FRIEDER TO SPEAK: Bill Frieder, head basketball, coach for the University of Michigan, will be the guest speaker at a September luncheon hosted by the U-M Club of the Plymouth Community.

Frieder will be the featured speaker at the luncheon from noon to 2 p.m. Monday, Sept. 14, in the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth. The charge will be $25 per person with proceeds being used to fund scholarships in the community. Tickets can be purchased at Wiltse's Pharmacy, 330 S. Main, Plymouth, or by calling 453-4848.

HAVE A CHAIR: The Plymouth District Library has a new set of chairs for its community meeting room, thanks to the Rotary Club of Plymouth.

The chairs were paid for with a contribution of $2,200 from the Plymouth Rotary Foundation. The 50 new chairs are being used in the library's meeting room which is used by the public atlarge. Library director Patricia Thomas explains that the room can be used free by any community group during normal library hours

The $2,200 gift from the foundation represent a part of the proceeds from the club's annual Chicken Barbecue during the Plymouth Fall Festival. The Foundation also receives money from Plymouth Rotarians and from the community at large with bequests and other forms of tax-deductible gifts.

This past year, in addition to the gift of chairs to the library, the Plymouth Rotary Foundation also has donated money to the Plymouth Historical Society to pay for publishing a brochure for a capital fund-raising campaign for the museum.

VIDEO WINNER:

"Videotunes Live" won best live volunteer series in the Hometown Video USA Awards national contest sponsored by the National Federation of Local Cable Programmers.

Producers David Daniele and Jim Leinbach use local talent to give the show its special community appeal. "I try to give talented people a shot at being on TV, just like the big stars," said Daniele. "Just because it's local cable doesn't mean it's not real television. When people turn the channel, it's not always the number on the channel selector that they watch; it's what's on the screen that counts.'

"Videotunes Live" features a combination of MTV-type music videos with all local talent, candid interviews and zany antics with Daniele as Dr. Z and Leinbach as Jimmy Ray, says Maria Holmes, Omnicom program director. The newest addition to the show is a dummy named Eugene, who is really Omnicom's executive producer John Martin behind the scenes making the wise-cracking co-host come to life.

Working on the show as crew members since 1985 are Lori Schumont, assistant producer, Peter Smith, director, and John Polson, cameraman. The show airs at 9:30 p.m. each Monday, Wednesday and Friday and at 7 p.m. Saturday on Channel 8. The show is taped live Mondays with a video request line for viewers. Some of the local talent appearing on the show this year have been The New Trend, Read About The Twins, heavy-metal band Deth-toll and local comedian Alturo Shelton. Anyone interested in being on the show may call 1-5 p.m. at 459-7335 or 459-7391.

Learning Options budget hiked

An alternative education program for troubled students in Plymouth-Canton will be offered for the entire 1987-88 academic year now that school officials have indicated a willingness to spend as much as last year - $140,000.

The school board, concerned about the district's financial picture, had commmitted only $70,000 to Learning Options until last week

In addition to budgeting more money, the school board called for a committee of residents, administrators and staff to evaluate all aspects of alternative education efforts. Growth Works, a non-profit, social services agency in Plymouth, has provided counseling/education services for the school district on a contract basis

SCHOOL MONEY has replaced federal dollars as the primary funding source for Learning Options. The school's contribution of $140,000 now accounts for nearly 85 percent of the program's budget.

Susan L. Froelich is looking forward to starting her new job as executive director of the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

Those involved in local arts council activities also are looking forward to having Froelich, an Ann Arbor resident, start work.

Froelich's appointment to the newly created position was recently announced. She's the first executive director of the local arts council; the PCAC has relied on volunteer assistance since it was founded in 1969.

FROELICH HAS worked as an arts consultant since 1984.

In 1986 and 1987, she served as coordinator for the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair. She was co-chairwoman for that fair's acceptance committee in 1985.

Froelich intends to continue working on the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, combining those duties with the part-time position of PCAC executive director. The time commitment for the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair is minimal during the fall and winter, she said.

"So I'm hoping to blend the two." She intends to talk with representatives of both arts organizations to see about combining the two posi-

Witnessing the amount of traffic flow on Ann Arbor Road, we think it is essential to have someone take a look to determine if indeed there may be a need to improve the safety of that roadway with physical improvements" such as turn lanes or traffic signals, said Jim Anulewicz, Plymouth Township planning director.

Our second objective is to evaluate the roadway system within the area of Steak and Ale, Bennigan's, Massey Cadillac, Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury and extending to the west to Haggerty Road," Anulewicz said. Local officials hope findings will help convince the county to accept the streets immediately south of Ann Arbor Road as public roads, he said.

The absence of left-turn indicators at Main and Sheldon "causes quite a backup of cars," Myers said.

"People make two mistakes They get in them and use them as a driving lane instead of a turning lane, or they almost stop in traffic lane, still sticking out into driving lane (while entering the center-turn lane)," he said. Original hopes had been for the PCAC director to work full time; due to financial constraints, however, the position will be a part-time one.

Froelich will work 20 hours 3 week out of the PCAC office at 332 S. Main in Plymouth. Her annual salary for that position will be $10,000.

The applicants who were interviewed for the position had impressive credentials, McCombs said. "So it was a tough decision."

Froelich has a number of connections in arts-related circles, the PCAC president said. The new executive director's expertise will help the PCAC grow.

that cameras are off during their testimony. Jurors may not be photographed. Juvenile proceedings may not be recorded.

MacDonald said he expects to consult with Judge James Garber and Marion Belding, administrator of the 35th District Court, to establish local procedures.

"We wouldn't want anything to detract from the primary focus of arraignment, preliminary exam or trial." MacDonald said.

"I hate to be evasive, to say it depends on the circumstances, but it does," he said of cameras in the court. Journalists have a chance to interview outside the courtroom and take pictures outside the courtroom now, he said.

THE MOST LIKELY event to be photographed in a district court from a news standpoint is a preliminary exam of a felony case.

In a preliminary exam, evidence is introduced to establish that a crime was committed and probable cause exists that the accused was responsible.

At that time, the defendant is ordered to trial or charges are dismissed.

From an education standpoint, local cable TV systems may want to televise civil cases, especially small claims.

"We certainly wouldn't allow grandstanding," MacDonald said. 'Again, the press and attorneys are reasonable people."

MacDonald said he has no problems with the concept of cameras in court.

"I think it will help educate the public how courts work. I think courts are the least understood of the three branches of government."

FEW WEEKS LATER and we could have had the pope, quipped WJR's J.P. McCar-thy in his opening remarks for the world premiere of the Detroit-based movie, "The Rosary Murders," at the Fisher Theatre Thursday night.
"I wonder what His Holiness would think of it?" McCarthy said. "In fact what would Bill Kienzle think of it?" he said, alluding to the absence of the book's author from the premiere.

It all started eight years ago, when ex-priest Kienzle wrote the novel about a series of eight murders of priests and nuns at Holy Redeemer Church on Detroit's southwest side, and culminated as a $100per-person benefit for Holy Redeemer High School. From limos emerged black-tied first-nighters - 1,400 of them out for the first Detroit world premiere of a major motion picture. They jammed the lobby stretching for glimpses of movie stars, directors and producers. Area people involved in the Robert Laurel production of "The Rosary Murders" included screenplay co-writer Elmore "Dutch" Leonard on hand with his wife, Joan.

"IT WAS THE most pleasant assignment I ever had," the best-selling Birmingham author said. "Bobby Laurel was easy to work with. Five years ago I wrote a 50-page treatment. Director Fred Walton, producer Laurel and I rewrote around the Holy Redeemer setting." Film co-star Charles Durning was in the lobby by 7:30 p.m. along with actress Anita Barone, soap star John Danelle, who plays a detective, and James Murtaugh.

Also on hand for the benefit opening was associate producer Chris Coles and editor Sam Vitale. Michael Mihalich of Bloomfield Hills is executive producer with Laurel. Mihalich makes the deals for distribution worldwide.

Mort Lieberman, Bloomfield Hills president of Dynamic Industries, and a major backer of "Rosary," was there with his wife, Mary Jean.

Property sale moves closer

By Wayne Peal

Sale of 1,040 acres of Wayne County-owned property meved closer last week, when a group of county commissioners recommended approval of a marketing contractor for the Northville Township site.

Susan Heintz

A compromise between county executive Edward McNamara and county commission chairman Arthur Carter helped move the proposal out of the county commission's economic development committee. It had been tied up for nearly two months. "The compromise was that 20 percent of the land will be held for two years for a joint venture between the county and a private developer," committee chairwoman Susan Heintz, R-Northville Township, said. "If we can't get a joint venture, then it will be sold."

Potential joint ventures include a hotel or golf course, Heintz said. Developers would build and operate the facility, while the county would reap a share of the benefits.

Committee members recommended hiring Lambrecht Co., a Detroit-based real estate firm, to market the land.

The full county commission is commission is pending.

expected to decide the issue within two weeks.

McNamara has proposed using profits from the land sale to retire a portion of the county debt.

Several county commissioners. including Carter advised against selling the entire parcel at one time - retaining at least a portion ion the county's behalf.

Their feeling was we shouldn't sell all the furniture to make the house payment," Heintz said.

The property is at Five Mile and Beck, just north of the Plymouth Township border.

At one time, the site housed a home for mentally impaired adults and the Wayne County Training School for troubled juveniles.

In another issue, the commission recommended funding a county economic development depart-

The department had been the focus of a controversy between the county executive's office and county commission. Commissioners deliberately failed to confirm a department director - essentially scuttling the department - earlier this summer, saying they had failed to receive a department budget. At the time, a dispute was also brewing between the executive's office and commission over using land sales revenue to finance a new county youth camp.

The economic development department was sought by McNamara. Approval by the full

Veto places youth camp in limbo

By Wayne Peal staff writer

The future of a proposed Wayne County youth camp is in limbo after county executive Edward McNamara's veto

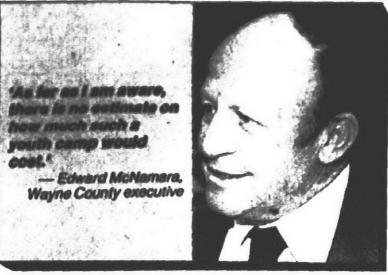

In the first test of his veto power, McNamara struck down an ordinance that would have created a county trust fund to pay for the camp's creation and operation.

Unless they override the veto. county commissioners will have to start from scratch in their efforts to create a detention rehabilitation facility for young offenders

Supporters cited crowded conditions at the county youth home and recommendations from the county's Youth At Risk Task Force in promoting the youth camp

But McNamara has opposed creating the camp this year, saying the at odds over Carter's proposal to use county shouldn't create new programs until it arranges to pay back its estimated $125 million debt to the

be used to pay off county debts

"I believe it is inappropriate to use the proceeds of the disposition of that property for new programs while the deficit is still in place. McNamara said in a letter to Carter detailing reasons for his veto

As far as I am aware, there is no estimate on how much such a youth camp would cost, where it would be located, how many beds would be provided and what kind of staffing there would be." he said.

Lack of probate court input was another reason listed for McNamara's veto

It is clear to me that no facility for housing and treating juveniles has any hope of success if the probate court is not going to commit youth to the program," he said.

McNamara said a recently formed private citizens fund-raising group should have also been involved in youth camp discussions. He also said he was concerned about the legality of fund-raising plans contained in the commission's ordinance

Commissioners voted 8-2 to create the camp in late July, but there were four abstentions after McNamara announced the vote might jeopardize debt-reduction negotiations with the

Don't stop with preschools

(The author of this five-part series, Peggy Price Heiney of Plumouth, is a teacher for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools who has taught kindergarten for 25 years A teacher at Bird Elementary, she earned her bachelor's degree at Michigan State University, master of arts at Eastern Michigan University, and a specialty in early childhood education from EMU.

The series, particularly helpful for parents of small children, suggests ways of creating a less stressful existence for children in today's world.)

(Part IV)

One winter, I conducted a survey among my kindergarten parents, concerning the effects of T.V. on the young child.

I asked the parents if they would give me their point of view on the following questions: (1) Do you influence your child's

T V. viewing? If so, in what way? (2) Do you feel there is too much T V violence during children's viewing hours? If so, have you ever written a letter of protest to a network of local channel?

(3) Do you feel that T.V. programs affect your child's behavior? If so, in what way?

(4) Do you feel T.V. has created a 'consumption environment" for your child? If so, in what way?

All stated that they influenced their children's viewing in one way or another; most, in amount of viewing time and types of programs viewed.

The answers to the questions concerning T.V. violence during children's viewing hours were, interestingly enough, divided almost in half, with more feeling that there was too much violence. Some had written or called local channels and several had simply turned the set off, in pro-

The majority felt that T.V. programs did affect the child's behavior. Some stated that T.V. increased vocabulary and made the child more aware of his or her environment.

On the other hand, several said it either made the children more aggressive (imitation of Super Heroes, etc.), or more lethargic, putting some into an almost hypnotic trance. which sometimes lasted even after the set was turned off.

Most felt that T.V. had indeed created a consumption environment with a definite pattern of "wants" developed by constant exposure to advertisements. One parent asked if I had spoken to Santa Claus lately! It seems her children the past Christmas, had sent him a list stating specific title, maker, model and store availability, of toys desired.

541 Ann Arbor Rd.

IN THE KINDERGARTEN, I am constantly faced with "Super He-

The children's portrayal of these T.V. characters has been on the increase over the past few years and, I believe, one of the cause for the more aggressive behavior of the present day child

Kept to a low roar, they do no harm, however, occasionally an incident occurs, which makes one absolutely sure of the importance of parents and teachers instructing children on the difference between make-believe and reality.

I'm thinking of one case in particular where emulating a certain "character of courage" caused a rather perilous situation. It occurred one morning when a kindergartener jumped out in front of the school bus as it approached his stop He was portraying the antics of a Super Hero who had been seen stopping vehicles, this way, on a T.V. series.

One day, I heard two little ones discussing a T.V. program that they had both seen the night before in which there had occurred a lot of violence. From that, they went on to discuss movie ratings and parental discretion. One was telling the other that his parents allowed him to see PG rated movies; and the response. from the second child, was, "you can't - because that means that there might be violence in the movie." The first insisted that he could see them anyway, and after a short period of argument back and forth, the second gave up and walked away saying, "all right, go ahead, if you want to have nightmares."

Parents can and should guide their children's viewing habits. They should observe how their child reacts to what is happening on the screen, finding out how he feels about what he is watching and if he can discriminate between make-believe and reality.

Most important, if the child happens to be watching a program which the parent feels is undesirable, he or she should not be afraid to take the initiative to interest the child in another activity.

PRESCHOOL EDUCATION has become a part of American life and, it seems, is here to stay.

The many pressures which confront families of today, including upward cost of living, divorce and mothers wanting to maintain their own careers, have forced children out of the home and into preschool

Also, the increased desire on the part of parents for someone else to 'do the educating" coupled with the worry of "will he be ready for kindergarten if he doesn't go," has placed children in preschools

Today, in most communities, there are many varied types of preschools to fit the needs of both parents and

I visited several, a few years ago, in my own community for the purpose of gaining information about the kinds of learning situations from which my kindergarteners were coming

I found the goals much the same, the ways of achieving them quite varied.

Parents should observe a pres chool program carefully before subjecting their child to it.

A good preschool should permit children to engage in activities of their own choice with much large motor skill equipment provided. Equipment such as doll corners, blocks, painting easels and tables, walking boards, climbers and ladders are important and should be provided, but so should "junk" equipment which inspires adventure. Large and small cardboard boxes, wood scraps, tiles and paper products bring out the creative mind and encourage decision making.

A good preschool program (and I do not feel that enough of them have this) should include much music and drama. Singing, rhythm band activities and dramatizing stories tend to bring shy children out of their shells while fulfilling the aggressive needs

Pretending is such an important part of the preschoolers years that the availability of pretend materials (dress-up clothes, puppet stages) is a must. Finally, there should be enough adults to listen to and take care of the needs of the individual children.

The overall objective of any preschool, without exception, should be to develop in the child, a positive image of himself as a learner.

MANY PARENTS believe that an accredited nursery or day care center is the safest place they can leave their preschooler while they are at work throughout the day. But is it really the best of all situations for the child?

I feel very sorry for children who are dropped off at 7 a.m. Monday through Friday, and not picked up whether or not they needed to be until 5:30 or 6 at night. That is a long time for a 3-,4- or 5-year-old to be in

Why not, instead, try an alternative method of using the nursery or day care center part of the week and a trusting, caring relative or sitter the rest of the week. This would give the child a break from the same daily routine. And if parents have to work long hours, arrangements should be made to have a grandparent or other caring relative or friend pick up the child so that he is not spending more than six (and hopefully less at this age) hours in a school situation

When I knew that I had afterschool meetings to attend on nursery school days, I picked him up before the meeting began and took him to an alternate situation, usually my sister's home, until it was over, thus eliminating a too-long school day for a 4-year-old. This obviously was not the easiest of all possible situations for me but, interestingly enough, a less stressful one for both of us.

WHAT WE MUST realize and continually keep in mind however, is that learning is not limited to what goes on in school.

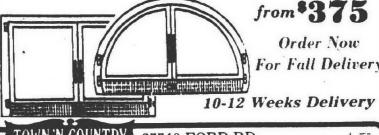

The home remains the most-influential factor in the development of a

Raising a child is a long-term job and requires much patience and understanding of the kinds of experiences that will promote the best development. "It is my fervent and somewhat agonized plea," states Eda La Shan, author of "The Conspiracy Against Childhood," that "parents of young children will seek out those nursery schools for their youngsters that are still genuinely concerned with the total growth of children. Such nursery schools recognize the significance of play as the most crucial and important tool available to the growing child in his struggle to gain mastery over his feelings, explore his environment and achieve a sense of personal identity."

State Rep. John Bennett thought his anti-takeover bill was ready to sail through the House Corporations and Securities Committee last week.

"The Michigan Manufacturers Association has worked on this two years. This closely follows the Indiana law which was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court," said Bennett, D-Redford, as he opened a hearing in Lansing last week on his House Bill

The bill would give so-called "disinterested stockholders" a chance to clip the wings of "raiders" attempting a hostile takeover of a corporation.

But at the last minute, state Treasurer Robert Bowman put a glitch in the works.

"NO ONE is more interested than I in the rights of stockholders," said Bowman, adding that he's in charge of investing $16 billion in state pension funds, including $8 billion in

A former Wall Street investment banker (Goldman Sachs), Bowman told Bennett's panel that the bill would consider holders of 20 percent blocks of stock as part of the "control shares," whose power could be over, a new management team or limited by the others in a takeover bid. The pension fund is a 20 percent holder in some small corporations.

'We (the state) couldn't vote in a cally. takeover" in such cases, he said. 'We're trying to protect retirees. I serve as sole fiduciary (holding stock in trust) "I can't serve as a fiduciary if I can't vote on each and every issue as a shareholder - whether it's a takewhether to build a new headquarters

"How can I be a fiduciary if I can't vote?" Bowman asked rhetori-Bowman's other worry was the bill's lack of protection against "greenmail," in which "an entrenched management pays off a raider to get 'em out of their hair.'

As an example, Bowman cited

General Motors' $700 million buyout of H. Ross Perot, which he said was well above the fair market price.

"WORK OUT your differences." Bennett told Bowman and Kerry Crenshaw, attorney for the Michigan Manufacturers Association "We would like to move this bill as soon as possible

Crenshaw said there would be little problem resolving the conflicts with the bill. He said the pension tund's 20 percent share is mainly in small venture companies.

Crenshaw opposed adding antigreenmail language to the bill because it may complicate the bill and increase the chances of a court chal-

Bennett said he wants to have the bill on the House floor when the Legislature returns Sept. 22 from its summer break. It has bipartisan support and the backing of the state Commerce Department

Bennett said a Redford Township company, which he declined to name, is now seeking protection from a hostile takeover. There are 200 jobs at stake," said the 20-year Lansing veteran

A HOSTILE takeover occurs when a raider bids substantially more than the market price for enough shares to gain a voting majority in a company Knowledgable investors usually view these stocks as underpriced

To Bowman, takeovers aren't all "Does the shareholder ever lose? No The stock price goes up whether the bid is successful or not The shareholders win My retirees

The losers may be the workers and managers, he said

Bowman said the "best defense for management is to get the market to reflect the true value of the stock.

BUT CRENSHAW had only bad things to say about takeovers, particularly when target companies borrow to outbid the raider for shares of stock

The result all too frequently is the conversion of billions of dollars of equity into debt. Attention of management is diverted from business to financial maneuvering

Jobs have been eliminated by diverting cash flows from wages and salaries to debt service. The state's industrial base has been weakened by reducing capital investment and ignoring the long-term considerations of productivity and competitiveness." he said

In the bidding war. Crenshaw said. market forces are stampeded by the raiders. "The bill will allow shareholders to make their own decisions," he said

ACCORDING TO a House staff analysis, HB 4907 would give Michigan corporations these protections against hostile takeovers

· Stockholders could limit the voting power of a raider's "control shares" in the election of directors

• The corporation could redeem control shares at market value under certain circumstances.

The bill has time elements to allow shareholders to meet and requires the raider to file information statements.

The bill defines Michigan corporations as publicly-held firms with at least 100 shareholders with more than 10 percent of its shareholders. or 10,000 shareholders, as Michigan residents. Its principal place of business, principal office or substantial assets would have to be in Michigan.

Fall Festival grew out of Rotary Club picnic

Rotarians who donned aprons to barbecue and serve 500 chicken dinners at a community picnic here 31 years ago had no idea that the occasion would develop into one of Michigan's largest events of its type - the Plymouth Fall Festival

A three-year member of the club when the event took place. I remember well the circumstances that led to the first barbecue

EARLY IN 1956, the club was looking for a community project to involve the membership.

The Youth Activities Committee proposed the barbecue as a means of raising money to buy equipment for the Hamilton Street Playground. which opened the previous year.

The committee, chaired by John Gaffield, included Ken Harrison, Bob Beyer, Charles Sawyer, Bob Maurer. and Don Lightfoot. Lightfoot, who lived near the playground and knew it had no equipment, came up with the idea. It then went to the club's board of directors for approval.

The board included club president David Galen, Don Sutherland, Evered Jolliffe, Russell Isbister, Pat McGuire, Jim Taylor and Harry Draper. They gave immediate approval to the proposal.

In addition to providing a needed service to the community, the fundraising campaign gave club members an opportunity to work shoulder to shoulder, cementing ties within the organization.

On March 5, the club told the city it wished to donate money for playground equipment. The city planned to buy the equipment from the Pioneer Company of Owosso, Mich.

The equipment included a circle climb, a tot climb, a tot slide, a standard size climb, a chair swing, and a Sam Hudson safety swing. This equipment was received and erected at the playground by city employees before the date of the picnic. The club asked permission to use the playground for the Sunday, May 20 event.

ARTICLES ABOUT the proposed picnic appeared in the "Plymouth Mail" and the public was invited.

On May 17, the Mail noted: "The Rotarians hope to establish a precedent for other clubs to provide playground equipment for Plymouth's youngsters.

The club had about 80 members in 1956. All of us were involved in the project - selling tickets, constructing charcoal pits at the playground, setting up tables and chairs, and barbecuing and serving the dinners.

Tables were furnished by the Parks and Forestry Division of the Wayne County Road Commission. Barbecue racks were rented from Michigan State University.

A barbecue pit 40 feet long, capable of handling up to 200 chickens, was manned by Rotarians with the assistance of four non-members -Phil Barney, Tom Argo, Jim Latture, and Gar Evans. Some Rotarians, including Dr. Brick Champe and Walt Rensel, were members of the Elks Club and had barbecuing expe-

Ceremonies preceding the dinner included the raising of a village flag, designed by one of the club's charter members, Sidney Strong. Then the club's president-elect, Don Sutherland, presented the playground equipment to the city.

Mayor Russell Daane, a Rotarian. accepted on behalf of the city. Another Rotarian, the Rev. Henry Walch of the Presbyterian Church, offered a dedicatory prayer.

The program included a ballgame between teams from Bird School and the Lutheran School.

Dinner was served from 2 to 6 p.m. The meal included chicken, coleslaw, potato chips, roll, butter, milk or coffee, and ice cream. Soft drinks were also sold. No one remembers what was charged, but when the event was repeated the following year, tickets were $2 for adults and $1.25 for children.

ON MAY 24, the Mail reported that between 500 and 600 people enjoyed the program and the barbecue.

On the same date, the City Commission passed a resolution thanking the Rotary Club and Don Lightfoot, who chaired the event, for giving the equipment to the city.

On June 5, Lightfoot told the club the picnic had raised $955. Expenses were $517, with a profit of $438. This raised the equipment fund total to $900. But the playground equipment cost $1,650, so the committee set about raising the additional money.

The bill was finally marked paid in mid-June 1956, when club member Ed Hough of the Daisy Manufacturing Company donated $400.

Willis at the first picnic May 20, 1956, in Hamil-

This generous action was typical of Hough, who made similar reaches into his pocket during many years as a Plymouth Rotarian. He had been a charter member and club vice-president when the club was formed in 1924. He was club president in 1925.

Of 82 members of the Rotary Club in 1956, only 10 are members today Frank Arlen, Fred Beitner, John Gaffield, Harold Guenther, Sam Hudson, Ralph Lorenz, Perry Richwine, Don Sutherland, Earl West, and Dr. Charles Westover.

Most of the remaining 72, including Don Lightfoot, are dead, and a few have moved.

Sidney Strong, club historian in the 1960s, prepared a paper about the first six barbecues. He prefaced it with the remark: "An idea is a wonderfully explosive thing. If it is directed to a worthy cause, the good that may come of it is really fantastic. Such is the idea, the development of which is sketched here.

Sidney was right, of course, as subsequent events have demonstrat-

Help from witness leads to arrest of suspect

A 33-year-old Novi man was charged last week with the Aug. 17 robbery of a One Hour Martinizing store in Plymouth Township during which $105 was taken.

John A. Germain stood mute in 35th District Court when arraigned on one count of armed robbery and one count of possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony.

He was released after posting 10 percent of a $50,000 bond.

A preliminary examination - to determine that a crime was committed and probable cause that Germain committed the crime - was scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday.

Germain was arrested last Wednesday after he was identified by three employees of the cleaners, in a lineup, as the robber, said Erik Mayernik, Plymouth Township Police investigator.

Mayernik said he tracked Germain down through a license number provided by someone who said he thought a man in the area at the time of the robbery had been behaving suspiciously.

Germain has served three different terms in Southern Michigan Prisbery, another for larceny in a building, and one for assault with intent to rob while armed, Mayernik said.

Germain agreed to talk with police last week when the investigative trail led to him, Mayernik said.

Germain said that on the day of the robbery he had visited a Michigan Employment Security Commission office on Joy in Canton and a Big Boy restaurant on Ann Arbor nik said. Road, Mayernik said.

Germain ended the interview at that point when advised of his constitutional rights, Mayernik said. Germain subsequently hired a lawyer. who agreed to a lineup last Wednesday, Mayernik said.

A witness to a robbery at a Livonia cleaners, that occurred between the Westland and Plymouth incidents, couldn't attend the lineup.

No one in the Plymouth One Hour Martinizing store was injured by the robber, who had brandished a pistol, Mayernik said. However, one person was cut when he ran into a glass door after the robber left.

Dig in to your extra vegetables

By now, your garden has erupted with bountiful loads of zucchini, tomatoes, peppers, onions, eggplant, peas and who knows what else

You have tried to pawn the excess off on the neighbors but to no avail. As a matter of fact, when they see you coming down the driveway with a shopping bag, they run inside, shut the doors and turn off the lights hoping they won't have to say "No thank you" for the 43rd time.

You have even tried to "pay" the paperboy with what definitely looks like the back door of the Eastern Market.

Don't fret, America! This solemn column will be devoted to finding idle ways to use and dispose of your vegetarian albatross. This writer will also welcome your ideas and recipes for all those leftover vegetables that everyone gets sick and tired of just as they're becoming more abundant.

Before we begin discussing recipes, think about using your summer garden bounty as a pretty centerpiece for a family picnic. This writer has thrown a few parties in his time and has used hollowed out green peppers for serving appetizers and drinks.

A Bloody Mary cocktail looks especially appealing as will your favorite dip (for vegetables, silly) in those hollowed-out vegetables such as peppers, eggplants, etc.

I'll be passing along my favorite recipe for tomato soup later on in this article, but try using hollowed-out tomato cups for serving chilled salads (macaroni, potato, shrimp) and even doubling up as a soup

If your garden was visited by the omnipresent zucchini rabbit (I swear I picked it ALL yesterday), I used my food processor to shred about 6 bags of the stuff, and I'll freeze it for fall baking binges.

For something great the family (even the kids) will enjoy, take your favorite garden vegetables (I use zucchini, tomatoes, onions, peppers) and cube into chunks.

Buy a couple packages of inexpensive "poppin fresh" dough (biscuits) and press them out, fill with your favorite veggies, top with a slice of our favorite cheese, wrap up, brush with melted buter/margarine and pop in a 350° oven for 15-20 minutes or until golden. Made these on Channel 7's Kelly & Company, and the stage crew went wild.

Even before thinking about destroying your added quantities of vegetables, remember your local food co-op, soup kitchen or contact your church or civic organization and find out who in your community can use

Went for a family outing last week and on our way down to the Detroit Science Center. dropped off a bushel of green beans at the Capuchin Kitchen right off of I-94 and Mount Elliot

1 stick butter/margarine 1/2 cup green onion, chopped (about 2 bunches) 3 lbs. large tomatoes (about 6-7) peeled, seeded, chopped

2 tsp. salt (or salt substitute) 1/2 tsp. instant coffee powder 6 cups broth (I use chicken, vegetable, beef, they're all good) 1 cup tomato sauce 1/4 cup tomato paste 3 tbsp. chopped basil (fresh) or 1 tbsp. dried

1 tsp. dill weed Healthy dash hot sauce (Tobasco) 5 cup whipping cream 2 egg yolks

Melt butter in a large saucepan. Add onion, sautee until softened (about 10 minutes), stir in tomatoes, coffee and salt, cook until heated throughout. Stir in broth, tomato sauce, tomato paste and herbs and cook 25 minutes. If desired, you can place in a blender and blend onions and tomatoes until smooth, but I like the texture otherwise). Just before serving, whisk cream and egg yolks in a bowl. Gradually whisk in 1 cup of hot soup into yolk mixture, cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until slightly thickened. Do not boil. Ladle into serving bowls, garnish with chopped green onion. Great chilled too.

Zucchini is both versatile and abundant

By Arlene Funke special writer

Planting zucchini can make even a mediocre backyard gardener feel like a pro.

Zucchini, a dark-green summer squash, grows well in Michigan's climate and multiplies like the proverbial rabbit

'That's the nature of the beast," said Dr. Vera Sullivan, a horticulturist with the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Service

"The more you pick, the better it grows," she said.

Zucchini is also known as vegetable marrow or Italian marrow. It is cylindrical but larger at the base, with a lacy pattern of green and yellow that gives the appearance of stripes. It grows to be 10 to 12 inches long and two to three inches thick.

ACCORDING TO Sullivan, zucchini thrives when weather is warm, maturing in 45-55 days.

"You have to give it good space," Sullivan said. "One 12-foot row yields 60-120 (zucchini)."

Most people know a gardener who boasts of producing individual zucchinis weighing several pounds. But that yields a vegetable with a tough skin and less flavor.

The versatile zucchini can be grated into soups, chopped into casseroles or grated into quick breads and cakes. Enjoy them now or pop the dishes into the freezer until a later date. Zucchini also can be pickled or made into jam.

'The more you pick, the better it grows. You have to give it good space . . . They're better off picked when the zucchini is smaller and the skins softer.'

- Vera Sullivan horticulturist

"They're better off picked when the zucchini is smaller and the skins softer," Sullivan said.

Keeping up with the late-summer harvest may mean sharing the crops with friends and co-workers.

THE VERSATILE zucchini can be grated into soups, chopped into casseroles or grated into quick breads and cakes. Enjoy them now or pop the dishes into the freezer until a later date. Zucchini also can be pickled or made into jam.

A very nice vegetable side dish consists of sauteeing lightly in butter or oil sliced unpeeled zucchini with diced onions and chopped, fresh tomatoes. Season with a pinch of sweet basil and parsley and top with a sprinkling of grated parmesan Nutritionally, zucchini isn't a powerhouse such as the sweet potato or broccoli. But, at 25 calories per one-cup, cooked serving, this summer squash is a dieters delight.

A one-cup serving contributes around 15 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) of Vitamin A, said extension service home economist Hayward Penny. Zucchini also contributes B-vitamins, niacin and fiber.

"It's very middle-of-the-road," Penny siad. "The best thing I can say about it is its Vitamin A.

Its versatility is pretty darn good,

Chef Keith Famie thinks of himself as a conductor. The young executive chef at Novi's Chez Raphael sees the kitchen as his orchestra, and in it he is in his

"Ever since I was about 17 or 18 I really thought this was an industry I'd like to be in," the 27-year-old chef said. "I had the opportunity to work for Chef Duglass (a renowned Detroit-area chef), who I really admired because not only did he have the ability to be creative, but he was a leader too."

Famie grew up in the Farmington area, and his culinary studies have taken him around the world to Monte Carlo, Brussels, New York - where he had the opportunity to learn a variety of cooking styles from the best of teachers.

"GOING TO college and learning the basics is important, but I always thought it was more crucial to get the hands-on experience.

"To become really good and to learn to be creative you have to travel and you have to experience. You need to know what to do if a customer sends something back to the kitchen. This business is really

FAMIE SPENDS about 60-70 hours per week at his Novi restaurant, with five to six hours per day spent cooking 'Our menu is a little more diverse and we're changing it every two weeks. It's really good for me because it's helping to build my repertoire.

"It does get kind of hectic though because it means training the staff for new dishes every other week." Although his restaurant schedule keeps him incredibly busy, Famie manages to squeeze in as many other interests as possible. Fitness is high on that priority list, which means regular workouts and sessions on the tennis court as well as creating healthy, light recipes that are good for the body. Charities are his other passion. Recently he held a dinner benefit for the victims of the Novi tornado, and last year he founded Michigan Chefs Against Hunger, an organization that raised $25,000 for Detroit's Capuchin Community Center Soup Kitchen. "IT'S A big reward for me, being able to raise money for charity. I think it's the biggest reward of having people know who you are and being in a position to organize things." Although he enjoys creating in his restaurant kitchen, the newly married Famie said he gets hives when he goes near the stove at home, adding he hopes the cooking interest will rub off onto his wife.

Glass is ideal for microwave cooking because it's attractive and versatile. Foods are easily seen to check

Use glass labeled heat resistant or oven tempered It is generally thicker and heavier than table glassware and can easily withstand extreme changes in temperature. It can go from the freezer to the microwave to the dining table without breaking.

The dos and don'ts of using plastic eat food from it cookware in microwave ovens can be confusing. There are some plastics that work perfectly in the microwave, including specially developed materials that can withstand temperatures of up to 400 or 600 de-

However, many plastics will melt with simple reheating and defrosting. Plastic foam, plastic packaging and melamine, for example, are not microwave safe. What's more, plastics can melt if the ingredients inside get too hot, as is the case with highfat, high-sugar mixtures. Foods such as butter, candies, syrup and high-fat meat dishes should not be cooked in some plastics.

Another plastic product frequently used in microwave cooking is clear plastic wrap. Use plastic wrap with care as a cover, not as a wrapping The wrap could melt if it touches extremely hot foods

Eliminate any confusion about microwaveable plastics by following manufacturer's directions. If there is not a label indicating microwave safety, assume the container or plastic wrap is not safe for the microwave and do not use it. If a plastic utensil is melting or emitting a bad odor, immediately remove it from the microwave oven and do not

Paper products generally work well in the microwave. Waxed paper is handy because it prevents spattering without trapping steam Paper plates, napkins and towels offer easy-cleanup convenience. To be safe, use paper products in the microwave for no more than 10 minutes, and avoid using towels made from recycled paper, which can catch fire. Also, be careful with high-fat and high-sugar foods because cooking them in paper can start a fire, too.

Choose undyed paper products because the dyes on colored paper can leak onto the food Look for products labeled as microwave safe, then follow the manufacturer's instructions.

Use wood and straw products only for short-term heating and cooking With longer cooking, the microwaves can dry and chip or crack the finish on these dishes

For the most part, metal and foil reflect microwaves, preventing food near them from cooking.

Metal works to protect (shield) parts of foods from overcooking First check the owner's manual to see if the manufacturer recommends using metal If so, use only small amounts of foil in proportion to the food, otherwise, microwaves will

Courts to allow limited TV, tape

The Michigan Supreme Court will permit limited use of cameras and recording equipment in state courtrooms on a one year trial basis. The test starts Feb 1

The time has come Chief Jus tice Dorothy Comstock Riley told more than 200 trial and appeals court judges in a state conference up the issue this year after the Citizens' Commission to Improve Michipermit cameras in the courtroom. Earlier, the State Bar Representa-

IN MAY, THE Supreme Court published its proposed order for comment

"As might be expected, the comments we received ranged from wholehearted approval to outright disapproval, with many comments somewhere in between," Riley said.

'After reviewing the comments made by television and radio stations, judges, attorneys, court administrators and the general public, we have approved an order that is nearly identical to the one published for comment last spring," the chief justice said.

"We believe the rules contained in our order balance the public's right to know against the rights of witnesses and other participants in court proceedings.

WHEN THE BEST THING IS TO DO NOTHING

Someday you may experience joint or muscle pain which your doctor says is self-limiting.

By this term, self-limiting, physicians mean that the body's own mechanisms of repair will take over the job of restoring the joint to its previous state of function.

In such cases, physicians are likely to recommend little in the way of drug therapy. Rather, the emphasis will be on moist heat and a judicious balance between rest and exercise.

Such mundane recommendations may strike you as an indication that the doctor has little interest in your problem. However, medical tradition stretching back to Hippocrates, has observed and taught that the measures of heat, rest and exercise provide the most support to the body's own efforts at repair.

You should take these recommendations to be a vote of confidence in your body's ability to heal, and an affirmation that therapy based on long experience still has a role in this age of CAT scans and laser surgery.

Canton team enjoys spirit of competition

staff writer

Once the girls basketball season gets under way. Plymouth Canton coach Rob Neu fully expects the Chiefs to compete with other ball-

But the eight members of the varsity team have given each other quite a bit of competition already

Canton will have a relatively young team, with only two seniors on the roster. However, the Chiefs just might be the most balanced team around, with their talent evenly distributed from top to bottom.

We're eight deep and everyone is "BECAUSE WE have such a competitive group, they challenge each other daily to get ready. There is no set lineup, and it could change daily and it has

Despite the team's youth, people familiar with area basketball agree going to play," said Neu, who begins the Chiefs have the talent necessary his third year coaching the girls var- to be a factor in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

To capitalize on that potential and prepare for some of the heavyweights on its schedule, Canton was active this summer, playing in a Walled Lake league and participating in camps and tournaments in Manistee, Traverse City, Kalamazoo and East Lansing.

"We competed against some of the best teams in the state," Neu said, "and provided ourselves with a strong playing base.

"WE'VE GOT A good group of athletes that like to be challenged. If we can maintain good work habits, improve our skills and play with intelligence, we should be able to challenge everybody on our schedule."

The Chiefs were 13-8 last year, won the Western Division title and return three players from that team. If one player figures more prominently in the Canton scheme, that would probably be 5-foot-11 senior Karen Boluch, who was second team all-area in '86 and enters her third year as a starter.

Boluch, who led the Chiefs in scoring and rebounding with respective averages of 12 and 10 per game, has moved from the perimeter and will play the post.

"Karen has worked really hard this summer at improving her foot work and developing her hands for post play," Neu said. "We look to her for a lot of leadership on the court."

THE OTHER returning players are 5-7 senior Heather Miller and 5-5 junior Michelle Fortier.

Miller plays small forward and will be asked to rebound and help with the scoring. Fortier, who plays guard and led the team in assists, has improved her ball-handling skills and is becoming a fine playmaker, Neu said. She made the all-star team at the Traverse City camp.

team: Candi Jones, Amanda Bell,

Kris Marquard, Susan Ferko and

FERKO, 5-11 sophomore, will help Boluch in the post, and Jones, 5-9 forward, is best known for her defensive play.

Ferko was the junior varsity's top rebounder and will continue to get better in the post, Neu said, and Jones "is a physical player who ends up where the ball is."

Those two provided the jayvee team's height, and Bell (5-5 junior). Marquard (5-5 junior) and Russell (5-2 sophomore) are guards who will help make the Chiefs a quick, transi-

Bell, the leading scorer with a 15point average for the jayvees, is a shooting guard and, with her range from outside, will enable Canton to take advantage of the three-point rule this fall.

MARQUARD IS a good ball handler and passer, but can also score. Fortier may not have Bell's range, but can shoot the jumper, too. Russell, with her quickness, is an excellent defensive player and takes care of the ball well on offense, Neu said.

Canton will be tested early, opening the season Saturday at home against Sarnia St. Pat's, which has won the Ontario provincial championship three of the last six years. Then comes the annual Mercy Hoops Classic, followed by games with defending WLAA champ Plymouth Salem and defending Catholic League champ Birmingham Marian.

"That's really important to the outcome of our season," Neu said. because it will challenge us to get

"It's not important in terms of wins and losses. It will allow us toevaluate where we're at and where we need to be

We're not going to sneak up on anybody," he added. "We're just going to get ready to play and take each team as they come. Our goal is to improve every day and get ready for the state tournament."

Salem overcomes weather, Bulldogs in win

Neither rain nor soggy turf could dampen Plymouth Salem's soccer game Friday night, but the Rocks managed to put a damper on Brighton's

Canton coach Rob Neu makes a point during practice. His team is expected to mount a strong bid to repeat in its divi-early-season hopes. Salem got its 1987 season under way with a 4-1 victory on the same Brighton field where the Class A champion Salem girls team defeated Midland in the state semifinals last spring.

Brighton usually fields a strong boys team and no doubt would have been even more optimistic with a victory over the Rocks.

But that was not to be, as Salem frustrated the Bulldogs by scoring early and then holding them scoreless in the second half.

"WE KNEW they'd be tough, but we played well." Rocks coach Ken Johnson said. "I was very pleased; We had great passing.

"(The Bulldogs) are a good team, but we have a good team, too.

The thick grass seemed especially heavy from the recent storms and could have been a problem soccer had the Salem outfit not made a conscious effort said. "The short passes are going to skid along a little farther, and on the quick turns, be aware that it's going to be more slippery than usual.

"THEY HANDLED it pretty well. They're a pretty brainy team. With eight senior starters, they've got a good head for what it takes," John-perennial Ohio power Toledo St. John's last week, jumped in front 2-0 on goals by Jeff Gold and Don Brighton made it 2-1 at halftime, but Salem locked up the win with second-half goals from Joe Cosenza and Denny Reynolds. Gold also had two assists and Randy Balconi one.

A pair of defenders, Don Nichols (sweeper) and Mike Ulaszek (stopper), had "great" games, and goalie Dave O'Malley was outstanding, Johnson

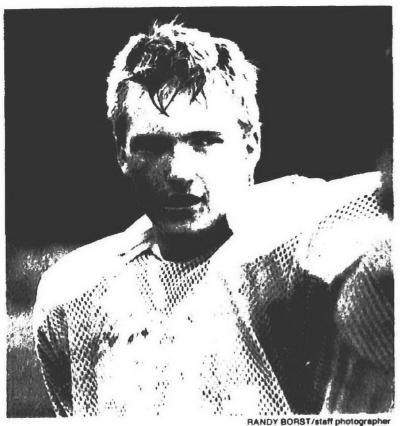

"EVEN THOUGH we won reasonably easy, they had some good shots, and Dave had to come out and dive at their feet a few times," he said. The Rocks compete Saturday in the Plymouth

Invitational at Centennial Educational Park. In a pair of 10 a.m. openers, Salem plays Grand Blanc and Plymouth Canton meets Redford Catholic Central. The consolation game will be played at 3 p.m., the final at 5 p.m. The $2 admission ### price is good for all games. Perennial contenders It's tradition: Hawks always near the top

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

Most football coaches would be singing the blues if they had to replace every starter on offense.

And most football teams would be faced with a rebuilding year, if not a panic situation, under such circum-

But if you're coach John Herrington and tradition-rich Farmington Harrison, it's just business as usual.

The Hawks have been such consistent winners and built such a solid program under Herrington, the school's only football coach in its 17year history, that one group of seniors does its part and another expects to step in and do the same.

"IT'S NORMAL for us, because we usually do have seniors playing," said Herrington of the need to overhaul the offense.

"It's more or less the way we like it. (The underclassmen) have to pay

football

their dues, and when they're seniors they get a chance to play.

We feel we have good replacements," added Herrington, who has a 129-38-1 record at Harrison. "We worked hard during the off season to put the offense together, so we think we'll be a good offensive team."

How successful the Hawks are will depend a lot on sophomore quarterback Millard Coleman, who started at Albion High School last year. He passed for more than 1,500 yards and 17 touchdowns - outstanding statistics for any quarterback but especially amazing for a freshman.

"HE'S HAD excellent coaching, he's gone to a lot of camps and he's just very mature for his age," Herrington said.

"He has great potential but is only a sophomore, so we don't want to put too much pressure on him early." Coleman's father was transferred to another business office in Southfield, and the family chose to move into the Harrison district last spring because of the Hawks' football reputation.

"Plus, (the younger Coleman) liked our academic atmosphere here," Herrington said. "Millard is a 4.0 student, so he was able to learn our offense very quickly."

COLEMAN (5-9, 160) replaces Class B all-stater Mark Murray and is backed up by junior Rob Mac-Donald (5-9, 155). Not only can Coleman throw the ball, but he is also a scrambler and running threat.

"His quickness gets him out of trouble and gives us a lot of dimensions on offense," Herrington said.

"It will be a balanced offense. We threw more than we ever did last year, so I anticipate more of a balanced offense. But we'll have the quarterback running the ball some, which is unusual."

Seniors Rob Bruhn (5-11, 192), a strong inside runner, and Rich Esker (5-9, 167), the quicker of the two, will share the upback duties in Harrison's I-formation backfield.

THE HAWKS also will rotate tailbacks with seniors Rick Witte (5-11, 170) and Aaron Yaverski (6-2, 200) splitting time. Witte rushed for 248 yards on 45 carries last year, and Yaverski, one of the top sprinters in the Western Lakes Activities Association, gives Harrison a bonafide power runner with his size.

All-league back Scott Bissell was the workhorse last year, rushing for 971 yards on 215 attempts, but the Hawks will divide the work and keep their backs fresh with more depth

Harrison has replacements

But Harrison also has someone ready to step in and do what Scott did Herrington said Both Yaverski and Witte can do many of the same things

Senior Brian Soeder (5-9-150) and sophomore Steve Hill (6-2, 187) will rotate at swingback, and alternating at tight end will be seniors Dave Romps (6-1, 166) and Joe Lichtenberger (6-0, 185)

AT THE wideout. Harrison has a pair of speed burners in junior Chad Burgess (6-2, 170) and senior Steve Bissell (6-0, 166) Burgess is "one of the best athletes on our squad." Herrington said, and Bissell, a converted quarterback. "is too good an athlete not to help us somewhere

The Hawks are high on senior Chris Cox (6-212, 210), who plays center and is considered by the coaching staff to be a big-time college prospect at linebacker

As juniors, Rick Brockhaus (6-0. 190) and Jim Fowlkes (5-11, 186) got a lot of playing time and will become the starting guards

Harrison's tackles are not as experienced, but they have great size. which is a departure from past years, Herrington said Seniors Erin Reinsmith (6-3, 278) and Jim Addis (6-3, 225) are set to start.

"THEY WERE pretty green last year, but they have improved their strength and quickness through our weight program. Herrington said We think we'll be able to power the ball over them because of their

The Hawks have a little more experience on defense where five starters return. Two of them, junior Jeff Skinner (5-8, 226) and senior Mark Bonasso (6-2, 200), started the second game a year ago following a seasonopening loss to West Bloomfield and have been regulars ever since

Both are very aggressive and had very good years." Herrington said

"WE SHOULD be strong back there, but they need to improve over last year." Herrington said

The potential is there They participated in the Wayne State passing league and got a lot of experience

Senior Bob Hird (5-6, 152) is cut from the same mold as past noseguards, and Fowlkes and senior Rob Heath (5-8, 185) will be the ends.

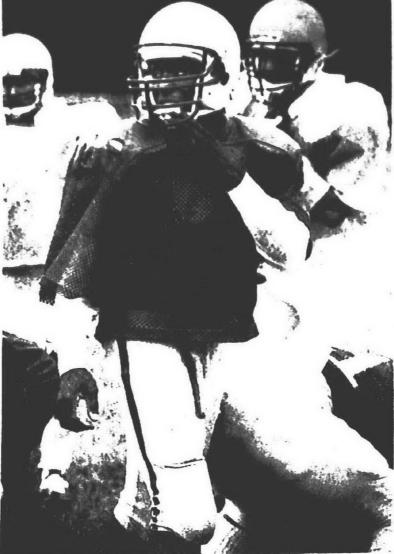

Harrison graduated inside linebackers Gary Schwedt, who was the leading tackler and is playing for Albion College, and Jack Funkhouser, but Herrington is confident Cox, senior Larry Turner (5-9, 168) and junior Scott Nichols (5-9, 165) can replace them.

HERRINGTON is concerned, however, about the kicking game since veteran special teams coach Bob Sallow is ill and unable to attend practice. He helped to develop four all-state kickers (Dave Blackmer, Paul Rogind. Mark Alcantara and Brett Homovec) in 17 years at Harrison, and the staff has been unable to pick up the slack in his absence, Herrington said.

As far as personnel, Hill, who booted four field goals in one game as a junior varsity player, will do the place kicking, and either Romps. Coleman or Dan Justice (5-9, 148) will handle the punting.

Harrison, the defending WLAA champion, was 6-0 in the Western Division and 10-2 overall last year, losing to Marysville in the state semifinals. Therefore, it's no surprise the Hawks, who have competed in the state playoffs six of the last 11 years, are being mentioned as the division favorite again.

"I THINK you'd just as soon know people are pointing for you and know you're on top. That means you have to be up for every game.

We tell the kids tradition doesn't win games," added Herrington, who has had only one losing season in the past 17. The Hawks were 4-5 in 1972. Each team is different, and they have to do it on their own.

Rockets eye playoffs again

staff writer

Even three days of sustained rainfall can't dampen Westland John Glenn's outlook for the 1987 prep football season.

That's because the Rockets will be making a bid for their third straight Class A playoff berth under coach Chuck Gordon.

"This team has a chance to be a good team," said Gordon, now in his 11th season. "The one thing we need is good work habits and I think we have that. The other key is senior leadership.

Last year, Glenn (10-2) was the surprise of the playoffs, upsetting Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor Pioneer on successive weeks before suffering a last-minute 6-3 loss to Muskegon in the state semifinals.

Gone are four Glenn players who made first team All-Observer, including wide receiver Mike Hammontree, now playing at Eastern Michigan University; kicker Tony Svaluto (Ferris State); linebacker Doug Strehl (Grand Valley); and lineman Steve Litwin. Other notable losses to graduation include quarterback Steve Hawley and running back Paul Beasley

WE WERE VERY average on offense last year, but this year we hope to be more explosive," Gordon said. "The one thing we had a year ago was great defense. We gave up only 30 points all season and we'd like to keep that up this year."

Filling Hawley's shoes at quarterback is senior Clint Straub, a 5-10, 150-pound senior who possesses a strong arm, according to Gordon.

"We'll run some option, but we'll plan to throw more this year," said the Glenn coach. "I'm very comfortable with Clint at quarterback. He can throw.

Tailback Kevin Wilson (5-9, 180), a valuable asset to the Glenn running game, adds valuable experience.

"He's just keeps getting better and better," Gordon said.

The fullback spot is being contested by a pair of seniors, Bob Cleaver (6-0, 170) and Brian Wolf (5-11, 162). Straub's biggest target is 6-6, 245a major college prospect who started all last season. He caught a TD pass in last year's playoff against Pi-

MORE TARGETS for the Glenn quarterback include holdover Pat Pettit (6-1, 170) and Danny Keck (5-10, 160) Both are seniors.

A big and experienced offensive line will provide plenty of blocking and protection,led by returning starting guard Chris Scheffer (6-1 230), one of the Rockets' quickest lineman, guard Larry Webb (6-1, 220); tackle Ryan Robertson (6-3, 233); tackle Bill Richards (6-2, 228), and center Chuck Pomorski (6-0.

"We'll stay with what we've done in the past with a few new wrinkles offensively," Gordon said. "There's nothing substantially different.'

Defensively, nose guard Joe Jazrawi (5-6, 206) will be flanked by senior Jerry Cleaver (6-1, 185) and Scheffer, one of team's tri-captains The ends will be senior Mark Bauschat (6-2, 170), a starter last year. and Bill Piepsney (6-1, 186).

Tri-captain Kurt Kuban (6-1, 201) returns as a starter at linebacker He will be joined by Bryant Satterlee (6-2, 190), who is one of the few junior starters.

THE SECONDARY, which is missing such standouts as Hammontree and Greg Bates, does return Pettit, a tri-captain, Derek Strehl (5-10, 180), Chris Lovett (5-11, 160) and Dale Yanick (5-11, 160), a junior.

Last year's punter. Don Sprinkle. has also taken over the placekicking

"We've had some inconsistency so far," Gordon said. "We look good sometimes and not as good at other times.

But the Rockets should be contenders again based on their playoff experience.

"I think we'll be improved, but everybody we'll play is improved, too. said Gordan.

The Rockets open the season Friday at home against Belleville before tackling the Western Lakes Activities Association schedule.

Glenn fans will have seen a ray of sunlight by then.

T'S A GREAT IDEA but the US Amateur Baseball Federation should have logged some earlier dates when it decided to stage a "Super World Series" over Labor Day weekend

The double-elimination tournament for 15- and 16-year-olds. which is part of the official Olympic Development program, begins Friday and concludes Monday. Sept 7 in Youngstown, Ohio

The U.S. Amateur Baseball Federation invited three national champions to participate Phenix City. Ala, the Dixie Youth Baseball Association champions. Marietta. Unfortunately, five Westland Federation members also play high school football, which kicks off its season this weekend

The five players - Bryant Satterlee. Dale Yanick and Dan Croft. all of the Westland John Glenn High, along with Mike Heard of Wayne Memorial and Bill Bannon of Dearborn Divine Child - have been backed into a corner forced to decide between football or base-

THE WESTLAND TEAM tuned up for the "Super World Series" by playing against a group of Japaneese all-stars last week at Livonia's Ford Field

It was apparent that these five players have been put between a rock and a hard place Their loyalties between two sports and their coaches have been subjected to a ridiculous test.

Glenn football coach Chuck Gordon has been flexible about the matter. He has excused the players from some preseason workouts when conflicts arose But once the season starts. Gordon expects a full

Falcon golfers do well

Farmington High School could be headed for a successful season in boys golf if Wednesday's Farmington Invitational at Kensington Metro Park is an indication.

The Falcons were runners-up to Lake Orion, finishing just two strokes off the pace.

North Farmington's Scott Millman had the highest individual place among all of the Farmington prep golfers.

Millman shot a 7-over-par 78 to tie Detroit Country Day's Todd Moore for fourth place. South Lyon's John Cook was medalist with a 4-over 75. The top five also included Walled Lake Central's Gary Boyd (76) and Novi's Matthew Chirgwin (77). Farmington, led by Craig Abernathy and his round of 81, compiled a 417 team score. Jason Tratechave shot 82 to pace Farmington Harrison's seventh-place finish.

Fun fare at the fair

It's Michigan State Fair time once again, and the corn dogs are piled high as an elephant ear. Corn dogs, elephant ears and funnel cakes are just some of the odd and tantalizing munchies that have been baffling and delighting fair-goers for years. For an insider's look at fair food, turn to Page 7D.

Hocus focus

Photographer creates his own crazy magic

By Sharon Dargay staff writer

The sounds of heavy machinery roar through open doorways, mingling with hot summer air outside a strip of look-alike industrial shops on Troy's south side.

This is a neighborhood where men labor in perspiration-stained T-shirts amid clanking metal monsters.

But behind one nondescript door, shut tight against the afternoon sun and labeled simply "Still Life," the air is cool and filled with the music of big-band jazz.

Inside, a pet parrot jostles from foot to foot on its perch.

A hairdresser fusses over an attractive young model.

And a man adds cigarettes to a Chinese wok.

Welcome to the wacky world of commercial photography, where menthol stir-fry and floating beer bottles are all in a day's work for Tony Segielski at Still/Life Studios.

Segielski, known among his peers as a master of lighting and special effects, is finishing off a three-day assignment for a Fortune 500 firm in his three-year-old studio.

A model will stir the steamy wok dozens of times during the photo session, while nervous ad agency reps, studio representative Jeff Wiener and Segielski's bird, Yo Yo, watch the action.

The first task? To make convincing steam.

"Photography still, to a certain extent, is kinda magical," Segielski said, stretching out vowels in a Brooklyn accent. "It's just a crazy business and that's what makes it

"The problem is, to make it look simple, you gotta make it look like you didn't do anything to make it look normal. But to make it look normal you gotta go crazy.'

There's a story behind that pic-

Its construction was authorized by President George Washington, nearly 200 years - and 40 presidents -

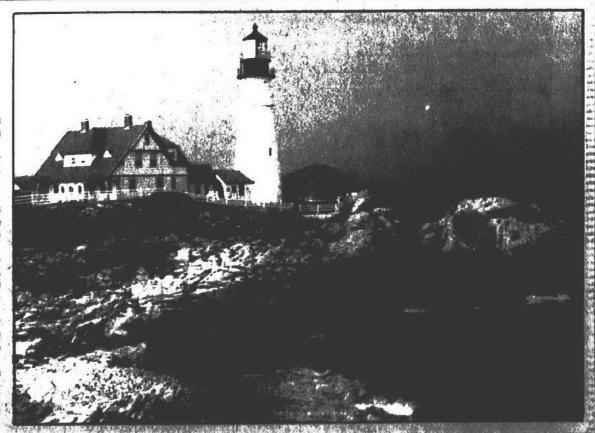

Street Scene reader L. Walters snapped the towering structure with a Minolta 28-70 macro-zoom at f16 using a tripod.

The light, located on Cape Elizabeth near Portland, is still in use. It was one of four colonial lighthouses authorized by Washington and dedi-

Congress appropriated the money for the construction in 1788, and the lighthouse was completed by two Portland stone masons in 1790.

The original whale-oil lamps were later replaced by kerosene lamps, Today the light uses a 1,000-watt, airport-style beacon, which can be seen for 20 miles.

world game played with a leather ball has been a source of riots. Fields in South America even have moats around them to protect the players from frenzied spectators. What does the game do to Bela Dicker? Why, soccer inspires this 70year-old resident of Keego Harbor to ride his bike to the field behind his apartment every Sunday morning.

There, he might pick up some broken glass on the field and wait for the soccer action to begin. 'Shoot to the left'," shouts Dicker in a Hungarian accent as the play unfolds in front of him. He then slaps his knee. "Ohh, it's too late!" DICKER DOESN'T have any rela-

It can also be heard in his voice. Not for a moment does he take his eyes off the field as he watches an Michigan Independent Soccer League over-17 match between the Bloomfield Blast and the Bloomfield

Hey, it might not be like the World Cup games Dicker witnessed between Hungary and England in the 1950s, but this collection of collegeaged and 30ish-looking gents are putting on a good enough show for him.

The match is more than just a playoff game. Wily veterans on the Nomads are pitted against the upstart youth on the Blast.

The match is adult recreational soccer at its finest. Adult soccer, you say? It's one of the fastest growing participatory sports around.

Joerg Hoefer, president of the Michigan Soccer Association, estimates 35,000 adults are playing the game statewide. The association is the governing body for eight adult leagues, not including the Michigan Independent Soccer League. Membership for adults in the MSA has doubled in the last year.

Caring is his job

Helping the boys think through difficult questions is part of Storey's job. Here he discusses the house rules with one of the boys, who feels they aren't fair.

By Carol Azizian

Far away from their inner-city neighborhoods, from the concrete, steel-cold reality of guns and the allure of cocaine and prostitutes, the tough guys are playing ball.

Amid amber waves of corn. mooing cows and steel-red trac-

They're learning how to pick velvet-leaf weeds, raise spindly legged calves and clean dormitory-style ranch houses And they're trying real hard to get along with other tough their "brothers" guys, ages 11-17.

These are guys who have stolen cars from parking lots, sniffed gasoline and snorted cocaine, rebelled against their parents, beaten up kids on their block and. maybe, raped a little girl

They've had a rough life. They're not in the mood to listen to any self-righteous do-gooder from the suburbs telling them about right and wrong morality and immorality, good and evil.

Who does this Mr Nice Guy think he is anyway?

HIS NAME'S Ken Storey He's a 30-year-old. 6-foot-tall. blond beach-boy-type from Garden City with a heart as big as all outdoors. He's spiritual leader, therapist, big brother and friend to 10 of the 72 "troubled or delinquent" boys at Teen Ranch, a state-approved rehabilitation facility near Marlette.

On a typical sweltering summer day. Ken settles a heated argument between Kevin, a 5-foot-9, 210-pound kid from Flint, and Bill, a 5-11, 175-pound boy from Detroit. Kevin teases Bill, a good athlete, about missing a fly ball. Bill, fuming, challenges Kevin to a fight: "If you're gonna run your mouth, just back it up."

Tactful, diplomatic Ken steps in: "You've got to be more sensitive to the fact that people get their feelings hurt," he reprimands Kevin 'And you can't be so thinskinned," he tells Bill. "We know you're a good athlete. 'No one's going to call you weak," Ken continues. "If they do, it's a joke, and you can laugh it off. You know you're tough.

'Now, if they called you ugly, I could see why you'd take offense." Ken teases The tough guys laugh it off, give each other a soulful handshake and get back to the serious business of playing ball. We don't have a bland, clinical relationship. It has to be real, like a father and son," the referee re-STOREY, WHO recently married, doesn't have any kids But he considers the boys at Teen Ranch part of his extended family. He doesn't live with them. Young couples set up housekeeping with each group of 10 boys and act as surrogate parents. It's all part of the ranch's goal - to simulate a family environment. The teens are referred to the ranch by the Department of Social Services, Department of Mental Health and probate courts throughout Michigan. Although

'We don't have a bland. clinical relationship. It has to be real, like a father and son.'

> - Ken Storey Teen Ranch counselor

the ranch is a private, non-profit agency, it receives a third of its funding from the state. The remaining two-thirds comes from private donors. The boys leave when therapists determine their behavior has improved - anywhere from six months to two

Ken spends a couple of hours each day weeding through reams of paper work and reporting to state agencies and parents. He earns less than $20,000 a year. and he's turned down at least one job offer that would have placed him in a much higher income bracket

'I'm not the type of person who needs a new car or fancy vacations," he said. "I'm content."

Every morning he leaves his $175-per-month, tiny, upper-story tiat in Marlette and drives his 1980 Silver Toyota Corolla to work His office is a small room in the Teen Ranch Youth for Christ building in town Sierra Club posters, snapshots of the ranch's mountain-climbing trip in the Grand Tetons, a picture of Ken and his wife. Dawn, a stuffed toy raccoon named Rick and a Billy Graham biography clutter his wall and desk space Ken isn't cut out to be a paper shuffler. He really shines when he is with the guys at Teen Ranch, testing the psychological theories he learned in school.

Both his academic and personat backgrounds prepared him for a job that requires him to be friend and authority figure

There's also time for fun: Storey gets a dunking from one of the boys.

Troubled boys get direction

Three Teen Ranch boys consented to tell us their backgrounds, and their feelings about Ken Storey. Their names have been changed to protect their privacy.

BILL, 16, DETROIT: "I'm here because of depression. My grades went down. Relations at home went down. My mom's been disabled with arthritis for 10 years My sister doesn't live at home. I couldn't accept failure - in basketball. football. school. I wanted perfect or nothing, and usually I ended up with nothing. "I hated this place when I first came here. I hated being away from my friends

'Mr Storey taught me to love myself and accept failure. He said. Don't put your expectations too high and When you love yourself, you begin to love others for what they are.

He gets a lot of stuff from the Bible He never forces it. He talks like a friend I feel I can talk to him about anything.

Twe been here a year I get out this month, and I'm going to a foster home in North Branch to finish high school here Hopefully. I'll get a (college) scholarship I don't know what I want to do. Maybe. I'll become a doctor."

Detroiter Bobby Laurel's longawaited film "The Rosary Murders is not a bad movie

But it could be a better movie.

Right from the start, let me say that you shouldn't go to this made-in-Detroit, set-in-Detroit film expecting to play the old murder-mystery whodunit game. Rather early on. you'll be clued in more or less to the identity of the man who's wasting nuns and priests all over town The real mystery here is why

Based on William X Kienzle's popular novel of the same name The Rosary Murders" is a horror movie. When the house lights dim, get ready for a couple of scenes that may just jolt you right out of your

"The Rosary Murders," directed by Fred Walton (who also, some years back, directed the chilling 'When a Stranger Calls") focuses on Father Robert Koesler, a Catholic priest beset with a problem The mass murderer has come to Koesler and revealed himself in the confessional as "the one," after which Koesler does a little detective work on his own and comes up with the exact identity of the man.

THEREFORE, HE FINDS himself with an even bigger problem. He knows who the killer is but is helpless to do anything about it since he cannot break the Church's sacred sear of confession

Donald Sutherland's Koesler is an appealing combination of fear and strength, desperately trying somehow to come to grips with the impossible dilemma he faces. Sutherland's offbeat charm, style and personal appearance go far in "The Rosary Murders" to underscore his charac ter's unique and lonely struggle

Other characters in "The Rosary Murders" don't fare so well. Belinda Bauer is a sultry news reporter. She spends a lot of her time casting meaningful glances at the good priest and seems merely gratuitous

In the role of Father Ted Nabors. pastor of Detroit's Holy Redeemer Church. Charles Durning is hard to read It's difficult to say if his character is supposed to be just old-fashioned and rather misguided or downright cold and unfeeling.

At one time, you'll see a playful smile on his face, a twinkle in his eye He appears to be a rather comical, appealing figure, caring about the very real problems of some of his highly troubled parishioners

TWO FURTHER problems with 'The Rosary Murders." The horror in this horror movie though initially effective, occurs so much, so often, so quickly that it loses much of that effectiveness after awhile

Secondry, this movie theme and appearance - is a very dark movie. One yearns for just a bit of relief from the shadowy corridors. the labyrinthine tunnels, the graveyards, the black-and-scarlet death scenes. But except for a couple of light moments (and these at the start ot the film) none comes

The only certainties in life are death, taxes and hungry people at the Michigan State Fair?

OK, that might be stretching things a bit. But the truth is, not too many people escape the Woodward-Eight Mile fairgrounds without tasting a corn dog here, a funnel cake there.

While you're at it, toss in some elephant ears and "fat balls," globular pastries filled with pudding.

If you've got a hunger — and hearty appetites are legend at the state fair — as many as 90 food vendors will be hankering to sell you their greasy, cinnamonpowdered wares through Labor Day next Monday. when the fair concludes.

Most will be sampling the strange goodies because they're fun and different. And isn't that the reason peo-

"PEOPLE REALLY have smiles when they start biting on it," said funnel cake vendor Harry Mashigian of Bloomfield Hills. "It's a fun thing to do, a fun thing to make and a very funny thing to eat."

Mashigian and his wife. Joanne, have been placing piping hot funnel cakes into customers hands at the State Fair since 1981. The pair owns Robbies Funnel Cake Factory.

Poured from a funnel onto a skillet, it takes one minute for the batter to snap, crackle and pop into irregular, hollow shapes.

"It's a big hit because it's being prepared while a customer puts in the order." said Mashigian, who estimated he has sold as many as 1,200 funnel cakes in one day. "It's popping, you see it happen, and it's in their

He said six burners can simultaneously produce the taste treats. For finishing touches, cinnamon and powdered sugar are generously sprinkled on.

People go to fairs to sample different things, and this is very different," Mashigian said, pointing to one of his tube-like funnel cakes.

NINE INCHES in diameter, they cost $1.50 plain, $2.50 with fruit and whipped-cream toppings.

"It smells like freshly baked bread, except it has a cinnamon aroma," Mashigian added. "That aroma infiltrates throughout the park.

The comments we always get are, 'Please hurry up, we can't wait to put our teeth into it, we're Mashigian said such fun foods are as much a carnival staple as the ferris wheel, and others agree.

'You could spend an hour just watching people, seeing how they dive into these things," said John Baldy, marketing director for the State Fair.

According to elephant ears vendor Harold Case, the large, wafer-thin pastries he sells are described in

"THEY'RE CALLED elephant ears because they're supposed to look like one," said Case, who isn't working the State Fair this year.

"But I've heard people call them 'beaver tails' and 'flying saucers.' I don't know anything else I could say about them except they just look different." Baldy said five other vendors will be selling elephant ears at the state fair, some with cinnamon-sugar toppings, others with more daring toppings.

"It's kind of funny watching people eat them," he explained. "Some tear it, some dive right into it. They usually wind up getting some on both sides of their

· They are being served by Willy Walraevens at the Rhinelander Deli. Baldy said Walraevens has been named the top small concessionaire of the Michigan State Fair for 15 straight years.

ACCORDING TO Baldy, the "fat balls" are a deepfried, round pastry, about the size of a small apple. They are crunchy on the outside and filled with pudding on the inside.

And when was the last time you munched on a "square" cinnamon roll? Well, they're also available at this year's state fair, Baldy said. About 4 inches thick and 4 inches wide, the specialties are being served up by Omar Botana of RIC Conphant ears, corn dogs, funnel cakes and other curious delights.

They're an extreme hit." said Baldy. "He's always making them fresh Odds are when you go there and get one it's not very old and it's warm

Both Walraevens and Botana could not be reached for comment about their carnival creations.

Of course, typical fair food will also be available, such as cotton candy, candy apples, shish kebab, hot dogs and ice cream

SOME WILL SELL corn dogs, frankfurters wrapped in corn meal and served on a stick Similarly, Mashigian is selling "funnel dogs," using regular batter instead of corn meal

No matter what state fair patrons bite into this week, they are sure to leave with smiling faces and

And that, vendors will tell you is what carnivals are all about

"It's something I always dreamed about," said vendor Case, who has sold elephant ears for three years.

I always wanted to do something like this

The Michigan State Fair isn't the only place where strange and wonderful treats can be found

On the 150th anniversary of its statehood, Michigan was stage front and center on the Mall in Washington, D.C., in June.

That two-week-long presentation was recreated on the East Lansing campus of Michigan State University last week in the Michigan Festival.

How do you show what this state of ours is all about? What face do you turn to the world? How do you tell the story of a place as diverse as this - land of lakes and rivers, farms and forests, big cities and small towns; home to hundreds of different ethnic

The planners, and there were literally hundreds, told the story through the people, their crafts, foods, entertainment, celebrations and livehoods. It became a story of how we live and what makes us

Julia Wesaw of Hartford, a Potawatomi, and Agnes Rapp of Berrien Springs, an Ottawa married to a Potawatomi, demonstrated how to make black ash splint baskets at both festivals.

As she carefully scraped the rough surface of the long, pliable strip of black ash to a polished sheen, Wesaw told those gathered around her, "My mother and grandmother did this - I learned by watching. When I was very little, I used to steal the splints from my grandmother. By the time she discovered it, I had made them RAPP PICKED UP a handful of sweet grass, "We use this for trimming and weave it right into the basket.

"Washington was great," said Wesaw, "we really enjoyed it." Rapp added, "We met a lot of people and made a lot of friends." And all their baskets in the gift booth sold, so in East Lansing they were trying to restock the inventory.

Not far away in the Michigan Folklife part of the Festival, Jim Wicks of McMillan was holding court, describing the fine points of luring and spearing pike. Wicks had a display of his duck and fish decoys all around him. Ice fishing decoys are, reportedly, unique to the Michigan/Wisconsin area.

Wicks said a fish will recognize his meal by profile and be attracted by color. Consequently, his bright orange, blue and green fish decoys are carved and painted to have an exciting glittery

Wicks, a fine storyteller, said he will have his work in the North American Wildfowl Carving Championship at the Holiday Inn and Holidome Center of Livonia, Friday through Sunday, Sept. 18-20. The show, open to the public, begins at 3 p.m. that Friday.

IN THE RED-AND-WHITE-striped entertainment tent, just across the lawn, Thimbleberry, a Finish musical group, was just completing a set of songs, and the Yemeni Fokloric Dance Group was ready to take over the stage.

The spokesman for the four male Yemeni dancers from Dearborn asked the audience if they had heard of Yemen and if they knew where it was. The response was less than overwhelming.

So the speaker responded with a broad smile, "We just discovered oil — so in two years everybody will know Yemen In Yemen (where oil was discovered in volume in the late '50s), the men are the dancers, and many of the lively dances they dem-

Detroiters Eddie Burns, singer/guitarist, and John Morris of the Michigan Blues captured the interest of listeners with their songs of love, friendship and poignant memories.

Just beyond, Palestinian needleworkers Samiha Abusalah and her friend and teacher, Amnah Baraka, and Abusalah's two small daughters were at work embroidering beautiful handmade dresses to wear for weddings, festivals and special celebrations. Abusalah said she moved to Dearborn from her home in Jordan in 1972. The intricately embroidered dresses may take up to a year to complete, Abusalah said, but they are made to preserve a heritage, rather than to sell.

oriented acts.

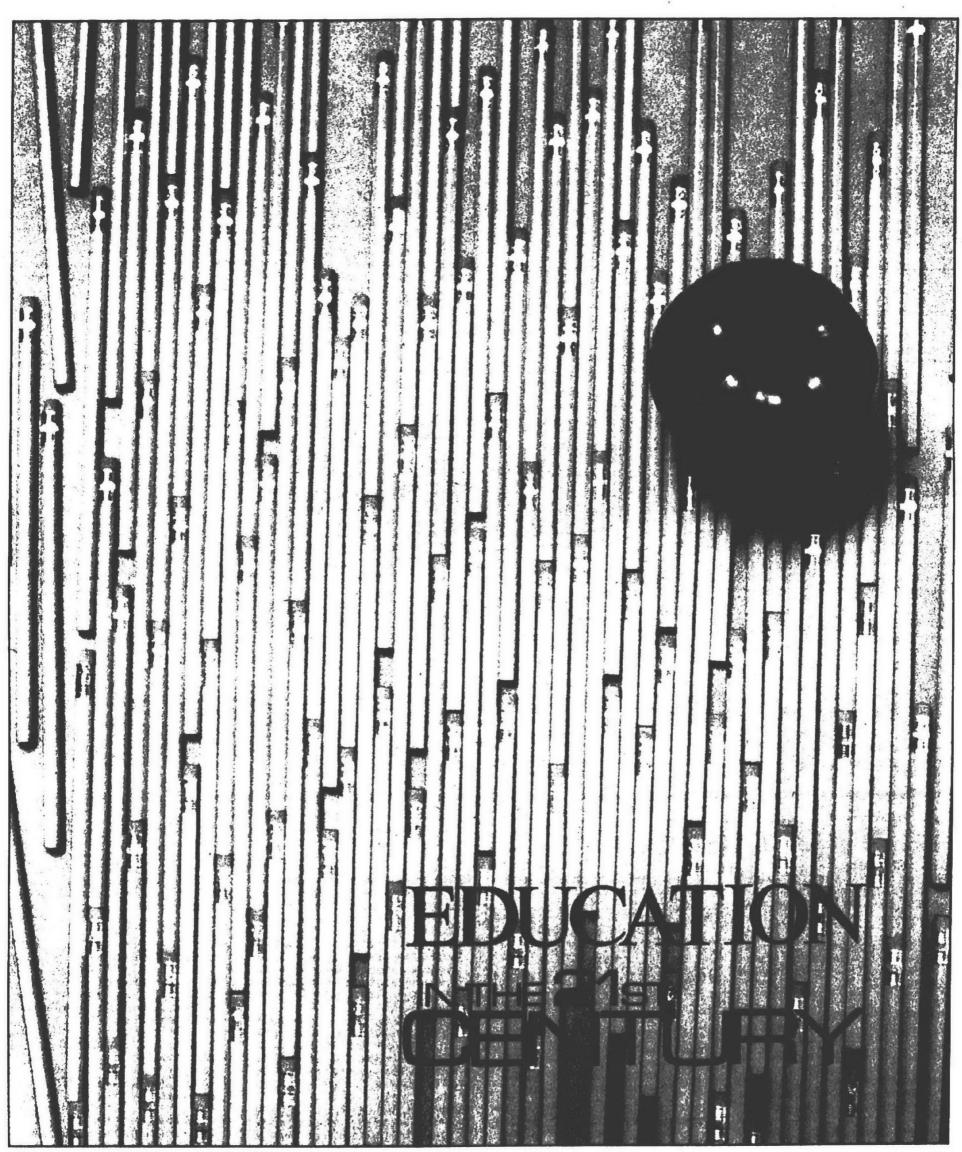

For those who wanted to be informed as well as entertained there were exhibits and programs in many of the university buildings. In the Foodways tents you could learn how to cook everything from muskrat to Upper Peninsula pasty and African, Mexican, Lebanese and Finnish delicacies.

Every night at 8 p.m. on the Coca-Cola Main Stage, outstanding entertainers from all around the state were in the stoplight.

For those with a couple of free days who wanted to become better acquainted with Michigan and to begin to understand what makes it bloom and grow, the 1987 Festival was the place to be.

Jim Wicks of McMillan in the Upper Peninsula shows off the duck and fleh decoys he has made. McMillan will have his work in the North American Wildlew Carving Championship at the Hollday Inn and Holldome Center of Livonia, Friday through Sunday, Sept. 18-20.

Schools failing U.S. future

This nation is at risk.

And it is not because middle-class students are denied a high-quality, rigorous education. Our current system is simply not preparing a substantial number of Americans to survive, let alone prosper, in the 21st century - 13 years away.

... our republic is in greater danger from the combined problems of school dropouts and youth unemployment than it is from academic deficiencies," says Harold Howe II, a senior lecturer at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, who was commissioner of education under President Lyndon Johnson, vice president at the Ford Foundation and co-chair of the Educational Equality Task Force.

Almost everyone concerned for the future says the number one problem facing the United States is young people dropping out of school

THE STUDENTS who drop out today are the functionally illiterate adults of tomorrow, now estimated at about 23 million people in the United States.

Here are the effects

- "The fact is, the basic skills of our workforce, particularly at the entry level but not only there, are simply not good enough for the United States to compete in a world economy." - David T. Kearns, chairman and chief executive of Xerox
- · We've been held captive of the idea that you had to have some people on bottom to be on the top, and the way to keep them on the bottom was to deprive them of an education ... They (employers) don't want high school dropouts . . . They prefer college graduates if they can get them," U.S. Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn.
- · "It's a frustrating problem, one that is not easily solved. Since 1962, when our record keeping started, 802,000 students have dropped out of Michigan high schools. That's a tragic waste of human potential." - Gary D. Hawks, Michigan's interim superintendent of public instruc-

· We watch people come in every day into the Job Service office that cannot fill out an application. They're embarrassed and they leave, or we cannot refer them on to a job because you've got business and industry saying, 'Don't send us anybody that can't read or write." - Julie Kilgrow, Idaho state employment direc-

• "It is imperative that the reading level of adults, particularly those between the ages of 25 and 50, be raised in order for them to be trained or retrained for current and future jobs. Providing resources to develop a literate, productive citizenry is one of the most important investments the state can make in its future." - Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

· "The lack of an education dooms our young people to a life of struggle and lack of opportunity." - Thomas K. Gilhool, Pennsylvania education secretary.

RECENTLY THE CARNEGIE Forum on Education and the Economy released a report, "A Nation Prepared: Teachers for the 21st century." The task force took note of the declining U.S. population coupled with a high illiteracy rate and continuing drop out problem.

This task force rejects the view that America must choose between quality and equity in education policy. It cannot afford to do so. The country must have both.

"As the world economy changes shape, it would be fatal to assume that America can succeed if only a portion of our schoolchildren succeed. . . . While it was once possible for people to succeed in this society if they were simply willing to work hard, it is increasingly difficult for the poorly educated to find jobs. A growing number of permanently unemployed people seriously strains our social fabric," the report said. "American business already spends billions of dollars a year retraining people who arrive at the workplace with inadequate education

The task force also projects a decline in the workforce: "The proportion of the population in the prime working years will decline steadily in the years ahead. Yet, this smaller working-age group will have to support a growing number of those who have retired from the work force "

Stratifying society

U.S. Secretary of Labor William Brock in July told a conference of educators in Denver that illiteracy is bringing America "perilously close" to becoming a two-class

"THERE COULD SOON be two groups of people: one employed, educated, happy, with enormous opportunities, and the other not just unemployed, but unemployable," Brock told members of the Education Commission of the States.

Brock said an increasingly illiterate work force, combined with an increasingy sophisticated work place, could derail the American economy by the year 2000. Seventy-five to 80 percent of American jobs created in the next decade will require post-secondary education, Brock

But he added that assembly-line jobs, now 12 to 14 percent of the job market, are expected to fall to about 5 percent in the next 13 years. The new jobs will require educated workers who can maintain the machines that are replacing manual

"The jobs of the future increasingly favor the most-educated segments of our society," he said. "We just can't compete with other nations if we have workers who can't complete a job form or read a 'Danger' sign. We can't afford it politically, socially, economically

Besides the 23 million adults considered

functionally illiterate, it is estimated that 13 percent of all 17-year-olds in the United States are functionally illiterate and as many as 40 percent of minority youths.

No one knows precisely how many people are illiterate because statistics are difficult to obtain. Few people want to admit they can't read. To assume completion of a certain grade level indicates literacy is to assume too much

Dropout dilemma

According to a report by the Michigan Department of Education to the Legislature in February, "Dropouts are prone to higher than average rates of unemploy ment and frequent and lengthy periods of welfare. They are disproportionately represented in lower-paying occupations because they lack the skills and experience required for advancement.'

The state Department of Corrections has reported that nearly 70 percent of first-time inmates are school dropouts.

STATE AND FEDERAL money poured into a dozen anti-dropout programs totalled $79.6 million last year, according to the report

"There is little coordination between state agencies providing services," the report said. "Unfortunately, many youth are virtually neglected and receive no services whatsoever because they fail to meet rigid criteria "

The depth of the problem and the concern at all levels are illustrated by Douglas Roberts, deputy superintendent of public instruction. In a recent interview, Roberts was explaining the cost of higher education in Michigan, but he took time out for this comment

There are two main problems facing education today," he said. "The first is the dropout problem, the second is equitable financing. I believe financing will be the

Fitting school to job market

By Tim Richard staff writer

Educators are rightly puzzled as they plan courses for the economy of the 21st

Industry tells them people with college degrees in computer programming, accounting, marketing and engineering will be in high demand

But what about the other jobs? As Harold L. Hodgkinson, a Washington-based researcher, told the Michigan Department of Education in a terse report this year:

"At the moment, the economist's crystal ball is not revealing much about the new jobs which will come on stream and diversify the economy.

"So how do the state's educational leaders decide on the kinds of jobs they will train people for, when the jobs do not exist

"JUNK JOBS." That term pops up repeatedly in Hodgkinson's description of

"Junk jobs" sometimes are dubbed "McJobs," a slighting reference to hamburger slingers in a fast-food restaurant. There are dozens of $3.35 to $6 an hour jobs, difficult for unions to organize, requiring minimal skills. The work is clean but routine, the avenues for advancement limited, the opportunities for big pay hikes through improved productivity negligible.

Hodgkinson's attitude is much like that of labor leaders: "The state's heartbreaking task has been the conversion of $15 an hour arc welders into (at best) $6 an hour

A MANAGEMENT-oriented view is far different.

The Hudson Institute, an Indianapolis think-tank group whose study "Michigan Beyond 2000" was done for state Senate Republicans, says people should accept the inevitable: "Either wages will be brought into line as a result of union negotiations, or automotive production will gradually relocate to lower wage firms in other parts of the country and the world

In other words, the coming generation will live in smaller houses than their parents could afford and will work for wages that are no longer 20 percent above the rest of the country.

A GOOD SIGN in the 1980s is that job growth will exceed population growth. Forecasting occupations for 1990, the Michigan Employment Security Commission estimates jobs will rise nearly 11 percent (by 407,000, to 4.2 million) while population will rise only 1 percent.

In a nutshell, by 1990:

 Manufacturing jobs in industry will see "sluggish" growth, and motor vehicle production is unlikely ever to hit the pre-recession neak of 1978

 Non-manufacturing jobs in private business will see real growth. These categories cover trade, finance, real estate insurance and "services" - including hotels, repairs, recreation, health care, legal. private education, social welfare and business services

ONLY 14 PERCENT of (Michigan) adults possess college degrees, Hodgkinson noted in his report. And "almost onefourth of the youth today will face adult life without a high school diploma."

College-bound youngsters can get an idea of what skills companies are hiring from a 4,000-page library reference work called "The Career Guide," published by Dun's Marketing Services. It surveys companies in southeastern Michigan and across the U.S. that employ 1,000 or more.

Two points stand out:

First, nearly every company - in manpeople with computer science and math/ in a very few years, civic activists will be worried not only about readin' and 'ritin' illiteracy, but about 'rithmetic illiteracy,

Second, the Governor's Commission on Higher Education in 1984 stressed the need to teach foreign languages at every school level. But personnel recruiters writing for "The Career Guide" almost never mention foreign language skills. A student may be understandably confused about how seriously to take foreign language study.

Drop this class, add that class. Require more science, less history

Since the Soviets launched the space satellite Sputnik three decades ago, it has been popular to play Monday-morning quarterback with what is taught in the schools. Experts abound.

"The programs of one year are set to redress deficiencies of a previous year," said Rebecca Rankin, director of general education for Oakland County Intermediate School District.

That must be a good sign. Schools for the next century will need to look at what has worked and what has failed in the

FOR INSTANCE, the excesses of schooling through the 1950s included tracking students into non-academic programs with watered-down content. After several books critical of education, and the Soviet Union's launch of Sputnik, there was strong reaction.

"The effort to apply progressive theories to the curriculum was not intended to corrupt or weaken it but to render it accessible to increasingly diverse student populations," according to John Goodlad, education researcher, author and director of the Center for Educational Renewal at the University of Washington

Study trends

Two University of Nebraska-Lincoln professors measured what classes graduates of high schools there had taken during 1953, 1963, 1973 and 1983.

For the class of 1953, more than threequarters of the course work was in English, social science, math, business and natural science. Gradually, those subjects declined. By 1983 those courses made up just 64 percent

By 1983, job concerns apparently caused a slight increase in math, business and science, but English and social science continued to drop.

Then came the reports. "A Nation at Risk," which carried the weight of a presidential commission, and a plethora of other studies of education made their de-

Since then, there has been a second wave of education reports.

"The 1980s will be remembered for two developments: the beginning of a sweeping reassessment of the basis of the nation's economic strength and an outpouring of concern for the quality of American education," according to "A Nation Prepared," released in May 1986 by the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Econo-

"Back-to-basics" calls as in "A Nation at Risk" have been well-heeded. As of last year, "Much has been accomplished," according to the Carnegie Forum's report. 'Course requirements have been stiffened, teachers' salaries raised and new standards put in place in most states."

MICHIGAN'S STATE Board of Education, for example, developed a "Blueprint for Action" in 1984.

A carrot for teacher?

The Legislature followed by enacting a high school incentive program, putting state money as a carrot before local school boards to get them to increase graduation requirements and the number of students in academic classes.

State requirements largely reflect those in "A Nation at Risk" - four years in communication, three years in social science, two years in math and science, one year in health and/or physical education. a half-year in computers and two or more years in any combination of foreign language, fine or performing arts and vocaional education.

A recent review of most of the state's 525 school districts showed that in at least one-fifth of those districts, students graduating in 1989 will need to take more "basics" credits than those who graduated in 1986. In raw numbers, 143 districts increased credit hours needed in social science, 126 in science, 126 in mathematics. 120 in computers and 100 in communica-

Another state report, by the Educational Finance Commission, is expected by Sept. 1. It will suggest how to finance more equitable education, closing the gap between richer school districts that spend more than $6,000 per student and poor districts that spend just over $2,000.

educational quality

If that seems drastic, it's necessary, according to the preliminary report: "The Department of Education believes that more than 50 percent of the school districts do not meet the standards of quality needed in course content, student achievement and/or instruction.'

Dr. Rebecca Rankin, curriculum director at the Oakland Intermediate School District, says education must respond to the "accelerated pace of change in our society."

Educators' Holy Grail

District. "In the whole profession, there is a pervasive need of everyone to respond to the accelerated pace of change in our soci-

Society has already changed, according to Gordon Cawelti, director of the national Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development. Our nation's new society is "not agricultural, not manufacturing, but information and service."

SCHOOLS USED to be the place students went for information. But a variety of media now supply "an information flood," according to Rankin. The teacher was once the person to impart this valuable commodity

Today educators are focusing on these broad areas: critical thinking, a global perspective, computer literacy and writing skills.

"Now the society is information rich," Whitmer said. "Now you have to deal with strategies to put the information into life, putting meaning into the information."

That means schools of the future will need to teach higher-level thinking skills. beyond the basics. "National tests have shown that we're doing the basics well. Our kids, at least in reading and math, do well, but they don't know how to think,' Whitmer said.

Students need to know how to analyze, comprehend and figure out issues. Critical thinking is a process, not a class. It goes throughout the school day to cover all classes. Students should know how to adapt math principles to solve complicated story problems in math, or to use listening/reading skills to derive an author's meaning.

THE WAY to change what students learn, of course, is to change what teachers teach. That means more than replacing textbooks and changing class names.

"Very clearly, districts need much more plans for professional study," Whitmer said. "They have to set aside money, and districts haven't done that. They have to update staff; it's even more important than textbooks

'More and more, we know that the facts in science, for example, change so rapidly, maybe every five years. So how do you keep up?

"If you look at business," said Rankin, "they spend a lot of money and time keeping their people up to date. I would not want to go to a surgeon who is not up to date on his skill. I think our society should also demand that of its teachers."

The other important aspect of updating teachers is getting them on your side, according to Judith White, assistant superintendent in charge of curriculum and staff development in Farmington Schools.

"One thing we cannot ever forget is that education is a personal enterprise. If the teachers aren't involved, and it's not part of the process the change isn't going to happen," White said.

CHANGE IS needed in other key areas. One is "interdisciplinary teaching." Cawelti said. That means giving students information in context. Specialists across the school could help teach about the Civil War through fine arts, history, science and sociology.

Another addition is putting a "global perspective" into just about every class. according to Cawelti. While some may balk at the need, getting an international education is fast becoming a new "basic."

A three-month-old report called "The United States Prepares for Its Future," by a study commission on global education. stated, "Two of the greatest changes affecting the nation today are the increasing

Beverly Geltner, associate superintendent for instruction in Southfield, states a strong case for global perspective

"You need a global perspective, not just because it's nice to know your neighbor. because without it you're going to wake up one day riding a donkey, figuratively speaking." Geltner said.

Change already has hit in the field of computer education. Today it is identified as one of the new "basic" skills necessary for every student, not just those aiming to become programmers or technicians

"It should be no surprise computer literacy and utility is a basic skill for students going out into the computer age." Cawelti said

Computers are generally considered a vocational class, often renamed industrial arts. But other traditional vocational education courses - like wood and auto shops have little future

"Those are a real waste of time." Cawelti said "Now schools are discarding what I call the 'woods and metals' course They're irrelevent. If you want to teach them hobbies, just call them hobbies.

VOCATIONAL classes generally fail to teach skills that can help a student get a ob in the real world, educators say "It's like a moving target." Rankin said. "You can't not aim at it, but whether you hit the middle or not is up in the air.

When it comes to students finding jobs. well-rounded student who is able to learn is better than one with limited skills, experts say

We're getting away from vocational classes," Whitmer said. "If you learn how to think and learn how to do this or that approach, then you can grow as your field grows; so you're the most valuable employee because you're adaptable."

ANOTHER NEW, basic skill for the future will be writing.

"Writing is a new topic in the schools, believe it or not. The textbook is on writing sentences, so all the (teachers) have to be in-serviced (trained) on it," Whitmer

"Students don't write," Geltner said. "We say there are three R's, but there are two R's - reading and arithmetic.

The ability to write, experts say, reflects the abilities to think, organize thoughts, develop a reasoned perspective and express an opinion.

Education in the 21st Century

If the United States wants to compete successfully in an increasingly global economy, it must begin to learn the languages of its competitors

So sorry is our ability to communicate in others' languages, that one expert called it "embarrassing."

Another foreign language expert who deals with educators, members of Congress and business leaders, called the foreign language issue "pivotal," with the need for education having reached "crisis proportions.

THE PUSH toward foreign language education is consumer-driven, according to David Edwards, executive director of the Joint National Committee for Languages in Washington, D.C., which represents more than 50 language associations.

No longer is language viewed as an extra class to round out one's education; it is a necessary element in understanding our world, he said.

"Our competitiveness in the 21st century will depend on a . . . global awareness and global understanding," Edwards said.

As the global economy changes, we have to face facts, he said. Statistics show there are 10,000 Japanese businesspeople working in the United States who speak English, he continued. Of the 600 American businesspeople in Japan, however, few can speak the language.

Language returns

Today's students "are coming back in droves" to foreign language "because they see a reason," he said. "The profession is recognizing that."

Aaron Stander, director of the language arts department for Oakland Schools. pushed hard for a new full-time foreign language position being filled this fall at Oakland Schools, the intermediate district for Oakland County schools. This reflects a definite emphasis being placed on the language area by the Oakland Schools

"Foreign language died out in the late 1960s and early 1970s. There's a big resur-

The languages of major trading partners, such as Japan, China and most recently Korea, cannot be ignored, Stander said "Asia is an area we have neglected - Russia we've ignored completely.

Business needs

The degree of emphasis on foreign language will determine our future as business leaders, most experts agree.

"It's naive to think foreign languages are going to disappear," said David Jaymes, chairman of the Modern Languages and Literature Department at Oakland University in Rochester. "It's been said you can buy things in any language, but you can only sell in the language of the buyer.

Jaymes said the language formed a "huge barrier" for Chrysler Corp. several years ago, causing the company to send employees to French language classes because of problems dealing with French

"They would get into a business meeting, and the Americans were at a definite disadvantage," he said "The French (who were bilingual) would hide behind their language.

Avoiding Babel becomes essential in global economy

SO LANGUAGE education is beginning, in some cases, at an older age in the business community. And its practice is no longer limited to classroom teaching, but to the arena of everyday life. This foreign language lesson for business is a new trend, Jaymes said.

"Fifteen years ago, we never received requests" to teach language to businesses, he said. "That has changed drastically. Many companies are now international.

Teachers needed

At what age language instruction should begin is a major issue within education circles as is the problem of expanding programs when there are few teachers certiied to teach foreign language.

"We not only need teachers, we need good teachers. And we don't know where they're going to come from. It's a very serious problem." Edwards said.

"I see as the greatest need right now, ways to train language teachers quickly. And to train teachers who are globally aware, as well as skilled."

SOME SAY it's hard to justify adding foreign language at the elementary level where teachers are already pressured to emphasize reading, writing and mathe-

NEA Today, the magazine of the National Education Association, which represents teachers throughout the country, supports the instruction but says "the boom in language instruction seems to have only one limiting factor: a very real shortage of qualified teachers. Contradictory forces are both spurring and stifling the demand for more language instruc-

All this talk about language has caused a variety of reactions.

Responding to need

Like Oakland County, the Michigan Department of Education recently hired the department's first foreign language consultant. Jo Anne Wilson, a 28-year foreign language veteran, recently returned from a two-week institute on foreign language in New York.

A statewide conference on foreign language is being planned for Nov. 3 in Lansing, when Wilson hopes teachers, parents and administrators will help to shape the future of foreign language instruction.

AMONG THOSE who concur is state Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, who believes the hiring of Wilson and other foreign language specialists is a step in the right direction.

"We've always been so inconsistent in this area." said Faxon, who also owns and operates The International School in Southfield, which has stressed French education and other language areas.

"Many things have suffered," Faxon said. "We are the victims of a world. that has achieved a proficiency in English. We are totally locked out of that interna-

Faxon suggests the state "do more to offer incentive programs" for foreign language education. The American education system is different than other nationalized systems around the world, where students are mandated to take language, he said.

Additionally, few students in the U.S. live in a multilingual area, as in Europe. so teachers here have a larger challenge.

But foreign language education is being encouraged by parents, Jaymes said, and students are ready to learn. "Today's students are better prepared compared to 10-12 years ago." Yet there is "relatively little coordination" level to level, as is the case with many subjects today.

If educators can coordinate their efforts and effectively teach foreign languages. the effects can stay with students from 25 to 50 years, according to a 1984 study. Ohio psychologist Harry Bahrick tested 773 subjects, 17-70 years old, for their memory of Spanish, taught at either the high school or college level. He discovered much of the learned "cognitive structure" of the language remains "in storage" and could be remembered for many years.

When to begin

So, if language education is so beneficial, both personally and professionally, why don't schools teach more classes, or begin at a younger age?

Francis Roberts, a superintendent for an upstate New York school district, tackled the issue of foreign language in a 1986 article in Parents Magazine. "The reason why American schools have weak, or non-existent language programs, is our national indifference or outright hostility to the inclusion of foreign language study," he said.

In 1915, 36 percent of American high school students studied modern foreign languages. Fewer than 4 percent graduating today have taken more than two years of a foreign language.

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Illinois, is an outspoken proponent and author of books about foreign language education in the Simon surveyed 76 countries with embassies in Washington, D.C. In his book "The Tongue-tied American," Simon said, Among them, none can compare with the U.S. in neglect of foreign language."

All of them, from Afghanistan, where English, French and German are required starting in elementary school, to Sri Lanka where foreign languages are required from grade one, most of the countries showed a commitment to teaching foreign

"The United States continues to be the only nation where you can graduate from college without having had one year of a foreign language during any of the 12 years of schooling," Simon said. "It is even possible to earn a doctorate here without studying any foreign language."

Quid pro quo Learn Latin, improve English

MORE THAN 30 senior highs in metro "Naturally I am biased in favor of Detroit now offer Latin. At least six disboys learning English; I would make them all learn English: and then I Cicero, the great Roman statesman and orator, would be proud.

would let the clever ones learn Latin as

Like the phoenix, a bird in Egyptian mythology that consumed itself by fire after 500 years only to rise renewed from its ashes. Latin, once dving from years of waning interest, has undergone a rebirth.

In classrooms across the country, from Philadelphia to Los Angeles, Latin, once the tongue of the Roman empire and later of Europe's political, religious and educated elite, is now taught alongside its modern cousins, including French and Spanish.

"Findings show that study of any foreign language increases English proficiency by a good year. Study of Latin increases English proficiency by about two years," says Dr. Ernest Ament, chairman of the 90-student Department of Greek and Latin at Wayne State University.

By 1976, 10 years after re-emphasizing Latin, Philadelphia's public schools had 14,000 fourth through sixth graders studying Latin in 125 elementaries. The lure was Latin's knack for improving student skills in English vocabulary, reading, composition and logical thinking - in tricts have introduced the world of declensions and conjugations within the past three years

Surging Latin enrollment in many senior high classrooms since the late '70s not only has prompted a shortage of trained instructors, but also has reaffirmed the language's impact on English literacy.

It's that impact that has moved so many educators toward a back-to-basics language that fell into disfavor when relevance and experimentation became bywords of the '60s.

Scores in reading and vocabulary rise significantly when elementary students study the word roots of English, then read easy Latin selections rich in cultural content, the California Classical Association

The first scientific evidence of Latin's transfer effect resulted from a 1970-71 review of the Foreign Languages in the Elementary School (FLES) program in Washington, D.C. Sixth graders who studied Latin for eight months rose from the lowest level of reading ability to the highest for their grade, equaling the achievement of students who studied French or Spanish for 38 months.

"AS I see it, the most valuable skill a student must acquire for success in college or in a career is mastery of English," said Patricia Tompkins, a Farmington Public Schools Latin instructor for 20

"At least 60 percent of all English words come from Latin," she said, "So it's easy to see why Latin improves not only vocabulary skills but also structure of writing skills. At Cooley High School in Detroit, 10th graders admitted to the six-year-old Cooley Achievement Program (CAP) are expected to study Latin for a minimum two years although two-thirds elect to study it an additional year. CAP is designed to raise the level of academic interest and accomplishment throughout the school. Teachers and counselors recommend students on the basis of performance and attitude in the ninth

"It was the emphasis on a highly structured basic language with strong vocabulary ties to English that determined the choice," said Don Riddering, chairman of Cooley's Foreign Language Department until he retired last year.

TWO YEARS ago, Latin was included in a Detroit Public Schools pilot program to introduce foreign language learning in the elementaries. Aimed at third and fourth graders, the voluntary program teaches simple vocabulary, songs and games.

The importance of word endings is a key reason why big-city school districts like Detroit, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Washington are again looking to Latin. Inner-city children tend to slur words, but Latin demands clear pronunciation.

Latin watchers think the newly published elementary textbook series. "First Latin," will help reinforce Latin as a building block for younger kids. Some educators equate the falloff in Patricia Tompkins, a Latin teacher at Farmington High School, says the ancient language helps students learn English and history.

Latin enrollment during the '60s with the subsequent decline in Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores.

Students who take the Latin Achievement Test typically score more than 100 points higher than the national average for all students who take the SAT The point differential applies to both the SAT's verbal and math portions

WHAT'S MORE, the SAT verbal and math averages for students who take the Latin Achievement Test are significantly higher than the averages for those studying French or Spanish.

He's quick to assert there's no proof of a direct cause and effect relationship between Latin studies and SAT performance. But Professor Richard LaFleur, University of Georgia Department of Classics chairman, said: "Once the public became aware of the correlation between SAT scores and the study of Latin, students began to think. 'Maybe I should take some Latin to improve my verbal skills.

Once students make the move to study Latin, "they get everything the study of Latin and the classics has to offer," said LaFleur, American Classical League immediate past president. "Improved SAT scores is probably the least important of the lures, but probably a very practical attraction.

Western ties to early Roman history. culture, literature and mythology make the study of Latin part of a general education in the humanities. "Ancient Roman civilization - everyday life, politics, religious beliefs, the law, the economy provided one of the most important foundations of American civilization," LaFleur

Jane Petrof, a third-year Latin student at Farmington High School, has a quick answer when asked what motivated her to study an unspoken language instead of a conversational one like French. "Nowadays, everybody talks at least a little English. Why waste four years of high school studying French for maybe a three-week trin to France.

"Latin, on the other hand, I can use all my life. The basic structure of the English language is taken from Latin. I've learned more English in one year of Latin than in my two years of English classes.'

NATIONALLY, LATIN enrollment is on the upswing as evidenced by more and more students taking the Latin Achievement Test, given in March each year. By 1980, four years after the low point for U.S. enrollment, the number of students taking the test had risen 20 percent.

BUT RISING Latin enrollment may be short-lived if the shortage of certified teachers isn't stopped. "If we can deal successfully with that critical problem, then the future looks very bright. But that's a big if." LaFleur said

"The promise has never been greater in the last generation for a study of this country's Greco-Roman heritage. I just hope we don't blow it by not producing the kinds of quality teachers we so desperate-laus Copernicus was struck by a spark of curiosity. The universe soon became his world; the planets and stars his textbooks.

While not all students will lay the foundation for modern astronomy as Copernicus did in 1543, the objective in today's science, math and technological education is to motivate students to think

Like Copernicus, they need to think about what makes their world revolve around the sun rather than the sun going around the world. They need to grasp scientific thought to understand technology in the 21st century.

THE TECHNOLOGY issue in education is all-encompassing. Today's students not only are learning about future careers in science and technology, but they are surrounded by them in classrooms and at

Student-run television studios, cable television stations and computer labs are commonplace in many high schools and

Some small public schools in Michigan receive live class presentations transmitted by space satellite.

Technology is helping students learn many non-technical subjects, to end what mathematician Seymour Papert calls the "schizophrenic split" between humanities and science education.

"Computer presence can change not only the way we teach children mathematics, but, much more fundamentally, the way in which our culture as a whole thinks about knowledge and learning," he said. Papert cited examples of students learning about poetry and other literature through computers.

A major element in the "arsenal of teachers' tools," computers also can be used by students to manage their own school work, said Patrick Rose, technology consultant at Oakland Intermediate School District

BUT HOW OFTEN today's student can use school-owned computers is another story. The 200,000 students in Oakland County have 10,000 microcomputers — an average of one for every 15-20 students, Rose said. "It's still cost-prohibitive for each student to have a computer."

Many college students use their own equipment at home to write term papers and to store notes, said Rita Richey, Wayne State University assistant professor and coordinator for instructional technology. The bulk of assignments she receives from students are written on word processors - very few students compose on typewriters.

Perhaps the most important function of technology is how it helps educators advance to the ideal student-teacher ratio of one-to-one, said George Grimes, director of the professional resource center net-

Despite technology's advance in the classrooms, acceptance of computerization in our lives is still a problem for many, according to Richard "Buzz" Brown, president of the Advanced Center for Technology Training. ACTT is a Farmington Hills corporation that serves clients nationally.

Brown believes much of society is still "illiterate" when it comes to understanding computers - partly from a fear of

A twoweek session was recently held for teachers from public schools in Grosse Pointe. Trenton, Dearborn, Detroit and Wayne County Intermediate School District.

THERE IS further evidence that industry is working with educators to make computerization and technology simpler

The Triangle Coalition for Science and Technology Education, formed two years ago, is composed of 50 national groups representing education, labor, science, engineering and business. It promotes updated teaching techniques in these areas.

The Maryland-based coalition is cochaired by National Education Association president Mary Hatwood Futrell, Du Pont executive vice president Robert Forney and University of California at Berkeley scientist Glenn Seaborg.

Science study now essential in high tech age

In a technological world, educators are trying to keep their students one step ahead by promoting advanced thinking skills. Science is increasingly a part of the

"Today, there is hardly a new technology that does not spring out of science, and none that is not sustained by science," said aerospace scientist Guyford Stever in his review, "Science and Technology in Per-

While everyone must learn to live with technology, students who want a future career in technology must study today's

THE GENERAL public, however, is less enthusiastic about science education than about the "basics," and teaching professionals warn that science education is lag-

A 1987 opinion study by the state Board of Education shows Michigan residents place achievement testing in reading, math and writing skills as most important. These are followed by career development and health skills.

Respondents placed less importance on testing knowledge of science and social studies, according to information from the

Patrick Rose, technology consultant for Oakland Intermediate School District, estimates our entire world of knowledge doubles every two years.

Facing that quick turnover, it wouldn't take a school district long to lag behind. If current trends emphasizing only basic reading and mathematics skills continue. science education could be in trouble.

NEA TODAY, published by the National Education Association, a teachers union, reported this feeling is reflected in how science is taught. "The renewed emphasis on 'basic' skills - reading, writing and math - has further reduced time spent on science," it said.

The NEA article said inadequate time is devoted to science instruction. A study of 1,500 elementary schools found a typical fourth grader receiving only 28 minutes of science instruction per day as opposed to 34 minutes for social studies, 52 minutes for math and 100 minutes for language

So educators try to keep up with technology while constantly improving the basics. In looking to the future, some school districts and colleges are changing the way they look at science.

Some schools sponsor activities such as science fairs, allowing students to explore beyond the textbook. Other districts stress a hands-on approach to science teaching.

SOME DISTRICTS are making an effort to increase science instruction. About 15 districts in Michigan employ full-time science coordinators.

One district, Farmington Public Schools, received accolades in 1986 for a team approach to its science program in which consultants work regularly with teachers to promote science education.

Science education also received attention statewide in 1986-87, with the first test of science knowledge through the Michigan Educational Assessment Program. Fourth, seventh and 10th graders were tested. Scores for the first year were low statewide. Science coordinators find the results an opportunity to review and change science curricula.

Professor Rustum Roy at Pennsylvania State University emphatically wants a science curriculum change. He believes science education should be "linked to life" and taught to the masses.

'We're trying to eliminate the sciencephobia," he said. "Science is everybody's business." Roy's 10-year-old plus program, Science and Technology for Society, is funded through several grants, including one from the National Science Foun-

Public Vs. Private

By Mary Klemic staff writer

Monday, August 31, 1987

American parents today ponder the same question their grandparents did: Would our children do better in a non-public school, either private or church-related?

But in 1987 they must answer the question in a different kind of country from 1927 — a society with smaller families further from their roots, a society with more mother-led families, a society with people who have conflicting values.

Neighborhood residents may share common interests, but they also share more and more activities with people outside the area. The media often present values that can conflict with those taught in the home. Yesteryear's "extended" family (parents, children and grandparents living near each other) has become the "nuclear" family (parents and children) — and even the one-parent family.

But today's parents are answering questions about education in much the same way as earlier generations did: Public and private schools haven't changed their roles.

OPINION POLLS through the years show that people are committed to public schools. They wouldn't move children from public schools, even if non-public institutions had free tuition.

Gallup polls over 35 years indicate that American public opinion has varied within a narrow range when asked if public funds should go to private schools.

Area private school representatives don't believe their institutions compete with public or more traditional schools.

"(There's) a dialogue always between the two groups, and we share from each other," said Arlyce Seibert, interim head of Cranbrook Upper School in Bloomfield Hills.

The private school's role is to "to provide an alternative kind of education where I believe that the students and the faculty can have a close relationship . . ," she said.

"We are also a boarding school. The education process is not only in the class-room. There is a very close bond between the students and the faculty members."

A PRIVATE school such as Cranbrook also offers a greater diversity of students, Seibert said, unlike neighborhood schools, which tend to be more homogeneous.

"Our focus is specific," said Sue Ellen Small, director of Gibson School for the Gifted in Redford. The school's students range in age from 4 to 14. "We're a school for a special segment of pupils. We're not associated with any particular organization.

"A lot of private schools have only drawn from one segment of society, and that's changing," Small said. "It's a different kind of marketplace. Especially big schools are having to go outside the normal market they always depended on. That seems not to affect us as much.

"When you look at what's happening, (you see) more and more single-parent families. Families have changed. Women are in the marketplace. They're looking for not only a good school but a place. for a longer period of time. We're finding that we have to adjust to that and provide what our families need."

Dr. Kenneth Hall, administrator of the Southfield Christian School, said, "In our case, a Christian school, we are able to be very direct and very specific about values, education, teaching the Bible as a source of faith, a source of values and not just as literature. We're able to go beyond that."

90 percent public

More than 90 percent of children and youth in the United States attend public schools, while 6 percent go to Catholic schools and 4 percent to non-Catholic private schools. So report James Coleman, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, and Thomas Hoffer, research associate at the Public Opinion Laboratory at Northern Illinois University.

In 1986-87, the 3,250 public schools in Michigan had a total enrollment of 1.5 million. The 1,168 non-public schools in the state enrolled 191,000.

In 1984-85, there were 3,224 public and 1,165 non-public schools, with student populations of 1.6 million and 209,000 respectively.

John Klipp, superintendent of Catholic schools in the Archdiocese of Detroit, said the percentage of non-Catholic students in Catholic schools was 19.9 percent in 1984-85, 20.4 percent the next year and 21 percent last year.

IN THEIR book, "Public and Private High Schools," Coleman and Hoffer say that, historically, public and private schools have had two different orientations.

The public school orientation designs schools to open a child's horizons beyond the family's limits — into the mainstream of American culture.

"They have been a major element in social mobility, freeing children from the poverty of their parents and the low status of their social origins," Coleman and Hoffer wrote. "They have been a means of stripping away identities of ethnicity and social origin and implanting a common American identity."

Parents consider opposing values to select a school

In the private school orientation, schools are extensions of the family, reinforcing the family's values.

"The school is, in this orientation, an efficient means for transmitting the culture of the community from the older generation to the younger. It helps create the next generation in the image of the preceding one."

CONFLICTS BETWEEN the two orienations dot American history.

In the early part of the last century, new Irish Catholic immigrants found that religious values and customs conflicted with those in schools established by a homogeneous, Protestant, English-origin population. Irish Catholics established their own schools.

In the late 1960s, some parents and teachers established "free schools" and "alternative schools" outside the public school system. It was a time of conflict between traditional values and values extolling freedom for youth. In these, children took part in making their curriculum. More active styles of learning replaced the traditional classroom.

In the 1970s and '80s, parents concerned about values transmitted by public schools established conservative Christian schools and evangelical Christian schools.

Report card

Students in private and Catholic high schools are more likely to graduate, to enroll in college and to continue their college studies once enrolled, Coleman and Hoffer said.

Catholic schools were also given high marks in the National Assessment of Educational Progress, a reading proficiency comparison between the Catholic school and national average.

One reason for private schools' success has to do with common values, Coleman and Hoffer suggest.

"We basically go by the teachings of the Church. We follow the teachings of the Church," Klipp said. "The benefit (is) we do have a very clear teaching to go on.

"I don't believe in value-free education. There's no such thing. Non-values are values."

VALERIE LEE, assistant professor of education at the University of Michigan. developed the NAEP. In an article in Momentum magazine in September. Lee said that "Catholic schools appear to be educating their students well in the area of reading."

In the 1983-84 school year, reading proficiency was assessed on a national sample of some 20,000 students each at the fourth, eighth and 11th grade, Lee said. Each sample included nearly 2,000 Catholic school students at each level. This was the first time Catholic educators were able to evaluate the reading progress of their students compared to the nation as a whole at the elementary, middle and high school levels.

"For both the overall sample and for every subgroup measured by NAEP (sex, race/ethnicity, region of the country, parental education level, community grouping, etc.), Catholic school students at all three levels outscore the nation," Lee wrote.

"The fact that minority group students in Catholic schools show an even larger advantage over the national average than white students across all three grade levels is reason for the Catholic educational establishment to feel special pride," Lee wrote.

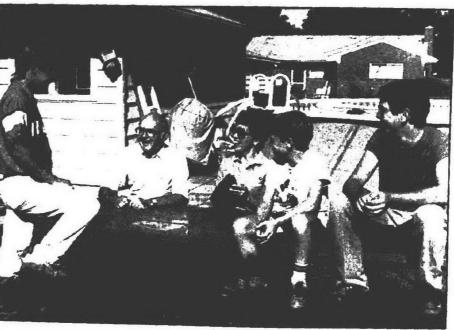

"Not only does the reading proficiency of blacks and Hispanics in Catholic schools greatly exceed the levels for those groups in the nation but, more important, the proficiency differences between minority and white students in Catholic schools is substantially less than the national average. This could be described as a socially equalizing effect of Catholic schooling."

ALMOST 28,000 Michigan students quit high school early in 1985-86, bringing the statewide annual dropout rate to 5.8 percent, a state report said. The national dropout rate that year was 7.4 percent.

Seibert estimates that 98-99 percent of Cranbrook's students go on to college, and cites the variety of recognition given to the school. These include having six national merit award winners this year, and being one of 271 schools in the country (out of 670 public and independent schools that applied) to be named a national exemplary secondary school by the U.S. Department of Education.

Ninety-five percent of students at the Southfield Christian School go on to college, Hall estimates.

Klipp cites statistics involving Catholic school pupils who completed the 12th grade. Of 4,702 in the 1986-87 year, some 83 percent went on to higher education —8 percent to Catholic colleges, 16 percent to community colleges and 60 percent to other colleges.

McNultys like control in Catholic education

By Mary Klemic staff writer

In the Tom McNulty family, it was an easy decision to send the children to a private school.

Both McNulty and his wife attended private schools. They now have two children, ages 17 and 9, in Bishop Borgess High School and St. Robert's Elementary School respectively. The Bishop Borgess student is in his 12th year of private school instruction, the St. Robert's student in her fifth.

"Not that the public schools in our area aren't good — they are," said McNulty, who lives in the South Redford District.

"We very much endorse" private school instruction, he said; and he is satisfied with the "good background in the Catholic faith" offered.

McNulty, who is on the Bishop Borgess school board, sees some advantages to a private school education.

"You have quite a bit more control over the mandatory subjects that each student has to take," he said. "You have more control over the discipline. There's more of a spirit that can be generated. The family of the student has to get involved. People have more of an interest in what's going on. They have a vested interest in their son's or daughter's education."

BESIDES BASIC curriculum, St. Robert's presents 40 minutes each day of catechism "which we whole-heartedly endorse," McNulty said. The school also has a kindergarten and a full athletic program.

Sixty-five percent of the student body is Catholic at Bishop Borgess. McNulty's son is the third person in the family to attend that high school. "It's a very Christian atmosphere." McNulty said.

McNULTY HAS noticed some changes in Catholic education over the years.

"When my wife and I went to Catholic school, the basic doctrine of faith (was taught)," he said. "That is presented (to-day) but in a different format. It's more challenging to the student. The courses that they get — 'Peace and Violence' (for example) — you argue from various points of view. They interview members of their own family. They learn to respect other people's opinions."

McNulty sees less of a "nose-in-the-air" attitude involving the private school these days, he said.

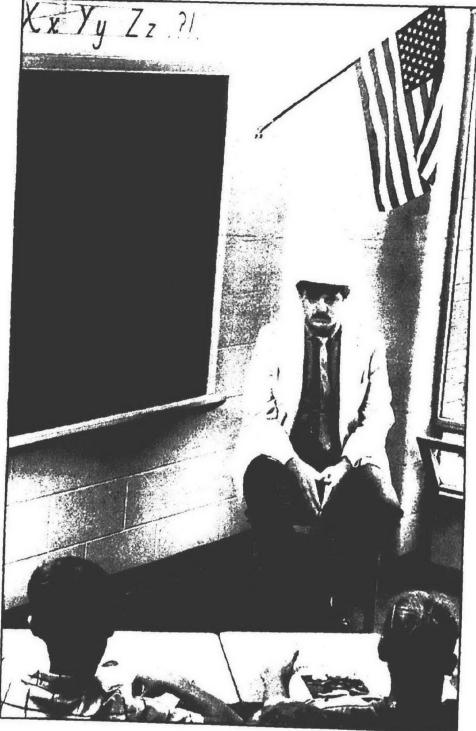

"To some degree, I see where it's becoming involved in the community, integrated in the community it's located in," he said. "You see a sharing of facilities, more of an exchange of faculty, . . . services they go to. We just initiated a program with Redford Union voc-ed where we send our students to Redford Union for (voc-ed) courses."

THE STEREOTYPED image of private school exists more in the mind than in the hallways.

"(The stereotype of) strict religious orders to run the schools, girls having their skirts a certain height — you don't get that as much any more as when I was in school," McNulty said.

But parent concerns are the same today as in previous years.

"With the tuition being as high as it is, (parents are concerned) if their student is receiving a good education, a good religious education," McNulty said. "Parents are very concerned about the dedication of the faculty, that students are being taught by teachers that are well-qualified

Greater status needed to raise teacher quality

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

It's 7:20 a.m. on a crisp October morning in 1997. Moving slowly at first, but picking up the pace as the digital clock at the front of the room begins its march toward the 7:30 bell, a parade of suburban high school students straggles past the rows of computer terminals to their seats.

As the first hour "American Government" class gets under way, a student in the front of the room asks his elegantly dressed, white-haired teacher a question about the First Amendment.

The teacher thinks for a moment and then begins to answer

"Well, during my last term on the state Supreme Court, we had just such

That same scenario — with a mid-level corporate executive on sabbatical in front of a business class, a retired military engineer teaching math and other "non-traditional" teachers becoming classroom leaders - is being touted by some politicians as the wave of the future in educa-

It is, they say, the best way to avert a national teacher shortage and inject some badly needed expertise in any number of fields into the classroom.

And, if a recent poll is any indication, it appears there is a substantial segment of the population that would be willing to go back to school, this time taking a seat on the other side of the teacher's desk

The poll, taken last March by the National Executive Service Corps, found that nearly a third of the adults working for seven major corporations were interested in becoming teachers after retirement from their current jobs.

BUT WHILE some want to open up elementary and secondary schools to people in other professions, those in charge of preparing tomorrow's educators say what's really needed is a major effort to elevate traditional teaching to the same "professional" status accorded fields such as law, business and medicine.

The debate over where to find and how to train and compensate the next generation of American teachers has become one of the hottest issues in teacher education today. Battle lines are sharply drawn, with government and business leaders pitted against university officials and teachers' union representatives.

At the center of the controversy is a series of new programs favored by U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett designed to open the teaching field to people originally trained in other disciplines. A primary goal of the effort is to furnish able teaching bodies in areas of the country where teachers are in short supply.

'I'm sure some people who come to the classroom from the outside world would excel. But many wouldn't be able to cope effectively on a day-to-day basis."

- Howard Riley Director of Admissions College of Education Wayne State University

In California, 16 school districts have installed a state-approved training program for uncertified instructors. For two years, participants are guided by mentors in the study of teaching while at the same time they teach subjects for which no certified instructors are available.

NEW JERSEY Gov. Thomas Kean has signed a bill authorizing "supervised internships" for people who wish to teach but lack state certification. "With an expanded pool of talented teachers," Kean said when signing the bill, "we can explore ways to empower teachers to do their job better. We can get teachers more involved in professional decisions within the school.

"We can help teachers share their talents and knowledge with their col-

The move to create alternate routes into teaching has yet to gain a foothold in Michigan. One reason is the state has yet to go through the teacher crunch being felt in other parts of the country.

When the Michigan legislature revised teacher retirement guidelines downward last year (teachers are now eligible for retirement when their age and years of service reaches a combined 80 years), a flood of retirements was expected.

No shortage yet

The rush to retire hasn't happened, according to Dr. Cassandra Book, assistant dean at the college of education at Michigan State University. Meanwhile, Book said, all the publicity about teacher shortages — a recently completed study done by the U.S. Department of Education cited the need for 1.3 million new teachers by 1992 — has created a glut of applicants at

At MSU, applicants for the freshman class entering school last fall (the most recent statistics available) were up 40 percent over the 1985 freshman class, she said. The school accepted 1,500 new students, more than twice the number it had planned on in original projections.

"PEOPLE FOLLOW where they think the job market is growing and with all the talk about teacher shortages, education has become a hot area," said Book. Competitive teacher salaries (Michigan ranks fourth nationally) are also a contributing factor to the continued high level of interest in teaching as a career, Book said.

The University of Michigan and Oakland Univeristy are currently limiting enrollment in their education schools. Eastern Michigan University and Central Michigan University may follow suit but reported no current restrictions.

Higher education officials in Michigan are also wary of programs that would place uncertified teachers in area schools, claiming they may be a "quick fix" that will only lead to more problems.

"I think there's an assumption (by proponents) that anyone with a college background in liberal arts or business is capable of teaching," said Howard Riley, director of admissions for the college of education at Wayne State University. "That's not necessarily true.

"I'm sure some people who come to the classroom from the outside world would excel. But many wouldn't be able to cope effectively on a day-to-day basis."

BOOK IS outspoken in her opposition to the idea, which she says is nothing more than politicians trying to muscle in on turf traditionally held by lifelong educators.

"Legislators and governors are certainly taking a crack at how we ought to prepare our teachers. They must think that because they sat through 12 years of elementary school, they know what it takes to be an elementary school teacher.

"There's a lot more to teaching than

But supporters of these alternative programs respond that opening up the ranks won't result in diminished quality of teachers. By creating a much larger talent pool, employers can raise selection standards and pick the cream of the crop for their school districts, according to Chester Finn Jr., assistant secretary for educational research and improvement with the U.S. Education Department.

Finn, in an article on proposed changes in the U.S. educational system written for Policy Review magazine, said relaxing entry requirements for teachers won't necessarily lead to a downfall in the country's schools. "Entry into teaching should be as easy as we can make it," Finn argued. "But for retention (of teachers), demonstrated effectiveness in teaching or leadership is mandatory."

The educators, meanwhile, say they are not blind to the problems surrounding their field. They recognize the need for new, talented teachers - teachers with more energy and savvy than some in the last decade's crop of graduates.

Teacher training

But the key to a high-quality future is turning out teachers with more education, not less, they say.

Group, a consortium of education deans and top academic officials from across the country, as one document she feels educators — and politicians — should be using as a model for programs aimed at turning out teachers through the 1990s and into the 21st century.

The report calls for a three-tier system of teacher licensing. Two of the teaching certificates — for "Professional Teacher" and "Career Professional" — would be renewable and carry tenure. A third tier, titled "Instructor," would be temporary and non-renewable.

THE TOP two classifications would be open only to people who have earned graduate degrees and would require an assessment of performance on the job. The "Instructor" classification would be used for those who have earned undergraduate degrees.

An increasing number of current teachers apparently agree with the "more, not less" theory as well. More than 50 percent of the teachers active in 1986 held masters' degrees, according to figures provided in a study done by the Educational Testing Service for the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy. The 1986 figures are more than double those of similarly trained teachers in 1966.

Other measures called for in the Holmes report include strengthening academic requirments by replacing generic "methods" teaching courses with subject matter-oriented classes and turning to more advanced and intense training in pedagogy, or the science of teaching.

In fact, many teacher training programs appear to be taking steps in this directions already. At WSU, the emphasis is on putting prospective teachers "out in the field" as soon as possible so that they can observe first-hand how things are done.

"During the 1960s and 1970s, that part of the process, which was usually handled by giving our students a few student-teaching assignments, came at the end of their education," Riley said. "The feeling was get them to absorb all the (teaching) theory first and then let them try it in the classroom.

"Now, we get our students out there as soon as possible. We use schools in the Detroit area as an extension of our classroom. And it's a constant process that goes practically from day one until the day they graduate."

In East Lansing, the MSU college of education curriculum was changed drastically in 1981, Book said. The school adopted four "alternative" teacher education programs from which students could choose. The programs are designed to provide prospective teachers with intense training in one of several areas after they have completed basic educational requirments. They are:

 Teaching in Heterogeneous Classrooms — Fifty-four credits of course work designed to prepare teachers for the diverse environment of the contemporary classroom, including dealing with non-English speaking pupils and handicapped students.  Multiple Perspectives — Centers on the teacher and decision making and includes 55 credits of course work at the elementary level, or 37 credits at the secondary level.

 Learning Community — Fifty-seven credits of courses focusing on ways to promote personal and social responsibility among students.

Academic Learning K-12 — Concentrates on methods for teaching one discipline (such as math or social studies) so that it will interact successfully with the teaching of others.

Professional respect

Regardless of the direction taken in training educators, there is agreement from all sides on one point — the need to transform teaching from a career path that has traditionally been mocked ("Those who can, do, those who can't, teach.") to a highly respected vocation.

The demand for respect is one reason Book and her colleagues are opposed to the idea of bringing "outsiders" who lack "complete training" into the fold.

"When you do that, you're saying 'Hey, anybody can do teach," she said. "Teaching is already considered a low-level occupation in some quarters. I would hate to see it lowered to the status of a hobby for retired people or something someone just thought they would dabble in for a while."

WHEN TENNESSEE Gov. Lamar Alexander addressed a recent audience of educators, he drew chuckles with his observations on the way America's teachers should be treated.

"I'm not very big on titles," Alexander said. "But if other high-status occupations use them, they should be available for teachers too." And, he added, "Teachers should also have a personal secretary to take all phone messages and to help with essential matters that come up during the day — just like corporate executives or government officials."

Perhaps Alexander was carrying the notion of teachers as professionals to its bizarre extreme. But educators see his point as one that should be heeded.

"If we are not successful in transforming teaching into a profession," says Dean Koff of the State University of New York's school of education, "then there is the risk that the leading universities will get out of the business of teaching teachers altogether."

Parents need tutors to unravel Eduspeak

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

They speak in tongues.

Educators have over the years developed a jargon all their own. And EdSpeak, or Eduspeak (no one seems to be sure who coined the term), rivals anything conjured up by computer programmers or IRS agents for lack of coherence, not to mention utter confusion.

Consider the following portion of a resolution on goals for the 1987-90 school years adopted by a suburban Detroit school board last month:

"(The district agrees) to provide a program which integrates facilities and educational services to meet the complex needs of an information society through maximizing community and educational resources."

Definitely a 9.5 on the official jargon meter. Roughly translated, the statement means the school district in question will try to give all sorts of students a fair shot at a good education.

Why then, since neither teachers nor administrators began their training with EdSpeak skills, do they insist on inundating parents, taxpayers and (perhaps most unfortunately) reporters with this gobbledygook?

The answer may be that it has become a wonderful teaching tool, nearly as helpful as videotape or the California Achievement Test. The difference is that EdSpeak is used to "educate" parents (and taxpayers and reporters), as opposed to school children.

How much more comforting it is, for example, to be told that Johnny is a "special-needs child," not just a pain in the abacus to his sixth grade math teacher.

And next year's millage increase just might get that extra smidgen of support from voters if they know it will make the music program and other extracurricular activities "doable" again.

Whatever the reason, it looks as though EdSpeak is here to stay. With that in mind, we offer the following mini-glossary to help you make it through your young pupil's "formative" years, whichever years those are:

AT-RISK CHILD — Someone who will require more than the usual dozen or so parent-teacher, parent-counselor and parent-principal conferences by the time he or she graduates from high school.

ATTENTION DEFICIT — The leaves changing color in the courtyard, the cracks in the tile underneath his desk and even the second hand on the clock at the front of the room grab your child's interest. His teachers, however, don't.

CONTROLLED LANGUAGE TEXTS — Quasi-stories designed to "introduce words of increasing difficulty." Not to be confused with real books.

EDUCATIONAL DELIVERY SYSTEM— One of many terms schools use to refer to themselves when the six-letter word "school" just doesn't seem to cut it.

GIFTED CHILD — A nice kid who came to school already reading. If he's a gifted child attending a private school, it also means his parents just might be buttered up enough to with all this praise to donate money for the school's new media center (see below).

GROSS MOTOR SKILLS EQUIPMENT

— The swingset on the school playground.

LEISURE TIME DEVELOPMENT—
What youngsters are doing when they work with gross motor skills equipment.
Those who went to school in prehistoric times (like the 1950s) will recognize this as "recess."

MEDIA CENTER — Just like a library, only with more comfortable chairs.

THINKING SKILLS — A curriculum which emphasizes exercises in "observing," "interpreting" and "hypothesizing" over reading, writing and 'rithmetic.

Educators reflect on goals for future

By Sandra Armbruster

From educators to business owners, we hear much the same message — that an education is more important than ever as today's students head toward the 21st century

Furthermore, the world that this fall's harvest of kindergarteners enters when they graduate in the year 2000 will require versatility and literacy in a skill-oriented society.

It will be up to our educational leaders in school districts funded by Observer & Eccentric communities to interpret and meet those needs. What follows is a reflection of how each district's leader — the superintendent — envisions the top priority for the 21st century.

EDUCATION WILL BE the key to the success of today's students, said James Carli, superintendent of Livonia Public Schools.

But Dr. John Hoben, superintendent of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, takes the emphasis on education — which all agree upon — one step further.

"We need to teach students to essentially learn how to learn," Hoben said. "With the explosion of knowledge doubling every five years, it's going to be increasingly important for students to be able to have the problem-solving thinking skills and study skills that will allow them to . . . find answers in a changing environment in the world ahead of them."

Seymour Gretchko, superintendent of West Bloomfield schools, was alone among his peers in identifying a different purpose for a good education.

Learning for the sake of learning, is how Gretchko put it. An education is "not just to get a good job for material gain, but to enrich one's life," he explained. "As parents we need to make children aware. We have been off on a material tack."

Gretchko believes this will create respect for the schools and fine arts.

THE THREE Rs aren't the most important subject of a good education, according to Clarenceville's superintendent, Michael Shibler. Instead, learning quickly and for life ought to be the objectives, he said.

"If we graduate students with skills for lifelong learning, then I think we can feel good about their education. It's important that schools not only teach academic skills but social attitudes so students can be productive participants in life."

One thing most superintendents are in agreement on are the radical differences students will experience in their lives and the need to cope with them.

"We're moving from an industrial to an information-based society," said Gary Doyle, deputy superintendent for Bloomfield Hills Public Schools. "Our society is going to make fundamental changes. We are going to have to graduate people who can adapt the information."

ADAPTING TO THOSE changes will take considerable skill in itself, according to James Bird, deputy superintendent for Birmingham Public Schools.

"We need to help (students) become flexible and adapt to change because they're going to be living with change for the rest of their lives.

"That's going to be a constant."

Students will face all kinds of changes in their lives, agreed Michael Wilmot, Garden City Public Schools superintendent. He estimated that today's student will go through five different career changes in a lifetime. To prepare for those changes, Wilmot said students must learn writing, speech and math.

Change will affect educators and their institutions as well, said Michael Flanagan, deputy superintendent for Farmington Public Schools. The "infusion of technology" will permit teaching in a variety of new ways that will individualize studies he added

"I definitely don't see it (technology) replacing teachers, but expanding their roles," he said. Flanagan does expect to see computers replacing some textbooks, but expanding rather than replacing teachers' roles

Flanagan doesn't believe these changes will occur before the year 2000, but it will in the lifetime of students entering school this fall

AT LEAST ONE superintendent, Carl Hassel of the Southfield Public Schools, is concerned about the effect of computers on students. "If we concentrate on students being human extensions of computers, and don't pay attention to the psychological and human breakdown of issues that have been facing us, we're in serious trouble."

Such issues include family breakup, substance abuse and lack of parental commitment to public education, he said.

Noting that the "sacredness of human life is at question in our country," Hassel said educators must help students become responsible adults.

Who does the teaching may become increasingly complex, according to Kenneth Erickson, Redford Union superintendent. "I think there will be more competing school systems in the future. Right now the public school system is the primary force in education, but we're seeing more and more schools opening, some affiliated with religious beliefs.

"In a public school, students are exposed to different cultures and points of view. It's one common experience students share, but with schools set up along belief lines, society could be fragmented," he said.

SOMEBODY HAS TO pay for that free, public education, said John Schultz, Rochester school district superintendent. "It costs money to run an appropriate educational institution. To be competitive, you've got to pay for it. And then you've got to maintain your facilities. Being that we're not a profit-making institution, we've got to find ways to finance..."

CAMILLE McCOY/staff photographe

Teaching has to pay well to attract the most qualified candidates, he said.

"We don't have the market on women anymore," Schultz explained. "You know what I mean by that? At one time, we had the very best women because they couldn't go anywhere else. There weren't opportunities for them.

"But now women are much more competitive, and we're not getting the best women anymore."

Parents must share the job of educating their children, said Jan Jacobs, South Redford School superintendent. He called it "critical to a child's education." Prototype programs in the district found parents needed to feel able to help first.

Acknowledging needs r global education to entry-le Wayne-Westland Superini Dennis O'Neill sees a relation educational funding, workfority, a healthy economy and a ety.

"Ultimately, our primary paring students for the 2; be to provide an education them to adapt to and con ... Flexibility will be an

"The three Rs will continue important, but so will being son, to accept responsibility a op rational approaches to pring."
