Myra Wells started collecting antique buttons when she acquired a portion of her mother's collection.

Button, button Hobby offers lessons in history

By Julie Brown staff writer

If a button were to disappear rom the cuff of a shirt or blouse. Myra Wells wouldn't have much trouble finding a replacement. Wells, a Plymouth resident, collects buttons. She's a member of this area's Mayflower Button Club. Most of the buttons were left to Wells by her mother, who had started collecting buttons around 1945.

District wrestles with Headlee limit

By Diane Gale staff writer

Two property tax issues affecting Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will be decided in the next few weeks.

School officials predict cuts in programs and services if the district loses potential revenue.

Total state equalized value of property in the district rose 8.6 percent in the past year. In contrast, the Consumer Price Index rose just 1.9 percent. Thus, school revenue from the property tax could rise faster than the Consumer Price Index.

But when that occurs, the Headlee Amendment to the Michigan Constitution requires that the tax rate be reduced to limit taxes. If the school district wants a revenue increase, it must ask voters to approve keeping the tax rate level.

"We're growing, and we're hiring more teachers and staff, and you need more money for that," said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for finance.

APPROVAL OF voters is needed before the district can levy the maximum rate of 37 mills ($37 per $1,000 of SEV) previously authorized by voters.

The proposal to collect the full rate levy will be on the June 8 ballot. If voters say no, the school district must reduce the rate to 36.02 mills, leaving the district the same amount of taxes it would have received if SEV had risen exactly the same as consumer price inflation.

A no vote would mean a $1 million difference in taxes, said Hoedel.

A yes vote means the owner of a house with an $80,000 market value would pay about $30 more a year if the tax rate were reduced.

In February, 4 percent of voters went to the polls and rejected such a waiver request by a 3-2 margin.

Even before a potential Headlee rollback, the Plymouth-Canton school district will lose $1.52 million in state aid in the 1987-88 school year compared to the current year, Hoedel said. That amounts to $100 per student.

IN A SEPARATE issue, a Truth in Taxation hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday, June 1, in the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education meeting room to give residents a chance to air opinions on the total increase in assessments.

The Plymouth-Canton school board must wait at least seven days after the hearing before voting on the issue.

132 cruisers ticketed

The count last weekend -132. That's how many tickets were issued by Plymouth city police, most to young people for offenses allegedly committed while cruising downtown streets, according to Chief Richard Myers.

Police handed out 58 tickets for misdemeanor ordinance violations, which includes disorderly conduct and trespassing, 55 traffic citations "This weekend was the first where we enforced resident-only parking where posted," the chief said. Twelve such tickets were issued

It's been about nine or 10 years now since Wells joined the Mayflower Button Club, which has 18 to 20 members.

"So, I'm a greenhorn. But it's been very interesting."

WELLS HADN'T been much of a collector before she began collecting buttons.

"My hobby was mostly bowling and that kind of thing, until I couldn't do it any more. I bowled with one team for 21 years."

Members of the Mayflower Button Club will be hosts for the spring meeting of the Michigan State Button Society.

The meeting, open to the public, will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, at the Plymouth Salvation Army, 9451 S. Main St.

Collecting buttons is a good way to meet interesting people and to learn about history, Wells has found.

"Lots of history. And I guess the different styles in buttons, too, because buttons have changed so much."

Some of the first buttons worn by the nobility were made of precious

The back marks on the buttons are particularly interesting; some buttons are patented with the patent date on the back. "There are a lot of different ones, different back marks."

It's difficult for Wells to estimate the size of her collection.

"Oh, I wouldn't know, I wouldn't know. My husband says I've got over 1,000. It's going to take me the rest of my life to find out what I've got.'

Wells and husband Lauren have. one son, Richard, and two grandchildren. Their grandson, David, just graduated from the University of Michigan. Their granddaughter, Anne, just finished her first year at U-M.

WELLS DIDN'T have to worry about the grandchildren getting into the button collection in their younger days; she hadn't started collecting buttons yet.

After her marriage, Wells moved to Michigan; her family had lived in a small town in Wisconsin. She made some contributions to her mother's button collection.

'We bought buttons for her anytime we went anywhere. But I can't say I actually helped her."

In recent years, Wells has added to her own button collection.

"I've been working mostly on glass buttons." Her mother had collected a large number of glass buttons

Wells visits a button dealer near their northern Michigan cottage. "I buy some once in a while when I want to fill out a certain category.' Wells doesn't really have a favorite among the buttons she's collected.

"I just like them all."

Some buttons, such as the brass ones, take a good deal of effort to keep cleaned and polished.

'Some plastic ones you don't want to keep at all because they deteriorate."

WHEN A button comes off a shirt or blouse, Wells doesn't sew it back on. Her arthritis makes sewing difficult.

"I can't sew anymore, so I have a good excuse. I have to call on somebody for help. A needle is too small to handle."

Her sister-in-law's coming to visit, she'll help Wells with the sewing during that visit.

"She doesn't know it yet," Wells said with a smile.

At this Saturday's meeting of the Michigan State Button Society, the Mayflower Button Club will celebrate its 25th anniversary.

The Mayflower Button Club has members from Plymouth, Canton, Northville, Dearborn, Westland, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor, Livonia and Farmington Hills.

"It takes in the whole area," said club member Connie Fitzner of Plymouth.

on Dewey Street.

Myers said he believes a couple of additional officers again complemented the five who normally work Friday and Saturday. No new strategies were implemented, he added.

'We're enforcing traffic and local ordinances, and we're trying to focus. in on specific complaints we've received from the community people who squeal tires, people who drink, people who urinate in public, people who are trespassing," he said. The community appreciates the effort, Myers said. "I hear that from residents and business people."

Police issued 85 tickets the weekend of May 1-3, 191 for April 24-26 and 160 for April 17-19.

People who were tickeied last weekend on disorderly conduct charges and who are at least 17 years of age received appearance dates in 35th District Court for later this month.

Those under 17 will be referred to juvenile court.

District court judges apparently are following through with an announced plan to crack down on people who are found guilty of disorderly conduct charges relating to cruising.

On Tuesday, 35th Judge James MacDonald fined a woman who pleaded guilty to urinating in public $100, assessed $100 in court costs and added a $5 judgment fee.

It was standing room only Monday and Tuesday mornings as 35th District Judge James MacDonald arraigned dozens of youth charged with misdemeanors stemming from Plymouth "cruise-ins." People from Novi, Canton, Livonia, Westland, Milford, Dearborn Heights and Walled Lake were charged with trespassing, disorderly conduct, urinating in public, cruising and gathering. Those who pleaded not guilty stuck around for their preliminary exams, held later the same day. Those who pleaded guilty were hit with a $100 fine, $100 in costs and a $5 judgment fee. A number of those charged are shown above waiting in the hallway for their turn Tuesday morning. Inside a number of residents and businessmen were monitoring the proceedings. On Tuesday about three-fourths ended up pleading guilty.

2nd Rouge River cleanup scheduled

By Diane Gale staff writer

Swim in the Rouge River? You've got to be kidding.

Not too long ago, taking a dip in the waterway was part of everyday local recreation.

If you dare swim in the waters today, you're advised to take a quick shower and consider seeking medical advice.

Even if you took the plunge you wouldn't get far amid the tires, car parts, furniture and everything else that's floating in the most polluted river in the state.

The Rouge River meanders 126 miles throughout southeast Michigan. Nine miles of the Rouge run through Canton Township, .8 mile in Plymouth and about 3 miles in Plymouth Township.

ENJOYING THE sights and smells of the Rouge River have gone down the drain. But volunteers want to change that.

The second annual cleanup program, Rouge Rescue '87, is scheduled Saturday, June 6, and sponsored by the Friends of the Rouge, a nonprofit organization comprised of organizations, communities and individuals near the river.

Canton, Plymouth and Plymouth Township officials are hoping residents will show in full force. This year 22 communities will participate in the project with more than 4,000 volunteers expected.

Esther Hulsing, Plymouth Township clerk, is contacting scout troops to solicit help. She has already fielded calls from people interested in volunteering.

Dave Schneider, Canton community and economic development assistant director, said in addition to the pollution, log jams are a constant problem.

"We want the river to flow at a natural state," Schneider said. "But we have to clear it out to get it moving. Rivers can begin cleansing through natural processes if they're allowed to flow unobstructed.'

A BIG PART of the cleanup will be on the banks of the river.

"When it floods, the water goes up on the banks and takes the debris back to the river," Schneider said.

Bundarin said he was suspicious as soon as the man entered the store on Haggerty at Cherry Hill.

"I was working near the front door in the wine section, and I always keep an eye on the door as a habit," Bunderin said. "I saw this guy come in with a heavy cost on his arm and something underneath. I went to the phone to call the police."

BUNDARIN DIDN'T have time to make the call. The suspect went to the cash register, jumped over the counter and grabbed cash from the drawer, a police report said. Bundarin said he knocked the man down out of instinct. "When he reached into the register, the cashier grabbed his hand and screamed, and that's when I went for him - it was all reaction. When she screamed it triggered it all." Bundarin wrestled him to the floor.

"When we hit the ground, a gun fell out and he managed to get to his knees and reach for it. Another employee kicked the gun out of his reach."

Bundarin and a customer held the man down until Canton police arrived.

1. What to you consider to be the top three priorities for Schoolcraft College during the next five years?

Develop more programs to handle the needs of our ever-growing geria-tric society, leisure time activities, skills, second careers, etc.

Upgrade the special programs that prepare the student for a semi-professional or technical career. Strengthen our role as the conduit between the secondary school and the universities.

2. Do you believe there are pro-grams at Schoolcraft College which should be strengthened? If so, identify them — and explain how you would propose to accomplish this.

1. What do you consider to be the top three priorities for Schoolcraft College during the next five years?

Career counseling expansion. Having a master plan (for) campus facility and infra-structures. Building a Women's Resource Center.

2. Do you believe there are programs at Schoolcraft College which should be strengthened? If so, identify them - and explain how you would accomplish this.

Learning assistance - expand efforts in placement, testing, counseling and orientation. Place added emphasis on computerized student tracking, so students have no difficulty and can be given additional counseling and assistance as soon as practical.

Staff assistance - continued strong commitment to quality instruction through program evaluation and curriculum staff development.

Emphasis on utilization of resources - include completion of Radcliff Campus facilities, improvement of facilities used for the Women's Resource Center and aggressive pursuit of instruction equipment necessary to support new technology and trends.

3. What is your position on the issue of leasing a portion of college property for commercial use?

I voted for and favor the use of college property for the office complex. The income will provide services and facility expansion that may not be available through future taxation. In addition, the properties will return to the tax rolls and have been placed in this commercial venture at a value, that is market value.

4. Do you favor cable casting board meetings? Explain.

Yes, if it improves communication with the community, public and students that Schoolcraft College serves.

5. If you are elected or re-elected - what would you expect to contribute to the Board of Trustees?

Leadership - from past experience in business and community service. Involvement - including participation in the legislative process. Commitment - to the time necessary and energy necessary to serve as a trustee.

"I'm glad it's over," said Westland lies Sgt. Robert Barthold.

Besides his professional sense of relief, the officer is glad that Jeffrey Duncan, a Dearborn Heights police cadet, pleaded no contest to charges Monday relating to six armed rob-beries and/rapes of women at small retail stores or gas stations in Westland and Livonia between Aug. 27 and Dec. 3.

Barthold is happy that the rape victims have been spared the pain and time of repeating their testimo-ny at the scheduled trials in the Detroit Recorders Court of Leonard Thompson.

But Duncan, 22, arrested Dec. 19, will still stand trial Thursday for the robbery of Sparr's Florists in Canton Township and the rape of a woman employee. "The (rape) victims seem pleased

Group's goal: drug-free dorm law

If would also require that appro-riate alcohol and drug information a provided for all entering fresh ten and for all dormitory resident dvisers.

State legislators and university of-ficials have been invited to atfend a meeting at Henry Ford Hospital's Maplegrove substance abuse centers at 4 p.m. Monday.

ONE PROPONENT, Judge Ber-nard Friedman of the 48th District Court, has contacted both Republican and Democratic lawmakers. He hopes it will become a bipartisan, statewide effort.

"Adults and teens are working to-gether in communities throughout Michigan'to create an atmosphere in which the 'in' thing to be is free of all which the in thing to be is new of an chemicals," a letter to legislators and college presidents said. "Many high schools are making special efforts to identify and find help for young people in trouble with drugs and/or alcohol.

THE LETTER is signed by Friedman, Dr. Michael F. Boyle, modica director of chimical dependence programs at Miplegrove, and Judit Doner Berne, editor of the Birming ham/Bloomfield and West Bloom ham/Bloomfield and West Bloom-field Eccentric newspapers. Friedman researched housing ap-plications of the state's public uni-versities and private colleges. Most gave students the choice of a smok-ing or non-smoking roommate. But telephone calls to dormitory housing officials found differences in enforcement.

Other questions on the application gave students the opportunity to choose a "quiet" floor or a room-mate who prefers rock to the classics.

"But there appears to be no easy way in which the student may request a roommate, or even a floor or suite in which there is no use of drugs or alcohol," the letter said. "Those who, by choice or necessity,

The proposed $60 million loan would be used to meet current county expenses, Duggan said. It wouldn't be used to retire county debts or pay for new programs.

Wayne County commissioners proposed exploring several potential legislative agenda for 1987. Among options up for considera da for 1987.

Killeen seeks master budget plan for county

1032 Better long-term planning could help Wayne County avoid repeating circumstances leading to today's $60 million loan vote, a county official said.

A countywide master financial plan could help avoid budget pitfalls, county clerk James Killeen said.

Killéen suggested developing a five-year master plan. Normal operating budgets should be extended to two years, he added.

"Because of the way budgeting is dine now, there's no way to imple-ment a long-range solution," Killeen said.

Rather than eliminate line items in department budgets, county combudget, as a whole, met county ob-pectives, he said.

"It should be seen if the dollars being requested fit the overall plan," officials to map out budget strategy. "The great public misconception that there is a chief county executive - there's five, plus two chief judges and a chairman of the board of commissioners," Killeen said. "I'm not saying this is a plan in itself, I'm saying this is what a plan should contain."

Thus far, there's been no response

Among other suggestions, Killeen

• The county should clearly dethe budget and priorities and how to pay for them.

· Set performance and cost levs for new projects.

• Establish face-to-face meetings commission chairman, clerk, treasurer, sheriff, prosecutor and other from the county executive's office, Killeen said.

"I couldn't comment on the plan, it hasn't crossed my desk," deputy county executive Michael Duggan said.

Executive's office staff members, department heads and county commissioners held a first-ever joint retreat in February, though not every department participated.

"We are the private sector inter-face with industry as Doug Ross is in the Commerce Department," said Robert A. Sleghart, director of CP's economic development services. "If you have (an economic project) that's very confidential, you go to the private entity — us." CP is Michigan's largest utility, serving two-thirds of the 9 million residents with natural gas, electricity or both. In Oakland and most of the Wayne suburbs, it distributes natural gas.

LOOKING AT the news, one thinks of CP being hassled by attorney general Frank J. Kelley over the Midland plant or rate increases. Actually, said Sieghart, CP has a good working partnership with govern-ment at all levels.

They get together in "community growth alliances" or CGAs. A new tool in Michigan, CGAs are set up on at least a countywide basis to pro-vide "one stop shopping" for developers.

The partners are educators (particularly community colleges), local government, financiers, real estate agents, unions and, of course, the power company.

"Of 36 CGAs in the state, 32 are in Consumers Power's markets," said Sieghart.

"A CGA provides us a resource everywhere in the state. It gives us an agency to gather information on sites, buildings, community pro-

Special rates aid expansion

Consumers Power Co. offers special special incentive gas rates to attract business, boasting that several industrial firms saved more than $500,000 in 1986.

"The Michigan Public Service Commission (which approved the rates) believes these rates play a significant role in encouraging business and job growth in the state," said Bill Long, who chairs MPSC.

AFM CORP. of Sterling Heights didn't even know about the special rate until CP's marketing people told them.

"In 1986, we saved more than $7,000 with the incentive gas rate," file, wage rates. There is a computerized site net program that lists 2,000 properties for sale or lease with 90 percent accuracy. "The University of Michigan is putting community profiles into its mainframe computer. Anyone au-thorized can pull data out.

"IT'S THE RIGHT program, at the right time. It's unique. No other state has such information-sharing resources.

"We - our company, Detroit Edison and the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments - were working on this when the CGA program came along. Michigan Bell put $5,000 into each CGA."

He credited Carol Hoffman, deputy Commerce director, along with legislative staffers and educators, for putting together the CGA program in 1984.

JACKSON COUNTY, where Consumers Power has its headquarters, has the first official CGA in the state and the first CGA videotape. Thirty such videotapes are planned, Sieghart said. Oakland and Wayne counties are due for such CGA films.

"It gives you a chance to see what you would read. The visual impact is much quicker," he said.

The Jackson prototype opens with a testimonial from the county's most famous entrepreneur, former Southfield auto dealer Roger Penske, now head of Michigan International Speedway.

The following sections illustrate: locations in relation to auto plants, acreages of some sites, factory scenes of the most prominent labor scenes of the most prominent labor kills, railroad lines, water wells, CP's special rates for developing companies, and community college training facilities. It closes with "quality of life" scenes — parks, housing, the 92 lakes and the community orchestra belting out Tchaikovsky's Fourth.

Consumers Power produced the film and picked up the tab.

IN EACH REGION, CP has trained a staff person as coordinator for economic development.

In the Metro region, that's Charles Heiney Jr., who works out of the Livonia office. After studying chemical engineering at Purdue, Heiney joined CP in 1956 and has been in industrial marketing ever since.

"I call on auto plants and large in-dustries with 5,000 square feet, such as machine shops," Heiney said.

In a recent case, a company offi-cial called to say his firm would consolidate two existing operations in one and build a bigger plant. It needed a rate on gas. Heiney's work may be scouting for vacant sites or empty buildings. It may be pretty technical stuff like presenting prices on natural gas air conditioning for a hotel going up along the I-696 or I-275 freeways, or for the enclosure of Wonderland Mall in Livonia. CP offers special in-CP'S ECONOMIC effort has two divisions - one for retention and expansion of local companies, the other to recruit outside firms. Sieghart is "Mr. Inside," the one who works on retention.

"Oakland County," Sieghart reported, "is in the process of a retention effort" after winning such sites as GMF Robotics and the Saturn headquarters.

"There's a lot of international work. Mazda (which located in Flat Rock) opened up a lot of doors to Japan. There's a lot of visibility here for Japanese auto suppliers. "Eighty percent of the total growth in the state is right here around Detroit," he said.

CP IS better known outstate, how ever, for its development work. Economic development started with the railroads in the 1800s," Sieghart said. "They sold land to those who would use rail freight.

Naturally, that led over to us. "We bought a large amount of land — we were the state's third largest holder. In 1950 we formed an area economic development depart-ment. That's how we got started -37 years ago."

He added, "We're putting tog ther something on Supercollider," the proposed federal atom-splicing aboratory that Gov. Blanchard is seeking. The site would be in Monroe and Lenawee counties.

Presently, 17 customers are on the natural gas "economic development rate D," which can save a customer between 7 and 10 percent below standard rates.

"WE OFFERED these rates with the specific intention of promoting economic activity in Michigan," said Richard J. Surbrook, CP's director of economic development.

CP offers incentive rates for metal melting firms and for farm irrigators. The utility also offers a natural gas incentive rate to customers who can also burn oil in their plants.

House votes $17 billion arms budget

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes during the week ending May 8.

HOUSE

DEFENSE SPENDING - The House voted 249 for and 172 against to lower defense spending next fiscal year from the $306 billion level set by the Armed Services Committee to $289 billion.

The $17 billion cut brought the 1988 defense outlay in line with the 1958 defense outlay in line with the Congressional budget resolution, which was approved after the com-mittee had set the $306 billion level. Facing nearly 200 other amend-ments, the bill (HR 1748) remained in debate.

Supporter Les Aspin, D-Wis., said fiscal discipline, not military preparedness, was the issue on this vote. Opponent William Dickinson, R-Ala., said "we are cutting into the one and sinew of our defense estabit . . . *

lishment...." Members voting yes wanted the defense authorization bill to comply with the congressional budget reso-hution. Voting yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, Deanis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield. Voting no: William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

SALT II TREATY - By a vote of 245 for and 181 against, the House adopted an amendment denying spending under the fiscal 1988 de-fense bill (above) on long-range nu-clear weapons that violate the unratified SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union.

Beware of phony solicitors

Fradulent solicitors have been taking advantage of Michigan Special Olympics, officials said, and they advise residents to be wary.

We don't know where these calls are coming from, but we are asking the public to help us," Michigan Special Olympics state director John Walsh said

DialAmerica Marketing is the only authorized soliciting agent for Michigan Special Olympics, officials said. DialAmerica sells magazine subscriptions over the telephone -12.5 percent of subscription prices are donated to Special Olympics. Special Olympics officials are asking people who receive suspicious calls to ask for a name and address for mailing donations. They advise against sending money or giving out credit card number without verifying the address.

Information can be verified by calling Michigan Special Olympics, (517) 774-3911.

Roll Call Report

This would force the Administra-tion to abide by a narrow definition of the treaty if Moscow does the same. It was opposed by President Reagan, who says the Soviets have disregarded SALT II.

Supporter Jim Moody, D-Wis., said the amendment would require a "re-turn to the stated policies of the Reagan administration for the first six years of that administration."

Opponent Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said that under the amendment "the left wing of the Democratic Party unilaterally cripples America . . . appeades the Soviets."

Members voting yes wanted to in-duce Washington and Moscow to obey SALT II. Voting yes: Pursell, Hertel, Ford, Levin. Voting no: Broomfield.

SAVINGS AND LOANS - By a vote of 153 for and 258 against, the House rejected an amendment to raise, from $5 billion over two years to $15 billion over five years, the amount the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. can borrow to make itself solvent again.

This occurred as the House passed and sent to conference with the Senate a bill (HR 27) to shore up the FSLIC, which insures deposits of up to $100,000 in federally backed savgs and loans.

priers said the $15 billio level is needed because FSLIC's liability may be that great to deposi-tors in about 300 insolvent thrifts it would like to close.

Opponents said Congress could keep a tighter leash on PSLIC if it capped borrowing authority at $5 billion but left renewal as a possibility after two years. Healthy thrifts, which must collateralize FSLIC borrowing to heal weak ones, generally favored the lower ceiling.

Members voting yes favored $15 billion rather than $5 billion in new borrowing authority for the FSLIC. Voting yes: Hertel, Levin.

Voting no: Pursell, Ford, Broomfield.

SENATE

1988 BUDGET - By a vote of 56 for and 42 against, the Senate adopted and sent to conference with the House its version (S Con Res 48) of the Congressional budget plan for fiscal 1988.

The most disputed feature of the $1 trillion blueprint for the fiscal tial new taxes if he is to get Congress would approve military spending of $200.6 billion if the pres-ident hobepts tax hikes of $18.5 bil-lion in 1908 and $118 billion through 1901. Otherwise, defense spending in capped at $200.6 billion. The resolution virtually ruled out income tax hikes. Many lawmakers are looking at higher alcohol and to-bacco taxes, oil import levies and in-grassed user free.

creased user fees. Although the resolution's pro-jected 1988 deficit of $133.6 billion misses the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law's target of $108 billion, its sponsors said spending restraint and the new taxes would combine to satisfy the law's goal of a balanced budget by 1991.

Supporter Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., referred to the higher taxes and called the budget "a pay-as-you-go plan."

1997 BUDGET WA tally of 51 for and 40 Senate failed to achieve fifths majority it seeds fifthe majority it seeind to youd flocal 1087 budget limit viously had set for itself ( ght the wa Senate could pass a $8.4 hill plemental appropriations b 1827) for the current flical y bill remained in debate.

Senators voting yes' wante waive the spending and deficit ings of the 1987 Congressional I et resolution.

Voting no: Levin, Riegle.

Consumers joins senior aid program

Consumers Power will be Michigan's first utility - and one of the first nationwide — to participate in a program that helps social service agencies find senior citizens who need their services.

The "Gatekeeper Program" teaches Consumers Power employees to be aware of warning signs -such as overgrown lawns, piled-up mail, physical coordination problems, confusion or extreme anxiety - that may indicate problems among senior customers.

Field employees will notify Consumers consumer affairs department. Department officers will will notify appropriate regional agencies. Gov. James Blanchard and Lucille McCullough, commissioner of the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging, were among those praising the program. The program was announced by Consumers Power Metro Region General Manager Edgar Consumers Power serves 2 million residents in western Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Arts vital enough or leader's spot

IRING a director for the Plymouth Community Arts Council is an idea whose time has come z: With the number of women working outside of the home these days, "we s meed someone to manage the ship, so to speak," said Jo Hulce, founder of the PCAC.

The PCAC director would have a number of responsibilities, including programming, public relations, staff and volunteer supervision and day-today operations. He or she also would be responsible for developing and managing artistic/financial growth and writing grant proposals.

the Since its founding in 1969, the arts organization for Plymouth and Canton has relied on volunteer assistance.

'We're in our adolescent period," said Pat McCombs, president of the PCAC. We'll always survive but we need a disector to expand our horizons a little

FILLING THE director's position will depend on whether the PCAC receives the staffing grant it's applied for from the Michigan Council for the Arts. According to McCombs, the director's position would be similar to that of a chamber of commerce director. The PCAC director would provide the arts organization with "a constant presence In the community."

" Certainly the presence of a full-time "tirector has helped various chambers of Commerce increase their professionalism and effectiveness. The same logic applies to the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

The PCAC provides a number of arts activities for residents, including - but not limited to - scholarships for talented students and art classes for children, teenagers and adults. Other PCAC activities include the Picture Lady, Sculpture Lady and Music Lady programs in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools and the summer "Music in the Park" program in Kellogg Park. The arts organization also holds an annual show for artists and craftsmen and operates an art rental gallery.

ARTS ACTIVITIES contribute a great deal to the quality of life in a community; the recent visit of Artrain to Plymouth's Old Village provided a good example of that.

This community has a large number of people and businesses who are supporters of the arts; witness the presence of the PCAC, the Plymouth Symphony, the Three Cities Art Club and other local arts organizations.

Far from being a non-essential frill, arts activities are tremendously important ones.

By hiring a qualified director, the Plymouth Community Arts Council will be able to continue enriching the quality of life in the Plymouth-Canton community.

The Observer supports that effort and encourages the Arts Council to further enhance the arts in the community by hiring a full-time director.

ducing little, so I located of Tom Brown in his favorite haunt in the House gallery of the State Capitol.

Brown was in local politics in Nankin Township and Westland before serving 10 years in the House, and now he helps lobby for the Michigan Townships Association.

No oratorical whiz-bang like Zolton Ferency or Jack Faxon, the Hoosierborn Brown has a lot of accumulated smarts about statecraft. He gave me a lesson you won't find in the civics books in how and why you "gut" a bill.

SUPPOSE IT'S late in the session, past the deadline for introduction of new bills, and an important problem comes to the leadership's consciousness.

A loyal committee chairman keeps several dummy bills on file — bills that don't change much, but do have numbers, sponsors and proper introduction dates.

They "gut" the bill - amend out its contents — and insert the new material. I liken it to ripping out the contents of "Robinson Crusoe," keeping the cover and inserting the text of "Lady Chatterley's Lover."

Brown didn't endorse the process. He just explained how they do it in Lansing.

BUT RECENTLY the honorables got caught for what they did 14 years ago.

The Senate in 1973 took a minor House votes registration bill and amended it to say that signatures on in-litative petitions would be considered while and cold marcas collected within the dear of these Legislature). None could collect enough signers by deadline.

Well, Oakland Circuit Judge Alice Gilbert saw through the procedural sham. The judge declared the "stale signature" section unconstitutional, as violative of our right to be apprised of what our legislative heroes are up to.

Naturally, Attorney General Frank Kelley will exhaust the appeals process, but that's another story.

MY POINT, besides reacquainting you with ol' Tom Brown, is to show that masterful legislators generally can find ways to get around rules.

Only rarely do they get caught. For every law that a Judge Gilbert declares unconstitutionally passed, 1,000 others are never challenged.

Dick Headlee has watched the Legislature play games with the state aid formula of his Headlee tax limitation amendment, and a few other sections.

This should be a lesson to those naive souls who dream it's possible to pass a balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution, or to prohibit abortion, or other noble things.

When hundreds of fine legislative minds get to work, they come up with many ways to get around the constitutional provisions. It's legal until they get caught. Most of the time, they get away with it.

So don't take Law Day orators seriwhen they say, "Ours is a governof laws, not men." We also must good men and women, with a of self-restraint.

Hart coverage prompts scrutiny of media attitudes

Editor's Note: Philip H. Power is chairman of Suburban Communications Corp., the company that owns this newspaper. He is a journalist of 25 years experience and has engaged the press as a political candidate when he ran for nomination to the U.S. Senate.

HE WAY Gary Hart's political career was ended by the news media calls for some tough questions and straight answers, and it calls for better focus on the differences in attitude and operations between the big time national news media and your local hometown newspaper.

Should reporters skulk around staking out private homes of people (includ-ing candidates for office)?

No. Newspapers are not society's censors nor should reporters set themselves up as a modern day thought po-lice. Except for suspicion of criminal acts and on very good basis, I've never done it and I do not expect ever to ask any of our staff to do it. Is grivate morality an accurate predictor of competence in holding were, there would have been very odd about presidents hower and Kennedy. In if the editors of the Miami Herald and their way these great presidents might have been lost to the nation before they had ever taken office.

Can overly aggressive and unchecked news media drive able people out of public life and prevent others from ever becoming candidates?

Yes. Many headlines last week said that the Miami Herald had blazed a new standard in political reporting: Henceforth, every candidate for high public office will have some reporter asking him/her if they have committed adultery or some such. This is silly. People in public life have an ordinary range of moral standards (i.e. about like the range of most reporters). These usually have very little to do with their performance when in office. Several able people in office and out told me last week that if the cost of running was ac- . cepting risk of being trashed by the press, it wasn't worth it.

Is the press getting too arrogant, too unchecked, too big for its collective britches?

Yes, if reporters figure they have the right to run around asking candidates what their sex life is like or how they spent the past evening. Worse, if the press thinks it has the right to act like that, the rights of the press will be sharply curtailed, First Amendment or no.

In his press conference last week Sen. Hert portrayed the press as hunters and presidential candidates as the hunted.

IT WAS A challenging metaphor, especially to us who try to make this paper a hometown newspaper and not part of the national media establishment.

Unlike the Miami Herald or the national TV networks, this newspaper is part of this community.

Our purpose is not to be the hunter against people in this community. We are part of the community and by being a part of it we portray the community to itself as it is.

We will not whitewash. We will not ignore doings, and we will not set ourselves as something outside of and su-perior to the people in this community.

We respect you. We value your respect for us. This mutual trust will endure so long as we maintain respect for truthfulness, fairness, privacy, relevan-cy and responsibility. And as long as we don't get too big for our britches:

If you're wondering where you have read or heard the name, Coffman has been turf editor and handicapper for the Detroit News since 1978, the year Herb Boldt hired him away from the Free Press where Al first had worked as sports office boy in '41 and as race writer since '46.

Philosopher called to appear before Senate committee

CHA CHA NICARAGUA: Unlike some who publish only the news that's fit print, I am sometimes finding it more fun to print news that gives the fits. Of such is a transcript I am recently discovering under a pile of old newspapers. It concerns the capture of an American in the jungles bordering Honduras. I am learning that soon thereafter he was interrogated by the Nicaraguan military with no little enthusiasm. Although his captors strongly suspected the American of being an agent of the United States, they were unable to establish any link between him and rebel forces that frequent the area where he was intercepted. Not long afterward the American was deported to the United States and promptly subpoenaed by the U.S. Senate to appear before one of its committees. As we take up the transcript, the chairman is speaking.

A CRUCIAL part of the current workers compensation law is set to expire Friday. House Speaker Gary Owen, D-Ypsilanti, urged senators to vote for it "as is."

"I would hope the Senate Republi-cans realize this is it," Owen said. "This is a balanced proposal. When you alter that, you have to find an-other balanced proposal, and that will take a great deal of time and effort."

BLANCHARD'S PROPOSAL, unveiled late Wednesday and rushed through the House Labor Committee without debate less than an hour later, recommends the Legislature:

• Adopt a pro-business definition of disability. Under the new definition, a worker would be able to collect benefits if an injury prevents the worker from performing "work suit-able to his or her qualifications and training."

Judith Darlington now works as a substance abuse specialist and family therapist at Plymouth Family Service. At 39, Darlington went back to school at the University of Michigan to pursue her master's degree in social work.

Until 1981, Darlington had been at home, taking care of her family. She and her husband have two daughters, one 23 and one almost 21.

"So they're in the launching phase," Darlington said.

Those years at home with her children were important ones for Darlington, a Plymouth Township resident. She did some substitute teaching and volunteer work.

"But my primary role was the wife and mother." She's thankful she had the opportunity to be at home with her children.

"I really appreciate being able to do that. There's time for my career. In a lifetime, there's lot of opportunities to do different things."

NORTHVILLE'S Carolyn Brown also appreciates the time she's had at home with her family. She's the mother of two children, a 16-yearold boy and an 11-year-old girl.

Brown's a volunteer peer coun-selor at the Women's Resource Center at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. She's also an undergraduate student at the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

"We're here to help them sort out and let them know what's available," Brown said. "It builds their self-esteem and allows them to make their transition."

THE WORLD in which Mother's Day is now celebrated is a different one from that of years gone by. Gone are the self-sacrificing TV moms of earlier times - June Cleaver, Donna Stone and their kind. Today's TV moms pursue careers and raise families with ease, smiling all the time.

Real-life mothers and fathers, however, know that raising children isn't an effortless, painless task.

"You have to really define your priorities," Darlington said. "If you get the priorities in place, the other things will fall in place."

Darlington's full-time job at Plymouth Family Service means she's had to give up some things.

"I used to love to cook and I don't have much time for that. used to have a clean house, too." The family now has a person come in part time to help with the house-"What a beautiful gift," Darlington said. "I love her, because I certainly couldn't do all I do without that.'

Arts Search now under way for director

The Plymouth Community Arts Main St., Plymouth, MI 48170. The Council is looking for its first director.

The local arts organization has applied for a staffing grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts. The PCAC was founded in 1969 and has relied on volunteer assistance throughout its history.

"We're in our adolescent period," said Pat McCombs, PCAC president. "We'll always survive, but we need a director to expand our horizons a little bit."

The PCAC is involved in a number of local arts activities, including awarding scholarships to students and holding an annual show for artists and craftsmen.

The arts council operates an art rental gallery and sponsors art classes for children, teenagers and adults. The Picture Lady, Sculpture Lady and Music Lady programs in local schools are also operated by the PCAC.

FILLING THE director's position will depend on whether the PCAC receives the grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts. The position would be a full-time one. Benefits will probably be included, McCombs said.

The salary range has not been established.

"We're just leaving that open," she said. "We've already received a couple of applications.'

Those who are interested in applying should send a resume and salary history to: Search Committee, Plymouth Community Arts Council, 332 S. in with any preconceived ideas."

deadline is June 30, 1987. The position is being publicized through arts-related newsletters and through several newspapers. McCombs said. The PCAC is also using the placement offices of several state colleges and universities and the Michigan Employment Security Commission.

Plans are to review applicants' qualifications in July and to conduct interviews in August. The successful applicant would be notified in September and would start work on Oct.

"It's a person we hope to keep for quite some time," McCombs said.

The director's responsibilities would include programming, public relations, staff and volunteer supervision and day-to-day operations. Those responsibilities would also include writing grant proposals and developing/managing artistic and financial growth.

HAVING A full-time director would provide the PCAC with "a constant presence in the community," McCombs said.

The director would ideally have a business and arts-related background, she said. He or she would need to be able to work well with a number of people.

The arts organization is looking for applicants throughout the state.

"We're not limiting it to this area. no," McCombs said. "It might even be more beneficial if they weren'i from this area. They wouldn't come

The director's position would be similar to that of a chamber of commerce director, she said. The PCAC director would work with the organization's nearly 200 volunteers and would be a representative of the arts council.

Last year, the PCAC received a grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts. Part of that grant stipulated that the PCAC find a consultant to help prepare a long-range plan.

SEVEN PCAC members served on that planning committee. Members worked with consultants Phil Jenkins and Judith Sheldon.

"It was a real soul-searching process," McCombs said. That process involved evaluating programs and setting priorities.

"It gave us a good idea for the future.

PCAC members established a three-year plan. One recommendation included in that plan is hiring a full-time director.

Arts council members would like to increase the organization's visibility in the community and to provide more services for adults.

The PCAC office is at 332 S. Main St. in downtown Plymouth. The director would work out of that office.

The idea of having a director has been supported by PCAC members, McCombs said.

"I think the majority do," she said, "and I usually hear from the grape-Concerns that have been vine." voiced involve taking resources away from PCAC programs.

want to deplete any of our programs that we do for the community. But this person is going to enhance our volunteer efforts."

Having a full-time director would allow the PCAC to increase its membership and visibility, she said.

PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP'S Jo Hulce, founder of the PCAC, agreed that hiring a director is a good idea. "I think it's a very important move to make at this time. We've talked about it for a number of years."

With so many women now working outside of the home, "we need someone to manage the ship, so to speak.'

The director would need some experience in arts programming, Hulce said. He or she would also need to be able to work well with volunteers and be able to represent the PCAC effectively in the community.

"And certainly some administrative experience."

Hulce has been pleased with the PCAC's growth over the years.

We had a wonderful time in the early days, organizing." The arts organization needs to progress and to continue to meet local needs.

'It's wonderful to see that other people have the same dreams," Huice said. She's found that local people "are looking for improvement in the quality of life and are willing to expend some energies in that direction."

"She wanted to take the course, so I took it with her." The two of them studied real estate at Schoolcraft College. Prochazka's husband retired the same spring that she began working in real estate.

"This business, you can work around a schedule, which is nice." Her two youngest children were 8 and 10 when she started working in real estate.

Prochazka lived three blocks from her office when she started work in real estate. Being close to home was a help to her.

SHE HAS found that her background was a good one for real estate. Through the children's vari-ous activities, she'd made a number of local contacts.

"And that's what really makes a difference, whether you make it or you don't."

In her younger years, Prochazka worked as a pilot. In the 1940s, she had worked as a legal secretary for Chevrolet in Flint. "While I was there, I used all my money to learn to fly." After she left that job, Prochazka went to Lansing to work for Francis Aviation. She earned her private and commercial licenses and then her flight instructor's license.

Prochazka taught people how to fly planes.

"That was fun back then. You'd just take off and nobody cared where you went." One time, she and a girlfriend flew to Florida for an aviation show in Miami. Prochazka met her husband while she was working at Bishop Airport in Flint. He worked for Buick Motor in the aviation division as a co-pilot and mechanic.

PROCHAZKA ENJOYED her time at home taking care of their children

"After working for a while, it was nice to stay home. And that was a full-time job."

She's glad that her sons and daughters are doing well.

"They're all healthy, they're all doing well."

Single mothers today have a particularly tough time taking care of their families, Prochazka has found

"I see that all the time. It's hard on them. Unless they have some kind of specialized background, they just have a tough time."

In years gone by, people didn't leave relationships as they do now, she said. Instead, they were trained to overcome adversity and to stay together.

"It's easier for them to get out. I guess, and it's more acceptable."

other family members; spouses and children need to learn to do things for themselves.

ALTHOUGH TAKING care of children is an important role, mothers shouldn't ignore their own needs, Darlington said. Other activities such as classes, volunteer work or a job, are also important ones.

Part-time jobs or those with flexible hours are an option for some working mothers, she said. For others, choosing a job that's close to home is a big help.

"Those things are possible if you look for them." Some fields are working parents the opportunity to take care of their children.

Darlington's encouraged to see more flexible work arrangements being made. Such arrangements help men and women take care of their children.

"And I really applaud that. I'm seeing a revolution in that and I think that's very needed."

Darlington's oldest daughter just graduated from the University of Michigan with a bachelor's degree in art history and Renaissance and medieval history. Her younger daughter's just finished up at the Ross Business Institute in Dear-and support, that's not an easy home this year for a visiting forrole."

Some people tend to belittle motherhood these days.

"That's a very sad commentary on our culture." Taking care of children is an important job, Darlington said.

"They're our future and they're the most important resource we have. I think being a mom is probably the most challenging role there is, but it's also very rewarding."

Some of the clients Darlington works with ask her if it's a good idea to have children.

"I guess my response to them is 'Do you want to grow as a person?" "

Using a personal computer to both write and play music will be the topic of a seminar planned for Saturday, May 16, at Arnoldt Williams Music in Canton.

Musician John Cascella, keyboard player for John Cougar Mellencamp, will be the featured speaker. The seminar is for musicians, composers, music instructors and others interested in keeping up with the latest music and computer technology.

Cascella will explain how comput-ers can help both the performer and composer with programs that write and remember music. He will also demonstrate the uses and versatility of a computer in creating sounds and playing music during a perform-

moral perspectives

We should focus on what matters

LAST WEEK found former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado on the front pages of the nation's newspapers. At the same time Bishop Thomas Gumbleton of Detroit received exactly 12 lines of print in his hometown newspaper. Mr. Hart was given headline status for what he may or may not have done with a model. The story on the bishop concerned his arrest along with nearly 100 people, one of whom was another bishop from Hart's home state of Colorado.

Although the two stories have little in common, together they do pose some questions about our priority of both interest and attention. The reporting on Mr. Hart focused on the bedroom and thus received a Jim Bakker kind of attention.

The behavior which led to the arrest of Bishop Gumb!eton was never in doubt. It did not involve eavesdropping and required no investigation. The out-in-the-open fact was that he along with 90-some others did knowingly and willfully trespass on government property. Their action was to bring attention to our ever-escalating arms race and our activity in Central America.

THIS ACTION in the Nevada desert, in fact, received very little attention. Rather the national focus was on Hart's townhouse. But that is the way it is with life.

We only have so much attention to give. We cannot put our priorities everywhere. Rather we have to make choices. A parent who notices one child writing on the wall with crayon at the same time another is running out in front of a truck has choice to make. For most, the right choice in such an instance is some what automatic.

Unfortunately societal choices and not always as automatically healthy.

The German people chose to focu on the order in their country while Hitler put together his machine destruction. In the movie "Jaws," the local government chose to focus on the summer economy rather than the shark. All too often what may otherwise have been worthy of atten tion becomes a smokescreen for something far more important.

I OFTEN WONDER what would happen for our world if people were to get as upset over the obscenity o an arms race as they do over the es tablishment of a massage parlor.

Where would we be if as much me dia focus were to be given to the ac tions of those putting their bodies of the line to warn us as it is on the actions of others and what they may be doing with bodies in a bedroom.

It is not a matter of condoning one kind of action in order to con another. But it is a matter of setting our priorities. Perhaps the result d an arms race does not seem as inminent as a truck coming down on a child. But neither is it remote enough for us to waste so much time on bedroom antics that what really matters gets lost on page six of both our newspapers and our concern.

INSERTS Valassis reigns as national coupon king

By Carolyn Carman special writer

Since they were introduced to households in the late 1800s, coupons have become part of the American shopping ritual. So much so that about 80 percent of all U.S. households now use them.

Valassis Inserts, the low-profile company that publishes the color coupon booklets found in Sunday newspapers, is the largest producer of coupon inserts in the country.

With sales last year of about $320 million, Valassis penetrates about 55 percent of all U.S. households.

"We are in the business of promoting other people's products," said David A. Brandon, executive vice president and chief operating officer of Valassis. "Our product goes into about 48.5 million households just about every week of the year which is a household penetration unlike most any other product you can think of in the U.S."

But the name of the company is in four-point type on the spine of the book because "we are too busy promoting General Foods, Proctor & Gamble and other companies to really hype the fact that it is us," he added.

THE COMPANY was founded in 1972 by George F. Valassis. An American success story, Valassis began doing business from his Farmington Hills home on a shoestring budget Farmington Hills home on a shoestring budget. In early 1986, Valassis was the leader among companies producing coupon inserts with a market share of 40 percent. Valassis purchased a major competitor and added another 10 percent to its market share.

The company now operates the nation's largest program for black and white co-op couponing in weekday papers along with occupying the top position in color insert coupons. In December 1986, Valassis was purchased

In December 1986, Valassis was purchased by Australian Kerry Packer, owner of Consolidated Press Holdings, a major media coglomerate based in Sydney. CPH is a diversified international company with yearly revenues in excess of $600 million.

Brandon says average, annual compounded growth for Valassis has been about 35 percent over the last 10 years. Sales for 1985 were about $260 million and for 1984 $204 million. Employee ranks have been growing at a 20 percent clip annually, Brandon said. The company employs more than 550 people in its 225,000-square-foot Livionia warehouse and Farmington Hills offices in addition to another 500 employees nationwide.

Plans are under way to hire about 100 people for the Livonia facility at all levels of employment, including manufacturing, secretarial, supervisory and administrative personnel.

"We are growing tremendously as a company in terms of what we do," Brandon said. "We represent our own products to our customers so we do not use brokers or agencies to sell space in our publication.

"We are definitely a very sales-driven organization with all of our own sales people. We have our own marketing department that basically makes us self-sufficient in marketing our own products."

Valassis does its own printing and owns millions of dollars in printing equipment across the country. Equipment is state of the art; everything is computerized from scheduling of presses and publication layout to managing the sales force.

Projections call for 40 percent growth over lart year.

THE LIVONIA WAREHOUSE, one of three major production plants, supplies about onethird of the country with inserts. Other production centers are in Wichita, Kan., and Durham, N.C.

Valassis offices occupy 80,000 square feet of space in West Hills Office Park on 12 Mile in Farmington Hills. Construction of two buildings totaling 50,000 square feet is under way next to the Livonia warehouse. The Farmington Hills work force will move to Livonia in the fall.

Brandon says the company is proud of its Michigan roots and location even though there has been pressure occasionally to move to where its competitors are — New York City.

"We're basically in the sales, promotion, advertising business," he said. "Typically, companies in our kind of business are in New York. Michigan is really important to us so we have made a commitment to stay here."

Valassis also has sales offices in Connecticut, Nev York, Atlanta, Chicago, Minneapolis and Los Angeles. "We are everywhere now with significant human resources at our disposal," Brandon Detroit is still the motor city.

And despite talk of diversifying the state economy, automobile-related manufacturing is the name of the business game in Michigan.

That was the message delivered by Peter Brown, editor of Crain's Detroit Business, speaking at a West Surburban Council of Chambers luncheon Tuesday at LeRight's in Westland. The council represents chambers from Farmington, Westland, Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Redford and Garden City, among others.

"When the Japanese companies started to pick up a larger market share of the American automobile industry, people spotted a trend and projected it — as always — as forever," Brown said. "But The American automobile industry still makes a lot of cars, and they still make a lot of them in Detroit."

Going back to 1954, "the percentage of American automobiles made in Michigan never dropped below 29 percent. The highest percentage has been 40 percent and that's now."

Brown described a meeting he had with Doug Ross when Ross became state commerce director. The question everyone was asking was what Ross was going to do to diversify the state economy.

Ross proposed a scenario in which Michigan was a professional basketball team and had the first pice in the NBA draft.

What industry would you pick to rebuild, to diversify an economy, Ross asked Brown.

"Then he sat back and looked kind of smug with himself. He knew what the answer was going to be," Brown said. "'It's not going to be pear canning. It's going to be the automobile industry,'" Ross said. "'It's the industry that is so big that it is practically diversified within itself.'"

ALTHOUGH HEAVY manufacturing is declining in the state, the picture is not as glum as some make it out to be.

"Manufacturing employment nationally was down in every sector last year. But in Michigan employment was down to a lesser extent, or in the case of electrical machinery manufacturing, it was actually up."

Brown quoted figures that show that for every Toyota, Nissan or Saturn plant that hired cheap, non-union labor in thd South, Detroit's Big Three has opened or refurbished four manufacturing plants. The new automated factories have shaved production costs so that direct labor accounts for only 15 percent of the cost of the product, making it less attractive for companies to move for the sole purpose of hiring cheap labor.

Brown added that the reai estate boom continues to be strong but is not spread throughout the region. Hot spots are north along I-75, the I-275 corridor and around Metropolitan Airport.

He also described the comeback downtown Detroit appears to be making but cautioned that the area, while stronger, is not immune from economic ups and downs.

"We're still the motor city. Michigan is still the automotive state. We'll continue to suffer when the next recession comes — sooner or later. The local economy is a little sounder, a little more resistant to the bad news that always seems to clobber us. So even if the national economy sputters along, the whole Detroit area keeps getting stronger — and that's what I call the miracle."

PIC names interim director

IN 1996, the law stated that to deduct more than $10,000 a year in alimony, the payer had to continue alimony payments for at least six years. The recipient usually insisted is receiving the entire actilement in one hump sum, while the payer rought to stretch the payments to six years in order to make the payments and deductible.

The new tax law provides a relief: Alimony payments of more than $15,000 are deductible if they are made for at least three years. There is no charge, however, in the four related concepts concerning the deduc-tibility claim.

· Whoever pays the alimony gets to deduct it.

• Alimony payments up to the specified limit (now $15,000) are always deductible, no matter how soon the payments stop.

· A lump sum payment is not de-

Another complication arises when a settlement is front-loaded. For ina settlement is ront-loaded. For in-stance, if the plan calls for a pay-ment of $200,000 by the husband, and he pays $125,000 up front, the IRS might treat it as a property set-tlement and deny him a deduction. Imagination can produce free publicity for business Promotion is a key activity for any small business venture. The unfortunate reality is that many entrepreneurs are unclear as to what promotional activities are available to them as small business owners/ operators.

One major misconception is that promotion primarily involves advertising. As a result, many entrepreneurs spend large sums to ada vertise with few or no results.

On the other hand, there are those business owners who do little or nothing to promote their firm because they are unable to "afford" advertising.

This week's column discusses publicity, an alternative form of promotion available to the entrepreneur interested in getting the most out of his or her promotional dollar. Publicity is one of the most under-utilized forms of promotion among the small business community.

Publicity is the means of drawing attention to your business through media sources that reach current or potential customers. And perhaps hest of all. it's free. Here are a few examples of how publicity works.

SWEET MEMORIES, a California candy store, hosted a "Sweet Memories Pig Out," which involved 20 people selected to "pig out" during the shop's grand opening. Each guest paid $15; nearly 500 people signed up even though the owner's total prepromotional activity consisted of a small ad in the Los Angeles Times and a sign in the store. The list was pared to 20 with a drawing because that's as many as would fit inside the 1,000-square-foot store

"It generated tremendous publicity for the store," the owner said. "After all the press coverage I got, I had people coming in from all over the country. In fact, it went so well I'm definitely planning on having another one."

Another publicity gimmick in-volved the "Edible Chair" contest. It was sponsored by the Pacific Sci-ence Center in Seattle to highlight an exhibition of international awardwinning chair designs during the 1962 World's Fair. Prizes were awarded for the most unusual, most nutritious and most realistic chairs.

THE RULES were simple: 90 percent of an entry had to be edible and could be made of any lood except meat or ice. The publicity afforded this type of contest would be phenomenal for the savvy furniture or bakery retailer interested in sponsoring this type of event.

Next week we will continue the discussion on publicity as a powerful promotional tool available to small husiness

'Working Girls' Are their lives seamy?

By Dan Greenberg special writer

ZZIE BORDEN came to town last week. Instead of an ax, she's giving conventional morality 40 whacks with her latest motion picture, "Working Girls" - one day in the life of an unconventional prostitute.

When she graduated from Bir-mingham's Groves High School in 1967, her name was Linda Borden. She went east to Wellesley College where she was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate. Then on to Queens College and a master of fine arts in painting.

Her career as a painter and critic in New York was difficult, she relates, "because an awkward tension developed. As I tried to criticize others, I became too critical of my own painting." Her critiques appeared in Art Form and The Village Voice.

"I became politicized by feminism and greatly influenced by the films of Godard" (the French New Wave filmmaker whose recent "Hail Mary" was picketed as sacrilegious).

ALTHOUGH SHE characterizes her earlier years as "goody-goody," she's come a long way to the Marxist-feminist viewpoint of "Working Girls" — "a critique of capitalism."

Her comments last week, while taping OCC-TV's "Arts in Review," reveal she's also come a long way from her Birmingham background. The program will be cablecast throughout Oakland County the week of May 18.

"Working -Girls" (reviewed unfavorably by this writer in Monday's editions of the Observer & Eccentric) presents a very different viewpoint of prostitution, unconventional even to the mainstream feminist movement.

Among other typical comments, Borden maintains there are a large number of middle-class women who are prostituting themselves in hygienic scenarios, which they control. Many of these girls are married and want extra money for expenses, or are college students working their way through school, or artists who want to have free time left for their artwork.

Lizzie Borden, formerly Linda Borden of Birmingham, is coproducer, co-writer and director of the newly released film "Working Girls." The movie, about an unconventional prostitute, is playing an exclusive engagement at the AMC Maple 3 in Bloomfield Township.

hattan and interviewed many prostitutes who, she claims, "manage their own lives. They don't fit the usual film stereotype of abused, addicted women tormented by pimps and chased by psychopaths.'

SHE CITES Jane Fonda in "Klute" as a traditional film prostitute redeemed by a stereotypical male hero who saves her from the psychopath. Borden comments, "Contemporary 'working girls' are in charge and have power over their customers. They are not abused or debased."

Countering the critique that women who sell their bodies are demeaned, Borden asks, "If a woman has chosen to do it, why should we judge her?"

In rapid-fire delivery, Borden2insists that these women are "gaining power instead of being victimized by prostitution" and that "For some women, the experience clears ³up their confusion about sexuality.

"Women should never have to have sexual relations except for the reason of passion," she declares. Summing up Borden's views: Prostiists" will be held during Michigan Week is just a coincidence in timing, said Paul E. Gainor, a member of the board of the Forum Foundation, which is sponsoring the event.

When asked about the "Salute," he said the foundation gives four benefits a year throughout metropolitan Detroit. This will be the first one held in Birmingham - on Sunday, May 17, which happens to be the start of Michigan Week.

Learning that the event would kick off Michigan Week, he told this reporter it was "serendipity." The lucky occurrence represents a lot of effort on the part of the backers, who have come up with some of the biggest names on the Detroit-area entertainment scene.

Marvin P. Marks, foundation president, met vocalist Kate Patterson at PHIL MARCUS Esser of Livonia, who has been called a "modern minstrel," and is also a producer, will be one of the stars, as will chanteuse Shari Nichols, who has performed in Esser's shows and at the Attic Theatre and the Caucus Club.

Other entertainment in the show, a cabaret showcase, includes scenes from Annette Madias' Ann Arbor production of "The Normal Heart." comedian-actor Scott McQue, mimes Joe Vitale and Daniel Lightcap, singer Bobbie Andrews, an instrumental classical trio, and improvisational Borden believes there is no qualitative difference between "renting" one's mind in office work and one's body in prostitution or, as it is now preferably termed, in "working" the word being pronounced with an arch tone and an all-knowing vocal emphasis.

During preproduction preparation

Borden further states, "They have made an economic decision to 'work.' Instead of coming home so exhausted from a day in the office that all they can do is watch television, they have time and energy for what they want to do with their lives."

tution is acceptable as an economic decision, the prostitute's choice is not for others to judge and women are not debased by the process since they are exploiting the men. That is Borden's Marxist-feminist theory as displayed in "Working Girls."

Pinal production this season for the Plymouth Theatre Guild is Herb Gardner's humorous little comedy, "A Thousand Clowns." Director Ronald Reid's cast of-ten seem to be working very hard trying to be funny. The actors might better be served if they let the funny situations develop more the funny situations develop more naturally.

Here's the setup. A TV comedy writer is guardian for his 12-yearold nephew. Simple enough.

But suppose our writer is unemployed (he's tired of writing drivel för kids' shows), is a bachelor and something of a nonconformist. And suppose our youngster is rather precocious. And finally, suppose a social welfare team shows up to investigate the uncle's fitness to be a guardian. They've heard rumors that he doesn't provide the proper home for a child.

And what if our writer has a romantic interlude with the female social worker. Well, you get the idea. It's a daffy situation.

David Edmunds is very good as Leo Herman, who is host of a kid-dies' TV show, "Chuckles the Chip-munk." Here's hoping he is an even bigger buffoon the next time he tries out new material on Nicky.

Special kudos to whomever gathers all of the junk for the stage. The clothes, hats, chairs, furniture, papers and assorted odds and ends looked as if they flew in on the winds of a tornado. A very effective opening.

We're a New York Stock Exchange company (GDV) and all of our stockholders care.

They care for the same reasons anyone who's interested in Florida sunshine should care.

Because that's what we sell-Florida sunshine. And we've been successfully improving our product for 31 years - making it more attainable, more affordable and more enjoyable. In fact, we are six different entities accomplishing that one single purpose.

Our development division packages our sunshine in complete communities and vacation resorts. Our marketing division brings our sunshine to the freezing north, in the form of homes, homesites and vacations. Our time-share company plans, manages and sells unique vacation experiences. Our finance company makes it easier to buy, mortgage and insure our homes. Our. general real estate company manages property and makes home ownership possible well before moving to Florida. And our own utility company provides quality water and sewer service in all of our nine communities.

We offer fabulous Florida vacation opportunities near Disney World, and people who care about sun, fun and Mickey care.

Our newest offering of Florida sunshine for sale comes from our recent purchase of Vistana, one of the nation's finest time-share resort companies.

It allows us to offer tens of thousands of affordable fun-inthe sun vacations to the millions of people who flock to Disney World, Epcot and all the other attractions in the Orlando area. The project, which is the first of many we intend developing, is a beautiful 111-acre resort property near the Magic Kingdom. It includes 458 vacation villas and townhouses: 358 of them available on a weekly ownership basis, and 100 operated as a resort hotel accommodating guests on a daily basis. With our world-wide sales network and development capabilities, and Vistana's time-share expertise, we're looking forward to a sunny future in the growing vacation market.

) P

Keeping the promise of Florida for more than 30 years.

We're helping almost 600,000 people save for their sunny days in Florida, and they care.

Since childhood, everyone's been taught to save for a rainy day. We offer a program to help people save for their sunny days instead.

We do it by offering homesites scheduled for development within 10 years - on easy installment terms. So they can build up equity and possible appreciation which they can trade toward the down payment on a General Development single-family home, garden apartment, villa or townhouse and move in with substantially less outlay of money.

Or if they decide to rent their property, our property management company will assist them.

We're continually building better lives for almost 200,000 people who live in our sunshine, and they care.

So far, we've built 35,000 Florida homes and expect to build (and finance and provide utilities for) tens of thousands more as Florida grows.

But more important is the life we're building. To date, we've spent over $600 million making our sunshine better. Constructing uncongested roads; building country clubs, beach clubs, community centers, parks, marinas, shopping centers; donating land and assistance for uncrowded schools, hospitals, houses of worship, city centers and services, even to protect wildlife with miles of preserves. (Our creature comforts aren't only for people.) You might say we want to keep that sunshine we're selling warm and bright and inviting-not just for today, but for all the tomorrows to come.

By the time Michigan became a state, in January 1837, the Land of Big Waters, and especially the Straits of Mackinac that separate Part 1 Lake Michigan and Lake Huron, of a series had many stories to tell: about missions built under the flag of New France, wars fought between the French and British forces, Indian massacres at Fort Michilimackinac, on the northern tip of the Lower Peninsula. The British had built a new fort across the straits on Mackinac Island, and John Jacob Astor's American Fur Company had become an island neighbor.

collonaded splendor amid 500 acres of lawns and woodlands overlooking the sea. The Grand Hotel celebrates its 100th birthday this year, along with the sesquicentennial of Michigan, so there will be a lot of fireworks in the sky above the Straits of Mackinac in 1987. The hotel's centennial is July 10, but birthday events go on all year.

When you leave your car behind and take the 30-minute ferry ride to Mackinac Island from either Mackinaw City, in the Lower Peninsula, or St. Ignace, in the Upper Peninsula, you will see things those early travelers didn't see. Freighters glide by on their way to Detroit and Chicago. Pleasure boats make white shapes against the water. What the fur traders would notice most, however, is the five-mile-long Mackinac Bridge, Locals argue about whether the porch is 660 or 880 feet long, but nobody accepts anyone else's measurement.

The white clapboard building is familiar to moviegoers; the last fea-ture film made there was "Somewhere in Time," released in 1980, with Christopher 'Superman' Reeves. Now, as at the turn of the century, geraniums spill over the railings, decorate the grand lobby and bloom on the drapes and bed-spreads of many of the 286 rooms.

Meath's goal lifts Canton

Shannon Meath's goal in sudden-death overtime pulled Plymouth Canton through with a hard-earned, 1-0 victory Monday in the first round of the girls district soccer tournament.

The Chiefs and Ann Arbor Pioneer played to a scoreless tie for 103 minutes before Meath put an end to the long, exhausting contest at Centennial Educational Park.

If the Canton players believe they should have won the game in regulation, no one could argue with them, considering the huge difference in shots on goal.

The Chiefs got the ball in close enough to make 31 attempts at the Pioneer goal, whereas the losers had only five. The difference was more pronounced in the second half when Canton outshot the Pioneers 22-0.

"OTHER THAN THE score, the second half was very lopsided," Canton coach Don Smith said.

'We came out sorta slow (in the first half) and just played back and forth, with nobody doing very much. 'We knew we had to get after them pretty soon or we wouldn't be going on much further," he added.

Smith agreed that, with Canton having so many more scoring opportunities, it would have been terribly disappointing for the Chiefs not to have won.

"We would have felt very, very bad," he said. "But sometimes it happens like that, and your hard work goes for nothing.'

That was far from being the case, however, thanks to Meath, who took a pass from Renee Rice to score the game's only goal, and Canton's stubborn defense. The Chiefs shut down

Salem takes WLAA title

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

Plymouth Salem coach Ken Johnson's confidence in his girls soccer team was rewarded Monday.

Johnson predicted the Rocks would win the Western Lakes Activities Association championship, and his players backed up his preseason boast with a 3-1, title-clinching victory over Farmington.

In a dramatic finish to the WLAA's hotly contested race, the remaining contenders met to decide the issue in head-to-head competition at Centennial Educational Park. Freshman Michelle Minton scored twice, and sophomore Jill Estey assisted on all three goals to lead Salem to its first championship in seven years of competing in the sport. "We've worked for it," said Johnson, recalling the school board's decision to institute girls soccer in 1981. "This gives us a little bit of respect. The girls have finally made their mark, like winning a basketball or football championship."

NOT ONLY have the Rocks gained credibility in their own community, but Johnson believes they have emerged from the shadow of other area soccer powers as well.

"We've been ranked in the top 10 (in the state) every year, but we've always been ranked behind (Livonia) Churchill and Stevenson," Johnson said.

"I had the feeling we were going to win it this year. I knew we were going to have a good team with the extra good ones coming in."

The "extra good ones" were the incoming freshmen players like Minton and Jennifer Marshall who complemented the team's veterans, provided depth and helped the Rocks to an 11-1-2 league record.

soccer

Farmington, with a makeup game against Livonia Franklin remaining on the regular-season schedule, is 8-2-3 in the WLAA.

"I think Ken has a super team, and they outhustled us in the second half," Farmington coach Ed Bartram said.

We were a little bit off tonight. We should have gone after them a little faster. If we had, it might have been different, but they deserved the game.

"We were just a little slower to the ball than his team, and that sometimes makes a difference." he added.

A DOMINANT trend in the second half was Salem's ability to keep the action centered in Farmington's end of the field, thus keeping the pressure on the Falcon defense.

Farmington goalie Cindy Rieden came up with several excellent saves to preserve a 1-1 halftime tie, but the Rocks capitalized on a corner kick early in the second half to take a one-goal edge.

Estey delivered the ball to midfield, and Minton made a point-blank kick through a congested gathering in front of the Farmington goal.

The Rocks continued to press the action into Farmington's end, but the Falcons held steady until Salem finally broke the game open with a late goal.

Estey fooled a Farmington defender into thinking she was going to kick the ball toward midfield. Instead, she brought the ball behind

Harrison comes up with 2nd diamond victory over Canton

(P,C)1D

RANDY BORST/staff photographer Mike LaSota rounds the bases after hitting a home

Farmington Harrison struck again Monday when the Hawks knocked off division-leading Plymouth Canton 10-6 in Western Lakes Activities Association baseball.

Harrison, which took a 1-0 victory from the Chiefs earlier in the season, improved to 4-3 in the Western Divi-sion of the WLAA. Canton slipped to 5-2 in the division and 9-4 overall.

Sam Rineer's bases-loaded, threerun double proved to be the Hawks' game-winning hit, putting Harrison on top 8-2 in the fourth inning.

A wild pitch scored Harrison's Leo Devine in the first inning, but Canton came back to take its only lead with two runs in the bottom of the inning.

MIKE LASOTA OPENED the Chiefs' half of the first with a solo homer, and Chris Rheault made it 2-1 when Ron Balog's base hit bounded away from the left fielder.

The Hawks, however, scored the next seven runs to move safely in front.

Harrison tied the score in the second when Jeff Skinner scored on a balk and took the lead on Devine's RBI single.

In the fourth inning, Devine and Todd Kenyon walked, and Mark Murray, who hit a leadoff homer the previous inning, singled to load the bases and set the stage for Rineer's double.

baseball

Canton's four-run rally in the fifth inning cut Harrison's lead to 9-6. La-Sota doubled and scored on two wild pitches, Joel Riggs ripped a two-run triple and Vince Fox added an RBI single.

RIGGS' THREE-BASE hit chased Jason Hicks from the mound, but Hicks left with Harrison ahead and earned the victory. In 41/2 innings, he struck out six and walked no one.

Derek Darkowski was the loser for Canton. Chris Kennedy and Steve Waite made mound appearances for the Chiefs, also.

Harrison's Devine was three-forfour, scored two runs and had two RBI, Murray was two-for-five and Skinner had two RBI.

Fox and LaSota batted three-forfour for Canton, Tony Boucher had a pair of doubles in four plate appearances and Balog had two singles in as many trips.

A PLYMOUTH HIGH SCHOOL FLASHBACK

Four years ago this week, Plymouth Canton's softball team solldified their claim to the Western Lakes Activities Association overall championship by railying for 11 runs in the 6th inning, erasing a 7-1 Livonia Churchill lead enroute to a 12-8 victory at Canton. Key hits for the Chiefs included a run scoring double by Missy Alken, a two run single by Kathy Young, RBI singles by Sue Gerke and Marie Krashovetz and a two run double by Kris Harrison.

Rocks thump baseball foes

Plymouth Salem continued its tor--rid hitting streak Monday, whipping Farmington 16-6 in Western Lakes Activities Association baseball.

Jerry Sumner had three of the 'Rocks' 15 hits in four trips to the plate, and Tim Dowd, who was two-- for-four, belted a three-run homer to give Salem a 9-2 lead in the third inning.

With four RBI in the game, Dowd Taised his team-leading, 16-game to-"tal to 26. His other hit was a double. Coach John Gravlin knew junior Todd Marion, the winning pitcher, would do well on the mound, but his hitting has been a pleasant surprise, Gravlin said.

MARION HELPED his own cause with a two-run, first-inning homer and a double while going two-forfour. He has hit four home runs this 888800.

baseball

scoring as many runs as we are," said Gravlin, whose team defeated Northville 14-3 and 11-8 Friday. We've had some pretty large outputs, and offense was a concern coming in.

"I'm not sure we've faced the real tough pitching yet," he added, "and we've got a two-week stretch coming up when we will face that pitching."

Marion, 4-1, worked the first four innings against Farmington, striking out six and walking one. The Falcons scored five runs, three earned, and had five of their six hits off Marton. In the first game with Northville, Salem pitcher Fidel Cashero had a no-hitter going for the first 5% inn-"It's a surprise to me that we're ings. Eventually, he gave up two hits, no runs, struck out 13 and walked three.

CASHERO, 4-0, has now struck out 41 opposing batters in 20 innings this spring.

Tom Henig paced the rout by going four-for-four with the bat. He had two doubles, a pair of singles and two RBI.

Dale DeYoung crushed a three-run homer to get the Rocks off to a fast start in the first inning, and Marion added a two-run shot.

It was a different story in the nightcap as Salem had to rally from a 6-0 deficit after two innings.

The Rocks, however, scored the next 11 runs and never looked back. Chris Michalek's two-run double tied the score, and Chris Adams singled home the tie-breaking run.

"Estey then punched the ball across the front of the goal, and Minton came up from the right side to drive it into the Falcon not and score her 20th goal.

"That broke them; that was the turning point," Johnson said. "When it was 2-1, they could still get back in it; when it was 3-1, that was good coverage for us."

- The Recks scored again a short time later, but Estey's goal on a Beader play — the result of more precision passing — was disal-lowed because of an offsides penal-

soccer

"THAT WAS beautiful, passing teamwork," Johnson said. "We practice a lot of passing drills — a lot of two-on-two, three-on-three in small areas so we can control the ball and pass it quickly."

Estey, however, had already be-come Salem's single-season scoring leader. With two goals Saturday in a 13-0 win over Walled Lake Central, she increased her 1987 total to 26, surpassing her freshman total of 24. With her three assists Mon-

The Falcons were first on the scoreboard Monday when fresh-man Carrie Maier extended her team-leading, goals-scored total to 27 midway in the first half.

But Johnson assigned Tracy Kra-jewski to shadow Maler on defense, and Johnson attributed the victory in large part to Krajewski holding the Farmington star scoreless the rest of the game.

Salem tied the score with Minton's first goal, and the Rocks' defense took over until the offense broke the game open in the second half.

Plymouth Salem girls basketball star Dens Head has been selected to compete for the North squad in the National Sports Pestival July 17-36 in Chapel Hill, N.C. The 5-foot-10% Head, who will return to Salem for her senior year in September, was chosen from among a group of 190 players who were invited to a tryout camp May 1-3 in Champaign, III. Twenty-four players were selected, with one 12-play-er team traveling to China and another representing the 12-state North region in the national games. Purthermore, Head was one of only two high school players who survived the cuts. She will be joined on the North team by Daedra Charles, a senior at Detroit De-Porres who has signed to play with the University of Tennessee.

"AT FIRST, IT didn't hit me that I had made the team and was actually going," Head said. "But, as time went on, I got more excited.

"It's a great opportunity to go down there and compete against college players and experience the game at a different level."

Head, who averaged 23 points and 11 rebounds for the Rocks last season, was eligible only for the Sports Festi-val team since only incoming college freshmen or re-turning sophomores could be considered for the team going to China.

Former All-Staters Franthea Price (River Rouge), Tonya Edwards (Flint Northwestern) and Nikita Lowry (Detroit Cass Tech) will represent Michigan on the touring team.

With so many good players competing for a place on one of two teams, Head also was prepared for the mental aspect of the tryouts as well as the need to display her physical talent.

"AS FAR AS the level of competition, I can't say it was a surprise, but I can say it was all I expected it to be," she said.

"Some (players) seemed to be talented enough but froze when it came time to play. You had to expect the unexpected.

"Yos couldn't worry about mistakes," she added. You just had to play through it. You couldn't get down Salem girls basketball coach Fred Thomann was sed to see Head realize a goal by making such a estigious team. "It's a credit for her, because that's what she wants, he said. "It's going to help her make the adjustment from high school to college when the time comes, b cause she'll have played against a lot of those players."

PLAYING IN AN event that will attract national exposure is apt to increase the interest college recruiters have already shown in Head. "I'm sure she's caught the attention of a lot of coaches," Thomann said, "but I think the schools who did their homework early are the ones she'll be considering." Being selected for the North team is an indication of Head's drive to succeed in the sport, he added.

"She's not going to be satisfied until she gets what she wants out of basketball," Thomann said. "Her goals are to be a top-recruited player, be in contention for the Miss Basketball Award and to have her education paid for."

Head's selection to the North team is yet another pos-itive thing to happen to Salem basketball in the last year, Thomann said, citing the Rocks' appearance in the Class A semifinals last December and the awarding of full scholarships to seniors Jessica Handley (Saginaw Valley) and Kristen Hostynski (Western Michigan).

WITH HEAD HAVING a year of eligibility remaining, the Rocks expect to have another team capable of challenging for state honors next fall.

Jill Estey, who will play on a 16-and-under AAU team in Mexico this summer, will be the floor leader again, and Thomann believes seniors-to-be Keri McBride, Barb King and Stacey Sovine have college potential, too.

"(Head) is the cornerstone and a great talent, but we have some others who are very talented in their own right," he said.

The red band tolerates the same water temperatures as the small-mouth bass. The red band tolerates these warmer water temperatures, which exist in most of the rivers and streams in southern Michigan.

been planted in streams in Oakland County, Ingham County and Branch County. The DNR will be researching the fish's adaptation through surveys and angler information.

KEEP ASKING MYSELF, "How does she do it?" But maybe that is what separates Sheila Taormina from the rest of the area's athletes. What is a typical day for the senior at Stevenson High School in Livonia?

Sunday, as the Lord intended it, is Sheila's day of rest. But on Monday, she starts off her week with swim practice, 5:45 to 7 a.m.: school, 7:45 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.; track practice, 2:30-4 p.m.; and swim practice, 7-9:30 p.m.

She goes through that kind of rigorous schedule five to six days a week.

When does she have time to study?

Somehow she does it. Taormina is one of the top students in her class.

It was only in December that Taormina set two individual records at the state Class A girls over and now she is planning for the future.

IT DOESN'T TAKE much to get Taormina in the water to train, but the job of picking the right college turned out to be quite an exercise.

In April, Taormina decided to cast her lot with the University of Georgia, a school with a national reputation intent on winning the NCAA's. (This season the Bulldogs were ranked fourth and finished sixth.)

Taormina said Georgia coach Jack Baurle often gave her the cold shoulder.

"He told me I was one of his top recruits, but he seemed really laid back and not interested at times." she recalls ami coach Jack Nelson, whose team is on the fringe of the top 20 nationally, would have given his right arm for Taormina. He coached Sheila last summer in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"I never thought I would have to tell the Miami coach no," Taormina said. "That was one of the hardest things I've ever had to do."

What in the world put Georgia on her mind?

"I met a girl who introduced me to the coach (Baurle) and I arranged for a visit," Taormina said. "I heard a lot of things, but once I got there it was a big surprise. The campus was pretty, and I knew it was for me."

SHEILA'S MOTHER talked about her staying close to home, maybe swimming for the University Michigan.

"I wanted to get away," Sheila said. "I wanted to find a different atmosphere. I asked my dad, my mom, my coach and my brother, but they all said it was my own decision.'

This spring, Taormina competed in the Senior Nationals in Orlando, Fla., and came up with a 14th-place finish in the 400 individual medley. She added few 10ths in the 200 IM and was disqualified in the 100 butterfly.

Taormina gave herself mixed re-views at the Seniors.

She missed qualifying for the Olympic Trials by .04 second in the 400 IM, but will have many more opportunities to qualify before next year.

By going to Georgia, Taormina will be swimming with some of the country's best and will be pushed like never before.

"The workouts will be a lot different and I'll be spending more time," she said. "Their workouts are a lot more intense. The interval training is harder.

"BEFORE IT WAS FUN, but

It seems Taormina, who has been invited to compete this sum-mer at the U.S. Olympic Sports Festival in Chapel Hill, N.C., is not content with being just a state chample

At the Senior Nationals, Taormina plays second fiddle to 15-yearold sensations like Janet Evans, the Californian who reigns in the 400

IM, "She's smaller than me," said the 5-foot-3 Taormina of Evans. "She's only 90 pounds and cut like this (drawing both hands in a tight, parallel motion). She's so fast. It looks like a motor turning in the water. But being short, she keeps me going."

Jean and George Bickelmann, co-chairmen of the Village Antiques Show, May 15-17, share their interest in antiques with friends throughout the country. Behind them is an English oak dresser from the 18th century.

Antiques Quest keeps them on the go

By Corinne Abett staff writer

Few people are better qualified to speak on the lure of antiques than Jean and George Bickelmann. Not only are they chairpersons of the Village Antiques Show May 15-17 at Henry Ford Museum with Mr. and We're an excellent combination." he said. "We work well together. Jean has the eye. It's a born thing. Mine is an acquired knowledge."

He said he's jealous of people like that, "I believe a good eye is born," he said. "There are some people who just seem to gravitate toward the very best."

Bickelmann, who opened his first antique shop in 1969 and was a deal-er in Birmingham for many years, said, "There's still a lot of good things out there. They come for a price . . . but good has nowhere to go but up. The best is expensive, but it isn't really expensive, " he said citing "Sunflowers," the Van Gogh

GREAT COVERUP

Among the prized Michigan quilts which will be on exhibit at "Quilts: An American Romance" now on through Sunday at the Somerset Mail, are the Tracy Miller family quilt, made by Delphine Paulus Miller in Detroit in the 1920s. Her grandparents, Julie and Antoine Manseau, were the first white settiers in Leland.

The exhibit and sale, "Quilts: An American Romance," now under way through Saturday at Somerset Mall in Troy, will emcompass a variety of activities. There will be an exhibition of 25 antique and contemporary Michigan quilts in celebration of the Michigan Sesquicentennial. In addition to the 40 dealers and venders with supplies and materials for quilters and fabric craftsmen, there will be ongoing quilting and rug weaving demonstrations.

For many the workshops and lectures (courtesy of Bonwit Teller) are the highlight of the event.

The schedule is as follows: FRIDAY, MAY 15

The Dearborn Youth Symphony will play its final concert of the season at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Drome Room of the Dearborn Civic Center, 1508 Michigan Avenue at Greenfield. The concert is dedicated to teachers in general and to music and art teachers in particular. Tickets are $3 for adults and $2 for students and will be available at the door.

ART IN THE PARK

Kicking off the annual Michigan Week celebration will be the Birmingham Art Fair to be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday in Shain Park. This year's fair will host over 140 ex-hibitors, all juried to insure a selection of high quality art and crafts. To whet and please the appetite, 11 food booths will provide refreshments.

Mrs. Charles E. Randau, they are enthusiastic witnesses to the joys of collecting.

"She's the decorator. I'm the certifier. I'm the money spender," he said with a smile, explaining that as they add to their collection, his wife rearranges what they already have to make a place to showcase the new piece.

And while they may be at an age (they've been married 50 years) when a lot of folks think about reducing the number of their possessions, the Bickelmanns say they've never stopped collecting.

He quoted his friend and fellow collector George Gotshell, "There are remissions, but no cures."

HE RECALLED a Bickelmann remission period in the early 50s and said he knew they'd missed a lot of good things by not buying actively then. Never again.

He recalled that she had spotted a beautiful 1910 brass Art Nouveau candlestick at the antique sale at Saline a number of years ago. He missed it completely, but was delighted with it when she showed it to him.

He compared that candlestick to another brass one in the living room made in Flanders several hundred years earlier, mentioned a Louis XV cabinet, a 17th century Spanish table, an Indonesian silver bowl and said,"Anything fits into our collection."

She, wishing to qualify that a bit. added, "If it's beautiful to our eyes."

SURE THEY bought a lovely James Peale still life for $100 in 1941, although that wasn't incredibly cheap then, and they have made some real "finds" over the years, but that doesn't mean all the good stuff is gone.

painting which recently sold for $39.9 million.

Every piece in their collection has a story. Many are reminders of the people they have met and the friends they have made through the years. Their only regrets are for the pieces they didn't buy, things they didn't think they could afford at the time.

"We should have stretched a little bit," he said. "Stretch for the best you think you can afford."

IN ADDITION to going to antique shows and visiting with fellow collectors in many parts of the country, the Bickelmanns love to visit museums, large and small.

Forty-five exhibitors from across the country will present a distinctive selection of antique merchandise at the Village Antiques Show this weekend. The show will be presented in Lovett Hall. Admission is $5.

Performances by two Canadian violinists will highlight the final concert of the season for the Livonia Youth Symphony at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in Orchestra Hall in Detroit.

Under the direction of Attila Farkas, the symphony will share the spotlight with Scott and Lara St. John. The St. Johns began their music studies at age three as Suzuki students and presently attend Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. They have given recitals in England, Hungary, France, Spain, Portugal as well as in th U.S. and Canada.

They have also been soloists with the Cleveland, Philadelphia and Montreal orchestras.

In 1986, Scott St. John competed in the Beijing International Youth Violin Competition in China, placing fourth.

The Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Farkas, will perform Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 5, featuring the St. Johns; Vivaldi's "Gloria" with members of the Lansing Lyric Chorus as soloists.

ió shipoke any longer, Lila Armbruster le an author at age $1.

'Shipoke' Author recaptures Michigan of an earlier time

By Sherry Kahan special writer

WAS BORN in a lumber camp near Hersey, Mich., in Osceola County on Sept. 16, 1906."

So begins the autobiography of Livonia resident Lila McKenzie Armbruster. A child of the deep Michigan woods, she grew up smelling the pine trees. She heard the thud of axes, the ripping of cross-cut saws and the crash of falling trees.

During the past few years in her McNamara Towers apartment in Livonia, she has been letting her mind turn back as far as it can go to recapture the life of the McKenzie family, with its eight children, in forests, on farms and frequently on the move. In search of work, they lived in a variety of places in central and northern Michigan, in or near towns like Twining, Atlanta, Turner and Brooklyn. Later many of them turned up in Detroit.

Armbruster's autobiography is a celebration of a time worthy of nostalgia. Yes, she really did feed milk from a bottle to newborn lambs.

And, yes, she stood on a stool to flip many a flapjack for a roomful of hungry lumberjacks. She drank water "sweet as nectar and icy cold."

She chewed spruce gum and found it better than the store-bought kind. She picked berries, but once had to leave them behind as she hurried away from an approaching bear. She slept on straw mattresses and walked three miles for a sack of candy. She attended a one-room school. but when in the forest received school assignments by mail.

ON THE DOWNSIDE, she hid in a root cellar whenever a cyclone blew in. Once she had her hard-earned money stolen by a friendly woman who sat next to her on a train.

Her book is about ordinary people, most of whom deserve to be celebrated. She'll never forget the friends and even acquaintances who pitched in when needed, or family members always merry at Christmas even when pickings were slim. She knew pastors who looked after their flock instead of emphasizing fund raising, and girls like herself, long neck, she hated the name. Nev-who along with the boys, knew they ertheless, for many years, she were expected to find jobs and contribute financially. Through it all, there was her extended family ready for fun or to lend a hand.

Among those lending a hand were Uncle Forrest and Aunt Maude. They sent a letter in 1924 to the McKenzles saying that there was masonry work available for Mr. McKenzie in Detroit. When the family came into the Michigan Central Railway Station, Uncle Forrest was waiting to take them to his home on Livernois.

"We were to share their home until we could find suitable living quarters for our large family," wrote Armbruster. Somehow there was room for them all.

HER BOOK, WHICH she has arranged to have published, is called "Shipoke." That was the nickname given to her by one of her brothers. She was told a shipoke was "a tall lanky bird with a long skinny neck and legs." Because she was a tall, skinny child with long legs and a seemed to measure herself against the shipoke image.

When she was 14 she won the Arenac County Spelling Bee. "I must admit that winning the Bee did boost my confidence and my ego," she wrote. "Shipoke was gradually climbing out of her shell."

In an interview she added: "I rose from the inadequate feeling the name gave me and decided to write.'

After family members moved in with Uncle Forrest and Aunt Maude in Detroit, they quickly scattered about the city to find jobs and friends

Armbruster wrote: "It was great to be young and living in the late '20s and '30s. Detroit in those days was exciting and beautiful. There was the Boblo boat and the romantic boat ride to Sugar Island or Tashmo Park ... There were also many large beautiful ballrooms including the Greystone, Grande, Mirror, Campus and many more. I was blossoming

Dash of color spices up 'recipe' swapping

THE YEARS, we have all beard of - or partici-pated in - recipe swapp-

ndy. She makes the best hot fudge puffs. But if she desar't follow the recipe just right — or worse, if I open the door of the oven, her puffs go poof. A poofed puff, by the way, does make an exliest bot pad or even an edible

The Artifacts Art Club, organized by yours truly, has about 80 members and at our meetings you hear plenty of recipe swapping. Not food recipes, but color, medium and technique recipes. • Some are simple and basic mixtures and some are more involved. 'As a matter of fact, the whole concept of the Artifacts club is just to meet with other artists and share ideas and techniques. That's how the idea for this column came about. I thought it would be fun to print favorite recipes of artists who would like to share them.

To start off this new feature, I asked Sue Rothamel to share some of her favorite recipes. She is an oil painting instuctor with a keen eye and knowledge of color.

Some of her color recipes follow. "Greens that are natural looking are hard to come by straight from the tube," Rothamel said. "Here are three recipes that I count on." • Cadmium yellow light/ivory black.

This has an olive hue when mixed. More yellow/less black gives a sunnier yellow-green. This is very natural and works well in floral still life and landscape painting. It "greys" up nicely for shadow tones in skin or fur or animals

 Zinc yellow/Paynes grey/Sap green - dash.

This is a beautifully transparent green. Nice for glazing when mixed with medium. By sustituting Viridian for the Sap green, you end up with a slightly bluish cast. All of these are transparent colors.

 Cerulean blue (three parts)/ burnt sienna (one part) "This combination comes up with an extremely neutral green. Left dark, it blends, shadows and neutral-izes other tones. Mized with Naples yellow or white, you get wonderful "misty" greens known as Celadon. Good usage we've found in class is misty forest areas and water. A DARK THAT is darker than black, more natural, and has wider tonal capabilities is:

 Alizarin crimson/ultramarine blue/burnt umber

"By mixing them equally, you have a dark violet or puce color. By increasing the umber, you get darker than black. More or less of the Alizarin or blue gives you redder or bluer darks. All in all, a much better color than any black straight from a tube.

This color is good in landscape, still life and portraiture painting. Brown Madder is her favorite color right now, Rothamel said.

"It has a wide variety of us Mixed with white, it is a beautiful lavender color. Mixed with Burnt Umber, a rich brown for glazing. Mixed with Burnt Slenna, a color earth that can't be beat. Just a little of Brown Madder will tint every-

You don't have to be an art teacher or Artifacts club member to share your recipes. Jot down (no matter how short) your recipe and send them to David Messing in care of this newspaper, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150 or to the Art Store & More, 18774 Middlebelt Road, Livonia 48154.

condo queries Robert M. Melsner

From time to time, this column will deal with real estate questions other than those pertaining to condos.

Q. We had our home listed for sale with a realtor who indicated he was a member of the area multi-list organization. We also thought we had our house sold and, in fact, put a de-posit on another home. We then found out that the buyer could not qualify for a mortage.

After a day or so of negotiations, we decided to put the house back on the market - so we thought. I became suspicious after many weeks when it occurred to me that not one other realtor had shown our house other than the one we were listed with

I did some checking on my own and found that our realtor had never listed our house with multi-list. I am assuming it was to guarantee himself a full commission. I also had two persons call the office as casual interested buyers to inquire about the property. The response was that there was "no listing for that address." This was from the very same office we have our home listed with. I called the realtor with my findings and he stated that the once the house was sold and put back on the market, it takes 30 days for it to be multilisted again. The realitor is again at-temping to sell the house but I have asked him for a release from our commission agreement. What do you suggest?

A. I believe that you should ascertain the actual facts, to the best of your ability, before proceeding against the broker. You may wish to inquire of the multi-list service as to how long it takes for a broker to list your property with multi-list. If, in fact, your broker has not been forthright with you, you can file a complaint against the broker with the local board of realtors, of which the broker may be a member, as well as the Department of Licensing and Regulation.

You may also sue him for money damages. Before doing so though, you may wish to confer with the broker and he may be willing to work out an arrangement with you in terms of releasing you from any commission. Obviously, if your broker intentionally failed to list your property with multi-list so that he presumably could get a full commission, that practice is obviously improper and the appropriate action should be taken against the broker.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attory specializing in condominiums, real estate and corporate law. Questions should be directed to him at 30200 Telegraph Road, Birmingham 48010. This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

Michigan to life

Author brings early

DOWNTOWN DETROIT captivated her, "mainly the beautiful department stores. Among them, J.L. Hudson's, Kern's, Crowley's and many others.

She rode the Interurban train to Birmingham. These trains also traveled to Redford Township, Farmington, Northville, Livonia, Plymouth, Wayne and other destinations.

It was at one of the popular ball-rooms, the Hollywood Ballroom, on Michigan near Wayne Road, that she met Ray Armbruster. In 1933 they married, eventually having three children, Gary, Larry and Gail. After moving from place to play for a while, they settled in Garden City. In the '50s, Armbruster joined the Garden City Chapter of the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs, in time becoming president. At about the same time she began thinking about writing.

In her childhood she always had her nose in a book. Among her favorites were "Little Women" by Louisa May Alcott, and "Freckles" and "Girl of the Limberlost" by Gene Stratton Porter. Why shouldn't she try her hand?

She managed to land a job as a reporter of weddings and local news at a weekly called the Garden City Review. Armbruster remembers cautioning herself about her big opportunity. "This is the chance you've been waiting for . . . don't blow it." In 1971 following the retirement of her husband as sales manager of North Brothers Ford in Garden City, the couple moved north to live in a cabin near Mio and the woods they both loved. Armbruster got a job on the Oscoda County News, reporting everything from dog sled races to the PBB disaster caused by the accidental mixing of a fire retardant with cattle feed.

MEDICAL PROBLEMS brought them in the late '70s to Livonia where their daughter Gail Haller lives. Ray Armbruster died in 1982 two months before their 50th wedding anniversary.

Later Armbruster enrolled in a creative writing class at Schoolcraft College. This gave her the courage to start her autobiography. With its picture of everyday life in the early part of the 20th century, it is an appropriate book for Michigan's sesquicentennial year.

At 80, Lila Armbruster says she "hasn't resigned herself to being old. I'm too proud. I have an indoor exercise bike and an outside threewheeler I use to keep my weight down.'

She also has a permanent, wears mod glasses and a gold chain around her neck. No longer a shipoke, Lila Armbruster is an author.

As all of my student's know, the two most im ortant ingredients in making a photograph are us and your subject. A photograph then be omes a visual expression tween you and the subject.

And there's no better area in photography to explore this relationship than in making mood pictures. The mood photographer will make a photograph and say, "This is what I saw and

With a little practice, you can develop a sensi-tivity for moods which will lead you to a new, almost delicate approach to your photography.

To begin with, take time to examine your enviroment, looking for the inherent beauty in the smallest of weeds as well as the magnificence of a towering forest.

STUDY YOUR subject carefully and get to know it well, always keeping in mind that you're building that all-important relationship between you and the subject. Practice by viewing your subject from every angle, in close and far back.

Never rush into snapping the picture. Study how light affects form and texture. View your subject at different times of day and in different kinds of weather.

With experience, you will find your photogra-phy shifting from the literal recording of a scene to an artistic expression of mood.

Nature's elements are among the key ingredients you can capture in making mood photo-graphs. Fog, mist water and sunlight skimming through soft foliage all present conditions suitable for obtaining mood in your pictures.

Early morning or late afternoon light offers the best opportunity for capturing shadows and textures. Use side or backlighting which will give your pictures a certain sparkle and will help focus attention on the main subject. Fog and mist will subdue unwanted backgrounds and will produce soft, subtle tones and colors.

• The Farmington Community WATER CAN give you different moods in Center will host a reception for your pictures. Reflections in a still lake will give you a feeling of seclusion and quietness. Splashing waves result in an exciting mood while flow-ing water captured during a long exposure (get out your tripod) gives a peaceful, serene mood. When making mood photographs, pay particu-
