KIRK'S LECTURE: In celebration of the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, the University of Detroit will present four lectures featuring historian and political economist Russell Kirk, a former Plymouth resident now living in Mecosta, Mich.

Kirk's first lecture, "John Marshall and the Coming of the Corporation: The Constitution Changes the Economy," was held Wednesday at U-D.

The other lectures, all free and open to the public, will begin in February in Room 215 of the Life Science Building on the McNichols Road campus.

The other topics are: "Catholic Doctrine, Economic Order, and the Constitution: Christian Man versus Economic Man" Feb. 2; "The Constitution and Ideological Passions: The Coming of the Socialist Impulse" March 1; and "The Constitution and the Antagonistic World: An 18th Century Instrument of Restraint versus 20th Century Appetites" April 12. All lectures are at 12:30 p.m.

Kirk, 69, is widely recognized as the prominent elder statesman of conservative economic thinking. His most recent books are "The Portable Conservative Reader" (1982), "The Conservative Mind: From Burke to Eliot" (1986), and "The Wise Men Know What Wicked Things Are Written in the Sky" (1987). As a boy, Kirk grew up in Old Village in Plymouth and was the grandson of a prominent village businessman, banker Franklin Pierce. Kirk recounted memories of his boyhood in Old Village in an article in the Plymouth Observer's Centennial Edition this year.

HELPING POOR: Margarita Sotomayor of Plymouth, long an advocate for the poor, especially for the Spanish-speaking community — will be honored at a recognition dinner Wednesday, Nov. 11. The award is being given by the Michigan League for Human Services, a statewide research and planning agency. Sotomayor is one of 28 persons being honored by the league at Mercy College, Detroit.

WRITING CONTEST: A scriptwriting contest titled "My Role in America's Future" is being sponsored by Mayflower Lt. Gamble Ladies Auxiliary 6695 Veterans of Foreign Wars. The contest is open to all seventh, eighth and ninth graders.

Requirements for the contest are: the student must be an American citizen; the script should be from three to five minutes long; the script should not contain the student's name, school or city/township; the script should be recorded on a tape without any background noises.

Judging will be based on originality, content and delivery. The script of the local winner will be entered in the Department of Michigan contest, where the top award will be a $500 bond. The deadline for an entry is Dec. 4. For further information, call Alice Fisher at 453-6144.

AT SCHUSS MOUNTAIN: Seven residents were among those recently attending the annual conference of the Michigan Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Schuss Mountain Ski Resort in October.

Attending from Plymouth were Alice and Ken Fisher, Edna Statezni, Helen and Arthur Sidman, Lorraine and Bob Nelson, president and commander of Auxiliary and Post 6695.

The conference gives local chairmen the chance to meet with the state chairmen and discuss duties, responsibilities, and ideas for programs.

Library tax wins; Keller ousted

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Voters in both the city and township of Plymouth Tuesday narrowly approved a slight property tax increase to extend hours and buy more books for the Dunning-Hough Library.

Township voters also overwhelmingly turned thumbs down on two other proposals for tax increases to construct an outdoor pool and to buy a 31-acre parcel of land for a second township park.

City voters returned three incumbents — Mary Childs, Dennis Bila and James Jabara — to the city commission. Donald Keller Jr. was unsuccessful in his re-election bid.

Ron Loiselle, a former commissioner, was the fourth person elected.

WHILE SPECIFIC details remain to be worked out, Dunning-Hough will be open Fridays and Sundays starting the first of the year, projected Carol Davis, president of the library board.

"We are going to carry forward with what we said we are going to do," she said.

That includes buying an additional 1,000 books next year and expanding the reference collection, she added.

Davis said she wasn't concerned that the library's modest tax increase of 40 cents per $1,000 of state equalized valuation or $20 a year on a house with a market value of $100,000 would be hurt by the other two tax proposals on the township ballot.

"I guess they put their money where their surveys were," she said of Tuesday's vote in light of an earlier questionnaire.

Unofficially, the library proposal passed 825-641 in the city and 2,126-2,023 in the township.

'I guess they put their money where their surveys were.'
— Carol Davis, library board president

THE OTHER two questions on the township ballot were prompted by 11th-hour petition initiative.

The pool proposal — a tax increase of $2 per $1,000 of SEV for one year or $100 on a house with a market value of $100,000 — failed by an unofficial tabulation of 969-3,181.

The proposal failed to fly in all 13 voting precincts and among absentee voters.

"I think I'm surprised by the margin. I didn't think it would be so resounding," said Jane McCourt, who spearheaded the drive for the pool.

"I think the park proposal hurt us. Tax increases, obviously, aren't popular," she added.

The park-purchase proposal — a tax increase of $3.50 per $1,000 of SEV for two years or $175 annually on a house with a market value of $100,000 — failed by an unofficial count of 1,009-3,139.

That measure, promoted by Loraine Potochick, passed in only two of the 13 precincts, both in Lakepointe.

The park proposal probably was hurt by the pool proposal, she said. "We gave a really good try and that's what counts."

The township board probably will consider a rezoning request on that parcel from industrial to commercial at its Nov. 17 meeting. Meijer Inc. wants to build a store there.

CHILDS, WHO has served on the city commission for 10 years, led the field Tuesday with 1,067 votes, unofficially. She placed first in four of the five precincts and among absentee voters.

Bila tallied 982 votes, Loiselle 939, Jabara 704, Keller 591, Jean Morrow 434 and Gregory Green 412.

Childs, Bila and Loiselle won four year terms, Jabara a two-year term.

The campaign generally was devoid of issues.

Those four will be sworn in at 7:30 p.m. Monday at city hall. The commission also is expected to choose a mayor from among its members at that time.

Voter turnout was slightly higher than expected. In the township, 4,158 of 15,205 registered voters cast ballots. In the city, 1,532 of 6,875 registered voters participated.

Board eyes expansion of offices

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Administrators for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools are contemplating spending close to $1 million for more office space.

Whether to build or add on to the existing administration building in downtown Plymouth is a question likely to be decided by Christmas.

Sixty employees work in the board office, a 10,210-square-foot, two-story facility at 454 S. Harvey.

The school district has bought property that would allow it to add parking and a two-story wing with a basement.

Two homes, three and four doors down from Harvey on Ann Arbor Trail, are on the property. The houses, to be torn down if the office is expanded, were sold by developer Ralph Lorenz for $225,000.

RAY HOEDEL, associate superintendent for business, said he'd like to bring the issue to a head yet in November.

"We're working with Barton Malow to explore the options before us. Sometime during the month, it's my goal to present a couple of alternatives to the superintendent and schedule a meeting with the board of education."

Leads pursued in arson case

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Investigators have some leads but no suspects in a deliberately set fire that gutted the Grain Mill Crossing in Plymouth last week, according to Fire Chief Al Matthews.

The speed in which the building became engulfed — a couple of minutes, according to some witnesses — and the manner in which it burned — toward the basement as well as the roof — led to the arson conclusion, Matthews said.

Veteran, 88, trained at Camp MacArthur

By M.B. Dillon

Leo Crane is a guy who reminisces about World War I when Veterans Day rolls around.

Fortunately, most of his memories are pleasant. The 88-year-old wasn't among the 21 million men who were wounded or gassed in the Great War. And he escaped the flu epidemic that killed thousands in the United States and abroad.

"I was just a kid when the war ended," said the Plymouth resident, who was drafted at age 18.

"I was a student at Michigan Agricultural College. They picked out youngsters from all over the U.S. to go down to the Central Infantry Officers Training School at Camp MacArthur near Waco, Texas.

"The University of Michigan and what's now Michigan State University, the whole campuses were army training corps. The colleges that had ROTC were changed over to real military organizations. They continued having classes, but students had to drill.

Man tries escape in court

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A Farmington Hills man crashed through a window in 35th District Judge John MacDonald's courtroom Friday trying to escape after his arraignment on a felony charge.

"There was blood all over the place," said Carol Richardson, MacDonald's court recorder and secretary whose desk is in the center of the courtroom.

John Germain, 34, was in court at 3:30 p.m. for arraignment on felony larceny charges in connection with an incident Thursday at Meijer Thrifty Acres in Northville. He was held in Northville Township jail after the arrest until the arraignment.

After MacDonald entered a plea of not guilty and set bond at $15,000 cash, Northville Township Police began to lead Germain back to the courtroom cell.

Before they got to the door leading out of the courtroom, Germain bolted forward and headed toward the window behind the judge's bench, said Northville Township Police Capt. Philip Presnell.

Germain crashed through the first pane of glass but was stopped by a thicker pane, said Richardson.

GERMAIN WAS TREATED for minor injuries at Westland Medical Center and released.

Three Northville Township officers, including Presnell, who subdued Germain after the incident, also suffered cuts and bruises.

Court officials were unsure Monday how much it would cost to replace the window and ruined blinds. Immediately after the incident, MacDonald raised bond to $200,000 cash.

Plymouth Police plan to charge Germain with attempted escape, said Plymouth Police Lt. Robert Commier.

Germain faces a preliminary examination Friday, on the larceny charges in connection with the Meijer incident and will be arraigned on the attempted escape charge the same day, Commier said.

IN THE meantime, Germain is Board eyes $1 million expansion

The district has $925,000 available for the project, money that became available after voters approved a $13 million bond issue in June 1986.

That sum should cover the cost of expansion. No cost estimates are available for a new building yet, say school officials.

Hoedel favors expanding as opposed to building.

"Staying here seems like a good option. No matter how much money you put into this building to make it efficient, you'd get it right back because of its location. It'd be a good investment," Hoedel said.

"It would be a great addition to the downtown community. It would enhance all the values around here."

Proximity to Plymouth stores and offices is another plus, Hoedel said.

IF AN addition is built, the architecture will be such that it will blend with the existing structure. A new brick facade would extend across a new entrance to either side of the building.

The district owns a couple of large parcels in Canton Township that could accommodate a new board office.

"The one most thought of is the (Centennial Educational) Park site because we have 300 acres there," said Hoedel. A drawback to building there is resale value, he said. "If you wanted to sell what you built there, there'd be no market for it. You'd be on the same site as 5,000 students."

Another possibility is 15 acres on the east side of Canton Center south of Warren and north of Ford Road. That option is less attractive because of the land's value, said Hoedel.

"The district might be better off selling the frontage and maintaining the back acres for board usage."

TOM YACK, a former Plymouth-Canton school board president who resigned in 1984, said expanding is a bad idea.

"I can't think of any advantage in staying at the present site aside from the fact that they're currently there. The parking is horrendous and the offices are greatly undersized.

"They're so crowded other school offices can't even be housed in the building. There are so many limitations that any renovation isn't going to correct them," Yack said.

Yack favors the CEP site for a new board office.

"That'd enable the district to put the present office back on the tax rolls. The CEP site is centrally located on the border of two largest units of government in the district. You could design the parking to service the board or others as well," added Yack, a Canton resident and teacher in the Wayne-Westland school district.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS haven't been able to find any existing buildings in the area that would be suitable.

The district has outgrown the board office, said Hoedel.

"We're absolutely overcrowded, and you get inefficiencies as it gets overcrowded," he said. "In the early 1970s we were under 10,000 students. Since then we've been growing at a clip of 700 to 800 students.

"The impact of that is that with more students, you have to buy more supplies, have a bigger payroll department, a big processing department" and more administrators, Hoedel said.

If the district expands the board offices, it's anticipated renovation could begin in late spring and be finished about a year from now.

A new building, because of the landscaping and parking that would have to be put in, would take longer, Hoedel said.

Carrier of the year

Heather Paul of Plymouth has been named Carrier of the Year by the Plymouth Observer. Heather was honored as Carrier of the Year recently at the Observer & Eccentric Newspaper's 16th annual Carrier of the Year Night. Selection is based on length of service, amount of collections, prompt settling of accounts, least amount of customer complaints, neat organization of route book and proper records. Shown from left are Fred J. Wright, O&E circulation director, Heather Paul, and Larry Darnell, circulation manager for Plymouth.

Reward offered in arson

"Part of the origin was in the center portion of the structure on the railroad track side," the chief said. "We cleaned out several rooms down to the floor, washed them out and collected some samples for the state police crime lab."

A report is expected in a week or so, Matthews said.

LICENSE PLATE numbers are among the leads into which investigators are checking, Matthews said.

John Allman and Craig Jackman, doing business as Starkweather Holding Co., bought the building in July 1983, Allman said. It has been offered for sale a couple of years, he said, most recently listing for $310,000.

City tax records indicate that the building would have a market value of $30,400 and the land on which it sits, just over half an acre, $88,900.

The structure was insured for $125,000, Allman said.

"For us, it's not only a personal loss. It's a real financial loss."

The building had been shown the previous day and the president of a restaurant chain, unaware of the fire, stopped by to look at it for a possible lease deal last Friday, the day of the fire, Allman said.

A couple of buyers and would-be tenants have been rejected in the past, he said.

"We're very picky because we're neighbors," Allman said. "We want to control what goes here. In the future, we're going to be careful with this land."

A $2,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or people who set the fire has been posted by the Michigan Arson Prevention Committee.

Allman said his company will raise that ante to $5,000.

Information can be called to the city police department, 453-8600, city fire department, 453-1234, or the arson committee, 1-800-442-7766.

"Right now, everyone is a suspect we have a lead on," Matthews said Tuesday afternoon. "The investigation is still in the preliminary stage. We don't plan a critique until the end of the week."

He declined to elaborate.

Allman has his own theory.

"There is no one we know of who could have done it. The only thing now that makes sense now is kids."

Allman said he anticipates that the shell of the building will be leveled and debris removed by the end of the week.

being held in Wayne County Jail in Detroit.

The incident has caused court officials to "rethink the security set-up" at the court, MacDonald said.

"Traditionally we don't handcuff them when they come in the court," MacDonald said. "We may have to look at that. It wouldn't be necessary for everyone but certainly for someone who has the propensity for something like that."

The court handles cases from Canton, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township.

Local police, hotel staff care for lost travelers

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

An elderly, disoriented couple who lost their way driving to Oscoda are being cared for thanks to some kindhearted, astute police officers and hotel personnel in Plymouth.

As far as police can discern, William and Violet Wilson of Sterling Heights mistook I-94 for I-75 on their way to visit friends. They ended up in Gary, Ind., where they asked a truck driver for directions.

"The truck driver contacted our department, saying these people from Sterling Heights somehow got turned around," said Paul Bruechert, a Sterling Heights police officer who drove to Plymouth Monday to help the couple.

"They spent a night or two in Battle Creek on their way back. Somehow they ended up here."

THE WILSONS, both in their 80s, said they decided to stay at the Mayflower Hotel while a defective tire was being repaired at a Plymouth dealership. They live about four miles from Troy.

The Plymouth Police also learned of the couple when Wilson, 88, called them, said Plymouth Police Chief Richard Myers.

"They apparently had bounced around from city to city and state to state when the gentleman called," said Myers.

"Mr. Wilson said 'I want to give you some information. Did you know there are two Sterling Heights on the map?' It's very easy to blow those kinds of calls off. But Lt. (Robert) Commire's old police sense told him something was wrong," said Myers.

"He asked where the gentleman was and sent an officer (Curtis Hill) over to the Mayflower."

Reading teletype messages earlier in the day, Hill had learned about a missing Sterling Heights couple.

"He put two and two together, checked with Sterling Heights' dispatcher and confirmed that we had their couple," said Myers, complimenting both Commire and Hill.

THE WILSONS had already reserved a room when the dealership called to say their car was ready.

Bruechert offered to drive the couple to pick up their car and to follow them home, but the Wilsons refused. Instead, they asked him to come by at 9:30 the next morning.

Tuesday was his day off but Bruechert agreed.

About 5:30 p.m. Monday, the Wilsons were eating at the hotel when Mrs. Wilson suddenly became ill.

She was transported to St. Mary Hospital where she was in fair condition and resting comfortably Tuesday. A hospital spokeswoman declined to disclose what happened to Mrs. Wilson but ruled out choking and heart trouble.

Sonja Turner, the Mayflower's desk clerk, had good news Wednesday. She had driven Mr. Wilson to the hospital twice to visit his wife, and learned she was being discharged Wednesday.

"Paul (Bruechert) drove them home in his own car, and a neighbor was coming today to pick up their car. A social worker will be looking after them.

"It feels so good when things turn out like this. This whole place adopted him (Mr. Wilson). We just fell in love with him," Turner said.

Plymouth student tunes into university TV work

Julie Lindamood of Plymouth is a major part of a production crew televising football games of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

A senior at Miami University, Lindamood works on the crew that broadcasts all home games on cable systems throughout Ohio.

The program is the bread and butter of Miami University Television Productions (MUTV) and, according to mass communications professor Russell Jenisch, it's like no other.

"In a program like this, students are expected to act as professionals," said Jenisch.

To Lindamood, that means working long hours to prepare for the broadcasts and then three hours of intense work as a production assistant during the game.

"I do a lot of setting up before the game," Lindamood said. "When things aren't done in the last minutes before the game it can tend to drive you nuts but I do my best to keep calm."

While the pressures are high and the hours are long, Jenisch said the product is top-notch. "Our quality is as close to a full-scale professional production as you can get."

That might come as a surprise to armchair quarterbacks considering that the crew consists primarily of students.

"At most schools," said Jenisch, "students do menial tasks, but here the students are actively involved with all parts of the production."

Lindamood is among 18 students who do everything from camera work to color announcing, graphics and instant replay.

"I begged all summer long to be on this crew," said Lindamood. "And I'll be around next fall to do it again. I wouldn't even have to think about it twice."

Lindamood was chosen from more than 50 applicants for the program.

Julie Lindamood works as a production assistant for all home football games at Miami University, Oxford.

Halloween not all treats for 2

A 11-year-old boy was robbed of his Halloween candy at knife point by a 14-year-old boy.

The robber unsuccessfully struggled with the boy for the bag of candy Oct. 31. He pulled out a butterfly knife and said, "Give me your candy, now." The victim gave up the bag and the robber ran down Emerson, off Warren between Lilley and Morton Taylor.

A neighbor caught and held the young robber until police arrived. No one was injured during the incident.

The boy was detained by police until his parents arrived. He will be charged with armed robbery in the juvenile court system, said Canton Police information officer Dave Boljesic.

IN A SEPARATE Halloween night case, a 22-caliber live bullet was found among a young girl's bag of treats.

When the girl and her father returned to their Hanford home from trick or treating between 6 and 7:25 p.m., the father found the bullet and called police. No other bullets were reported found, Boljesic said. Police have no leads on who deposited the bullet in the bag.

Police checked more than 274 bags of Halloween candy at two McDonalds restaurants, one on Ford Road and the other on Michigan Avenue, Halloween night. Nothing unusual was found in the bags, Boljesic said.

Resident works out idea for studio

After 10 years in the planning, the opening of the Plymouth Fitness Studio represents a dream come true for Janet Harwood.

The idea for the studio came after Harwood was unable to find a fitness studio for personal use that met her standards. The result was Plymouth's only fitness studio for women only.

A Plymouth resident for 11 years, Harwood opened the studio recently at 1038 W. Ann Arbor Road between Harvey and Sheldon in Plymouth.

Harwood is known to many in the area by her involvment in community life. She was active in vocal music and dance, participated in the Plymouth Follies, was a member of the Plymouth Community Chorus and the Plymouth Community Arts Council, and was a soloist and cantor at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Plymouth.

As A former member of many health clubs, Harwood said she knows some clubs make false promises and claims to lure clients.

"But then they forget you."

Harwood, with the help of husband Bruce, designed the floor plan with a spacious workout area incorporating the newest innovation in aerobic floors, large dressing rooms, individual showers and a large makeup area.

After investigating the equipment suppliers, Harwood decided to buy CAL-GYM equipment (based on the universal principle) that is designed for the female anatomy. These machines are used for firming, toning and body building.

For relaxation the studio provides a dry-heat sauna, and a Polynesian whirlpool.

HEALTH AND sanitary standards are stressed for members' comfort and safety, Harwood said.

"The whirlpool is equipped with filtration, water circulation and pump volume far exceeding state and local requirements and the water in the spa is analyzed every other week by Environmental Support Services of South Lyon."

The most unusual feature of the studio, Harwood said, is attention and personal instruction to every member at the individual's own progress level.

"Non-competition among members is always stressed by the instructors so each member is comfortable at her own pace."

Along with the equipment and low-impact and non-impact aerobic classes, each member is introduced to the use of free weights. The studio offers working women's hours and child care facilities for children 6 months and older. The hours are 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 6:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, and 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

Disguised gunman robs local station

A clerk at a gas station/pantry in Plymouth Township was robbed of up to $200 by a well-disguised gunman last Friday night, according to police.

The robbery occurred at a Total station at Ann Arbor and Lilley roads at 11:45 p.m. No shots were fired and the clerk wasn't injured.

The suspect was described as white, 6-feet tall and of medium build. A baseball cap and a bandana covered most of his head and face. He also wore a gray-hooded sweatshirt or jacket and dirty brown work pants.

Two customers were in the store at the time but neither was approached by the gunman, said Officer Shawn Corbett.

The man entered the business through a south door, approached the counter, produced a handgun and a canvas bag, and ordered the clerk to put money in the bag, Corbett said.

The man fled through a north door and was last seen walking through the parking lot of a nearby bank, Corbett said.

A tracking dog brought to the scene couldn't pick up a trail, he added.

AIDS caution taken with all patients

"We don't like to say we are treating everyone like they have AIDS because that sounds negative, but we are treating all new patients that way." — Beverly Mihalko, epidemiologist at Providence Hospital in Southfield

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

From now on, every patient who enters a hospital in the United States — whether a softball player with a fractured ankle or a driver dying after a highway collision — will be treated by hospital personnel as if he or she has AIDS.

The policy is called "universal precautions" by the Center for Disease Control, which recommended the new guidelines in August. Previously, AIDS patients and others suspected of having contagious diseases were kept in various levels of isolation.

Now, special precautions will be applied to all new patients, with local hospitals either already in compliance with the guidelines or getting internal approval to switch to the new policy of infection control.

AIDS has changed much of American culture and mores — pick-up bars and one-night stands are already passé — and it is changing the way America treats its sick or injured.

Said the CDC in the report issued in late August that announced the new guidelines: "This document emphasizes the need for health-care workers to consider all patients as potentially infected with HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) . . ."

The universal precautions include a much-greater use of gloves during many routine procedures, hand-washing after patient contact and before and after breaks, the wearing of goggles during surgery, waterproof rubberized gowns during procedures that may result in the splashing of body fluids, mouthpieces or resuscitation bags to eliminate mouth-to-mouth contact, much stricter attention to the cleaning up and disposal of waste, and an end to the old practice of re-capping used needles in their old sheaths, which often resulted in accidental needle pricks to health-care workers.

(One of the results of the precautions is a drastic shortage nationwide in latex gloves. All area hospitals report such shortages, though vinyl gloves can be substituted.)

DR. PAUL WERNER, executive director for the Hospice of Southeastern Michigan, which has a 28-bed facility in Southfield and which administers to about 90 more dying patients in their homes, applauds the new guidelines.

"The universal precautions are just good medicine, and they'd be good medicine if there weren't AIDS," he said. "In the health care business, we've been rather cavalier about protecting ourselves, but AIDS has made us get our act together."

Those affected have been...

Gay or bisexual men	66%
IV Drug users	25%
Heterosexuals	4%
Individuals transfused with infected blood	3%
Undetermined	3%

AIDS Cases in the US...

Since June 1, 1981	44,395
Oct. 1986 - Oct. 1987	17,663
Projected through 1991	270,000
California cases to date	9,087
New York cases to date	12,313
Michigan cases to date	449

He said AIDS is such a hard disease to spread that the new guidelines won't have much effect upon it. But he said the guidelines would stop such commonly transmitted diseases among hospital personnel as hepatitis B, non-A, non-B hepatitis and staph infections.

Werner said the hospice hasn't treated any AIDS patients yet, but is working the bugs out of a pilot program and expects to begin administering to AIDS patients after the first of the year.

Area hospitals are in various stages of alerting and training their employees in the new procedures. Here is where they stand in the process:

GARDEN CITY OSTEOPATHIC already is following CDC guidelines and is in the process of educating the staff. President Allan Breakie said that the policy will cost the hospital $100,000 a year in latex gloves for workers in the lab at the 349-bed facility.

He said the hospital doesn't have a policy for workers who contract the disease. "We'll have to handle it when it occurs. There are all kinds of factors. Let's hope it doesn't come up."

WESTLAND MEDICAL CENTER just approved universal precautions last week and is explaining the policy today at in-service presentations. "It focuses on AIDS but it has side benefits or reducing the spread of other diseases," said Melvina Blanton, infection-control officer.

As for employees who get the disease, Blanton said: "You can't fire them. We'd have to look at each case on an individual basis. Right now we're working on getting a policy into writing. It would depend on the focus of their job — whether they come into contact with blood or body fluids of patients, their health."

ST. MARY in Livonia was one of the first area hospitals to adopt CDC procedures, with in-service seminars in September and an infection-control day on Oct. 21.

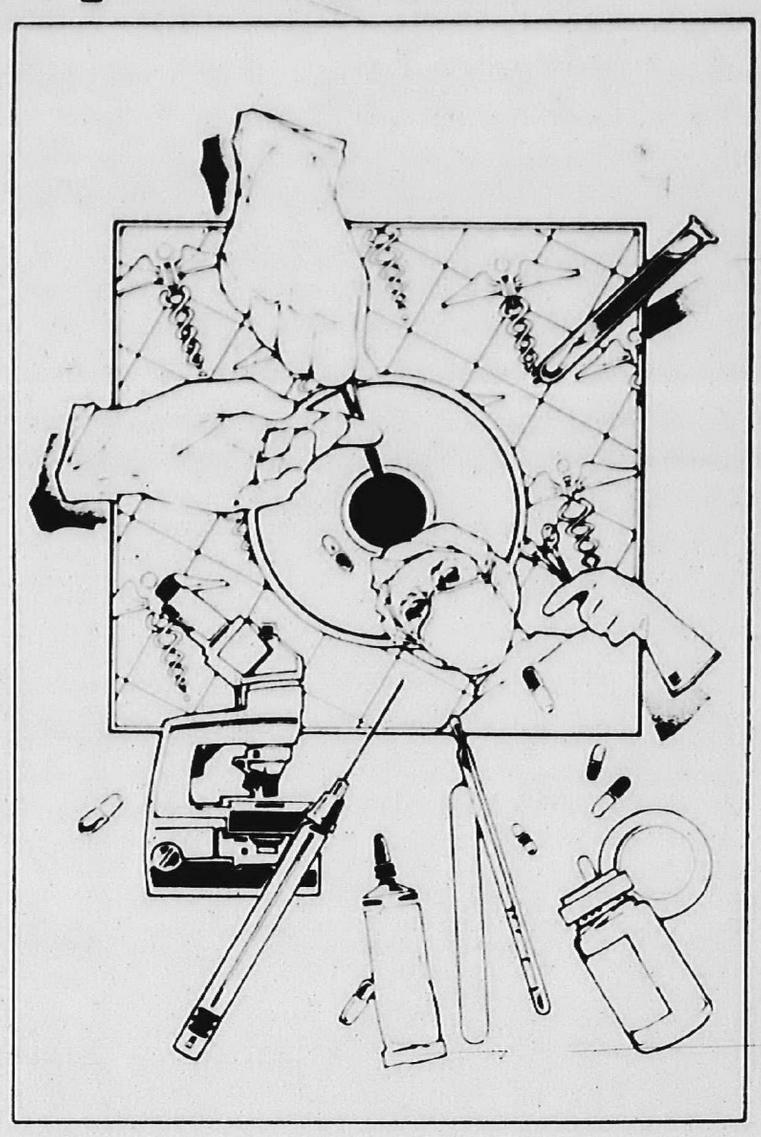

Employees who get AIDS "will not be fired," said epidemiologist Karen Foley. "What they will be allowed to do will be decided on a case-by-case basis."

She said new hand-washing rules may do more than any other single step to stop the spread of infection at hospitals. She said employees there are required to wash their hands before and after they go on duty, before and after breaks and after individual acts of patient care."

REDFORD COMMUNITY implemented CDC guidelines last month, according to president Robert Laible. He said the 68-bed facility "may have had one AIDS patient, but we aren't sure."

He said that the hospital has had trouble getting sufficient latex gloves. "I wish I had stock in glove companies," he said.

Some sense a fear of AIDS in hospital

"We tell people when they hire into the hospital that this is a health-care facility. If they don't want to deal with AIDS patients, they probably shouldn't take the job."

— Elizabeth Horan, epidemiologist, St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital, Pontiac

There is a bumper sticker that reads: AIDS Makes Herpes Look Like a Cold Sore.

Not too long ago, the hot topic in magazines and TV monologues was herpes. That someone could be troubled intermittently for life by small sores seemed like a terrible price to pay for sex.

Then along came AIDS, which didn't extract its price in occasional, tiny, somewhat bothersome sores, but in withering, debilitating death.

AIDS — the name alone evokes an instinctive, immediate, galvanized response. It has not only entered our consciousness since 1981, it has permeated it. Seldom since the 14th century, when the bubonic plague swept in waves through Europe, has a single word had such an impact on the human psyche.

EVEN IN medical circles, among doctors and nurses who are used to death, much of it ugly and horrific, AIDS has had an impact far beyond

Please turn to Page 7

Big or small picture, AIDS saga growing

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta predict that by the end of 1991, up to 311,000 Americans will have contracted AIDS. Since almost nobody lives more than three years with the disease, by 1994 then, up to six times as many Americans will have died from AIDS as died during the Vietnam War.

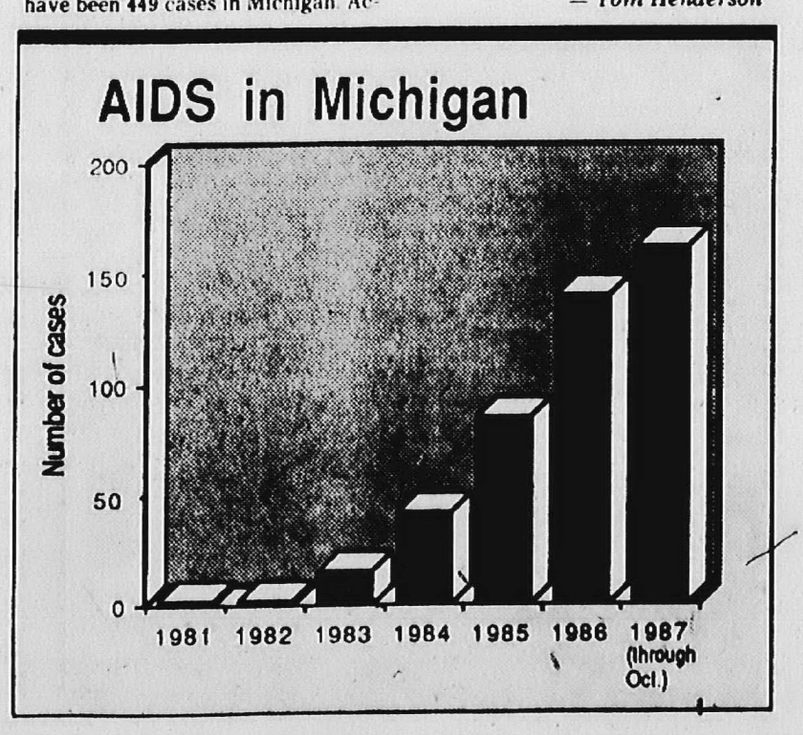

Plotted on a graph, the yearly number of AIDS victims in the United States shoots upward like shuttle rockets on their way to deep space. AIDS was so rare a killer at the beginning of 1981 that the CDC didn't keep track of it. Since the CDC began compiling figures on June 1, 1981, there have been 41,395 confirmed cases in the United States.

And a too-strict definition of what constituted a confirmed case resulted in an undercount in even that figure. The CDC has eased the definition this year and estimates that the rules change alone will increase the total for 1987 by 15 percent.

HERE ARE some other numbers related to AIDS:

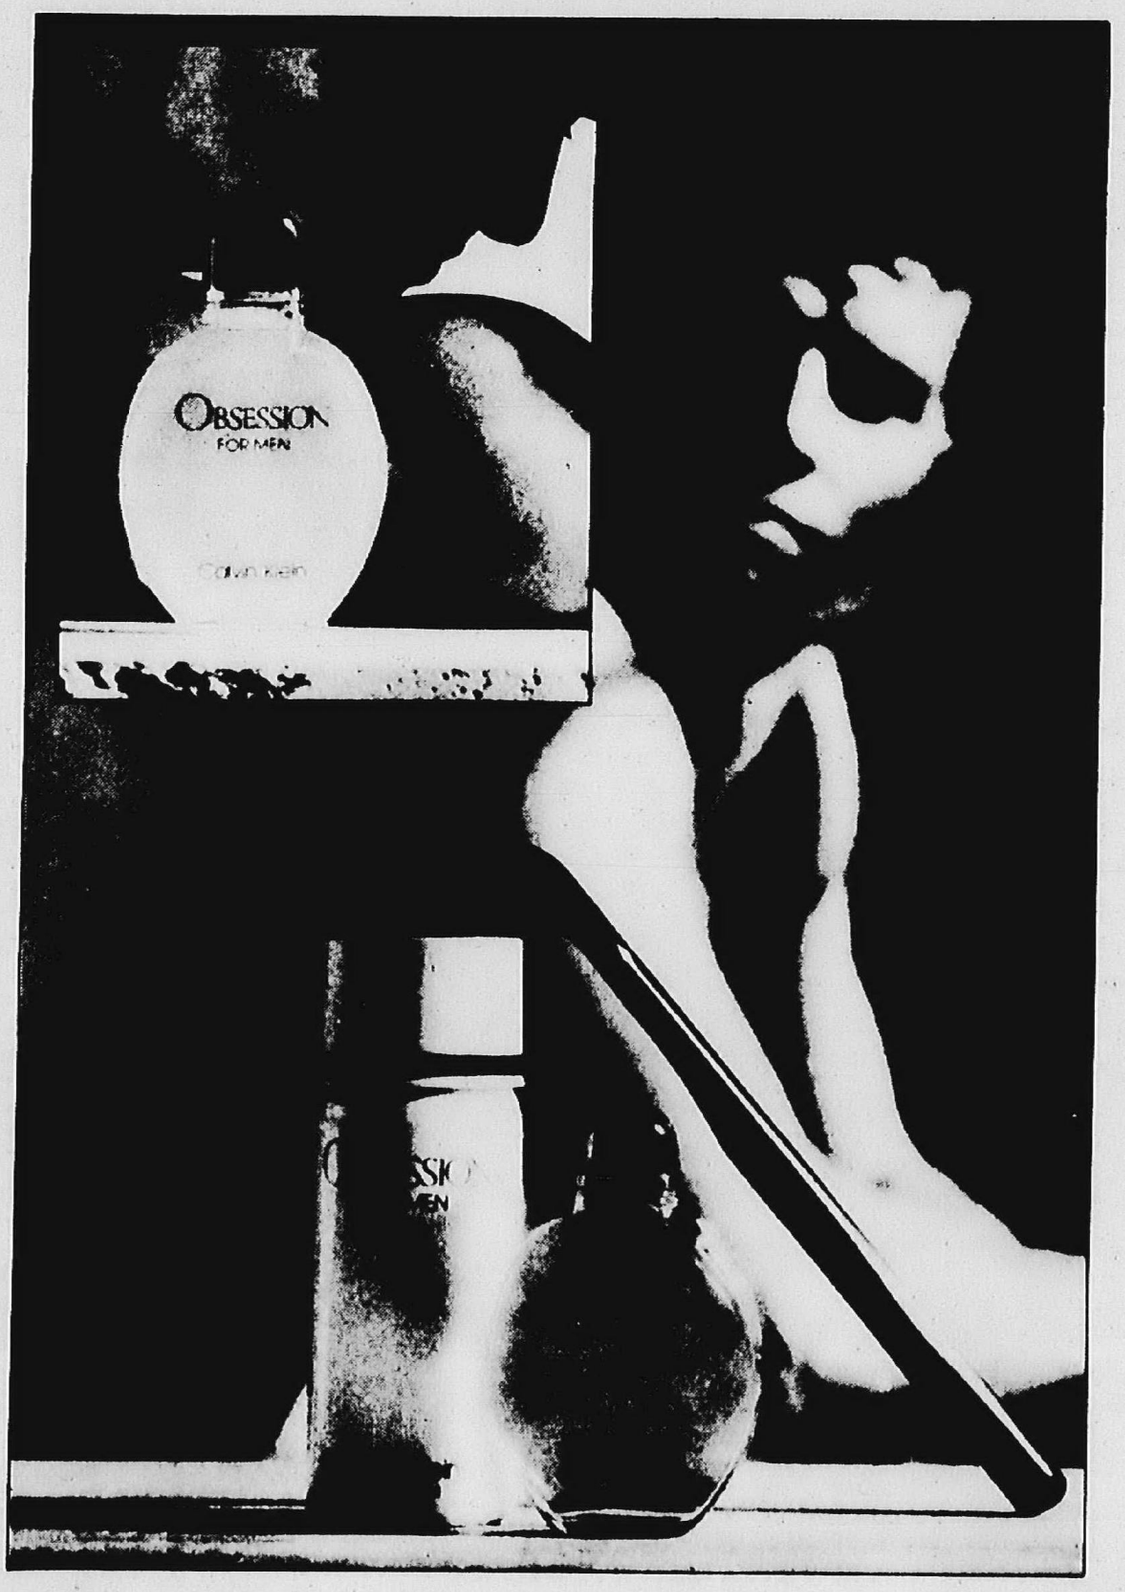

- Though cases in Michigan are up dramatically, the disease seems almost rare here compared to New York and California. Through October, there were 12,313 cases in New York and 9,087 in California. There have been 449 cases in Michigan. According to the CDC, fully one-third of all the confirmed AIDS cases in the country have been in San Francisco or New York City.
- Of the confirmed cases of AIDS to date, 66 percent were gay or bisexual men; 25 percent were intraven ous drug users; 4 percent got the disease through heterosexual sex; 3 percent got it by undetermined means; and 3 percent got it through blood transfusions. (Numbers being rounded off resulted in a percentage total of 101.)
- Of the 449 cases in Michigan, 270 have resulted in death. Of the 153 persons diagnosed this year, 50 already are dead.
- There have been more cases diagnosed in Detroit (190) than the rest of Wayne County (44), Macomb County (17) and Oakland County (59) combined. Many of those cases have been diagnosed since Jan. 5 — 29 in Oakland, nine in Macomb and 93 in Wayne County (including Detroit). By comparison, there were just 62 cases in the state from 1981-84.
- The Michigan Department of Public Health has made projections of new AIDS cases for the near future. The number of cases diagnosed in the state from June 1981 through the end of 1991 is expected to total between 2,300 and 3,600.

Local vet recalls training for World War I

"I don't know how they picked us — size and good looks, I guess," laughed Crane, who stands 6 feet tall and weighs "too much, my doctor says."

Crane had tried once before to join the service. When his parents talked him out of it, he went to study civil engineering and joined a fraternity at what was to become Michigan State University in East Lansing.

"We were supposed to train at Camp Grant, Ill.," Crane recalled.

"But when we got there, the flu was so bad, there were so many deaths, that they turned our train right around and shipped us down to Waco. It was 20 coaches pulled by three engines. They called it the Katy Flyer.

"There were people being taken off the train with the flu all the way down," said Crane, who was honorary grand marshal at last year's Plymouth Memorial Day parade.

ONE OF 250 men in Company K at a camp that encompassed thousands of acres, Crane lived with seven other officer candidates in a tent heated by one small stove.

"Two of the guys in our tent were taken to the hospital with the flu. Fortunately they didn't die. But when they came back they were pretty thin and sickly."

Buglers signaled the day's end, a welcome occurrence at Camp MacArthur.

"We were glad to hear it. We were tired out," said Crane.

Days were long at the camp, an operations center for air corps, artillery and infantry divisions.

"We got up real early and did everything in training an infantry does. We drilled, had bayonet practice and did bookwork.

"The weather was nasty down there. We went to get into the sunshine and away from the flu. But it turned out to be quite the opposite. There was rain and mud — the wind would blow down from the north. It was cold. But we were young, what the heck. Everybody was for it (the war). We were there to lick the Kaiser.

"There was no complaining, except maybe a little about the food," said Crane. "We got a lot of chocolate pudding."

A FOUR-FOOT wide photograph of Crane's nearly 300 fellow soldiers and officers hangs in the basement of the house Crane and his wife, Iva, bought in 1931.

Crane, dressed in wrap-around leggings, britches, shirt and tie, a hat and boots, stands in the top center.

"One thing I was smart enough to do was to buy this when the photographer came," said Crane, who worked for the state highway department and the Wayne County Road Commission after the war.

Nov. 11, 1918 seems like last year to Crane.

"As I recall, they routed us out of bed when it was still dark. We got down to Waco and were in a parade that lasted all day long. As I recall, we didn't have too much to eat. We scrounged around and got food where we could. Everyone was out shouting.

"There were people from the town as well as all the soldiers. We were very happy it was over.

"The war broadened the outlook of this country boy," said Crane, who has two children and seven grandchildren.

"I don't think there will be a World War III. There are too many ways of settling things nowadays. But we must maintain our strength. This country must, in order to guarantee it. We can't just lay back and let the Russians come in from the south."

New precautions taken

Regarding employees who get AIDS, he said: We've talked about it but we haven't taken a position. This has come up on us very suddenly. It's very controversial. Do you allow someone with AIDS to practice their trade? They are indeed handicapped."

He said a Chicago physician with AIDs was fired, sued and won his job back.

ANNAPOLIS in Wayne is in the process of approving universal precautions and will have a workshop for employees on Nov. 18.

"About two years ago we introduced the policy of requiring gloves for employees involved in blood and body fluids," said Nancy Vecchioni, a clinical nurse specialist in epidemiology. "The lab people have learned to draw blood with gloves and the nurses have learned how to IV patients with gloves on, so you adapt."

She said the 278-bed facility has not yet treated any patients with full-blown AIDS.

BOTSFORD in Farmington: Two weeks ago was infection-control week, with posters and literature announcing the universal protections. And there will be a continuing series of in-service programs to educate employees at the 300-bed facility.

According to Dr. Gerald Blackburn, the epidemiologist (or disease-control officer) at the hospital, Botsford has treated AIDS patients "sporadically."

In the past, he said, the hospital had to walk a fine line between protecting the staff and keeping patient confidentiality. "Universal precautions allow you to walk that line because you treat all patients the same," he said.

PROVIDENCE in Southfield has recently received internal approval for following the CDC guidelines and is holding its infection-awareness day on Friday. Last Friday, epidemiologist Mihalko was busy putting finishing touches on posters and literature.

"It's all changing so fast," she said. "You basically assume that everyone is contagious and treat them accordingly."

She said the hospital has treated 10 or 11 AIDS patients over the years.

As is the case at other hospitals, policy toward employees who get AIDS is less formulated than policy for treating AIDS patients.

HENRY FORD in Detroit has treated more AIDS patients than any other hospital in the state. As a result, Ford's policies are more formulated and sophisticated than those at other hospitals.

For example, the hospital has written procedures for dealing with employees who contract the disease. They are able to stay on the job, depending on their health and their own physician's recommendations. The nature of their illness would determine their job duties.

Precautions toward patients follow the CDC guidelines.

ST. JOSEPH'S MERCY, Ann Arbor, has received internal approval for following CDC guidelines, is educating the staff on those policies and expects to have universal precautions in effect early in 1988, according to epidemiologist (or infection-control expert) Russell Olmsted.

Olmsted said the hospital, which has treated about seven AIDS patients, is still formulating a policy toward employees who contract AIDS or who test positive for its antibodies.

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.

It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Some sense fear in hospital

its numbers. (In more than six years, only 449 cases have been confirmed in the state, though those hit and their relatives might choose to take the "only" out of this sentence.)

On a recent "St. Elsewhere" program on NBC-TV, Dr. Seth Griffin accidentally pricked his finger with a needle containing blood from an AIDS patient. As the show ended, the doctor was a babbling wreck, weeping and on the verge of hysterics.

Was that a realistic reaction? Depends on whom you talk to.

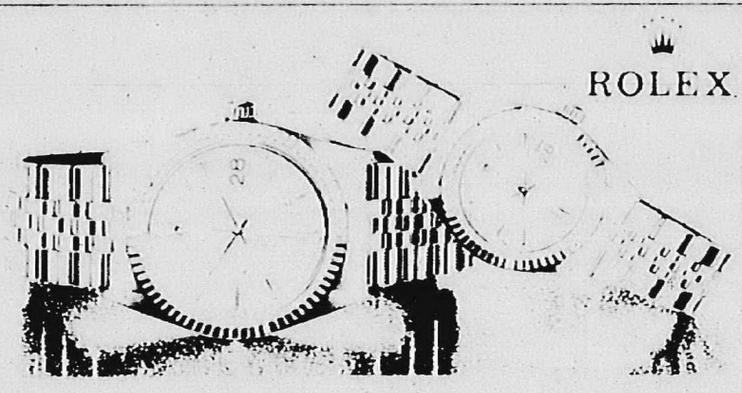

"I DIDN'T see the show but I sure have heard about it already," said Elizabeth Horan, an epidemiologist at St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Pontiac. "I would say that was a very typical reaction. Hysteria is widespread. If you infect yourself with the blood of an AIDS patient of course, you're going to be hysterical.

But Chris Kassab, an administrator of Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, which has treated more AIDS patients than any hospital in the state, said: "I don't think that's typical. It wouldn't be typical here. There's not the kind of fear here as there might be in a place where there hasn't been the education or research as there has here."

It's certainly understandable that you'd be upset (but) I think he overreacted," said Russell Olmsted, the epidemiologist at St. Joseph's Mercy in Ann Arbor. "There's a fairly low chance of transmission from a needle-stick injury."

"The" Furrier for Honesty and Reliability

Budget workshop set for Nov. 20-21

A financial planning workshop will be presented Friday and Saturday, Nov. 20-21, at Trinity Presbyterian Church.

The six- to seven-hour seminar will be 6:30-10:15 p.m. Friday and 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

Trinity Presbyterian is located at 10191 Ann Arbor Road at Gottfredson Road, five miles west of Plymouth in Superior Township.

The seminar is designed for people of all ages and financial backgrounds to teach basic principles of developing and using a budget successfully. There are no requests for money or investments.

The video seminar, taught by Larry Burkett, founder of Christian Financial Concepts, will help participants learn how to recognize and avoid overspending, remove worry about money being available for unexpected expenses, children's education, retirement, school clothing and insurance premiums.

Burkett's seminar has taught many how to escape financial bondage and enjoy the freedom sound financial management can bring. Burkett is featured on more than 300 radio programs. The program registration fee of $15 per person or couple includes a workbook and free attendance at future seminars.

Make reservations in advance with the church by calling 459-9550 and receive forms to be completed prior to coming to the workshop.

County leaders to hold debt reduction rally

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

A meeting this morning (Thursday) will bring Wayne County government, business and labor leaders together to rally around county executive Edward McNamara's plan to reduce county debt.

"Really, it's a campaign kickoff for the plan," county commission chairman Arthur Carter said. Carter, D-Detroit, called for the meeting.

"Essentially, there's broad agreement on the provisions," Carter said. The problem is the hour is getting late. It's time for all of us to go to Lansing to lobby for the plan."

This morning's meeting at the City County Building is open to the public. It will feature discussion of the county's indigent health care burden as well as fiscal projections from the county finance department, Carter said.

County officials seek to retire $180 million in debt, much of it owed the state for health care services to indigent county residents.

The county needs an additional $26 million a year to pay off its debt as well as balance future budgets, McNamara said.

The county solvency plan includes:

- Selling $160 million in bonds to pay off part of the debt.
- Selling county land, including 1,040 acres in Northville Township to raise the additional $20 million.
- Placing a new 30 percent tax on Metro Airport parking fees and making tax revenue payable to the county.
- Increasing circuit court fees, which would also be made payable to the county.
- Raising the state cigarette tax by up to five cents per pack.

County officials also said they'd continue lobbying for a tax on lottery winnings, as well as a third lottery game, though Lansing insiders doubt either proposal would pass.

County officials also seek to cap the county's indigent health care payments. They hope to cap future payments at $185 million, roughly half of what the county is currently paying.

New scholarships announced

Members of the Schoolcraft College Foundation Board of Governors recently created a scholarship endowment fund.

Harward-Malinowski Memorial Endowment honors the memory of deceased Schoolcraft faculty members Janet Harward and Michael James Malinowski.

Harward, who lived in Livonia, taught English at Schoolcraft from 1968-80.

Malinowski, who lived in Northville, was a member of the school's English faculty from 1966-86. He previously taught in the Garden City Public Schools.

Scholarship criteria is being established by the college English department.

Site for friction

Option may be the solution

EDUCATION cannot be delayed a year or two but must be delivered on a timely basis to each generation.

Because public education is mandatory in Michigan, there must be a sufficient number of desks and classrooms available for students every day. That requires advance planning by school officials.

School administrations cannot wait until the population boom arrives to react. Planning must occur and action taken before the projected students arrive.

For that reason, responsible school leaders must identify and acquire potential school sites far enough in advance so construction decisions can be made before the students arrive.

THAT INGREDIENT of school planning has resulted in some friction in the Plymouth-Canton community.

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools now owns vacant parcels of land throughout the district for possible use as future school sites. Schools don't like to be in the real estate business, though, and occasionally will get rid of sites they know for sure won't be used because of changing demographics.

A few years ago the school board ordered a review of all property owned by the district. As a result, some sites were identified as no longer being needed and the administration was directed to sell.

One site put up for sale in Canton required rezoning. Residents became upset because the homeowners association was using the site as a park. Homeowners objected to the rezoning, the sale became a matter of public debate and the sale fell through. The land still is on the market.

Another site the district no longer needs that is up for sale has been occupied for a number of years by Plymouth Children's Nursery in Canton. The nursery now is looking for a new site for its operation. The relocation became a public issue.

Canton was able to negotiate a deal for the old Canton Center School, which now is the Canton Historical Museum. That was a success story on use of school sites no longer needed.

Plymouth Township asked for a school site that borders Plymouth Township Park on McClumpha and Ann Arbor Trail. The district, though, feels there still may be a future use for that site and has declined to sell. The township has retaliated by putting the land on the tax rolls.

UNFORTUNATELY, the matter of unused school sites has created controversy between governmental units in the Plymouth-Canton community.

Municipal governments sometimes become very provincial, forgetting that the same taxpayers contribute money to the schools as well as to townships and city. When Plymouth Township "taxes" the school district, it really is imposing an added tax burden on township taxpayers who also pay school taxes.

Plymouth Township's behavior is irrational, if not vindictive. But that's another story.

A possible solution to the issue is being explored now by Canton Township officials. Canton Township has been approached by Wayne-Westland Community Schools about buying property the township had acquired from the state for back taxes. The site is within the Wayne-Westland district and is of interest to school officials because Canton is one of the few residential growth areas remaining in Wayne-Westland.

Canton has talked with Wayne-Westland school administrators, but has backed away from an outright sale at this point. Instead, Canton is suggesting that it retain title to the land but offer an "option agreement" to Wayne-Westland.

Canton is proposing that it will "reserve" the site to Wayne-Westland for a designated period of time, maybe five, seven or 10 years. If the site is not needed for a school within that time period, say five years, the option expires. Canton still holds title to the land and is free to sell or use the land. If the land is needed for a school, Canton will be in a position to negotiate shared use of the site.

The option approach certainly has appeal. The approach can be used, of course, only if the municipality owns the land the district needs. And there won't be as much school construction in the future as occurred in the 1960s. But, where appropriate, the arrangement certainly has merit. We encourage Canton Township to continue on its present path with Wayne-Westland. The arrangement could be a solution to soften present friction between governmental units — a softening much needed.

Together . . .

Suburbs can lure tourist dollars

Suburban leaders must form a coalition to aggressively deal with tourism. By working and planning together, the clout can be developed to bring those valuable dollars being spent in other regions of the country by the Japanese, West Germans, British and Canadians.

MICHIGAN'S stepsister industry, tourism, needs to be put on the front burner through the initiative of suburban business and governmental leaders.

Making travel and convention business a stronger spoke in the economic wheel is simply good sense.

Lansing's interests aren't always in tune with suburban Detroit.

Suburban leaders must form a coalition to aggressively deal with tourism. By working and planning together, the clout can be developed to bring that valuable money being spent in other regions of the country by the Japanese, West Germans, British and Canadians.

Of the 25 million foreign travelers who came to the United States last year, less than 5 million came to the Great Lakes region. Certainly, a valuable source of revenue awaits this suburban area that is so rich in hotels, restaurants, lakes, recreational parks and convention facilities.

THE TIME IS far past when we must depend primarily on the auto industry to pay the bills for Michigan. But once again we find ourselves victimized by what many experts predict is an economic turndown.

As we have come to realize so well, when the economy goes even a little sour, Michigan suffers even more because of its heavy dependence on the auto industry. Already this year, approximately 15,000 auto jobs have disappeared.

In short, tourism creates jobs, 6,000 for every percent increase in that market, and the auto industry loses jobs.

And while state leaders have developed a plan for economic diversification and stability, its proponents still give tourism only a passing nod.

- Despite the fact that tourism brings in $13 billion annually, the state allocates only about $10 million to make this major industry run.
- Despite the fact that more than a quarter of a million people are employed in Michigan's travel industry, tourism has been relegated to being a bureau within the commerce department.
- Despite the fact that for every percent increase in travel business, an additional $125 million in direct travel expenditures and $10 million in state revenue would be raised, Michigan has spent more for bridges we don't need and research projects the results of which are certainly questionable.

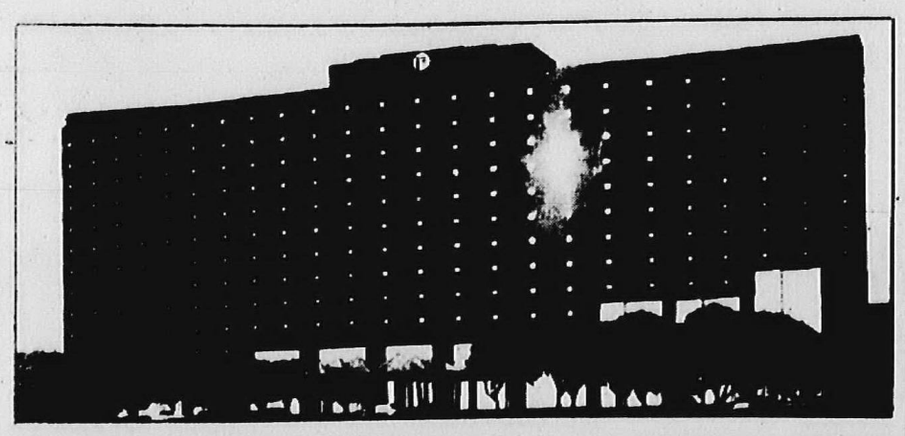

Unfortunately, the suburbs have left it up to the state and city of Detroit interests to launch the marketing efforts and take on the responsibility of building this very important industry.

Even worse, suburban efforts have been weak, disorganized and woefully underfunded.

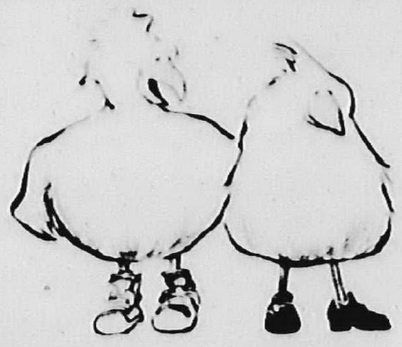

In truth, the suburbs share very little in the planning and execution of major tourism initiatives.

One can only wonder if suburban civic leaders comprehend the significance of developing and monitoring a planned program to cultivate this fertile economic ground.

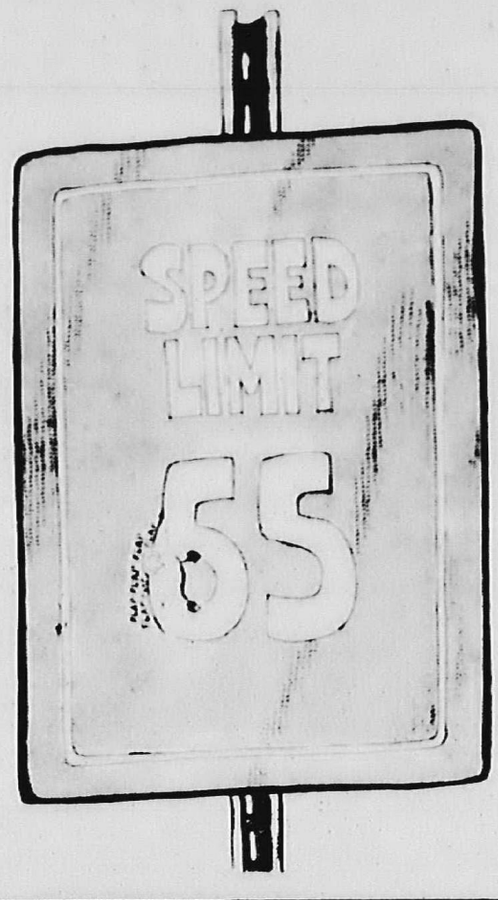

From the lack of concerted and coordinated effort, we can only doubt it.

Oakland and Wayne counties have a growing number of hotels. One recently opened hotel is the Radisson Plaza at Town Center in Southfield (picture is of scale model).

"JUNIOR'S SUCH A PRANKSTER. HE LIKES TO HOVER IN FRONT OF THE 5 IN URBAN AREAS TO MAKE IT LOOK LIKE A 6. THAT CAUSES THOSE RED LIGHTS TO FLASH ON TOP OF POLICE CARS. THAT CAUSES GREAT ANTICIPATION AMONGST ALL OF THE DRIVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE AREA."

Suburban neighbors fight to halt Contras

Steve Barnaby

FOR MOST of us, Central America is about as distant a place as we could imagine, both in miles and in culture.

But for an ever-growing group of suburban Detroit residents, the undeclared war between the United States-backed Contra forces and the Nicaraguan government is as close as next door.

And Plymouth-based U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell is finding that out in very loud and clear terms.

Some of his neighbors are sending the homespun Republican congressman a message. They want our government to withdraw its support from the Contra movement, which is attempting to overthrow the Marxist government of Daniel Ortega.

Mention Marxism and U.S. military involvement in the same breath and you've found yourself a debate that fosters emotional and heated reaction. And that's just as true for Plymouth, Mich., as it is for Washington, D.C.

MANY WHO are putting Pursell's feet to the fire on this issue aren't your typical streetcorner radicals.

They range from high school students to an 80 year-old grandmother, from a shop floor worker at General Motors to a former Plymouth mayor. Now these aren't exactly what you'd call the Molotov cocktail set.

In short, this is a pretty conservative group of folks who are fed up with what they feel is a bankrupt American foreign policy.

Pursell is one of several congressmen throughout the country who has been identified as a swing vote should a bill for Contra aid come to the floor. A national group calling itself Neighbor to Neighbor is responsible for rallying local opposition.

"Plymouth isn't exactly a hotbed of radicalism," says former Plymouth mayor Bev McAninch, who recently became active in Neighbor to Neighbor along with her husband, Bill.

At a recent meeting the participants were what McAninch referred to as "pillars of the community."

"ALL ALONG there has been this perception that only the people in Ann Arbor care about this issue. We just want to make sure that Carl knows that others of us care, also," she said.

Although 80-year-old Helen Van Dyke spends most of her time on a farm just outside of Plymouth, she too is seeking a more active role to oppose Contra aid.

"Contra aid makes it impossible for any democracy to grow in Nicaragua," she said. "Pounding the life out of them isn't doing a bit of good. We're just sending them into the arms of the Russians."

And this kind of firm talk from such moderate types does seem to be having an effect.

Pursell has met with representatives from the group and feels that they are worth dealing with, according to Pursell aide Gary Cates.

"We're interested in listening to other groups, too. But their (Neighbor to Neighbor) tactics lend more credibility to their argument," said Cates.

"They listen to Carl, too. And that's what we need is a dialogue," he said.

Interesting concept, this idea of neighbors sitting down to iron out their differences. It's about time. No sense leaving the important decisions up to the folks in Washington. After all, more often than not, they botch it up.

Oh, yeah, if you're interested in getting in on the dialogue call Caren Gardner at 453-9164.

Madonna

4 decades of excellence pursued

BALLOONS, GAMES, MAGIC and music will be on display Saturday as Madonna College celebrates its 40th birthday.

But when the hoopla and celebration ends, the college will quietly resume its role as the largest independent coeducational liberal arts school in southeastern Michigan.

Madonna may not generate the headlines of other larger schools but its record of accomplishment and growth is something of which school officials, students and the whole metropolitan area can be proud.

MADONNA, which draws 8 percent of its 4,000 students from Plymouth/Canton, performs a vital role to both the typical college student and older adults returning to the classroom.

Wayne County students make up almost 70 percent of the undergraduate enrollment at Madonna, but students from other countries also sample the curriculum.

These students were drawn to the program for a variety of reasons ranging from reasonable tuition to convenient times to the quality of the educational offerings.

A look at the growth Madonna has experienced since its founding by the Felician Sisters in 1947 illustrates the school's success.

Back then, the school was a women's college that offered three educational programs — teaching, medical technology and social welfare.

Now, the college has 50 academic areas including fire science, hospice care and computer technology.

Undergraduate enrollment has more than doubled in the past 10 years while a new master's degree program in business administration and nursing has jumped from 97 students in 1982 to 210 today.

THE COLLEGE is the only institution in the state that provides a degree-granting program in sign language interpreting.

Another impressive statistic is minority enrollment. Madonna actively recruits minority students and minorities make up 11 percent of the college's student population.

With many evening classes, Madonna was one of the first colleges to actively seek older students.

This effort has paid off. By providing evening courses and flexible scheduling, more than 70 percent of Madonna's students are 23 or older.

A $1.3 million Educational Development Center will be completed this month. This addition includes a children's learning center for elementary and secondary students with emotional problems and learning difficulties.

AS MADONNA embarks on its next 40 years, the obstacles facing the college and higher education in general will be even more challenging.

Declining numbers of high school students will make it imperative that colleges continue to attract adults who want to expand their educational development.

Finding the money to pay for educational improvements remains a tough job.

Madonna, for example, plans to seek $500,000 to improve its library and another $4 million for scholarship endowments to help students fulfill their academic goals.

But based on the college's past performance and success, Madonna appears ready and able to meet the challenges that will crop up in the next 40 years.

Opposed to premium tax

To the editor:

My car insurance company, Citizens, has written me and made me aware that some politicians in Lansing want to tax the premiums of people insured. I think they should cut their spending.

I think this is wrong, and I'm sure many more people share my opinion, if they were aware.

This tax can be nipped in the bud if people would write to the governor and their senator and representative and tell them to oppose any such legislation.

Scheduled re-trial stirs memories of 'truth serum' medic

Fred DeLano

THE RECENT announcement that Dr. Charles Fisher soon will be tried a second time on a charge of having murdered his wife stirred old memories at this typewriter, focusing mainly upon the "truth serum" medic, Dr. Ronald E. Clark, who was sent to prison for manslaughter.

The chain of circumstances that eventually put the feisty Dr. Clark behind bars at Jackson had its innocuous beginning just 20 years and two days ago, Nov. 3, 1967.

It was on that evening when police officer Dale Hall of what then was Farmington Township, now Farmington Hills, was doing routine patrol duty and spotted a vehicle parked illegally outside the Clark clinic at 30337 Grand River. It would have been difficult for Hall not to take notice, the vehicle being a hearse.

The officer called on the doctor and learned the hearse had been summoned from a funeral parlor to carry off the body of Mrs. Grace Neil, 43, a Livonia resident who was his part-time nurse. She had just died in the office and later Dr. Clark was accused of having caused the death by administering a lethal dose of sodium pentothal.

The 56-year-old doctor had been in trouble with the law and with the state board of registration in medicine before — trifles like revocation of his license — but never had been charged in a fatality. The media had a field day, particularly when the investigation turned up other suspicious deaths.

"SUBURBAN PHYSICIAN is charged in death of his part-time nurse," screamed the Detroit Free Press from the top of Page 1 and equally prominent was the Detroit News story headlined, "Death of 2 nurses brings investigation of doctor."

The tabloid New York Sunday News gave top play to "Sex, death and Dr. Clark," and Master Detective magazine kept the pot boiling with its article, "Mysterious death of the Michigan Nurse." Oh, yes, I also wrote thousands of words in covering the case from start to finish for these newspapers.

The bearded physician fled, only to be tracked down and apprehended near Port Austin at the top of the Michigan Thumb, and when Oakland County Circuit Judge Wiliam Beer granted a change of venue, the Clark trial was shifted to the Ingham County courthouse at Mason.

Dr. Clark began a three- to 15-year prison sentence the following summer after a jury found him guilty of manslaughter. He died March 23, 1972. While he was on stage, there were two unforgettable scenes.

The first came at the time of his arraignment in Farmington Township justice court when he fought with officers and then interrupted court procedure by screaming an accusation of "torture" at a township detective.

Then, on the day he was sentenced by Judge Beer, he fought to break the shackles when he was ordered handcuffed. "Oh, God," he screamed, leaping for his chair and slamming his wrists against the corner of the defense table. "These hurt like hell. God damn it."

HE WAS LED manacled from the courtroom at 4:08 p.m.

So now back to the Dr. Fisher case.

It has its own intriguing elements, although not as melodramatic as those in the Clark saga. But it too has a label: the "duct tape" murder.

To refresh your memory, Dr. Fisher lived with his wife, Ella Maria Mercado-Fisher, in Canton Township, almost at the boundary between Wayne and Washtenaw counties. He was a microbiologist at the Veteran's Administration Hospital in Ann Arbor. The wife, a registered nurse, was working for a medical temporary emergency help agency and seeking a graduate degree in transcultural nursing at Wayne State University.

The physician claimed intruders knocked both of them unconscious and left the pair bound and gagged, including wrapping the wife's head in duct tape mummy style. Dr. Fisher asserts that he eventually managed to free them both, although Mercado-Fisher died five days after the assault.

A Wayne County Circuit Court jury found him guilty last year of murder in the first degree, a crime punishable by mandatory life in prison, but the verdict was set aside by Judge Claudia House Morcom because of what she called "improper conduct" in the presentation by the Wayne County prosecutor's office. She ordered a new trial.

The Michigan Supreme Court now has unanimously upheld her right to do this and Dr. Fisher is due to face a new jury on the murder rap early in January, this time in the court of Circuit Judge Thomas Foley. As this real-life drama unfolds, you can bet that it will be far more interesting than any fictional competition from the TV screen.

Learning about disease

Rich Perlberg

YOU'VE CERTAINLY driven down the road, sun glaring through the windshield, and felt the need for toothpicks to keep your eyes open.

Imagine, then, the shock and fear of Alice Hawk, a Farmington resident whose eyes shut suddenly several years ago as she was driving on a busy highway.

"I panicked," she says. "I still don't know how I got over to the shoulder. It happened five times again before I got home. Then I was coming down the stairs and it happened again."

Hawk has an affliction called essential blepharospasm. You may have heard of it if you listened closely to Sally Field's new movie "Surrender." Otherwise it is probably a new word to you. Don't feel bad. Until recently, a lot of doctors weren't familiar with it either.

In medical lingo, "blepharo" is derived from a Greek word meaning eyelid; "spasm," of course, is an involuntary, convulsive contraction of muscles; "essential" means of unknown cause.

PUT IT ALL together and you have people whose eyes close suddenly and unpredictably for no known reason. As bleak as that definition is, it is a godsend to some of the blefros, which is what the afflicted call themselves.

Knowing that you have a disease is a lot better than thinking you are a head case. And after a lot of people, including professionals, suggest just that, well . . .

"You start to wonder," says Joanne Judy, a Bloomfield Hills woman who went to 30 professionals in a two-year period and couldn't find anyone who could explain why she was squinting so frequently and so violently.

When she found someone who could diagnose her she felt "a tremendous surge of relief" even though she also learned there is no cure for essential blepharospasm and its kissing cousin, Meige syndrome, which can affect speech and manifests itself in muscle spasms in the lower face, mouth, tongue, neck and other facial areas.

For some time, the preferred treatments involved sometimes drastic and risky surgery or drugs that often came with unwanted side effects.

Now the treatment of choice for many is periodic injections of the eye muscles with a toxin made by the bacteria that cause botulism.

THE AFFLICTION has trends but few absolutes. It seems to prefer women in their 50s and 60s but some blefros are younger men. For some, stressful situations worsen the symptoms. Judy, however, does better when she is concentrating on a demanding task.

Last week, for instance, she played an integral part in hosting the Birmingham appearance of Mattie Lou Koster, a 73-year-old Texan and blefro who has mounted a one-woman national campaign, complete with a research foundation, to spread the word about essential blepharospasm.

Programs designed to assist families

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Jack Strouss of Livonia likes having somewhere to go during the day.

On Wednesdays and Fridays, Strouss, 68, travels to St. John's Episcopal Church in Plymouth Township. He's among those making use of the adult day center at the church.

The adult day center and in-home respite care are new services being offered by Plymouth Family Service, a Plymouth Community Fund agency.

"I love it," Strouss said of his time at the center. "It gives me something to do instead of just staying in the house."

Strouss is driven to the center by his wife. Strouss, who is in a wheelchair, had a stroke and isn't able to use the left side of his body.

"Fellowship" is what Strouss enjoys about his time at the center. Crafts, games, cards and exercises help fill the days. Recently those at the center made Halloween cookies.

A HOT MEAL at noon is included; monitoring of clients' health and medication is also part of the adult day center program.

The center opened in October at St. John's, with Connie Duncan as site manager. Duncan started training in September through Child and Family Service of Washtenaw.

"It's a very exciting field," she said. "I'm impressed by it."

The adult day center allows family members to drop off an older relative for the day. The service, offered for those 60 and older, is available from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The service is one that's needed, Duncan said.

"We're all going to be in this situation as we get older."

The adult day center provides an alternative to putting an older relative in a nursing home, Duncan said. It allows other family members to continue working or just to have some time off.

"They need the respite, too, to be able to do what they want to do."

In addition to Duncan and staff member Joan Caramagno, volun-

Demand for guide: Sign of the times

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Copies of a day care/preschool guide for the Plymouth-Canton area are going like hotcakes.

The project is a joint venture of the Canton Public Library and the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth. Information on local day care facilities and preschools was collected through the use of questionnaires.

A total of 750 copies of the booklet were printed; so far, the booklets have been in great demand among local parents.

"It turned out to be much larger than we expected," said Sally DeGraff, children's librarian at the Canton Public Library.

This is the first time staffers at the two local libraries worked together on a day care/preschool guide. DeGraff worked with Mary Lou Curtin, a Dunning-Hough children's librarian, on the project.

The beginning section of the booklet includes a day care/preschool checklist, taken from "A Parent's Guide to Day Care," a U.S. Department of Health and Human Services publication.

THE BOOKLET also includes individual listings for local facilities. Categories covered in the booklet include: location, phone number and contact person, type of school, hours, ages of children accepted, cost, adult/child ratio, program description, teacher qualifications, any transportation arrangements, field trip information and recommended time to apply.

"A lot of people have picked them up when they come in for story time," the Canton Public Library's DeGraff said.

Some mothers picking up copies of the booklet are considering a return to school or to the paid workforce, DeGraff said. Having the information in the booklet available will help them make that transition, "since they won't have to do that legwork themselves."

The booklets have also been in demand at the Dunning-Hough Library, said Mary Lou Curtin, children's librarian. Copies of the booklet are temporarily unavailable at the library in Plymouth; additional copies will be available within a couple of weeks.

"The response has been so overwhelming," Curtin said. "It makes me feel like it was worthwhile."

IN ADDITION to the libraries, copies of the booklet have been distributed at several other Plymouth locations. The libraries are already printing additional copies of the booklet, which first became available to local parents in early October.

Some booklets are still available at the Canton Public Library, DeGraff said. The additional copies should arrive at the Canton Public Library in about two weeks. An additional 500 copies are being printed for Canton, with 300 more being printed for Plymouth.

Both librarians have heard positive comments about the booklets. Curtin has had a number of requests, including some from individual elementary schools.

"It's just been unbelievable." Curtin knew there was interest in day care options but had no idea there was so much interest. The day care/preschool booklet has been a particularly popular item among the many handouts available at the library.

The booklet is helpful in that it includes not only preschool information but also information on day care centers and homes, Curtin said.

"So it's twice as useful as we originally thought it would be." Some similar publications produced at other libraries haven't included information on day care facilities, she said.

DeGraff has also heard positive comments on the booklet. There have been some callers with corrections or suggestions for future editions of the day care/preschool guide.

The librarians aren't sure just when they'll update the booklet; the updating won't be done in the near future.

"But I'm sure we will," DeGraff said. "It's just a matter of time."

(Comments on the day care/preschool guide may be directed to Sally DeGraff at the Canton Public Library, 397-0999, or Mary Lou Curtin at the Dunning-Hough Library, 453-0750.)

Dianne Wilder, one of the center's volunteers, admires the craft project Jack Strouss is working on. Volunteers are a tremendous help at the center, according to Connie Duncan, site manager. "The volunteers are great. They just called and wanted to come right in and help out. I don't know what we'd do without them."

Their goal is helping families cope

BOTH THE adult day center and the in-home respite care are new services for Plymouth Family Service. Funding for the programs has come from the Senior Alliance, Area Agency on Aging 1-C.

"There's been a very nice response, a lot of inquiries," said David Breeden, Plymouth Family Service director. The agency's biggest task now is getting the word out on the availability of the programs.

Having St. John's available for the adult day center has been a big help, Breeden said.

"They've been very generous, very gracious."

Plymouth Family Service officials are currently looking for a larger facility for the agency's operations, Breeden said. Such a facility would house the adult day center and the agency's counseling unit, now at 880 Wing in Plymouth.

"That would be, of course, the permanent setup."

Cindy Lockman, the agency's administrator of adult day care, has also been pleased with the progress of the local programs.

"It's going very well," she said of the adult day center. "It's been well-received."

Currently there are four clients using the center. Lockman's hoping to get the word out to others who could use the service.

The adult day center could accommodate about 15 people now, Lockman said. The agency staffers are flexible in determining the financial contributions clients make for the service.

"We'd like to encourage people to try it."

The in-home respite care is provided by trained home health aides. So far, there have been about 12 calls on the service, Breeden said. About eight intake interviews have been held for those people, with six clients now using the service.

(For more information on the programs, call Plymouth Family Service, 453-0890.)

Female patients report more satisfaction from physicians

AP — Female medical patients are generally more satisfied than male patients with their physicians, and men and women both prefer female physicians to male doctors, a professor of medicine has found.

"Female patients perceive better levels of communication with their doctors — a crucial factor in the doctor-patient relationship," Dr. Dale Matthews, an assistant professor of medicine at the University of Connecticut Health Center, concluded recently in a study.

Matthews also said patients consider a physician's technical and interpersonal skills equally important.

For his study, the internist asked 381 patients at two community hospitals in Connecticut to rate the performance of 27 interns on 14 broad features, such as common courtesy, bedside manner and availability, and on 31 specific items of behavior.

Examples of specific items were "Explains in advance how special tests are done," "Relieves my worries," or "Acts superior to me."

In these areas female physicians rate highest, Matthews concluded in the first year of a two-year study financed by a grant from the Picker Foundation.

When should a CATARACT BE REMOVED?

When vision decreases to the point where it adversely affects normal daily activities, it is time to have a cataract removed.

Years ago, surgeons waited until the cataract was "ripe," as in danger of rupturing or destroying the eye. Then, the surgery required a fearful hospital procedure, stays of up to 14 days, sandbagged immobility, and much pain.

Today, cataract surgery has become one of the most frequently performed operations in America. It is done on an outpatient basis and the actual surgery lasts less than 30 minutes. Most patients arrive at the outpatient surgical center in the morning, have their surgery, enjoy a light snack and are back to the comforts of home by noon.

This procedure has been greatly simplified since days gone by due to the rapid advancements in microsurgical technology. Local anesthesia, high-magnification instruments, fine nylon sutures, small incision techniques and intraocular lens implants all contribute to making cataract surgery a safe and effective method of restoring vision.

For more information on cataracts, please contact The Coburn Clinic.

The only thing a kid should be getting in school is smarter. Unfortunately, what too many of them are getting instead is drugs. With your help, it doesn't have to be this way.

There is a program called Schools Without Drugs. The Challenge that can help you deal with the drug problem in your community or school.

Find out about it. The smarter you are about what works against drugs, the better chance our kids will understand how dumb it is to take them.

Column grapples with today's moral issues

Rev. David Strong

We need to remind ourselves that religion without moral and ethical action is dead.

A FRIEND of mine tells me that we should do Bible study and prayer in the midst of action. We should not be sitting in a building but standing in the streets. These religious duties should be done in a place of crisis and pain. My friend tells me that faith is a verb not a noun.

This week is the 15th anniversary of this column. My friend says that the value of our column may be judged not by what we have said but by what we and others have done as a result.

Fifteen years ago, we clergy who wrote this column were often out in the streets. We were acting upon our beliefs regarding racism, war, ecology and other moral issues. We have grown older, and the temptation is to sit upon a soft chair and reflect upon the problems of the world.

We need to remind ourselves that religion without moral and ethical action is dead. This column was born out of the conviction that religion is more than potlucks, worship services and dinner speakers. Faith is inseparable from deed and act. A caring church or synagogue must guage its commitments by how many dollars and people it sends out to aid in healing life.

YEARS AGO a book came out with the title "The Comfortable Pew." At times the phrase haunts me. It is too easy to slip into the comfortable pew.

"What does God require of us?" asks the prophet Micah. His answer is that we are to do justice, love mercy and walk humbly with God.

What comes to our mind when we hear these words? One situation which comes to my mind is how the death penalty is carried out in the South. When prospective jurors are questioned in a murder case they are asked, "Do you oppose the death penalty?" If the person does, he or she is disqualified for the jury.

The fact is that almost all black people in the Deep South oppose the death penalty. The practical effect of this process is to immediately remove virtually all blacks from the jury. The almost-all-white juries who do not object to the death penalty, then are more apt to impose the death penalty. A lawyer in Georgia states that "fairness and justice are being trampled upon in a horrendous fashion." Think about it!

In the first column of this series, the Rev. Richard Cassidy asked whether religion does motivate people to overcome social injustice. In earlier history, he gave evidence that religion did not challenge injustice. The silence of the churches in Hitler's Germany was the most striking example. Although there has been some evidence that religion does lead people to seek justice and mercy, the most recent revivals of conservative religion have turned the clock back.

We need to turn our attention all the way back to the religion of Moses, Isaiah, Micah and Jesus. Some denominations have focused upon the word "discipleship" as a key guide word. Living justice and righteousness is part of this same orientation.

We shall see if ethical, moral and just action is to be a part of religious conviction. Otherwise, there is always the option of sitting deep into the comfortable pew.

The Rev. David Strong is the pastor of St. Matthew United Methodist Church in Livonia. He, Rabbi Irwin Groner and the Rev. Lloyd Buss were among the Moral Perspectives writers when the column debuted Nov. 9, 1972. The other current columnist is the Rev. Robert Schaden.

Nativity to install new pastor

The Rev. Donald Lintelman new pastor

Nativity United Church of Christ, 9435 Henry Ruff, will have an installation service for the Rev. Donald Lintelman at 7 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8.

It is a tradition of the United Church of Christ that the association, at the request of a local church, confirm and celebrate the covenant between the local church and the newly called pastor.

The Rev. Jack Richards, a Detroit-Metropolitan minister, will install Lintelman. Lintelman came to Nativity United in September from Community United Church of Christ in Erie, Pa., where he served for eight years.

The evening's meditation, "This Worthy Enterprise," will be presented by a previous associate, the Rev. Tom Hershberger from Emanuel United Church of Christ of Doylestown, Ohio. Hershberger and Lintelman, as president and vice-president of the Lake Erie Association Penn-West Conference, worked closely together establishing programs for the conference.

Also participating in the installation service will be the Rev. Don Yungclas, interim conference minister for the United Church of Christ Michigan Conference; the Rev. John Maki, pastor of Salem United Church of Christ in Farmington; the Rev. Kennyon Edwards, former interim pastor at Nativity; and the Rev. Wayne Boyd, present member of Nativity Church.

The installation service is open to other Detroit-area churches.

Canton Calvary to host seminar, boutique

A women's seminar and boutique, "Joy Fellowship Extravaganza," will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, at Canton Calvary Assembly of God Church, 7933 Sheldon.

Featured will be well-known Bible teacher Joy Barrow, academic dean of the northern Michigan School of the Bible. A mini-piano concert will be presented by Tara McCormick. Soloist Rosemary Linderman will also perform.

The boutique will feature three "stores" from which to shop: "Granny's Kitchen," "Art Store 'n' More" and "Country Charm Crafts."

Registration fee including seminar sessions and luncheon will be $8 before Nov. 11 ($10 after Nov. 11). For women over 60, the fee is $6.

For more information, call 455-0820.

Special service to honor war veterans

The Cathedral Church of St. Paul will host its 24th annual "Veterans Day & Remembrance Service" 4-5:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, at the church, 4800 Woodward Ave., near Warren.

● INSTALLATION SERVICE

There will be an installation service for the Rev. Thomas Pals at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, at Alpha Baptist Church, 28051 W. Chicago, between Inkster and Middlebelt roads, Livonia.

Plans for the service include a variety of special musical numbers including ones by the Sanctuary Choir of Alpha Baptist and the "Come Ring Joy" handbell choir of the First Baptist Church of Plymouth.

Those attending will include the Rev. Robert Shaw, executive minister of the American Baptist Churches of Michigan (ABC-M); the Rev. Charles Armstrong, minister of youth and camping for ABC-M; the Rev. Ronald Carey, president of the Southeast Area Ministers Council and pastor of Grand River Avenue Baptist Church of Livonia; the Rev. William Stahl, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Plymouth; and the Rev. Dennis Metzger, pastor of the Essexville Community Baptist Church.

The "Passing on the Mantle" ceremony will be led by the Rev. Carlton Younge, retired pastor of Alpha Baptist Church.

● ANDERSON CONCERT

Livonia Assembly of God, 33015 Seven Mile, will present "Anderson's in Concert at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8.

● MARINER'S CHURCH SERVICE

The 12th Anniversary of the sinking of the Edmund Fitzgerald will be solemnly observed at 11 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, at Mariner's Church in Detroit. Ship masters are encouraged to attend and wear their uniform. Free parking is available in the Ford Auditorium Garage with entrance in the median strip of Jefferson at Woodward.

● PARISH MISSION

Our Lady of Grace Parish will host a mission focusing on forgiveness and reconciliation. The Rev. Jim Burke will lead the mission, speaking at 9:15 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. sessions. Evening sessions will begin Saturday, Nov. 14, and run through Friday, Nov. 20. Morning sessions will run from Monday, Nov. 16, through Friday, Nov. 20. The sessions will be held in the church on Joy Road, three blocks east of Telegraph. The sessions are open to the public.

● MT. HOPE HOSTS RETREAT

"Decisions and Consequences" will be the topic as Junior High Pilgram Fellowships from the Michigan Conference of Congregational Christian Churches meet in a retreat from 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 7, to 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, at Mt. Hope Congregational Church, 30330 Schoolcraft, Livonia.

The Rev. Henry Brown of Pilgram Congregational Church in Bloomfield Hills will be the guest speaker.

The cost for the weekend is $18 and includes all materials and meals. Registration is open to junior high students in conference-participating Congregational churches. For reservations, call 425-7280.

● INFORMATION EVENING

Anyone interested in information about the Catholic faith can have questions answered at 7 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, at St. Bernadine Parish Hall, 31463 Ann Arbor Trail, near Merriman, Westland. The session is open to both Catholics and non-Catholics.

● EVANGELISM SPEAKER

The Rev. Tony Schultz will be the guest speaker on Sunday, Nov. 8, at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 17810 Farmington Road. The congregation will celebrate Evangelism Sunday and renew its commitment to the task of sharing the Gospel with all people. Services take place at 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. The presentation on witnessing will be at 9:45 a.m. Schultz serves at Trinity Lutheran Church in Dundee, Wis., and is also a member of the Evangelism Commission of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod.

● PASTOR ON RADIO

The Rev. Bartlett Hess, senior pastor at Ward Presbyterian Church of Livonia, will be on radio station WWCM-AM 990 during "The Gospel According to John" show which airs 3-5 p.m. Hess will be contributing one minute inspirational talks every day during the week.

● ANNIVERSARY DINNER

Sword of the Spirit Lutheran Church, 34563 Seven Mile, will be celebrating its 20th anniversary at 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 22, with a Harvest Thanksgiving Potluck Dinner and worship service. The service and dinner are open to former members of the church.

● FILM

The film, "Cry from the Mountain," will be shown at 6 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, at Garden City Free Methodist Church, 27415 Maplewood, Garden City. The movie stars James Cavan, Wes Parker and Rita Walker. There is also a message from the Rev. Billy Graham.

Account-ability

CPA firms face liability issues as malpractice rates balloon

By Philip A. Sherman
special writer

"With respect to the ———— process, there's nothing wrong with it. It's just like airplanes. They're basically sound vehicles that fly thousands and thousands of miles every year. That doesn't mean something won't occasionally go wrong or the pilot occasionally won't make an error."

If you fill in the blank with a reference to the medical profession, it probably would fit but wouldn't necessarily be corect in this case. The quote, from Jerry Hepps, is about the occasional mistake professionals make that turns into a huge malpractice lawsuit.

The profession he's referring to is accounting, one of the latest, relatively speaking, to join the duck-and-cover world of ostensibly serving clients while hoping like crazy they won't turn around and sue in the event of an error.

Hepps is the partner is charge of professional standards at Plante & Moran in Southfield, one of the area's top five accounting firms that does the books for a wide variety of companies. He sees recent mounting criticism of mistakes in what's commonly termed "the auditing process" as unfair, particularly for himself, his company and his colleagues.

"The auditing profession really provides useful services by providing credibility in financial reporting. Who else could do it?" Hepps said. In answer to his question, some might say they'd rather do it themselves.

THAT'S EVIDENCED by inquiries as recently as 1985 by Congress, probing for answers to the question of who is liable when an audit is incorrect. An article in Management Accounting magazine cites the number of lawsuits filed against CPA firms and attaches a dollar amount to requested damages — $2 billion. The article says errors great or small have cost the country's eight largest accounting firms almost $180 million to settle audit-related cases and notes "another major CPA firm has paid $137 million in judgments and settlements over the last five years."

'Liability is true throughout the country, not just in our profession. Costs are up and we have more litigation. They're (clients) prone to sue because we have relatively deep pockets.'

— Harold Dubrowski of Grant Thornton

What does it mean? For one thing, charts tracking liability insurance costs for accounting firms have lines that start at the floor and go through ceiling vents. Harold Dubrowski, managing partner of Grant Thornton of Southfield, said he knows of one small firm whose $100,000 policy used to cost $5,000 and went up to $34,000 in one year.

Hepps said acounting firms vigorously apply quality control standards to the point of having peer reviews every three years. The reviews at this time are voluntary — Hepps noted Plante & Moran just completed its third — but there is talk of making them mandatory. Hepps is an executive committee member of the Division for Firms, an SEC arm, he said, "formed back in the '70s after a lot of heat from Congress about accounting firms."

EVEN IN A TIME of increasing litigation, Dubrowski sees most firms growing, not necessarily due to the auditing process but rather due to what he called "peripherals."

"Accounting firms offer three standard products: the compilation, which just compiles numbers with no analysis; the review, which is analytical with no testing; and the audit, which is analytical, includes outside testing and opinion," Dubrowski said. "But the area that's really making money is consulting, human resources and strategic planning."

Dubrowski said consulting is the highest growth area in the profession, and cited Arthur Anderson's consulting department as an example, calling it the "single largest in the world." He said consulting is a big seller because it teaches time-saving techniques through computers and couples those with more efficient statistical acrobatics.

"But liability is true throughout the country, not just in our profession. Costs are up and we have more litigation. They're (clients) prone to sue because we have relatively deep pockets," Dubrowski said, which has the effect of making firms scrutinize high-risk clients before signing them up. He defined high-risk, for example, as one with which a firm has had no previous experience.

Hepps' view of the malpractice problem can be likened to that of the medical profession. Basically, a few doctors are being negligent of their patients while the overwhelming majority are practicing their profession with skill and dignity. "We're still going to run into pilot error occasionally, but few cases result in court decisions where auditors have done a good job. For each one, thousands have gone on without one problem."

Chamber boss promotes southeast Michigan

Attorney Richard C. Van Dusen, as the newly elected chairman of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, sees improvements in education and the crime situation as keys to improving southeast Michigan as a place to live and do business.

Van Dusen, a Bingham Farms resident and chairman of the law firm of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen and Freeman, was elected chairman in June and will serve a one-year term.

"The importance of elementary and secondary education, particularly in Detroit, will be a critical issue along with the improvement of the crime situation and improvement of Detroit and southeast Michigan's image," Van Dusen said.

"We have now embarked on a program to improve the quality of education and reduce the dropout rate and improve that system which needs help," said Van Dusen of Detroit Public Schools.

PROMOTING A greater understanding of Detroit and southeast Michigan is a vital chamber goal, said Van Dusen.

"We work on improving understanding on the part of business and civic leadership from outside Michgian with their counterparts in southeast Michigan," he said. "It promotes southeast Michigan and a greater understanding."

The chamber recently hosted visits from a number of outstate legislators and has sponsored visits from business and civic leaders in Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo and Marquette in the past.

On the legislative calendar, Van Dusen says the chamber will be tackling the issue of product liability.

"We are very interested in seeing improvement in the law regarding product liability so producers are not hauled into court every other day," he said.

The 3,700-member chamber is also opposed to proposed parental leave legislation.

"Legislation has been offered in Lansing which would be extremely burdensome, especially for small businesses," he said.

BILL PARKER/staff photographer

Richard C. Van Dusen: "We are very interested in seeing improvement in the law regarding product liability so producers are not hauled into court every other day."

He says the chamber is not opposed to maternity leave, but the proposals are so Draconian in their effect that it would be extraordinarily burdensome for some businesses.

The bill, House Bill 4504, would permit an employee to take up to 180 days of leave in a two-year period. It defines parental leave as leave taken by an employee for the purpose of birth and care of a child, adoption and care of a child or the serious illness and care of dependent.

All employers of two or more employees are included and must provide each employee of more than one year with up to 180 days of parental leave. Sixty days at full pay with benefits continued at the employer's expense and 120 days unpaid with benefits continued at the employee's expense is required.

The employee would also be restored to the position held prior to the leave upon a return to work.

Van DUSEN SAYS the chamber has, from time to time, addressed social issues, specifically hunger.

"The chamber took a major leading role in providing food for the hungry," he said.

Project Pride, another chamber program, helps keep neighborhoods clean by aiding in various cleanup activities, including removal of abandoned cars.

One of the chamber's activities is Leadership Detroit, which involves more than 50 young potential leaders in programs designed to acquaint them with the business, social and government structure in Detroit and also leadership in the area, says Van Dusen.

Van DUSEN has been on the chamber board of directors since 1982. The board is made up of 54 business leaders who represent a cross section of business interests including manufacturing, retail, service, utility and health care.

His former positions in the chamber include assistant treasurer, vice chairman of government affairs and first vice chairman. He also served as chairman of the headquarters committee and the chamber's 1987 Mackinac Island legislative conference.

No stranger to politics, Van Dusen ran George Romney's campaign for governor in 1963 and served Romney in his first year in office.

In 1969 he took another leave from law to serve for three years as undersecretary of the Housing and Urban Development Department in Washington, D.C., under Romney.

BIDCOs: hybrid financing

By Philip A. Sherman
staff writer

'We don't want to do mom and pop shops because they can't offer a good return to investors and shareholders.'

— Ronald Bieke of Arcadia BIDCO

An alternative financing device for growth businesses, falling between commercial bank loans and venture capital investments, is making its debut in the Michigan market.

The product is referred to by its acronym, BIDCO — Business and Industrial Development Corporation. The first BIDCO conference, for decision makers interested in starting BIDCOs, played to a packed room at Detroit's Westin Hotel earlier this week. The conference generated enough excitement in the financial community to draw its audience from 31 states.

"What we're really talking about here is creating a new industry," said Steve Rhode, director of policy and program development for Michigan's Strategic Fund, which sponsored the conference. The Michigan Strategic Fund is the catalyst behind BIDCOs, which at an overview work like this:

- As a given, businesses have a problem securing loans to expand because of the risk involved. Rhode said commercial loan institutions — banks — are heavily regulated and take a low-risk lending position because of their debt-to-equity ratio, which he pegged at 15-1.
- On the other end of the line is the venture capitalist, who is low on debt, high on equity and engages in higher risk for a higher return. Rhode said most venture capitalists won't invest without hope of a 40-percent or greater return. Either scenario stifles the middle-weight entrepreneur in a growth position, he said.
- Enter the BIDCO, developed in California by financial heavyweight Derek Hansen and now exported to Michigan. A BIDCO takes up the slack by taking more risk than a bank, less than the venture capitalists and then offering hybrid repayment arrangements such as debt and equity mixes, Rhode said.

MICHIGAN ALREADY has three BIDCOs, which are private institutions. The Michigan Strategic Fund started each of the three with an initial $2 million investment as an incentive for further investment from the private sector, according to Jim Paquet, BIDCO program manager. The idea, he said, is to spur growth by freeing up money.

But BIDCOs do not appear to be a financing solution for start-up businesses. The heads of Michigan's three BIDCOs said during a panel discussion it was unlikely they would finance start-ups because of high failure rates.

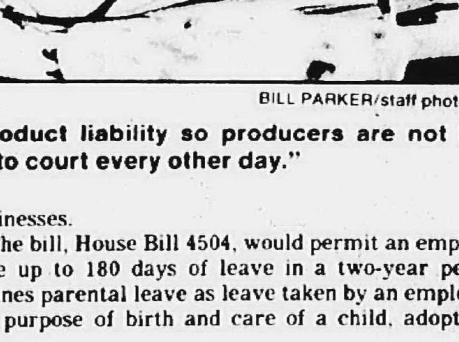

Also, Paquet said the strategic fund merely stipulates a BIDCO do business in Michigan and aim at the middle market. That means other rules for obtaining BIDCO money can, and do, vary widely.

FOR INSTANCE, Gordon Areen, co-founder of Onset BIDCO in Farmington Hills, said the profile of a company they would likely invest in would include sales between $500,000 and $20 million. It must be within an hour's driving distance of his headquarters in Farmington Hills so he can maintain a "hands-on" management stature. The loan to such a company wouldn't exceed $1 million on fixed interest based on the cost of money, would be repayable in five to seven years, and the typical loan would be between $600,000 and $700,000.

How do you see stock market?

By Sid Mittra
special writer

I feel I should share my views on the current stock market. However, I would prefer to do so after I have polled my readers on how they feel about the market. So I urge you to fill out the questionnaire above and mail it to me without delay.

Mail to Sid Mittra, Oakland University, SBA, Rochester, Mich. 48309.

Seminar: "How to Invest Home Equity Safely; New Investment Opportunities under the New Tax Law." The seminar, sponsored by the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and Coordinated Financial Planning, will be held 7-9:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, at the Kingsley Inn, 1475 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills. This will be the last seminar of 1987.

BIDCOs finance business growth

Onset's license is pending. All BIDCOs must be licensed and regulated in a manner similar to a bank, Rhode said, to inspire confidence in investors and shareholders. Apparently that strategy works because Chrysler has approved a $4 million investment in Onset, Areen said.

LAWRENCE GARDNER, president of LGA Capital Resources BIDCO in Troy, specializes in "corporate turnarounds, distressed companies and companies experiencing explosive growth." His typical loan would be in the same range as Onset BIDCO's, but the client must be within a 15-20 mile radius of his office, Gardner said. His method of repayment is to take royalties on sales, which he said could be up to 25 percent.

Paquet said while that figure sounds high, it demonstrates the high risk Gardner is willing to take. "He only takes a royalty as the business succeeds," Paquet said, noting if there is no rate of succession, no royalties are paid. He added the amount of repayment depends on the terms and conditions set between the two parties.

Information means success

When we talk about the changing face of American business, we must first acknowledge that we are living now in the age of information.

As John Naisbett said in the book "Megatrends," the information society is an economic reality, not an intellectual abstraction.

If we expect to identify where and how we will get where we want in the future, we must have access to information that allows us to learn the most from our past experiences and those of others.

When we can do that, we can then understand how achieving long-term success and growth as an organization isn't a result of chance or luck. Rather, it is the result of using the right information to make the "right" kinds of business decisions now and in the future.

SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS owners who understand the importance of information processing have structured their firms to promote the continual flow of timely, accurate and reliable information to assist in decision making. How so?

One method involves taking advantage of information technology. This technology is available to help us select the information we need, rather than the information that is useless to us.

Some examples include on-line data bases, in-house management information systems and communication channels for sorting and selecting data. These information sources allow us to immediately obtain answers to how changes in the competitive, economic, technological, political and cultural environments affect our business — as well as provide integrated structures to evaluate these changes relative to what we already know about our internal operating environment.

NETWORKING is another way that businesses are enhancing their information processing function. At one level, networking involves business professionals getting together to share ideas, exchange information and establish contacts between themselves and clusters of others.

Business conferences, seminars, professional meetings and trade shows provide the opportunities that promote this form of networking.

At another level, networking represents a definite management style replacing the traditional hierarchical structure. Rather than information flowing from the top down, as in the case of an organizational hierarchy, the network management style promotes communication flow in all directions.

TOP EXECUTIVES, managers and support staff personnel are encouraged to spend time exchanging information, ideas and knowledge with one another.

As Naisbett said, "In the network environment, rewards come by empowering others, not climbing over them."

Das reckoning for Audi's image

Dan McCosh

The story of Volkswagen in the United States makes for a plot straight out of the "Big Chill," whereby the idealism of the 1960s (flower power, Volkswagen Beetles, better yet, Volkswagen Microbuses) becomes jaded by middle age and materialism (stuffing paintings in a Rabbit, the Audi 5000).

At the end, as in classic tragedy, having sown the seeds of its own demise, Volkswagen sells one too many Audis to successful product-liability attorneys, and the end is near.

There are cars and there are symbols. Symbolic cars cover a broad spectrum, from 1950s Cadillacs through Edsels, Corvairs to Pintos and Volvos. Volkswagen, for reasons that remain inscrutable to rational beings, over the years has had more than its share of cars as symbols.

NOBODY IN the car business plans symbolic automobiles for the simple reason you would sound like an idiot in the marketing meeting. Picutre, for example, standing up in a Wolfsburg board room surrounded by the shambles of postwar Germany and proposing exporting this car originally designed for National Socialists because it will be gobbled up by New York sociology professors, who will drive it as a statement of anti-establishment values.

Get serious.

But once you've got a good automotive statement going, you run with it, and Volkswagen has done this better than almost anybody for several generations of new products, from Bug to Rabbit to Audi.

Over the years, a series of imaginative ad campaigns has managed to snowball the sometimes-inexplicable affection the cars generated in their owners. Most recently, the smartly styled Audi 5000 had become one of the most visible symbols of upward mobility.

But image works two ways. Today's Volkswagen's Audi Division is struggling with consumer backlash stemming from investigations of allegations of "sudden acceleration" of its Audi 5000 models.

THE RESULTS of the investigation so far are inconclusive. Neither the government's nor Audi's engineers have been able to locate any specific cause, a situation that has prompted a series of recalls and tentative fixes.

As far as Audi is concerned, the incidents reported have taken on a nightmarish quality. One recent example was a case reported by, of all people, a brake inspector at a New Jersey inspection station.

As it turns out, a number of late-model cars other than Audis also appear to share the problem, although Audis seem to have a statistically higher than average tendency to do so.

Regardless of the merits of the investigation, it wasn't until "60 Minutes" focused on the problem that it was brought to national media attention.

ONE RESULT was a precipitous drop in Audi 5000 sales. In fact, the incident seems to have had a far stronger effect on Audi sales than, for example, the gas-tank fires had on the Pinto.

Audi's free fall from grace as a synonym for new-found wealth once again demonstrates the difficulty of predicting the durability of a car's reputation.

The division is on its third general manager in two years, and Audi marketing types are scrambling to repair the damage while they launch a new series of models that are lesser cousins to the 5000, which seems to be slowly recovering its sales punch as well.

But the sudden-acceleration flap is only part of the problem with Audi sales.

HONDA IN particular has been doggedly pursuing almost an identical corporate strategy to Volkswagen for years. It quickly duplicated Volkswagen's front-wheel drive and built U.S. plants to avoid import quotas.

Honda's most recent move was the launch of its new Acura division, bringing considerably more competition to the Yuppie arena. In fact, Audi's sales drop seems more closely timed to the Acura introduction two years ago than the "60 Minutes" program.

It's possible that Audi's elusive search for image may end up giving way to a scramble for survival in a market glutted with $20,000-plus cars coming from Japanese manufacturers.

Student press awaits high court's ruling

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Are student journalists really journalists, or are they just students?

Do they have the same freedom professional journalists enjoy, or are they subject to censorship from uneasy school administrators?

Those issues lie at the heart of a conflict now before the U.S. Supreme Court. Despite a long history of defending free speech, neither the high court nor any other body has fully defined the role of student journalists.

As a result, news coverage philosophy varies widely among local high school newspapers.

Bolder staffs look outside school walls for stories.

The combined Plymouth-Canton Salem high school staff hasn't shied away from controversial issues. Last year, their newspaper featured a major report on teen sexuality. Other in-depth projects are planned for this year.

"The student newspaper is not supposed to be an agency for the administration, it's for the students," three-year staff member Cyndi Mueller said. "If anybody gets something wrong, it's not the administration's fault — it's ours. We take that seriously."

AT REDFORD Union High School, staff members have examined issues ranging from the effects of divorce, teen pregnancy and alcohol abuse.

"You can't be a teen today without knowing about them," faculty adviser Diane Scott said.

Other student newspapers play it closer to the vest, concentrating on school news, while leaving societal issues to the professional media.

While they say they don't face administration censorship, staff members at Livonia Stevenson and Garden City high schools generally avoid provocative stories.

"We try to stay away from controversial stuff," staff member Jeff Benson said.

"We only come out every six weeks or so," added staff member Tina Marlow. "So, something that's a controversy when we would write about it might not be a controversy when the paper came out."

The paper rarely deals with societal issues, preferring to stick to school events, adviser Phyllis Weeks said.

"We try not to put things in that will be offensive. Our primary concern is with our ninth graders. In many ways they're still little kids."

Garden City High School reporters also generally stick to school news.

"We try to stay away from sticky issues," faculty adviser Carl Amann said.

BUT THE newspaper will feature an editorial about the pending U.S. Supreme Court case in an upcoming edition.

"We took a neutral position on the case," co-editor Dana Macy said. "On one hand, I feel high school newspapers should stick to things closer to home, but it should be their decision, not the administrator's."

The Supreme Court case, Hazelwood School District V. Kuhlmeier stems from a Missouri school administrator's decision to delete articles on teen pregnancy and divorce from the school newspaper.

Whatever the Supreme Court decides is going to have a tremendous effect on high school and college newspapers, said Ken Siver, national president of the Journalism Education Association.

Siver said the Supreme Court has already given student journalists the same rights and privileges as the professional media. That 1969 ruling Tinker V. Des Moines, Iowa set down guidelines restricting student journalists from publishing libelous or obscene material, the same as professional journalists. The justices, however, also added a provision allowing for restriction of articles that were "disruptive to the school atmosphere."

Now, 18 years later, a new Supreme Court is reopening the issue.

Regardless of their own news coverage policy, local advisers and staff members hope the decision goes their way.

"Our feeling is that if this is taken away, it's not just student journalists who lose, it's all of journalism," Plymouth-Canton faculty adviser Chris Peal said.

Staff writers Tim Smith and Sue Mason contributed to this story.

'The student newspaper is not supposed to be an agency for the administration, it's for the students. If anybody gets something wrong, it's not the administration's fault — it's ours.'

Florence Petris' collection of Broadway theater programs and playbills covers a time span of some 40 years. She and her husband saw their first Broadway show, "Carmen Jones," in 1942. Pictured here are programs and playbills from older as well as more recent shows.

Broadway

Playbills recall hit shows

By Victoria Diaz
special writer

THE THREE-BEDROOM house on Newburgh Road in Westland doesn't look very much like a museum and, in actuality, it isn't.

But nevertheless, tucked away inside it is an impressive little history of off-Broadway and Broadway productions in the form of illustrated programs and playbills dating back to the late 1940s. Put together by 71-year-old Florence Petris, an inveterate playgoer for more than 40 years, the collection is something that would tickle the fancy of any aficionado of American theater and warm the hearts of all nostalgia buffs.

Petris, a former school secretary and IRS clerk, saw her first Broadway show, "Carmen Jones," on Sept. 9, 1942, when she and husband Robert traveled to New York City on a vacation trip shortly after they were married.

Four days later, the couple bought tickets to a performance of "Anna Lucasta," and three days after that, as the houselights dimmed at the Shubert Theatre, they were on hand for a memorable production of "Catherine Was Great," starring the inimitable Mae West.

AFTER THAT whirlwind week, Petris was hooked on New York theater. Eventually, she and her husband, a 3M Co. foreman, would carefully save up their money and make regular twice-yearly treks to New York to take in as many plays as they could manage in their three-or-four-day stays. If it happened that her husband couldn't make it, Florence sometimes went alone, usually checking in at the New York Hilton and walking 10 blocks to the theater district to buy tickets and see the shows on her own.

THOMAS ARNETT

Florence Petris of Westland looks at her favorite souvenir program, from "I Had a Ball," starring Buddy Hackett and Richard Kiley in 1965.

Each time she saw a play, she brought home either a playbill or program from that production. Now, she has more than 150 of those souvenirs, and would have even more — including that first one from "Carmen Jones" — had she not given several of them away to friends over the years.

Some of her special favorites include those from "The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd," staged at the Shubert Theatre in 1965, and starring Anthony Newley; "Hello, Dolly!" at the Palace, with Carol Channing (fresh from its debut at the Fisher in 1965); "An Evening With Bette Davis," circa 1951, marking one of Davis' rare stage appearances; and "Take Me Along," starring Jackie Gleason (also making a rare stage appearance), at the Shubert in 1960.

A CLOSE LOOK at photos inside some of the souvenirs reveal a young Diahann Carroll making her debut on Broadway in "No Strings"; Mickey Rooney's father, Pat, in an early production of "Guys and Dolls"; an unrecognizable Hal Linden (of TV's "Barney Miller"), playing opposite Judy Holliday in "Bells Are Ringing"; a youthful, fresh-faced Bob Fosse, working as a choreographer in the same show; and a smiling red-head named Shirley MacLaine, in the supporting cast of "Sweet Charity."

Also, a close look will reveal that ticket prices once averaged about Birmingham's Olga's will move from the Continental Market, one block north to 138 S. Woodward, in December. The company is negotiating for eight new locations in metropolitan Detroit.

New Beaujolais

The Beaujolais is coming. Hotel St. Regis in Detroit will be among the first metropolitan area eateries to receive a shipment of Beaujolais-Villages Nouveau by Georges Du Boeuf, the premier burgundy wine to be made from the 1987 crop. In honor of the new wine, the restaurant will offer selections throughout the day, Thursday, Nov. 19, with a special menu featuring the wine. A Beaujolais Nouveau wine-tasting party will be 5:30-7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 24. For $15, guests will have an opportunity to participate in a blind-tasting of six Nouveau wines. For reservations, call Bob Seeley at 873-3000.

Third Thursday

The third Thursday of each year marks the introduction of Beaujolais Nouvelle. Before lunch Thursday, Nov. 19, the Pike Street Company restaurant in Pontiac will offer two Georges Du Boeuf and Bouchard. The wine will be available at lunch and dinner.

Turkey dinner

You can serve Thanksgiving dinner without cooking your own, or without going out to dinner. Bowman's Catering in Berkley offers a traditional home-cooked Thanksgiving dinner with turkey, dressing, sweet potatoes, pumpkin pie and other menu items. The dinner for 12-15 people includes all items prepared fresh and delivered to your kitchen for $92.50, or $84 if you pick up the meal yourself. An economy dinner includes the turkey but not all the trimmings. The carry-out package is $51.75. For more information, call Bowman's Catering at 328-1030.

Celebrity chefs

An array of treats by local celebrity chefs will be served at "Appetizing Appetizers and Divine Desserts," a benefit for Cranbrook Hospice Care, 7-9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 5, at Christ Church Cranbrook in Bloomfield Hills. Among participants will be certified executive chef Richard Benson from the Schoolcraft College of Culinary Arts in Livonia. Admission is $15 per person in advance, $20 at the door. For reservations, call 644-6116.

Hungarian fest

Ten days of feasting are in store at the "Hungarian Hyattfest." A 10-member team of chefs and musicians who have traveled to the United States from the Atrium Hyatt Budapest will conduct the event. The troupe was at the Hyatt Regency Dearborn in mid-September to kick off a two-month tour and is returning to Dearborn before departing for Hungary. A menu of authentic Hungarian foods and desserts will be served 6-10 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 12, through Friday, Nov. 20, at the Hyatt Regency's La Rotisserie restaurant. Music is by Ferenc Santa's Gypsy Orchestra. For reservations, call 593-1234, ext. 2322.

Playbills recall hit shows

$5 for the best seats. An early-'50s production of "Can-Can" with Gwen Verdon offered balcony seats at the Shubert for $1.80. (Tickets today are priced at around $50 for the better seats, with the cheapest averaging about $20 less.)

"I think, eventually, the average person isn't going to be able to afford to see a Broadway play at all," said Petris. "I think the unions are killing the theater and, of course, property is so expensive in New York, too — they can't allow a nice old theater to occupy a space where they could put up a skyscraper instead. Eventually, there'll be more theater closings, and I think, someday, there'll be just one or two theaters left."

"Broadway doesn't look anything like it did when I first went there," said Petris, when asked what other changes she's noted since the early '40s. "In those days, if you walked down the street at 4 a.m., you'd sometimes have to get off the sidewalk and walk in the street if you were in a hurry because there were so many people. Now, you could shoot off a cannon at 4 a.m. and not hurt anybody.

"ALSO, THE LIGHTS just aren't what they used to be. And the signs — all those marvelous neon signs. Most of them are gone now.

"Another thing — when I first started going to plays in New York, you dressed up. Women wore hats and gloves, even to matinees. Now you see people coming in, in jeans much of the time."

Petris said she often attended plays at the Cass and Bonstelle Theaters in Detroit, along with her parents, when she was growing up.

"But I have no theatrical background — I go to these plays simply because I love the theater, and because I believe you'll see the very best performances in New York. I did take one drama class, though, at East Los Angeles College when my husband and I lived out there several years ago. I loved the class, and I was in one of the school plays. But, basically, I'm too shy to get up on a stage and perform."

Does the seasoned theatergoer have a favorite play?

"Really, I've enjoyed almost all of the plays I've seen, in one way or another, and I don't actually have any favorite," she said. "But I do tend to like musicals best. I saw 'A Chorus Line' seven times. I like going to something that's going to make me feel good when I come out.

"I can remember walking up Broadway, after we'd seen 'Camelot,' at the Music Box one evening, humming those tunes, singing those songs. I think I felt as if Broadway were Camelot, and we were part of it."

PETRIS ALSO remembers seeing "South Pacific," "My Fair Lady" and "Camelot" all in the first week of their long runs on Broadway. "It was before so many people discovered what great shows they were," she said. "We were able to just walk off the street up to the box office and into the theater. It was wonderful. You felt as if you were part of (theater) history in the making. In just a short while after that, of course, tickets couldn't be bought for love or money.

"The last play I saw, 'Starlight Express,' was a musical. I loved that, too, although I'm not too crazy about the new George Gershwin Theatre where I saw it — it's too much like an office building, and doesn't have that wonderful 'magic' I think a theater should have."

Petris, recently widowed and planning a move to Las Vegas soon, is now involved in a new project: finding a good home for her lovingly collected Broadway memorabilia, which she won't be able to take along when she leaves. Though she said she's not interested in selling her souvenirs, she would like to donate them "to an individual or group that would put them to good use.

"I don't want to throw them away," she said.

Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village
ANNUAL PASS
Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village Presents Yet Another Great Invention.
The new Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village Annual Pass might pale in comparison to the first Model T Ford or Edison's original light bulb. But, we think you'll agree, it's still a pretty nifty invention.
Not to mention a great deal.
Because during our introductory offer, from November 6, 1987, to January 4, 1988, you can pick up an Annual Pass for $18 (that's only a dollar more than one-time admission to the Museum and Village!). There's even a Pass for children priced at $9. Each lets you visit us every day for one full year, stay as long as you want and start saving money after just one visit.
And we guarantee you'll visit the Museum and Village again and again.
After all, there's more to see and do here than ever before. Including a completely new $6 million "Automobile in American Life" exhibition. Our special "Streamlining" exhibit. The authentic Firestone Farm. And Edison's newly restored Menlo Park Lab.
That's in addition to our changing displays and special events. Like our Christmas celebration and The Howard Brothers Miniature Circus.
So start thinking about buying an Annual Pass. Start thinking about who'd like one for Christmas. Start dialing 271-9363 to order by credit card. Or start the car and head out to Dearborn for the great American museum that's also great fun.

● HIGHLANDS BANDS

The Band of Grenadier Guards and the Pipes and Drums of the Gordon Highlands will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at Cobo Arena in Detroit. A company of 90, dressed in military garb, will march to the fanfare of trumpets, bagpipes and drums, displaying their regimental formations. In addition, they will perform traditional Highland dancing, stirring memories of special moments in English history. Tickets are available at the Joe Louis box office and all Ticketmaster locations and may be charged by phone by calling 423-6666.

● IRISH NOMENCLATURE

How Irish towns, lakes and mountains got their names, and how those names evolved into their present forms, will be the subject of a talk by Breandan O Ciobhain at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 11, in the Hibernian Hall, 24242 Grand River, one block west of Telegraph, Detroit. Dr. O Ciobhain, who has been researching Irish place names for more than 25 years, will explain how names are woven into the language, folklore, literature and history of the Irish people. There will be time for discussion and light refreshment after the talk. A $3 donation is requested.

● KILLING GROUND

"Slow Dance on the Killing Ground," the critically acclaimed play by William Hanley, opens the fall performance season at 1515 Broadway theater in Detroit. The play runs through Nov. 22 with performances at 8 p.m. Thursdays-Sundays. The worlds of three desperate characters collide in this play, throwing together a store owner trying to escape the horrors of Nazi Germany, a young black intellectual on the run and a Riverdale co-ed looking for an abortionist. 1515 Broadway is just north of the Broadway People Mover station. For more information, call 965-1515.

● BROADWAY CELEBRATION

Michigan Opera Theatre will present a special program at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 18, at the the First Congregational Church of Detroit. The program, "As Time Goes By," celebrates Broadway's greatness. The works of George and Ira Gershwin and Stephen Sondheim will be featured in this historical retrospective of Broadway from the 1920s to the present. Tickets at $2 are available from the church office. For further information, call 831-4080.

● SKATING AUDITIONS

Auditions for Walt Disney's Magic Kingdom on Ice starring Pinocchio will be held at noon Friday, Nov. 13, at Joe Louis Arena. The Disney extravaganza, featuring Olympic medalist Linda Fratianne, is playing in Detroit from Tuesday-Sunday, Nov. 10-15. Attractive young skaters with good skating skills are being sought to join the cast of the spectacular. Interested skaters must be at least 17 years old or high school graduates and able to travel. For more information call 567-6000.

Gaylord and Holiday, singing comedy team, will perform in two free shows, at 1 and 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 22, at Somerset Mall in Troy.

● ENCHANTED VILLAGE

First Theatre Guild presents the musical "Brigadoon" for five performances beginning at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13, in Knox Auditorium, First Presbyterian Church in Birmingham. The other performances will be at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, and Thursday-Saturday, Nov. 19-21. "Brigadoon" is the story of an enchanted Scottish village that comes alive once every 100 years, and of two American hunters who stumble upon it during the marriage of Charlie and Bonnie Jean. Tickets at $5 for adults and $4 for students are available at the door or may be ordered by calling 540-6943 or 543-4918. A free matinee for senior citizens will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14.

● DSO BENEFIT

The Woman's Association for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will hold its holiday party at the Somerset Mall in Troy on Saturday, Nov. 21. The evening's events include a strolling supper presented by Sebastian's restaurant at 7:30 p.m., dancing to Chet Bogan' Wolverine Jazz Band with vocalist Dixie Bell, and a Gourmet Auction with a surprise auctioneer. Tickets, $45 per person and $75 per couple, must be purchased before Monday, Nov. 16. Call 567-9000 for further details.

● VILLAGE PLAYERS

Birmingham Village Players will present "Pajama Game," the musical story of the Sleep-Tite Pajama factory in a small Midwestern town. Showtime is 8:30 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays, Nov. 20-21, 27-28, and Dec. 4-5. Sunday matinees will be presented at 2 p.m. Nov. 22 and 29. Tickets are available at the door ($7 adults, $6 students), but reservations are recommended. For more information call 644-2075.

● CLIFF HANGER

Detroit Center for the Performing Arts presents "Guilty Conscience," featuring the dry humor and suspense of authors Richard Levinson and William Link, whose credits include television's "Columbo." Timothy Hughes, who grew up in Troy, plays the Prosecutor. Showtime is 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday through Nov. 21. Tickets are $10 for general admission and $8 for students and seniors; group rates are available with reservations. For more information, call 961-7925, days, or 925-7138, evenings.

● LOCAL TALENT

Dennis Vernier of West Bloomfield will perform at Pettijons in Auburn Hills Friday and Saturday evenings through Nov. 21. His music includes tunes for listening and dancing.

● HUNGARIAN QUARTET

The Eder String Quartet from Hungary will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 10, for the Cranbrook Music Guild chamber series, in the auditorium of Kingswood School in Bloomfield Hills. The program will include Haydn, Beethoven and Schumann. For ticket information call 645-2037.

Students sought for video filming

Some 20,000 high school and college students are sought for "Reach Out and Touch," a one-hour music video to be filmed Sunday, Nov. 8 at Michigan Stadium, Ann Arbor.

The video will air nationally. It promotes substance abuse awareness. It kicks off alcohol abuse awareness week.

Filming begins at 2 p.m. in the stands along the 50-yard line. Participants should enter through the stadium tunnel near Chrysler Arena. Admission and parking is free.

Participants will link arms and sing the Diana Ross hit, "Reach Out and Touch Somebody's Hand."

Featured participants include U-M football coach Bo Schembechler and his wife, Millie, and Detroit-area recording artists Curtis Gadson and Larry Santos. Members of the U-M football and basketball teams are also expected to be on hand.

The video will be filmed by WDIV-TV, Detroit.

Mack reappointed

County commissioner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, was among several people recently reappointed to the Wayne County Solid Waste Implementation Committee.

Mack, an attorney, has been a commissioner since 1982. His district includes Canton Township.

Other appointees included Robert Ryan, owner of Best Way Recycling and Special Waste Systems, Detroit; Thomas Handyside, engineer, City Management Corp., Detroit; Anne Hiemstra, attorney, Southfield; and Ray Keilas, landfill manager, Plymouth.

All were appointed by Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara and confirmed by the county commission.

The 13-member committee helps implement the county's solid waste management plan. The plan is required by state law.

It monitors residential and industrial waste, keeping an eye on shrinking landfill space within the county. It also reviews potential county disposal sites.

Pet of the Week

Glad Wrap, an eight-week-old male, gray striped kitten, needs a home. He can be adopted by calling Bloom Animal Hospital, 425-2270. The hospital, a member of the Southeast Michigan Humane Soceity, is at 31205 Five Mile, Livonia.

Animals adapt to suburban life nature

IN 1950 when my parents bought a home in Dearborn, my grandfather could not understand why they wanted to be so far from the city.

Today, the ring of suburbs has extended far beyond the city of Dearborn. Soon there will be one big city from Detroit to Ann Arbor.

The expansion of the suburbs reduces habitat for wild animals. Few cities have planned for greenbelts or set aside woodlots and fields to be preserved in their natural state.

Loss of suitable habitat is probably the major reason for the loss of much of our native wildlife.

REMAINING WOODLOTS and meadows can support only so many animals. A limited amount of food and shelter is in these areas.

Young of the year are often forced out by their parents because there is not enough food to support the added number of animals. Those animals that survive several road crossings may find substandard habitat that will have to suffice.

Some animals have behavior that is plastic enough to accommodate the substandard habitat. Others have specific requirements that must be met. If those requirements are not satisfied, the animal will perish.

My dad's neighbors recently had an unusual and unexpected visitor that found their yard substandard, but suitable. A woodchuck, or groundhog, began digging a winter den on the side of her house. A typical suburban community with no meadows or woods nearby is an unusual place to find a woodchuck.

THIS WAS probably a young animal that was evicted from its homesite and was desperately looking for a place to hibernate.

When it reached dad's neighbor's house, something about the surroundings indicated that this would be suitable. So it started digging a hole, which is not what homeowners like in their lawns.

After a couple of days, the woodchuck was live-trapped and transported to a remote meadow, where, it is hoped, it will not be competing with another woodchuck.

Loss of habitat will force other species of animals to accommodate to new surroundings or perish. Raccoon, opossum, skunk and fox are adapting well to suburban life, though it may not be their first choice of a place to live.

Heart attack? Never knew it!

Barry Franklin

Did you know that

• More than one-quarter of all heart attacks are unrecognized. In other words, they occur in the absence of severe chest pain and other ominous symptoms. Furthermore, the proportion of unrecognized heart attacks is higher in women (35 percent) than in men (28 percent).

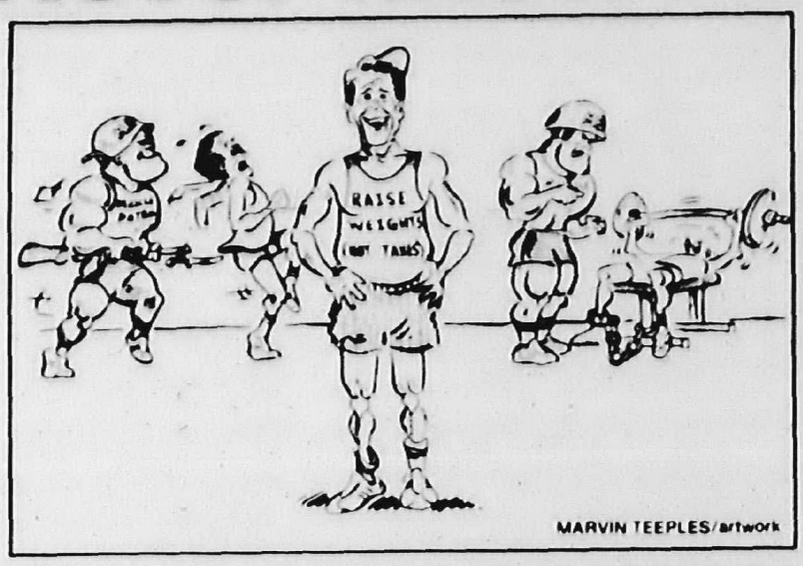

• "Staying With It," a 16-page brochure that teaches you how to get started and stay with an exercise program, is now available by calling this toll-free number: 1-800-543-2925, Dept. E.D. The free pamphlet is published by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

• There is no scientific evidence that a vasectomy increases the risk of heart attack.

• Decoding the prescription jargon between your doctor and pharmacist is really quite simple. A sample of such terms: qh, every hour; qd, every day; bid, twice a day; tid, three times a day; qid, four times a day; prn, as needed; a.c., before meals; p.c., after meals; and h.s., at bedtime.

• Fast-food addicts would appear to be better off by eating more tacos and fewer double cheeseburgers. Mexican-style fast food tends to be lower in fat, cholesterol and salt. Pizza is also another reasonable alternative if topped with tomatoes, green peppers and/or mushrooms.

• A regular weight-training program may promote favorable changes in blood fat levels in men and women. Several recent studies have shown that low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol, the "bad" form of cholesterol, is substantially reduced by a resistance exercise program. Moreover, high-density lipoprotein (HDL) cholesterol, the "good" form of cholesterol, is increased.

Rocks open defense of league crown

RICK SMITH/staff photographer

Teri King protects the basketball from Franklin's Leslie Szaflarski in Tuesday's first-round playoff game in the Western Lakes Activities Association. King scored eight points in Salem's 75-17 victory over the Patriots.

Salem skips past Patriots

By Brad Emons
staff writer

In the what has become standard operating procedure, the Plymouth Salem Rocks left another girls basketball opponent out hanging to dry.

It was hardly playoff-caliber basketball Tuesday as the Rocks won their 17th game in 18 tries, whipping host Livonia Franklin in a first-round Western Lakes Activities Association playoff game, 75-17.

Franklin (6-10), the fourth place team in the Western Division, was simply no match for the Lakes Division-champion Rocks, who are an overwhelming favorite to repeat as league champions.

But even though things got out of hand early, it was worth sticking around as long as Miss Basketball candidate Dena Head was in the game and doing her stuff.

And the 5-foot-10 forward continued to impress, scoring a game-high 25 points. She also made a number of razor-sharp, no-look passes that would make guys like Larry Bird and Magic Johnson blush.

"TO BE HONEST, it's just a pleasure to watch her play," said Franklin coach Dan Freeman. "Dena is by far the best I've seen play in a long time. She's just a complete player."

Salem's fast-break got in gear early, the Rocks racing out to a 23-2 first quarter lead.

It was a blowout by halftime with the score reading: Salem 44, Rose O'Bey 6.

O'Bey, the Patriots' leading scorer, had a tough night as Salem gave her little room to operate. She had a frustrating second half, scoring only one point.

The Patriots made 16 first-half turnovers and Salem seemed to capitalize on many of those.

RICK SMITH/staff photographer

girls basketball

"We had good passing and ball movement," said Salem coach Fred Thomann. "A lot of people touched the ball. I think our perimeter game is coming into its own and that's making our inside game more effective.

"But the key to our season has been our pressure defense and the way we've been able to score points off of it."

KERI McBRIDE, a 5-10 senior forward, scored inside and outside, finishing with 18 points. Point-guard Jill Estey, who helped spearhead Salem's relentless fast-break, added eight points and a number of assists. Forward Teri King came off the bench to contribute eight points.

"Our inside people — McBride, Barb Krug, Stacy Sovine, King and Shelley Bohlen — are becoming a solid group," said Thomann. "They're able to more things than they did earlier."

The Rocks haven't had much competition of late, but they still appear to be solid during this particular stage of the season.

Canton blasts North, Page 3D

Well-rested Chiefs keep going strong late in year

Plymouth Canton chose not to burn the candle at both ends in girls cross country this fall, and coach George Przygodski hopes the Chiefs are about to reap a benefit from their conservation.

Przygodski believes Canton has the reserve energy to make a bright showing in Saturday's Class A state meet after a successful regional performance.

Canton opted not to participate in many weekend invitationals this year, and that has enabled the Chiefs, who easily overpowered their Western Lakes competition in the league meet, to remain at near-peak level for the big meet at Lansing's Grosbeck Golf Course.

"It's kind of a double-edged sword," Przygodski said. "You gain some added experience, but I liken the kids to candles; you've only got so much wax you can burn.

Because the Chiefs didn't load up on big meets, they're healthy and still fresh, Przygodski said.

"THERE'S only so many races you can run, mentally and physically," he said. "Instead of wishing the season was over, (his athletes are) still looking ahead to the big one."

The Chiefs qualified as a team for state competition with a second-place finish in the regional at Gibraltar Carlson last Saturday. Plymouth Salem failed to qualify as a team and didn't have any individual qualifiers.

Ann Arbor Pioneer was an overwhelming winner with an amazing total of 22 points. The Chiefs had 142 and third-place Brighton 147. Pioneer was rated No. 1 in the state in the weekly coaches poll and Brighton No. 2.

Pioneer and Dearborn Edsel Ford figure as the favorites in the state meet, but Przygodski is hoping Canton can fight its way into the top five. This will be the Chiefs' first appearance in the state meet.

Cindy Spessard paced Canton with a 16th-place finish and her best time of the year, 20:13. She moved ahead of teammate Lori Penland, who has been the team's No. 1 runner much of the season and was 20th at 20:20.

LYNDA Schendel got run over early in the race, Przygodski said, but got up and still ran a great race. She managed to recover for a 26th-place finish and a 20:43 time.

"All of our kids are real competitive with one another," said Przygodski, noting Spessard, Penland and Schendel have taken turns being the top runner.

"Cindy is just coming on at the right time. It's not that Lori ran bad, but it's just great that one comes up and runs her best time of the year."

Canton's top five included Missy Jasnowski taking 35th place (21:01) and Sherry Figurski 45th (21:19). Cathy McCabe was 59th (21:53) and Sherry Sweeney 73rd (22:17).

Przygodski said Canton's Nos. 4-6 runners also have exchanged places during the season, and he gave special credit to Figurski for her team leadership.

"Her contribution is kind of in the background, because she's our fifth runner," he said. "But she is without a doubt our leader. She has been outstanding all year long."

Salem harriers headed for state championships

Plymouth Salem coach Geoff Baker is thrilled that his boys cross country team is the first in school history to qualify for the Class A state meet.

But he won't be satisfied to simply take his team to Saturday's event at Grosbeck Golf Course in Lansing. He wants the Rocks to be ready to do their best.

"It's one thing to make the state meet, but it's another to go there and run well," Baker said. "We're one of the top 27 teams in the state, let's see what else we can get."

Baker put his charges through three tough workouts this week in preparation, and he'd like to see Salem place among the top 10 teams.

"Some say that's not a very good attitude, but look at the horses that are stacked in the state," he said of the competition.

A TOP-10 finish would be a fine conclusion to a successful year, Baker said, and just qualifying for state is, to this point, "the topper to a great season," he said.

The Rocks earned the trip to Lansing by finishing second in the regional at Gibraltar Carlson last Saturday. Ann Arbor Pioneer had 43 points to run away with the championship. Salem had 124 points and was followed by Ann Arobr Huron (125), Wayne Memorial (130), Plymouth Canton (155), Belleville (171) and Livonia Franklin (177). Fifteen teams competed, and the top three go to state.

Doug Vergari grabbed fourth place with a 16:18 time to lead the Rocks, and the next four were bunched together, within 17 places of each other.

Salem's Bill Atwell was 22nd (16:56), Jason Drury 27th (17:04), Brendon Masterson 32nd (17:10) and Scott Stryker 39th (17:19). Drury cut

Bill Parker

THE ELK HERD in Michigan today was actually born in 1918 with the release of seven Rocky Mountain elk in Nunda Township in Cheboygan County. The release was an effort to restore the once native elk to the woodlands of Michigan. Today that herd, located primarily in the Pigeon River Country State Forest, is estimated to be 1,200 strong.

The Eastern elk was native to Michigan and a common sight to Lower Peninsula settlers prior to 1875. But due to unregulated hunting and settling practices the magnificent animals disappeared from the state in the late 1800s.

After the planting efforts of 1918 the herd grew steadily. Records of the Department of Natural Resources indicate that the size of the herd increased to 200 by 1925, 300-400 by 1939, 900-1,000 by 1958 and 1,200-1,500 by the early '60s.

DURING THE EARLY '60s the elk were primarily located in a 200-mile range in the northern Lower Peninsula. Due to this dense population problems soon occurred. Crop, wildlife range, forests and fences were all damaged by the herd. The DNR's Wildlife Division instituted a research program in 1963 to find a way to ease the elk pressure and reduce the damage. This research program set the stage for the first elk hunts in modern history. They were held in 1964 and 1965.

A total of 600 permits were issued in the two hunts and 452 elk were taken. At the same time poaching increased greatly, and the herd was drastically reduced.

Gas and oil exploration in the elk habitat area during the early '70s also took its toll on the herd. By 1975, after the highest confirmed poaching loss of 45 elk in 1974, the herd hit a threatening low of 200.

SINCE THEN, however, public concern, legislative action, court cases and administrative and corporate compromises have enabled the heard to again reach an excess of 1,000.

"We believe we have a herd of about 1,200 animals," said DNR wildlife biologist Joe Vogt.

Over the past three years the DNR has held a special permit-only elk hunt in a special area surrounding and including the area of the Pigeon River Forest. They will hold the hunt again this year Dec. 8-13.

In the past three hunts the DNR gave out 265 permits and 261 hunters returned home with an elk.

A total of 130 permits were recently issued by the DNR for the 1987 hunt. They were selected from 38,546 applications. Eighty-one hunters received a permit for an antlerless elk only, while another 49 received hunter's choice permits which entitle them to shoot either a bull or cow elk.

SEVERAL OBSERVER & ECCENTRIC area hunters received elk permits including Bernard Crandell of Birmingham, Ted Rieple of Farmington Hills, Leon Hanson of Plymouth and Ron Gerrior and Larry Rand of Garden City.

For Crandell it will be his first elk hunt after some 30 years of hunting the elusive white tail deer in both Michigan and Texas. He'll be accompanied by his son Bill.

"I feel pretty lucky," said Crandell. "I've been putting in for the hunt for the past few years. I realized it was a long shot, but I wanted to try. It's a real privilege to draw a permit. I think the DNR is doing an excellent job managing the elk program and they should be congratulated."

Crandell received a hunter's choice permit.

"I sort of think I'd like to get a young bull," said Crandell. "They are much better eating quality."

Gerrior also drew a hunter's choice permit but admits he may not be as selective.

"It's a long way off," said Gerrior. "I guess I'll decide (whether to shoot a bull or cow) when I get into the woods and find out what I see. It's a good opportunity and I hope I get some luck. When you go that far and spend that much money, I may just shoot the first one of good size that I see."

The DNR is offering up to $2,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of people connected with an elk poaching incident last month in Cheboygan County.

Anyone with information should call the Report-All-Poaching (RAP) line, operating 24-hours a day, at 1-800-298-7800 or the DNR Gaylord District office at (517) 732-3541.

Anyone convicted of illegally shooting or possessing an elk may be fined up to $1,000, may be sentenced up to 180 days in jail and may be forced to pay restitution of up to $1,500 per elk.

A $1,000 reward is also being offered for information on the shooting of twin 9-month-old bears in Montmorency County in September. Anyone with information should call the RAP line, the Gaylord District Office, or the Atlanta District Office at (517) 785-4251.

A "Deer Hunter Information Center" will be operated by the DNR at the Department of Transportation's John C. Mackie Welcome Center and Rest Area on U.S. 27 at Clare on Nov. 12-14.

DNR law enforcement officers and wildlife biologists will be manning the station providing hunters with deer data and deer hunting literature and answering questions on hunting regulations, places to hunt even places to set up camp.

DNR director Dr. Gordon E. Guyer will be at the station from noon to 2 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 14.

The Deer Hunter Information Station will be open from noon to 8 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 12, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 13, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 14.

Chiefs trounce N. Farmington

girls basketball

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Canton's playoff opener held little suspense Tuesday night as the Chiefs bowled over North Farmington 71-35 in the Canton gymnasium.

The Chiefs, champions of the Western Division and 14-4 overall, will face Walled Lake Central in the semifinals of the Western Lakes Activities Association girls basketball tournament at 6 p.m. Saturday at Plymouth Salem.

"It was a good start because it's a tournament game," Canton coach Rob Neu said. "Any time you experience a do-or-die situation, you're putting a nice challenge on your team.

"And it was good for us because we took care of the game."

That the Chiefs did. After a tentative few minutes in which the Raiders held the early lead, Canton came on strong and won going away.

> 'We had a little trouble getting ready for the ballgame. Whether it was Parents' Night or the seniors' last game (at home), I don't know. Hopefully, that won't be an issue when we need 32 minutes of sound basketball.'
> — Rob Neu
> Canton coach

NEU'S SQUAD didn't press at the start. North saw the opening and grabbed a 6-2 lead while the Chiefs missed six of seven shots to begin the game.

"Right now our main focus is to get our best defense ready, and that's our half-court man," Neu said regarding his decision not to press early.

Karen Boluch's shot from the corner tied the score with 2:52 left in the first quarter, and Karen Ferko's layup half a minute later put Canton in front to stay.

The Chiefs' inside defense tightened up and kept the Raiders away from the basket for the most part. Canton eventually applied some pressure, which forced North into half-court turnovers.

The Chiefs were 10-of-18 from the floor in the second quarter and extended their lead to 38-18 at halftime behind eight points from both Heather Miller and Ferko.

THE RAIDERS shot well, hitting 50 percent of their first-half attempts, but they just didn't have many opportunities against Canton's defense. North was 4-of-8 in each of the first two quarters.

"We had a little trouble getting ready for the ballgame," Neu said. "Whether it was Parents' Night or the seniors' last game (at home), I don't know.

"Hopefully, that won't be an issue when we need 32 minutes of sound basketball. If we can just extend our game a few more minutes to the full 32 instead of 27 or 28, we'll have a chance to win some big game."

The Chiefs continued to capitalize on turnovers in the third quarter, and Miller's rebound basket and three-point play upped Canton's lead to 48-21.

"They put so much pressure on you," North coach Greg Capling said. "We've got sophomore guards handling the ball, and young kids are going to make mistakes. We'll have to live with that until they mature."

THE RAIDERS lost Vikki Seamons with torn ligaments in last week's game with Farmington, and center Suzi Butcher played three quarters Tuesday with a sprained ankle before retiring to the bench early in the fourth.

"We might as well save her for the district as much as we can," Capling said.

"It's just hard keeping everything together when everybody is injured and not used to playing with each other."

The Chiefs scored the first 11 points of the final period for a 63-29 margin and ended up shooting 14-of-31 in the second half. North's only fourth-quarter points came on free throws as Jennie Basford connected on five of six to cap a 13-point night for the Raiders, 7-10.

Canton's Ferko finished with a game-high 16 points, and Miller, playing in her final game at Phase III along with fellow senior Boluch, had 15. Amanda Bell chipped in with 12 points.

"SHE'S A good player to come off the bench for us," Neu said of Bell, who dropped in some long-range shots. "She enables me to put her in for anybody, and all of a sudden we have an outside scorer.

"They're big, they shoot well and you can't concentrate on anybody because they can all put the ball in the basket," said Capling, whose team faced a definite height disadvantage.

Rocks get state berth

45 seconds off his previous-best time and Masterson 25-30 seconds. Stryker also came in under 17:30. Baker noted, trimming eight seconds off his time.

"At the first mile mark, I was beginning to doubt our chances," Baker said. "But toward the end of the second mile, they were running in the top 30s and within 10 (runners) of each other.

"ONCE I saw they were pretty close together, I started to get excited again, but I knew we had to pick up a few places yet."

The Rocks moved up just enough and filled the positions necessary to send them to the state meet for the first time.

"Right now I think I'm more excited," Baker said, "but deep down I know they are, too. I can't wait for race day, and, as it gets closer, I think they'll get excited and go out and run out of their minds again."

Jay Swiecki was the lone Canton runner to qualify for the individual state race since the Chiefs didn't make it as a team. He was sixth overall with a 16:26 time.

Canton coach Jim Hayes noted all of his runners had their best times of the year in the regional, and the Chiefs missed qualifying as a team by just 30 points.

"They can be disappointed, but they ran pretty well," Hayes said. "We had what I consider a pretty good season overall."

Canton's Al Burns was 30th (17:08), Bob Beebe 33rd (17:16), Matt Hall 38th (17:21) and Kirk Roessler 42nd (17:35).

Falcons capture regional honors

The Falcons finally finished on top Saturday when they won the Class A regional at Royal Oak Kimball.

Catholic League champion Farmington Hills Mercy was runner-up in the regional and also will take its team to Saturday's state meet.

"We've been excluded from first place in all these big meets all year," Farmington coach John Barrett said. "So this is the first time we sorta put our act together."

The Falcons peaked at last year's regional, and Barrett had been hoping all season his team would do the same again.

FOR THE most part, Farmington did, with an overwhelming performance by sophomore Amy Trunk leading the way. She captured first-place honors with her best time of the season, 19:50.

Trunk was only 14 seconds off the school record of 19:36, which belongs to teammate Bonnie Stecker, who posted that time at last year's state meet. Stecker ran her best time of the season and was third overall at 20:24.

"Amy seems to really get charged up for the big meets," Barrett said. "Bonnie has been our No. 1 runner most of the year, but Amy jumped up there in the county meet.

"In these big meets, she really comes on, and she's a real tough competitor. She has a very tough attitude, and she's only a sophomore."

Barrett added that Trunk plays 2-3 times a week for a club soccer team in addition to running cross country, sometimes doing both on the same day.

ALL FIVE of the runners who scored for Farmington were among the top 20 as Jennifer Kiel finished seventh (20:43), Margaret Martin 15th (21:32) and Cheryl Casaroll 19th (21:52).

"When I saw the way the competition was spread out, I wasn't worried," Barrett said. "We had three runners in the top 10, so I knew that alone gave us a pretty good chance at victory."

He pointed out the time difference between the team's first and fifth runners was nearly 2½ minutes, but he put that into perspective with a tribute to Trunk's outstanding effort.

"Our fifth runner had her best time, so I can't complain," he said. "It's just that our first runner got so much better. That's the first time we've had a runner (this year) in the 19s."

Barrett said he knew Mercy would be the Falcons' chief competition, but wasn't surprised Farmington won it given the rest of the field. But the competition will be much tougher in the state meet at Lansing's Grosbeck Golf Course.

THE FALCONS were sixth in the state last year, but it would take "a miracle to finish up that high, because the competition is so much tougher this year," Barrett said. "Our best hope is that everybody has a PR (personal record) and we can be respectable."

In fact, enough key runners had PRs in the last state meet, and that's what enabled Farmington to do so well.

Mercy's Moira Kordel and Barb Cheaney have been to the state meet before as individual competitors, and they were instrumental in the Marlins earning a team berth this year.

Farmington Harrison is getting to be quite good at winning soccer shootouts.

The Hawks did that for the second time in four post-season games Saturday, beating Saginaw Eisenhower 1-0 on its own field to win their first regional championship.

"We seem to have the endurance and stamina to outplay the other team for that long (110 minutes before going to the shootout)," said Harrison coach Glenn Bruehan, whose team eliminated Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook in a district tournament shootout.

The Hawks, 12-5-2 overall, played East Grand Rapids in a Class B semifinal game Wednesday night in Oxford.

Peter VanVliet, the last of five Hawks to take a crack at the Eisenhower goal during the shootout, scored the game-winner to break a 3-3 deadlock.

THE COMMANDERS won the coin toss and elected to shoot first, but Harrison goalkeeper Gary Wegner stopped their first attempt.

Thierry Bersot gave the Hawks a 1-0 start, but Eisenhower tied it up before David Quarterman put Harrison back in front 2-1.

The lead held up this time as the Commanders' next attempt sailed over the Harrison goal, and Ed Dzyngel then extended the Harrison advantage to 3-1.

On its fourth try, Eisenhower got back to within a goal, and the shot by Harrison's Craig Bailey, with a chance to ice the victory, went wide of the net to send the contest down to the wire.

The Commanders capitalized by converting their fifth attempt to force a 3-3 tie, but then VanVliet ended it with his goal.

"THE GOALKEEPER went to the right, and Pete's shot went to the left, just off from where the goalkeeper was standing," Bruehan said. "His thought was to kick it hard, and he thought he could put it in."

Eisenhower outplayed Harrison in the first half, having eight shots on goal to four by the Hawks. The Commanders had a 6-foot-6, 220-pound center midfielder, who set up most of his team's scoring chances with his powerful throw-ins from along the sideline.

"He was one of the best throw-in people I've seen in high school," Bruehan said. "He was a real big threat, because of his throwing ability.

"We had to come up with some good head-ball clearances to keep it clear of the goal."

The momentum began to shift in the second half, and the Hawks became the dominant team near the end as the Commanders began to tire.

Harrison outshot Eisenhower 7-6 in the second half, with Craig Bailey and Matt Rippin having near-miss scoring opportunities. In the 30 minutes of overtime before the shootout, the Hawks allowed Eisenhower only one shot-on-goal and outshot the Commanders 6-1 during that span.

WEGNER HAS been outstanding in goal during post-season play, recording his third shutout in four games.

He has played so well that "now we just seem to expect it of him," Bruehan said. "He's been just red-hot. We've only had one goal scored on us in the tournaments, and that was kind of a fluke goal on a sloppy field."

In district play, the Hawks blanked Oxford and Cranbrook and edged Ortonville-Brandon 2-1 for the championship.

Bruehan added the Eisenhower players were lacking in terms of sportsmanship. There was considerable elbowing and holding of jerseys during the game, he said.

"I felt really bad for Cranbrook when we beat them in a shootout, because it was just an outstanding game," Bruehan said. "With this team, I didn't feel bad for them, because of their (lack of) sportsmanship."

Ocelots end year on winning note

The Schoolcraft College mens soccer surge continued through Saturday's regular-season finale at home against Lakeland CC. And some of the players responsible for that surge were applauded Monday.

But SC's 2-0 victory couldn't erase the disappointment of a season that got going too late.

"The progress we made was satisfying," said Van Dimitriou, whose team failed to win the Region XII title for the first time in his four years as coach. "(The season-ending streak) was the most satisfaction we got out of the year."

The Ocelots finished with a 5-2-1 region record, in second place behind Macomb CC. A series of injuries put the Ocelots into a hole early, and they never climbed out.

Against Lakeland, Torin Gniewek got SC on the board with a goal with five minutes left in the first half. Awman Fadhl assisted. Midway through the second half, Paul Burrill provided the Ocelots with an insurance score, with Gniewek assisting.

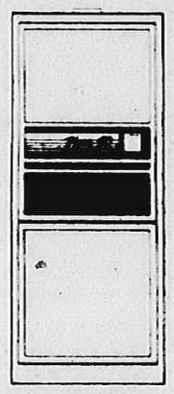

Brian Gavigan was in goal for the shutout, as the Ocelots outshot Lakeland 14-3. SC surrendered just one goal in its last five games behind keepers Gavigan and Colin Jex, whom Dimitriou called "the best two keepers in the state."

Two Ocelots were chosen for the all-region first team: sweeper Kevin Kurkowski and forward Bob Neumann. Second team selections from SC were Gniewek, Burrill and Tony Peruzzi.

Shamrocks defeat Aquinas to win Catholic League title

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Redford Catholic Central's 19-0 football victory over Southgate Aquinas Sunday night at the Pontiac Silverdome was doubly satisfying.

The Shamrocks not only won their fourth Catholic League A-B Division championships under coach Tom Mach, but also qualified for the state Class A playoffs in Region IV. CC, which upped its record to 8-1, will travel Saturday to meet unbeaten Dearborn Fordson in a preregional encounter.

"We wanted to win the Catholic League playoffs — that was No. 1 — and we're happy because it was a tough regional to get into," said Mach, now in his 11th season. "It seemed everything went right for us (in qualifying)."

The Shamrocks moved into the fourth and final spot in Region IV when playoff challengers Utica Eisenhower and Westland John Glenn each lost Friday.

The Shamrocks will enter the state playoffs with a bruising defense, one that held Aquinas to 101 total yards. It was CC's fifth shutout of the year.

SPEARHEADING THE DEFENSE was 6-foot-2, 230-pound senior Erik Knuth, who reminds some of former CC standout Mark Messner, now an All-Big 10 performer at Michigan.

Seemingly all over the field, Knuth blocked a punt that set up Scott Hauncher's 7-yard TD pass to Chris Johnston with 8:34 left in the fourth quarter to give CC a commanding 10-0 lead.

CC had scored only three points up to that point — Pete Elezovic had booted a 40-yard field goal with a minute left in the first half.

Knuth's block seemed to ignite the Shamrocks.

"We weren't getting many things going, and we had to do something," said Mach. "Until the blocked punt we weren't sustaining many drives. We needed something to fire us up because Aquinas is a good team. I used to coach at Aquinas, and I know they're a good, hard-hitting football team."

CC, WHICH SCORED 16 of its 19 points in the final quarter, got some insurance when junior fullback Lee Krueger, who led CC with 75 yards rushing in 17 carries, scored on a 1-yard run with 5:10 left. The TD was set up when the Pirates couldn't handle Elezovic's line-drive kickoff. (Chris Lemanski recovered the ball at the Aquinas 37.)

The final two points came when Knuth and Lemanski teamed up to sack Aquinas quarterback Mike Kostoff in the end zone for a two-point safety with 1:14 remaining.

CC defensive coordinator Rick Coratti said Knuth's play was not surprising.

"He always does play a good game," said Coratti. "At this stage of his career he's stronger, but Messner was quicker. Erik is a little more physical. He's right up there as a high school player."

Catholic Central, Fordson renew grid playoff rivalry

By Brad Emons

football

If good, old-fashioned rock'em, sock'em football is your cup of tea, then the place to be is the Dearborn Fordson-Redford Catholic Central game Saturday at Fordson.

It's the third meeting between the two schools in the state Class A playoffs. CC holds a 2-0 lead.

This Region IV first-round matchup promises to be a hard-hitting, defensive struggle.

"CC is an exceptional team that could win the whole tournament," said Fordson coach Charlie Jestice, who has guided the Tractors to the playoffs eight of the past nine years, including three state Class A finals. They don't move the ball much on offense, but they're a very opportunistic team defensively. They wait for you to make mistakes and then they capitalize. They look like a very good team."

BOTH TEAMS have similiar styles.

"It's hard to predict a game like this because both are running teams playing against good defenses," said CC coach Tom Mach, who beat Fordson in 1979 en route to the state title. "This is going to be similiar to the first Fordson team we played in 1979. In 1985 they had (Mike) Iaquaniello at quarterback and they liked to pass a lot more."

CC's vaunted defense, which shut out five of its nine opponents during the regular season, must stop Fordson's talented running duo of Fouad "Walker" Zaban, a 5-foot-5, 148-pound senior, and Mo Berry, a 5-10, 172-pound senior.

"Their backs are resilient and they don't go down easy," said Mach. "They get those extra yards after you hit them. They're good backs."

CC's strong defensive line, anchored by 6-2, 230-pound Erik Knuth and 6-3, 220-pound Pete Dankert, will be tested by the Fordson offensive line.

"THAT LINE (Fordson's) has been together for two years and they're an experienced line," said Mach.

Fordson, like CC, does not throw much, but junior quarterback Scott Szalkowski will throw on occasion for the Tractors.

"I think their quarterback might be better than people believe," Mach said. "We saw them during the passing segment in a four-way scrimmage and they can throw well. We're going to have to work on defense against the pass as well."

Jestice is convinced the better running team, not passing team, will win this encounter.

If that is the case, CC will need good production out its trio of backs, led by senior Chris Kovath, along with juniors Lee Krueger and Chris Johnston. They will be running behind a mammoth offensive line led by 6-6, 260-pound Toby Heaton, a major college prospect.

"THIS IS GOING to be a battle where both teams emphasize defensive power and the power game on offense," said the CC coach. "But we might have to use a few tricks if the running game isn't going."

There could be a few gimmicks, but it sounds like this confrotation will be nothing less than knock-down, drag-out affair.

Steelers notch pair of victories

The Plymouth-Canton Steelers closed out their 1987 football season Sunday with two of their teams, the freshmen and junior varsity, posting victories.

Ahmande Grimes scampered 25 and 29 yards for touchdowns in the freshman team's 20-0 win over the Northville-Novi Colts.

Grimes also ran for two first-half extra points, and Matt McIntosh capped the scoring with a 16-yard run in the fourth quarter.

The Colts stunned the Steeler JVs with a quick score, but the Steelers bounced back with a scoring pass from Jimmy Helms to Lance Orow and went ahead 8-6 on Justin Droz' two-point conversion kick.

Another Helms-to-Orow touchdown pass in the third quarter made it 14-6, and Jason Krueger ran 43 yards for the final TD in the fourth period, putting a cap on the Steelers' 22-6 victory.

The varsity Steelers started strong, driving for a touchdown on a 1-yard dive by Vince Turri, but the Colts came back to inflict a 19-6 defeat.

Catholic semifinals pit Mercy, Marian

A final-quarter rally couldn't save Southgate Aquinas from a 39-32 defeat Tuesday against Farmington Hills Mercy in a Catholic League girls basketball first-round playoff game played at Aquinas.

Mercy now advances to play Birmingham Marian in the league semifinals at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in University of Detroit's Calihan Hall. It will be the third meeting this season between Mercy and the defending league champions; the winner advances to the championship game against the Dearborn Divine Child-Livonia Ladywood winner Sunday at Calihan.

"We lost the first one by one point and the second by three, so we hope we can get a jump on them this time," said Marlin coach Larry Baker of Thursday's game against Marian. "This is the one that counts."

Had Aquinas hit its free throws, it might have upset the Marlins. The Raiders certainly had more chances, taking 15 shots from the stripe to just eight for Mercy. Problem was, Aquinas made just four; the Marlins hit five.

Mercy (now 11-6) led 16-7 at the half and 27-15 after three quarters, but foul trouble allowed Aquinas (10-6) close to within five in the final quarter. That was as close as the Raiders could come, though, thanks in part to the scoring of Jan Herberholz (15 points) and the scoring and rebounding of Jennifer Slosar (10 points, nine boards).

Leanne Tennant paced Aquinas with nine points.

FARMINGTON 52, CHURCHILL 43: The Falcons knew where to draw the line in Tuesday's game at Livonia Churchill — exactly 15 feet from the basket.

Because it was at the free throw line that Farmington had the edge against the Chargers. Each team shot 25 free throws; Churchill made nine, the Falcons canned 16.

The game was even after three quarters, tied at 36-36. A 16-7 final-quarter outburst gave Farmington the victory.

"I didn't think we played a good game," said Falcon coach Diana Fair. "Churchill's improved a lot, but we didn't play our kind of game. We had trouble holding onto the ball, but we managed to pull it off."

Leading Farmington (now 6-11) was Stacy Swanderski with 16 points, including 10-of-13 free throws, and Kelli Koss with 15.

briefly speaking

● CHRISTMAS CARD WORKSHOP

The Visual Arts Association of Livonia is offering a three-session workshop on designing a pen-and-ink Christmas card. The dates are Friday, Nov. 6, 13 and 20 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Jefferson Center, 9501 Henry Ruff, Livonia. Participants will learn techniques of pen and ink to design the card. Class fee is $30 for members and $35 for nonmembers. Arrangements can be made to have the card printed. For more information, call Marge Masek, 464-6772.

● CERAMICS INVITATIONAL

The Eastern Michigan University Art Department will present the 11th Invitational Ceramics Exhibition through Wednesday, Nov. 25, in the Ford Gallery of EMU's Ford Hall.

The exhibition, presented every two years, will feature artists from Michigan, most from southeastern Michigan. The participating artists range from recent college graduates to those who have been working professionally for many years.

The focus will be on sculptural works, although there will be artists exhibiting vessels. Gallery hours will be Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. For more information, call the gallery at 487-0465.

● ELEGANT OCTET

"The Elegant Octet," a concert of works for eight woodwind players has been scheduled by Detroit Chamber Winds for 8 p.m. Friday in Christ Church Cranbrook.

Detroit Chamber Winds is an ensemble of wind and brass players drawn from the ranks of the Detroit Symphony and Michigan Opera Theater Orchestra. Tickets are $12 ($8 for seniors/students) and may be purchased by calling 851-8DCW. Mastercard and Visa are accepted.

● NORTHVILLE CRAFTS SHOW

More than 100 Michigan craftspersons will be exhibiting and selling their wares at the annual arts and crafts show Friday-Sunday, Nov. 13-15 in Northville Community Center, in historic downtown Northville.

The event is sponsored by the Michigan Cultural Association so that area residents can meet with and talk to Michigan artists who are keeping alive skills and craftmanship that one day may be gone forever, a spokeswoman said.

Admission is $3, but no charge for children. Parking is free. Lunch is available. The show is open Friday 4-9 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

● DANCE SCHOLARSHIPS

The Institute of Music and Dance has announced dance scholarship auditions for the 1987-88 academic year. The Nov. 7 auditions are slated for 4:30 p.m. in the Institute's Cultural Center campus, at the corner of John R and Kirby.

For more information, or to register, call 831-2870.

Partial tuition scholarships are available for children, youth and adults classes in modern and ballet. The auditions are open to dancers from the general public as well as to IMD students. While no prepared composition is required, students 12 and older have the option of presenting a 60-second solo.

● PALETTE AND BRUSH EXHIBIT

The Palette and Brush Club annual fall art show will be held at the First Center Office Plaza, 26913 Northwestern Highway, Southfield. The show opens Monday, Nov. 9, and continues through Friday, Nov. 20, and is open for viewing from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

● WEAVERS EXHIBIT

The Michigan Weavers Guild is presenting its sixth biannual exhibit and sale through Saturday, Nov. 7, at Orchard Mall in West Bloomfield, Orchard Lake Road north of Maple.

Along with sale items, there will weaving and spinning demonstrations. The public will be encouraged to participate. A new attraction will be a fashion show featuring one-of-a-kind handwoven garments and gift section.

More than 100 weavers are expected to participate. Show hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

VAALuable effort

Reception opens community art group exhibit

By Marie McGee
staff writer

A COUPLE of nice things have happened recently to lend encouragement in Judy Gresser's endeavors as an artist.

The most recent is being named "best of show" in the Visual Art Association of Livonia's fall art show that opens officially Sunday with a public reception 2-4 p.m. in the lobby of the Livonia City Hall.

It's the third year in a row that Gresser, a Livonia resident, has captured the VAAL award. Her entry was a water color, "Abbey," which involved a new technique for her.

In selecting the painting for the high honor, art show judge Joseph Maniscalco commented: "The artist successfully expressed what had she had to say. One of the most important aspects of painting is not subject matter or school, but unity.

"This painting," he continued, "was done in a particular way with all aspects — color, pattern — correctly unified."

"A toehold" toward acceptance as an artist also came when she was invited to teach a watercolor class at the Farmington Community Center this past fall. The class will be repeated in January.

"It's a class in experimental water color," she said. "And we're having a lot of fun." The invitation to teach made her feel "like I was beginning to be considered as an artist," she said, somewhat shyly.

Gresser, who began art lessons with the late Emily Fox of Redford, credits Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association instructor Marilyn Derwenksus with having the most influence on her work.

FIRST PLACE IN oils went to Marge Stock of Farmington, for her painting, "Leelanau."

A member of the Farmington Art Club and Palette and Brush Club, she has also studied at the BBAA and is currently studying with Audrey DeMarco.

Maniscalco's comments on her work were: "Again, this painting is successful in the statement made by the artist. I like the freshness of color. It is a complicated subject done in a decorative way — very dramatic with variety and interest."

First place in the graphic category was another former winner, Yvette Goldberg, with her mixed collage, "Clarinet." Goldberg of Livonia won best of show two years ago.

The judge's comments noted that the collage was "very dynamic in its design. The function of the artist is to take something complicated and simplify it. Despite the obvious 'busyness,' there is still a basic simplicity. The little details don't confuse the big shapes."

First place in water color went to Eleanor Nief for her gouache rendering, "Fall at the Lake." A Livonia resident, Nief won best of show and an honorable mention at Palette and Brush Art Club exhibit in September. She has studied at the Center for Creative Studies as well and the BBAA and has had art published in two magazines.

Commenting on the painting's vibrant colors, the judge pointed out that the composition also makes it "a visually pleasing study."

Top honors in the photography competition went to Livonia resident Mary Ehlert for "RenCen Ceiling." In last year's show, she won a second place as well as an honorable mention.

"I like that the artist pinpointed something realistic," said Maniscalco, "to get design and pattern, and to create abstract shape."

Maniscalo is president of the Scarab Art Club of Detroit and a nationally known portrait artist.

Exhibit chairwoman was Ellen Kallick.

Water color: Shirley Ceasar, second; Elbert C. Weber, third; Edna L. Earp, Eileen Bibby, Audrey Harkins, Karen Burton, honorable mention.

Graphic: Bladen McClelland, second, Mary Mull, third; Mary Jane Stevens, Bladen McClelland, honorable mention.

Photography: Norbert Davert, second, Ehlert, third; Davert, honorable mention.

The exhibit will continue in the city hall lobby through Friday, Nov. 20.

Pleasers: 'Super-mom syndrome revisited

By Mona Grigg
special writer

DR. KEVIN Leman breezed into town last week to hawk his latest book, "The Pleasers: Women Who Can't Say No and the Men Who Control Them" (Fleming H. Revell Co.)

The Arizona-based psychologist is the author of seven self-help books, including "Smart Kids, Stupid Choices," "Sex Begins in the Kitchen," and the best-selling "Birth Order Book."

Leman says a "pleaser" is someone who takes care of everyone except herself and who often feels used, put upon, walked over and generally unappreciated.

It's the old "Superwoman, Supermom" syndrome revisited. Even the toughest take-charge office executive can become Silly-Putty in the hands of her husband and children when she gets home, Leman said. Why? Because of the old G-word. Guilt. If wives and mothers didn't invent the word, they, at least, redefined its usage.

Oh, but you've heard all of this before? Well, yes, you probably have. Leman said the pleaser-controller relationships have been around for centuries. And so, it seems, have the self-help books attempting to deal with the issue. Consider some of the titles: "Women Who Love Too Much," "Men Who Hate Women and the Women Who Love Them," "How to be an Assertive (not Aggressive)," "Woman in Life, Love and on the Job," and "The Good Girl Syndrome."

BUT HOW ABOUT this? Leman adds a new note to it all. It's OK to be a pleaser, he says. It can even be physically, emotionally and spiritually satisfying — if you turn it into a positive rather than a negative trait. And if you work at training the "controllers" in your life to appreciate the pleaser in you.

'My message is clear and workable — and positive. We've got to get back to thinking positive. And we've got to get back to men and women liking each other.'

— Dr. Kevin Leman
Author/psychologist

"My contention," Leman said, "is that women are the emotional teachers of life — yet a lot of women don't want to be cast into that role."

And small wonder. According to Leman, a pleaser often pairs with a man who is a dominating "controller" in one way or another. The choice can be costly: Leman said the pleaser-controller pattern is the key factor in the break-up of many marriages.

Who are pleasers, according to Leman, and how did they get that way?

1. Pleasers are often perfectionists. The majority of them are firstborns or only children who are (or were) heavily influenced by parental pressure, either actively ("Can't you do anything right?") or passively ("That's all right, honey, I'll do it. You'll learn someday").

2. They often come from unhappy homes with absent, neglectful or abusive fathers. "There is an absolute correlation between father-daughter relationships and healthy or unhealthy marital attitudes," Leman said, adding that all couples should look into family relationships before choosing a life partner. Mother-son relationships are as important as father-daughter.

3. Pleasers don't expect much out of their emotional lives. They're willing to settle for small favors. ("At least he doesn't beat me.")

4. They're low in self-esteem. They believe they have to earn their value and their worth. They're always apologizing. They know it's "their fault".

5. A strong characteristic of the pleaser is their attempt to keep everyone happy. Peace at any price is their motto, and they pay dearly.

6. Pleasers usually feel inferior to men, or at least have a strong need to be "good girls" so men will approve of them.

LEMAN GIVES HIS pleasers titles:

The Supersuffering Pleaser suspects her husband is a misogynist — a woman hater — who controls her with his anger, abuse, put-downs and neglect. The relationship is totally negative and probably requires professional help.

The Depressed Pleaser is married to a man who controls her with his weaknesses (alcoholism, drugs, gambling, etc.) She is a "Martha Luther" trying to control a "Bill Bailey." This pleaser is a controller of sorts. She wouldn't be interested in a healthy, normal man who treated her with love and respect. Instead, she prefers the "excitement" of someone who is distant, hard to reach, someone she can never be quite sure of.

The "Played-Out" Pleaser is physically or mentally exhausted, but still allows herself to be put upon. She is angry and uptight inside, but maintains a happy face for the world most of the time.

The Mildly Discouraged Pleaser is "getting along OK" but still feels mild anxiety. Though she likes being a nurturer and care giver, she knows she isn't always treated fairly. She wants to find out who she is and what her role is in today's "liberated" culture.

And, finally, the Positive Pleaser, Leman says, "nicely navigates what I call 'the balance beam of life.' They like who they are and have achieved a good balance between pleasing people and having people treat them with respect and pleasing behavior in return."

LEMAN KNOWS THE Positive Pleaser very well. His wife, Sande, is one of them. His wife of 20 years is "the best thing that ever happened to me," he said. "I talk a lot about sensitivity and physical touching and holding — and I only talk about it because my wife taught me. It's sure not something I learned growing up, or in a psychology classroom."

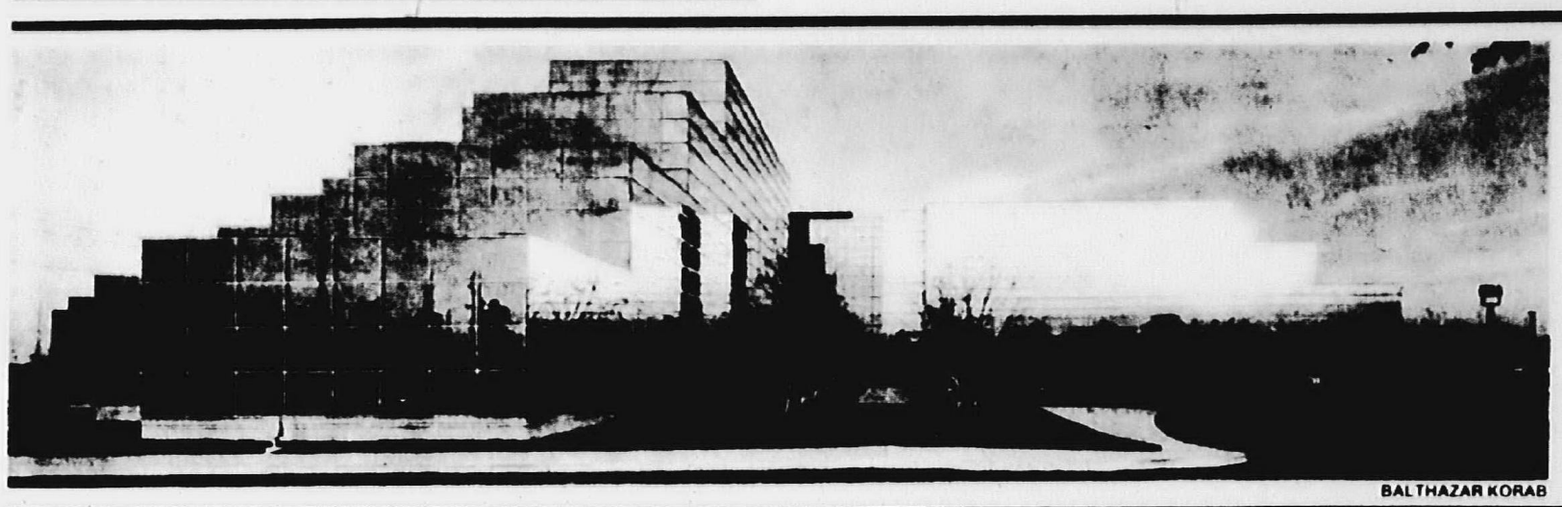

Leman said he barely made it through his Buffalo, N.Y., high school, his grades were so low. Then, when he applied for college, the 141st one accepted him — on probation — and promptly kicked him out before the year was out. "I moved to Arizona with my parents," he said, "and was a 21-year-old janitor going nowhere when I met my wife. She was a pleaser, a care giver and the turning point in my life, without doubt. With her help, I went through 13 years of college. And there isn't a day goes by that I don't let her know how much I appreciate her."

Can men be pleasers, too? "Sure they can. In fact, there are 13 of them across the country, but we're not releasing names and addresses." But all kidding aside, he said marriages between two pleasers are the most successful.

"I'd love for men to read my book," he continued, adding that he wished now that he had left the word "men" out of the title. "This book speaks to men as husbands and fathers and lovers and care givers. There are no villains in this book, only misguided mates. The pleaser can be every bit as misguided as the controller."

Leman, 44, and his wife are the parents of four children ranging in age from 15 years to three months. He's been a practicing psychologist since 1974, though book tours and speaking engagements increasingly keep him away from the office.

Offices 'well done'

A Livonia office building, Cambridge Center Office Building, was among six buildings earning a "well done" from a jury of architects when they met in St. Louis recently to evaluate the best efforts of the state's architectural community in the Michigan Society of Architects 1987 Design Honor Awards Program. The winning solutions were all produced by medium- to small-sized firms. One was James Blain/Robert Wakely Associates who came up with the concept of the Cambridge center on Six Mile Road, west of I-275. Even though the jury was concerned about the use of reflective glass as an overworked building material, they felt that this particular building was executed extremely well and that it has a strong, clear plan and a well articulated building form.

Mona Grigg

MEGAN STAFFEL. Remember that name if you don't know it already. Because Megan Staffel's novel, "She Wanted Something Else," has just been published by North Point Press (hardbound, $17.95), and if it doesn't move this young writer up the stairway to literary stardom, there's simply no justice in the book world.

Staffel is an Iowa Writer's Workshop graduate and the author of a short-story collection, "A Length of Wire," from Pym-Randall. This is her first novel.

One day last week when I had a thousand things to do, I picked up Staffel's book for just a second. I was only going to read the first page. And I was only doing that much because I'd heard the Staffel lived in the area — at Cranbrook, in fact, with her husband, Graham Marks (artist-in-residence and head of the ceramics department), and their two children.

It seemed the neighborly thing to do, what with Cranbrook being in our readership area.

THREE HOURS LATER I put the book down — only because I had come to the end and there wasn't any more.

"She Wanted Something Else" is a story of love and loneliness told from three points of view: wife, daughter, husband.

Rose Ann's story begins in 1924 when, as a little girl, she unhooks her lap harness, stands up as the roller-coaster near the top of "Pike's Peak" and yells to the world, "Look at me!" By the end of the war, Rose Ann is a talented, ambitious, frustrated artist, a distracted wife to Teddy and a reluctant mother to Alma.

When Alma is nine, the story becomes hers: "On a Saturday afternoon when she was bored with private entertainments, she would seek her mother out for company. She would go to the studio door, open it quietly and start up the stairs. . .

"'Alma, sweetie, what is it?'

"The tone was exasperated but it wasn't unkind, and Alma took it as an invitation and sat down.

"'Honey, I'm working. Can't you find anything to do?'

"She shook her head and continued to look out the window. Had she been a different child, she might have let out a sigh at that point or started to whine. But she wasn't and that meant that her mother was the woman standing in front of the easel, and Rose Ann didn't like children who whined. Also, when Alma was younger, Rose Ann had suggested she call her by her first name and if she could, avoid the word 'mommy.' 'It's an unpleasant term,' Rose Ann had said. 'It make me feel like a dish towel.'"

When Alma is 14, Rose Ann is offered an art scholarship in Rome and accepts without hesitation, leaving Teddy and Alma to their own devices. They miss her at first, but quickly grow accustomed to their own routines. They can eat what they want, do what they want, say what they want. Alma begins to smoke, uses foul language and pets heavily behind the garage with her boyfriend, Andrew. Teddy begins a haphazard affair with a woman from his insurance office.

WHEN ROSE ANN writes that her six-month sojourn will stretch out to a year, Teddy and Alma, comrades now, barely take the time to feel sorry for themselves.

But things pile up: Alma is tired of eating sandwiches, is afraid her father's new girlfriend will get in the way of his loving her mother, is anxious about her own budding sexuality. She writes to mother, hinting that she may be pregnant after learning the symptoms from a book, and Rose Ann comes home.

The story becomes Teddy's then and winds up in a funny-sad, altogether satisfying conclusion.

There are flaws in Teddy's part of the book, and it's too bad because Teddy deserves better. It's as though the author (or editors) decided the story had gone on too long and worked too quickly to wrap things up. Throughout, we're absorbed by a finely-drawn, father-daughter relationship, all too rare in books today — yet when Teddy and Alma are separated, we never know how it affects Alma. What did she think? What did she say? How did her mother get Alma to leave Teddy, semiconscious and hospitalized as he was?

And when Teddy, still groggy from a concussion, goes to Philadelphia to find his wife and daughter, could it be possible that, after hours of searching, he would just happen to spot them at the perfume counter in one of Philly's many department stores?

Still, those are minor quibbles. The book is funny, poignant, luminous; the characters are exquisitely drawn.

And Megan Staffel is an artist.

● 'TRANSFORMING VISIONS' ART SHOW

"Transforming Visions" is the theme of the juried art show at the Swords into Plowshares Peace Center & Art Gallery. An official sesquicentennial event, the competition attracted more than 90 Michigan artists who created two- and three-dimensional works expressing the imperative of moving from a world of war and violence to a world of peace and reconciliation.

There will be an opening reception for the exhibit 5-9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 6, at the gallery, 45 E. Adams, on Grand Circus Park. There is no admission charge and plenty of close-by street parking as well as a guarded lot behind the Central United Methodist Church. For more information, call 965-5422.

● FILM CLASSIC

The film "In the Heat of the Night," an American classic, will be shown at 1:30 p.m. and again at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 18, at Madonna College. The afternoon showing will be in Room 154 and the evening viewing in Kresge Hall. A racist Southern sheriff, Rod Steiger, and a black detective, Sidney Poitier, are forced to cooperate to solve a murder case. The event is open to the public, free of charge. For information, call 591-5197. Madonna College is at I-96 and Levan, Livonia.

● PEWABIC EXHIBITIONS

An exhibition highlighting recent work by Chris Staley, Wichita, Kan., and Don Pilcher, Champaign, Ill., is on display at Pewabic Pottery through Nov. 14. Also at this time, work by Ann Arbor artist Tom Phardel will be featured in the sculpture garden. An opening reception to meet the artists will be 5:30-8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 16.

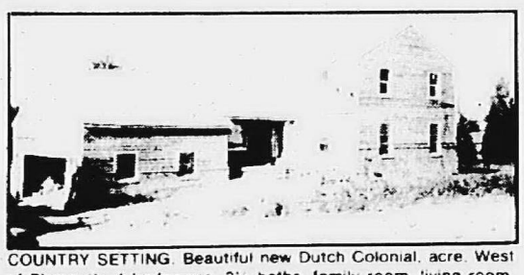

Pleasers: Who they are and how they got there

"My patients are getting old and gray sitting in my office, waiting for me," he said, "but when I reach millions of people through the media, or with one appearance on 'Donahue' or 'Oprah,' it's pretty hard to turn down. Still, I don't see myself as a 'pop psychologist.' My message is clear and workable — and positive. We've got to get back to thinking positive. And we've got to get back to men and women liking each other."

Choose, prepare mulch carefully

Nature is a good teacher as we maintain our gardens. As leaves fall in the forest, they drift down slowly and intermingle with branches and twigs. This helps to keep them from matting.

By the same token, the mulch you choose for your garden plants, trees and shrubs shouldn't be allowed to mat. If using leaves, it is best to shred them before applying as mulch. Pine needles, bark, wood chips, straw and newspaper (ink is no problem) also make good mulches.

Care should be taken not to apply a winter mulch before the ground has frozen. For instance, if a mulch is applied too soon over newly planted bulbs, little critters may find it is an ideal spot to nest and the carefully placed bulbs may be a feast for them as well.

Rhododendrons and other shallow rooted plants should be mulched all during the year. Apply the mulch so that it reaches the lowest leaves on the plants. By springtime it should have been reduced to about half this amount. The excess of about two inches can be removed after the danger of freezing has passed.

A general rule for the depth of mulches is: shredded leaves 2-3 inches, pine needles 4-5 inches, bark 1-2 inches, wood chips 3-5 inches, straw 5-6 inches and newspapers ½-1 inch. Synthetic materials are excellent for weed control, but may inhibit aeration around the plant roots. Synthetic materials also don't have a great buffering effect on soil temperature.

Plastic can be laid on a bed that has contained annual flowers after you have cleaned it up for the winter. Punch holes in the plastic and anchor it well. The holes will enable water to penetrate the soil and the plastic will kill the weeds before they have a chance to grow in the spring.

Most organic mulches should be dug into the soil every year or two and a new layer added. As winter begins, spade the mulch under and replace it just before weed growth starts in the spring if you have not applied it in the fall.

A special tip to strawberry growers - wait until the temperatures are in the 20s, when the plants have stopped growing, before applying a mulch. Mulching before then will smother the plants.

When arranging flowers, have you ever thought how that wonderful OASIS (R) floral foam is made? While at the Garden Writer's meeting, we were given a demonstration that seemed like magic.

A pre-mixed solution was poured into a container and in less than five minutes the OASIS foam was ready to cut. There are many new products made by this company for unique fresh and dry flower arranging and for propogation purposes. All the paraphenalia to make your composition perfect is made by the Smithers-Oasis Company.

One especially interesting new item to give floral and craft creations a finished look is OASIS moss Mate (TM). It is a natural moss that has been processed for color retention and has a backing to make handling easy. It can be used on baskets, glass containers, wreath forms or any place you wish to have a soft velvety texture.

Doll artist at collectibles shop

Celebrated doll artist Yolanda Bello, designer of the award-winning Yolanda's Picture-Perfect Babies collection, will appear at Georgia's Gift Gallery, 615 N. Mill, Plymouth, from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 15.

Bello will be at the gift and collectibles shop to introduce "Little Bo Peep," the first doll in her latest series from Knowles' China: The Children of Mother Goose. The artist will also be available to sign dolls from her previous collection and to answer questions about her work.

Born in Caracas, Venezuela, Bello moved to Chicago at the age of 14, bringing with her an intense interest in doll design and sculpture during her free time.

In 1981, she designed and created her first porcelain dolls: a pair of Spanish girls. Favorable reaction to her work enhanced Bello's reputation and within a year, her lifelong hobby had become a full-time profession.

This is "Heather," the second issue in the Yolanda's Picture-Perfect Babies collection by the Edwin M. Knowles China Co.

Each home site in Oakbrooke of West Bloomfield is in a "Land Condominium." This feature permits the ownership of a detached home, without the responsibility for such things as lawn care, snow and trash removal, all of which are handled by the Association. The owner also enjoys the use of the private grounds adjoining each house, plus the open space area, and access to Simpson Lake.

The overall architectural theme of Oakbrooke is one of warm elevations to blend as one community. Accents of traditional, contemporary, or tudor styles will allow each purchaser to design their own residence.

Our agency tries to maintain a positive public image within the community. Providing this column, for instance is a public service. Sure there's a fringe benefit. Naturally, we hope that our weekly readers will consider using our services when they decide to buy or sell.

A free, confidential market analysis is another public service we offer. Homeowners should keep abreast of the value of their properties, especially if they are planning to sell in the not to distant future. A market analysis will give homeowners an estimate value based upon current market considerations, comparable sales, supply and demand, and the availability and cost of financing. Again, by offering homeowners free market analysis, we hope that when they decide to sell that they will consider using our services.

MOT presents an inspiring 'Man of LaMancha'

By Mary Jane Doerr
special writer

review

Rarely does this critic attend anything twice. While a music critics convention prevented attendance opening night of Michigan Opera Theatre's "Man of La Mancha," the show was so inspiring that I went back to see it again.

Director and choreographer Ted Forlow, a member of the 1960s Broadway cast, is responsible for this successful recreation of the original production. Using rebuilt sets and the same blocking and choreography, he gives life to the Knight of the Woeful Countenance, who braves the world of the depraved, the ugly and cynical to bring hope to the downtrodden.

Hard's the easiest of plays to comprehend. Dale Wasserman's musical play with the witty Joe Darion lyrics is based on Miguel de Cervantes's "Don Quixote." It is the story of hope against despair, of illusion in the face of disillusionment.

Metropolitan opera stars aren't known for their acting talents, but Richard Fredricks is the exception. He credits Forlow with transforming him into the three characters in the role of the Man of La Mancha.

As Cervantes, he descends the long staircase of the black dungeon to await his trial by the Spanish Inquisition. In this den of thieves, he pleads for his most important possession, his manuscript. As the story unfolds, he elicits the help of the prisoners to enact Cervantes's story. Fredricks then makes himself up to be Don Quixote and directs the play. In the difficult last scene, he transforms himself again into a dying old man who has been defeated by the reality Don Quixote battled.

In the fields near Seville, Spain, Don Quixote "tilts the windmill" to have his sword twisted by failure. He challenges the barber for his shaving bowl, claiming it to be his Golden Helmet.

At an inn, Don Quixote meets his imaginary lady, Dulcinea, who is really a trollup, constantly surrounded by a groups of rough muleteers. As Pedro, the head muleteer, George Hasenstab cracks his sharp whip across the rebuilt Broadway set, bestirring the audience, but not the unflinching Chris Callen, who plays prostitute Aldonza.

Callen comes well endowed with TV and Broadway credits. In addition to acting talent, she has vocal as well, in a chest voice that projects anguish in her song "Aldonza" and a legitimate voice that brings sweetness to her finale, "To Dream the Impossible Dream."

With Jean-Paul Richard, Cam Richards, John Manfredi, Eric von Bleicken and guitarist David Shoup, Hasenstab and Callen make the famous Act II rape scene about as symbolically horrid as any choreography could depict.

A veteran cast of 18 actor singers double as prisoners and characters in Cervantes's fantasy. Samuel Reni has been Sancho, Don Quixote's loyal servant with four other opera companies. His engaging tenor voice blended with Fredericks's in "I, Don Quixote" to the beat of Jean-Paul Richard's and Cam Richards's flamenco-like dancing horses.

Walter Blocher, a lovable padre, has the role down pat, having performed it on three national tours of "La Mancha." Director Forlow took the part of the baffled barber, the role he played on Broadway.

The raked, or built-up, stage displaced the orchestra to a more suitable stage left where a balance of sound between instrumentalists and singers was achieved. It also provided dancers with a resilient floor for the rollicking battle scene.

Conductor David Abell had solid control of the 17-member scaled down ensemble, in which the usual string section was replaced with two guitars.

The Enchanter, the Knight of Mirrors, is the villain. It is MOT-trained Scott Neumann's powerful acting that brings the play into focus in the final prison scene where the escape of Don Quixote's farce is not strong enough to counter the harsh terms of the Inquisition.

He puts the drama into perspective when he departs in disgust as Aldonza changes her name and the old man rises to believe again that perhaps his vision isn't a dream.

This isn't an opera, but with it MOT proves it can present fine drama as well as grand opera.

condo queries

Robert M. Meisner

From time to time, Condo Queries deals with questions other than those dealing with condominiums.

Q. What success have you had in pursuing developers in regard to construction defects and deficiencies in new construction and or conversion? Our board is concerned about the cost involved in such potential litigation.

A. Generally speaking, if the association is well organized and is prepared to document its claims, retain an expert architect or engineer who is prepared to testify that the developer is responsible for construction defects and deficiencies, and has an attorney who is knowledgeable about the procedures concerning the successful prosecution of construction defect claims, the association can obtain a favorable result notwithstanding the fact that litigation is sometimes complex and hotly contested.

Efforts should be made, initially, by counsel to obtain an amicable resolution of the dispute with the developer after the defects have been properly documented. If that does not result in a reasonable settlement and the amount of damages involved justifies the costs attendant with such litigation, legal proceedings should be commenced since the board of directors of the association has a responsibility to insure that defects and deficiencies attributable to the developer are properly pursued.

Q. We are purchasing a cottage on a land contract. The seller of the property has an outstanding land contract, i.e., he is buying his interest on a land contract. Is there anything that we should check on before entering into the land contract? The seller doesn't think we need a purchase agreement.

A. There should definitely be a purchase agreement as well as a land contract. Moreover, the purchase agreement should set forth the form of land contract that will be utilized in regard to the purchase of your property. You should also insist upon a title policy, making sure that your land contract vendor (the seller) has the right to convey his interest in the property, that there is no default on the property by the seller or foreclosure by any underlying mortgage recorded against the property.

GUARANTEED!

We at Real Estate One Training Center think we offer the best pre-license and post-license real estate training.

OUR GUARANTEE!

We want you to pass the state real estate exam the first time. We prepare you to do just that, but here's our guarantee: We know that adults learn at different rates. Some people can sit through a 40 hour course and still need more help. We guarantee that if you don't pass our state approved course you can come back again for any or all of the classes until you do - at no extra charge. We also guarantee that you can still come back to any day or evening classes or review courses to enhance your ability to pass the state exam - again, at no extra charge to you. Our goal is to prepare you to pass the state exam the first time. If you need more help, we offer it and there's no extra charge.

We're ready to help. Please join our class.

$99.00 Includes:

- 40 hours of class
- Quizzes every class
- 19 hours of extra help (review classes)
- 2 exams
- Completely new 617 page text-book covering all topics
- The best instructors anywhere

1. Approximately 1,900 people go through our 40 hour state-approved real estate pre-license course every year and we have taught this course for over 15 years.
2. We are the biggest and best school because we have established a teaching staff and policies to help each student.
3. We offer at no extra charge 14 extra hours of review classes for people who just want a little extra time to study math, Michigan law, and general real estate topics.
4. We offer the students quizzes at each and every class to get them prepared for the state exam.
5. We have 2 exams which act as a help and study guide.
6. We offer classes in:
   - Wyandotte
   - Novi/Northville
   - Macomb County
   - Doner Building (I-696 at Lahser)
   - Ann Arbor
7. We offer a chance for students to come to either day or evening classes or both if they want extra help.
8. Our instructors go through extra training themselves every month to keep up-to-date with new laws and details which affect real estate here in Michigan.
9. We have just published a new 617 page manual which each person receives in the course to enhance self study.
10. We genuinely care about every person who enters our pre-license course. We want you to complete and pass our course and pass the state real estate exam. Please join our class.

CLASSES BEGIN MONDAY, NOV. 16th, & DEC. 28th, 1987

WRITE IT AND REAP!

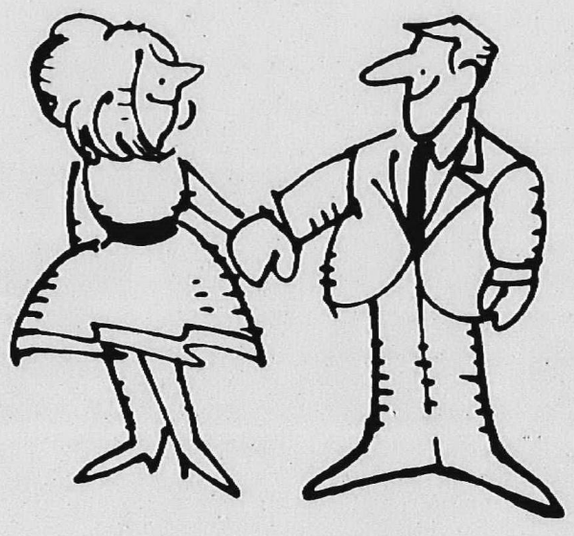

Writing a classified ad that gets results—whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise— is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

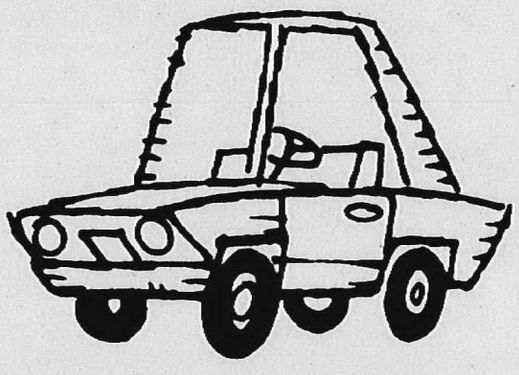

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

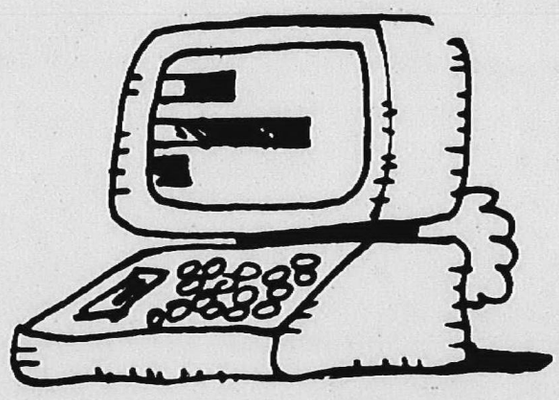

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as E!K (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.
