15 candidates seek office in township

By Doug Funke
staff writer

There is no shortage of candidates willing to seek elective office this year in Plymouth Township.

Eight candidates have filed nominating petitions for four trustee seats, three for supervisor and two each for clerk and treasurer.

Style, rather than disagreement on issues, apparently has drawn most challengers into the electoral ring. All 15 filed as Republicans in the partisan races.

Maurice Breen, supervisor since 1980 and 1970-72, will face Jerry Raymor and James Irvine in the Aug. 2 primary election.

"My main emphasis will be to restore citizen confidence in our local government," said Raymor, 41, a systems analyst for Ford Motor Co.

"I plan to serve our community instead of using it. I will also increase community awareness of what is going on in our township," Raymor added.

"The progress of Plymouth Township over the past eight years has been very gratifying," Breen said of his record.

Breen, 55, a lawyer, said he's especially proud of consolidating rubbish removal services, computerization of water billing, voter registration and accounting practices and maintaining a stable tax rate.

Irvine, 60, elected a trustee in 1984, opted for the top executive job in the township this time around..

"I WILL work to increase the level of trust and cooperation both inside and outside the township hall," said Irvine, a lawyer.

Esther Hulsing, township clerk for nearly 10 years, faces a challenge from Lorraine Halmekangas, deputy clerk.

"It's something Esther and I will have to talk about," said Halmekangas, 45. "I feel I'm capable of doing the job. I do the job now."

Hulsing, 72, seemed genuinely torn over whether to seek re-election a couple of months ago but eventually filed.

Patricia J. Pashukewich, 47, president of a family-owned property management company, will try to School candidates square off at forum

Parental ideals, the Headlee override and impending budget cutbacks were some of the topics touched upon at the candidates' forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Northville-Plymouth-Canton-Novi Tuesday evening at Plymouth-Canton High School.

Twelve of the 15 declared school board candidates for two four-year terms on the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education answered questions during the forum.

Each candidate spoke three minutes on a topic related to his/her candidacy in the Monday, June 13, election.

The forum, which was aired live on WSDP, the student radio station, will be rebroadcast at 6:30 p.m. Friday on cable Channel 15.

Barbara Graham, a former Detroit Board of Education member, questioned certain materials that are being used in the schools. She also questioned programs that she contends "erodes parental authority."

Old car, grass, weeds raise ire of neighbor

Enough is enough, says Annette Patyna, who lives on Garland in Plymouth Township.

Patyna is upset about the unwillingness of her neighbor to keep up his property and what she said is the unwillingness of Clint Stroebel, code enforcement officer, and Police Chief Carl Berry to force a cleanup.

"They make me feel when I'm there like they're going to take care of it," she said. "The minute I walk away, they don't do anything."

That's not exactly true, township officials counter.

The occupant of the house, Don Cieciersky, has been issued an appearance ticket for Monday, June 13, in 35th District Court for allegedly keeping a disabled, inoperable vehicle in front of his house.

Concrete company's plans mired in court

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

A concrete company's plan to build a state-of-the-art facility in Plymouth Township is going nowhere fast.

Clawson Concrete Co., which abandoned its plant at Eckles and Schoolcraft several years ago for economic reasons, wants to spend $500,000 to reopen the facility and provide two dozen jobs at the seven-acre site. Concrete would be mixed and loaded into trucks at the plant.

When Plymouth Township's planning commission barred Clawson from pursuing its plans about a year ago, Clawson went to court.

Wayne County Circuit Court agreed to take control of the matter. The township, in turn, asked the state Court of Appeals to uphold the decision of its planning commission.

The appellate court recently remanded the case to circuit court.

"THE COURT agreed the suit should not be dismissed without being heard on its merits," said Lawrence Ternan, Clawson's attorney.

Clawson, headquartered in Novi, is owned by the Levy Company. Levy is a Dearborn trucking and construction firm. Clawson operates about 10 plants in metropolitan Detroit, employing 300.

"We have proposed an alternative that might resolve the case," said Ternan.

"We're very hopeful that a resolution of the issues in the case occurs without delay. Clawson proposes to construct a concrete plant that is sensitive to the environment and the township's concerns. It would be set back from the road, and also close to the freeway so that it won't create the problems the township fears," added Ternan.

JIM McDERMOTT, Clawson's controller and director of administration, said the operation would comply with local, state and federal pollution laws.

"We would build as far back as we can, and yet have enough room for the plant and storage. Old plants and silos were as high as 80 feet. This would be low profile. We've proposed a plant of more like 50 feet."

Clawson said the plant would present no odor, vibration or safety prob-

Jaysecret?

She wants to raise group's low profile

By Arlene Funke
special writer

Tonya Smith believes the Plymouth Jaycees is one of the best-kept secrets in town.

But Smith — the new president and the group's first woman leader — wants to raise that low profile.

"I would like the public to be aware of what we do," said Smith, a 33-year-old registered nurse who lives in Canton. "Not only do we do community work, but we develop the personal skills and leadership dynamics of members within the chapter. A lot of people don't know we do that."

Smith, who took office last month, is employed by St. Mary Hospital, Livonia. She has great fondness for local traditions. She has lived in Canton for the past four yours, but grew up on Roosevelt Street in the city of Plymouth.

She is a 1973 graduate of Ladywood High School, Livonia, and attended nursing school at St. Vincent Hospital, Toledo.

About four years ago, some of Smith's friends began urging her to join the Plymouth Jaycees, a major service group.

"I HAD put them off," Smith said. "I was going to Madonna College." Smith joined the Jaycees in September 1985, shortly after obtaining her bachelor of science degree in nursing from Madonna.

It was a time of change, because the national Jaycees organization had recently lost a lengthy court battle to bar females from membership.

"I jumped in with both feet," Smith said. She joined the Jaycees' committee that puts on the annual July 4th parade and fireworks display in Plymouth.

Smith's enthusiasm won her increased responsibilities, such as chairing major Jaycee projects, in-

THE TICKET was hand-delivered last Friday after he refused to accept it by registered mail around May 16, Stroebel said.

Additionally, a 10-day notice was mailed to Cieciersky Wednesday warning that he's in violation of the township's weed ordinance.

The grass, a foot long as of Tuesday, must be cut by Saturday or else Cieciersky faces another ticket, Stroebel said.

Last Friday, township officials forced Cieciersky to remove the door from a refrigerator that Patyna said had been outside against his house for three years.

Berry and Stroebel said they hadn't been aware of the refrigerator until questioned by a reporter.

"We do everything we can to take care of the problem. She can't accept that," Berry said. "I can't invade peoples' property. Unfortunately, we have to follow legal process."

A LACK OF communication — not going through channels officially — may have compounded Patyna's distress, Stroebel said.

However, Stroebel conceded that she's spoken with him about a half dozen times during the last month.

"The neighborhood's in a transition period now," Patyna said. "All we're trying to do is keep it nice. It's going from old and ugly to newer and beautiful."

Patyna has a right to be concerned, Berry said. "I don't blame her. I agree with the woman — that's a neighborhood in transition."

Cieciersky couldn't be reached for comment.

"He needs more time. That's as much as he says," Stroebel said.

The grass was to be cut Tuesday, said Jim Raymond, who identified himself as a friend of Cieciersky.

Violations are common

Storing boats and trailers in driveways or parking cars with for-sale signs at shopping centers and other business merely for the sake of advertising are common ordinance violations in Plymouth Township.

So, too, is leaving unlicensed, inoperable vehicles in public view on private property. And letting weeds and grass grow so high that they go to seed.

"Citizens are not totally aware of ordinances," said Police Chief Carl Berry. "We give them an opportunity to correct the problem. That's common courtesy."

Clint Stroebel, ordinance enforcement officer, prefers a nonconfrontational approach in dealing with problems.

He said he prefers to talk with violators first before issuing 10-day warning notices, then tickets.

unseat Mary Brooks as treasurer.

"I feel the experience I have in accounting and management make me qualified for the job," Pashukewich said. "Through my work, I've learned that precise accounting procedures prevent mistakes and save money."

Brooks, 57, served as deputy treasurer for 12 years before she was elected treasurer.

Cameron Miller, 30, and Gregory Williams, 37, were the most recent candidates to file for trustee.

"It's time to put something back into the community," said Miller, a law clerk. "I think I can help out the community. I think it's time, possibly, for some fresh blood."

Williams, president of Key Marketing, said his primary goal is to maintain the quality of life in the township. "It's something for which I'm grateful," he said.

Other candidates who have filed for trustee are:

- John Stewart, 39, a lawyer. "It gives me a chance to serve. There's a vacancy. It's something I always wanted to do."
- Joseph LeBlanc, 25, a computer consultant.
- Ron Griffith, 48, dean of educational services at Schoolcraft College.
- Abe Munfakh, 46, incumbent and consulting engineer.
- Smith Horton, 56, incumbent and Ford Motor Co executive.
- Andrew R. Pruner, 49, incumbent and a Wayne County sheriff's deputy.

Candidates have until 4 p.m. Friday to withdraw their names from the ballot.

to the citizens, 'Now you pay for it,'" she said.

Mary Roberson supported a wide range of academic offerings including a stronger emphasis on the physical well-being of children via stronger physical education programs.

She also advocated saving the Begindergarten program. "The school board must be more available to the educators and more attentive to the parents," she said.

Incumbent E.J. McClendon, who is seeking his fourth term as school board trustee, bemoaned the larger issue of school financing in Michigan and the "horrendous" cuts that would have to be made in Plymouth-Canton schools should the Headlee override fail.

"We need to involve more citizens," he said.

Milan Emanuele said the tax question has come up a number of times in the form of a millage and tax override question.

"It reminds me of the elementary child who doesn't get what he wants and says lets go two out of three or three out of five," he said.

Richard Sumpter said that his experience with physical building maintenance can be an asset to the district.

"SCHOOL FINANCING is a problem created by the state," he said. "I see no point in slapping the hands of students because the state chose to reduce our state aid."

Incumbent Lester Walker, who is finishing his first term, said that many of his goals of a more open and cooperative board have been accomplished.

"I see a fresh spirit of communication and cooperation . . . A new threat is facing the school district. Cutbacks will affect every student."

Kent Jensen said the school board has direct input into building a budget.

"I'm not willing to have my taxes increased year after year," he said.

Mary Dahn cited the 73 percent of Plymouth-Canton 10th graders who, she said, "do not even have the basic essential skills in science," according to state test results.

She also denounced test results that showed 26 percent of Plymouth-Canton 10th graders do not have basic skills in math.

Leon Watkins was concerned with "almost certain budget cuts."

"I'm running for the students, teachers, parents and senior citizens," he said. "Kids. That's what we're here for."

Mark Beauchene believes the current financial situation can do great harm to the school district.

"I CAN see a better Plymouth-Canton Community School district where people are not forced out of the community because of high taxes," he said. "This dream requires hard work and long hours."

Annette Remsburg said that she advocated formation of committees of various groups of people in order to better communication and promote more involvement.

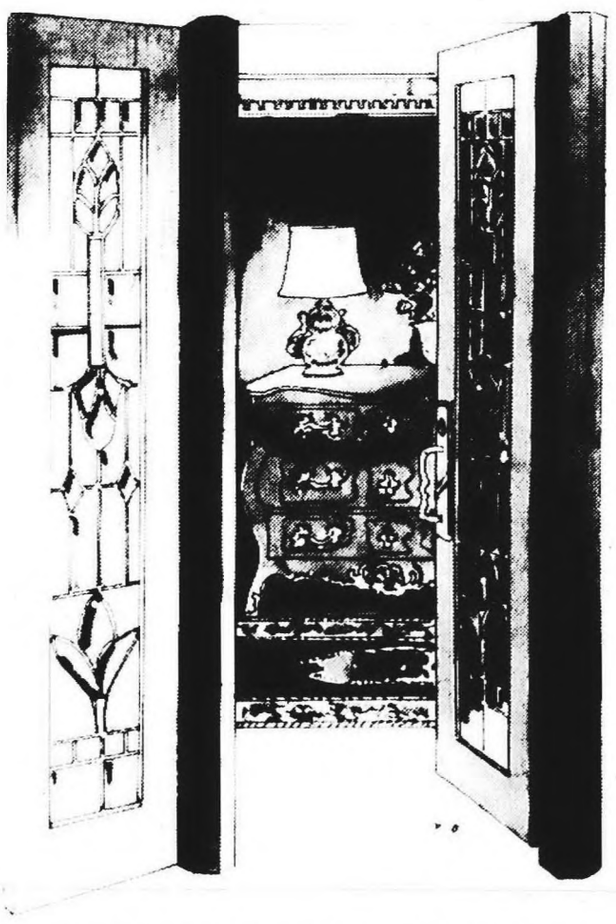

She also cited the need for increased computer literacy.

John Thomas highlighted his long personal and professional commitment to the Plymouth-Canton community.

"The budget is of great concern to me," he said.

Allen Kinsler did not participate in the forum, but sent a written statement.

"I know it's possible to receive a good education in these schools. If you can show quality to people in the community, they are more than ready to support it," he said.

Time to remember

A flyover was part of the Memorial Day events.

Several thousand spectators turned out to honor America's war dead Monday during Memorial Day cermonies in downtown Plymouth.

Veterans marched, bands played and people of all persuasions paused to remember.

Memories were nurtured by the beautiful weather.

Ray Stira, a veteran of World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War was one of three grand marshals.

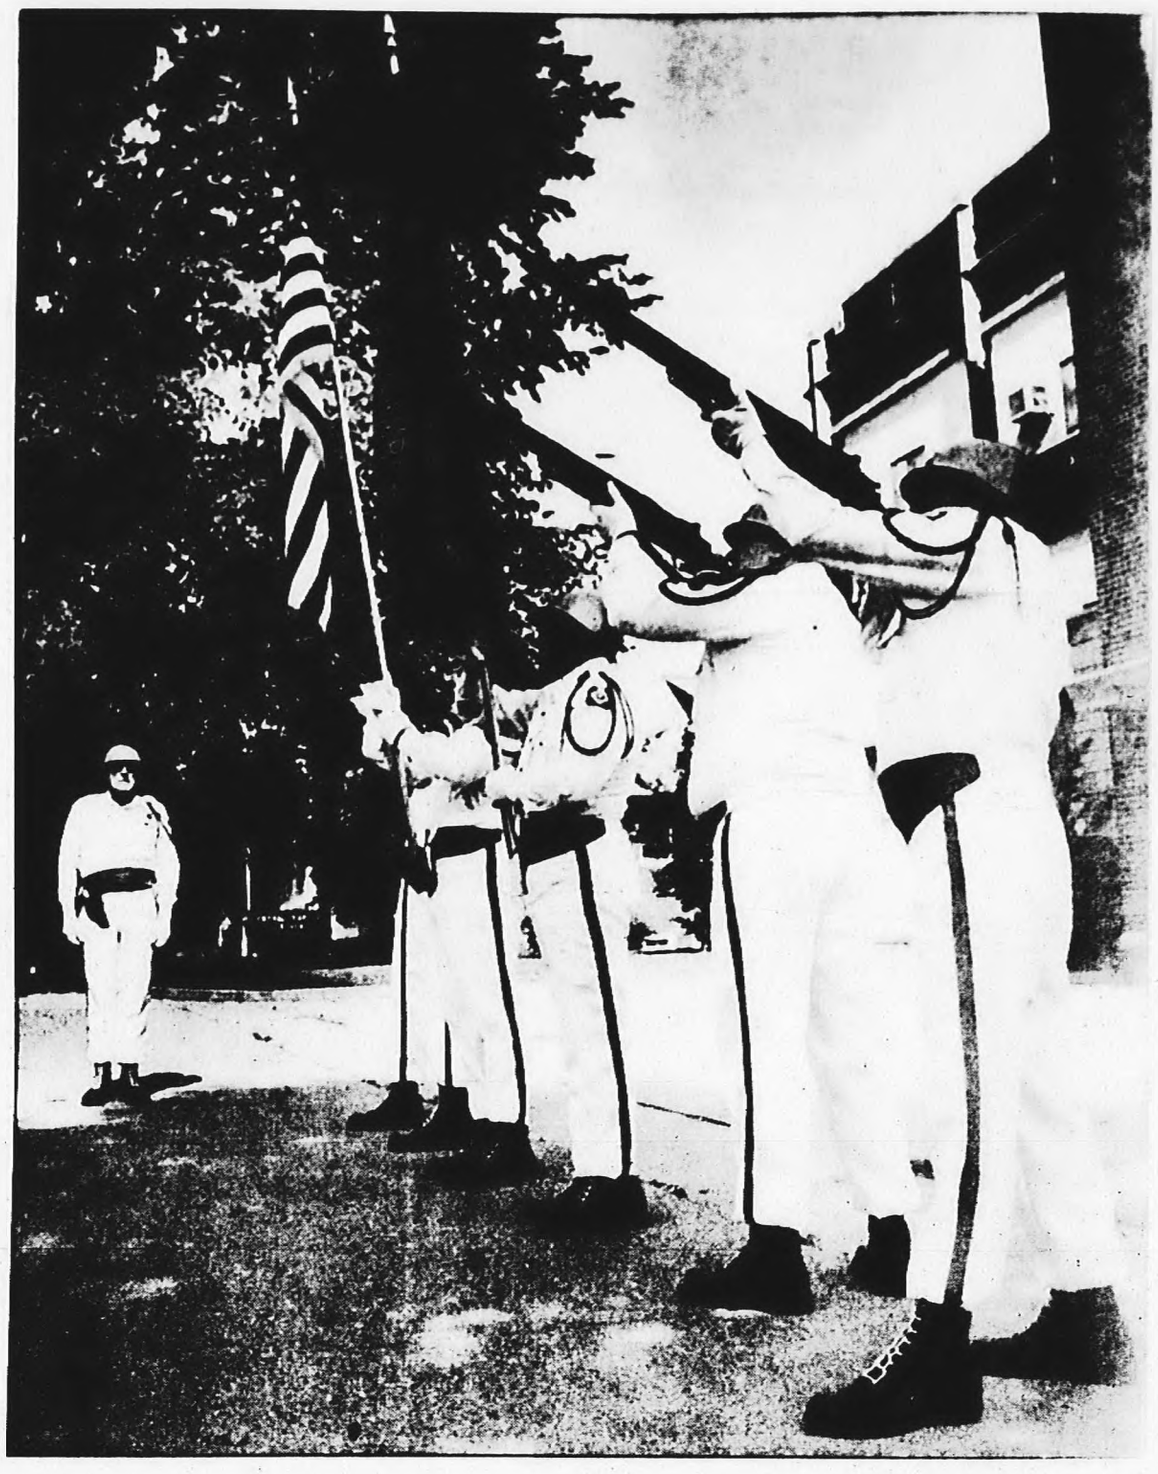

Joe Rogena, a veteran of World War I and II, and Grace Burley, chaplain of the Mayflower-Lt. Gamble VFW Ladies Auxiliary, also served as grand marshals.

The throngs who watched the parade and remembrance ceremonies were especially impressed by a flyover of military aircraft and the Wayne County Sheriff's armored "war wagon."

Jerry Berlongieri, a senior at Plymouth Canton High School, played a stirring rendition of taps. Kurt Britnell, a senior at Canton, recited the famous poem "In Flanders Field."

Drum major Brad Flowers salutes during the "Star Spangled Banner."

Crafty folk to show their arts

The city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department will host its third annual Summer Arts & Crafts Show at the Plymouth Cultural Center Saturday and Sunday.

Show hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission and parking are both free.

This year's show will have more than 60 crafters, which Tom Willette, show director, said is a small increase over last year.

"This is our third summer show, and each year we hope to improve on the year before," said Willette.

A big change this year is that the show has been reduced to two days, whereas the previous year's shows have been three.

"We felt that three days for a summer show was just a little too long, and many of the crafters agreed, and this is why we made the switch," co-director Carol Donnelly said.

The Plymouth-Canton area is well-represented in this year's show. The local crafters include Earle Umstead — gold and silver jewelry; Anita Luceus, Colleen Beauchamp, Lorry Boxberger — cross stitch; Diane Bradley — stained glass; Ruth Risdale — ceramics; Gail Murrah, Faye Nielson, Carolyn Huffer — bridal accessories; Fran Chausse White — hand-painted wood; Priscilla Cipolletti — ceramics; Debra Dufort — dolls; Ginny Geise, Dawnice Kerchaert — hanging sculptures; Bill Doughty — wood; Val Davis & Debra Jordon — painted wood; Sue Smith — spice wreaths; and Lynette Chenoweth — Victorian wood.

School budget adopted

The Plymouth-Canton school board Tuesday unanimously adopted an operating budget for the 1988-89 school year with anticipated expenditures of $55.3 million and revenues of $53.6 million.

The spending plan was balanced by applying $1.7 million from the district fund balance, which would leave an anticipated $2.5 million in the fund balance as of July 1989.

The school board set the tax rate at $34.17 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation (half of market value) for operations and $2.60 per $1,000 of SEV for debt retirement.

lems.

The Plymouth Township board met in closed session last week to discuss the issue. It decided to continue the lawsuit, said Supervisor Maurice Breen.

The township has cited several reasons for denying Clawson permission to resume operations on the land zoned for industrial use, but considered by some to be prime parkland.

- an adverse effect on the surrounding community;
- an increase in traffic in the area;
- a negative image at an entry point to the community; and
- an undermining of efforts to upgrade the area.

Clawson's proposed plant "sounds like garbage to me. Have you ever seen one? They speak for themselves," said Breen.

"But the issue is simply that there was a processing plant there at one time, and it was abandoned," Breen added. "During the time it was abandoned, they left all kids of debris around. It took us a terrible amount of endeavor to try to get it cleaned up."

The firm later leased the land for truck storage, a use for which it never obtained a permit.

"We have had serious discussions about, and a referendum for, a park over in that area. We're trying to upgrade the entire area," said the supervisor. "It doesn't appear to us that a concrete processing plant will be an upgrade for the area.

"We obviously think we're on the right corner on trying to stop this proposed use."

Clawson's site, on the south side of Schoolcraft, fronts Eckles on the Plymouth Township-Livonia limit. Residential property lies immediately to the north, and industrial land across the street.

Clawson is not about to drop its gloves.

"It is the intention of Clawson Concrete to continue with present litigation if the matter is not resolved under the alternative proposal," said Ternan.

"We appreciate the township's concerns," said McDermott. "This is a matter of proving to them that we can be a good corporate citizen and contribute to the economy, not only from our own plant, but from those we supply out of the plant. I think there's room for compromise."

cluding the annual fireworks display. That entails planning, setting up budgets and deadlines, working with pyrotechnics experts who shoot off the fireworks and arranging for musical accompaniment.

Such events make for some "intense" moments, Smith said.

"I DON'T usually get nervous until one hour before and right after it's over," she said. "We try to get a large committee, but when it gets down to it, there are about 10 people who do most of the work.

"That's where the Jaycees come in," Smith said. "It puts a lot of emphasis on management (and) training, problem-solving. It teaches management skills."

Smith also has served on the chapter's board of directors and was the president's administrative assistant prior to her election as first woman president. One of her stated goals is to increase the Plymouth Jaycees' membership rolls from its current 81 to around 100 people.

Women make up approximately 40 percent of the total membership, Smith said. The organization is open to people 21-40 years old.

"I'VE BEEN told that some people are upset that a woman has been elected president," Smith said. "Plymouth supposedly has been one of the conservative areas in the Jaycees. They are sitting and waiting to see what happens. It doesn't bother me. I'm going to do the same job, no matter what."

Working with Smith are several elected, executive officers, including three women. The officers are Cindy O'Day, Karen Murphy, Bruce Hartdegen, Jim Phillips, Cindy Mikelonis, Lloyd Ingram, and Paul Benson, all of Plymouth; Katie DeRosa of Canton; and Tim O'Meara of Livonia.

Local needs will take priority over nationwide Jaycees projects, Smith said. The chapter will conduct a local needs survey.

Some projects in the planning stages are free legal advice to senior citizens through the Plymouth Housing Commission, and a "Christmas in July" for people who normally garner attention only during the holiday season.

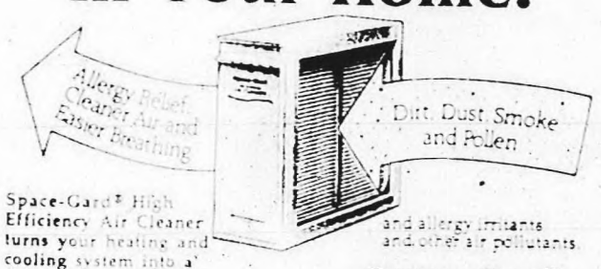

Smith lauds the skills she has learned through Jaycees training programs. She believes she has learned confidence and coping skills that have helped her manage the often-stressful life of a nurse. A 10-year employee of St. Mary, Smith currently works in the obstetrical unit.

AS A divorced mother of three children, 7, 4, and 2, Smith has scant time for the reading, bicycling and hiking that she enjoys. The Jaycees fills her need for service and personal development.

"Part of the Jaycees creed is that 'service to humanity is the best work of life.' I'm able to do something for my own community," Smith said. "Plus, I'm growing and meeting new people.

"What upsets me is people who don't want to learn, and people who have no compassion. I guess it's because of the job I have. I have learned to control a lot. I like to see myself as somebody who has made a difference, no matter how small."

Few candidates face primary challenge

Incumbent reps seek re-election

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Only two of western Wayne County's six incumbent state representatives will face primary challenges Aug. 2.

Incumbents Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, and John Bennett, D-Redford Township, will face primary challengers.

There will also be a Democratic primary challenge for the seat currently held by state Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, and a GOP primary for the right to challenge Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland.

THE RACES by district:

● 33rd District — Incumbent William Keith, D-Garden City, will face Republican Harold Richardson of Inkster in the fall. Keith was first elected in 1972. The district includes Garden City and Inkster.

● 34th District — Incumbent Bennett will face James Bailey of Redford in the Democratic primary. The winner will face GOP candidate Brady Walker of Livonia in the fall. Bennett was first elected in 1964. The district includes Redford and a section of eastern Livonia.

● 35th District — Incumbent Bankes will again meet Ray Tucker for the GOP nomination. Bankes defeated Tucker two years ago. She was first elected in 1984. The winner will face Democratic challenger Matthew Abel in the fall.

The district includes most of Livonia.

● 36th District — Democratic challengers Jeanne Stempien and Dwight Douglass seek the seat held by Gerald Law, R-Plymouth. Stempien, a Northville resident, is a Schoolcraft College trustee. Law was first elected in 1982. The district includes Plymouth, Northville and Plymouth, Northville and eastern Canton townships.

● 37th District — Incumbent James Kosteva, D-Canton Township, was first elected in 1984. He will face Republican David Dossette of Romulus in the fall.

The district includes Canton, Wayne, Belleville, Romulus and Van Buren Township.

● 38th District — Incumbent Justine Barns, D-Westland, was first elected in 1982. Republicans George Erdei and Kenneth Raupp also filed for the seat.

The district includes Westland only. Erdei unsuccessfully challenged Barns for the seat two years ago.

State representatives serve two-year terms. They earn $39,881 per year.

Dem race for sheriff heats up

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano will face challengers Richard Novak and Bruce Kennedy in the Aug. 2 Democratic primary.

The sheriff's primary should add spice to an otherwise bland primary election for area voters.

Only one of the area's four county commissioners will face a primary challenge, while two others are running unopposed.

There will be challenges in Democratic primaries for clerk and treasurer, but no primary battle for prosecutor and no race at all for register of deeds.

Ficano, sheriff since 1983, will face Novak, a former undersheriff and Kennedy, Grosse Pointe police chief, for the four-year post. No Republicans filed for the post.

Both Ficano and Novak are Livonia residents.

In other county races:

● Clerk James Killeen will face Democratic challengers Ed Wilson and Robert Zwolak. The winner will face Republican challenger Lawrence Schweiger of Livonia in the fall.

● Treasurer Raymond Wojtowicz will face Democratic challengers James Gallagher and Joseph Walsh. No Republicans filed for the post.

● Prosecuting Attorney John O'Hair, a Democrat, will face Republican challenger Donnelly W. Hadden in the fall.

● Register of Deeds Forest Youngblood, a Democrat, is running unopposed.

In area county commission races:

● 9th District — Incumbent Richard Mannning, D-Redford Township, faces a primary challenge from Anthony Klukowski and Richard Poole. Both challengers are Detroit residents. No Republican filed for the seat.

The district includes Redford Township and a portion of Detroit west of Evergreen Road.

● 10th District — Incumbent Susan Heintz, R-Northville Township, is running unopposed. Heintz has been a commissioner since 1986. The district includes Livonia, Plymouth, Northville and Plymouth and Northville townships.

● 11th District — Incumbent Milton Mack, D-Wayne, is running unopposed. Mack has been a commissioner since 1983. The district includes Canton Township, Wayne, Romulus, Belleville, Flat Rock, Rockwood and Van Buren, Sumpter and Huron townships.

● 12th District — Incumbent Kay Beard, D-Inkster, will face Republican challenger Gerald Cox in the fall. Beard has been a commissioner since 1978. The district includes Westland, Garden City and Inkster. Cox, a Garden City resident, is a former Schoolcraft College trustee. In 1984, he ran an unsuccessful write-in

Pursell

There will be challenges for two of the area's three U.S. Congressional seats during the state's Aug. 2 primary election.

Incumbent Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, faces a challenge from Ann Arbor resident Paul S. Jensen in the 2nd District GOP primary. State Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor, will face Ann Arbor resident Dean Baker in the district's Democratic primary. Baker unsuccessfully challenged Pursell for the seat in 1986.

The district includes northern Livonia, Plymouth and Plymouth Township as well as other communities in Wayne, Washtenaw, Lenewee, Jackson, Hillsdale and Branch counties.

FOUR REPUBLICANS will face off for the right to face incumbent William Ford, D-Taylor, for the 15th District seat.

Peter Bundarin of Canton, Glen Kassel of Westland, Robert Fodor of Westland and Burl Adkins of Southgate have filed for the seat. All but Fodor ran for the seat two years ago, with Kassel gaining the GOP nomination. At the time, Adkins ran as a Democrat.

Eric Blankenburg of Westland announced he was running as a Libertarian Party candidate for the seat.

The district includes southern Livonia, Westland, Garden City and Canton Township, as well as other communities in Wayne and Washtenaw counties.

In the 17th District, incumbent Sander Levin, D-Southfield, will face GOP challenger Dennis Fessland of Huntington Woods in the fall.

Charles Hahn of Pleasant Ridge has announced he will run as a Libertarian party candidate for the seat.

The district includes Southfield and Redford Township, as well as other Wayne and Oakland County communities.

The Congressional salary is $89,500 a year.

9 candidates vie for new court seats

Barsamian

Observer area voters will select four candidates in the Aug. 2 primary for two new Michigan Appeals Court seats.

Nine candidates have filed for the two new seats. Candidates include: Y. Gladys Barsamian, Thomas J. Brennan, Patrick Conlin, Gary Edward Gardner, Richard P. Hathaway, John R. Kirwan, Martin Thomas Maher, Maureen Reilly and M. John Shamo.

Barsamian and Maher are Wayne County Probate judges. Brennan, Hathaway, Kirwan and Reilly are Wayne County Circuit judges. Conlin is a Washtenaw County Circuit judge. Shamo is a Detroit Recorders Court judge. Gardner is a Dearborn Heights-based attorney.

New seats were created in the 1st Appeals Court District, serving Wayne, Washtenaw, Jackson, Lenawee, Livingston and Monroe counties.

Incumbents John Gillis and Roman Gribbs also filed for appeals court seats.

Incumbent Wayne County Circuit Court judges filing for re-election include: William Leo Cahalan, Robert Colombo, Michael Connor, Sharon Tevis Finch, John Hausner, James Mies, Michael Stacey, Cynthia Stephens, Paul Teranes, Kaye Tertzag and Helene White. One challenger, Andrea Ferrera a Trenton attorney, also filed for the court.

In a special election to fill an unexpired term, incumbent J. Phillip Jourdan will face attorney Charles Frangie of Dearborn. The other candidates seek new six-year terms.

No primaries are necessary in those two races.

District's strengths, weaknesses examined

This is the final part of a four-part series examining the views of the 15 people running for the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

Four seats are open on the board and the election is Monday, June 13.

What do you see as the school district's major strengths and weaknesses?

Leon R. Watkins — In assessing the school district's major strengths and weaknesses we seem to have a paradox. Unquestionably our finest resource lies in the human dimension. The kids, the parents, the teachers, the concerned citizen. We want to see our kids excel academically and experience as many creative extracurricular activities as possible. Yet we have failed to effectively support and communicate to the Plymouth-Canton community what it takes to maintain financially sound schools.

Mark Beauchene — One strength of this community and its schools is its people. When fully aware of the ramifications of any decision they respond. They are just outstanding. Another strength is our children. They live in a difficult time, more so than when we adults were younger. They need our help and support. Our weakness stems from a basic human shortcoming. While we spend much of our day communicating, we do it very poorly. It requires constant effort to improve our ability to communicate, either individually or organizationally. I feel that I could help improve communication between the schools and the community.

Milan Emanuele — The strengths of the district are the high caliber of staff, strong grassroots community support, excellent industrial tax base, infrastructure of the district is in good shape, and very strong core curriculum at the elementary level. The deficits are complacent administratives at the board office, the CEP is experiencing a negative image, discipline procedures and security methods need to be re-evaluated and changes made immediately; Plymouth must break away from the inbreeding of central office staff and new blood and talent with new ideas be brought into the district, and secondary curriculum need to be re-evaluated and updated to stay current with the job trends well into the next century.

John E. Thomas — Strengths: a good reputation, strong economic base, and generally competent administrative and teaching staff and a very capable student body. The ultimate strength of any school system is based upon the intelligence of the teacher standing in front of the classroom and the capacity of the students listening and taking direction from that teacher. Weaknesses: system has gotten very large and, as a consequence, become quite impersonal as to the needs of some of the staff and some students.

Barbara G. Graham — I see the school district's major strength as having one of the best tax bases in the state. Its weakness seems to me to be that this board and staff has been less than judicious in their spending.

Frank Riley — A current strength is the school district's enjoyment of an excellent reputation which is quickly losing its reality. Also the excellent and sincere dedicated teachers and staff personnel who manage to support the system in view of its embarrassingly low rating of 29th out of 35 area districts in cost spent per student.

Mary Dahn — Major strengths are language department and vocational courses offered. Weaknesses are low MEAP test scores 10th-grade level in math and science.

E.J. McClendon — The greatest weakness is in the lack of adequate financing. I think most Plymouth-Canton citizens are not aware that the good schools we have are fourth from the bottom in Wayne County in dollars per child spent on education. The greatest strength is in the school's instructional programs. Our outcome-based educational program and instructional skills intervention are widely recognized.

Allen C. Kinsler — Having lived in the City of Detroit, I can unequivocally say that the main strengths of the Plymouth-Canton district are the emphasis placed upon education by the parents and the willingness of the community to support the schools. Unfortunately, like many successful school districts, the direction of the schools has been handed over to supposed education specialists. This school district has been the subject of too many failed experiments, which have cost way too much for the poor results obtained.

Kent A. Jensen — I view the major strengths of the district to be financial growth of the communities, physical facilities, a young, active community, and dedicated employees. I view the major weaknesses of the district to be matching needs and resources, communicating needs to the community, and discipline and standards.

Annette J. Remsburg — This school district has gained a great deal of respect through actively initiating innovative ideas into viable programs for students. Growth prevents stagnation. That same growth also presents instability as a potential obstacle. Public misunderstanding of funding requirements and restrictions now exist. Apathy of the electorate is possibly the most difficult problem this district faces. Promoting the value of improving public education is our responsibility.

Mary M. Roberson — Among the major strengths of the school district I will mention the Begindergarten program, the wide variety of programs available to children with special needs and the basic concept of the CEP. Unfortunately, I have seen a lack of respect paid to our teachers, particularly teachers new to the district. It is too hard for a good teacher to break into the system. I also see a very weak physical education program. P.E. should be a required daily course starting at kindergarten and continuing through the 12th grade.

Lester W. Walker — I see the major strengths of the district as the commitment and dedication of the entire staff; strong parent involvement; strong emphasis on communication developed since the serious strike in fall 1983; a long-term administrative program of careful fiscal planning and innovative use of facilities and personnel; and a cohesive school board supportive of employee needs and responsive to citizen concerns. The major weaknesses are the present funding crisis and our inability to convince the public of its seriousness, an ongoing shortage of necessary classroom space and a problem with school locations. The new areas of population growth in the district are in locations largely without school buildings.

Richard W. Sumpter — This district's weaknesses are very apparent. It is a lack of credibility and communication as exampled by the inability to communicate the need for additional revenue. Ask yourself, do you know an override of the Headlee rollback is not a new tax but only allows the district to collect the taxes you authorized? Did you know reductions in state aid are calculated on the SEV before the reduction applied by the Headlee Amendment? The strengths of this school district have been and should be the academic and sociological development of the students.

Janet C. Drass — The strengths are the varied curriculum and that a large percentage of the students attend college. The weaknesses are poor community relations and the inability to reduce spending levels.

Rouge cleanup set for Saturday

Early interest has been strong, Rouge Rescue organizers said, but hundreds of people are still needed at each site to make Saturday's third annual volunteer cleanup a success.

Friends of the Rouge, the organization sponsoring the event, seeks 3,000 volunteers to clear debris from river banks.

Volunteers are asked to register 8:30 a.m. Saturday at listed sites. They'll put in about three hours work at most sites, though work will continue until 4 p.m. — and again Sunday — in Southfield.

Gloves and painter's caps will be provided. Participants are advised against wearing shorts or short-sleeved garments.

"People have been calling in steadily, I'd say we have about 75-100 people," Livonia organizer Sharon Sabat said. "We also have the people from Redford whose site fell through."

Because a site and township equipment weren't made available, Redford-area volunteers are asked to join with Livonia volunteers at the Levan Knolls cleanup site, at Levan and Hines Drive.

Volunteers need not sign up at sites within their home cities if other sites are closer. Volunteers are also encouraged from residents of communities that aren't sponsoring a cleanup.

"In the past, we've had people from Sterling Heights, Livonia, even out-of-state," Southfield coordinator Steve Marshall said.

Wayne County registration sites include:

- Canton Township — Township Administration Building, Canton Center and Proctor roads. Call Kim Scherschligt, 397-1000, to register in advance.
- Livonia/Redford — Levan Knolls Picnic Area, Levan at Hines Drive, along the Middle Rouge Parkway. Call Sharon Sabat, 421-2000, Ext. 221, to register in advance.
- Livonia/Westland — Nankin Mills Recreation Area, Ann Arbor Trail and Hines Drive, along the Middle Rouge Parkway. Call Dave Schneider, 567-4700, to register in advance. The site is sponsored by City Management Corp.
- Plymouth/Plymouth Township — Riverside and Hines Drive Comfort Station, along the Middle Rouge Parkway. Call James Penn, 453-1234, to register in advance.
- Westland — Holiday Nature Preserve, Cowan Road entrance, west of Wayne Road. Call Patrick Kobylarz, 421-8190 to register in advance. The site is sponsored by the Holiday Nature Preserve Association.

Oakland County registration sites include:

- Beverly Hills — Detroit Country Day School, 13 Mile west of Lahser. Call Michael Bouchard, 645-5664 to register in advance. The site is co-sponsored by Oakland County.
- Birmingham — City metered parking lot, east of North Woodward, south of Oak. Call Robert J. Fox, 645-0731 to register in advance.
- Farmington Hills — Boy's Republic, 28000 W. Nine Mile, just west of Inkster Road. Call Dale Countegan, 473-9520 to register in advance.
- Southfield — Beech Woods Park, southeast of the Beech/Nine Mile intersection. Call Steve Marshall, 354-9540 to register in advance.

Enrichment classes for regular and gifted students are scheduled this summer at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Adventures in Learning, a program for talented and gifted students ages 4-14, offers classes aimed at challenging students. Only students certified as gifted are eligible to enroll.

"We were not meeting the needs of regular students who were interested in taking classes," said Saundra Florek of Schoolcraft College, in explaining why the College for Kids program has been scheduled for the first time this summer.

The program offers eight classes.

- "Are You Ready for Algebra?" prepares students for algebra by introducing them to symbols and terminology, including integers, fractions and decimals. Individual assessment and tutors are available.

- "Musical Revue" provides experience in singing, acting, makeup and staging. A 45-minute revue will be planned and performed by students.
- "ARTimals" provides instruction in painting and drawing techniques, using both real and imaginary animals.

"ADVENTURES IN LEARNING" offers a series of classes in computers, math, science, and language and arts for gifted students 8-14 years. Three classes are also offered for gifted children ages 4-7.

Computer classes include instruction in basic and advanced programming, use of personal microcomputers, small and serious program writing, filing and accessing files. Beginning typewriting is also offered.

Math courses include instruction in prealgebra and exploring mathematical concepts through the use of a computer.

Science courses include exploration in physics, chemistry, biology, advanced biology and in such modern sciences as evolutionary biology, microbiology, comparative anatomy and ecology.

A science class titled "Searching for E.T." features experiments in contacting aliens on planets circling distant stars.

Language and arts instruction includes conversational German and Spanish, imaginative writing, creative dramatics and beginning and advanced drawing.

One course, the "Ins and Outs of Video Production," provides hands-on experience in video production. Another, "Education Safari on Campus," combines science and the arts through on-campus exploration.

Three classes, "The Wonders of Science," "Creative Learning for Preschool Children" and the "Rainbow of Literature" are scheduled for children ages 4-7.

REGISTRATION FOR classes in both programs is open in person, by mail or by telephone. Mailed registration must be completed no later than July 1.

Senior class: Elementary school students welcome grandparents, others as special guests

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Helen and James Lawson and their granddaughter, Rachel Lukasik, enjoy the day at Isbister Elementary School.

By Julie Brown
staff writer

The children at Isbister Elementary School had some special visitors last week.

The school in Plymouth Township held its "Grandparents/Special Persons Day" Friday, May 27. Just over 300 visitors came to the school, said George Belvitch, principal at Isbister.

"We just thought it would be a fun thing to do."

The day gave students and educators at Isbister a chance to show off their school.

Visitors came from nearby communities; they also traveled from more distant places in Illinois, Indiana and Florida, the principal said.

"So they came from all over. It's kind of neat."

The day started with welcoming ceremonies in the gym. Grandparents and other special people also participated in various classroom activities. A lunch was part of the day's activities.

SOME MOTHERS and fathers participated in the day's fun, Belvitch said. Neighbors and baby sitters also came to Isbister.

Kindergartener Kristine Franklin and first-grader Jessica Franklin had two special visitors — their grandmothers, Norma Evans of Westland and Dolores Yurmanovic of Macon, Mich., participated in the day's activities.

"One went with one, one went with the other," Evans said. She enjoyed the day at Isbister with her granddaughters. "I like to see what they're doing in school."

Jessica was in a classroom play, Kristine was in a group that sang some songs for the visitors.

"I think it's good for the children to know their grandparents are interested," Evans said. "I think it's important that families show an interest in their children."

The day at Isbister was quite different from what Evans remembered from her school days.

"Very much more relaxed." During her school days, there were "no snacks, no sitting on the floor."

Dolores Yurmanovic agreed that school days have changed with the times.

"Parochial school was never like this," she said with a smile.

HER SCHOOL was stricter and "more regimental." School was school, play was play, and there was a distinct difference." Yurmanovic wore a uniform during her school days, unlike the students at Isbister.

Yurmanovic was glad she was able to participate in the "Grandparents/Special Persons Day" and didn't mind making the drive from Macon, a community south of Saline.

"I travel that much anyhow, just to visit them.

"I think it was real nice, very nice. It was nice to see this many grandparents are interested."

House OKs tax plan

But Senate GOP may balk at school tax shift-hike

By Tim Richard
staff writer

It's up to the state Senate today to decide whether to place before voters a constitutional tax shift that will pump $500 million more into public schools.

House Republicans late Wednesday reluctantly gave the House Democratic majority enough votes to put the proposal on the Aug. 2 ballot. Deadline for Senate action is Friday.

"Only a handful believe it will pass," said House GOP leader Paul Hillegonds, R-Holland, who urged a yes vote "most reluctantly."

"Even fewer will campaign for it," he said. "A $500 million tax increase won't go down with the voters." He warned House Speaker Gary Owen that "if the Senate doesn't accept this, school finance reform isn't going to go away. The speaker declared it dead. It won't die."

THE HOUSE VOTE was 79 in favor and 25 against, with 74 needed for a two-thirds majority.

Western Wayne representatives from the Observer & Eccentric area voted 4-1 in favor. Supporting it were Justine Barns, D-Westland; William Keith, D-Garden City; James Kosteva, D-Canton; and Gerald Law, R-Plymouth.

Opposed was Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia.

John Bennett, D-Redford, was present but didn't vote — in effect a negative vote.

On the Senate side, Sen. Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron, doubted his GOP colleagues would bow to the Democrats' demand that the issue be put on the Aug. 2 primary ballot, when voter turnout is low.

REPUBLICAN thinking generally is that the proposal's "constituents" — school officials, teachers, PTAs and parents — will be inactive during July, when the campaign must be conducted.

Said Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, just before the session: "The governor doesn't want anything to interfere with his (environmental) bond issue. It (school finance reform) is not his priority."

But James Kosteva, D-Canton, said, "If it (reform proposal) is good, it should go any time.

"The governor doesn't want it in November conflicting with the votes on (Medicaid funded) abortions and the bond funding. It could become a local partisan issue," Kosteva said.

THE BALLOT proposal would amend seven sections of the state constitution and is tied to several statutory changes which the Legislature would have to make.

Known legally as Senate Joint Resolution K (15th House substitute), the Aug. 2 ballot plan would:

- Raise the sales tax from 4 percent to 6 percent. Three-fourths of that revenue would be used to reduce property taxes, and one-fourth to increase state aid to local schools.
- Cut school operating taxes by at least eight mills ($8 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation).
- Raise $500 million in new revenue.
- Earmark for schools all beer and wine taxes, the first 8 percent of liquor taxes and 18 cents per pack of cigarettes.
- Capture 45 percent of new commercial and industrial school operating taxes into the school aid fund.

THE BUSINESS tax sharing feature particularly bothered suburban lawmakers in the high-tech belt stretching from Auburn Hills across western Wayne County to Ann Arbor.

The Michigan State Chamber of Commerce called it "unacceptable" because it will penalize "those communities that are active in economic development."

But Speaker Owen, D-Ypsilanti, blamed the inequities in resources between districts on ancient school boundaries. "That reform (boundaries) would require political courage — or political stupidity — that's not present in this body today."

As for the $500 million revenue increase, Owen called it "a relatively small step — not a significant amount of money — on a $5 billion problem."

Business and Republicans also objected to a lack of a prohibition of extending the sales tax to services.

SC enrollments increase

Schoolcraft College enrollments are on the upswing. But that leaves college trustees wondering if the economy is on the downswing.

Schoolcraft's spring enrollment was 3,228, the most in four years, according to figures released last week.

College figures show the number of spring semester students had declined steadily since 1983, the last recession year.

That changed this spring with a 9.5 percent increase in students.

Because of their lower price, compared with four-year institutions, and because of the variety of job-training programs they offer, community colleges generally see greater enrollments during tough economic times.

UM-D schedules pond tour

Anyone who is young at heart is invited to join the University of Michigan-Dearborn natural areas office in a pond tour Saturday, June 11, at 10 a.m.

The aquatic tour will take place in UM-D's Environmental Study Area, which was once part of the Henry Ford Estate. The pond is in the former rose garden of Clara Ford.

The pond hosts a variety of aquatic species, including frogs, water striders, diving beetles and whirligig beetles.

Tour participants are invited to "fish" out particular aquatic life and examine them individually under a microscope. The water animals will then be returned to the pond.

"This tour is definitely not a spectator's sport," said Mike Hayes, supervisor of the area. "No one should be afraid of getting a little messy."

UM-D is on Evergreen Road, across from the Fairlane Town Center. For other information on the UM-D nature programs, call 593-5338.

School board

3 candidates stand out

WITH 15 CANDIDATES running for two seats on the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education, residents may have a hard time figuring out who to select.

We have interviewed all 15 candidates, examined their backgrounds and community involvement, seen some of them in action at a candidates' night and reviewed their responses to a series of questions.

Voters will be able to select only two candidates when they go to the polls Monday, June 13.

We have selected three candidates who stood out from the rest based on their abilities, knowledge of the district and responses to the questions. All three would do a good job during the next four years.

We endorse incumbent E.J. McClendon, along with challengers Annette Remsburg and Mark Beauchene.

McClendon has served on the board of education for three terms. He is a professor emeritus at the University of Michigan and a private consultant.

He has a strong grasp of school-related issues and his experience on the board will serve the school district well as it continues to grapple with financial problems. McClendon has been an effective member of the board.

Remsburg, currently a substitute teacher in the Southfield and Wayne-Westland school districts, has taken an active role in learning about the local school district.

Her educational background and willingness to listen would be assets on the board of education.

Beauchene also seems to be a candidate who would take a hands-on approach to setting policy on the board.

The engineer with Chrysler Motors also has shown his willingness to learn about the district and likely will follow through on his promise to get more people involved in the school system.

A number of other candidates, including incumbent Lester Walker, are qualified and capable of serving the residents of the district.

But E.J. McClendon, Annette Remsburg and Mark Beauchene are at the head of this class of candidates.

Rape bill gets prompt action

LEGISLATION making it illegal for a man to rape his wife in Michigan is one signature away from becoming law.

That is good news and good law. The governor should hasten to sign the bill that passed the legislature rapidly and resoundingly.

Clearly, our senators and representatives deserve credit for their speedy action and unqualified support of the bill. Not a single lawmaker voted against it.

Our senators and representatives deserve credit for their speedy action and unqualified support of the bill. Not a single lawmaker voted against it.

The legislation, sponsored by Rep. Shirley Johnson, R-Royal Oak, eliminates a ridiculous legal loophole limiting a woman's right to file rape charges against her husband. Under current law, only a woman who has filed for divorce and is living apart from her husband can claim to have been sexually assaulted by him.

Johnson said tragic tales of sexual assault and violence told by witnesses during committee hearings carried great weight. Several county prosecutors pushed for passage of the bill.

Lawmakers proved they can work quickly and effectively when the issue requires.

Now about that school finance reform package.

Veto needed

House bill clouds sunshine law

GOV. BLANCHARD showed he can stand up to the Legislature by vetoing a popular prescription drug bill for which there was no funding.

Blanchard needs to summon up his courage again by vetoing House Bill 5415, another crippling amendment to the Open Meetings Act.

This bill was part of the annual attempt to cover the "sunshine law" with clouds. Last year the Parole Board was exempted, and this year it is the Public Service Commission that is to be allowed to operate in the shade.

LAST WEEK'S state Senate vote was 29 to 6 in favor of gloom.

We are less than proud of our area's own senators in this matter. It was supported by Doug Cruce, R-Troy, Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, Robert Geake, R-Northville, George Hart, D-Dearborn, and Rudy Nichols, R-Waterford.

Sens. William Faust, D-Westland, and Richard Fessler, R-Commerce, had excused absences that day.

If he vetoes this measure, Blanchard shouldn't fear political consequences because the bill was backed and opposed by both Republicans and Democrats.

The Public Service Commission's excuses for wanting to meet secretly are lame ones. The three members must communicate by circulating written memos because if they discussed our electric and natural gas rates publicly, somebody might want to address them in the "public comment" portion of the agenda. What sad logic.

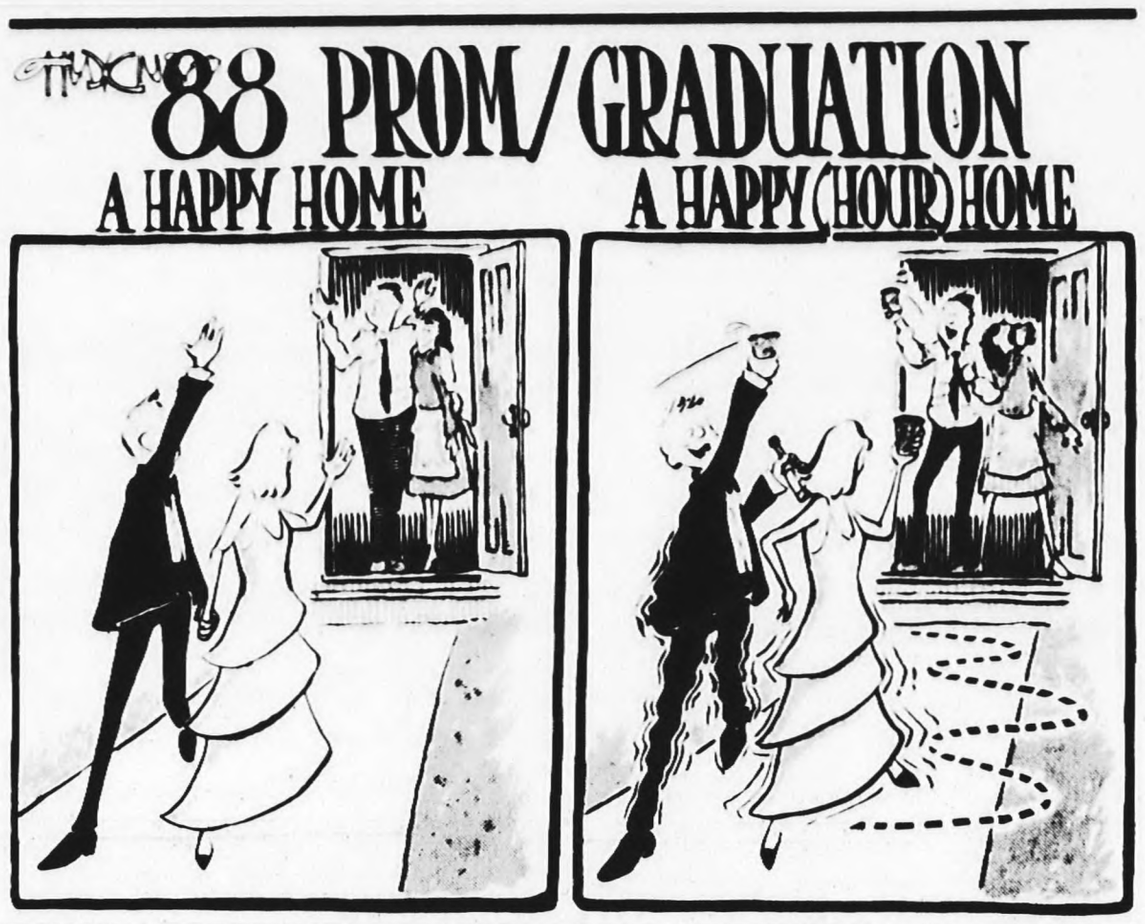

Blanchard needs to summon up his courage again by vetoing House Bill 5415, another crippling amendment to the Open Meetings Act.

Instead the PSC members should try holding open meetings rather than asking to be exempted from something they can't prove is bad.

THE PEOPLE of Michigan deserve to be able to see and hear their policy-making officials out in the open because:

- The public has a right to know what government intends to do before government does it to them.
- The public has a right to know who else is influencing our policy makers.
- The public has a right to its own contribution to the process.
- The public has a right to know how members of a board tried to amend or change a plan, not just their final yes and no votes.

The public, after all, is paying the utility bills and the taxes that support the PSC.

Things that make sane people go stir crazy

Steve Barnaby

MAYBE IT'S the weather. After all, that this kind of heat before summer is even legal is the craziest thing. But it sure makes you want to blow off some of this steam about things that drive a normal soul bonkers.

Following are some of my favorites. I'm sure you've got some of your own. After reading mine, be sure to mail in some of yours.

THE WASTED time and money being spent by the Troy City council to fight, of all things, the Big Boy restaurant symbol. Honestly. What has gotten into those folks?

If that is the most important issue facing Troy, residents should feel fortunate. If the Rambo-types on the council stand firm on this world-shaking issue, it only will add to an already overburdened court docket and still more taxpayer expense.

I guess power really does go to some folks' heads. At least, in this case, it sure has given them a chance to abuse it.

If they really want to tackle a problem, why don't they try:

TRAFFIC JAMS in Oakland County. But Big Beaver Road and its environs are just the tip of the iceberg. My favorite road to hate is Haggerty running up through the Lake country. The gem of inefficiency has evolved, or maybe it's devolved, because folks opposed the extension of I-275.

What a dumb idea.

Opponents were sure that if they acted like ostriches with heads in sand, the traffic would never get any worse, even though that area of Oakland County is one of the fastest developing.

Not only do they have the development, they've got an around-the-clock traffic headache.

The only things that could be worse are the:

TRUCKS ON THE expressways that insist on driving in the fast lane, the middle lane and the slow lane. In other words, the knights of the road are taking over the entire highway.

Wayne County's portion of the Jeffries Freeway has to hog the honor for being the worst when it comes to trucks — especially from Telegraph out to the I-275 interchange. Whatever happened to the law that said trucks must drive in the right lane? Sure seems like state troopers could lend a hand dealing with that and:

TRUCKS THAT haul gravel and don't cover their cargo. Sure rocks the heck out of insurance rates for all the cracked windshields that have to be replaced.

Of course, even though that law is hardly ever enforced, there should be a law against:

AUTO DEALERSHIPS that put their license plate holder on your car after you take it in for servicing. What gall. The markup consumers pay on cars and contingent repairs is bad enough, but when dealers think you ought to be a free mobile advertisement, that's just going too far.

The only other people with more gall are:

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS who are overpaid and who insist on asking for even more. Give me a break. Out of all the bureaucrats I've ever met, they are the ones with the most over-inflated image of self-importance on earth.

A close examination of salaries and benefits among suburban school superintendents makes the Detroit district's chauffeur controversy look like chicken feed in comparison. At least one suburban school CEO will rake in $120,000 before his contract expires.

Traffic light is necessary

To the editor:

I'm writing you with the concern of Plymouth-Canton residents with the Canton Center Road-Ann Arbor Road crossing. With many accidents in the past, this one stands out the most.

On May 3, a young girl was pronounced D.O.A. in a car accident. This very crossing is very busy and dangerous even more now that they are putting underground water pipes in and have blocked off McClumpha and Joy roads. The traffic is directed to Canton Center Road, making this an even more dangerous place, if that is possible.

I didn't know the victim that well, and I don't know if a traffic light would make a difference in this situation, but I do know for a fact that this girl, Julie Monte, was attending Salem High School and was on her way there that day. She was in her last year of high school, probably counting down the days until school was out like any other teenager. She'll never be able to attend her senior prom, or have a future.

My family has brought up in the past how dangerous this crossing is, and a member of my family has stated several times, especially recently, that "it would probably take a death for them to put a light here." I just wish they (Wayne County) would.

It scares me to think that it would take a death to put one up. I will be driving this summer and I fear trying to pull out on this street (Ann Arbor Road). I'll try to avoid it as much as I possibly can until I can feel safe again; or in other words, until Wayne County puts a traffic light there. Boy, is it weird to fear something in your hometown. I know a light would cost an awful lot, but a life is priceless.

Schools need our support

To the editor:

Our children need your votes on June 13 to maintain the quality of their educations and our community's future.

Because of the Headlee Amendment, the school district will be operating with $3.7 million less revenue this year. The Headlee Amendment reduces the number of state-authorized mills, which are based on property values in proportion to inflation. This means when property values and taxes increase, our schools get less money, from state aid.

Therefore, the Headlee Amendment states that schools must operate with 3 mills cut from their 1988-89 budget.

In order to maintain our schools' 1987-88 operating expense level, we need to vote yes on June 13 to override the Headlee Amendment.

If we don't, we will have many cuts in next year's budget — less teachers, more children in the classrooms, less money for supplies, no extracurricular activities, and the total elimination of all after-hours use of schools for the many programs and recreations that both children and adults now enjoy and take for granted.

For many people, this increase would amount to the total of a weekend's entertainment.

Is the sacrifice of one weekend worth your child's future?

Canton

Don't force tax override

To the editor:

Residents today are living within their budget. Plymouth-Canton schools must also operate within their budget. School budget problems would not exist if the school board operated within its budget.

Property taxes are high enough and SEV on homes in Canton have also been raised. School board members "Wake up!" Stop being a "yes board." Voters have turned down two Headlee override attempts and a millage increase proposal since February 1987 and yet this "yes board" still is trying to force an override.

Canton voters say no on this override. Superintendent Hoben and school board members wake up and stop trying to force this override down the voters' throats.

It's too early to start with dating services

Fred DeLano

Being single is more than a state of mind. For many, it's too soon to start using dating services to gain companionship.

MUCH OF the junk mail I throw away with no more than a quick look. But I awarded one particular item greater attention recently, simply because of the specific manner in which the envelope was addressed.

It read, "To The Single Resident At Apt. 6." This was followed by my correct street number, town and ZIP code. The envelope itself bore no return address, but use of the phrase "single resident" stirred my curiosity.

Perhaps by coincidence, it had arrived in my mailbox exactly three months to the day following my wife's death. It was an obvious form letter, starting with the friendly capitalized greeting, "Hello There." Then came this pitch:

"ARE YOU finding it difficult to meet compatible people? Millions of single, divorced and widowed men and women just like you find that conventional channels of social contact are either too limited or the 'people they meet are just not my type of people.'

"You know that somewhere out there is the right person — that man or woman who shares your leisure interests, your moral outlook, the person who has an intellect, temperament, economic and educational background that's just right for you."

Then came a plug for this dating service, described as "designed to bring together the right type woman with the right type man on a regular referral basis," employing such advanced techniques as "in-depth testing, intellectual testing, as well as personal interviewing and personal evaluation."

Clients are supposed to be 18 or over and either single, widowed, divorced or separated. I was urged to complete an enclosed "confidential personality inventory" and mail it back without obligation.

I was assured that after the test had been evaluated I would find the results "fascinating." I presume any further involvement would signal the start of payments.

I SHOULDN'T have been surprised at receiving such a letter, but I was. It was too soon.

It reminded me a little bit of a Seattle hooker who sat down next to me in a Las Vegas bar one night in April, except that I didn't have to fill out a 50-question "personality inventory" to learn the price.

If you were in the dating service business, I am sure that in addition to normal media advertising you would have a staff to read the death notices in newspapers and divorce verdicts in Wayne and Oakland county legal publications, thus building up a mailing list for just such a "Hello There" letter.

I THINK Sally's approach in Las Vegas was more interesting, and I'm just guessing at her name. We never did close a contract, but if she had given me her business card I would gladly have forwarded her this questionnaire for possible use if she ever vacations in cultural Detroit.

"Should the theory of evolution be taught in public schools?" would be a marvelous conversational icebreaker for male and female strangers in any saloon. Then she might follow with, "Does being shy cause you problems?"

If she nudged too close, you could ask, "Does an open display of affection normally cause you to respond?" quickly followed by, "In your opinion, are you an affectionate and warm person?"

Then you could show how you look to the future by asking, "Are you usually a sound sleeper?"

Until right now I intended to throw this sheet of 50 questions away. Instead, I think I'll give the letter and questions to a couple of divorced friends in an attempt to play Cupid. But it may not work because nowhere does it ask the respondent to write down his or her bank balance.

keeping up with government

Looking for information about state government? The League of Women Voters has a toll-free telephone service (1-800-292-5823) that may be helpful.

The league's Citizen Information Center in Lansing offers to help people find out about such things as pending legislation, the state constitution, election laws, voting regulations or tax information.

The telephone is answered from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. weekdays.

The telephone service is paid for by the league's education fund. The League of Women Voters is a nonprofit organization that works to keep voters interested and informed about governmental issues.

The Island Queen excursion boat offers Kensington Park patrons a 45-minute cruise.

Tim Richard

I WAS BARELY out of swaddling clothes and able to peer out the window of the '41 Chevy as my dad drove out old Grand River Avenue and pointed to the Huron River.

They had built a dam and were making an artificial lake that flooded stumps and bottom lands for miles up the valley. There was going to be a big park.

When Kent Lake was complete, at 1,200 acres, we would park the '46 Ford along the gravel road and have picnics on the undeveloped shoreline. There I polished my cane pole technique at the expense of voracious sunfish.

THE PLACE became known first as Kensington Metropolitan Park, then as Kensington Metropark. They dedicated it May 30, 1948, or 40 years ago this week.

It would be some years before I became politically conscious enough to know that the "they" responsible for it were far-sighted leaders of the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority.

Back in the Great Depression, Dr. Henry S. Curtis and Professor Harlow O. Whittemore envisioned a series of day-use parks along the Huron and Clinton rivers, serving people of five southeastern Michigan counties. The legendary Leroy C. Smith, a Wayne County highway engineer, guided passage of an enabling act through the state Legislature.

Kensington was park No. 1 and, to me, the jewel of the 14-park system.

Other people discovered my delightful spot: 60 million total visitors, 1.6 million a year, 50,000 on an early summer Sunday. That's about how many baseball fans pack Tiger Stadium.

SOON THE WEEDS were replaced with picnic shelters, two bathing beaches, boat docks, a golf course, a bike-hike trail, a nature center (where they let you touch the animal pelts'), a winter sports hill, a gentleman's farm and a sternwheel ship.

Today you get there by the I-96 freeway instead of that crazy, three-lane Grand River. The sailboats are more colorful than in the early days. There didn't use to be the bicyclists and skiers along the circuitous pathway.

Otherwise Kensington hasn't changed a lot visually in those four decades. You don't need to fool around when you have natural beauty.

The park patrol still vigorously enforces a 10 mph speed limit, so folks in small boats and canoes are safe, and anglers don't have their guts bounced around by the wake of speeders. A gigantic deer herd that most people never see melts in and out of the woods. Every island but one is still off-limits to people, so Canada geese and ducks can nest safely.

It's one of the safest places in Michigan. Beaches are well patrolled, and you have to do something wildly foolish to drown there.

In fall, the colors are still the most spectacular of any place this side of the AuSable.

THERE REALLY was a town of Kensington, for which the park was named. You can see it on old maps, circa 1850. One is in the lobby of the Oakland County Building in Pontiac, another in the basement meeting room of the Oakland County Road Commission in Beverly Hills.

Only thing left of the town is a cemetery on the south side of Grand River just west of the Huron River. It's well maintained, and many of the pioneer gravestones have been replaced by marble monuments.

The town collapsed when its "wildcat" bank went bust during the Jackson Depression of the 1830s.

The town straddled old Grand River on both sides of the Huron River, according to the plat map — just about the same spot where my dad pointed out the new park development more than 40 years ago.

It's just as well the town didn't survive. Can you imagine how a natural jewel, like Kensington would look surrounded by condos with fertilized lawns and insecticide-sprayed trees, and powerboats with wakes that can swamp a canoe and propellors that can chop a kid's leg off?

At the Canton Public Library, Jimmy, Becky and their mom, Jane Franko, look for books.

Library: a place for summer adventures

DURING THE summer, students look for a variety of books to read at the Canton Public Library.

"They seem to look for the mysteries," said Judy Teachworth, department head for children's services. Many children enjoy the Encyclopedia Brown mysteries.

Family-type stories by such authors as Beverly Cleary and Betsy Byars are also popular.

"Mainly, they're reading about kids their age," Teachworth said.

Boys enjoy the sports stories written by Matt Christopher. Classics, such as E.B. White's "Charlotte's Web," are perennial favorites.

"They still read those, they still like them."

Participants in the library's "Passport to Adventure" summer reading program will read those books and others.

Registration for the program starts Monday, June 20, and continues through Wednesday, July 27. The program is open to children in first through eighth grades.

REGISTRATION FOR the summer reading program must be done in person at the library, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton. For more information, call 397-0999.

Librarians encourage program participants to try new authors. Students may tend to read books by the same authors.

"So do adults," Teachworth said. Librarians encourage children to read books they enjoy.

Although lighter fiction is popular with summer reading program participants, students also read non-fiction. Books about animals and how-to sports books are popular choices.

Participants in the summer reading program will keep a reading record, indicating what books they've read. Those who read at least five books will receive a certificate.

The program at the Canton Public Library will include a "Read A Lottery" contest. For each book read, a student may submit a ticket. A drawing for the "Read A Lottery" contest will be held Thursday, July 28; winners will be notified and their names posted.

Poster contests, designed for the "Passport to Adventure" theme, will also be part of this year's program at the Canton Public Library.

"It's to be done here in the library. They like to do it, and it's fun."

THOSE POSTER contests will include a variety of activities. Posters will be put up at the beginning of the program; students will have the duration of the program to complete the contests.

A family souvenir hunt will be included as an extra activity for this year's program. Students and their families will look for such items as binoculars, a camera, a koala picture and others.

Students will bring four to six of those items into the library at a time. After items are checked, students are to take them home "so that we don't accumulate a garage sale here," Teachworth said.

Students who complete the family souvenir hunt will receive a certificate and a prize.

Several activity sessions will be offered as part of this year's summer reading program at the Canton Public Library. Programs will be held in the first floor meeting room of Canton Township Hall; advance registration is required for all programs and may be completed by telephone or in person.

This year's programs are:

- 2-2:45 p.m. Thursday, July 7. Crossroads Productions will present original dramatic adaptations of "The Frog Prince," "The Old Man and His Children" and "Four Foolish People." Registration may be done after 10 a.m. Thursday, June 30.
- 2-2:45 p.m. Thursday, July 14. Patricia Judd of the Mime Workshop will present a mime program. Registration may be done after 10 a.m. Monday, July 11.
- 2-2:45 p.m. Thursday, July 21. Master magician Daryl Hurst will present easy-to-follow magic, with plenty of audience participation. Registration may be done after 10 a.m. Monday, July 18.
- 7-7:45 p.m. or 8:15-9 p.m. Wednesday, July 27. The SongSisters, Chris Barton and Julie Austin, will perform children's music on a variety of folk instruments, including the guitar, banjo, dulcimer, recorder and flute.

'Mainly, they're reading about kids their age.'

— Judy Teachworth
Canton Public Library

This will be the "Grand Finale" for the summer reading club. Two performance times are offered; family attendance is encouraged. Registration may be done after 10 a.m. Friday, July 22, by telephone or in person.

Finding entertainers for the summer program isn't much of a problem, Teachworth said. Some of the entertainers have participated in previous summer reading programs; they have a rapport with the children.

"The kids really do seem to like the live part of it.

"I think it's good to expose them to that kind of situation. They seem to enjoy it."

MEMBERS OF the Friends of the Library and library volunteers will assist with this year's program. Volunteers and librarians enjoy working on the program, Teachworth said.

"It's one of our favorite times because we get to be out there with the children."

Reading

Books help kids expand horizons

THERE WILL be a whole lot of reading going on this summer at the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth, as different programs will be available to students of all ages.

Students may participate in the "Passport to Adventure" summer reading program. Registration started June 1.

"Passport to Adventure" programs will be held June 21 through July 19 at the library, with the awards celebration Aug. 2.

In the program, students read a variety of books, both fiction and non-fiction.

"It's really going to depend on the child," said Peggy Morgan, children's librarian.

Generally, students read more fiction during the summer, Morgan has found. The fiction shelves at the library are a bit less crowded.

The summertime program is designed to foster a love of reading.

"That's one of the main purposes of having a summer reading program."

READING IS one of many ways to present a story. It's beneficial in that it requires a student to use his or her imagination, "whereas when you watch a video, it's all laid out for you," Morgan said. "They're two very different mediums."

The "Passport to Adventure" program is for students from Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton.

"We wanted to make sure everyone who is interested would be able to attend," Morgan said.

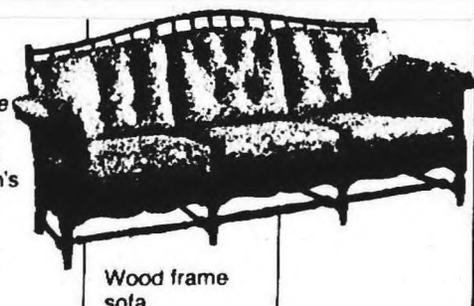

The program is designed to be fun; to broaden students' interests and to expose them to good literature.

Mural adds a festive touch

WORK IS almost done on a mural for the children's department at the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth.

The mural, incorporating a number of storybook characters, was created by Jill Thomas, a senior at Plymouth Salem High School.

Thomas, the daughter of John and Donna Thomas, is putting the finishing touches on the mural in the library's children's room.

The project has been a joint effort of the Friends of the Dunning-Hough Library and the Plymouth Community Arts Council. Barbara Bray, an arts council member, has served as coordinator of the project, assisting Thomas as needed.

"She has done all the painting," Bray said. "I have not touched the mural."

Library officials are grateful the mural is available for all to see.

"We are all excited about it," said Pam Rawlinson, assistant director of the Dunning-Hough Library. "It's very inviting."

The mural is visible through the interior windows in the children's room. Library visitors appreciate having the mural there, Rawlinson said.

"They all say it's nice to have a little color, especially in the children's room. The kids like bright things."

Kids all set to read

The program is designed to be fun; to broaden students' interests and to expose them to good literature.

The Canton Public Library will also offer a "Read to Me" program for preschoolers this summer. Reading record sheets are available at the library; each child will receive a certificate when done with the program.

Registration for the "Read to Me" program starts Monday, June 20, and ends Wednesday, July 20.

Last year, just over 1,000 children participated in the two programs, Teachworth said.

"There's a tremendous involvement." She anticipates that this year's programs will also draw a crowd.

"I think it will be a popular theme."

"The challenge is to read something at your level."

Students age 13 and older may participate in the "Computer Pix" program. Those students can fill out a form at the library indicating about which subjects they'd like to read.

The forms are forwarded to a central location for the Wayne Oakland Library Federation. Students will receive a computer printout with suggested titles. The Canton Public Library also participates in the "Computer Pix" program.

A "READ to Me" program is planned for preschool children at the Dunning-Hough Library during the summer. The theme of that program will be "Passport to Plymouth."

Preschool children will check out books to take home. They'll keep a list of what favorite books they've had read to them.

An awards celebration for the "Read to Me" program is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. to noon Tuesday, Aug. 2, at the library. Registration is under way at the library for that program.

A 7:30 P.M. Tuesday drop-in storytime is also planned at the Dunning-Hough Library, 223 S. Main St. in Plymouth. Dates for that program will be June 21 and 28, and July 5, 12 and 19.

That storytime will last for approximately a half hour. It is for children ages 2 to 5. Children who are 2 must be with an adult during the storytime; for older children, an adult must stay in the library during the session.

Participation in the "Read to Me" program isn't required in order to take part in the drop-in storytime.

FOR THE "Passport to Adventure" program, students will start reading June 20, with July 30 the last day to record books. Each student will receive a reading record, designed to look like a suitcase.

"Passport to Adventure" participants will keep track of what books they've read.

When they register for the program, students will sign a contract indicating how many books they'll read. Students must read a minimum of three books.

After they've fulfilled their contracts, students will receive a reading certificate, a button and a ticket for the Aug. 2 awards celebration.

Students must register for the summer reading program in person at the library's children's department. For more information, call 453-0750.

MANY DIFFERENT fun-filled programs are planned as part of the "Passport to Adventure" program. Those include:

- 2-3 p.m. Tuesday, June 21. Introduction to the summer reading program and an audience participation story, "The Squeaky Door."
- 2-3 p.m. Tuesday, June 28. Arlene Leitch, with stories and folk songs from Scotland.
- 2-3:45 p.m. Tuesday, July 5. A movie, "Pippi Longstocking."
- 2-3 p.m. Tuesday, July 12. A magic show with the Amazing Abraham.
- 2-3 p.m. Tuesday, July 19. An audience participation story, "The Judge," and a craft activity.
- 2-3:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 2. Awards celebration, with the Mask Puppet Theatre.

"They're going to do a show for us," Morgan said.

The awards celebration will also include activities and refreshments.

AT THE Aug. 2 celebration, winners will be announced for the "Read A Lottery" contest.

For each book read, participants may complete one form for that contest. Names of winners will be chosen at the awards celebration; winners will receive prizes, most of which have been donated by area merchants.

The winner of another contest will be announced at the Aug. 2 program. Participants will guess how many miniature flags from foreign countries are in a glass jar.

The "Passport to Adventure" program will also include weekly poster contests, one for early elementary school-age children and the other for older students.

Those poster contests will include such activities as connecting dots or doing crossword puzzles. Winners for the previous week's contest will be announced each Monday, with winners' names posted at the library. Winners may claim their prizes at the children's department.

Nearly 400 children participated in last summer's reading program at the Dunning-Hough Library. Approximately 50 percent fulfilled their contracts, Morgan said.

She has found that students and parents appreciate having the summer programs offered at the library.

"I think parents are appreciative of having the summer programs available."

Oakwood Vs. Cancer

If you don't want to quit smoking, you won't. But if you want to quit, you can. And we can help.

You've seen and heard all the warnings. You know that smoking is harmful. People around you may even have started to reject you. Perhaps you don't even enjoy the habit anymore.

Well, it's never too soon to quit. And Oakwood Hospital can get you on your way, with the "Smokeless"® stop-smoking program. A stop-smoking program recommended in the Surgeon General's Report on Smoking and Health. It can save lives by changing the habits of people like you. We've seen it work. So don't put it off any longer. Come to our free introductory meeting. See how you can quit the smoking habit for good. Just call 278-5151 for details.

Another good idea in the fight against cancer: regular checkups with your physician. Early detection results in more effective and less radical treatment of most forms of cancer. Oakwood's oncology capabilities include state-of-the-art diagnostic tools–CT Scan, nuclear medicine, mammography, ultrasound, laboratory test, chemical analysis and microscopic exams. If treatment is required, we offer advanced surgery, radiation therapy and chemotherapy.

But if you smoke, you can start your own campaign against lung cancer. Right now. Call the Oakwood Department of Community Health at 278-5151. And enroll in a summer session of the "Smokeless" program.

It costs $155 for seven classes, approximately 11 hours of instruction. But what it may save you is priceless.

"Smokeless" is a copyrighted program of the American Institute for Preventive Medicine.

Pastor retires after 40 years in ministry

By Larry O'Connor

The Rev. Ed Coley leaving Newburg United

The Rev. Ed Coley remembers when things were simple.

The ministry was much different when Coley joined in the late 1940s. Coley will close out his 40 years in the ministry this month when he retires as pastor of Newburg United Methodist Church in Livonia.

The duties of a pastor were more clearly defined and things were on a more personal level, he said.

"Oh it's changed in so many ways," said Coley, pausing for a moment.

A pastor then conducted two services on Sundays and a Bible study on Wednesdays. He often went into the home to meet with the congregation said Coley. He knew where they worked, where their children went to school.

Today, a pastor doesn't have the time to go into every home. Time is spent on administration involved with running a church. Computers have replaced index card boxes.

"Even the use of a telephone has changed everything tremendously," Coley said. "When I started out, we didn't pick up the phone every five or 10 minutes to talk to members of the congregation. Before we would just go to the home. Today we do most of our counseling by the phone.

"There's a danger in that you lose the personal element. The eyeball to eyeball contact if you will."

In some ways, things are better. The problems of today are too complex for one person to solve.

AS A result, a pastor isn't expected to be the one to solve them.

"When I first started, people looked to the pastor as one who had the answers and as one who could provide them," he said. "Today they are looking for someone who will listen and who will help them find avenues for a solution."

Coley's career in ministry covers a wide spectrum. Originally from Ozark, Ark. (population 2,200), Coley joined the Air Force during World War II after high school.

Coley then had a calling for the ministry, receiving his master's degree in divinity from Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas.

He was the first chaplain at Kincheloe Air Force Base in the Upper Peninsula. Coley opted to stay in Michigan, serving at Trinity United Methodist Church in the U.P. from 1956 to 1961.

Cooley served at a number of United Methodist churches in the Detroit area, including St. Andrew in Detroit (1961-68), Mt. Olivet in Dearborn (1968-78) and Faith Church (1978-84).

Coley was appointed by the Michigan United Methodist Bishop to Newburg United in 1984. He replaced the Rev. Jack Gugiere, who became superintendent for the Ann Arbor district of the United Methodist Conference.

One of the areas Coley has been directly involved in at Newburg has been the Appalachia Service Project. People from the church go to Appalachia to help fix homes.

SINCE HIS arrival, there has been a slow but steady growth in membership to 1,198. Newburg also has a strong singles ministry. That along with the other programs at the church, though, he said are someone else's doing.

"It's not my doing," he said. "I'm sort of the coordinator for the programs . . . I can't take credit. We have a tremendous staff."

What Coley has given to Newburg Church, if anything, might be measured in pure experience. He certainly doesn't take any credit.

The fine music program? Coley mentions a name. The mission outreach program? Another name. Christian education and youth work? Yet another name.

"I'm not helping you very much, am I?" Coley said.

Coley will admit he helped coordinate some of the programs. And he was there to provide some advice when it was needed.

But overall, Coley points to the staff at Newburg United Methodist Church.

"It has been exciting, tremendously fulfilling and very satisfying working within a ministry that has grown each year," he said.

'It has been exciting, tremendously fulfilling and very satisfying working within a ministry that has grown each year.'

Business travelers pack area hotels

By Filip Fracassa
special writer

As Oakland and western Wayne counties ride the crest of financial good times, increases in job opportunities have meant a corresponding increase in the number of lodging facilities built in the area.

A pent-up demand for inns, hotels and motels from business travelers has meant growth to 17 lodging facilities with 3,316 rooms in Southfield alone.

"The demand won't continue like this — nine new hotels in the last five years — but we can expect growth to stay good, at a slightly slower pace," said Joe Sutschek, community development director of Southfield.

Southfield's newer facilities are the Radisson Plaza, Residence Inn, Red Roof Inn, the Compri, Embassy Suites, The Berkshire, Hampton Inn, Skylight Inn and Marriott Courtyard. Marriott plans to build another hotel next to its existing unit near Northwestern and Lahser.

Prism Hotels of Dallas will manage the 200-room Compri Hotel on I-696 and Franklin. The luxury hotel expects 90 percent of its corporate executives in the area for business.

The surge is still on in Farmington Hills. Rick Lampi, the city's community development director, has seen the Radisson, Knights Inn, Skylight Inn, Bargaintel, Dillon Inn and Quality Inn open for business in the last two years. The inns dot Grand River, Haggerty, Eight Mile and Orchard Lake.

"We've needed the rooms because of our proximity to Detroit, Lansing, I-275 and Metropolitan Airport," Lampi said.

"We went on a binge in '85 looking for hotel development. Now we'll have enough hotels to host conventions if we want to."

Marriott is scheduled to break ground on a 150-room hotel later this year.

TROY'S HOTEL growth has gone in spurts, and there's still more room for quality hotels, says Laurence Kiesling, planning director for the city.

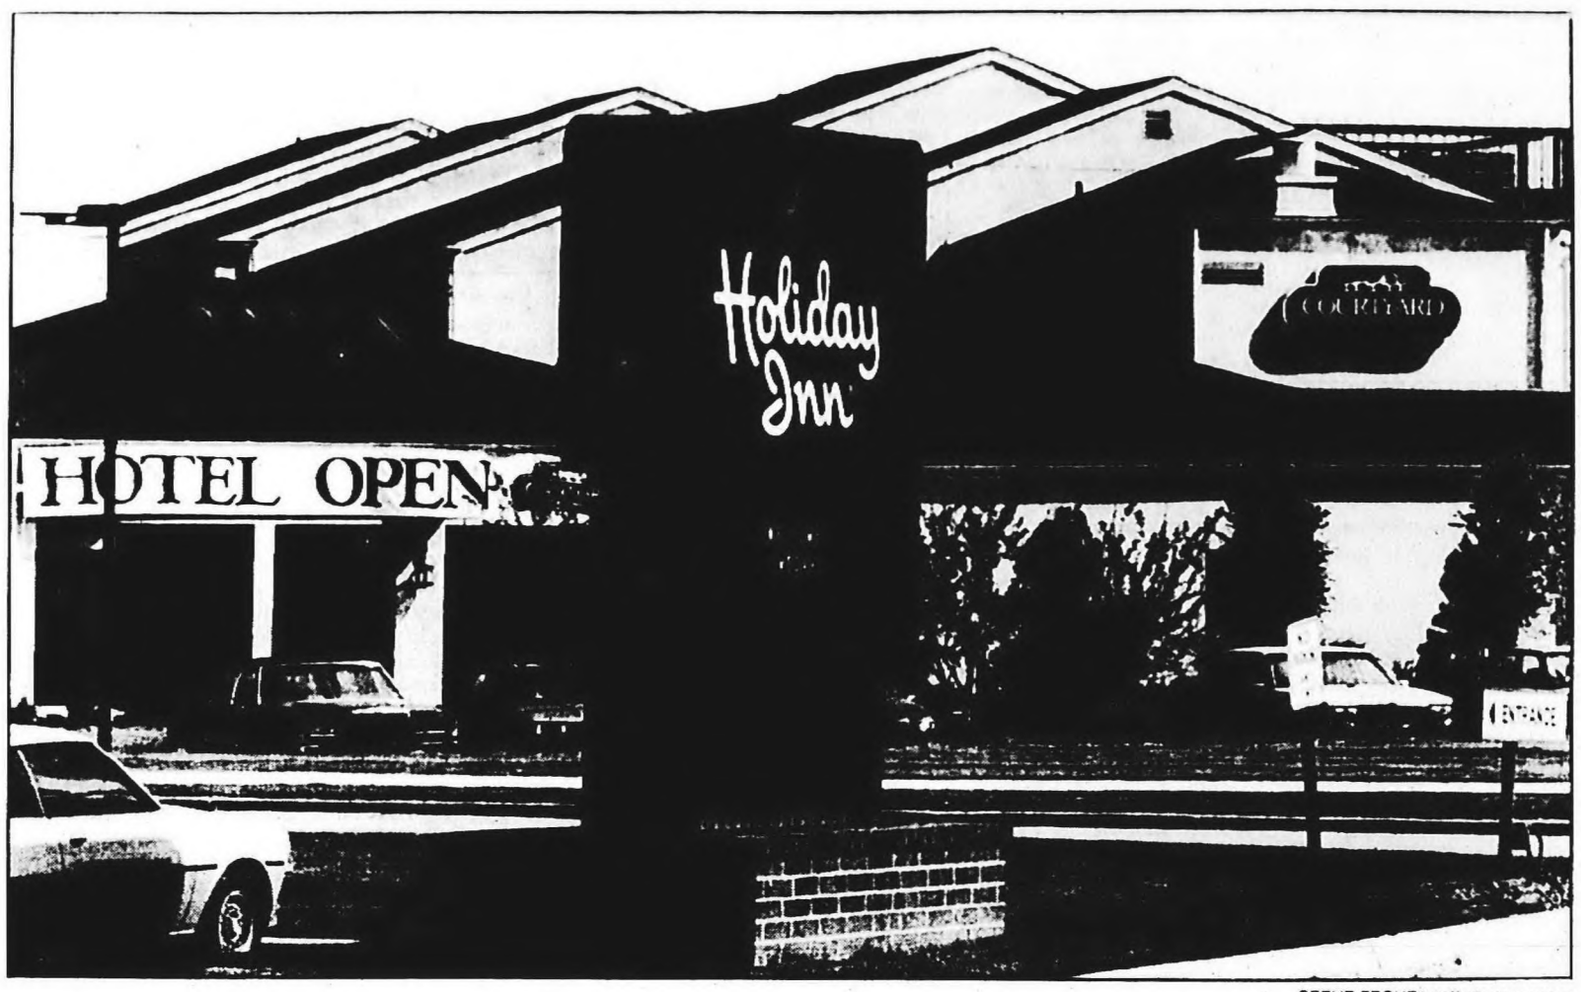

The city has strengthened its zoning requirements for chains seeking entry to the bustling Big Beaver corridor. Proposed hotels must have at least 200 rooms, restaurants that will seat 250, and meeting space for at least 800.

"There's really no commercial land for hotel development outside of the Big Beaver corridor, and we're setting the standards — full-service hotels only.

"We want hotels in Troy to serve the city and the business community, not just people passing through who want sleeping rooms," Kiesling said.

There were only five hotels in Troy until 1983, but now there are nine with nearly 2,000 rooms.

In the last five years, developers have built the Marriott Courtyard, Residence Inn, Drury Inn and Guest Quarters. By 1990, Kiesling expects Troy to add a 350-room, full-service Marriott hotel on Big Beaver near Livernois and a 400-room Ramada Renaissance Hotel on Big Beaver near I-75.

STEVE FECHT/staff photographer

The lodging industry is experiencing a boom. In Livonia, this Holiday Inn and Marriott Courtyard are within walking distance of each other.

Construction on the Marriott will begin this summer, but the Ramada project is at least a year away.

ALONG I-275 in western Wayne County, Livonia is winning most of the hotel business. Planning director John Nagy counts eight motels and seven hotels in the city — with room for more.

"The large number of office buildings here, as well as our link to the I-275 corridor, make Livonia a prime site for hotel-industry growth," he said.

"Having hotels in Livonia is desirable because they help attract an economic base and allow us to bring conventions to town."

Marriott plays a big hand in the expanding hotel industry in Livonia, opening three- and six-story hotels on Six Mile between Newburgh and I-275.

Compri Hotels will complete construction on its Eight Mile location in the first quarter of 1989, according to Frank Jonna, executive vice president of the Farmington Hills-based Jonna Construciton Co., Compri's builder.

The planned 210-room, amenities-loaded hotel, owned by Phoenix-based Doubletree Hotels, will cater to "business travelers seeking four-star accommodations." The Compri will offer lavish food and bar service, with rates ranging from $65 to $100 "to allow businessmen to upgrade from the budget hotels in the area," Jonna said.

Nagy said Livonia's Holidome has expanded, renovating its conference area, lounge and restaurant to accommodate anticipated business traffic to the city.

IN CANTON, hotel growth has been spurred by corporate development, proximity to I-275 and companies in Detroit and Ann Arbor, according to Dave Nicholson, the township's community/economic development director. The Fairfield Inn, Knights Inn and Country Hearth Inn are recent additions to the corridor.

Growth prospects for the lodging industry look good, proprietors believe. They say area hotels, motels and inns are registering business travelers to near capacity Monday through Friday.

Tourists fill weekend gap

By Filip Fracassa
special writer

Business travelers may be their bread and butter, but area hotels, motels and inns are learning that the leisure traveler can fill sizable gaps on their registries.

This comes as no surprise to the American Hotel and Motel Association, which forecasts the U.S. will need 13 percent more rooms in the next three years to keep up with demand caused by surging interest in leisure and vacation travel.

Cary Turecamo, general manager of Troy's 251-suite Guest Quarters hotel in Troy, said his company has changed its marketing plan to attract leisure travelers.

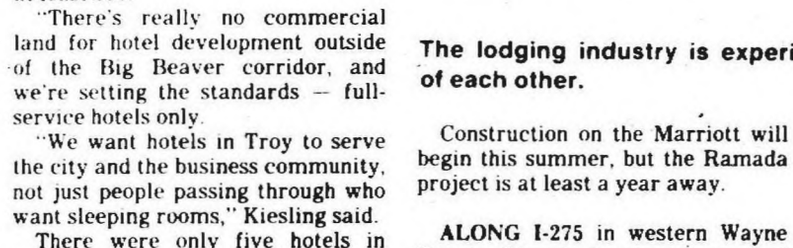

Guest Quarters at one time marketed itself to corporations that would send executives to the metro area for four or five days. But Turecamo says in the last two years companies have halved the number of travel days for their executives.

"Executives are taking shorter trips, accomplishing on a Tuesday and Wednesday what used to take Monday through Friday," he said. "That helped us realize that vacation travel was a deeply untapped arena.

"Our vacation travel business is steady, and we've gone out of our way to make it grow by creating enthusiasm with clients. We put together special game and skiing packages to bring people to this part of Michigan, and we believe we're successful."

EMBASSY SUITES, with its 240 rooms in Southfield, relies on vacationers for most of its weekend business.

"For us, the vacation traveler is around a lot when the economy is good," said Joel Yoder, assistant general manager. "And the economy is good right now. We're running close to capacity."

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

The leisure traveler is picking up the slack of the business traveler on weekends at area lodging facilities. Twins Nerissa and Austin Casselman of Charlotte, N.C., enjoy the pool at Canton's Fairfield Inn.

But Yoder emphasizes that the Embassy would not survive without the business-suited men and women who park their briefcases there during the week.

"About 70 percent of our revenues come from businessmen on trips. We gear toward them and will keep doing so. But we want the leisure guy, too."

The Radisson Plaza Hotel in Southfield counts on 100-percent occupancy Monday through Thursday from business travelers and is hoping to attract groups with conferences and conventions.

"We can't expect to get all of the vacation and leisure people because there is a trend to leave the metro area for quieter areas," Bill Kirkhuff, general manager, said. "But with first-rate facilities, we can draw a substantial number of people."

AT CANTON'S Fairfield Inn, assistant manager Joan Susinska said leisure travelers on a budget come there for no-frills accommodations.

Owned by Marriott Corp., the Canton Fairfield Inn, which employs 16, is the first of four inns to open in metro Detroit this year. A 133-room Rochester Hills inn will open late this year at M-59 and Crooks.

"Our market research shows so far that a lot of people coming through the door are families on a budget who want an outdoor pool," Susinska said.

Roh Groh, manager of the Knights Inn in Canton, says leisure travel is "starting to come into its own."

"The area is well saturated with hotels and motels, so there's a lot of competition for business. But we get a lot of family groups and leisure travelers — about 35 percent of our business — on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays."

Broker quashes commissions

By Filip Fracassa
special writer

A Birmingham broker-dealer plans to attract high-volume investment professionals by charging them straight monthly fees instead of a percentage of sales for mutual funds, annuities, life insurance and partnerships.

James Hicks, president of Birmingham-based Questor Financial Services, is charging registered professionals $750 a month for unlimited sales, allowing sales representatives to keep 100 percent of their commissions.

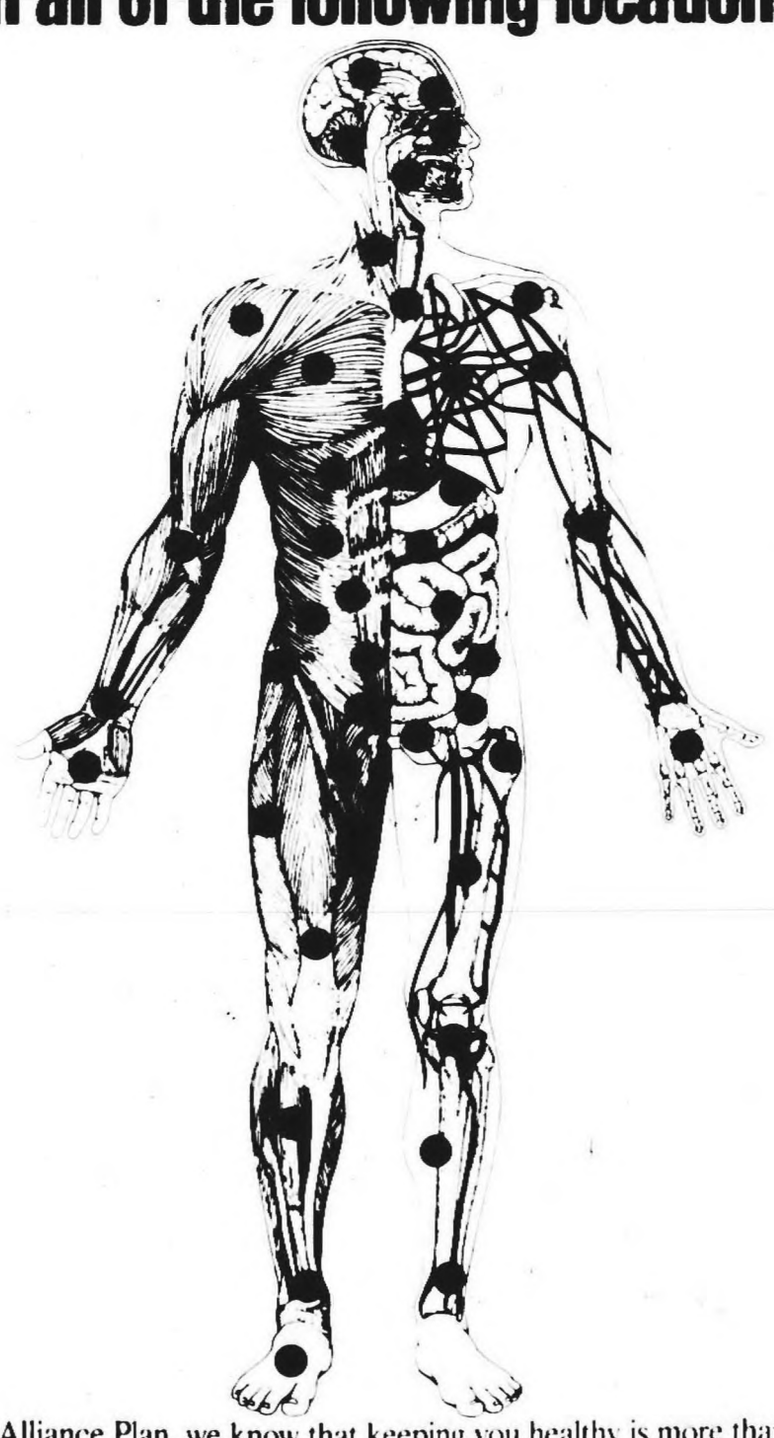

At other companies, financial planners get 50 to 90 percent of their commissions, with the remainder going to the broker-dealer. The percentage they receive depends on the volume produced and how well they have negotiated with the broker-dealer.

"Because our business attracts entrepreneurial types, we want to get the attention of reps working for other broker-dealers or securities dealers whose jobs were threatened because of mergers or industry belt-tightenting," said Hicks, whose concept parallels how some real estate agents are paid.

"I have worked in real estate, and I know this concept can work with this industry. People will be skeptical at first. I know it will take some time to get going."

Broker appealing to investment pros

LAUNCHED IN JANUARY, Hicks' no-commission credo has lured 15 reps from other broker-dealers, and by the end of 1989 he hopes to have at least 50 independent contractors on board.

"It's a simple concept, really: we make our profit, the reps make theirs. I realize that few take new ideas and embrace them. People are protective of their incomes, and we hope to appeal to an independent agent who likes not having to share a lot of his income because he's productive."

The concept will not appeal to the novice, he said, because newcomers "generally don't generate enough sales to justify the advance payout."

Questor wants the fixed $750 fee from each financial planner so it can project company income over time. Last year, Questor reported revenues of $2 million from real estate ventures and securities commissions.

"We're happy knowing our precise earnings," Hicks said. "We don't need to be greedy. We'll make a profit by attracting a lot of high-caliber reps."

DAVID JAFFA, office manager and a registered principal with Southfield-based Pennsylvania Securities Co., doesn't endorse the Questor plan.

"There is no free lunch in this business," he said. "You need teamwork to be successful.

"A rep still has to have an office, a secretary, a phone, pay postage. Reps are better off with a firm paying commissions."

At Questor, management and support services are part of the $750 monthly fee.

Fees can be reduced to $500 per month for bringing three new reps to Questor, to $250 for bringing in six new reps. Those bringing in nine registered financial planners will pay no monthly fees and keep 100 percent of their commissions.

"This kind of plan attracts other reps who are greedy and after the fast dollar," Jaffra said. "I don't think this idea will make it over the long haul. It's not the first time I've seen it."

Brenda Gaunt, a general securities principal with Troy-based Maxwell Financial Services, said Questor's payout plan "could be an advantage for the established rep."

"High producers obviously will benefit because they keep what they make; it's a nice idea and it could be viable," Gaunt said. "It probably won't be widespread, though, because only big producers who want to avoid paying overhead costs will be attracted. But what about those learning the business? They wouldn't be interested in something like that."

Leonard Witulski, president of The Saxon Group, a subsidiary of Multi-Financial Services in Birmingham, said Questor's program, in time, probably will lure only agents making at least $50,000 a month in sales.

"Big hitters in our business are those making $50,000 a month, and reps making $7,000 to $10,000 a month are your average Joes," Witulski said. "Average Joes probably won't agree to a fixed payout until their sales climb. Then they might consider it."

Will Frank and Ed sell Saturn wine coolers?

Dan McCosh

General Motors hires a new ad agency every 50 years of so, whether it needs it or not, which is why the selection process for an adsmith for the fledgling Saturn account was the biggest thing run up the flagpole on Madison Avenue since Foote, Cone & Belding got the Edsel account.

Tension eased somewhat last week when GM announced that San Francisco-based Hal Riney & Partners was to get the Saturn business, beating out N.W. Ayer and Hill, Holliday, Connors & Cosmopolous, reportedly the final three agencies in contention.

Hal Riney is no stranger to the car business. Until a few weeks ago, it provided copy for the Austin-Rover Sterling, a British-built, Japanese-designed car that dumped them when Riney got Saturn — a response to the unwritten rule that no ad agency can serve two car accounts at the same time.

Riney is best known for its creation of Frank Bartles and Ed James, two mythical operatives of a once little-known subsidiary of Gallo Bros. Winery, who pitch their product from their front porch.

At first glance, this seems a little irrelevant to the auto business. But maybe not.

Information leaking out about the corporate culture at Saturn indicates that while executives aren't yet holding committee meetings under pyramids, management is leaning toward the participatory approach, a kind of group-therapy style that emphasizes empathy with employees' needs.

In the case of the Saturn ad account, this led to some informal meetings where the agencies were more or less tested for good vibes.

THIS IS IN LINE with the ambiance that has surrounded the Saturn Project since it was announced four years or so ago with the kind of hoopla that surrounded the first casting call for "Gone With the Wind."

The announcement of the formation of the new GM subsidiary and the subsequent search for a manufacturing site made for a huge splash, followed by the kind of lull that is inevitable when you finally have to get down to the business of designing a car.

Its own first act has been awfully tough to follow, and to some extent Saturn has been the victim of excessive anticipation.

The car itself, shown in early prototype stage and in a handful of spy photographs, seems to be a relatively ordinary subcompact. Even the original notion that GM was going to more or less give it away to compete with the Koreans has been displaced by caveats that this is unlikely.

This leaves Riney, now charged with building Saturn's image from scratch, under a bit of pressure. Such work normally is top secret lest the competition crib its stuff, but I can picture a TV spot something like this.

(Opening shot is of Roger Smith and Bob Stempel in bib overalls on the steps of the GM building. Stempel is in the background, leaning under the hood of a car, muttering and once in a while reaching behind him for a wrench or more parts from an assistant. Foreground is Smith with a microphone.)

Smith: "Bob here is going to show you how a new Saturn can save you money as you buy it on our new installment plan. The idea is that we mail you your new car in boxes, and you assemble it yourself.

"There's no pressure from the salesman, and there is a 20-percent discount for doing it yourself. Bob is demonstrating how easy it is. Bob?"

(A quick shot — something has bonked Bob and is dragging him under the hood.)

"Bob and I thank you for your support."

Variable life policy can beat out IRAs

By Sid Mittra
special writer

An avowed reader of this column recently complained that I have not written on one of the most attractive forms of investment under the TRA of 1986, namely, variable life investment. This column deals with that subject.

Life insurance with mutural fund investment

Wth the introduction of universal life insurance policies, insurance companies started offering a fixed rate of return on premiums collected in excess of the cost of buying life insurance. Subsequently, investors were offered the best of both worlds when the insurance industry introduced variable life.

Variable life offers a range of mutual-fund options including stock, bond and money-market portfolios. This investment was designed for those investors who wish to take the risks and earn the rewards of investing in a tax-deferred life insurance policy wrapped around a family of mutual funds. The idea behind variable life is that part of your premium goes for insurance and the balance goes into a side fund. However, in this case, it is you, the investor, who controls the investment strategy and change between mutual funds while the earnings grow tax-deferred.

The traditional advantages of investing in a mutual fund apply to variable life. They include professional management of each fund, which relieves you of both decisions and details involved in buying and selling individual stocks and bonds; diversified investment in a wide variety of companies and industries; and exchanges between a series of mutual funds within a fund family, each with a different investment objective.

Advantages of dollar cost averaging

With variable life, you reap the benefits of dollar cost averaging. You buy a fixed dollar amount at regular intervals through regular premium payments. With premiums in excess of mortality costs, you buy shares of mutual funds. Naturally, more shares are bought when the prices are low and fewer shares when prices are high. Over the long term, the increased number of shares bought in a declining market generally more than offsets the fewer number of shares bought in a rising market.

The accompanying table compares a variable life investment with an IRA investment. Clearly, variable life has several advantages over an IRA, and variable life can be used as a powerful retirement planning tool.

Caveat emptor

Like all investments, variable life has risks, and care should be exercised in investing in variable life insurance. Here are some pointers:

- Before selecting a fund, carefully investigate the past performance of the fund or the performance of other funds managed by the same portfolio managers.
- Examine a fund's performance during market ups and downs. Invest only in a fund that has endured both a bull market and a bear market.
- Other things being equal, select an insurance company that has a low mortality cost. This will minimize the insurance charges and maximize the money left for investment in the mutual fund.
- Do not invest in a variable life investment without discussing your investment strategy with your financial planner. Even though no mutual fund has failed in the last decade, during any given time period you can suffer significant losses by investing in variable life.

To sum up, variable life is an attractive investment vehicle. Properly used, it can be an integral part of your total investment portfolio.

Cable is cheap alternative to TV for small business

Mary DiPaolo

"Cable television represents the finest advertising opportunity available for the small-business person," says Lark L.S. Reid, executive director with the Southwestern Oakland Cable Commission. Jerry Ware, national advertising sales manager with MetroVision of Livonia, agrees.

Reid believes cable-television advertising is very different from the network advertising most small-business people shy away from.

"Let's face it, you have to already be very successful in order to afford the advertising rates for network televison. Cable television not only allows business owners to obtain the exposure they want at a price that is affordable, but gives them the chance to be as intimately involved as they like in the promotional planning and development process."

Promoting your business via cable television can begin by sponsoring or co-sponsoring a community access television program or series. "Every cable system has its own community access channel," Reid said, "and many of these programs are distributed to other systems at the local or state level through the SWOCC office."

MetroVision of Oakland County has a community access channel that reaches approximately 23,000 cable subscribers — with viewership statistics indicating that nearly one-third watch community access television. For a program or series that is distributed to several systems, total viewership can challenge most any network affiliate. Sponsorship may include offering a wardrobe to the host or hostess, donating signs, or providing furniture for the set.

Sponsorship may also involve the business owner producing his or her own series for community access. "We offer workshops that are free and allow individuals to become certified in studio or remote cable television production," Reid said. For example, a local restaurant owner could produce his own cooking series. Or a podiatrist could produce a program on foot care for the athlete. This option doesn't cost the business owner anything because volunteer crews are made available among other workshop graduates.

For business owners interested in commercial cable advertising, the rates range anywhere from $12 per 30-second spot to $31 for prime time.

"We recommend that a new a business run 25-30 spots per week over a four- to six-week period," Ware said. "In our situation, MetroVision will run a client's spots on five stations to include ESPN, CNN News, USA, Lifetime and MTV in 10 cities reaching 80,000 households."

When you consider that similar network advertising can cost 10 times more, it makes sense to make cable your small business advertising alternative.

'Video Views' raise issues

Teens sound off on TV

By Anne Y. Meyers
special writer

Drugs, unplanned pregnancy, and drunk driving are major issues of concern for teens. According to Southfield-Lathrup senior Alysha Green, there is very little discussion among teenagers about these important issues.

"Video Views," a local three-part television series airing on WTVS/Channel 56, allows Green and other high school students a forum to discuss these issues. Music videos are a catalyst for conversations where the teens share their opinions and learn from each other.

"We talked about videos and how they influenced kids," said Green of the program that she appeared on. "I got to see how a lot of other teens felt. Teens don't really talk to each other about important problems very much. I also got to see a lot of views that I really hadn't thought of."

Project director Levona Whitaker feels this is a very valuable lesson for these teens. "By integrating diverse cultures and communities that are worlds apart the teen viewers will begin to see that they aren't that different and that their problems are the same," Whitaker stated.

"Video Views" features a panel of teens discussing how music videos deal with substance abuse, youth violence, and teen pregnancy. A cross section of Detroit-area teens are involved from such high schools as: Southfield-Lathrup, Brother Rice, Mercy, Redford, Mt. Clemens, Cass Tech, Northwestern, Renaissance, Southwestern and Martin Luther King.

ACCORDING TO Green, the panel discussions gave her great insight into these issues. Many of the videos offered positive ways for teens to deal with their problems, according to the student. As an example Green cited Madonna's "Papa Don't Preach," a song about a teenager who is pregnant and chooses to have her baby. An underlying message in the song, Green feels, is telling kids to talk to their parents about problems.

"A lot of teens are really afraid to talk to their parents," said Green. "They may not agree, but you shouldn't be afraid to talk to your parents."

Green explains that the messages in videos are not always direct and it may take concentrated watching to get the full impact.

"This show is a very good thing," said Green. "When people see videos they don't always think about things. This gives them more insight. Videos are really good to watch and can have a lot of positive influence."

Some videos like Stevie Wonder's "Don't Drive Drunk" have straightforward messages. This issue is important to Green. She belongs to Southfield-Lathrup's Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) chapter and is an advocate for responsi-

Jennifer Thorsby relaxes at her parents' Birmingham home. The actress, living in New York the past seven years, returned home for her role in the Birmingham Theatre production of "Girl Crazy."

Actress (Girl) Crazy at home on Birmingham Theatre stage

By Anne Y. Meyers
special writer

Jennifer Thorsby has played many roles at the Birmingham Theatre. Receptionist, bartender, janitor and all-around gopher to name a few.

This May, Thorsby appears in a new role, perhaps the most exciting one yet. Thorsby, a native of Birmingham now living in New York, is a member of the cast of "Girl Crazy" playing through June at the theater.

"It's pretty neat being backstage now and thinking about all the movies I saw here," said Thorsby.

"When I was in high school it was switching from a movie theater to a legit theater. I worked as sort of a gopher, manning the phones, tending bar and vacuuming the house. I had never been backstage at the Birmingham Theatre."

Thorsby, who normally only makes it back to her parents home in Birmingham at Christmas, is thrilled to have the time here with family and friends.

"I couldn't have asked for a better thing," said Thorsby of this assignment.

"It's a wonderful excuse to get back together and for people to contact me. Being on stage as well as being in the area for a while is giving me a chance to get back in touch with people."

THORSBY GRADUATED from Seaholm High School in 1977 and went on to continue her education at the Boston Conservatory of Music. Upon graduating from college, Thorsby went on for what she considered to be her fifth year of higher education, in New York.

"My family and I had decided it would be actually my fifth year of education," said Thorsby of her move to New York. "Moving to New York, I would sort of educate myself on the business: who the agents were, how to get around in the big city."

Soon after her arrival, she worked on an industrial film and then won a role in the musical "Chicago." She has lived in New York for seven years and has racked up an impressive list of Broadway and television credits.

Most recently she appeared in the New York workshop and world premiere of a new musical, "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz." Other credits include Cassie in the Pulitzer Prize winning musical, "A Chorus Line," as well as major roles in such musicals as "Kiss Me Kate" and "George M."

After seven years in New York, Thorsby says she would consider moving elsewhere. "I've done just about everything I want to do in New York," said Thorsby. "I'm looking for some new challenges now. New York is a fast pace. I deal with it fine, but it is not my preferred style of living."

In "Girl Crazy" Thorsby is in the ensemble as well as playing the role of Tess Parker. "Danny is the lead guy and he is girl crazy," said Thorsby. "I'm his New York girlfriend, one of many, who is jilted for his new true love. It's a small sort of cameo role."

The actress is thrilled about the musical. "Lorna Luft is wonderful," she said. "The entire cast is extremely good. We have a ball together. It's thoroughly entertaining with some of Gershwin's greatest songs and there is great dancing."

Troupe sets audition for state tour

Continuing its "On the Move in Michigan" campaign, Actors Alliance Theatre Company will begin its third annual statewide tour in August with an expanded schedule that will include both the Upper and Lower Peninsulas.

This year's production of "The Fantasticks" has been funded by New Initiatives for the Arts, a program of the Michigan Council for the Arts, which supports minority artists showcased in outstate areas. The all-minority cast of "The Fantasticks" will be selected from auditions in Detroit, Chicago and New York.

This production is specifically intended to showcase minority talent, and singers and actors from varying ethnic backgrounds are encouraged to audition. The cast is being selected from a series of auditions that will begin on June 11 at the Actors Alliace Theatre Company at 13 Mile and Evergreen in Southfield.

All participants should be prepared with one musical selection, providing music in the correct key for accompanist Richard Berent, and a photo and resume for artistic director Jeffrey M. Nahan. Equity performers will be seen at 3 p.m. Non-equity performers will be seen at 4 p.m. Chicago and New York audition appointments are being scheduled for the week of June 13.

The Lakeside Center for the Arts on the Lake Michigan shore will host the company the week of Aug. 14 for three performances.

Those wanting to audition should call the administrative office at 642-1326.

ble drinking for all ages.

"A lot of kids today are afraid to tell their friends, 'don't drink and drive'," said Green. "The best time to prove you're a friend is in a situation like that. And, if you lose a friend by telling him, it's better than losing that friend because of an accident."

Also, according to Green, youths should not just choose their music based on a likeable beat because some popular songs have very negative messages.

"Instead of just listening to the beat, you should really listen to the words," said Green of popular music.

Working on "Video Views" was a very enjoyable experience. "It was a lot of fun," said Green. "I got to meet quite a lot of people."

"I wish that more people could have been aware of the show," said the student. "People should see it."

"Video Views" was taped in April. It aired in May and also will air June 4 at 7 p.m. and June 5 at 11:30 a.m.

Kirk celebrates Scotland

The St. Andrew's Society of Detroit, a Scottish benevolent organization, will participate in a Kirkin' of the Tartans at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 5, at the Kirk in the Hills, 1340 West Long Lake Road, one mile west of Telegraph.

The ministers of the Kirk, Dr. James Anderson and Rev. Robert Lindsay, will conduct a special church service in the afternoon for the Kirkin' during which the St. Andrew's Society's bagpipe band will play.

Tartan clothes, symbolizing Scottish clans they identify, will be presented during the service. Following the church service, tea will be served and there will be performances by Highland dancers and members of the Royal Scottish Country Dancers' Society.

The Kirk in the Hills is one of the architectural gems of the United States and welcomes visitors from all over the country who come not only to attend church service but to enjoy the beauty of the Kirk and its lakeside setting.

For all Scots, the Kirk has a special significance in that the architecture is fashioned after Melrose Abbey, Roxburghshire, Scotland. Originally known as the monastery of Mailros, the Abbey Kirk went through many changes since its founding about the 7th Century by Said Aidan and monks brought from Iona.

The Abbey was in English hands from 1346 to 1389. It is believed that the heart of King Robert Bruce, the establisher of Scottish independence, is buried in the Abbey Kirk near the high altar.

The Kirk in the Hills and the St. Andrew's Society invite those interested to spend an afternoon of Scottish tradition. For more information, call Jean Roberts at 573-4690 (days) or 642-5937 after 6 p.m.

On Schoolcraft stage 'Agnes of God' compelling

By Bob Weibel
special writer

Schoolcraft College is currently presenting one of the more potent dramas of the recent American stage, John Pielmeier's "Agnes of God." Despite a glitch here and there, the plays three actresses give well-conceived performances.

The riveting drama intertwining the lives of three women in a triangle of murder, faith and love will be performed on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 3, 4 and 5. Tickets at $5 a person are available at the College's bookstore. Call 591-6400, Ext. 265.

Underpinning the production is director James Hartman's artful use of black curtains, suggestive scenery and imaginative lighting. It effectively establishes the seemingly serene and pastoral mood of a convent — against which is played the provocative and shocking story of a virgin nun who gives birth to a child, which is found strangled in a wastebasket.

'It effectively establishes the serene pastoral mood against which is played the shocking story.'

It's powerful stuff. And disturbing. Not only is there a murder to consider, but audiences must confront a basic tenet of Christian beliefs — the immaculate conception. If one accepts that it happened 2,000 years ago, can one deny the possibility of it occurring today? Regardless of all scientific evidence to the contrary?

The story unfolds in flashbacks through the eyes of a fallen Catholic and psychiatrist, played skillfully by Cynthia McEvoy. She is very much the professional, in-control woman — who slowly begins to doubt her rational mind, and to wonder if miracles really do take place. And in any case, perhaps what's really important is that people have the choice to believe in miracles.

Linda Buergler Bodnar plays her protagonist, a Mother Superior who is protector of what's best for the image of the Church. Bodnar's portrayal is handicapped somewhat by youthful mannerisms — especially her high-pitched voice during dramatic confrontations. Perhaps simply assuming a more powerful attitude with appropriate gestures and pauses would circumvent the situation.

Jody Lynn Jaroslaw is featured in the title role as Agnes. Her lovely voice has a saintly quality, which adds credibility to her character. She needs to work, however, on a more controlled anguish in some of her early scenes. It will make her dramatic finale even more powerful, when under hypnosis she cries out that God is the father of her child.

One further quibble is the fog machine. Whatever is added to the illusion of a hypnotic trance is subtracted by the noise generated.

Rounding out the cast as the Sisters are Donna Barnes, Debra Bunch, Marcia Newman and Lisa Smith.

The Brookside Jazz Ensemble with vocalist Ursala Walker is scheduled for a return engagement to "Musical Monday Nights at the Kingsley" on Monday at the Kingsley Inn in Bloomfield Hills.

This will be the third time the popular big band has appeared in the "Musical Monday" series. The performance is expected to bring another large crowd of dance band enthusiasts to the Grand Ballroom of the Kingsley, where the series is being held.

The doors for "Musical Monday Nights" open at 7 p.m. with music beginning at 7:30 and ending at 11 p.m. Admission is $7 per person and there is a cash bar available. For more information, call the Kingsley Inn at 644-1400.

The Kingsley big band series is being co-produced by band leader Johnny Trudell and promoter Phil Wooldridge, in association with Kingsley Inn director of marketing Layla Zawideh and Jerry Zawideh, Kingsley director of food and beverage.

Piaf premiers at area restaurant

The rise of the diminutive Edith Piaf, from the streets of Paris where she sang for her supper as a child, to the apex of stardom as the most beloved chanteuse ever to grace the music halls and concert stages of Europe, is the stuff of which legends are made.

During her lifetime, Piaf came to embody the essence of romantic love at its most ecstatic, its most mysterious, and its most tragic.

During the '30s, '40s and '50s, Piaf's uniquely dramatic voice made famous scores of songs that are as evocative of France and as closely tied to that country in the popular imagination as are the paintings of Renoir, the wines of Bordeaux and the sharp kick of Can Can. The high drama of her personal life, then as now, endow these songs with a compelling intimacy. Her funeral in October 1963 was perhaps the largest ever held in Paris.

Metro Detroiters will have the opportunity to experience the power of Piaf in an atmosphere as intimate as the Parisian cabarets where she first left her indelible mark, when the On Stage restaurant presents Sheri Nichols as Piaf in "Le Miracle de Piaf" every Wednesday and Thursday through June.

Sheri Nichols stars as Edith Piaf in the On Stage production of "Le Miracle de Piaf" Wednesdays and Thursdays through June.

Set late in her life, the show features 15 of the songs that helped to create the legend that is Piaf and is a mixture of both theater and music as she reminisces about her life and loves.

"Le Miracle de Piaf" was written and directed by Howard Burman, chairman of the department of theater at Wayne State University. Burman is also director of the Hilberry Repertory Company.

Sheri Nichols appeared in the starring role of the Attic Theatre production of Piaf in 1985, a performance that earned her critical acclaim.

Tickets for "Le Miracle de Piaf" are $12 with dinner purchase, $15 for the show only. Reservations must be made in advance by calling 965-2920. The On Stage restaurant is across from Grand Circus Park at 48 West Adams.

Arianna Stassinopoulos will lecture on Picasso, the man who has become a myth. She will reveal a man whose life and work are a personification of our tumultuous century. The tragic story of a man unable to love and driven to dominate and humiliate the women — and the many men who fell under his spell, however sadistic his behavior, is not to be missed.

Chiefs reach goal of being track champ

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

girls track

Canton 3rd in relays, 3D

At the close of the last girls track and field season, Plymouth Canton was already thinking ahead to 1988.

The Chiefs, after falling a point shy of first place in the Western Lakes Activities Association meet a year ago, waited with patience and resolve for the next one to roll around.

Canton realized its year-long goal Tuesday as it held off Livonia Churchill to capture a coveted league championship at Northville.

"This was four years of hard work in one meet," said all-stater Angie Miller, who won the high jump, scored in two sprints and helped the Chiefs take a key third place in the 1,600-meter relay.

"It's just the best feeling," teammate Tonya Walaskay added, "to know we have worked this hard for this meet and come here and won it."

'When the money is on the line, we've got a lot of kids who want to come out on the track . . . We have a lot of kids who want to take that last shot.'

— George Przygodski
Canton track coach

CANTON HAD A 66-65 edge over the Chargers with two events remaining, but an impressive showing in the 3,200 run all but wrapped it up for the Chiefs.

Churchill's Karen Kantor won the race, but Canton's Cindy Spessard, Kris Marquard and Cathy McCabe captured second, third and fifth places, giving the Chiefs 16 points in that event alone.

The Chiefs, leading 82-75 over the Chargers, needed only a fourth-place finish in the 1,600 relay to maintain their advantage. Churchill was first in that event, too, but Canton did what it had to and was third.

"We had our doubts, but we knew we were going to score points at the end," said Canton coach George Przygodski, whose team trailed through the first half of the meet.

"Having fresh legs in the late events was key. That was the first event those kids ran all day. That's where depth really pays off — in the distance events on a hot day.

"(The Chargers) won the event and we still outscored them by six points," he added. "Looking back, that definitely had to be the key event."

THE FINAL RACE was not without suspense, however. The Chiefs were in fifth place after two legs of the relay and would have lost 85-84 had they stayed there.

But Tricia Carney, running the third leg, brought the team up to third, and Miller held that position through the anchor leg.

"I figured I was the third runner, and that's usually not where the toughest runners are," said Carney, who felt as if a heavy weight had been taken off her shoulders when Miller told her the Chiefs needed only a third instead of first while waiting for the baton.

"I figured that would be to my advantage. I was feeling winded. But I knew I could run it, and it felt like the best quarter I ever ran."

At the three-quarter mark of the final leg, it appeared Miller might have enough in reserve to come on and win the race, but she remained third as the Churchill runner refused to fold.

"I was so tired from the other events I said: 'Angie, just hold your place,'" Miller recalled. "If I didn't know the team was depending on me, I don't know if I could have made it through that event."

IN ADDITION TO running the relay and winning the high jump (5-3), Miller was second in the 400 dash and fourth in the 200 final.

"It was a great day for a great athlete," Przygodski said. "She ran great in the 200 — an event she's only run three times all year — and she made a sacrifice for the good of the team by coming out of the 800 relay to run that event."

Surprisingly, Miller had the team's only first-place finish. Thus, it was depth that made the difference for the Chiefs, who scored fifth or higher in every relay.

Walaskay was another of the contributors, taking fifth in the long jump and third in the 100-meter hurdles.

"I just wanted to score, because I knew we hadn't scored in those events recently," she said. "I knew if I could just score one point it would help the team."

OTHER HIGHLIGHTS included Sherry Figurski, rated sixth among those entered in the 800 run going into the meet, finishing second and third-place Heather Spencer helping give Canton 16 points in the high jump, the event that kept the Chiefs afloat until the strong finish.

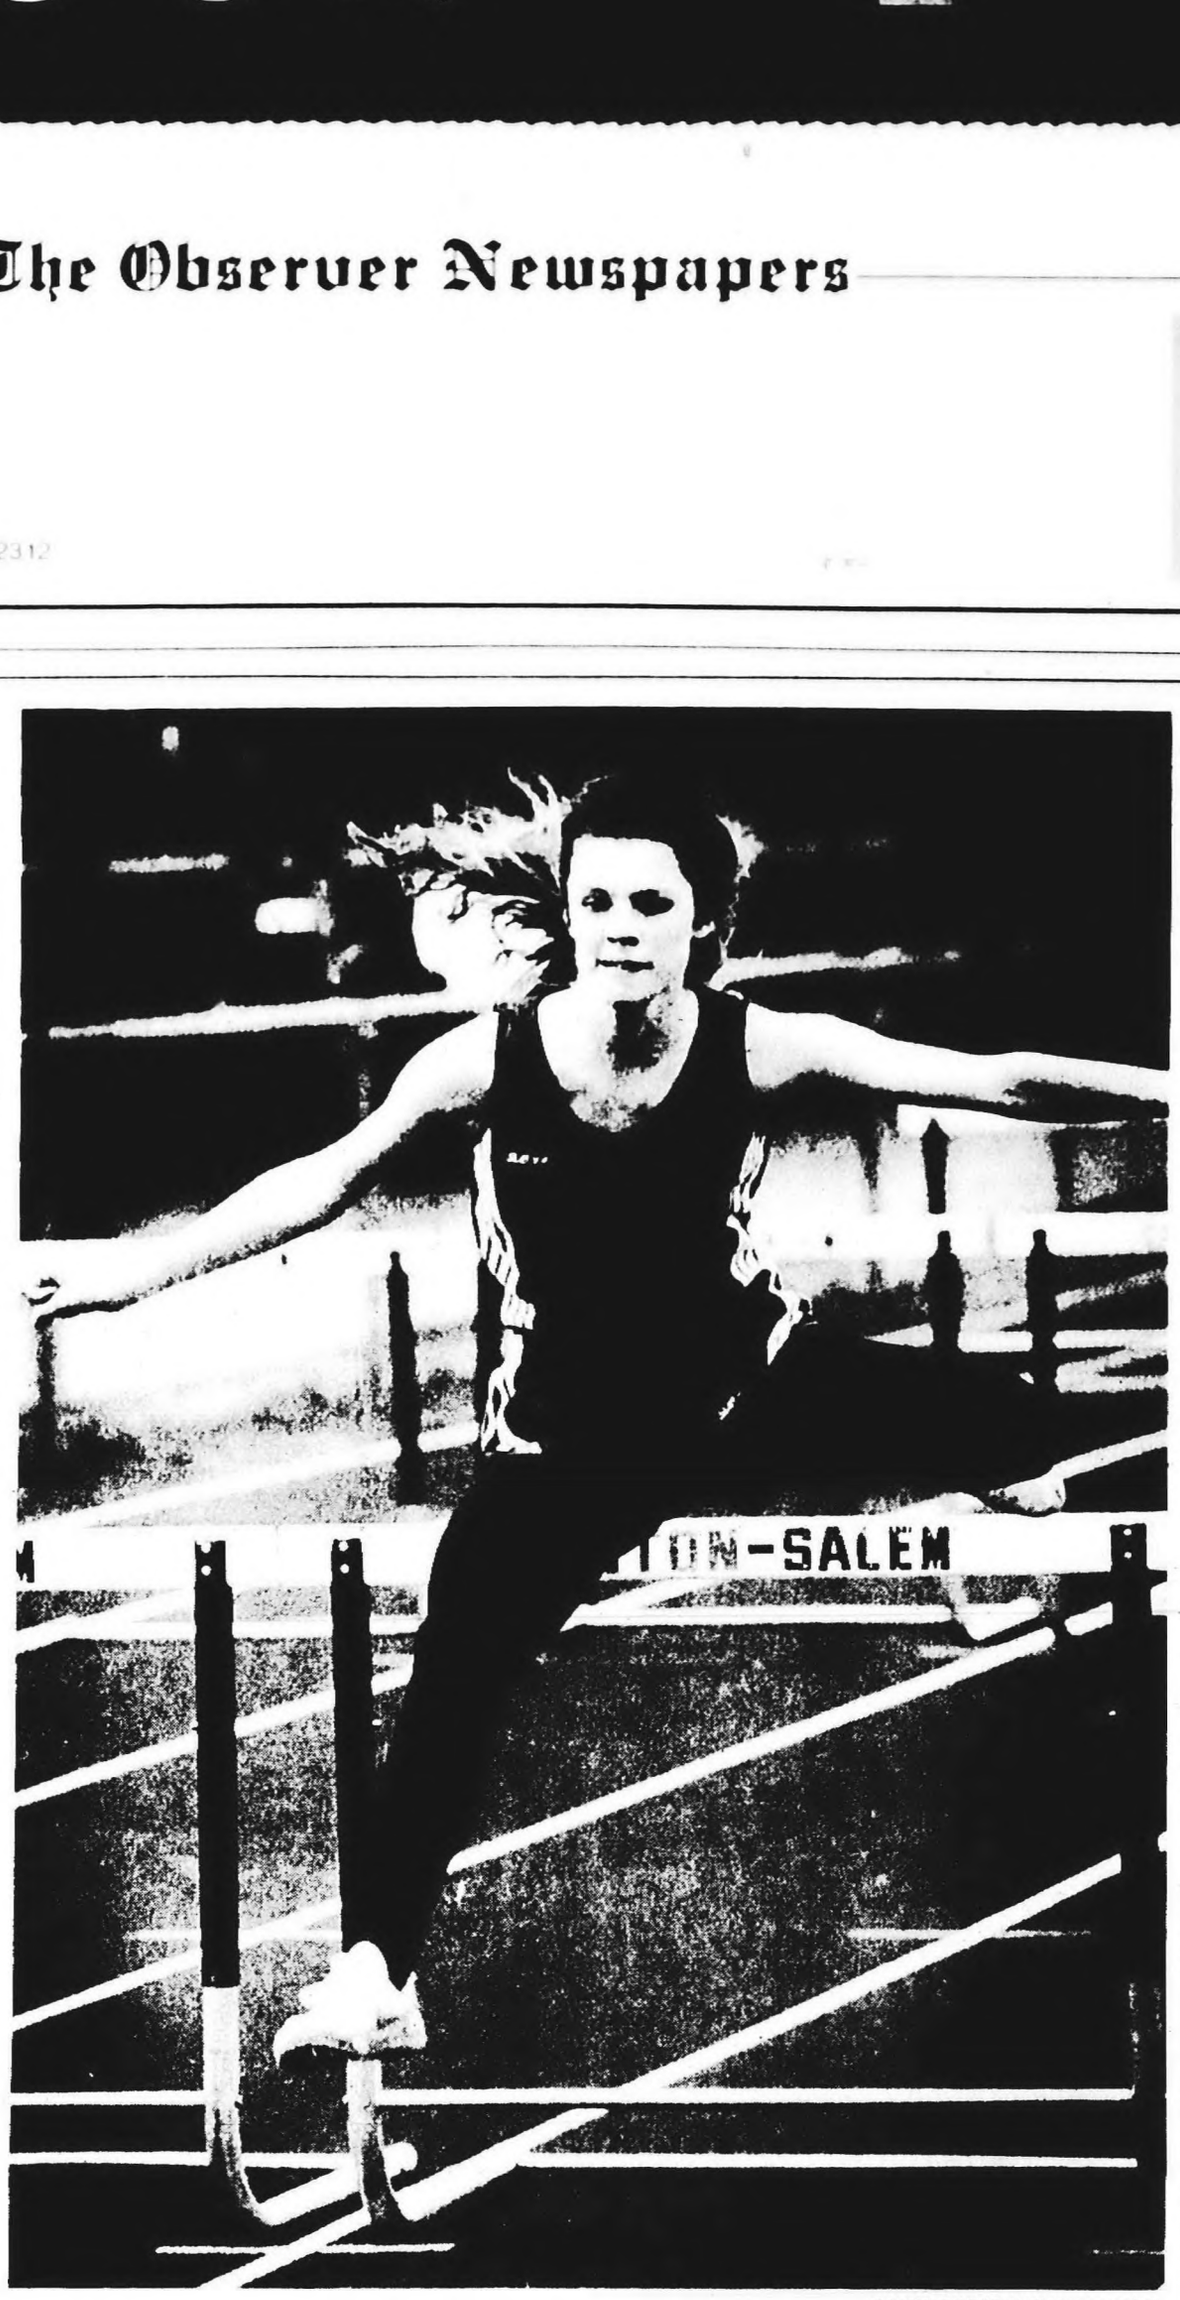

"(Winning the meet) made being on the team all four years worthwhile," said Figurski, who also is a vocal supporter of her teammates when she's not competing herself.

"I like to be loud. I like to let people know I care about them," she added.

Seeing a talented team, dominated by a long-suffering senior class, finally capture the top prize was a gratifying experience for Przygodski.

"It's great to stand back and see them get so excited about accom-

Tonya Walaskay scored eight of Canton's 88 team points, her main contribution being a third-place finish in the 100-meter hurdles. The Chiefs edged Livonia Churchill to win the team championship.

Canton bounces Brighton

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The next opponent in Plymouth Canton's continuing quest for soccer supremacy will not be so easily overcome.

Saturday's regional final has "big game" written all over it.

Following a comparative breather Wednesday in which the Chiefs dropped Brighton 4-1, coach Don Smith's team faces its biggest challenge based on the pre-tournament state rankings.

No. 1-rated Kalamazoo Central stands in the way of a regional championship for Canton, which improved to 14-2-1. Game time is set for 1 p.m. at Okemos High School.

The Maroon Giants, who eliminated Holland West Ottawa 4-0 Wednesday, represented themselves well last year when eventual state champ Plymouth Salem needed a shootout to get past them at the same stage of the tournament.

"FROM WHAT I understand, they're very aggressive, although our players usually rise to the occasion," Smith said. "If they play hard and aggressive, I'm sure our girls will do the same."

After watching his team dispose of Brighton, 14-6-2 and champion of the Expressway League, with relative ease, Smith added a word of caution, however.

"The girls are so used to playing the Churchills and Stevensons I don't think they know how good Kalamazoo can be," he said. "I think they'll realize it right away."

Perhaps junior Shannon Meath, who scored two goals in Canton's third straight post-season win, can help with the preparations. She has played opposite many of the Kalamazoo players during summer league competition.

"I know who they are and what skills they have," Meath said. "We've heard so much about them, so we know we'll have to get up. That game we'll play our game."

THE CHIEFS DIDN'T play poorly by any means Wednesday, but one had to wonder if the 90-degree heat, injuries to two starters and some pregame distractions might have had a combined negative effect.

Not to mention the fact Canton was coming off its biggest win of the season — a 3-2 defeat of Salem in the district final — and was playing a team it had blanked 4-0 and outshot 31-0 in the season opener.

Canton wins city tourney; district rematch possible

The next meeting between Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem on the baseball diamond could be for more than bragging rights.

Canton won the last rights Saturday, defeating Salem 9-5 to capture the Plymouth City tournament, which also included Ann Arbor Huron and Ann Arbor Pioneer.

In fact, Canton has won all three games against Salem this year, but neither coach is talking about a fourth meeting until it actually happens.

Canton and Salem are among four teams in the Class A district Saturday at Walled Lake Western, and there's a chance they could face each other again in the final.

The Chiefs meet Bloomfield Hills Lahser in the semifinal round at 10 a.m., followed by Salem's semifinal game at noon against Novi. If both Canton and Salem win, they will meet for the championship at 2 p.m.

THE DISTRICT champion goes to the regional at Plymouth Canton/Salem on Saturday, June 11. The loser goes home.

Why are we already talking about the matchup, when the district hasn't even started?

"If Salem's there, they are; if they aren't, they aren't," said Canton coach Fred Crissey. "We can't worry about a second game, though, unless we win the first game.

'It's a good possibility both Plymouth teams will make it to the district final, but there are no gimmes.'

— John Gravlin
Salem baseball coach

"It would be nice to see two Plymouth teams in the district final. Then to have one team represent the city in the regionals is a feather in the community's cap."

John Gravlin, coach of defending district champion Salem, said: "It's a good possibility both Plymouth teams will make it to the district final, but there are no 'gimmes.' I'm not counting my chickens before they hatch."

BOTH TEAMS WON the openers of the Plymouth City tournament to make it to the finals. Canton then took advantage of Salem's second-line pitching in the championship game, winning 9-5 behind the seven-hit pitching of Chris Kennedy, now 7-1.

With ace pitcher Todd Marion hurting because of a sore right arm, Scott Sanchez started for Salem and lasted just one-third of an inning. Reliever Howie Blanchard took the loss in three innings of work.

Ed Hanna was 3-for-4 with three RBI and Jeff Kugelman and Joel Riggs had two hits each for Canton. Mike Stout and Chris Michalek collected two hits each for Salem.

Canton advanced to the championship by whipping Huron on its own field, 8-3. Mike Sulak went the distance to post his sixth win against two losses.

Mike Culver had a solo home run among his two hits, and Hanna delivered the key hit, a three-run double during a six-run fifth inning. Kevin Learned added an RBI single.

SALEM'S BOB FILES allowed 13 hits in the Rocks opener Saturday but held on to defeat Pioneer 17-9.

Steve Woodard had four hits and scored three runs. Tim Lake singled three times and drove in two runs. Stout and Brad Wright had two hits and two RBI each.

Gravlin is hoping to have Marion back at 100 percent for Saturday's action.

"His arm has been tender for about a week and a half," Gravlin said. "He had about a 10-day rest, but it's still sore.

"It's a bit frightening for a pitcher who is going to play at the University of Michigan next year. We'll just try to get him ready for Saturday."

Price returns to cage game

By Brad Emons

You may know Fred Price, the boys track coach, but Livonia Churchill fans will also reacquaint themselves with Fred Price, the boys basketball coach.

Price, who has turned out several outstanding track teams over the past two decades, was named last week to replace Don Albertson as the school's varsity cage coach. (Albertson resigned early last month after posting a record of 82-89 in eight seasons.)

It will be Price's second stint as Churchill varsity coach. He coached the Chargers from 1976 through '79, posting two winning seasons out of three.

"He's a very good basketball person and I'm pleased," said Churchill athletic director Larry Joiner, who conducted interviews for the vacant position along with principal William McFarland.

"We're pleased to have somebody on the staff with his credentials who wanted to do the job. We're lucky to have him because he has high standards. I believe we'll have a complete program with him in there."

PRICE, WHO spent the past five years as the freshman boys coach, mulled over the decision right up until the May 13 application deadline for Livonia Public School employees.

"In a person's life you have challenges and I decided on the last day that I'd like to take it," Price said. "One of the factors was since I teach in the building, I have a lot of pride and loyalty toward the Churchill athletic program."

The decision to take another shot at the job came after Price discussed the possibility of returning to varsity coaching with his family.

"We talked about it a lot at home," said Price, whose son Greg will be a senior on the Northville basketball team, one of Churchill's divisional opponents.

(Price's daughter, Shannon, is also a three-sport athlete at Northville, while his wife, Linda, is an elementary school teacher in Livonia.)

"I did it knowing my son still had his senior year," Price said. "I know it's going to be a tough year for everybody to go through, but I think my family understands the situation."

PRICE SAID he'll remain as the school's track coach and will concentrate on basketball once the state track meet concludes on Saturday.

"We'll sit down with the prospects as soon as we can and try to get something done this summer," the new coach said. "I know the district doesn't have middle school sports, but we'll have to work over the shortcomings. I'm going to work to the best of my ability.

"We'll provide clinics again for the younger kids and hope some day the administration sees fit to reinstate a program for that age level. And I have faith they will bring it back."

Several Livonia basketball coaches, including Albertson, have resigned during the past couple of years in response to the district's unwillingness to provide competitive feeder program for grades 7-8.

"It will be a tough year to get things started, but I know we'll work hard to run a class program," he said. "My five years as a freshman coach was a fun experience. It allowed me to be in basketball and support the Churchill program."

LAST SEASON, Churchill finished with a 12-10 record. Four of five starters graduated, with the exception of 6-3 junior forward Jason Belaire, who is a standout on Price's track team.

Price is unsure about who will coach the JV and freshman teams next year, but he said he plans to have his staff in line by the time the summer season starts.

"The thing is the girls get caught up in playing like the competition," Smith said. "It's always like that in any sport. If the other team plays slow so do you."

The Chiefs arrived in Brighton to find the game had been moved to another field due to flooding at the original site that damaged the foundation around a light pole.

Then, the game was delayed nearly 30 minutes because two officials failed to show up and substitutes had to be recruited from the crowd.

FURTHERMORE, THE field at the new location wasn't in the best of shape since a game was not expected to be played there.

"This won't help our game, but if anybody was scouting us it won't hurt us," Smith said.

"This was a good game for us," he added later, "but it wasn't a restful game for us, by no means, getting two people hurt."

If the other circumstances weren't enough, injuries early in the game added to Canton's frustration, which was magnified by the heat.

The game was only seven minutes old when goalkeeper Jen Saul suffered a bruised shoulder, the result of a collision following a corner kick. Then fullback Chris Zawacki left the game with a bruised knee midway in the first half.

MICHELLE FORTIER, a midfielder who serves as the backup goalie, had to shift gears and take Saul's place in the net with the game still scoreless.

"I played goalie for Mr. Smith's bonanza team for four years," Fortier said.

"At halftime, (Saul) asked me if I wanted to come out, but I guess you could say we're looking forward to Saturday's game and decided to rest her."

By going in goal, Fortier saw less action than she normally would have since the Bulldogs tested her only once until late in the game when they got off several good shots.

"I'm never afraid to put her in there," Smith said. "She's a very proficient goalie; I just hate to lose her on the field.

"She knows what she's doing, though she came out a little too soon on that one."

THE ONE WAS the only goal the Bulldogs scored. With the Chiefs holding a safe 3-0 lead, DeDe Fitchett lifted a shot that fell in behind Fortier before she could get back.

Meath made sure their was no comeback, scoring her second goal with less than seven minutes to play. She merely raised her left foot to deflect a throw-in into the net.

She also scored the opening goal on a header that went back across the grain following a corner kick by Jenny Russell. Ayana Nash made it 2-0 at halftime after scoring off a rebound.

Chargers edge Mercy in overtime, 4-3

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

One of a soccer player's first lessons: Don't give up on the ball.

It means persevere. Don't let up on a play.

Farmington Hills Mercy applied that lesson in a broader sense in last night's state regional game against visiting Livonia Churchill. The Marlins, trailing by three goals with 12 minutes left, refused to give up.

And their perseverance almost cost Churchill.

The key word is "almost." Mercy mounted a miraculous rally in those final dozen minutes to knot the score at 3-all and force overtime, but Churchill was able to regain both its composure and the lead to post a 4-3 victory.

THE WIN allows the Chargers (12-3) to advance to the regional finals against Troy at 7 p.m. Saturday at Troy Athens. Troy defeated Birmingham Marian 1-0 yesterday to advance.

In the second 10-minute overtime, Rosemary Hally's free kick from the right side of the field got through to Shannon Stacherski, who punched it to Mandy Mase on the left side of the net. Mase booted it past Larabell for the game-winner.

It never should have come to that. Churchill had not surrendered a goal in previous state tournament wins over Livonia Ladywood and Livonia Stevenson, and for nearly 70 minutes the Chargers had shutout Mercy.

CHURCHILL SCORED once in the first half, when Tracy Lingeman's shot hit the crossbar and deflected into the net behind Marlin keeper Kelly Beaudry.

Still, the Chargers kept applying the pressure. It paid off twice in the first 20 minutes of the second half, as Stacherski and Lori Place teammed up twice for goals.

A Stacherski corner kick was headed in by Place to make it 2-0, then Stacherski centered a pass to Place, who converted to make it 3-0.

But then came the letdown, and Mercy came alive after a hand ball inside the penalty area was called against Churchill. Stacy Nolta converted the penalty kick to narrow the gap to 3-1.

With five minutes to play in regulation, Dana Lehmkuhl lofted a shot from 25 yards out that carried over the outstretched hands of Cervi, pulling Mercy to within a goal. Nolta got the tying goal, off a throw-in by Elizabeth DeMattia.

Rocks perform well despite team's middle-of-pack finish

Plymouth Salem made a stronger showing than its sixth-place finish would indicate in the Western Lakes Activities Association girls track and field meet Tuesday.

Farmington, despite an injury to one of its top sprinters, still won two relays and had the highest finish of the three city schools in the annual gathering of league schools, which took place at Northville.

Winning two field events (the 3,200-meter relay and the 100 hurdles), the Rocks were the early leaders. They scored 45 points in the first six events and were nine points ahead of eventual winner Plymouth Canton, then in second place.

Salem, however, failed to score in the next five events and managed just six the rest of the meet.

"The events we scored in were the ones I expected us to," coach Mark Gregor said.

"WE HAD A lull between the 100 dash and the 300-meter hurdles when we didn't score, and that took us out of contention."

Amy Hobgood, Jenny Sample, Kim Mishler and Traci Thomas were just one-tenth of a second off their season-best time of 9:59.3 in winning the relay.

Shelley Bohlen won the shot put with a throw of 35 feet, 7½ inches, and Kim Ploucha won the long jump at a distance of 16 feet — the best jump of the season by an Observer-land athlete.

Hurdler Jennifer Harris moved into the No. 2 spot on the weekly Observer list of 100-meter hurdles times, winning that event in 16.2.

Farmington ended up fourth in the 12-team meet, North Farmington fifth and Harrison eighth.

THE FALCONS won the 400 and 800 relays despite the absence of Carrie Maier, who pulled a hamstring muscle last Friday in the Oakland County meet.

Coach Bruce Brown pulled Jo Fox from the 100 dash and put her in the 800 relay in place of Maier. Instead of running Nicole Tocco in the 200 dash, Brown entered her in the 400 relay.

Tocco, Fox, Shelli Gaul and Angie Forge won the 400 relay in 50.9, equaling the team's season best. Fox, Amy Trunk, Tocco and Forge ran 1:46.8 to win the 800.

"We still won the 400 and 800, but it made us weaker in some open events," Brown said. "I think (Maier's absence) made a difference. But, even if we had Carrie, I don't think we would have had the depth to beat Canton.

"It's something we knew all along — that we didn't have the depth to win a big meet — but didn't want to admit that."

Farmington's Kristi Devine and Julie Lawton were second in the discus and high jump, respectively.

North was led by DeDe Newman, who won the 100 dash in 12.5 and took second in the 200 at 26.5. Teammate Suzi Butcher was runner-up in the shot put.

Harrison was led by Jane Peters, who was third in the 300-meter hurdles, and Tracey Radke, who placed third in the long jump.

plishing what they wanted to do," he said.

"When the money is on the line, we've got a lot of kids who want to come out on the track," he added. "It's like taking the last shot in basketball, we have a lot of kids who want to take that last shot."

KANTOR AND SPRINTER Gretchen Loyd turned in sterling performances for Churchill. Besides winning the 3,200 run, Kantor also captured the 1,600 and was second in the 800. Loyd claimed double wins, too, in the 400 and 200 dashes.

"It was tough to lose by three points," said Churchill first-year coach Kelly Graham. "It would have been easier to take if we had lost by 20. I'm disappointed, but we have a good, quality team."

Salem, which dominated the early part of the meet, had four first places: Shelley Bohlen in the shot put, Kim Ploucha in the long jump, Jennifer Harris in the 100 hurdles and the 3,200 relay team.

Chiefs fare well in girls relays at Ypsi

Plymouth Canton placed third among a field of eight teams last Friday at the Lady Braves Relays.

Canton scored 74 points to earn third behind second-place Detroit Henry Ford with 82 and host Ypsilanti, which ran away from the field with 107 points.

The four-mile relay team notched Canton's only first, but four second-place finishes and three thirds also were responsible for the Chiefs' lofty finish.

Members of the four-mile relay team which crossed the tape at 23:50.1 were Kris Marquard, Cindy Spessard, Lori Penland and Missy Jasnowski.

The high jump relay crew of Angie Miller, Marisa Dersey and Tonya Walaskay finished second at 14-2. Penland, Sherry Figurski, Adrienne Garrow and Marnie Smith had a two-mile relay time of 10:37.2 and took a second.

The eight-mile relay team also finished second, and it consisted of Cindy Spessard, Marquard, Jasnowski and Cathy McCabe.

In the 440 throwers relay, Katurah Reid, Carrie Pyhtila, Susan Ferko and Imeonaa Okwumadua had a 57.1 to finish second.

Taking third with a combined long jump of 41-½ were Walaskay, Heather Miller and Figurski. The shuddle hurdle relay team of Bobbi Conville, Erin McDonald, Tina Allman and Walaskay also placed third at 1:14.1.

Canton's other third-place showing came in the 880 relay in which Angie Miller, Kristy Brugar, Heather Miller and Tricia Carney clocked 1:49.6.

St. Agatha 3rd in league meet

Redford St. Agatha finished third in the Catholic League C-D Division girls track meet held last week at Macomb Community College.

The Aggies scored 78 points in the team standings behind Detroit DePorres (148) and Redford St. Mary's of Detroit (97).

Diana Iafrate was a double winner for the Aggies, capturing the discus (97 feet, 11 inches) and shot put (31-5½).

Agatha's Cathy Samuel added a first in the 1,600-meter run (6:15.2) and was a member of the victorious 3,200 relay squad (11:11.7) along with Laura Opipari, Kelly Carr and Chris Foley.

Jenny Belleville added a second in the high jump (4-5). Third places went to Chris Furman in the discus (81-7) and Becky Pruneau in the 1,600 (no time available).

London county champ

Farmington High School's Brandon London just missed setting a school record when he won the 800-meter run in the Oakland County meet last Friday.

The Falcon senior turned in a fabulous time of 1:53.7 but was still 0.2 off the mark set by former teammate Al Stebbins.

Farmington Harrison was 11th in the boys competition, and Farmington was right behind in 12th. In the girls meet, the Falcons were eighth. North Farmington tied for 17th and Harrison finished in a 21st-place tie.

Julie Lawton of Farmington jumped 5-5 to finish second in the high jump, and the 400 relay team of Carrie Maier, Jo Fox, Shelli Gaul and Angie Forge was second in 50.4.

The Falcon girls also placed fourth in the 800 relay with Maier, Amy Trunk, Nicole Tocco and Forge running 1:46.5.

North's DeDe Newman and Suzi Butcher were fourth in the 100 dash and discus, respectively, as was Harrison's Jane Peters in the 300 hurdles.

Student plans timber-wolf study

Bill Parker

'I'd like to make a video, but I've been told it's pretty hard to video tape a timber wolf. I may have to rely on figures and numbers.'

— Bob Kowal
Rochester Adams student

THE TIMBER WOLF population on Isle Royal, the last remaining population of timber wolves in Michigan, has dwindled down to a scarce few and a local student wants to know why. To find an answer, Rochester Adams senior Bob Kowal will spend 10 days on the island this July conducting a study on the predator/prey relationship between the wolf and moose populations.

"I'd like to make a video, but I've been told it's pretty hard to video tape a timber wolf. I may have to rely on figures and numbers," Kowal said.

"At one point, I think the population (of wolves on Isle Royal) was up around 50. That number should have dropped off some until it reached the carrying capacity (of the island), then leveled off. It seems to be pretty low right now. They (Isle Royal rangers) are beginning to worry about extinction."

When Kowal completes the project he will submit a detailed report of his procedures, findings and conclusion to the Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC). He'll receive a scholarship for his work ranging $350-$1,000.

KOWAL IS AMONG 11 Michigan high school students who qualified for the third annual MichCon/MUCC Scholarship Competition. The program is open to all high school juniors and seniors pursuing a career in natural resource management. Contestants must plan and design a conservation-related project and manage the project to a successful completion by Sept. 30. The completed projects will be evaluated by a staff of professionals and awards will be made. Five students will each receive a scholarship for $1,000 while the remaining six will each receive a scholarship for $350. The projects will be on display Feb. 24 to March 5, at the Detroit Outdoorama '89 Sport and Travel Show at the Michigan State Fair Grounds.

A couple of other local students are also competing. Jonathon Chase, a senior at Southfield-Lathrup, will conduct a pond ecology study at the Birmingham Environmental Center. When his project is completed, Chase will make recommendations for restoring the ecological balance to the pond environment.

Troy resident Vinit Doshi, a senior at Warren High School, plans to develop a neighborhood "adopt a tree" program by planting and nurturing trees in his neighborhood.

KOWAL IS no rookie to the scholarship competition. Last year he received a $350 MichCon/MUCC scholarship for producing a 12-minute video tape on the effects of acid rain on a lake. The video is being used in classes at Van Hoosen Junior High School and Rochester Adams High School.

Chris Morasky, a 1987 Livonia Stevenson graduate, received one of the $1,000 scholarships last year.

Using radio telemetry, Morasky studied the lifestyle of eastern screech owls.

Morasky used the scholarship to attend the University of Wisconson at Stevens Point. He is studying wildlife management and holds a 4.0 grade point average.

THOUSANDS OF ANGLERS will hit the waters of Lake Huron, Lake St. Clair, Lake Erie and the Detroit and St. Clair rivers this weekend for the fourth annual Walleye Weekend.

Prizes of a 16-foot Lund Rebel Aluminum boat, a Trailmaster trailer and a 30-horsepower Johnson outboard motor will be awarded to the anglers who catch the biggest walleye on each body of water. Other prizes will also be awarded, including the grand prize of a 28-foot Sea Ray Amberjack boat for catching one of three specially tagged walleye.

True, anglers participating in Walleye Weekend will be the winners. But the real winners will be a special group of children.

Sponsored by the American Lung Association of Southeast Michigan and Charley's Restaurants Inc. the tournament will benefit the ALASM.

"The bottom line is that the money from Walleye Weekend will be used to support a specific program: Camp Sun Deer," said Jim Stickney, community relations director for ALASM. "Camp Sun Deer is a summer camp for children with severe asthma. The camp is totally free to the children, and it offers them an opportunity to have a normal camping experience. Usually, because of medication and special care, these kids can't go camping, but with the staff and facilities at Camp Sun Deer (including nurses, pharmacists and doctors) they have this opportunity."

Last year the tournament raised $31,000 for ALASM. Tournament officials are shooting to raise a record $40,000 this year.

Registration is $15, and today is the last day to register. Interested anglers may register at the Lung Association, 18860 W. 10 Mile, Southfield. Call Stickney for details at 559-5100.

Ballet activity can affect menstrual cycle

Dear Myrna: I'm a ballet dancer. I've been dancing 14 years. The last few years I've had bad problems with stress fractures in my feet. My menstrual cycle is totally out of order. I hardly have one. I've been concerned lately. Can you give me some information?

Have you been seeing a doctor regularly? An an exercise expert, I derive some of my knowledge from medical journals I read.

Ballet dancers are overworked. Aerobic instructors share similar problems (I know — sometimes I'm an overworked aerobic instructor myself).

While ballet dancers always have been admired for their spirit and form, they are not without problems as you are discovering. You should know that a high incidence of irregular menstrual periods has been observed in young ballet dancers. The skeletal proportions and hormonal secretions have been observed to be altered, although no permanent medical problems have been reported.

Also, a delay in menarche (first menstrual period) and prolonged intervals of absent menstrual periods may predispose dancers to stress fractures. Low estrogen levels often occur when the menstrual cycle is disturbed.

In a recent study published by the New England Journal of Medicine, 75 professional dancers were surveyed for menstrual disorders, numbers of injuries and fractures and eating disorders.

The results show 24 percent of those dancers were found to have scoliosis of the spine, and dancers with scoliosis had a delayed menarche by an average of two years. This 24 percent also showed abnormal eating behavior. More than half of these 75 dancers suffered stress fractures — mostly in the feet.

The conclusion suggests that low levels of estrogen, which lowers calcium absorption, were a primary cause for the increased stress fractures and scoliosis. The dancers' diets also were found to be low in calcium and Vitamin D.

For you, the answer might be to monitor your diet to ensure adequate intake of calcium and Vitamin D. Be aware of overtraining which may carry a price tag that is too high.

You didn't indicate just how much you dance. Obviously, too much (or at least for now). Take it easy!

Stevenson girls coach calling it quits

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

One of the "Founding Mothers" of girls soccer in Livonia has called it quits.

Norene Divens, the only girls soccer coach in the history of the sport at Livonia Stevenson, has resigned to devote more time to her teaching duties. A long-time gymnastics instructor, Divens also was responsible in 1974 for forming the first-ever competitive girls soccer team in Livonia.

Divens guided Stevenson to two state Class A titles and a 10-year record of 153-23-12 overall. No successor has been named, Stevenson athletic director Roger Frayer said.

Divens coached her last game Saturday, when Stevenson bowed out of the state Class A playoffs, losing 1-0 to Livonia Churchill in district play.

Divens teaches gymnastics for the Livonia Leisure Times Program, and also works in the Livonia Public School System as a gymnastics instructor for special education and visually-impaired students.

"What started out as teaching a couple classes a week in gymnastics has snowballed into 22," said the 49-year-old Divens. "Now that I teach those in special education and the visually impaired, it had reached a point where I was leaving home at seven in the morning and not getting back after soccer practice until seven or eight o'clock at night."

THE VACATED POSITION was posted in the Livonia Public School system Wednesday (May 25). Frayer said three coaches outside the LPS have inquired about the job, but are not allowed to submit an application until next Wednesday (June 8), two weeks after the job was posted for LPS employees only.

Among Divens' coaching accomplishments at Stevenson:

- Guided the Spartans to the state championship in 1983, the first year the Michigan High School Athletic Association recognized a champion in girls soccer.
- Another state Class A title in 1985, after being runners-up in 1984.
- Three regional crowns.
- Four district titles.
- In both 1979 and 1985, Stevenson teams finished the season undefeated.
- Winning the Schoolcraft College Invitational in 1981 and 1982.
- Twice, Divens was named Michigan's Coach of the Year.

Asked about what Divens meant to Stevenson's program, Frayer said "She is the program. I can't say enough about what she meant to soccer. She took soccer from its infant stages (1978), and got us to being of state championship caliber. I'm going to miss her. She was one of those old-time coaches who coached for the entire program. When it was the off-season for soccer, she was one of the coaches you'd see at Stevenson basketball and hockey games."

DIVENS COUNTS the state titles as fond memories, but the game she remembers most wasn't for a divisional, conference or state crown.

"I think of the one game against (Birmingham) Groves in 1979 or '80," recalled Divens. "It was a real tight game — the score was 2-2 with five minutes left — and we ended up blowing them out 6-2.

"I remember that day because the field was under water and it smelled like sewer water. A couple of my players also were gymnasts, and after the game, the were doing handstands and backflips in the water because they were so happy."

Divens said she will miss her working relationship with Frayer and the bond she shared with her players.

"I loved coaching and I still see some of the kids who graduated from my first year of coaching," she said. "I'll miss the kids and being around the school. I really enjoyed working for Roger. He's real organized and efficient. Most people don't realized what AD's have to go through."

DIVENS SAID she does not have a say in naming her successor. Frayer, however, hopes to discuss the opening with Divens "to get her thoughts and recommendations."

"It will be hard to find someone as knowledgeable and as successful as Norene from the Livonia Public School System. Heck, it'll be hard to find a coach from anywhere as good as Norene."

Mary Kay Hussey, who played on Stevenson's state championship teams and graduated in 1985, assisted Divens this year. Hussey, who does not work for the Livonia Public Schools, is expected to apply for the job, when it is open for those applicants outside the LPS.

"Mary Kay has been a tremendous help," said Divens. "I don't know what we could have done without her.

"I think of the kids I coached who are now graduated. It's time for them to get into the coaching end of it."

Frayer said he hopes to name Divens' replacement before June 24, when school lets out for summer vacation.

"Soccer is a program that is involved in off-season stuff," said Frayer. "Norene used to always have a Bonanza League team for Stevenson players in the summer and she'd follow incoming players. That would be something I'd like to see continued."

Question: structure or fine art

By Corinne Abatt
special writer

GILBERT SILVERMAN, internationally Known art collector and a leading arts benefactor, has been ordered by the city of Farmington Hills to remove the structure in front of the building at 30833 Northwestern (south of 13 Mile) in which the offices of Holtzman and Silverman are located. He's contesting the order.

For one thing he objects to the word "structure." As far as Silverman, sculptor Michael Hall, head of the Cranbrook Academy of Art sculpture department, and many arts-oriented people are concerned, "Covington," 1977 is a work of art. But Farmington Hills has no provision in its building code for a work of art and the six-member Zoning Board of Appeals voted 5-1 against having it on the lawn in front of the building.

Silverman said, "I'm going to pursue any legal means my attorney (Kaufman and Payton) advises me."

Lee Blizman, supervisor of code enforcement, said, "A structure in the front yard is not permitted — signs and flag poles are exceptions."

Farmington Hills city manager William Costick said he had had complaints about it as long as a month ago, "People think it's a piece of fence. People think it's an old barricade, and they wonder how long we're gonna leave it there."

LOUIS REDSTONE, Livonia based architect, artist and author of the book, "Public Art, New Directions," made a special trip out to see the work.

"It is an absolute work of art," he said. "This (kind of furor over a work of art) happened in Grand Rapids, in Chicago — all over the country. In Grand Rapids, it was the Calder, now they have a festival around it every year . . . sculpture is just like jazz or classical music, people have to be educated to appreciate it."

Beverly Ellis, chairwoman of the Farmington Area Arts Commission and retired chair of elementary art for the Farmington schools, said she hadn't been contacted about it, but she had some definite opinions nevertheless.

"Art in a public place is a tremendous move. If the piece of art is by a legitimate artist, I don't think the layman has a right to question it."

She recalled the objections to the Noguchi Fountain in Detroit's Hart Plaza when it was first erected and the many people who called a (Don Snider) sculpture at the corner or Maple and Telegraph a pile of junk when it first went up. Both are still there and the complaints have subsided.

"You don't have to like it to appreciate it. It's a matter of respect for the work. I still think it boils down to appreciation. I can appreciate something, but I wouldn't want it in my house. If they want this in their front yard, that's fine. Anything man makes is subject to positive and negative criticism."

ARTIST GLEN MICHAELS has done major sculptural installations and commissions throughout the country, including Detroit Receiving Hospital and the People Mover and currently has a major commission for the the Library, Museum and Archives in Lansing. He looked at a photograph of the sculpture and had an immediate response.

"He's based it on a symbol of Americana," Michaels said. "We're rushing into development (of the countryside) so fast that soon the only thing that's left of the past will be Michael Hall's sculpture. He's one of the few artists in the United States salvaging a poetic memory of the past. Nobody knows what a country stile or a farm gate is anymore."

Hall's work hasn't gone unnoticed by people who work and do business along Northwestern.

Jim Meadows, a professional photographer from Marysville, and Don Helson of Ferndale looked at it from the parking lot of the building across the highway.

"If you had told me it was a fence, I would have said it looks like a broken down fence they were going to haul away," Meadows said with a wry smile.

Helson, a retired professional wood carver, smiled in agreement.

"I thought they were just moving junk," he said. "It does nothing for that building. All that does is become an eyesore."

Dennis Stevens of Lake Angelus, who stopped in the parking lot beside the sculpture, said, "When I saw it, I said to myself wouldn't that be neat if that was the place where there really was a gate. I have a thing (sculpture) in a building I have in Pontiac, I don't know what it is.

"It doesn't have the significance that this has," Stevens said. "Nobody would look at a building like this that's won all kinds of masonry awards and say the guy forgot to take a piece of fence down. Maybe they should put a plaque on it. If every building up and down Northwestern had a sculpture, nobody would complain."

Sculptor Hall refused to be drawn into the fray. In this instance, he said, his most appropriate comments on sculpture could be found in the first chapter of his book, "Stereoscopic Perspective: Reflections on American Fine and Folk Art" published by UMI Research Press.

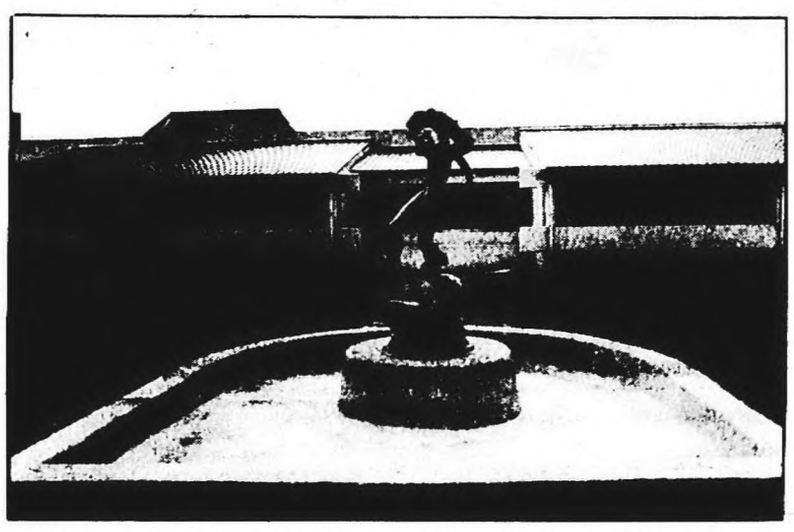

This is the first time the sculpture has drawn any negative comment, he said. "It has a long and illustrious history."

It has been exhibited outdoors at the Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, New York City; Everson Museumm, Syracuse, N.Y.; Whitney Museum, New York City; and indoors at the Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum, Bloomfield Hills.

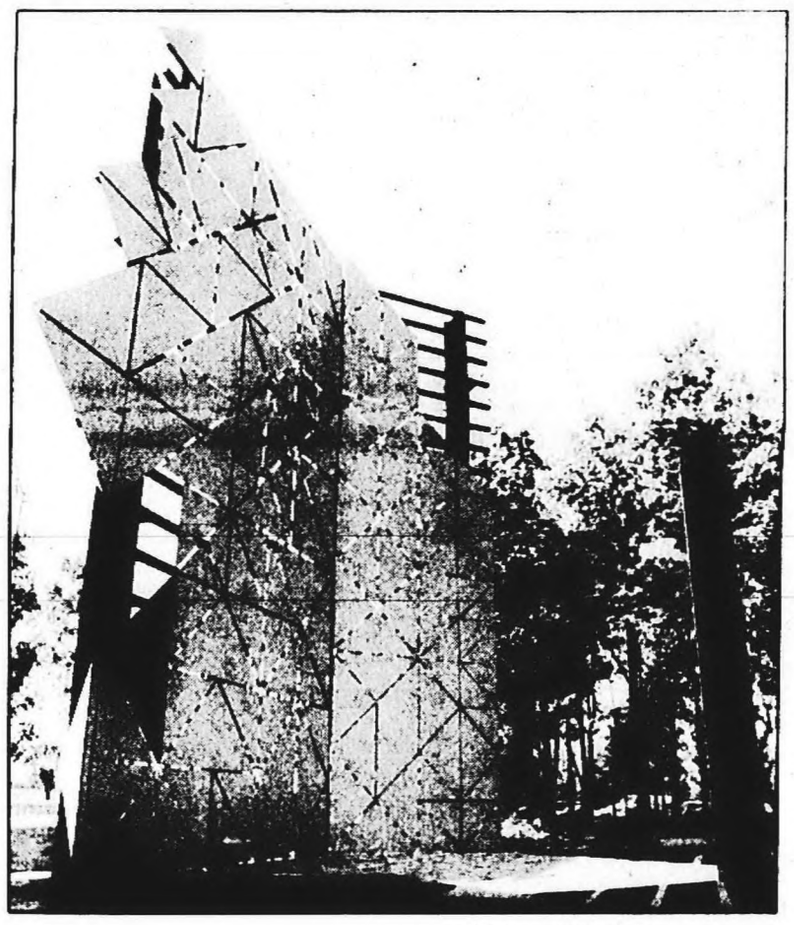

RANDY BORST/staff photographer

"Covington" was carefully positioned in front of the building and a shallow stream with weeping willows by the architect, Kenneth Newmann, and the sculptor, Michael Hall.

The earlier protests about the sculpture in front of the Farmington Hills Library were more concerned with its lack of clothing than whether it was a structure.

JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

"Star Gazer" by Michael Hall is on the Northwestern side of 300 Galleria Officecentre in Southfield. So far, it has been accepted without adverse comment.

Craftsman's Cove fills gaps for wood artists

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

PAT AND MARY Jene Sharp's Canton Township home is a testimony to Pat's hobby.

A wall unit here, an impressive cabinet with fancy molding to house Pat's rifle collection there, and a seven-foot oak dining table are a few of Pat's handiwork.

The grandson of a master cabinetmaker, Sharp learned the trade early in life.

Then he put the tools aside for more than a dozen years and began a career at Ford Motor Co., where he still works today at the Sheldon Road plant.

When he and Mary Jene married seven years ago, his boyhood hobby was rekindled.

"I WANTED A mantel. He had the tools," Mary Jene said.

Hesitant at first, Pat was up for the challenge after Mary Jene priced mantels that retailed for $800.

"It cost us $20 for the wood for him to build it," she said.

Sharp fine-tuned his craft by building bookshelves and wall units for his family and friends. Then came the more difficult pieces — his tall rifle cabinet, the table, and currently a bedroom suite.

"The problem was that he always seemed to need special parts that were available only by mail order through catalogues," she said.

But the net result was "solid oak pieces, the kind that become family heirlooms, and not one cost more than a few hundred dollars," Mary Jene said.

A wooden side leaf for the dining table took six months of heavy investigation and downright pleading with a Grand Rapids furniture maker to track down.

"ONE DAY MY HUSBAND was talking with a member of the Livonia carving association, who also works at Ford, and they were complaining about the trouble of getting things. You can't find these types of specialty items at your big hardware chains," she said.

So the Sharps, already filled with a desire to go into business for themselves, decided a specialty shop for woodworking hobbyists like themselves would be just the thing.

The result is the new Craftsman's Cove, a 1,000-square-foot showroom in a shopping strip called Plymouth Place Plaza in Livonia (Plymouth Road west of Stark).

Hot tools, ruby-tipped drill bits, whittling kits and the like are available there. Moulding, brass accents, and pattern kits favor modern, colonial and country styles.

"Livonia has one of the biggest carving guilds in the area," said Mary Jene, who quit her hospital radiology job a few weeks ago to devote full-time effort to setting up shop.

"It's something that's coming into its own."

FURNITURE PATTERNS, books on wood carving, routing and assorted building topics, strips of custom-designed molding specific for cabinetry, and professional wood turning tool sets are among the early inventory in stock.

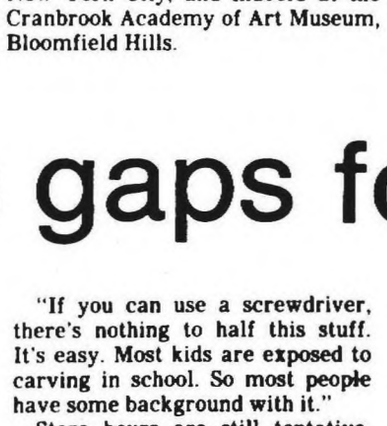

"You can't find these specialty items at big hardware chains. We're not going to compete with them. We want to fill in the gaps," she said.

Cabinetry accessories include kitchen sliders for easy tracking of pots and pans in low cabinets, a television slide mount that allows the viewer to pull out and also rotate the TV from its cabinet shelf, ornate brass cabinet handles, magnet hinges, wood glue, aluminum oxide sandpaper — even dust masks.

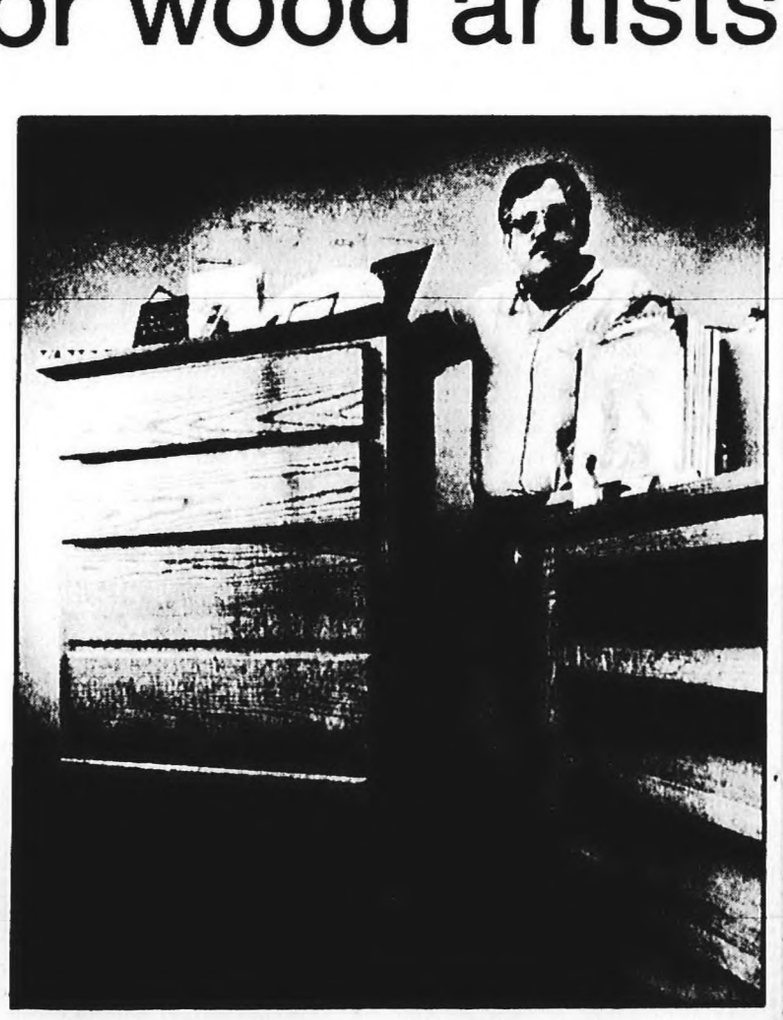

She hopes the store will attract "people who are into woodburning, carving, cabinetmaking." She said it's more than a hobby shop for men.

"If you can use a screwdriver, there's nothing to half this stuff. It's easy. Most kids are exposed to carving in school. So most people have some background with it."

Store hours are still tentative, but most likely 9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays and Saturday, and possibly four hours Sunday afternoon. Call 522-2708 for more information.

Practice makes perfect is something Sharp believes in.

Mona Grigg

I WAS at the luncheon Detroit Women Writers puts on every spring, waiting to hear what Stuart Dybek (easily one of my favorite writers) had to tell us, when someone asked me if I'd read any good books lately.

I rattled off a few titles — "Reconciliations" (a gorgeous book, "A Jewish Ordinary People," one reviewer called it) by Elizabeth Klein, a new and good friend I met while at Ragdale; "The Elizabeth Stories" by Isabel Huggan (wonderfully funny, too-true adolescent experiences); "Walking Across Egypt" by Clyde Edgerton (this book defies description. The jacket says, "The story of a spunky woman, a stray dog, a teenage delinquent, and the best home-cooking in Listre, North Carolina." That's good, though not quite it. Others have called it "delicious," "wise," "witty" and even "rollicking." I guess I would add "unforgettable." I can see myself visiting and revisiting Mattie and the other characters over and over again.)

I told the woman I'd been reading stories — lots and lots of short stories, including Peter Taylor's "The Old Forest and other Stories" (Wow!), Ellen Gilchrist's "In the Land of Dreamy Dreams" (Is that a great title? Could you resist?), Minnesota story-teller Carol Bly's collection, "Backbone," and, finally, after all these years, Tillie Olson's "Tell Me a Riddle."

BUT THE ONE BOOK I forgot to mention — I can't believe it — was Marilynn Robinson's "Housekeeping." Much as I loved that book when I read it just weeks ago, I had forgotten all about it until this morning, when I read a review of the movie from the book starring Birmingham's own, extremely talented, Christine Lahti. I knew before I read the book that Lahti was making the movie, and now I can't picture anyone else as the irredeemably weird Aunt Sylvie.

The language in "Housekeeping" is breathtaking, to put it mildly, and worth the effort it takes to drag yourself away from the characters and rest awhile in its mythic descriptions. The book takes place in Western Montana in a town called Fingerbone. Two young girls, orphaned when their mother's second attempt at suicide succeeds, live first with their beloved grandmother, then briefly with two maiden aunts terrified of raising children, and finally with their mother's sister, Aunt Sylvie, their only known living relative.

Sylvie is a mystery, even after she arrives. A Mary Poppins she is not, the girls discover, as tin cans fill up the living room and huge leaves collect in corners, and sofas pulled outside to air are left to fade and finally disintegrate.

SHE MIGHT HAVE been a hobo. She might have had a husband — and children. She might be getting ready to leave again. There is one thing for sure — she is a thief — but an honest one. She brings back what she steals. Over and over again, she "borrows" a fishing boat from a man who tries, but inevitably fails, to hide it in places where she can't find it. She needs it to get to an island — a mystical island — where, Sylvia says, children hide.

One night she takes Ruthie, the youngest of the girls (and the book's narrator), to the island, and they barely get into the boat before the owner reaches the shore.

"Lady!" he bawled. "I ignore him," Sylvie said. "He always acts like that. If he thinks someone's watching him, he just carries on more."

"I turned around and watched Sylvie. Her handling of the boat was strong and easy. When we were about 100 yards from the shore she turned the boat toward the north. The man, now back on the beach, was still yelling and dancing his wrath and pitching stones after us. 'It's pitiful,' Sylvie said. 'He's going to have a heart attack someday.'

"It must be his boat," I suggested.

"Sylvie shrugged. 'Or he might just be some sort of lunatic,' she said."

"Housekeeping" is disturbing, sad, funny, loving — and so exquisite I find myself time and again opening a page — any page — to read and sigh and read again.

INCIDENTALLY, I found out about both "Housekeeping" and "Walking Across Egypt" through bookstore employees who had read and loved them. Last summer I took a walking tour of Traverse City book stores and — this is the truth — after the briefest of conversations about books, each and every one of the booksellers asked me if I had read Olive Ann Burns' "Cold Sassy Tree." (I was beginning to think there was a conspiracy afoot — that they had all bought stock in Olive Ann Burns — but, OK, I read the darn book and it was every bit as wonderful as they all told me it would be.)

So don't hesitate to ask those people wandering around in bookstores anything you ever wanted to know about books. It's amazing how much those people read! They know everything. In fact, some bookstores even make up special racks of books recommended by their sales help. I like that. It's like going into a friend's home and asking about the books on the shelves.

So . . . Where was I? Oh, yes. That question: Read any good books lately? During the summer (the traditional reading months) I'll be asking friends (including those book people) to tell us about their favorite books. Maybe you have some you want to share? Write and tell us. That's what friends are for.

condo queries
Robert M. Meisner

Q. One of the co-owners of our condominium has expanded her deck one to the common elements. The board is concerned about the precedent that may be established; however, one of the board members does not want to spend the money on legal fees and thinks that nothing will come of it. What is your opinion?

A. A lawsuit will, no doubt, come up in one way or another if the board does not take affirmative action with respect to this issue. The board has the responsibility to enforce the condominium documents, particularly if one co-owner has abridged the condominium documents by expanding a deck off into the general common elements which may be an expropriation of same.

The board should immediately consult with legal counsel as to the remedies available and should notify the co-owner that it will seek injunctive relief and damages if the deck is not removed, as well as a recoupment of its attorney fees and costs.

Q. Our business is experiencing problems in regard to collections from a condominium association. We have performed services for the association but have not been able to get paid by the managing agent. Do you have any recommendations?

A. Write a letter to the board of directors as well as the managing agent advising them of the rights that you have, including your right to file a mechanics lien and/or to otherwise to commence legal proceedings against the association, the managing agent and perhaps the board of directors, depending upon the circumstances.

You, as a businessman, should be made aware of the various legal alternatives you have to collect money, whether it be from an association or any other creditor. You should also be familiar, however, with the Fair Collection Procedure Act, which will be applicable to you.

Ann Arbor Art Fair dates announced

Write it down now, because before you know it, it will be here.

The 29th annual Ann Arbor Street Art Fair will take place Wednesday through Saturday, July 20-23.

Wednesday through Friday the fair will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday the hours will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair is the original juried fair, the oldest fair, of three art fairs happening on exactly the same dates.

The three are so close geographically that it's sometimes hard to tell where one ends and the next one begins. The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair is located on South and East University avenues, next to the University of Michigan campus, in downtown Ann Arbor.

A SPECIAL ITEM IS available to fairgoers this year. It is a full-color poster by art fair artist Bo Sterk, at the price of $5.

Sterk is also the artist who designed this year's fair T-shirts and postcards. All the designs, the postcard, T-shirt and poster, relate to each other.

His humorous drawings in beautiful colors emphasize the high-quality art to be found in this art fair, the original juried Ann Arbor Street Art Fair.

The Street Art Fair maintains quality within its fair by an extensive jurying process. For 1988, metal/jewelry and photography were completely rejuried.

NEW ARTISTS are in every medium and 52 of 194 artists are new to the fair this year. In all, artists will come to the fair from 30 different states. The Ann Arbor Potters Guild and Senior Citizens will have group display areas within the fair.

Placed throughout the fair, 20 specially designated art-demonstrators will give special attention to explaining the process they use to create their art. The techniques of etching, clay, watercolor, spinning, basket weaving and handmade paper will all be illuminated by professional artists.

Children can create their own artwork in a special children's activities area run by the Ann Arbor Y. And to take a break from the visual to the audio, the Washtenaw Council for the Arts schedules music, dance and drama on a performing stage on S. University.

briefly speaking

● MATTHAEI NATURE WALK

"Forests are More Than Trees" is the theme of the 1½-hour nature walk at 2 p.m. Sunday offered to the public by the University of Michigan Matthaei Botanical Gardens.

Visitors will discover that forests have their own communities that undergo change, like people-inhabited communities. Among them are pollution control, food production, natural garbage and trash disposal.

In addition, participants will enjoy the garden's four natural trails under the canopy of newly budding leaves. Docents will meet visitors on the front steps of the conservatory.

To get to the gardens, take U.S. 23 to the Geddes Road exit, turn east on Geddes, then take a quick left on Dixboro Road.

● NAGLER EXHIBIT

O&E photography columnist Monte Nagler will be honored at a reception at 7 p.m. Friday kicking off a weeklong exhibit of his works at the Jacobson store in Livonia. In addition to his large-scale images, Nagler will introduce a new process Nagler has been refining. The exhibit is open to the public.

● CHELSEA PAINTERS

The Chelsea Painters will hold its 15th annual Art Show and Sale on the grounds of the Chelsea Community Hospital and Medical Center from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Area artists will exhibit and sell original watercolors, acrylics, oils, prints, drawings and collages.

The hospital auxiliary will assist with refreshments and there will be entertainment by Betsy Beckerman. The event will be held rain or shine.

● DEARBORN HERITAGE FAIR

Golden moments are recalled by silver anniversary

By Joan Boram

GORDON STAPLES HAD heard Durwood "Woody" V. Varner, the first chancellor of Oakland University, talk about a music festival at Meadow Brook several years before it came into being.

"The entire orchestra was very excited about the project," said Staples, who recently retired as DSO concertmaster. Staples was reminiscing about the early days of the Meadow Brook Music Festival, currently celebrating its 25th season.

In those days, being a member of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra wasn't a full-time job. We used to play at Belle Isle for a couple of weeks, and at the Fairgrounds for a few weeks in the summer, but it was no means a full schedule," he said.

I was very enthusiastic about the project when it finally got started in 1964 [at Lake Huron Lodge], and watch it being built."

GROUND BREAKING FOR THE festival began Feb. 29, 1964. Beginning July 23, the first season ran until Aug. 15. Concerts were given on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. Prices were $3 for reserved seats, $2 for unreserved, and $1.50 for general admission. There was a discount for season tickets.

From the beginning," said Oliver Green, DSO clarinetist, "then conductor Sixten Ehrling had a hard and fast rule. No composition could be performed at Meadow Brook that the DSO had performed the previous season or would perform during the next one."

He canceled his European engagements for that summer to launch the festival, and he insisted that subscription series quality be maintained. There were three or four full rehearsals for each performance. In contrast, for the Fourth of July concerts, there was just one rehearsal for three concerts of "quick-and-dirty music," Green said.

"Three or four rehearsals may sound like a lot," Green said, "but I don't forget that in many instances, the DSO musicians were playing unfamiliar pieces. Since Ehrling thought people probably wouldn't come to hear the same pieces they could hear in the regular concert season, he often selected pieces that the orchestra had never played before."

It was sometimes a rough, strange repertoire that season, but the performances were good, fresh, spontaneous," Green said.

Ehrling was a master programmer. Everything always fit in beautifully. The programs were always well-balanced. The audiences were wonderful, very excited. They knew they were involved in an adventure, and the enthusiasm was contagious.

ASK ANYONE INVOLVED in the festival, and he will tell you that the musical performances are literally ever-changing. This is not the same as saying that it doesn't rain. It's just that the audiences don't give up. They come dressed for the rain, and of course, many seats are sheltered from the elements.

Whenever it rained," Staples said, "the woodwinds go down and the strings go up. Humidity is the worst. And if it's raining really hard, orchestra members can't hear the music. On the whole, though, we've been lucky. I think only one concert has been rained out."

In 1967, guest pianist Van Cliburn's concert was canceled because of damage caused by the high winds that accompany a tornado, but he wasn't rained out.

Staples agrees that the acoustics "are marvelous for an outdoor facility; they rate with the best indoor halls."

RAIN WAS PREDICTED FOR opening night. There is a story that "Woody" Varner had his secretary check the weather forecast every half hour the day before the performance to see if the odds had improved.

Staples, acting concertmaster at the time, and cellist Italo Babini played the Brahms double concerto at that first concert at Meadow Brook.

As it happened, it was a beautiful, clear evening, and, just like in the movies, a full moon appeared over the horizon just as the first notes of Wagner's "Der Meistersinger" overture sounded.

As the concert ended with Sibelius' Second Symphony, 2,500 people sprang to their feet and cheered.

MEADOWBROOK MUSIC FESTIVAL

Memories

AFTER 25 years, memories and Meadow Brook have become synonymous.

Take Plymouth attorney Jean C. Stewart, for instance.

During the mid-'60s, specifically the summers of 1965, '66 and '67, Stewart recalls having "the great privilege to live on the campus of Oakland University and study with some of the most outstanding American musicians.

They included Jaime Laredo, Lynn Harrell and Ishomin Stern & Rose, and Robert Shaw.

"As a member of the high school choir, I will always remember the thrill of singing the Bach B minor Mass and the Chichester Psalms by Bernstein. Also, it was a very special privilege to be a student conductor under Robert Shaw.

In fact, Stewart has a picture of himself with Shaw autographed by the noted chorale director.

SUSAN MCCARTY of Troy has another remembrance.

"I went to an Andy Williams concert with my friend Barb. Some nostalgia group from before my time warmed up the crowd by inviting us to sing 'Anytime.'

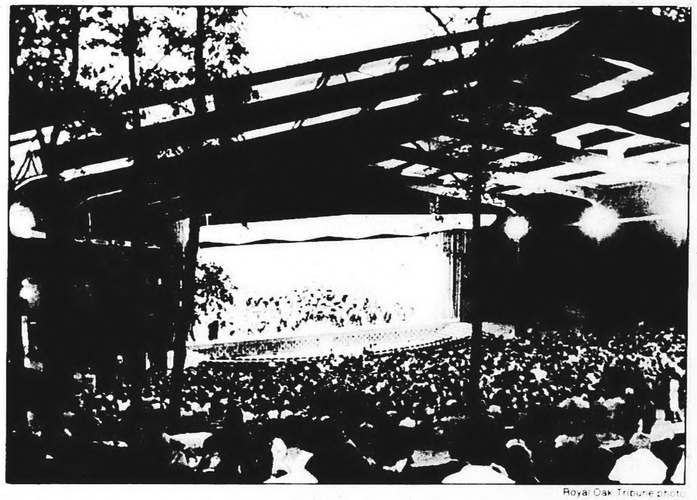

"I catch on to melodies quickly, so I joked the words and sang along. When the lead singer waved the mike in Barb's face, she clamped shut, so he stuck it in mine. I obliged, and belted out 'Anytime, I'm too young to know the words.'

How many people do you know who sang with Andy at Meadow Brook?"

JANE Comstock of Livonia contributes this: "We invited my sister and now deceased father (who I thank for musical appreciation) to a Mathis Muncin concert. It was a beautiful evening, weatherwise. Both artists were performing at their best. As Johnny was singing 'Heavenly,' I leaned back on elbows to glimpse skyward. And in an awesome flash, a shooting meteor arched its way from right to left over the pavilion. Lawn occupants went wild, much to the bewilderment of under the roof patrons. That once in a lifetime thrill quenched many years of wishfully coveting the luxury of up close, more comfortable seating."

A magical aura all its own

By Cathie Breidenbach

WITH ITS open-air pavilion, its crescent of trees standing sentinel around the hollow of a hillside, the Meadow Brook Music Festival is made for music and for memories.

The smell of freshly cut grass and the mid-summer night magic of stars in an open sky make the festival a charmed place.

For the past 24 summers, people have gathered there, and each summer the lore of Meadow Brook grows.

There's a magic about the place and a madcap serendipity that sparks memories of summer evenings spent in the Baldwin Pavilion or on the hillside under the stars.

Marian Bunt, who worked on ticket committees and women's activities in the festival's early days, remembers. "There were just brambles and woods, and out of it came a gorgeous pavilion.

"The whole thing happened because Woody Varner had a dream and Jim Hicks helped make it come true."

Open-air pavilions were rather new when the Baldwin Pavilion was built, and Bunt said the staff worried about acoustics.

"We all prayed, crossed our fingers and our legs that first night because you don't know how it'll sound until the first notes come out," she said.

They needn't have worried. Audiences and players alike note the excellent acoustics at Meadow Brook. They're so good that Bunt said, "You can stand in the center of the stage and be heard at the top of the hill without amplification."

ON CONCERT NIGHTS, people with lawn tickets start arriving at six p.m. They lug hefty coolers, bulging picnic baskets and buckets of fried chicken over the rim of the hill and stake out a square of turf with their blankets.

By the time latecomers arrive, the

THERE IS still an air of the bucolic about Meadow Brook on a May morning, if you face away from the pavilion and look over the spot where the Wilsons' horses used to graze. Aside from the cacophony of birds, and the wind mourning through the pines, there is only the sharp rap-rap-rap of a lone hammer on the structure that will soon be the Meadow Brook Music Festival's new gift shop.

"It's the original grass, but most of the trees have been planted since the festival began," George Karas knows whereof he speaks. In 1957, as he was about to enter graduate school in civil engineering, and the idea of an Oakland University was still in its earliest stages, he was hired by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson to be the head of campus planning.

Now the site of the Meadow Brook Music Festival, the meadow was the "retirement home" for the Belgians, hackneys and riding horses that the Wilsons showed in competition all over the country. When the horses got old, they were sent here to live out their days. The two barns ("We've spent a $1.98 to keep them, but they are Meadow Brook") at the festival entrance, now used to store picnic tables, were once shelters for out-to-pasture show horses.

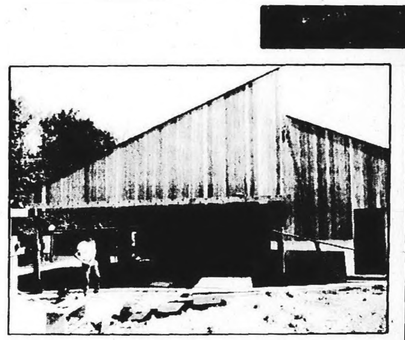

"I REMEMBER WHEN the Wilsons made a trip to Scotland and brought back some Shetland ponies. They used to come right up to the door of the house where I lived with my wife and three children, and we would give them treats," Karas said.

Eighteen months after Karas joined the staff, Oakland University opened. Mrs. Wilson took a great interest in the university and was active in its affairs until she died in September, 1967.

"One day in 1963, 'Woody' Varner (Durwood B. Varner, first chancellor of Oakland University) called me in and said: 'George, let's build an outdoor festival for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. Select a site.'

THE GIFT shop at the Meadow Brook Music Festival, which was wedged into a tiny eight foot area on Trumbull Terrace, will have expanded quarters this season when its new building is complete.

The new shop nestles into the hillside on the landscaped grounds between the terrace and Baldwin Pavilion and features cedar siding, sliding glass doors and a sloping overhang.

Jane Mosher, director of community relations and group sales for the festival, says the gift shop in its old location couldn't increase revenues without adding space to display the varied gifts popular with concert-goers. T-shirts sporting the music festival logo sell briskly year after year, so do umbrellas and sweat shirts, stationery with notes dancing the boarders, tote bags and blankets.

This year the gift shop will be able to stock and display a wider variety of merchandise to please music buffs who want to buy a gift with a musical motif or want a memento to remember the expansive pleasure of music played in the open air on the rolling green grounds of Oakland University.

Members of the Festival Women's Committee operate the shop and donate its profits to the festival. Mosher explains that ticket sales for concerts cover only 80 percent of festival expenses and remaining revenues come from corporate fund drives, advertising in the program book, the Rochester Festival Club, gifts and grants, and from the hard-working efforts of the women's committee. Since 1980, the Meadow Brook Festival Women's Committee has raised the substantial sum of $350,000 for the festival.

MOSHER STRESSES that the committee really is a "working" organization. Each of its 100 members must work in the gift shop five nights each summer from six o'clock in the evening until the grounds close after the concert. They also work five nights selling raffle tickets for the car donated each season by one of the auto companies.

This year an elegant silver Lincoln Continental loaded with a CD player and a starlight roof will be raffled off to benefit the Meadow Brook Music Festival.

On any given night, three-to-four women work in the gift shop. Several more may be out on the grounds selling from a white cart with jaunty green and white canopy while another contingent of workers persuades people to support the festival and take a chance at winning the display car gleaming in the sunshine.

On Aug. 23 the women's committee will sponsor its sixth annual benefit fashion show on the festival grounds. Benefactor tickets at $50 each include lunch on Trumbull Terrace which will be canopied for the event.

A fashion show-only ticket, for $25, includes a tea that follows the presentation of the latest fall fashions by Jacobson's.

The women's committee began 10 years ago with 12 energetic women who resolved that it should be a working rather than a figurehead organization, so they set in motion money-making projects to benefit the Meadow Brook Music Festival.

Catering to stars is a challenging job

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

FOR THE PAST 12 summers, Mary Bonnell has worked as artist relations manager to the entertainers who perform at the Meadow Brook Music Festival.

The job title means Bonnell is the person in charge of making guest artists feel comfortable and fulfilling requests written into their contracts.

She stocks the dressing rooms with the stars' favorite pop or brand of champagne, lines up baby sitters, searches for earrings, sushi or homemade chicken soup at odd hours, and arranges meals for the 20 to 50 people who travel with each headline entertainer.

After 12 years dealing with the biggest names in show business, she has some dynamite stories to tell about the quirks, charms and foibles of the stars.

Soubrette Jan Spittle, who worked four years as production manager for the Meadow Brook Music Festival and before that as head dresser for the artists.

As production manager he oversaw sound, lighting and staging. Spittle and Bonnell will tell you that Bill Cosby's a warm, homey guy who hung out with his crew watching a boxing match in his dressing room before the show; that Cleo Laine is a lovely lady who not only doesn't put on airs, but does all her own ironing and that when Pat Boone goes jogging, his chauffeur drives alongside.

Bonnell says: "There's a story for every one who comes to Meadow Brook. We're at their mercy and they're at ours."

OVER THE YEARS THE music festival has suffered its share of missed planes, wrong flights and nail-

Handling the job of arranging 70 performances in the upcoming summer series is the job of Stuart C. Hyke (left), managing director. Shown with him is Robert A. Dearth, director of cultural affairs.

Programming: A finely tuned balancing act

'You'd have to be totally indifferent to music not to find something of interest in the current season. There will be 70 performances, offering a broad spectrum of talent. . .It's a sort of balancing act: If you're perceived to be too ihnovative, the traditional audience will feel abandoned. At the same time, it's vitally important that we attract newer audiences.'

— Stuart Hyke, Meadow Brook managing director

By Joan Boram
special writer

WHEN THE Meadow Brook Music Festival opened on July 23, 1964, it was the dream of its founders that it would evolve into a summer arts program similar to Tanglewood. That first year, from July 23 to Aug. 15, there were a total of 12 concerts by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

For the past 10 years, managing director Stuart C. Hyke has been responsible for the dream that is Meadow Brook. "We are trying to broaden the festival so that there is something to appeal to every musical taste," said the ebullient Hyke. "You'd have to be totally indifferent to music not to find something of interest in the current season. There will be more than 70 performances, offering a broad spectrum of talent."

In terms of classical offerings we do as much or more as we did in the past. We have constituencies. We try never to abandon the people who have supported us through the years in terms of offering the DSO and guest orchestras. At the same time, we try to attract people who have never come to the festival.

It's a sort of balancing act. If you're perceived to be too innovative, the traditional audience will feel abandoned. At the same time, it's vitally important that we attract newer audiences.

A Ford Foundation study found that the chances of attracting someone over 30 to a type of entertainment that they have not previously experienced is much more difficult than if you can get them under the age of 30. So it's important to develop interest in attending concerts at a young age.

IN STARTING THE Children's Concerts, we hoped to get the children coming at about the age of three and above. I'm very excited by the fact that the hottest tickets this season are for Sharon, Lois & Bram, the stars of TV's "The Elephant Show." This is our first foray into using national talent for the Children's Concert Series — we also have Bob McGrath of "Sesame Street" — and I'm extremely pleased with the results. It's a good way to introduce people to the Festival at a young age.

For many years, we continued most of our core audience was 40 and above. The Summer Solid Gold Series has helped bring in a lot of people from 30 to 45, and some contemporary concerts will bring in some as young as their teens. And now, the Children's Concerts will bring them in as young as three years old! We have the gamut pretty well covered.

It's a challenge to have the right mix of talent," he said. "We try to put acts together that make sense together. We wouldn't put Perry Como and a veteran rock star on the same program. If a specific audience is interested in a particular type of music, we put that type together and build a series."

Series ticket sales are a very important part of our offering, accounting for about ⅓ of ticket sales. On the whole, we've had a very high batting average, but we've had a few acts (no names, please) that have gone down to very loud or very quiet deaths at the box office.

We rarely compete with Pine Knob for talent, mainly because of capacity. They can book acts that need a large audience to make a profit; our facility, being smaller, can accommodate a wide range of offerings on a more intimate scale.

It's impossible to discuss outdoor entertainment in Michigan without mentioning the capricious Michigan weather. "Most events take place from mid-June to the end of August. Some weeks there will be performances seven nights a week, with children's programs or matinees some afternoons, so the logistics get pretty intricate. In a more temperate climate, you could have a longer season, but in Michigan you'd really be taking a chance."

We must all be living right though, because we have only been rained out once. It was during a matinee of "Chorus Line" in 1985. It rained so much that summer that I was about to start lining up pairs of animals. During this performance, we had already shut off the electricity because of lightning.

If you know "Chorus Line," you know most of the action takes place on a three-inch white line that runs across the middle of the stage. Where did our roof spring a leak? Right over the white line," he said with a wry grin.

Hyke emphasized that it's impossible to overestimate the importance of volunteers to Meadow Brook's success.

"The whole reason we've been able to exist for 25 seasons is community support. Our volunteers on our executive committee, the Rochester Festival Club, the Festival Women's Committee. While we do as efficient job as possible in supporting ourselves, there's no doubt that offering cultural entertainment we'd never be in a position whereby we could sell enough tickets or price them in such a way that we wouldn't lose money.

We would never have gotten off the ground the first season or persevered throughout the 25 seasons if it weren't for the interest and dedication of the volunteers in the community.

"There were three natural amphitheatres on the grounds. The present site had the best features of the three: it was isolated from the rest of the campus, there was room for expansion, and accessibility from the road. However, it was near Mrs. Wilson's residence, and we naturally went to her with our plans. She simply said, 'I like music, too,' and we went out together to look at the site. The next day we started dynamiting stumps out of the ground," Karas' admiration for Mrs. Wilson is evident, and his voice softens when he speaks of her.

The site today is little altered from the site that Mrs. Wilson approved. Aside from the trees that have been planted, the hillside next to the pavilion was enlarged, and the front entrance was altered slightly so that the vista would "open up" as you drive up the dirt road that today leads to the ticket office.

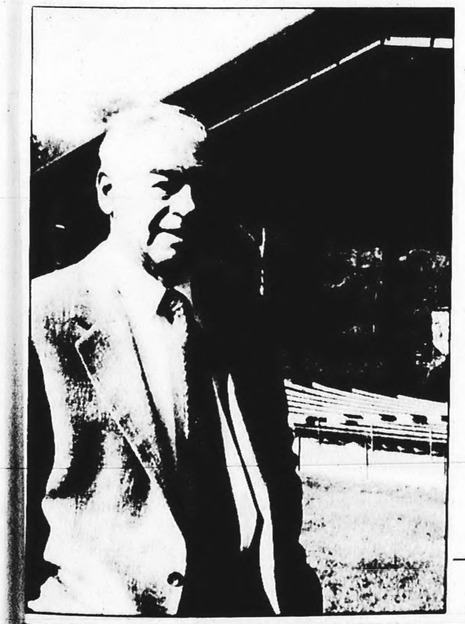

"AT FIRST, THE plan was for all spectators to sit on the hillside listening to music being performed on a portable stage. The site is natural for a stage, and finally it was decided to erect the present pavilion for the first festival. The Rochester Community School District lent 1,000 folding chairs for the entire first season. This is just one example of the splendid community cooperation from the start."

"Parking was, and still is, helter skelter, and traffic is a recurring problem. The Oakland County Road Commission has been very cooperative. Periodically, someone will suggest VIP parking, but that's contrary to the spirit of the festival. Only symphony members have special parking spaces. For the rest, it's come one, come all," Karas noted.

Parking and traffic aren't the only perennial problem. "At the beginning, we had planed to use porta-johns. Things got so bad, though, that I remember the ladies desperately storming the men's facilities, which weren't as busy as the ladies," he said.

"Originally, we were dependent upon a well for water. One night, the well failed. At the intermission, Varner made the announcement, 'Ladies and gentlemen: there is no water available. However, there are plenty of trees available, so please disperse to the woods.' As he made the announcement, the Rochester Fire Department pulled up with a 1,000 gallon water tank and saved the day."

(Water lines have since been run to Meadow Brook, thanks to federal funds granted during the Carter administration; it had been established that there was insufficient water for adequate fire protection.)

'Periodically, someone will suggest VIP parking, but that's contrary to the spirit of the festival. Only symphony members have special parking spaces. For the rest, it's come one, come all.'

Very few bad apples, mostly friendly folks

Jim Spittle

'Donnie and Marie Osmond travel with a huge entourage of family including brothers and lots of children. 'They're a lovely, wholesome family, but it's chaotic and it seems like there's never enough food for all of them."

— Mary Bonnell

chewing snafus. Spittle recalls when Meadow Brook had booked one of the first laser shows, "Space, Music and Lasers" in 1978.

The show used trucks to transport equipment from booking to booking and they ran on a tight timetable. The snafu arose because three cities in the United States happen to be named Rochester — the home of the Meadow Brook Music Festival in Michigan, another in New York and a third in Minnesota.

The driver of one of the trucks loaded with laser gear hopped in his cab and drove all the way to Rochester, Minn. before he realized he'd gone to the wrong Rochester. Spittle remembers the nervous afternoon spent waiting for the wayward truck to arrive so the crew could set up for that evening's show.

"It arrived very late in the day," he recalls. "Another time we went to pick up equipment that had gone to Rochester, N.Y. We have to be very careful and be sure they know we're in Rochester, Michigan," and he stresses the Michigan.

When Nadja Salerno-Sonnenberg, a popular classical violinist, ran into bad weather in Aspen, she had to take a much later flight than scheduled. Neither Nadja nor the DSO wanted to go on without a chance to rehearse tricky passages, but the later flight cut severely into planned rehearsal time. Spittle solved the problem by renting a helicopter to speed her from the airport to rehearsal.

The chopper pilot met her at the gate at Metro airport, flew her to the parking lot opposite Meadow Brook Theatre where Spittle met her in a car and whisked her, under police escort, to rehearsal.

Spittle says, "She didn't know anything about all this and had already had a horrendous day when a chopper pilot she'd never seen before met her plane and told her to get into this helicopter." After a brief rehearsal with the orchestra, she promptly got sick and went to sleep, but her performance that night was good."

BONNELL REMEMBERS when Debbie Boone discovered one hour before show time that she'd lost a silver shoe she needed to go with the gown she wore in performance. She sent a panicked SOS to Bonnell.

Because most stores had closed by that hour, Mary raided the costume collection of Meadow Brook Theatre. In the nick of time, she found a pair of silver shoes and luck was on her side — they were the right size.

Luck, however, deserted her completely when guest conductor Neville Marriner's performance suit got locked in the dry cleaners.

Marriner had conducted on a hot Thursday night and Bonnell offered to have his suit cleaned before his next performance on Sunday. She admits she completely forgot Saturday to pick up his clothes at the cleaners although she wishes she could repress the memory.

The owner was up north and couldn't be reached so I called the police but they couldn't get in so Mr. Marriner had to wear an ill-fitting jacket for his performance. He was so good natured about it," she recalled.

It was his custom to wear a black silk handkerchief in his breast pocket for good luck. He thought a black sock more fitting to his borrowed jacket and stuck one in the pocket before he went to stage," she added.

Bonnell and Spittle try to accommodate requests of visiting artists because they understand the frustrations of life on the road. Performers live out of suitcases. It's not the glamorous life everyone thinks," Bonnell says. "All they see is the inside of airplanes, the inside of hotel rooms, and the inside of dressing rooms."

The Meadow Brook staffs spends an eight- to 12-hour day with guest artists, while they set up sound, lights and stage equipment, rehearse and adjust the mention mix on the sound system the way the performer likes it. The festival often provides food for the artists and their crews. "You can't have Sammy Davis Jr. popping into Bill Knapp's to have a burger," Bonnell added.

Typical fare includes cereal, fruit and Danish for breakfast, a deli tray salad, sandwiches or grilled hot dogs for lunch and a good but not elaborate dinner because the festival's kitchen facilities are limited.

EVERY PERFORMER'S CONTRACT specifies details of what the dressing room will contain and what the music festival agrees to provide the cast and crew. Most performers spell out their special requests in a contract rider that can get down to details as specific as the color of towels in the dressing room and the brands of drinks in the refrigerator.

Sammy Davis Jr. requests Strawberry Crush because it makes his tongue red when he performs. When he came to Meadow Brook, he wanted four cases of it for himself and his crew. "We had to go to Ohio to get it," Bonnell remembers.

Johnny Mathis drinks Dom Perignon champagne and Judy Collins likes chicken soup made absolutely without salt. Restaurant kitchens just don't make soup without any salt, so Bonnell cooked up a batch at home for her. The story doesn't end there. When a driver picked up the soup at Mary's house to bring it to the festival, it spilled in the car and left a perfectly saltless mess to clean up.

Joan Baez eats health food and asked to have granola and fresh fruit grown without pesticides in her dressing room, but she included a sweet loophole in her healthy regime — she also wanted a two-pound box of chocolates.

When Stephen Stills was performing on his own a few years back before reuniting with Crosby and Nash, his contract rider listed a menu for every day of the week. Entertainers may perform in a different town every night and they risk being served almost identical menus day after day. Good as it is, chicken gets boring six days a week, so Stephen Stills specified a solution in his contract.

Very few bad apples show up at Meadow Brook Music Festival. Bonnell remembers bending off the advances of one who will remained unnamed. She called him a "sleazeball" comedian who backed me in a corner and covered my face with kisses."

Spittle comments that some Rock and Roll bands have made exorbitant requests for Courvoisier Cognac and imported beers, and members of a band, which will also remain nameless, behaved like slobs and didn't endear themselves to the festival staff.

Except for a very few rude entertainers, both Bonnell and Spittle say most artists are "everyday" folks, Spittle says. Entertaining just happens to be what they do for a living. Which is not to say they're just like the folks next door. They working environment doesn't breed normality," Spittle says but he praises the many decent, friendly people he's gotten to know.

Entertainers may be in Rochester for only a day or so at a time, but the long, intense day working and eating together cements friendships, especially when entertainers return year after year.

Bonnell counts Tony Bennett and Andy Williams among others, as genuine friends. She threw a 60th birthday party for Tony last year and often runs Andy's son to the "golden arches" when he has a Big Mac attack.

The upbeat side of the business far outweighs its negatives because the people are nice. Spittle enjoys the old time friendliness of Country and Western stars such as Emmy Lou Harris and Reba McIntyre and their crews. "They're smiling, friendly and gracious. They treat everyone as their friend." Donny and Marie Osmond travel with a huge entourage of family including brothers and lots of children. "They're a lovely, wholesome family," Bonnell says, "but it's chaotic and it seems like there's never enough food for all of them."

Star stories spill out of both Bonnell and Spittle. Once tale leads to an even better one as they recall their years catering to the entertainers at the Meadow Brook Music Festival.

Jim now works as assistant to the general director of Meadow Brook Theatre where he worries about things other than late airplanes and sound system snafus.

After 12 summers on the job, a successor will take over Mary's exhausting, but fascinating job as hostess to the stars, but she'll continue as costume director for Meadow Brook Theatre during the fall and winter season.

As the sun inches across the sky and people wait for the eight p.m. concert to begin, they party, watch other people walking by, and eat picnic dinners.

Meadow Brook picnics range from lemonade and bologna sandwiches on paper plates to chilled vichyssoise, tarragon chicken breasts served on china and vintage Vouvray in crystal goblets. Those with a romantic bent add a hunk of cheese to the Rubaiyat menu of "a jug of wine, a loaf of bread and thou" and bring the classic fare to Meadow Brook for their preconcert supper.

Hardly a concert goes by without a cup of birthday cakes, and at Meadow Brook strangers join in singing happy birthday. Fresh air and music seem to foster comraderie.

On the lawn facing the pavilion, mere ribbons of grass divide one blanket from another, and it's not long before people start talking to the strangers on the next blanket.

Soon a bag of chips or a plate of brownies crosses the line as folks offer their bounty to neighbors. Kids from one family challenge those on the next blanket to checkers or Pente or a Frisbee contest on the other side of the hill.

Only lovers sit two by two, oblivious to the bustle around them.

ON SOME EVENINGS a hot-air balloon may drift languidly across the sky in the gentle early evening air. All eyes watch its journey and listen when it fires its burners that sound like a dragon breathing.

Constance Schuller of Ann Arbor remembers watching a plane loop overhead pulling a trailer that wished "Happy Birthday" to someone in the audience.

Frank Bollinger, retired director of Meadow Brook Theatre public affairs, recalls about five years ago when "the wave" of U of M and Tiger fame came to Meadow Brook after a concert by the Canadian Brass. The wave arose spontaneously and washed across the hillside.

The midsummer night aura of Meadow Brook inspires serendipity. At a Boston Pops concert in 1985, it had just started sprinkling lightly when the orchestra under John Williams struck up "Singing in the Rain."

"Somebody started twirling an umbrella," Sylvia Coughlin, director of public relations for Meadow Brook Theatre, remembers. "I looked around and in a matter of seconds the whole hill was covered with umbrellas twirling to the music."

Jim Spittle, assistant general director of Meadow Brook Theatre, recalls high jinks that got a little out of hand one evening in 1985 when the lawn was covered with picnickers munching drumsticks and partying contentedly before the concert.

Prankster broke into the pump house on the grounds and turned on part of the sprinkler system. Swirling water sent people screaming and scrambling out of its reach.

At most indoor concerts, people will tap their feet when the beat starts to bounce and maybe they'll get to clapping to the rhythm. At Meadow Brook, they're more uninhibited and jump up the aisles to dance.

When The Rovers played their rollicking melodies two years ago, a few people on the hill leapt up to dance the Irish jig. Those around them made way for flying feet and clapped in rhythm. One by one, other dancers answered the music's call until the hill was covered with pockets of people dancing the jig in the growing dusk.

JANE MOSHER, WHO directs group sales and community relations for the festival, remembers standing beside the pine tree at the top of the hill on the night of the first festival concert.

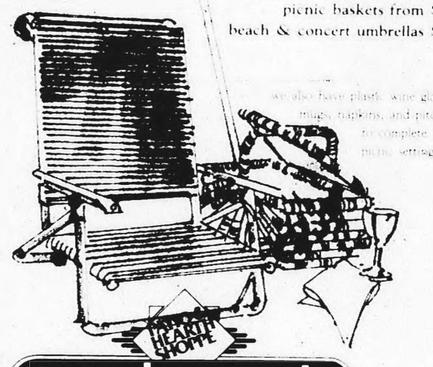

"The barns near Meadow Brook Hall had just been painted white, and the moon was shining on them. It was perfectly beautiful." Such images imprint like snapshots in memory and bring fresh pleasure years later.

In 1976, the year of the nation's bicentennial, the festival staff passed out candles to everyone who came to concerts on the Fourth of July weekend. At a signal, people in the pavilion and on the lawn lit candles and shared their flame with those around them.

Each candle shone on the face of the person holding it, and the darkness came alive with light in celebration of the country's first 200 years. People who were there locked the candlelit image in memory, and photographers captured it to use on program covers the next year.

John Riccardo served with his wife, Thelma, as chairmen of volunteers during an early festival summer. He said, "I remember most the enthusiasm of volunteers and that they all had fun. The idea was fairly new in those days, and it was exciting to watch it grow."
