, resembling the Rhine area they had left, they applied their agricultural skills, becoming self-sufficient.

THE AMISH HAVE large families and strong family ties. Their children learn to help tend the farm at an early age and attend one-room parochial schools through eighth grade, where they're taught basic reading, writing and arithmetic skills as well as three languages the Pennsylvania Dutch dialect, German for the 16th century hymns used in religious services, and English as part of their formal education. Though the Amish do not worship in separate church structures, they do take turns worshipping in each other's houses every other Sunday.

There is no doubt they do things differently, work hard, and are a religious people, but they also take time for fun and enjoy the fruits of their labor and life - especially at Christmas when they extend their period of joy by celebrating two days instead of one

Christmas is different in other ways for the Amish. Unlike most Americans today, they don't put up Christmas trees or wait for Santa Claus. They do not give their children stereos or computers for the

INSTEAD, EACH child receives one or two simple gifts placed beside individual dishes filled with candy and nuts, to be opened on Christmas

Parents also exchange gifts, but only those considered practical, such as a new chair or candles. The rest of the day is spent quietly reading from the Bible or walking in the woods before enjoying a simple meal waterwheels and propane gas for of ham, mashed potatoes, vegeta-power, along with plain sweat and bles, homemade bread and preserves.

On December 26, known as the THE AMISH dress differently, too. Second Christmas, the Amish visit

According to the Amish, this Second Christmas is "a noisy day, one to be spent with the family, and a happy one in which we are thankful for what we receive."

STOP AT the tourist bureau at the Route 30 bypass in Lancaster to watch a 36-minute film that gets into the heart of local heritage, culture and daily life. You can then opt to take a two- or four-hour motorcoach tour of the area; suitable tours are offered by Conestoga Tours, 825 E. Chestnut, Lancaster, and Brunswick Tours, P.O. Box 4302, Lancaster.

Both include a drive through farmlands, a stop at a working Amish farm, a visit to a farmers' market, and a look at how Pennsylvania Dutch foods are prepared.

For exploring on your own, an excellent autotape tour is available describing points of interest in the area. Tapes can be rented for $8.50 each at many of the attractions, or ordered from CCInc., P.O. Box 385, Scarsdale, N.Y. 10583 for $11.70.

IT WON'T take long before you see one of the locals riding his horsedrawn carriage down the highway alongside lush, neat farms and fields of wheat, corn, alfalfa and tobacco. One of your first stops in this beautiful area should be the Amish Farm and House on Route 30, an operating

CEP cagers to decide WLAA champion again

By Chris McCosky staff writer

Consider Plymouth Salem's plight as it prepares to host Plymouth Canton Friday night for the Western Lakes girls basketball championship:

Salem is unbeaten in 16 league games and has lost only once all season. It is ranked No. 1 by the state's basketball coaches association. Obviously, the Rocks are expected to trash the Chiefs.

But the Rocks' lofty position can be viewed as a bit of a curse. If they should happen to trash the Chiefs Friday people will say, "Big deal, you were supposed to do that." If they win by a narrow margin the same people will say, "What's the problem, Salem? What went wrong?" The response, should Salem lose, would be, "Man, that's disgusting." People will call for an investigation.

It's almost a no-win situation for the Rocks.

"I guess that's accurate," said Salem coach Fred Thomann. "We have been so successful this year that we are expected to win all the time. All we can do is play our schedule, make the necessary adjustments as we go along and, whatever happens happens. We are just happy we have the opportunity to play for the conference championship.

NOW LET'S consider Plymouth Canton's situation: You can look at it two ways. On the bright side, the Chiefs have absolutely nothing to lose and everything to gain. Realistito what Sugar Ray Leonard faces in our kids are going about this in a his upcoming fight with Marvin very businesslike fashion." So, Rob Neu, how does Canton beat this Salem team?

"The key to the game for us is, we have to play at our tempo. We have to take care of the basketball and give ourselves good scoring opportunities. Defensively, we have to make it difficult for them to do the things they like to do. And the big thing is recognition. We have to be able to recognize what they are giving us and what they aren't. serious.

THE CANTON team that Salem will face Friday is much improved over the Canton team it played Oct. 14. Karen Boluch has become a consistent force for the Chiefs in all phases of the game. She scores, she rebounds, she plays excellent defense and she can handle the basketball. Sophomore guard Michelle Fortier has gained confidence over the course of the season. Tory Barger provides Canton with some scoring punch from the perimeter. Penny Piggott, at 6-foot, can be an intimidating force inside especially at the defensive end. Vicki Ferko, Heather Miller, Jennifer Gansler and Jennifer Griffith are vital role players for the Chiefs.

"The player personnel on both teams has developed tremendously over the course of the season and that has helped both be successful," Thomann said. "Canton is taking better shots now than they were earlier. their recognition is better, the defensive concepts that they are teaching are starting to take hold - you know, they've gotten a lot better and we feel we have too.'

There you have it. The stage is set for the second Centennial Educational Park showdown for the Western Lakes girls basketball championship.

So, do you really think Leonard can beat Hagler.

Life, I mean. Which is why sport is the perfect teacher for the young. The best team doesn't always win, the game isn't always decided in the playing arena, and outstanding effort isn't always enough for the scoreboard. High school athletes, take note. Your parents know this. So do your coaches. They know what's at stake at state tournament time. It's no secret. They'd like to make you understand the savage consequences of histo-

Ten years from now, when you run into an old chum and high school memories start flowing, then you'll unlerstand. Your buddy will remember you lost in the tate playoffs. He won't remember why. You will. Like

t was yesterday. History can bend somewhat to the will of memory, but facts cannot be changed. Who won and who lost are facts. Why a team lost is an excuse, and - no matter how accurate — excuses become more feeble with age. Parents and coaches want you to understand this so you won't have any excuses. Excuses lead to regret. So concentrate on the immediate task, don't allow outside pressures to interfere, give an honest all-out effort, and then, whatever story the scoreboard tells, you'll know you've succeeded.

No regrets.

T ISN'T FAIR Life's breaks can be devastating. Ask John Gelmisi, the star forward for Schoolcraft College's soccer team. He was one of the state's top high school players at Livonia Stevenson. He knew the power of defeat; in his senior season at Stevenson, he was hurt in the Class A final against Troy Athens. Athens won. Gelmisi saw a good SC team suffer defeat in the NJCAA Inter-regional finals last year. Like many of his teammates, that's why he returned to SC for a second season. He thirsted for revenge.

Now that thirst will go unquenched. In a conference playoff match last Saturday, Gelmisi burst through the Macomb CC defense on a breakaway. He had to be stopped. He was - with a vicious slide tackle that ended his season.

On Sunday, Gelmisi underwent surgery. His right ankle was broken in two places. A metal plate was inserted with screws to aid the healing. He'll spend eight weeks on crutches. The plate will remain a minimum of

"It will be hard to replace Johnny," was SC coach Van Dimitriou's reaction. And yet, it may be harder for Gelmisi to replace what might have been his.

chance to win this weekend in the Inter-regional have decreased sharply. But what about the star?

When a star player goes down, the team suffers. SC's

For his part, Gelmisi is handling his first major sports injury well. "I just can't worry about it," he said of the season that ended - for him - in one cheap tackle. "It's over. I just have to go on from here."

There's more, though. Gelmisi was hoping to land a scholarship to a four-year college. Soccer scholarships are rare. A good performance in the NJCAA tournament would have showcased his talents.

"Now, I won't get any exposure to go anywhere else," he admitted. Such a serious injury further hinders his

And yet, Gelmisi is determined to play soccer again, probably at Michigan State. "I'd just want to play to see if I could," he said.

Ironically, his injury might never have happened were it not for an administrative oversight. SC used a scholastically ineligible player in its first game, a 14-1 win. Dimitriou wasn't notified until after the victory. The blunder tagged SC with a forfeit and resulted in a tie for first, and Saturday's playoff, with Macomb CC.

No administrative oversight, no playoff, no injury And for John Gelmisi, a chance to play.

I'S NOT FAIR How can anyone call what happened to Troy's football team just? Midway through last week the Colts should have been focusing on Port Huron Northern, their first-round opponent in the Class A playoffs. Instead they were wondering if they would

The Michigan High School Athletic Association simply would not let Troy alone. The MHSAA was intent on getting an appeal to reverse a lower court's decision that Troy did not have to forfeit an opening-round game because it used an ineligible player.

The MHSAA finally got its hearing. On Friday, the court of appeals upheld the lower court's ruling. Troy was officially in the playoffs.

How much did the uncertainty weigh on the Colts? Consider that they won seven straight games before the controversy surfaced. Afterwards, they lost two of

Maybe it didn't make much of a difference. But if it made six points' worth, it was costly enough. Troy lost to Northern 13-7, even though it outgained the Huskies by nearly a 2-to-1 margin.

Chicago drops out of Junior A league

By Chris McCosky staff writer

What on the surface appears to be major problems for the North American Junior Hockey League may prove to be a godsend in the long

The Chicago franchise has dropped out of the NAJHL, leaving just three teams Hennessev Engineers, Compuware and the Detroit the U.S. Junior Hockey Council. But, because of the circumstances, the council has granted approval to the

The story I got was that Chicago had just gotten walloped two weekends in a row by Compuware and the Falcons Four or five guys quit and they asked for time to regroup That didn't fit into anybody's plans," said A J Baker, head coach of the Plymouth-based Engineers.

The way they handled it was poor, too," Baker added. "Compuware was supposed to play them last Falcons. Normally, a three-team week. They called to get the Chicago league would not be sanctioned by roster for the program and they were told Chicago wasn't coming."

> THAT INITIATED a mad scramble to replace Chicago on the schedule Here's what will happen Each of the remaining teams will play a team of Junior B all-stars three times. Two senior-league teams -Masons, based in Livonia, and Downriver Allied - will be fit into the schedule. Also, a team from Buffalo will come in for a weekend to play the three teams and the Engineers plan to play a weekend series in Buffalo in December. Buffalo, a former member of the NAJHL, has reapplied for a franchise for next season. The senior teams will be better competition for us than Chicago could ever have hoped to be," Baker said. "These are some guys just out of Juniors, or former semi-pro guys who have a lot of experience and they let you know they can play the game. The downside, though, is the senior teams can get a little rough and tumble. I'm sure there will be complaints about that."

hockey

Now, about the future. THE LEAGUE hierarchy met earlier this week and drew up a proposal for the 1987-88 season. That proposal would split the North Ameri-

tiers Tier I would be six Junior A teams Tier II would be a Junior B league

There are currently five Junior B teams in the Detroit area. Two of those teams are expected to move up to Junior A next year. Those two, along with the three existing Junior A franchises, would join Buffalo to form a six-team league.

Buffalo wants back in badly, Baker said. "The league has asked them to send no less than $2,000 to us by Jan. 15, and that $2,000 will be non-refundable. We want them to make a definite commitment.'

Baker is optimistic that the proposal will go through.

'We have put on the drawing board a plan that is both feasible and workable," he said. "The future of the league looks very promising and dedicated people in the administration and everyone is working together. It's very good to see.

Baker said the league's proposal will be officially voted on Dec.

BACK ON THE ICE: The Engineers stopped their five-game losing streak Friday night with a 7-3 win against Masons. The game counted in the NAJHL standings as Masons replaced Chicago on the schedule.

Larry Pilut and Leif Gustafson led the victory. Pilut had two goals and two assists, Gustafson scored two goals. Dan Frantti, Bryan Krygier and Steve Ramberg also scored.

The Engineers are 4-5 in the league, 10-7 overall. They will host the Falcons Friday night at the Plymouth Cultural Center Ice Arena Game time is 8:20 p.m.

Schoolcraft College's volleyball team knows where it will be today at 5:30 p.m. - at Kalamazoo Valley CC for the 16-team regional volleyball

Question is, who will the Lady Ocelots be playing, and when?

Their scheduled opponent is Kellogg CC. But SC coach Tom Teeters not to play because it did not achieve a .500 season.

That would keep the Lady Ocelots idle until 10:30 a.m. Friday, when they would meet the Macomb-Cuyahoga East winner. And it also means that SC could claim the regional title by winning four straight

By comparison, should one of the other teams lose its tourney opener, it would have to play nine matches to win the double-elimination event.

'Our team serve reception has to be stronger," he said. "Our serves will still have to be good. Our defense has improved, and our bench has helped."

A year ago, the Lady Ocelots won the regional title. This season's squad is stronger. SC swept through the Eastern Conference without a defeat for the second straight year and beat several four-year schools. The Lady Ocelots are odds-on favorites to repeat as region champs.

Teeters figures Lake Michigan CC said Tuesday that KCC may decide to provide the greatest obstacle between SC and a trip south. "They're the team with the experience. They haven't had the greatest season, but they had some injuries that are healing now. They'll be ready. I think they'll be in the finals.

The two teams will meet before then, however. If SC and LMCC win their first matches Friday, they'll play each other at 6 p.m. It won't be their first meeting this season, either; SC beat LMCC in a three-game match in the finals of the LMCC tournament in September and swept a match in three-straight games in St. Louis last month.

INJURIES HAVE been a source of blocker Jill Ehlert is recovering from tendonitis in her Achilles tendon and should be able to play. Jean Bass and Amy Lotero are both experiencing knee problems - Lotero was fitted for a knee brace Tuesday but both are expected to play. Donna Wilhelm has hurt her back,

"That's why I think it's fortunate we have 12 good players," said Teeters. "We've had to use them all during the season." An experienced bench could be most helpful. Teeters is not counting on an easy road to Miami. "It'll be a tough battle. They're looking forward to it, they're real excited and all keyed up," he said. They know it won't be easy, but they are confident.

'The reward of going to nationals in Miami is incentive for them. If we lose two matches, we're done for the year. If we win four straight, we're (region) champions."

It's a simple formula. And should SC perform as it has all season long, that formula will be enough to get the Lady Ocelots an NJCAA tourna-

Ocelots eye NJCAA berth

staff writer

Vengeance serves some as a reason for living. For Schoolcraft College's men's socger team, it's been the motive for playing.

All season long, the Ocelots have pushed and prodded themselves and each other, with one goal in mind: the Inter-regional tournament and a rematch with Lewis and Clark CC.

It was a year ago that SC met L&C in the Inter-regional finals at Dupage College in Glen Ellyn, Ill. The Ocelots qualified for the tournament by going unbeaten in the Eastern Conference. In their first Inter-regional game, they blasted Bethany Lutheran (Mankato, Minn.) 6-2.

But L&C, from Godfrey, Ill., gave them a rude jolt. SC fell behind quickly by a 2-0 count, then battled back to tie it 2-2 at the half.

BUT IT was just before halftime that coach Van Dimitriou realized what his team lacked. Defender Scott Steiner was the victim of a vicious slide tackle. He continued to day's game and is out. play, but his effectiveness was minimized. SC lost 4-2.

Schoolcraft sports

"Last year in my final notes I wrote, 'We've got to play more physical,' "recalled Dimitriou.

The Ocelots have strived to do just that. It showed in Saturday's 1-0 playoff win over Macomb CC, a victory that earned them their thirdstraight conference title and a berth in the Inter-regional. Two MCC players were red-carded (ejected), and another got a yellow card (warning).

"We don't have a small team," said Dimitriou. "We can play physical, no question about it."

If there is a question mark concerning the Ocelots, its goal-scoring. In their last three conference games, they scored just two goals. And to make matters worse, top forward John Gelmisi suffered a broken ankle in the opening minutes of Satur-

To try and make up for Gelmisi's considerable talents, Dimitriou will ut Rick Hamers, normally a halfback, at forward. And that isn't the only change he is planning.

DESPITE THEIR problems scoring goals, Dimitriou is more concerned with defense. SC will use a sweeperback (Steiner), two fullbacks (Todd Ericson and Anwar Yaffai) and two stoppers (D.J. Ward and Kevin Kurakowski). Jeff Vakratsis will be in goal.

Mike Murphy, who is just returning from a knee injury, Joe Mase, Jim Moreau and possibly Bobby Neumann will share the halfback slots. Neumann will also play left wing, with Billy "White Shoes" Trombley at right wing. Brett Murphy and Gene Pulice will also get in plenty of playing time at forward.

SC will have to be clicking on all cylinders to get by L&C. The two teams meet in a first-round game at 1 p.m. (Central Standard Time) Saturday at Dupage. The winner plays in the championship match at 11 a.m. (CST) Sunday, against the Bethany Lutheran-Triton (III.) vic-

"I would say that's the best thing that could have happened," Dimitriou said of playing L&C in the first round. "I'd rather play them while we're in good physical condition. Then we have no excuses."

L&C is ranked seventh in the NJCAA. SC is 15th. The Inter-regional champion qualifies for the eightteam NJCAA tournament Nov. 26-29 at Mercer CC in Trenton, N.J.

said Dimitriou. "If we get a lead, Rick (Hamers) will come back to halfback and we'll go with our defensive lineup."

Last year SC depended more on speed and finesse. This year the Ocelots can adjust to any type of game, Dimitriou believes.

But over the final few weeks of the season SC didn't play any type of game too well. The Ocelots strug-

"What was happening was the wins were coming too easily for us," said Dimitriou. "There was a lack of intensity — until we lost."

That loss — 1-0 to Cuyahoga Metro CC — "made us realize we're human and we'd better put out a little more," said Dimitriou. "It caused us to re-evaluate our total goal." That didn't take much review.

Winning the Inter-regional has been the No. 1 object since pre-season

'We have a number (nine of 18) of second year players out there," said Dimitriou. "That's what's been driving them all season.'

And where will that determination drive them? The Ocelots are hoping the trip won't end until Nov. 29.

Hawks outlast pesky Riverview

By Chris McCosky staff writer

All week long Riverview football coach Don Lessner downplayed his team's chances of beating Farmington Harrison in the first round of the Class B playoffs.

"THEY DROPPED some passes and fumbled the ball a couple of bles. The first fumble, recovered by times and that was a big help to us," said Harrison coach John Herrington. "For a tournament game, we were not hitting as sharply as I thought we might. In fact, we really didn't start playing until it was 14-14. I was a little disappointed by that.

Riverview dominated statistically. The Pirates rushed for 112 yards (83 gained by Todd Jenkins) and passed for 148, for a total of 260. Quarterback Bob Guiney completed 12 of 24 passes, most were screens and short patterns. Six of the 12 incompletions were dropped.

The Hawks managed 161 total yards: 89 rushing, 72 passing.

The screen passes didn't surprise us, we worked on stopping that all week," Herrington said. "We just didn't know how to cover them I guess. We thought we could cover Coleman. the receivers and still put pressure on the quarterback. We weren't able to do either."

That play seemed to stun the Hawks. The very next time Riverview got its hands on the ball, it drove 92 yards in five plays to take a 14-7 lead. A 50-yard run by Jenkins set up Guiney's 41-yard TD pass to

The game-tying TD was set up by a bold call from Harrison assistant coach Bob Sallow. Sallow called for a reverse on the kickoff return. Rick Witte fielded the kick. He started left, drew the coverage to the left, then handed the ball to Mark Schmidt who rambled 43 yards around the right side to the Riverview 37. Not only did the play set up the tying score, it also halted River-

Ironically, Sallow was very ill and strongly considered missing the ONCE EVEN, Harrison began to take command of the game.

"I think we let our emotions get up too much at the start of the game, said Bissell, the team's captain. "We were tentative. Instead of just playing our game, we were thinking about it too much. We were afraid to make mistakes. Once we got behind we realized that we had to start playing now or it'll all be over."

The Hawks took advantage of a short Riverview punt to score the game-winner. With time running out in the third quarter, the Hawks got the ball on the Riverview 41. Eight plays later, including two key pass completions by Mark Murray, Bissell scored from the 2. Mark Calvaruso kicked his third extra point of the day and Harrison prepared to celebrate.

Not so fast, said Riverview.

BISSELL AND Murray flubbed a handoff with 5:14 left in the game. Riverview's Bill Wolas fell on the Herrington was much relieved with the victory, but added: "We bet-ter get a lot better before next

The victory gives Glenn (9-1) a rematch with Ann Arbor Pioneer (9-1). The two teams will square off for the Region IV championship at 1:30 p.m. this Saturday at Jackson's Withington Stadium. Last year Pioneer eliminated Glenn in the first round, Often lined up in the backfield along with 6-foot-1, 240-pound senior Doug Strehl and 6-2, 222-pound Chris Scheffer, dubbed by coach Glenn Chuck Gordon as "our elephant backs," the 5-11, 151-pound Beasley lugged the ball 40 times for 126 yards and scored the winning touchdown with 6:17 left in the game.

"Paul is steady," said Gordon, who received a victory shower after the game. "The guy is not flashy. He's what we call a blue collar guy. He's a guy who gets it done."

Harrison faces huge task

By Chris McCosky staff writer

Farmington Harrison's task this Saturday in the Class B regional finals is simple knock down a mounbird in flight.

OK, so we've exaggerated a little. But consider what Harrison is up against as it prepares to battle the Detroit Northern football team at 1.30 p.m. Saturday at Westland John

• The mountain. Northern's offensive and defensive line averages nearly 240 pounds. The three players that make up the right side of the line weigh 270, 250 and 245. The line is anchored by all-PSL star Yancy Adolphus, who is 6-2, 250 and bench presses 350 pounds. Harrison's largest lineman weighs 190. In pads.

• The raging river. Northern running back Arthur Mitchell. He has gained 842 yards this season in just 142 carries. He has accumulated more than 2,500 yards in his career. He is fast and powerful. He rages on defense, too. He made 72 solo tackles

• The bird in flight. This is Northern's passing game. Marco Honey is the quarterback with a surprisingly strong and accurate arm. Alvin Buckley and Delius Morris are the fleet-footed receivers.

AS IF ALL that talent weren't tain, halt a raging river and freeze a enough, Northern is well coached and plays a very disciplined game.

We try to be disciplined in everything we do," said Northern coach John Dean, probably the most respected coach in the PSL. "Maybe we are a little too disciplined sometimes. But we believe in people being where they are supposed to be and playing football the way it was meant to be played. We don't do any wildcatting. We just play football."

About his team's size advantage coming into Saturday's game, Dean said: "Yes, they probably won't be as big as we are. But in my league, you can't beat anybody with little folks. We go up against kids 6-6, 290 - all the time

Said Harrison coach John Herrington: "There isn't much you can do (to overcome the size disadvantage). The problem is, they will line up real tight, almost foot to foot, and it's hard to shoot through. We've never really played anyone as big. We scrimmaged U-D in the fall. They were just as big and we had some success, but this is a whole lot different. We will try to use our quickness as much as possible. We will try to control the line of scrimmage, not get blown off, so that our linebackers can have a chance to get at the backs.

DON'T GET the idea that Northern expects to walk all over the Hawks. Dean has a deep respect for Harrison and Herrington.

"They are tough," he said after watching the Hawks play Riverview last Saturday. "I thought they came off the ball well, they can run that power-I well when they have to, they throw the ball very well and their linebackers are tough. And I liked the character they showed once they got behind. They didn't panic; they

And don't get the idea that Harrison will be intimidated by Northern. "Oh, no. Our kids believe they can win and we believe we can win," Herrington said. "We will have to play a lot better than we did against Riverview, though. We really blistered our kids for what we thought was less than a total effort in last week's game. And we just told them, 'Hey, unless you want to be playing basketball on Monday you better get it together right now. Surprisingly, Dean expects a defensive struggle on Saturday. They have a good defense and we like to think we do also," he said. Offensively, we just have to take advantage of what happens - 99 percent of the time these games are decided on who takes the best care of the football."

John Dean summed up Saturday's game well when he said: "I would really like for it to be a great football game. The hardest thing when you have two excellent teams like Harrison and Northern is that one has to lose this early in the tournament. It almost seems like this game should be played in the semifinals or

DNR experts eye big deer season

staff writer

From all preseason indications the 1986 firearms deer season could well be the best ever for Michigan deer hunters

The implementation of the twolicense law and the fact that the size of the herd is up considerably, gives even the most pessimistic hunters reason for optimism.

The Michigan Legislature, in agreement with the Wildlife Division of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, adopted a law that enables hunters to purchase an additional deer license (archery and firearm) after the original license has been filled. The second license permits the hunter to take only a buck with three-inch antlers or larger. The purpose of the law is to generate revenue to enable the DNR to hire additional officers.

"Hunters and the general public said they wanted more conservation office work," said Ed Langenau, big game specialist with the Wildlife Division of the DNR. "This new law has allowed us to hire 22 conservation officers who will be in the field on opening day. It gives us financial assistance and allows us to regulate unlicensed hunters who, in the past, had illegally hunted after they'd taken their first

DESPITE THE seemingly favorable implications of the new law, it is surrounded by controversy. In the past, many hunters who bagged a deer on opening day would immediately buy a license for their wife, mother, father or child and use this tag on the deer. Although illegal, this would allow the hunter to continue to hunt. With the new law there is no reason to purchase a false license, and it will enable the DNR to keep better track of the early deer kill.

Many specialists feel the new law will have little effect on the overall size of the herd because so many deer were being taken illeoutdoors gally anyway. Others fear the herd size will be hurt because it opens the door for a massive kill this sea-

"I've heard pros and cons," said Langenau. "Some biologists feel it will significantly hurt the herd and others don't. We're keeping a close eye on the picture. If it hurts the herd or interferes with the quality of the hunt we'll change it. If it works we'll refine it and keep it. In some areas it will be great and in others it might affect the herd. We'll have to wait and see."

SINCE THE early 1970s there has been a big increase in the size of the deer herd in Michigan. Much of this increase has been attributed to the public's acceptance of the antlerless deer hunt - which gives the DNR better control over the herd - and a habitat improvement fund. The Deer Habitat Improvement Program receives $1.50 from each deer license sold. So far this has accounted for over $20 million, which has been piped into the fund.

In addition, last year there was a lot of standing corn left in the fields. A lot of farmers went bankrupt but the standing corn resulted in a well fed, healthy deer herd.

"Last year was the best year on record," said Langenau. "There were 229,000 deer taken in the combined hunts (firearm, archery and muzzleloading). We think over 200,000 will be taken again this year. It should easily be one of the top five ever. So far the archery season has been great. Hunters have taken a lot of deer and had a lot of good recreation."

The opportunity is there, the herd is up and the weather looks favorable. With just one day left before opening day, optimism is running high.

See you in the woods.

Rockets to alter plan of attack

staff writer

Chuck Gordon may have to change his battle tactics a bit this week when his Westland John Glenn team tackles Ann Arbor Pioneer for the Class A Region II football championship at Jackson's Withington Stadium. (Game time is 1:30 p.m.)

For the second consecutive week, Glenn will be facing another explosive team, but the Rockets turned a few heads last week in a ball-control, time-consuming 10-7 win over Ypsilanti.

In the victory over Ypsi, the Rockets nearly doubled the time of possession on their opponent, running 56 plays to Ypsi's 33. Tailback Paul Beasley, a 5-10, 151-pound senior, was the focal point, figuring in on 41 of the 56 plays.

But Gordon admits that Beasley's name won't be called upon quite as much against Pioneer.

"We're going to have to mix it up more with the run and the pass," said the Glenn coach, whose team takes a 9-1 record into the state quarterfi-"Pioneer's defense dictates that you cannot pound the ball like we did against Ypsi."

ALTHOUGH Pioneer beat the an Vooletich, who is complemented Rockets 33-20 in last year's first round of the state playoffs, Glenn appears to be better prepared going into the second meeting.

"I think it helps when you've been there before," said the Glenn coach. "Plus, getting a victory under our belt is helpful."

Gordon was unable to scout Pioneer last year, but he caught a glimpse of the 9-1 Pioneers last weekend in their 35-14 victory over Lansing Everett.

His impressions haven't changed much.

"They're a great football team," Gordon said. "This year they're doing both (running and passing). They have have the ability to throw to their running backs.

"I think you have a better idea of what they capable of doing, but they're so good, it's scary. They have so many darn weapons.

Lewis Andrews, the Ann Arbor starting quarterback, is dangerous both with the pass and the run. His favorite receiver is Mike Butler, a big play threat.

THE PIONEER running attack is led by 6-foot-1, 200-pound senior Brinicely by the speedy Dino Daftsidos.

"We're playing on Astroturf and that's got to help Pioneer because of their speed," said Gordon, whose team will practice on the artificial surfaces at the University of Michigan this week.

But don't undersell Gordon's team, which limited Ypsi's highly explosive running back, James Douglas, to 57 yards in 15 carries.

A lot of people at school offered their congratulations, but they were somewhat surprised," said Gordon. "I think we won over some doubters. "If you beat Pioneer, you will get strong consideration to win it all. This game will be a great indicator." One of Glenn's unsung heroes last week was quarterback Steve Haw-

"Steve has given us great leadership and that's one thing people haven't realized all year," said Gordon. "He's one of great leaders this team

HAWLEY'S LEADERSHIP and the fact that the Rockets have been through a pair of playoff games during the past year may give them a boost of confidence going into Saturday's encounter.

HE DETROIT-Oakland Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragemnt of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America has been preparing since September for its upcoming show at Detroit's Orchesmerger, to bring the two good units together and build from 60 men up to 100," said Bill Fanfalone of Lincoln Park, chapter president. Our objective is to break a 100-man chorus. That's our long-term goal."

The chapter's 60-man chorus, the Gentlemen Songsters, will be featured in the show, along with the 1986 International Silver Medalist quartet, Center Stage; the Chicago Natural Gas; and the Crystal Claschoruses in Michigan, recently sics, the Sweet Adeline regional medalists.

> "BARBERSHOP singing is a unique sound," said Don McDaniel of Union Lake, assistant director of the

"That was part of the idea of the chapter. "It's done totally unaccompanied.

Added Fanfalone, "It's the purest form of a cappella harmony.

Barbershop harmony is produced by four voices: the lead, tenor, bass and baritone, with the harmony built around a melody line.

"Barbershop singing goes all the way back to the middle ages," said Steve Sutherland of Canton, musical director of the Detroit-Oakland chapter. "Men used to gather at the barber with their instruments, play their music and sing along with it.

"They (historians) feel that's where it originated, although it was formed here in this country. I guess it's one of the two or three original music styles that we have."

The barbershop quartet society has approximately 37,500 particlpants in more than 750 chapters all over the world. It is the largest allmale singing society in the world.

A percentage of the money the society generates is donated to the Institute of Logopedics, which helps people with speech handicaps. So far, the society has contributed more than $6 million to the institute. During the Christmas season, area chapters perform in local hospitals and nursing homes.

THE GENTLEMEN Songsters recently placed third in the state competition held in Flint in October, and that was with the recent merger of chapters and only 10 weeks to rehearse, according to Sutherland.

Disney movies bargain-priced

special writer

In the late fall, marketing strategists' thoughts turn toward their version of the Olympics, the holiday shopping season. In the video biz, that generally means a slew of seasonal sales and new releases at somewhat lower prices.

Disney has marked down a group of movies aimed at the holiday shopping frenzy. This includes "Dumbo," Pinnocchio," "Pollyanna" and "Mary Poppins," all available for less than $30.

In the same price group is a Disney release new to the VCR market, certainly has been better. This mis-"Sleeping Beauty." The 1959 cartoon feature took Disney six years to produce. When it was finally released, it was considered a box-office disappointment.

Disney animators based the style of the movie's drawings on early Renaissance artwork. Unfortunately, the results exhibit a certain flatness and angularity that doesn't translate well to the movie screen. The film lacks the three-dimensional effect for which earlier efforts such as "Snow White" are known.

VIEWERS TEND to remember acters, such as the three dotty fairy godmothers, Flora, Fauna and Merriweather. This trio comes off like the Golden Girls with magical powers. The heroine, Princess Aurora, never comes into her own as a full character.

The film has some nice moments, however. "Someday My Prince Will Come" makes for a sweet musical interlude. Disney animators know how to draw one heck of a fire-pared to the painfully bad "My Little Pony" feature-length cartoons and Saturday morning superheroes, this one is worth having around to pop into a tape deck.

Among the new releases for adults is Roman Polanski's "Pirates" with Walter Matthau. To actually fork over money to buy this movie is to become a victim of pirateering. This attempt at bawdy bucaneers is boring. It's no accident that the movie, which opened in theaters last July, is making such a quick appearance on the video counter.

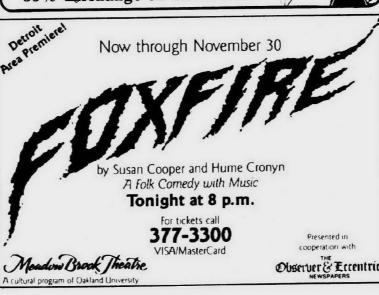

Polanski's been better. Matthau begotten effort includes such scenes as a rat-eating sequence that literally goes on ad nauseum. Rent this if you must, but be warned. It's not for those with sound minds or queasy

ALFRED Hitchcock's films are not new to the video market, but prices on them have been slashed by almost 60 percent. Available for gift giving at under $25 are such Hitch favorites as "The Birds," "Psycho," "Rear Window," "The Trouble with Harry" and "Rope."

Also available in this series is the "Sleeping Beauty's" secondary char- 1956 version of "The Man Who Knew Too Much" with James Stewart and Doris Day. Day sings what became her signature song, "Que Sera, Sera," in this movie. But the story of an average couple who learn more than is good for them about an assassination plot was better told in 1934's blackand-white version, when Hitchcock used British actors Leslie Banks, Edná Best and Peter Lorre. If you can ferret out the early version, you'll get a better deal, seasonal discount notwithstanding.

Ehrling's appeal and magnetism may be less immediate than that of some other conductors, but with each additional performance I find myself more impressed with his pen-

Prokofiev's Symphony No. 3 is perhaps his least performed. Based on material from his unsuccessful opera, "The Fiery Angel," it features crushing themes and the composer's typical impressive orchestration.

The Havdn concerto received a sensitive performance by Geringas, on his quality Guadagnini instrument. In the outer movement, his daring performance resulted in some slips of intonation and runaway notes, but his keen musicianship compensated for these occasional technical flaws.

Like 'Grandma'

Will Moses shows us in happier times

By Victoria Diaz special writer

THE "CANVAS" is a piece of masonite 14-by-21 inches. The subject is a 19th-century traveling circus, set up in a New England meadow. Colors are kaleidoscopic oils, bright and intense. The style is simple, straightforward, almost child-like.

Though just a bit more detailed, a shade more complex, it is strikingly reminiscent of the work of America's most-famous primitivist, Anna Mary Robertson Moses or, as she was popularly known, "Grandma Moses

In fact, "Circus in a Meadow" is a Moses painting. But it wasn't done by the legendary New England artist who first won acclaim for her work in the 1940s, when she was over 80.

Instead it's the work of her greatgrandson, Will Moses, a tall, amiable 30-year-old, whose plainspokenness would do any New Englander proud.

"THERE'S NO hidden message in anything I paint," said Moses, in Southfield recently at The Print Gallery to kick off an exhibit of his newest works. "There's nothing hard to understand After you buy one of my paintings, you don't have to have an expert come and tell you what you've bought. What you see is what you get, and that's really all there is to it. You either like it, or you don't.

Like his great-grandmother, Moses is largely seed thought. "I paint. I paint some more Then I paint some more," he said. "With me, it's just a matter of learning by doing. I've never 'studied art' in any form way, and I've never taught it ! always hated school. Too headstrong, I MOSES BEGAN HIS art education in his grandfather's studio at the family home in upstate New York, where Grandma Moses did many of her famous paintings, and where Will Moses lives and works today.

"My grandfather, Forrest Moses, was also a professional painter and especially in the wintertime, my cousins and I would go to his studio where he'd give us some paints to work with and a board to paint on, and encourage us to paint. I was about 4, I think, when I started doing

"We painted in the style he painted in, because that's what we had as an example. And his style was very similar to his mother's.

'I suppose you can call it primitive art, naive art, folk art, if you want to put a label on it. It falls in there somewhere probably. But I don't really know how to describe it. Put it this way: You'll know it when you see it. There's just sort of that 'look' to it."

His grandfather gave Will Moses a start in painting in more ways than one, actually

When Will was around 12, Forrest Moses began including one of grandson's paintings in the sale each time he sold a painting of his own. It acquainted art collectors with the work of young Will and helped to open some doors in the art world when he began making the rounds a few years later, shortly after his high school graduation.

MOSES DOES NOT paint contemporary scenes. "I try to reflect times that have gone by," he says, "simpler times, happier times, I paint largely by imagining things, not looking at things.

"Lots of times, a subject of a painting will be an idea that somebody has given me. Other times, I might amass a lot of old postcards, or photographs and articles from old newspapers and go on from there.

So far it's working out rather nicely. Today the original paintings of Will Moses go for anywhere from $825-$5,000, with limited edition thographs at around $100 each. It's no coincidence that some of Moses work is a bit remindful of Currier & Ives wintertime scenes.

has been to make a living at this thing I do. It's still my goal."

"The appeal of Will Moses' paintings lies largely with the kinds of scenes he paints," said Diane Takesian of The Print Gallery. "He shows us a happier time in American life. Nothing is hurried, and from our hurried pace, it's almost like we can step into these scenes and relax. Also, he shows us real places places he's familiar with inside and out, because he has his basic roots

The building was recently the foal point of a photo/feature story in he Creative Living section of the Observer Newspapers.

Hovern Basso Associates designed the building around an extensive art collection and it is the first facility built specifically - from the ground up - for home video manufacturing and duplication.

It sits in the side of a low hill and separates two distinct exterior environments: the freeway and attendant strip development on the east side and a wooded ravine and two natural ponds on the west.

THE UNIQUE BRICK exterior has earned the building a prestigious

Glass walls and skylights make the expansive outside view an integral part of the inside space. The employee cafeteria - or commons area - offers a stunning view created by a three-story glass wall. Focal point is a spiral staircase that extends three stories to a loft conference area.

Make artistic expression a goal T IS SAID that if you aim at the color, texture and shape of what

A reasonable goal to aim for is expression. The term expression with regards to artwork means to show our feelings. So in the creative efforts of artistic endeavor, it is important that you do not forget one of the main goals, which is ex-

But how can you show feelings when you possess no feelings? To acquire the feeling is, therefore, the primary goal before beginning any work of art. I remember one man said, "Hey, I draw my fingers to the bone trying to do a simple still life, how can I express anything in a still

ANY GROUP OF inanimate objects can express feelings by the way they are placed, their color, condition, texture, etc. Just this week I framed a print for a customer.

Because of the artist's use of color in drawing white dishware on a white table cloth, I thought it might interest my Wednesday morning art

One student walked over and said, "My, doesn't that give you a quiet

Now if white dishware on a white table cloth can express something, then just about anything can.

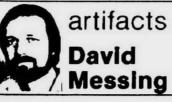

To help you learn to express and more easily acquire feelings, you must do two things: consider and appreciate. The word consider means to take thought of." Take thought of you are about to draw.

DON'T MERELY copy color, texture and shape because then you are only showing your technical abilities and those who view it can only judge how close or how far you came to realism. In all those lines and shapes, you really expressed nothing if you didn't consider what you were

Many times you are asked to draw something you don't particularly care for. Then it is difficult to "consider," because the more you take thought of the subject, the more you

Cats, for example, are not among my favorite subjects to draw. A cat can scratch its claws on my new outdoor furniture, walk all over my new car, eat my pigeons and leave his calling card in the sandbox, just in case I might have missed him. Then kind of smile at you as he is chased out of the yard.

So if I am asked to draw someone's lovely cat, I must learn to appreciate the animal. The word appreciate means "to become aware of the value." I must look at those beautiful eyes that sparkle with independence and study the color and softness of the fur. Try to pick out the particular colorations or patterns that distinguish this cat above all others in my customer's eyes. So in trueness to myself, I must gain appreciation for the subject and make my artwork a personal expres-

YW show spotlights Hmong artisans

Hmong stitchery, a vibrant folk art, crafted into garments and wall hangings by Laotian women, will be featured at the 11th annual arts and crafts show at the Northwest YWCA, 25940 Grand River, Redford from 10 am to 4 p.m. Sunday

The spotlight will be shared by YWCA painting and pottery students and artists and crafters from all over the state. Work being displayed and sold includes wood work, jewelry, ceramics, quilting, dolls, toys, Christmas items and more.

The arts and crafts fair has become a fall tradition at the Y, but will mark the first appearance for the Hmong artisans. Five generations ago, Hmong people moved south out of China into the uninhabited mountain tops of Laos. The Hmong, the meaning of which is "free people," were uprooted again in French and American conflicts in Indochina and forced to flee to refugee camps in Thailand.

Although many remain there, approximately 1,000 moved to the metropolitan Detroit area where they work cooperatively stitching one-ofa-kind creations, which are a beautiful blend of art and craft, combining ancient traditions and centuries of experience.

The show is open to the public, free of charge. Homemade refreshments will be sold. Call 537-8500 for more information.

Delicate Hmong stitchery will be part of the Northwest YWCA craft show.

The RELOCENTER an exciting showplace for Metropolitan Detroit It's here that visito browse through colorful displays and gather literature, maps and brochures on the quality of greater Detroit. No appointment is necessary and there is NO CHARGE.

If you're moving to greater Detroit or simply moving locally from one area to another, don't make your move without visiting the RELO CENTER!
