Police in hot pursuit chases

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Plymouth Township police officers were involved in fleeing and eluding situations on three successive days during the past week.

No officers or drivers who were pursued sustained injuries.

However, a pedestrian was struck in Westland shortly after a township police officer broke off a chase in the vicinity of Joy and Hix roads.

The pedestrian was hospitalized but doesn't have life-threatening injuries, Westland police said.

All three motorists pursued by township police were ticketed for fleeing and eluding — a misdemeanor. They must appear before a judge in 35th District Court.

Westland police earlier this week were still investigating the personal injury accident in their jurisdiction.

SERIOUS PURSUITS on three successive nights is rare in Plymouth Township, conceded Carl Berry, police chief.

He declined to discuss his department's pursuit policy in detail but said all officers involved in last week's episodes complied with regulations.

Emergency flashers and sirens were used by police in all three instances, their reports indicated. The reports didn't indicate at what speed the officers pursued.

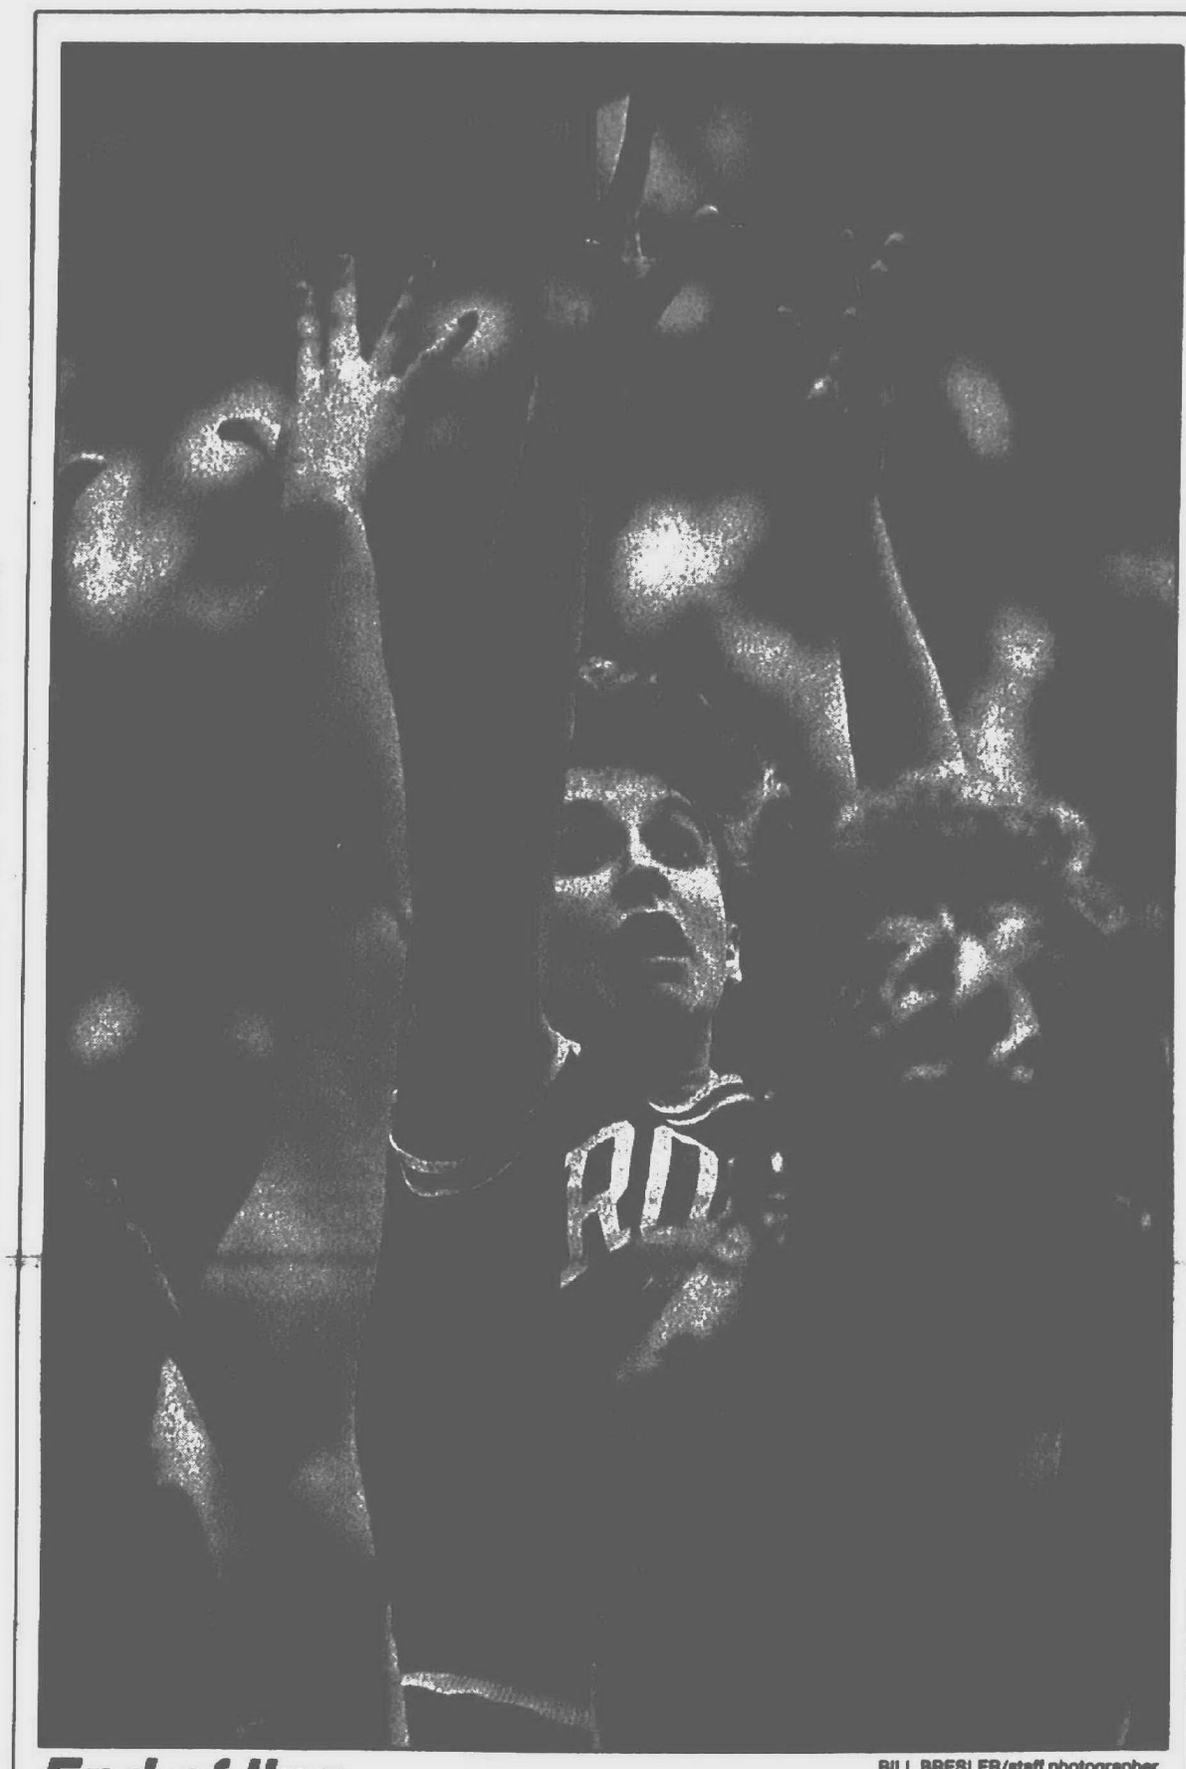

"State law (on pursuits) requires due care and caution," Berry said. "A policy is generally written to assist an officer make a rational decision on the road — to protect the officer, police department, citizen.

"THERE'S ALL KINDS of parameters and decision making to process while in pursuit," Berry said.

He identified some as speed, traffic volume, time of day, road conditions, weather conditions and the reason a motorist is fleeing.

"There's so many judgment things in there. That's why there's so much controversy over pursuits," Berry said.

Schools seek $2.2 million in state aid

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

So tough is Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' financial situation that district officials are proposing legislation that would provide $2.2 million in immediate state aid.

The bill is awaiting a hearing in the state House of Representatives.

The district also is pondering asking voters in June to, at the least, renew 8 mills and override the Headlee Amendment for one year.

Overriding the Headlee Amendment allows schools or governments to collect more tax revenue than they otherwise could due to soaring property values.

The district made $4.4 million in cuts this year following the defeat by voters of four tax increases during the past two years.

The schools' fund balance will plummet to $1.5 million by June 30, 1989, which "may mean we'll have to borrow to meet our cash flow needs," said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business.

"We have excess expenditures this year of over $2 million," he said. The fund balance was $3.6 million last June 30. Eight mills would bring $12 million in revenue. The rollback would reap $4.5 million, said Hoedel.

STATE REP. JAMES Kosteva, D-Canton, helped school officials draft the plan.

"Plymouth-Canton voters have authorized the district to levy 37 mills for education. However, the district is levying only 34.13 mills because of the required rollback," said Kosteva.

"The state aid formula is based on the number of mills levied, and that's the source of the problem. The state is only reimbursing at 34 versus 37 mills.

"We're trying to convince the legislative leadership that due to the unique circumstances that exist here — the transition from an in-formula district to an out-of-formula district that's taking place, and the fact that comparatively speaking, Plymouth-Canton is quite frugal in its administrative costs — " the district deserves help, Kosteva said.

Farmer Jack to close store

By Doug Funke
staff writer

The Farmer Jack supermarket, a fixture at 705 S. Main in downtown Plymouth for nearly 30 years, will close permanently at the end of the business day Saturday.

The trend is to larger stores of 50,000 square feet and the local market, about 14,000 square feet, is difficult to renovate and expand, said Gilbert Borman, a company spokesman.

"We never comment on the profitability of a unit," Borman said.

All employees currently working in Plymouth will be offered jobs at other stores. "I think the fact we're not laying off or firing anybody is important," Borman said.

Some 32 employees — full time and part time — were notified of the closing earlier this week. "They were surprised, disappointed, I think, more," said Jo Compton, store manager.

Borman denied that the closing is related to a positioning by Borman Inc. to sell to or otherwise be acquired by A&P.

Both Borman and A&P are publicly owned companies traded on major stock exchanges.

Borman operates 79 Farmer Jack supermarkets in metro Detroit.

Foster parents give care, love

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Step into their home on Leighwood in Plymouth Township and you know you're someplace special.

German-born Waltraud Henry and her little girl are at the door with smiles and handshakes to greet you. Christmas decorations adorn their cozy, comfortable and attractive home.

The 5-year-old is anxious to show a visitor the family Christmas tree, turning on the lights and explaining why so many engraved, gold ornaments hang from its branches along with shiny red hearts.

"They're for the children," said the youngster.

Allison (not her real name) is one of 25 foster children the Henrys have cared for since 1974.

The Henrys' foster children, mostly newborns adopted after several months, have been white, black, Greek, Jewish, "whatever was available," said Henry, a 19-year Plymouth Township resident.

"WE'VE JUST enjoyed having children. We felt we had a lot to give and had a lot of room," said Henry. "My life was really involved with my own children and we thought it would be nice to have more children. Raising kids is just part of our lives."

A crackling fire warms the family room, where Allison and her mom make their afternoon guest feel at home.

Allison's 7-year-old sister, who also lives with the Henrys, is at school. So are Rachel, 17, and Katherine, 20, the Henrys' natural daughters.

Because of a custody fight that has been played out in juvenile court for years, Allison and her sister — who is handicapped and has undergone surgery 13 times in four years — have lived with their foster family since birth.

"Our life revolves around court hearings," said Henry, whose husband Robert works for Ford Motor as a systems analyst. "We go every six months. It leaves you in limbo.

"We'll have Christmas together, but every August you wonder 'Are we going to have Christmas this year?' "

The Henrys receive $10.72 per child per day through the small Detroit-area foster care agency that employs them.

"THAT'S FOR food, child care, clothing, toys, everything," said Hen-

Board adopts budget

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A 1989 municipal budget with revenues and expenditures of $6.3 million was adopted Tuesday by the Plymouth Township Board.

That's nearly $100,000 more than what had been proposed to the board last August by Supervisor Maurice Breen.

Major increases in expenditures that resulted from budget study sessions are:

- $100,000 for computer equipment to improve record keeping at township hall.
- $50,000 for community service projects like a recycling program, newsletters and calendars.
- $60,000 for sidewalks at sites to be determined.
- $50,000 to hire a finance director.
- $5,000 to implement an enhanced 911 emergency telephone system.
- $24,000 for printing and publishing expenses in the planning department.

Christmas is special time for foster parents

ry. "Starting in January, I have to (furnish) receipts for $75 a month to make sure I've spent it on the kids.

"That's one of the things that really separates the foster children from the rest of your children. It really makes it a business. We're not treated as professionals, yet we're expected to act as professionals," she said.

"We hear all these legislators saying there's no child care available. I'd like to advertise child care for $10.72 a day and see what happens."

THE FRUSTRATIONS of foster parenting are many. But even an outsider can see why the Henrys do it.

"Hey, Mom. I love you a lot," Allison said, hugging her foster mother and forgetting her Barbie doll and Heidi, the family Yorkshire terrier for the moment.

"Well I love you, too, honey. You're my chunky little girl."

"I am?" asks Allison, her dark eyes wide with wonder. "Yes you are," said her mom.

people

The Henrys' foster children have accompanied the family on trips to Washington D.C., Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Tennessee. The Henrys are planning a trip to Disneyworld, hoping that in seven months, the girls will still be with them.

Family albums are packed with photos of outings, parties and holidays.

"So many foster children grow up and have no photographs of themselves. It's devastating for them. So I go overboard," said Henry.

Allison points to a picture of the Washington Monument. "I call that a pencil. A big one. You can go up in the pencil so you can look out far away," Allison said.

She describes a photo of herself and her sister saying, "Allison is the fat one. But I kept my breath in so no one can tell how fat or skinny I am."

TUCKED IN with the photos is a card from the adoptive parents of one of the Henrys' foster children.

"We are sure that our little girl's beautiful disposition came from having wonderful foster parents," they wrote. "It takes a special breed of people to love and care for a child that they know will not stay with them always."

One little girl, now 9, visits the Henrys every year. "We had her as an infant," said Henry. "We have a real nice relationship. I tell her stories about when she was little.

"The last time she was here, I told her, 'I have something real special for you.' I gave her the blanket we brought her home in from the hospital. She used it for her doll, and walked off as happy as could be with her blanket."

Henry advises anyone considering foster parenting to find out beforehand what they are getting into.

"It's wise to take classes on the legal aspects. It's always a good thing to know," she said.

While giving up a child can be a sad experience, "I've always felt that when they left here, I'd given them a good start and that maybe, somewhere when they grow up, there's something of me inside them," Henry said.

One experience will never grow old.

"Occasionally we have the opportunity of going to the hospital and picking up a child," said Henry. "They actually put me in a wheelchair and hand the baby to me because you're not allowed to carry babies out of the building.

"I remember thinking, 'There's someone out there who doesn't know this child is going to be theirs — someone who's been waiting for years.' You want to jump up and yell, 'You're going to get this baby!' It's really exciting."

Schools seek aid from state

THE PROPOSAL establishes criteria for the funding, which Hoedel believes can be met by no Michigan district other than Plymouth-Canton schools:

- Loss in state aid must exceed 50 percent of the aid received the previous year. Plymouth-Canton lost 76 percent, or $5.5 million, in 1988-89 state aid.
- Loss of two or more previously authorized operating mills. The district lost 2.83 mills due to the Headlee Amendment.
- A minimum of two school millage election defeats. Proposals failed twice this year, twice last year.
- Per-pupil expenditures of at least $200 below the state or county average. The average in Wayne County is $3,849. Plymouth-Canton spends $3,334 per student, Hoedel said.

THE LEGISLATURE adjourns Thursday, Dec. 8, for the holidays.

"We're definitely interested in having the hearing take place before then," said Kosteva, who's not yet sure whether the session will be an educational subcommitee hearing or meeting of the House legislative leadership.

"Our chances are remote," acknowledged Kosteva, who sits on the House education committee. "But we feel as though the situation in the Plymouth-Canton school district and the educational product being provided is important enough for us to make an extra effort."

Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, who also helped draft the legislation, agrees that passing it will be difficult.

"It's going to be very tricky. Other legislators are going to say they have particular problems in their part of the state. They are going to question why they should do something special that will only help us," said Geake. "The odds are against us, but we're going to try."

Should time run out this term, Kosteva and Geake say they'll reassess their chances and consider trying again in January.

"WE'RE NOT making threats," said Hoedel. "But we have to do certain things to live within our financial ability to pay. We're in a unique financial situation because of the Headlee rollback and the huge cutback in state aid.

"We're saying we're unique, we're extreme and we need temporary help.

Township board adopts 1989 municipal budget

THE TOWNSHIP will cover the additional expenses in the spending plan by tapping the fund balance for about $415,000.

Some $1.7 million is expected to remain in the surplus account, according to projections.

Breen said he intended to propose just a bare bones budget and make adjustments through amendments after the new board took office and the year went on. However, he changed his mind as the board got into study sessions.

The budget year begins Jan. 1.

Similar reasons prompted more computer equipment and the finance director position, Breen said.

"We are growing and becoming more sophisticated as we go along," he said. "There's more reporting due to other units of government, more information required of our board of trustees."

A FINANCE DIRECTOR would prepare and monitor the budget, advise on investments, monitor cash flow and prepare financial reports, Breen said.

Job specifications are under study. A hire is expected by March.

"We never geared up to finance and investing," Breen said. "We all agree it's a slot that can be beneficial to the township."

Treasurer Mary Brooks, who has been investing the township's money, said she doesn't look at a finance director as a reflection on her performance.

"I'm still an administrator, I'm still on the board," Brooks said. "I don't want to sound like I'm stupid, but maybe someone with more knowledge can earn more interest."

BROOKS' INVESTING savvy was raised as an issue by her opponent in last August's primary election. Brooks won handily.

Canton and Redford townships currently have finance directors in addition to full-time treasurers.

The township board already has set a tax rate of $4.04 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation (half of market value) for municipal operations and debt retirement next year.

That means the owner of a $100,000 house would pay $202 for township services.

'Santa's helpers'

Work is child's play at toy distribution center

Dan Banaszek, distribution manager, checks things twice.

Employees sort the items before sending the merchandise to individual stores.

By Diane Gale
staff writer

If it weren't for the Toys "R" Us distribution center in Canton, your kids probably wouldn't get those Nintendo video games they've been talking about.

The 455,000-square-foot warehouse/office building on Haggerty north of Koppernick opened in June after moving from downriver.

The outlet acts as a clearing house for 18 Michigan stores and two Toledo outlets. It employs 120 people, but that figure fluctuates with part-time, temporary and seasonal help.

"Nintendo will be the hottest category of merchandise," said Michael Cullen, inventory control manager.

"E.T." TAPES have to be a close second.

"Everything (E.T. tapes) we have received in here has blown out the door as fast as we can get it in," Cullen said. The tape costs $16.99 with a $5 rebate.

Other popular toys this year are Talking Pee Wee, Barbie Sensations, Electronic Wheel of Fortune, Action Set, Electronic Baseball, Roger Rabbit Talking Plush, Double Dare, Win Lose or Draw, Scruples 2, Pocket Rockers, Micro Machines, GI Joe Night Striker Hovercraft, Starting Lineup, R/C Aero Turbo, Socrates (video), Teddy Ruxpin and Ghostbuster Haunted Humans.

Boxes of these future Christmas and Hanukkah gifts and other merchandise are stacked to the ceiling in the distribution center.

"We store merchandise and spoon feed it out to the stores as they need it," said Dan Banaszek, distribution center manager.

THE CANTON warehouse receives merchandise from the New Jersey national office, it's priced and shipped to the stores.

Fall marks the busiest time of year. It begins with the start of school, followed by Halloween and finally Hanukkah and Christmas, Cullen said.

Bill Bates loads cartons from the stock area.

Some items sell better in specific regions, Cullen said. Sales for other toys depend on television coverage. If there's a lot of advertisements in a specific market it usually drives up the demand, he added.

"We consider ourselves Santa's helpers," Banaszek said.

The international company has 360 retail stores in the United States, France, England, Canada, Germany and Singapore. The company had $3.1 billion sales January 1988, a 28.3-percent increase from the previous year, according to Carl Spaulding, general manager.

'Help wanted' among signs of holiday season

It's a sign of the holiday times.

Placed along placards announcing "Holiday bargains" or "Christmas Specials" are signs requesting "Help Wanted."

A drive through the Plymouth-Canton community reveals the need.

Dress Barn wants people to "Come grow with us." The Dairy Mart is "Now Hiring." Arbor Drugs is "Now hiring, most shifts." The Main Street Auto Wash wants students after school.

"Oh yeah, everyone has that complaint," said Joan Bolek about employers looking for help. She is executive director of the Canton Chamber of Commerce.

"I hear that all the time; there are a number of stores with help wanted signs posted," said Mary O'Connell Roehr, executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce.

"A couple of years ago there were more people than jobs," Roehr said. "Today, it's quite the opposite."

'A couple of years ago there were more people than jobs. Today, it's quite the opposite.'
—Mary O'Connell Roehr, executive director, Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce

This situation could prove to be a boon for employees who can count on more overtime. New hires are being offered far more than the minimum wage and, in some cases, expanded benefits.

"YOU HEAR the cries out there," said George Meechem, labor market analyst for the Michigan Employment Security Commission. "They can't find the people — at least not for minimum wage. They're offering benefits that they never did before. They're hiring mothers and retirees instead of teenagers to flip the burgers."

Meechem said the problem mirrors a national trend of declining births in the early 1970s.

"The 'Baby Boom' is meeting the 'Baby Bust,'" he said. "It's not unnatural, and we've been through this before. But it's collided with a buoyant job market. There's not much we can do about the labor force short of mass immigration. Probably the price of your Big Mac will go up."

Nearly 70,000 more people landed jobs in Michigan this year than in 1987, Meechem said.

"THE WHOLE teenage phenomenon is gone," said Laurence Rosen, a demographer with the state Department of Management and Budget.

Girl Scouts helping in Red Cross blood drive

People are asked to give a lot during the holidays. Gifts for family, donations to charity, volunteer hours for worthwhile projects are all demands placed during this time of year.

The American Red Cross is hoping people don't forget to give blood during the holiday season.

And the Huron Valley Girl Scouts are stepping in to help make it easy for people to donate blood on their way to shop or look for a Christmas tree.

The Huron Valley council, which serves the Plymouth-Canton community, is sponsoring five blood drives, including one at Fox Hills Chrysler Plymouth, 111 Ann Arbor Road.

Those wishing to donate blood can stop by the dealership between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday.

THIS IS the first time the Girl Scouts have sponsored such a program, said Roni Luckenbill, director of membership services.

The idea for the blood drive came partly to challenge a newspaper article and also out of concern to help the community, Luckenbill said.

"Some of our volunteers decided they wanted to do a service project around the holidays," she said.

And the president of the group wanted to counter a recent newspaper article that said women do not donate as much blood as men, Luckenbill said.

The council is hoping the parents and volunteers as well as members of the general public take some time off Saturday to donate blood.

The council has about 200 troops in this area with an estimated 1,500 scouts and several hundred volunteers, she said.

"The more people we can get out, the better," she said.

THE RED Cross is in desperate need of blood.

Sunday fund-raiser to aid Straight

The Plymouth Chamber of Commerce and Plymouth merchants are sponsoring a fund-raiser for Straight Sunday.

The benefit runs noon to 5 p.m.

Police chase 3 in hot pursuit

Berry did open the door a little on local policy.

"Our policy restricts officers to certain miles over the speed limit," he said. "They can't ram, box in or attempt to use excessive force on a person attempting to flee what appears to be a misdemeanor charge."

THE FIRST of the three pursuits started with a burglary in progress rush to a house on Pinetree at 2:41 a.m. Thanksgiving Day. It actually was a domestic disturbance.

Officer Ed Gauthier reported that a car pulled away from the house with its lights off as he arrived.

The driver, a 29-year-old Plymouth man, finally turned on his headlights, but accelerated when Gauthier activated his lights and siren, the officer said.

Gauthier reported pursuing from Orangelawn to Terry to Micol where the motorist stopped the car in the middle of the street, then ran. The driver was arrested while attempting to jump a fence on Firwood.

The driver, ticketed for fleeing and eluding, told police the only reason he bolted was that his license was suspended.

OFFICER BILL GROFF reported that he was working stationary radar shortly before 7 p.m. Friday on Lilley near Hartsough when he clocked a motorist going 53 mph in a 35 mph zone.

Groff followed, activiating his flashers after crossing Ann Arbor Road. The motorist continued so Groff said he then turned on his siren.

The suspect vehicle, according to Groff, failed to stop at a stop sign at General and Joy, went through a red light at Joy and Haggerty, a red light at the entrance to the Honeytree Apartments and a red light at Joy and Hix.

Groff broke off the chase at Joy and Hix. The driver struck a pedestrian at Joy and Wayne — less than two miles away — shortly thereafter and fled on foot, Groff reported.

THE DRIVER, a 22-year-old Plymouth man, turned himself in to township police the next morning.

He was ticketed for fleeing and eluding.

The driver pursued by Groff had a suspended license and an outstanding bench warrant for failing to pay fines in 35th District Court, Berry said.

Officer Tom Thompson reported observing a car driven in an erratic manner — swerving and squealing tires — while checking out an abandoned car in the vicinity of Joy and Lilley about 9 a.m. Saturday.

Thompson pursued, first activating his overhead flashers, then siren. The driver finally pulled over on Main at Judson, Thompson reported, and explained that he was testing the car on which repairs had been made.

The driver, a 21-year-old Wayne man, received a ticket for fleeing and eluding.

Store will close

"IT'S THE end of an era," Borman said of the Plymouth closing. "Unfortunately, what has happened is we've been unable to expand. There's nothing we could do with the store."

Plymouth has been home to a Farmer Jack since May of 1959, Borman said.

"It's sad," he said. "Something about a store, it becomes part of peoples' lives. I never downplay that."

Some shoppers in town made a habit of walking to Farmer Jack. Longtime customers and employees cried while commiserating about the closing.

Borman said Wednesday that there were no plans to have special sales to clear the store's inventory or to publicize the closing until a day or two before it's happening.

SALES PLUMMET drastically when a sale is announced, he said.

City tax records list the owner of the building leased by Farmer Jack as Stanley Dixon Jr. of Grosse Point Park. He couldn't be reached for comment.

Records list the property's state equalized valuation (half of market value) at $201,000.

City engineer Ken West, whose department processes site plans, rezoning requests and conducts inspections, said Wednesday he wasn't aware of a pending closing.

"I don't get too upset with vacant buildings. There's always a use for them," he said.

2 businesses get tax breaks

Two businesses in Plymouth Township, a tool manufacturer and the maker of prototype air conditioning systems, won tax breaks Tuesday from the township board.

Each property tax abatement is for 12 years.

M.L.C. Corp., a tool maker, requested property tax abatement on already completed building improvements costing $469,000 and new machinery and equipment estimated at $704,500.

The tax break will amount to about $15,300 the first year, less in succeeding years. Even with the abatement, M.L.C. would pay taxes of $15,300 on the improvements.

M.L.C. leases a building in Metro West Industrial Park.

Mostyn Conner, M.L.C. president, projected that the 11 person work force there now could expand to as many as 25.

SANDEN INTERNATIONAL, which manufactures air conditioning systems for the automotive industry, is building a 22,000-square-foot research and development facility in Metro West Technology Park.

Sanden, a subsidiary of a Japanese company with production operations in Dallas, estimates building costs here at $585,000 and the cost of new machinery, equipment, furniture and fixtures at $442,000.

Its first-year abatement would add up to about $13,600, less in subsequent years. Even with the tax break, Sanden would pay $13,600 in property taxes in the first year.

About 12 people — engineers, technicians, sales and support staff — will work there once operations get going next spring.

Toolco Inc., a design and manufacturing firm, has asked for tax breaks to build and equip a 15,700-square-foot shop/office in the Metro West Beck Road Industrial Park at a cost of $2.6 million.

A public hearing on that request is scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 13.

A 1974 state law made tax abatements available to provide a more favorable business climate for corporations.

Salvation Army seeks holiday support

Finds needy people 'hidden' in affluent communities

By Tom Ferguson
staff writer

'Tis the season of the kettle people, the bell ringers who bless us one and all as we drop a few coins for the poor and troubled before we enter the gates of shoppers' heaven.

The Salvation Army's profile is highest this time of year, and visions of Harbor Light and Cass Corridor outreach dance in most heads at the familiar sight of the kettles. But the Army is busy in the suburbs, too.

Lt. Jonathan Rich, who runs the Salvation Army community center in Farmington Hills, knows a lot about the need that can be hidden in affluent communities.

"One of the big problems is that outside the city there is not much low-income housing at all," Rich said. "Some people have been willing to make big sacrifices to live outside the city, spending 60 or 70 or 80 percent of their income for housing. Typically, an emergency comes up and suddenly they don't have any money to feed their family."

EMERGENCY and referral are key words with Salvation Army services. The Army does not try to provide long-term assistance, but responds to family crises, networking with other agencies to find long-term help when needed.

Rich, whose Farmington Hills center serves residents of Farmington and Novi and parts of Livonia and Southfield, gave an example of suburban, Catch-22 need: "You have a person who falls through the DSS (Department of Social Services) cracks, working in a low-paying job, maybe a waitress or a waiter. They pay maybe $425 a month rent, which doesn't get you much of an apartment out here.

"They have an emergency need — someone in the family is sick, perhaps — and after buying prescriptions, they can't pay the rent. They go to DSS for help, and DSS says, 'You have to sell your car,' which would make it impossible to get to work. So they come to us."

Us in this case includes Rich's wife, Barbara, also a lieutenant, who is working on a master's degree in counseling while helping run the Farmington center.

What the Riches and personnel at other centers provide is emergency food, perhaps some clothing, liaison — or even a touch of cash — to prevent a utility shutoff or an eviction, a little budget counseling, whatever it takes to get past a crisis.

The Army is a strong believer in networking to provide the most help to the most people, and to avoid waste. The Army is working this year with Goodfellows, churches and other organizations to make sure there is no overlap in Christmas assistance to needy families.

The community center in Plymouth knows its share of hidden suburban need. "At Christmastime we get a terrific number of requests for help from single or divorced women on ADC, or senior citizens on fixed incomes," said Heather Doughty, a social worker at the Plymouth center, which also serves residents of Canton, Northville and part of Westland.

"WE HELP about 250 families each Christmas," Doughty said. "We provide food for the holidays and toys for children. In some cases we deliver help at nursing homes."

Throughout the year, Doughty said, she comes into contact with "a lot of people who just got into some bad circumstances, not just welfare families."

"There was a family where the man had a good managerial job, and his wife was working," Doughty said. "He lost his job and had trouble finding another one. Unemployment ran out, savings were used up, the wife became sick and lost her job. They had a lot of trouble making their payments, and were really at the end of their rope, even when he finally found another job."

'Some people have been willing to make big sacrifices to live (in the suburbs). Typically, an emergency comes up and suddenly they don't have any money to feed their family.'

— Lt. Jonathan Rich
Salvation Army

Enter the Army, and networking, and the family had the necessary help to get back on its feet.

When there is cash involved, there are no payback arrangements. But, said Doughty, "It's not unusual to get donations with a note that says, 'You helped us, now we'd like to help you.' "

Doughty is particularly sensitive to the needs of senior citizens on fixed incomes, and believes that recent cutbacks in distribution of government surplus commodities will mean that "we're going to see more seniors coming to us for help. I don't think people really understand just how small that fixed income can be."

Barbara and Jonathan Rich, both lieutenants in the Salvation Army, are among those working to bring relief to needy area families this holiday season. The organization uses its holiday donations to provide emergency care for metropolitan area residents.

Here's how to help:

Any donations dropped into the familiar Salvation Army kettles at shopping malls and elsewhere are used to further programs in that city or its nearby "corps area."

The Army needs donations to help its programs in the inner city and regionwide, as well. Checks should be sent to the Salvation Army, 601 Bagley Avenue, Detroit, Mich. 48226. If you like, contributions may be designated for certain programs (substance abuse, for example) or locales.

Metropolitan Detroit Salvation Army headquarters will refer you to the proper community center. Call 961-2292.

Event spotlights area's homeless

National homeless rights advocate Mitch Snyder will appear Friday, Dec. 9, at a ceremony honoring area advocates for the homeless.

The ceremony is part of the "Project Warmth Open House," a program sponsored by Wayne County Neighborhood Legal Services. The agency is Michigan's largest provider of legal services to homeless and other disadvantaged people, agency members said.

The event will be held from 4-6:30 p.m. at 3500 Cadillac Tower, Detroit. Afterward, Snyder and WCNLS members will deliver clothing and other items to shelters throughout the Detroit area.

There are between 33,000 and 90,000 homeless Michigan residents, WCNLS executive director Linda Bernard said. Most live within metropolitan Detroit, she said.

Between 500 and 800 state residents seek temporary shelter on any given night, according to agency statistics.

Additional information is available by calling Kevin Fobbs at 962-0466, Ext. 261 during normal working hours, or by calling 342-5045 after 7 p.m. and on weekends.

S'craft seeks writers to enter 'poet hunt'

Poet, editor and professor Herb Scott of Western Michigan University will judge Schoolcraft College's sixth annual poet hunt, sponsored by the school and its literary magazine, The MacGuffin.

All Michigan residents are eligible to enter the poetry competition, which offers a $100 prize for first place, $50 for second place and $25 for third place. The winners, and three honorable mentions, will be invited to read their poetry next spring, and all winning entries will be published in the fall 1989 issue of The MacGuffin.

Scott teaches in the creative writing program at Western Michigan University. He has written seven books of poetry, including "Disguises and Groceries." His honors include a Pablo Neruda Prize for Poetry in 1981 and a National Endowment for the Arts fellowship in 1984. He will be at Schoolcraft on March 27 to read poetry and to announce winners of the poet hunt.

Entrants may submit one to five previously unpublished poems of 50 lines or less. There is a charge of 50 cents per poem.

Entries must be typewritten, with name, address and phone number on a separate 3-by-5 index card. Entries should be mailed to: Poet Hunt, Liberal Arts Building, Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia, Mich. 48152.

Deadline is Jan. 31. Entries will not be returned.

For more information, contact Art Lindenberg by calling 462-4400, Ext. 5292.

Cable TV subscribers can help hospital

Omnicom Cable will participate in the Detroit Children's Hospital fund-raiser "Cable Cluing for Kids."

Cable TV operators in the Metro-Detroit area have joined forces this holiday season to help needy children.

Omnicom subscribers who donate $10 or more to the Detroit Children's Hospital can receive free installation of a premium pay service of their choice.

Subscribers could add HBO, Cinemax, the Disney Channel, PASS, Showtime or the Movie Channel. The offer is available Dec. 1-23.

Donations will allow the hospital to improve services and facilities they've been providing for more than 100 years.

For more information, call Omnicom's sales department, 459-8320.

"Omnicom is very excited about participating in an area-wide cable effort that helps our children to receive quality health care," said Laura Fallon-Graham, marketing director. "We feel very fortunate to be able to offer this opportunity to our subscribers and we know it is a worthwhile cause."

NANCY LOUISE WISE

Funeral services for Nancy Louise Wise, 58, of Plymouth were Nov. 29 at the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth with the Rev. Kenneth Gruebel officiating.

Burial was at Acacia Park Cemetery in Birmingham with arrangements by Schrader Funeral Home.

Mrs. Wise died Nov. 25 of cancer.

Mrs. Wise was a librarian. She joined Plymouth-Canton schools in 1966, and worked at Farrand and Smith elementary schools.

Farrand principal Carrol Nichols said, "Nancy will be missed by all of us and by the children." Nichols said he is personally grateful to Wise for "helping my daughter learn to love reading."

The school district is starting a memorial fund for the former librarian. Anyone wishing information may call Nichols at Farrand, 451-3515.

The former Nancy Brannan was born Aug. 8, 1930, in Detroit. She graduated from Plymouth High School in 1948. Mrs. Wise received her bachelor's degree with honors from Western Michigan University in 1952. She earned her master's degree in library science from the University of Illinois in 1953.

From 1953 to 1959, Mrs. Wise was a librarian with the Wayne County library system. She was an assistant in Plymouth and head librarian at branches in Inkster and Dearborn Heights, and headed children's services.

She was a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority, Beta Sigma Phi, the Library Honorary Society and the Plymouth Symphony League. Mrs. Wise was an elder and a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth.

She is survived by her husband, Earl Wise of Plymouth; two sons, Jonathan Moran of Colorado and Duncan Moran of Plymouth; and stepchildren Nancy Werner of Livonia, Tim Wise of Illinois, Deborah Wise of Illinois and Penny Guilloux of France.

Memorials may be made to the Michigan Cancer Foundation or the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth.

GORDON H. McMANN

Private services were held for Gordon H. McMann of Plymouth.

Mr. McCann, 58, died Nov. 26 at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

He was born March 19, 1930, in Detroit. Mr. McCann retired in 1987 from his job as a medical supply clerk with Wisher Hospital in Indianapolis, Ind. He served in the United States Army and the the United States Air Force. He attended Plymouth High School.

Mr. McMann is survived by brothers John McMann of Plymouth and Allen McMann of McQueeney, Texas.

DELORES M. RUSSAS

Funeral services for Delores M. Russas, 65, of Dearborn were Nov. 30 at the Schrader Funeral Home with the Rev. Thomas Belczak officiating. Burial was in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery in Southfield.

Mrs. Russas died Nov. 26 in Ann Arbor. She was born June 3, 1923, in Detroit.

Mrs. Russas is survived by her daughter Valerie Russas of Minnesota; son Merlin (Lin) Norman of Plymouth; granddaughter Candace Normand of Plymouth; brothers Arthur Whalen of Redford and Robert Whalen of Taylor; and sister Margaret Center of Indiana.

Memorial contributions may be given to the American Lung Association, 1925 Pauline Boulevard, Ann Arbor.

Hudson papers given to college

Schoolcraft College has recently received the late Sam Hudson's research papers and notes.

Hudson's wife, Jessie, and son, Bruce, donated the collection to the college archives. The extensive collection contains research notes from all of his books which focused on local history.

Schoolcraft College archivist Shirley Connors said the collection includes information about the history of Plymouth, Schoolcraft College, the Plymouth-Canton Community School District and the First Presbyterian Church in Plymouth.

Connors said the collection contains many photographs in addition to Hudson's research notes.

Also contained in the collection are letters written between Hudson and Carl Starkweather regarding his early days of Plymouth history; Loverne Sly's research notes, which were a gift to Hudson; and extensive notes from interviews.

For an appointment to study Hudsons's papers, call Connors, 462-4400, Ext. 5313. The archives, located in the Bradner Library on the Schoolcraft College Livonia campus, are open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Bored kids? Not this holiday

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Numerous day camps and activities should cure children (and parents) of the post-holiday blues.

There's no reason for youngsters to sit around the house this holiday season moaning they don't have anything to do.

Besides making up endless Christmas lists and checking 'em twice, besides counting down the days to the return of the fat man in red, besides sneaking fresh-baked cookies when mom isn't looking, there's lots to do this year for kids 3-12.

Here are a few suggestions:

WINTER SURVIVAL CAMP: The National Living Science Foundation is sponsoring two local camps to teach kids 5-12 all about winter. What about a chinchilla's fur makes it so warm when it's so cold? What do the winter constellations look like (in the event some year we have a clear day in January or February)? How does the earth's tilt affect weather? The distance from the sun? What happens to a bear's metabolism when it takes that big sleep known as hibernation? How do those skinny little sparrows stay warm, singing so cheerfully you'd think it was June in Hawaii?

The camp at the Community Center of Farmington and Farmington Hills will run Dec. 28-30, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Children can attend for one day, two days or all three days.

The cost is $40 a day or $100 for the entire session. Because one day's program leads into the next's, it is recommended children attend all three days. Non-residents are welcome and pay the same fee.

The same program at the Northville Community Center will run Dec. 27-29. The cost is the same for residents, but non-residents of either the city or the township will pay $5 more each day.

Pre-registration is required and can be arranged by calling 477-8404 (Farmington) or 349-0203 (Northville).

Snacks will be provided, though children are urged to bring a sack lunch. They should also bring warm clothes for brief excursions outdoors.

The Community Center of Farmington and Farmington Hills is at 24705 Farmington Road in Farmington Hills. The Northville Community Center is at 303 W. Main in downtown Northville.

LUNCH WITH SANTA: What could be better for the child who has everything than lunch with Santa? The Wayne-Westland YMCA is flying in the jolly old man for an appearance from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 10, at the Y, 827 S. Wayne between Ford and Michigan.

For the modest sum of $4 for members, $5 for non-members, kids get lunch, a chat with Santa where they can get in a few last-minute requests and a picture taken with the North Pole native.

In addition, there will be carols and crafts.

There is no age requirement — "It's for anyone who believes in Santa Claus," said executive director Jan Lockman. There is no pre-registration required, nor are their residency requirements.

All proceeds go to the Y's Invest In Youth fund.

VACATION DAY CAMPS: Both the Livonia and Wayne-Westland Y's are offering vacation day camps from Dec. 26-Dec. 30 and from Jan. 3-Jan. 6. The Wayne-Westland camp is for kids 3-12, and the Livonia camp is for kids 6-12.

The Wayne-Westland program is from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. daily, with room for 50 children. Costs vary depending on whether the family belong to the Y and on how long the child is in camp. Costs range up to $12 a day, and hourly rates of $1.25 are available.

Call 721-7044 for registration or information.

Costs at the Livonia Y are $58 a week for members, $63 for non-members, plus a weekly fee of $6 to cover two trips. Call 261-2161 for information or registration.

Both camps offer outdoor activities, games, crafts, singing, swimming and sports competition. Children should bring a sack lunch.

The Livonia camp runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., though child may be dropped off as early as 7:30 a.m. and picked up as late as 6 p.m. for an additional fee.

LAST, NOT LEAST: The Livona Y is offering a Snooper's Christmas Camp for children 3-6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Dec. 27-29 and Jan. 3-5. The cost is $7 for members, $10 for non-members.

A variety of games and crafts will be offered. Children should bring a sack lunch, swimsuit and towel.

The Y is also sponsoring an overnight party for kids on New Year's Eve so parents can go out and party without worrying about a baby sitter.

The party will be from 8 p.m. Dec. 31 through 9 a.m. the next day for kids 6-12.

The cost for members is $20 for the first child, $15 for each additional child; for non-members it is $5 higher.

There will be gym games, racquetball, tennis, movies an pizza at midnight. Children should bring swim and gym gear and a sleeping bag.

Registration for the camp or the party can be made by calling 261-2161.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Chelsea Denafranier, 3, of Dearborn Heights shares a moment with Santa Mark Fernandez at Wonderland Mall, Livonia. After the holiday, there will be plenty of other things for children to do, too.

Nankin Mills group plans lighting fest

The Friends of Nankin Mills will kick off the holidays with a light-up celebration at the Nankin Mills picnic area, on Hines Drive near Farmington 6 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 8.

Trees, shrubs and the old mill will be strung with lights and ornaments. Carolers will belt out Christmas favorites, and Wayne County officials will be on hand for the festivities.

The Friends of Nankin Mills are still looking for a few more lights and ornaments to use in decorating, and they are collecting them at three drop off spots — at Nankin Mills, Westland City Hall, 36601 Ford Road, and the CATV Community Relations Building, 33455 Warren, Westland.

The night of the light-up, the Friends of Nankin Mills will be selling new ornaments furnished by the Lions Club. They cost $10 each and are tax-deductible, with proceeds going to further restore the mill.

For information on donations, call 261-1990.

Exercising option

Inventor hoping device shapes up as success

By Brian Lysaght
staff writer

Kim March has spent two years designing, perfecting, and selling — especially selling — his invention, an exercise machine called "Trym Gym."

It hasn't been easy, March said, developing his product or getting people to listen to the sales pitch.

"I've talked to all kinds of retailers. I've talked to 120 retailers but most said they don't want to take a chance on it right off," said March, 34, a Garden City businessman who lives in Canton.

He has gone to trade shows, made dozens of phone calls, and gotten the brush off more than once.

But March is hopeful now. Good news came three weeks ago in the form of a purchase order from K mart.

The giant retailer, second largest in the country, bought 1,200 "Trym Gym," units to test market in 200 stores. The Canadian Sears department store chain bought 2,500 and will run an advertisement in a credit card mailing.

"Trym Gym" is a spring and pully machine that attaches to doors, a "Total Fitness Center," according to a sales brochure. It can be used to limber up, slim down and improve tennis or golf strokes. It retails for $29.97.

THE MACHINE was born after Kim and his brother Craig, partners in a Garden City metal working shop, saw a similar machine and decided they could build it better and cheaper.

"It's a lot bigger of a project than I thought it would be at first," he said.

It took about six months to design. Working in the family-run shop, he started with the spring and pulley, expanded, added a piston, and improved the packaging. He called hundreds of vendors to get the best price on materials.

When he began trying to bring his invention to the marketplace, things got even more difficult.

"It's just a world of troubles, one after another," he said.

It often took an average 16 calls to get through to a retail store buyer, he said, then sometimes he would have to travel somewhere to pitch his machine personally.

He even filmed a television commercial but ran out of money before airing it.

BUT SEARS and K mart may provide the big break. K mart is testing the product in several area stores, including the store on Plymouth Road in Livonia.

If the "Trym Gym," sells, K mart and Sears will buy more, and March will be off and running. So far, he said, the family firm has manufactured 7,500 "Trym Gyms" in the family shop in the industrial park. Currently, the shop is split between the metal-working business and the "Trym Gym."

If the latter sells, he'll hire more assemblers and move to bigger quarters.

Last week, March was in several K mart stores setting up displays for his invention. He even made a sale.

"A lady stopped when I was setting it up, and I explained to her how it works. She bought it," he said.

That proves a point, he said. March is convinced that exposure is the key to sales. "You just have to get the exposure to sell it, to get people to see the product. I've sold it to people who come in my office."

If the product doesn't sell in the test markets, he'll air his television commercial. He had previously sold another family invention, a no holes magazine rack for binders, and has ideas for other products.

He said he has learned a lot along the way, about design, marketing, television commercials and more.

"No matter what happens, I'm proud I've learned as much as I did, that I've gotten this far."

Kim March shows off his exercise equipment, now sold in K mart stores.

State GOP chief puts out fires, teaches

By Tim Richard
staff writer

You don't go to school to become a state political party chairman, but you do a lot of teaching.

"The job has several components," said E. Spencer Abraham, the 36-year-old East Lansing attorney who is seeking to be Republican chairman for a fourth two-year term.

"You're a campaign manager, shaping election strategies.

"You do fund-raisers.

"You manage a staff of 15 to 20 — more as election time draws near.

"When you're the party out of power (in the governor's office), you're a spokesman for the party.

"AND THERE'S a lot of putting out of fires," said Abraham, who should know.

From 1986-88, the Michigan GOP was badly split between supporters of George Bush and the conservative coalition backing U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp and the Rev. Pat Robertson for president.

Abraham's patching of the party was good enough to avert a credentials fight at the national convention and to help Bush win Michigan's 20 electoral votes in his successful bid for the White House.

Although the party lost the U.S. Senate race badly, it did win six state offices — education and Supreme Court slots — and picked up a net of three seats in the state House of Representatives.

Announcing his re-election bid, Abraham said his staff fielded a record 30,000 volunteer workers in 1988. More candidate support than ever before had been provided, he said.

Abraham said the Michigan GOP, headquartered at 2121 E. Grand River Ave. in Lansing, "outperformed every other state in party programs" such as telephone centers, mail drops, absentee ballot mailings and campaign literature drops.

LIKE DEMOCRATIC state chairman Rick Wiener, Abraham is a lawyer — an honors graduate of the Harvard Law School ('79) after earning a bachelor's degree at Michigan State University ('74).

Should an aspiring young politico get a law degree or major in political science?

"We're the exceptions," Abraham said of himself and Wiener. "Practical experience is more helpful than courses. I've worked on an awful lot of campaigns."

The GOP machine does a lot of teaching, he said.

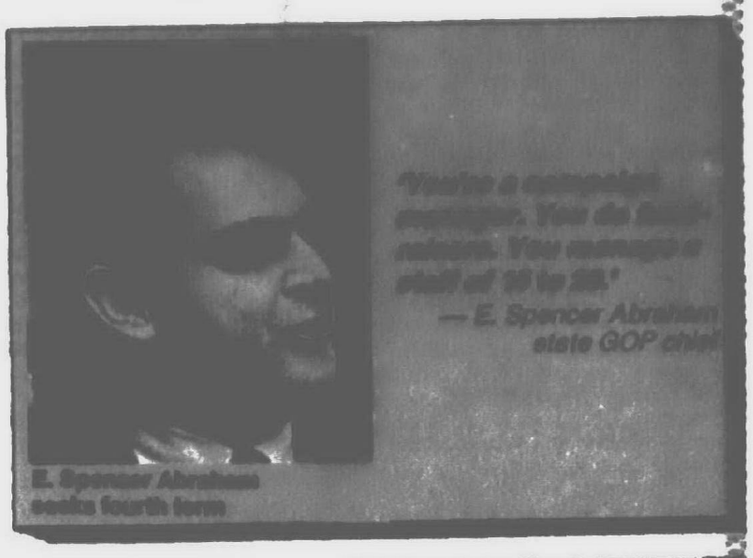

"We have training for campaign managers that lasts about eight weeks. That's for campaigns for the Legislature or Congress.

"There is a daylong session for local managers or candidates for county commissioner. And there is an intermediate one for township supervisors or county treasurers."

His job requires "fair amount" of travel, mostly for recruiting and developing people. Sometimes it's just to motivate local GOP partisans by letting them know the state party cares.

Abraham won the chairmanship in 1983 as the protege of 1982 gubernatorial nominee Richard Headlee of Farmington Hills and was re-elected in 1985 and 1987. The decision is made by some 2,000 delegates attending a state convention.

Between conventions, the state chairman works a state committee consisting of several members from each of the 18 congressional districts.

Holiday job market is strong

Michigan retailers gearing for the Christmas rush are competing with fast-food restaurants and other labor-intensive employers for an increasingly short supply of part-time and seasonal workers.

But if employers fear angering customers with longer lines, less service and possibly higher prices, the seller's market for part-time jobs is a blessing for workers. Current employees may count on more overtime, while new hires are being offered far more than the minimum wage and, in some cases, expanded benefits.

"YOU HEAR the cries out there," said George Meechem, labor market analyst for the Michigan Employment Security Commission. "They can't find the people — at least not for minimum wage. They're offering benefits that they never did before. They're hiring mothers and retirees instead of teen-agers to flip the burgers."

Meechem said the problem mirrors a national trend of declining births in the early 1970s.

"The 'Baby Boom' is meeting the 'Baby Bust,'" he said. "It's not unnatural, and we've been through this before. But it's collided with a buoyant job market. There's not much we can do about the labor force short of mass immigration. Probably the price of your Big Mac will go up."

Nearly 70,000 more people landed jobs in Michigan this year than in 1987, Meechem said.

"The whole teen-age phenomenon is gone," said Laurence Rosen, a demographer with the state Department of Management and Budget.

Michigan's birth rate plunged to 133,000 in 1976, Rosen said, so employers can expect the labor shortage to continue into the mid-1990s.

IN 1980, there were 1,250,000 people age 18-24 in the state. Last year, there were only 1,060,000 entering the labor force in the same age bracket, Rosen said.

At McDonald's Corp., the trend has made the $3.35-an-hour minimum wage a thing of the past, said Michigan marketing manager Tom Peters.

"Frankly, minimum wage is a dinosaur term," he said. "It's a very, very competitive marketplace. We haven't been paying minimum wage for a long time."

Peters said the holiday shopping season isn't any busier than the rest of the year for the hamburger giant.

Domestic violence discussed

'Right to die' squeaks by House

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A divided state House of Representatives finally passed a patient rights bill after 12 years. There was just one vote to spare.

The House voted 57-38 to adopt House Bill 4647, sponsored by Rep. David Hollister, D-Lansing. He likened its passage to "giving birth to a large whale."

The "right to die" legislation would allow people to designate another party to make medical decisions on their behalf if they become unable to do so themselves. But Hollister said the patient's advocate could just as easily insist that everything medically possible be done to prolong life.

OBSERVER & Eccentric area representatives were as divided as the rest of the House.

Supporting it were Democrats Justine Barns of Westland, Maxine Berman of Southfield and James Kosteva of Canton; and Republicans Lyn Bankes of Livonia, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion, David Honigman of West Bloomfield, Judith Miller of Birmingham and Gordon Sparks of Troy.

Opposed were Democrats John Bennett of Redford and Wilfred Webb of Hazel Park; and Republicans W.V. Brotherton of Farmington and Gerald Law of Plymouth.

Absent was Democrat William Keith of Garden City.

"From a moral standpoint, I'm opposed," said Bennett, a lawmaker since 1964. "I'm opposed to abortion, and I'm opposed to that."

Bennett said he had received no mail or telephone calls from his 24th House District — "none" — although the bill was widely publicized in state capital news accounts.

"My people in Redford and Livonia must have fallen asleep on it," he said.

RIGHT TOLife forces oppose the bill, saying doctors shouldn't be barred from providing food and water if that would result in the death despite the wishes of the patient.

The bill goes to the Senate, though to which committee is uncertain.

It could go to either the Health Policy Committee, headed by Sen. William Sederburg, R-East Lansing, or the Judiciary Committee, headed by Sen. Rudy Nichols, R-Waterford.

The bill would amend the state probate code.

Debra Townsend, spokeswoman for Senate Republicans, doubted the Senate would tackle the issue in the final few weeks of the 1988 session.

Any legislation not passed by year's end must be processed from scratch in the next two-year session beginning in January.

SCHOOL FINANCE reform was in the spotlight this week.

The Legislature returned to work Tuesday and is expected to adjourn for the year Dec. 15 or 16.

Topping the agenda will be the condition of schools. Negotiations continue over how best to narrow the gap between rich and poor school districts, which ranged in per pupil spending in 1986-87 from about $7,000 in Whitefish Township to about $2,000 in Kingsley.

Gov. James J. Blanchard told legislators he would not support a school finance package unless quality programs first were in place. He insisted that while they debate finances that they pass low-cost bills that would require: a core curriculum of classes for all grades; a state accreditation program; and dropout prevention.

"We see no reason these cannot be enacted this year before the Legislature leaves while we continue the progress we're going to make on property tax relief and school finance reform," he said last week.

Blanchard's finance plan would cap the school tax rate at 28 mills, cut property taxes by 25 percent for homeowners and 10 percent for businesses and raise the sales tax to 5 percent from 4 percent.

That tax shift is supposed to raise $1.5 billion over five years, $140 million in the first year.

A distribution plan for that money has not been released, but Blanchard administration officials say every school district would receive enough sales tax revenue to offset their property tax loss.

LAWMAKERS also are expected to vote to dismantle the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority, which was created by the Legislature in 1967.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

Introducing
The GUARDIAN PLAN program

I'd like to tell you why so many caring people have said "Yes" to this funeral prearrangement program.

I once asked John, our GUARDIAN PLAN representative, why he chose his calling. He answered, "Because I believe in it. Because I know first hand, how it helps families."

I found out that John is not alone. He is one of hundreds of compassionate and dedicated men and women who represent the GUARDIAN PLAN program throughout the United States and Canada.

I'd like to tell you more about a funeral prearrangement program that attracts people of the caliber of John and his associates to serve you.

The full title of the program is the GUARDIAN PLAN prearranged funeral program. It's funded by life insurance policies and annuity contracts. Unlike trust funded funeral-prearrangement plans, the GUARDIAN PLAN program is backed by insurance. That's a big difference. It means once you pay the first premium, you're covered for the full cost of the funeral services you select. And the insurance proceeds from the GUARDIAN PLAN program are tax-free.

Another feature of the GUARDIAN PLAN program that you won't find in any other prearranged funeral plan is something the GUARDIAN PLAN people call Transferability. Let's say you make your GUARDIAN PLAN funeral prearrangement where you live now and later move to another part of the country. No problem. You are guaranteed that services equal in every way to those you selected in the first place will be provided through the GUARDIAN PLAN program wherever you move, and at no increase in the original cost. Now, I think that's a very important benefit.

There's a lot more to learn. And if what I said makes sense to you: Talks to your heart, why not do this: Call for the free, informative booklet, CARING. Call toll free, 1-800-922-7464. The GUARDIAN PLAN people have worked out an easier way to remember that number: 1-800-9-CARING.

GUARDIAN PLAN℠ is a registered service mark of Service Corporation International (SCI). The GUARDIAN PLAN prearranged funeral program is offered by Guardian Plans, Inc., a subsidiary of SCI. Guardian Plans, Inc. is an independent marketer acting on behalf of the funeral homes listed to provide funeral merchandise and services. The funeral services and facilities listed on this page are provided by SCI. The prearranged funeral services and merchandise are funded by insurance policies issued by Pacific Standard Life Insurance Co. (Texas), PAFCO Life Insurance Co. (California), also a subsidiary of SCI. These are a number of life insurance companies which have the stated guarantee in their name. The prearranged funeral program is not affiliated with or sponsored by any of these companies.

Board must take leadership role

IT'S A LITTLE EARLY for New Year's resolutions, but with new board members now setting the agenda in Plymouth Township it is time to look ahead.

Plymouth Township has a great many things going for it thanks to a combination of careful planning, concerned residents, healthy tax base and some locational luck.

But it will take more than luck to maintain the quality of life in this community, and that's where the new board comes into play.

The next four years will bring about tremendous changes, and elected representatives will have to remain on top of the issues to ensure the continued health of the township.

During the election, candidates put forth a number of views and ideas about what will have to be done during the next term of office.

We'd like to remind those representatives of some of those views.

TAX ABATEMENTS remain a top priority that has to be addressed. Residents have voiced concern about the necessity of these devices to lure and retain businesses.

Many candidates also spoke about the need to take a closer look at these 50-percent tax breaks for 12-year periods.

Now is the time to follow through on that promise.

Perhaps the board could form a group to study past tax breaks to see if the desired development and job creation materialized.

Then the board would have some solid facts on which to base future decisions on tax breaks.

ANOTHER ISSUE that must be resolved is how to get rid of the mounds and mounds of solid waste generated each day.

Many candidates paid lip service to the need for resource recovery, recycling and possible incineration.

Now is not the time for talk.

The next four years will bring about tremendous changes, and elected representatives will have to remain on top of the issues to ensure the continued health of the township.

It is a time for action. Working together with other communities to create some solutions to this problem is a must for the next four years and beyond.

The township has resolved some long-standing sewage problems through a joint agency. That approach must be promoted and pushed to deal with solid waste.

WHILE ADDRESSING these two concerns, members of the board should not lose sight of their top priority — serving residents.

Government often gives the impression of being cold and aloof.

Elected representatives, especially at this level of government, must change that image by working with local groups and individuals to keep them informed and in mind when making decisions.

That means going the extra mile to explain a complicated issue or patiently dealing with a resident with nowhere else to turn.

It also means going to homeowner association meetings or visiting business leaders. It's not enough to say I'm available, call me.

Residents of the community seem satisfied with the level of services, tax rate and quality of life in the township.

But maintaining that satisfaction requires continued vigilance by the current board of trustees.

Parents must take a stand

WOULDN'T IT BE nice if the hottest selling holiday gifts this season were peace toys?

As far as that goes, wouldn't it be nice if there were any peace toys at all, competing for a modicum of space with the GI Joes, the Laser Tag guns, and the many other toys that glorify and promote war and violence?

Shelves stocked with peace toys are about as likely an event as are stores and manufacturers listening to the demonstrators who protest annually about the glut of war toys and toy weapons.

A number of groups staged their third annual day-after-Thanksgiving demonstration at a Southfield Toys "R" Us store last week. The protesters likely don't expect war toys to become extinct just because of their efforts. But they do hope to raise awareness about the toys, particularly among parents.

For three years parents have used the day after Thanksgiving, supposedly the busiest shopping day of the year, to protest against the sale of toys of violence.

The big reason that stores try to sell so many war toys is because there are a lot of people who will buy them.

FOR THE most part, parents make the best target for their message.

War toys, toy guns, toy soldiers and the like are plentiful because people buy them. It is doubtful that is going to change, and it is doubtful toys are much to blame for much violence in today's world. After all, wars and brutality were around a long time before GI Joe.

But it is troubling to see the proliferation of war toys and toy weapons, their realistic appearance and their ubiquitous promotion during Saturday morning cartoon programs, which one protester described as "30-minute commercials to sell a variety of war toys."

But even after hearing claims of a ninefold increase in war toy sales since 1983, it is naive to place the blame for violence or the responsibility for toy buying solely with the commercial interests.

NO ONE said parenting is easy, but parents are in the best position to monitor television habits and to determine the type of toys with which a child plays. Most children will play war games, but that doesn't prevent parents from making sure that children know the consequences of real-life guns and bombs.

It would be nice if toy companies would refrain from cashing in on war toys, but don't hold your breath. Why should toy firms be responsible in an age when the federal government proposes to spend $66 billion on Stealth bombers, a move hailed as a possible economic boom for Michigan should some of the deadly planes be based here?

Toy manufacturers should, however, be ashamed of making realistic-appearing toy weapons. There have already been tragic stories of police shooting children who were pointing frighteningly real-looking toy guns. We could support legislation to regulate such irresponsibility — such as painting all toy guns orange, as has been proposed.

We thank the marchers who protest against the toys and hope their message gets through to parents. We also pray for the day when there aren't any real weapons for the toy companies to emulate.

Plazas a better idea for freeway drivers

Interchanges are an economic boom, but their style in Michigan is a convenience bust.

Tim Richard

FLORIDA HAS a better idea. It's called an interchange plaza.

Let's say you're traveling I-75 and need to stop for various purposes. You make one turn off the surface road into the plaza, and everything is there.

A choice of fast-food restaurants. Two or three gasoline stations. Motels. A chamber of commerce station with restrooms and pamphlets on the local attractions, staffed by a couple of people who can answer questions or even chat about Keith, the tropical storm.

Michigan and a few other states ought to try the same thing.

FREEWAY INTERCHANGES are a big industry with many kinds of businesses. Back in the '60s, when farmers and others were bemoaning the loss of land to these 300-foot-wide ribbons, John C. Mackie, then state highway commissioner, used to reply that freeway interchanges would be a plus for the economy. Mackie was right.

But the way Michigan and most states manage them, interchanges are a mess to deal with. Every fast-food restaurant has a separate driveway off the surface road. Ditto with every gasoline station. Ditto with every motel. Ditto with every other kind of business.

If you want to eyeball the fuel prices, you have to drive up and down the surface road. You have to make left turns and U-turns in unfamiliar and sometimes heavy traffic. If a driver is elderly or a kid on board has a full bladder, it can be tense work. Stop, start, turn. Stop, start, turn.

The interchange plaza gets travelers off the surface road and lets local traffic proceed at something resembling normal speed and safety.

SEVERAL YEARS ago, I saw a Michigan Department of Transportation program on another good travel idea. Nothing ever came of it, at least in Michigan and Ohio.

The idea is to have one large, official green freeway sign saying "Food next exit." On that billboard would be the logos of all the restaurants within a short distance of the interchange — the McDonald arches, the Burger King Whopper, Wendy's, the local restaurants and so on — each a foot or two wide.

Next would be a sign saying "Gas next exit," with the logos of the stations. Same for motels.

The idea was to get rid of ugly billboards, particularly in beauty areas where you want to attract tourists.

It's also a convenience to the traveler. At one glance, you see all the food choices, all the fuel choices, and so on.

That's the way they do it in the Carolinas and Georgia.

Why Michigan, where tourism is one of our two or three major industries, never adopted that system is a mystery. I plainly recollect Peter Fletcher, then chairman of the state Highway Commission, deploring ugly billboards with his colorful erudition, and I dimly recollect first lady Helen Milliken's involvement in some kind of beautification effort.

TRAFFIC FOOTNOTE: "Intimidation driving" is still largely a phenomenon of the southeastern Michigan vicinity, including Toledo and Windsor.

Intimidation drivers barrel up on you at 20 mph above the posted limit, tailgate at less than a car length, dart across lanes without signaling, and even use the shoulder to pass.

With the exception of one Tennessee pickup truck, all the intimidation driving I saw in two weeks was by cars with Michigan, Ohio and Ontario plates.

In past columns, I observed that 90 percent of intimidation driving was done by people in black or bright red cars. No longer. All colors of cars, with drivers of all ages, are doing it.

CREW rules limit voices

To the editor:

CREW in their zeal to create a positive press for the Plymouth-Canton school system (their goal in memo dated 7-18-88), has stopped short of nothing including limiting membership in subcommittees to exclude Christian conservatives who are upset with the school district.

When CREW was formed, a few conservatives in the community called and said they would like to be involved on the subcommittees. Nov. 9, there was a meeting to form subcommittees to investigate concerns expressed from the community. Oddly enough, just by coincidence mind you, every person who was a well-known Christian conservative on the list of interested parties was, just by chance, not mailed a notification of the meeting. My presence there was an accident. I found out about it by word of mouth.

At the first meeting, Annette Remsburg again reiterated that everyone was welcome to join a subcommittee. Because I knew of several Christian conservatives who were concerned about curriculum, I told them to come to the curriculum committee meeting. Yes, they did express their view on secular humanism and sex education. After the curriculum committee had their first meeting, suddenly new rules were formed. Now only seven people would be allowed to represent the community on the curriculum subcommittee. Seven people who had shown up at the first meeting were asked to leave. Just by accident again, golly what a coincidence, all seven were Christian conservatives.

Three other individuals who were so interested they did not even show up at the first meeting were still on the curriculum subcommittee. These new rules (to eliminate the Christian conservatives) were never mentioned when the committee were formed Nov. 9 or even at the first meeting of the curriculum subcommittee. Only after these Christians expressed their point of view, were new rules formed. How convenient.

Annette Remsburg may be able to exclude conservative Christians from the curriculum committee now, but she will not be able to exclude them from the ballot box if she runs for school board next June.

The curriculum committee is a fraud and a hoax, deliberately stacked to eliminate the effect of voting Christian conservatives. If Christian conservatives are not welcome, then the committee does not represent the community at all.

Education can lessen risk

To the editor:

I'd like to address the articles relating to ATV's (all-terrain vehicles) and motorcycles that appeared in your paper's Street Scene section Monday, Oct. 31. Both vehicles have inherent risks involved in their usage, but there are precautions which can be taken to lessen the potential risk. I work at Schoolcraft College and coordinate classes on motorcycle safety and ATV training.

Classes are available for motorcycle riders who are not familiar with riding. The class introduces them to the motorcycle, how it functions and stresses the safety factor with actual riding practice using motorcycles provided by the college. In fact, if you successfully complete the motorcycle rider course, the secretary of state road test is waived. There are also courses available for the experienced, licensed cyclist to brush up on existing skills.

ATV's are another area of safety concern. Based on guidelines established by the specialty vehicle Institute of America, a program to teach the proper use of ATV's is underway with an emphasis on using a vehicle appropriate for the age group and safety awareness. At this time the college is currently running a training program for teachers of ATV safety and use.

Education is the best way to make people aware of the potential dangers involved in any activity they choose to participate in. In gaining an understanding of the vehicle you're using and its limitations, you can enjoy it that much more.

Focus on writing

There exists a process to be taught

Doc Doyle

I know from experience that a Writing Process program, if started at the elementary level, will result in better prepared students for the more competitive demand of a high school program.

Q: My child's school district has been using a focus writing program. I have been pleased to see my son be so excited about writing especially because of this new grading style. My older child never had this opportunity to write so frequently without having every error bring his grade down. I for one like this method better.

A:What you are referring to is the focus correction method, which is part of the Writing Process developed by Dr. Donald Graves of the University of New Hampshire. You are fortunate to be in a district that uses this program because, from my experience, this is the best writing program available. The value in the program is that rather than assigning long papers, there are shorter assignments, more frequently given, with a much quicker process for returning papers to the child and more opportunities to write that can lead to increased fluency. There is a prewriting experience to determine the topic and audience, an initial draft where students write rapidly without worrying about spelling or punctuation, a revised draft with peers editing the paper, a second draft (if so desired) and finally a sharing (read aloud) activity with classmates.

Anyone who has been published recognizes these steps are inherent in producing a quality product. However, teachers must buy into this method and understand that the focus correction process can address one specific skill such as quotations and/or end punctuation as opposed to multi skills for every paper. A tennis coach will oftentimes take a player and "focus" on his/her backhand for a long period of time in a concentrated intensified "focus." The same purpose exist for the focus writing correction. Parents must understand the purpose behind this approach so as not to become confused if the entire paper isn't corrected for grammatical errors.

It should also be pointed out that language arts or English teachers especially at the middle school and high school level, if they have five classes with 30 children in each class, will have 150 students. If they assign a 10-page term paper they have 1,500 pages to correct and may as well kiss their next couple weekends good-bye. That is why the Writing Process and focus writing makes more sense to me than grading papers for every error recognizing eventually a student will build skills in many areas over the period of a year through this intensified instruction.

I know from experience that a Writing Process program, if started at the elementary level, will result in better prepared students for the more competitive demand of a high school program.

The answers provided here are the opinions of Dr. James Doyle and not the Troy School District. Questions for this column should sent to Doc Doyle c/o the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, Mi. 48150.

Still gnawing on turkey bones and blessings

Shirlee Iden

Gnawing on the turkey bones is one of my favorite after Thanksgiving pastimes, a soul-satisfying ritual that's also finger-licking good.

As years go by, I find myself gnawing also on the thoughts that seem to intrude on our sensibilities when the refrigerator's crammed with turkey day leftovers, and we reflect on our blessings and pots to scour.

Sure, I am grateful that for a day or two I don't have to cook, but I'm thankful for a lot more than that.

Business in Southfield brought my parents home this holiday, a warming, wonderful, priceless bonus. Dad reminded me that it was 65 years ago on Nov. 1 that he first set foot in this promised land. No need to ask him about grateful.

In her own inimitable way, my mother makes her presence felt in a holiday kitchen, at the table and merely for time to touch one another and talk about the big things and the trivia that wrap us up in blessed closeness.

Who else has a mother who comes to town for a week or so and cooks up four flavors of homemade soup for the freezer? Her price is far above rubies.

NOW WE'LL be able to get through December, January and February on the mushroom barley, split pea, bean and lentil.

I'm grateful that the Wolverines "went true blue" against Ohio State and I am ready to take any bets we'll be hailing the victors at the Rose Bowl.

You can quote me on this. The election is over and I'm glad. I'm bored with the extent of the campaign and appalled with the negative focus on personalities. As one who adores national politics, it's enough already. There have to be some changes made. But it's over for now and three years is only too soon to go through all that again.

It's a plus that our family is basically in good health, including my about-to-be 84-year-old parents Although I can measure aches and pains with anyone, I can see, hear, talk and walk and look forward to quite a few more Thanksgiving dinners and bone-gnawing sessions afterward, praise be.

HAVING BEEN BORN to freedom, plenty and opportunity, a recent nine-day visit to the Soviet Union brought home to me how thankful I am to live in decent housing, have ample clothing, food and other consumer goods available, necessities and splurges alike.

I appreciate walking down the street without having to look behind me to see if I'm still being followed; gabbing in an elevator without knowing that big brother is listening; and knowing that, in my synagogue or anyone's church, no sinister government agents are lurking around watching the worshippers and the worship.

I appreciate walking down the street without having to look behind me to see if I'm still being followed; gabbing in an elevator without knowing that big brother is listening; and knowing that, in my synagogue or anyone's church, no sinister government agents are lurking around watching the worshippers and the worship.

My gratitude extends to having wonderful old friends and courageous new ones who trooped through Riga, Vilnius and Leningrad with Jack and me, bringing hope, medical succor and encouragement to oppressed people who so envy our freedom and joi de vivre.

Now I have been to Poland, China and the Soviet Union. I was grateful to leave each when departure time came, but Russia's the most oppressive, brutal and barren. It's only taken a peek at other lifestyles and other types of government for me to reinforce what I've always been told anyhow: We've got it pretty good.

I am grateful for so many things, but right now I am overwhelmingly charged up about being an American. An American with a turkey carcass at that.

Newspapers need features for children

To the editor:

Newspapers are a main source of information. Many people read them every day. Kids in this area like to know what is going on in the world too. Usually newspapers are aimed toward adults and not kids so the kids who read the newspapers don't always understand what is being said.

If the newspaper had features for younger readers, it would not only increase the newspaper's popularity but the business it would get. The youngsters of our community would also know a lot more about what is going on, and maybe, in some things, do something about it.

There could be a children's section of the newspaper so kids could write in and tell other kids about what is happening or anything else that other kids might be interested in. Kids could also write about problems that parents should think about and fix.

It would give the paper time to collect articles if the children's section was put in the paper weekly or every two weeks. So it would become a regular feature. If the section was published on Saturday, the kids would have something to look forward to after a long week of school.

How to handle plastic waste

Terry Gibb

This is the last part of a series about plastics and their effect on our environment.

There are three ways of dealing with the plastics waste problem. They are recycling, incineration and source reduction.

RECYCLING

First, not all plastics can be recycled into new products. Some resins will not tolerate the reheating; the rest degrade (breakdown) with repeated heatings.

This is due to the unique properties of each plastic resin. Each resin has different physical and chemical characteristics and, therefore, react differently to reheating and have varying melting points. As a result, most plastic recycling is limited to single resin containers, such as milk jugs and soda pop bottles.

However, a new process, called ET/1, now allows the reprocessing of previously chemically-incompatible plastics, including bottles, multilayer containers, film. The recycled material is molded into an assortment of lumberlike products. There are currently two companies in Michigan that produce this plastic lumber product.

Recycled plastic applications are further limited by the FDA. Their regulations require that any recycled material that is to be used to package food must be guaranteed by the manufacturer to be free of any contaminants. Because recycled plastics cannot be reheated to a high enough temperature to insure this, plastics are not currently reused to make food packaging.

INCINERATION

While recycling and reduction are slowly gaining support, incineration is accelerating as a disposal alternative. There are 111 municipal incinerators currently operating in the U.S. According to the EPA, 210 additional ones are planned or under construction. The plastics industry is a strong supporter of incineration of plastics citing that plastics release more energy (because it's made from petrochemicals) when burned and helps to burn the whole waste stream more efficiently.

There are several major concerns with burning plastics. One, many of the additives used to process or color plastic products contain toxic heavy metals, including cadmium, nickel and lead. These metals do not combust and have been found in air emissions and ash from municipal incinerators.

Second, hydrochloric acids (HCL) are released when PVCs are burned. In low concentrations, HCL does not affect humans, but it can result in significant damage to plants, buildings and the incinerator itself.

The main controversy in the incineration of plastics centers on dioxins. Dioxins are formed when certain products of incomplete combustion combine with chlorine. Studies have been inconclusive as to the extent of emissions at this point.

SOURCE REDUCTION

Source reduction simply means that consumers must reduce the amount of plastic they use and, ultimately, discard. This can be done in a number of ways. Omit single use, disposal products, such as lighters and razors, from your purchases.

Ask for paper instead of plastic when possible. Find new uses for plastic products that would normally be thrown away. Recycle plastic jugs and containers at nearly recycling centers that accept plastics.

Another way to reduce solid waste in landfills is through the use of degradable plastic products.

Plastics will not normally breakdown unless exposed to high temperature or intense ultraviolet light. However, by altering the chemical makeup, plastics can be made susceptible to decomposition.

There are two processes used to make plastics degradable:

PHOTODEGRADATION or degradation in the presence of sunlight is achieved by mixing light sensitive additives into the normal plastic resin or in the structure of the polymer itself. Several American and Canadian companies manufacture products, such as six-pack rings and trash and grocery bags, currently in use.

BIODEGRADATION or degradation through microorganisms is achieved by mixing the resin with an additive, usually starch, that can be eaten away in a landfill or other microbial active environment. Biodegradation does not require sunlight in the process.

While both of the degradable plastic processes will reduce the amount of solid waste and litter, some safety concern have been expressed in their use.

Packagers, environmentalists and health officials feel that degradable plastics may leave unwanted or toxic residues in package contents or in landfills.

Clearly, the many benefits in using plastics are counter balanced by the pollution and disposal problems they create. Each consumer must decide how to balance convenience with human and environmental health and economic costs.

WSU seeks 'holiday hosts'

Wayne State University seeks area families to act as holiday hosts for foreign students.

The university's English Language Institute seeks to match students and families in time for Christmas.

The programs is designed to help students improve their English skills before attending university classes, as well as to ease their isolation and loneliness.

Students come from around the world, especially from the Middle East and Far East.

The university seeks at least 20 host families. Families must file an application and pass a university interview.

After the holidays, host families would take students home or on family outings at least once a month for the next four months. Overnight lodging isn't necessary.

Additional information is available by calling 577-7705.

Jazz benefit scheduled

More than 50 members of Detroit's jazz community will perform Sunday, Dec. 4, on behalf of Greenpeace.

Musicians will perform 4 p.m. to midnight at Alvin's Finer Bar and Deli, 5756 Cass, across from Wayne State University.

Films will also be presented. A speaker from Greenpeace will discuss the organization's area activities.

Admission is $5. Additional information is available by calling 588-3278.

Carriage rides, provided by Cinderella Carriage Service, were part of the fun at the Old Village event.

Walk starts busy season

THE SHOPPERS were out in full force during the Sunday, Nov. 27, Village Christmas Walk, held in Plymouth's Old Village.

The event is held to boost retail sales in the area, said Richard Montgomery, president of the Old Village Association.

"It gives them a whole month to come back and do their shopping," he said.

A visit from Santa Claus, entertainment, carriage rides and shopping were part of the fun that afternoon. Santa Claus, who arrived by carriage, received the key to Old Village.

The annual event has been held for a number of years in Old Village.

"I would imagine it's going to be a real good year for the village," said Montgomery, a commercial/industrial auctioneer and appraiser.

The Friday and Saturday after Thanksgiving were good days for the merchants.

DURING THE Village Christmas Walk, merchants served refreshments, including hot chocolate and eggnog. That kind of old-fashioned service helps attract shoppers, according to Montgomery.

"The people that know Plymouth know there's a village area," he said. "They like to come here. I think people like to shop in the atmosphere of the 1880s."

Antiques, trains, handmade clothing and jewelry, dolls and other items are found in the Old Village area. Montgomery enjoys shopping there, partly because it is convenient.

"Plus you get quality here," he said.

Prices are competitive, he said, and the atmosphere is not what you'd find in a mall. Montgomery also shops in downtown Plymouth.

"I don't think I've been in a mall for three years," he said.

MERCHANTS PARTICIPATING in the Christmas walk were busy that day.

"Normally, this is our busy time of year anyhow," Bonnie Reckinger said.

Reckinger and her husband, Robert, own Plymouth Yard Hobbies. They have been in business six years and have found Christmas is a good time of year for sales.

"They're buying model trains," Bonnie said. "That's what we specialize in."

The store sells Lionel and other trains.

LAST YEAR was the best year for model trains since the 1950s, Reckinger said.

"Model trains are definitely coming back."

People are going back to the basics and getting away from fads; many parents remember how much they enjoyed having a model train.

"They're going out and buying them for their children now."

During the holiday season, sales for children account for some half of the business at Plymouth Yard Hobbies. Adults buy the remaining merchandise for themselves. During the rest of the year, more sales are to adults buying for themselves.

"We sell a lot of starter sets for kids (at Christmas)," Reckinger said.

People also buy trains to put around Christmas trees.

As a specialty business, Plymouth Yard Hobbies doesn't depend on the walk-in customer. Customers come from Toledo, Brighton, Lansing, "really all over the area," Reckinger said. Even so, the location by the train tracks has been a good one for them.

"You can't beat being trackside in a train store," Reckinger said with a smile. "You've got the atmosphere."

MORE RECENT arrivals to Old Village also participated in the Christmas walk. Pringle's Pastries of Old Village, specializing in freshly baked pastries and cakes, recently opened for business on North Mill.

"She's had a real steady flow of people," said Tim Tamer, son of Nancy Davis, who owns Pringle's Pastries.

The pastries are for people who don't have the time to bake, but want the quality they'd have in their own baked goods, Tamer said.

"Last week was a very good week to open," Tamer said.

They have been happy with business and with their location in Old Village.

Group plans to focus on kids' needs

Early childhood education is a subject that is very much in the news these days.

Research is looking at how early childhood education can work best for children.

Local educators are well aware of that interest. The newly formed Plymouth-Canton Early Childhood Association was created partly in response to that.

The interest in forming such a group came from preschool and kindergarten teachers and from others, said Mary Fritz, acting membership chairwoman for the group. Fritz is director of Chapter I and Head Start for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Among those instrumental in forming the group were Shirley Spaniel, the school district's executive director of elementary education, and Claudia Kulnis, a teacher.

EDUCATORS BELIEVE there is a need for a forum to share ideas, Fritz said. The group, which will focus on the needs of children ages 3 through 8, isn't limited to public school educators.

Representatives from licensed private child care facilities, such as Red Bell Children's Nursery and Kinder Care, are among those invited to participate.

"We're interested in friends, people who maybe have an interest in this," Fritz said.

THE GROUP'S primary focus will be on getting to know each other, sharing information and ideas. Some kind of public service activity will be included.

The group's invitation is open to administrators and teachers from schools and child care facilities, both public and private. Paraprofessional staff members and parents are also being encouraged to participate.

"It's a very broad arena," Fritz said. "We would welcome interested parents to come forward."

The Plymouth-Canton Early Childhood Association will meet from 7-9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 5, in the Little Theater at Plymouth Canton High School, 8415 Canton Center Road in Canton.

The speaker, Dr. Leonard Kaplan from Wayne State University, will discuss "The Role Parents Play in the Developmental Learning Process."

THE MEETING is for teachers, paraprofessional and support staffers, administrators, parents and others interested in early childhood education. Parents are asked to leave their children at home that evening.

Admission is free of charge; participants should register in advance by calling 451-6656. Refreshments will be served.

The Dec. 5 session will include a short business meeting featuring information on the association's objectives. Officers will be elected that evening.

"We're really kind of excited about it," Fritz said. "We want to reach out to as many people as we can."

Mary Fritz

PROFESSIONALS IN her field are hearing more about the need to collaborate with the private sector, Fritz said.

"I think communication with these people is really important," she said. "We feel that's the way to go."

The network between the public and private sectors isn't as good as it could be, she said. As more children go into some kind of day care program, there's more of a need for such communication.

"We want to find out what they're doing," Fritz said.

There is also a need for communication among kindergarten teachers and first grade teachers, she said. That year involves a major transition for children.

(Membership dues for the Plymouth-Canton Early Childhood Association are $15 per year. For more information, call 451-6656.)

Safety

Season's shoppers need to be aware of their surroundings

By Julie Brown
staff writer

POLICE OFFICIALS know people tend to be a bit forgetful these days. The busy holiday season can unfortunately be a time for crime.

"Everybody becomes a little complacent about one thing or another," said Officer Robert Smith of the Plymouth Township Police Department. Holiday shoppers need to be aware of their surroundings.

Those who have suspicions should report them promptly to local police or mall security personnel.

"Let people know," said Smith, who worked for three years in security at Twelve Oaks in Novi. "It might be the worst. Without it being brought to our attention, we'll never find out."

Smith recommended that shoppers keep track of their holiday purchases; when he worked in mall security, some forgetful shoppers would leave packages at cash registers.

THERE ARE safety steps shoppers can take, Officer David Boljesic of the Canton Police Department and Chief Richard Myers of the Plymouth Police Department said. Those precautions won't eliminate the possibility of a crime occurring, but will reduce the likelihood.

Storing packages in a car's trunk — rather than on a car seat — is important, Myers said. Thieves will be more likely to take packages that are visible.

"It makes a pretty tempting target," the Plymouth police chief said.

Boljesic agreed that's a good step for shoppers to take. It's best to put packages in the car trunk in between shopping stops, he said. If a thief sees you put packages in the trunk, he'll be more likely to try to get to those packages.

Shoppers also need to be careful in parking areas.

"There's a lot of area that is well-lit," Boljesic said. It's best to park in those areas, rather than in more distant ones.

"You can be in some desolate areas, even at Christmas time," the Canton officer said.

Parents who are shopping need to keep an eye on their children. It's not too likely that children will be kidnapped, although they could easily get lost in crowded stores.

"Keep a close eye on your kids and what they are doing, especially the young ones," Plymouth Township's Smith said.

OTHER SAFETY tips police offer include:

- Don't carry a large amount of cash. Using credit cards or checks is a good idea.
- Lock your car and take your keys with you.
- Be careful when putting change in your wallet or purse. Money should be carried and handled discreetly.
- Be careful when using 24-hour bank teller machines.
- Shop with a friend, a family member or as part of a group. Women and senior citizens should be particularly careful about shopping alone.
- If you're uncomfortable walking to your car alone, ask mall personnel to provide you with an escort.
- Don't leave a purse unattended in a shopping cart, even for a second or two.
- Keep track of your wallet's contents, including recording all credit card numbers. Also keep track of toll-free telephone numbers used to report cards having been lost or stolen.
- Take charge card receipts with you; take carbons with you or see that they are destroyed.

"A thief isn't above looking in a garbage can at a store," Boljesic said. He recommended that holiday shoppers check their credit cards after making purchases; it'd be easy for a salesperson to give a shopper back the wrong person's card.

MYERS, PLYMOUTH'S police chief, would be hesitant to give a credit card number to someone seeking business by telephone. That can be a trap, designed to get a credit card number from an unsuspecting consumer.

People need to be cautious when handling solicitations for charitable donations, police officials agree.

"The holidays are an emotional time for a lot of people." People are often in a generous mood this time of year, Myers said.

"But we have to be selective with it." He suggested making donations to well-established charities, such as your church, the United Way or the Salvation Army.

Experts say that people who look more confident are less likely to become crime victims, Myers said. Thieves tend to look for those they think will be easy prey.

"And shop in an area where you're comfortable. I think that's important too."

The downtown Plymouth area is relatively crime-free, according to Myers. Assaults are particularly uncommon.

Large shopping centers pose greater problems for law enforcement personnel, he said.

Downtown Plymouth benefits from involvement of citizens and merchants, Myers said. The area's design also makes it less of a crime problem than some shopping centers are, as does its highly-visible police presence.

"Everybody looks out for everybody else."

Travel calls for caution

Shoppers aren't the only ones who need to be careful during the holidays. Travelers also need to heed some of the common-sense advice given by local police officials.

Most crimes around airports involve pickpockets, said officer David Boljesic of the Canton Police Department. Travelers need to make sure their purses and wallets are secure. "Not flashing your money around" will help avoid attracting a thief's attention.

"Just remember where you are and what you're doing," Boljesic said. Women should hold onto their purses securely; men should be careful about putting a wallet in a back pocket, an easy spot for a thief to reach.

Chief Richard Myers of the Plymouth Police Department advises travelers to leave for the airport in plenty of time.

SOME RESIDENTS think that's not necessary, due to this area's proximity to Metro Airport; the airport does, however, become increasingly congested during the holidays. Travelers can call first, to check on a flight's progress.

"Metro Airport's a pretty safe place to be," Myers said. Even so, travelers need to be careful.

Baggage should be well-marked and well-secured, Myers said.

Officer Robert Smith of the Plymouth Township Police Department recommended that travelers park in places with adequate security.

"A lot of places will offer shuttle service." Travelers' companions can wait at the airport, to see that travelers board safely.

Police officials agree shoppers and travelers alike should promptly report any suspicious activity.

"Anything that looks suspicious to the average shopper should be reported," Myers said. Police officers or security personnel can check out the situation.

"Flag one down and tell him something doesn't look right," Myers said.

Smith and Myers said people shouldn't feel embarrassed about contacting police to report something suspicious. Without knowing about those activities, police can't do anything to take care of the situation.

"We don't become aware of what the problems are," Smith said.

Chorus plans yule concert

The Plymouth Community Chorus will present its annual Christmas concert, "Merry Christmas With Love."

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Dec. 2-3, and for 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 4, in the auditorium of Plymouth Salem High School, Joy and Canton Center roads in Canton.

The 15th annual concert will feature sacred and secular songs of the Christmas season. Those include "Away in a Manger," "The Little Drummer Boy," "Calypso Carol" and "The Cherubim Song." The concert theme, "Merry Christmas With Love," is borrowed from a song recorded by Sandi Patti.

The Plymouth Community Chorus was organized in 1973 with fewer than 25 members. The chorus now includes 140 voices representing the area from Highland to Wayne and most communities in between.

THE CHORUS performs under the direction of Michael Gross of Westland.

Tickets for "Merry Christmas With Love" may be bought at Sideways in Plymouth, at The Book Break in Canton and at The Gitfiddler in Northville. Tickets are also available from Plymouth Community Chorus members.

Ticket prices are $5 for adults, $4 for senior citizens and children. Group rates are available. For ticket information, call 455-4080.

Solo numbers to be performed include "Love Is the Meaning of Christmas" by Barbara Kobberstad and "Mary's Song" by Wendy Becker. Others are "Lullaby" and "From Our House to Yours" by Sherrie Northway and "A Christmas Trilogy," arranged for piano and performed by Lesley Morrison.

Other concert selections include: "Christmas Choral Fantasy," "Jingle Bell Scherzo," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Merry Christmas With Love," "Bell Carol of the Kings," "Worship the King," and "A Winter Medley."

Others are: "Deck the Halls," "We've Got Good News To Tell," "The Canon Carol," "Johnny, Bring the Pine Tree In," "The Christmas Waltz," "An Irving Berlin Christmas" and "Silent Night."

Arts council plans class

The Plymouth Community Arts Council will offer a "Christmas Printshop" class for children age 7 and older.

Participants will be able to create a unique gift or some holiday cards during the three-session class. Children will decorate plain notecards or writing paper with their own printed design.

Stencil and other printing techniques will be used. Students should bring at least one box of plain stationery or notecards to the first class.

Students will choose from one of two "Christmas Printshop" classes. Session I will be held from 4:15 to 5:30 p.m. Mondays, Dec. 5, 12 and 19. Session II will be held from 4:15 to 5:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Dec. 6, 13 and 20.

Classes will be held at the PCAC office, 332 S. Main St. in Plymouth. Price is $16.

To register, call 455-5260 between 9 a.m. and noon Monday through Friday.

The PCAC, founded in 1969, is a non-profit organization offering arts programming for the Plymouth-Canton community. PCAC programs are funded in part by the Michigan Council for the Arts.

Show brings in lots of shoppers

Approximately 75 exhibitors will participate in the Christmas arts and crafts show this weekend at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

"It's pretty much completely different crafters from this first week," said Tom Willette, director of the juried show.

The two-weekend show is sponsored by the city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department. The first show was held Friday through Sunday, Nov. 25-27, at the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer St.

The show will continue this weekend. Hours will be 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Dec. 2-3, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 4. Admission and parking are free of charge.

A handful of longtime participants are in the show both weekends, said

It's The Orthodontic Treatment Center's Third Annual Smile Now, Pay Later And Save $1000 Plan.
If you don't waste any time getting braces for your child's teeth, you can take your time paying for them at the Orthodontic Treatment Centers.
It's quite simple, starting right now, and through the entire month of January, 1989, our complete orthodontic care program, consultation, braces, retainers, the works, is available to you with no money down, and no payments until February 1st, 1989.
Now, doesn't that sort of coincide with the Holiday season when you have earmarked your hard-earned dollars for a lot of other things? But, that's the Orthodontic Treatment Centers for you. We're not just professional and reliable orthodontists. We want the whole world to have a beautiful smile. Without paying through the nose.

Food and friendship attract area seniors

By Julie Brown
staff writer

FRIENDSHIP WAS something the Canton Seniors gave thanks for recently.

The Canton Seniors held their annual Thanksgiving luncheon Wednesday, Nov. 23, at the Canton Recreation Building. They enjoyed a tasty turkey lunch with all the trimmings. A raffle and musical entertainment were part of the fun.

The lunch was part of the year-round nutrition program for seniors, offered at 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday at the Canton Recreation Building.

"We could do this every day if people were inclined to come down every day," said Dianne Neihengen, seniors coordinator for Canton.

Typically, the lunch program attracts some 25 people per day. Some 100 participated in last week's Thanksgiving luncheon.

"The holiday season, we get 100 just like that," Neihengen said.

The program, featuring a complete hot meal, is offered for those age 60 and older, Neihengen said. Eligibility isn't based on income.

THE PROGRAM helps many seniors who have difficulty cooking, Neihengen said.

"Some really know how to cook, but they don't want to eat alone," she said. "They use it as a social hour."

The nutrition program has been offered in Canton for a number of years, and serves as an anchor for other Canton Seniors programs.

"We can design classes and clubs around it," Neihengen said. "It's a great place for people to make friends."

Reservations for lunch should be made by 12:30 p.m. the previous day. For reservations, call 397-1000, Ext. 277, 278 or 279. There is a suggested donation of $1 per person. (Younger guests pay $2.80.)

The program is offered through the Wayne County Office of Health and Community Services/Nutrition, and funded by The Senior Alliance. The Senior Alliance is a Regional Area Agency on Aging, serving western Wayne County and the downriver area.

ERWIN PRIEST of Canton was among those at last week's Thanksgiving celebration. He is a Canton Seniors member and came to the meal with a former neighbor, Rose DiMassa of Westland.

Lois Moore eats Thanksgiving lunch. The nutrition program is one of many offered for the Canton Seniors.

"I think it's great," Priest said. "The fellowship is what I like about it. And I don't have to prepare my lunch."

Priest's wife is retired, but works for Fred Sanders during the holidays. He enjoys coming to the lunch meetings occasionally.

ROSE DIMASSA attends more frequently, coming to lunch each Wednesday. She is a Canton Seniors member and a former Canton resident.

"I just can't say enough good about it," she said. "You have to get away from the house once in a while."

She enjoys the company of other seniors and the food.

"To me, it's excellent," she said. "You could not do this kind of meal at home for a dollar. I look forward to it."

Helen Runge of Canton, a Canton Seniors member, agreed.

"It's the meeting of people that really counts," she said.

IN ADDITION to the daily meals, a variety of other activities are offered for Canton Seniors. There are three seniors clubs, the Royals, the Zesters and the Pioneers. Classes and other activities are held as well.

Runge has found that seniors benefit from being out and about, rather than staying at home all the time.

Mike Gootee (left) and Melvin Rising get their meals from Madeline Carpenter. The program provides tasty food and treasured friendships for the seniors.

"You can make yourself ill if you're not ill to start with," she said.

Vi Smith of Canton wasn't thinking about romance when she became involved in Canton Seniors activities.

"That was the furthest thing from my mind."

Smith, who was widowed at that time, told people she'd never marry again. She was looking for friendship in her Canton Seniors activities, and became friends with Elmer Smith.

"But we had no idea of getting married, none."

That started to change when Vi Smith traveled to California after her daughter had been in an accident.

"I went out to take care of her, and then we wrote back and forth."

The Smiths have been married for about a year and a half now. Their wedding was a family affair, although they later celebrated with the Canton Seniors, bringing a large wedding cake to a group gathering.

"I think I got the best of the lot here," Vi Smith said with a smile.

Holiday craft show draws a crowd

Willette, who is assistant recreation director for Plymouth.

The Christmas show has been held for about 16 years, with the second weekend of the show added several years ago.

THE SECOND weekend was added due to the number of artists and craftsmen who wanted to participate. Even so, show officials have to turn some people down, Willette said.

Shoppers at the Christmas show look for many gift items.

"It's a wide variety. A majority of it is Christmas-oriented."

Wood items, handmade jewelry, and cloth and porcelain dolls are among the items sold.

"I think a lot of it's Christmas shopping." People look for presents for friends and family members, in addition to buying holiday decorations.

The shows have been well-received, Willette has found.

"They're well-established and we get a lot of attendance at them."

The Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department will continue to run the holiday shows as long as they're successful, he said.

"We feel that we do have a good show."

The department also sponsors spring and summer arts and crafts shows. The spring show is scheduled for March 17-19, 1989, and the summer show will be held the first weekend in June.

Yule program set at library

The Canton Public Library will present "Christmas With O.J. Anderson," a holiday mime program for families, at 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 8.

The program will be held at the library, 1200 S. Canton Center Road in Canton. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. Friday, Dec. 2, by phone (397-0999) or in person.

"Christmas With O.J. Anderson" is a lively look at the December holidays, using the magical art of mime. The program, which lasts about 40 minutes, is a one-man mime show. Its skits bring to life many Christmas moments.

Audience participation sequences are featured. Admission will be free of charge.

Mime artist O.J. Anderson is a graduate of the University of Detroit's Theatre Company. He has spent the last nine years touring the United States and Canada. Anderson has taught mime at many colleges and universities throughout North America.

"Christmas With O.J. Anderson" is a Showcase Presentation of Crossroads Productions Ltd., now in its 10th season as a professional, nonprofit touring theater company.

For more information, call the Canton Public Library, 397-0999.

Felicians appoint superior

Sister Mary Dennis Glonek was appointed provincial superior of the Felician sisters in the Presentation BVM Province, Livonia, whose 350 members serve in education, health care and pastoral ministry in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

Glonek replaces Sister Mary Cynthia Strzalkowski, who is superior general for the Felician Sisters order in Rome.

Other sisters appointed as provincial councilors to serve on the administrative team headed by the new provincial superior are Sister Mary Danatha Suchyta, Sister Mary Janice Ziolkowski, Sister Mary Alexander Mikolajczyk and Sister Mary Alfonsa Van Overberghe.

A native of Toledo, Ohio, Sister Dennis is a graduate of Madonna College and earned master's and doctoral degrees in chemistry from Creighton Univeristy and the University of Notre Dame.

Sister Mary Dennis Glonek provincial superior

AT THE time of her appointment, Sister Dennis was completing a second term as provincial councilor and director of formation. Earlier assignments included faculty positions at high schools in Michigan and Ohio and at Madonna College, where she chaired the chemistry department and was dean of students and director of residence.

Sister Danatha, director of computer information systems and service at Madonna College, will be director of formation. Sister Alexander, principal of Ladywood High School, will be retirement director for the province. Sister Alfonsa and Sister Janice have been reappointed to second terms as director of ministry and provincial secretary.

The Felician Sisters Livonia province is the oldest of seven American provinces. There are five other provinces in the international congregation, numbers more than 3,100 members in Europe, Canada and South America.

Yule concert opens St. Aidan sanctuary

St. Aidan Church will inaugurate its new sanctuary with a Christmas concert at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 9. The concert will feature the Wayne State Univeristy Concert Chorale and the Women's Choral and Vocal Jazz Ensemble.

The church is at 17500 Farmington Road in Livonia. A wine and cheese reception will follow the performance.

Donations for the concert and reception are $5 per person; senior citizens and students,$4.

moral perspectives

Rev. David Strong

Patriotism should not blind us to the truth

I attended the Moscow Circus during their visit here. As the performance was about to begin the ringmaster asked everyone to stand. They were to play the national anthems of the Soviet Union and the United States. The lights went off. A spotlight fell upon the flag of the Soviet Union. While their national anthem was playing, I noticed that some people had not stood.

Now the spotlight fell upon the flag of the United States and I suddenly became aware that people were singing the words. During those few minutes many emotions and thoughts passed through me. By standing we are honoring a nation, not simply a person's performance. Feelings of pride came forth as I also sang the words to our national anthem.

Later that day I remembered a film I had seen from World War II times. A woman was shown crying as Nazi troops marched into Poland. Her tears were tears of joy for she was of German descent.

National pride and patriotism can be very positive. It can also lead us in the wrong direction. The recent political campaign led us in some of the wrong directions. Which of the candidates for President of the United States was more patriotic? Our university troops of champions death penalty. Those were praised as All-American virtues.

We need leadership which will lift up the highest ideals for America. It will be very difficult to find such leaders. Our temptation will be to defend what we have. Our temptation will be to chose the less noble virtues.

WE NEED rather to utilize our position of power in the world to serve the needs of the world. Education, environment, arms reductions, sports and arts exchanges — these and many more areas need visionary leadership. More than 25 years later the words of President John Kennedy still are remembered: "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

Our nation needs to turn outward toward the world. We need to take upon ourselves a prominent place in solving the problems of our planet. We can take pride in believing that our nation is taking the lead in environmental issues. We can take pride in negotiating peace among other nations.

It will be a difficult challenge for our nation to direct beyond the arms race and to embrace the world. Maybe the visit of the Moscow Circus was one very small piece in an effort to unite world understanding. Let us hope and pray that our nation discovers a new birth of world harmony in which we can feel pride.

The Rev. David Strong is pastor at St. Matthew United Methodist Church in Livonia.

Commission on disabled address their concerns

Patrick Cannon is legally blind. He is also executive director of the Michigan Commission on Handicapper Concerns, so the unusual attitude of some persons toward the handicapped touch him on a personal as well as professional level.

Cannon relates a situation encountered by many blind persons, including himself. "A server in a restaurant, rather than addressing the handicapper, will say to a spouse, 'Would he like cream in his coffee?' It's as if the handicapper is unable to communicate or think for him or herself."

Most people are not intentionally mean-spirited, he says. Rather, they simply don't understand or are misinformed about the handicapped.

In the same way, employers may unconsciously discriminate against handicappers out of ignorance, suggests Cannon. "Too often employers look at a handicapped worker and only see what they view as a limitation or disability. They don't focus on the ability of the worker."

Such misunderstanding probably has contributed to the 70 percent unemployment rate among handicapped people.

"My recommendation to handicappers who go into a job interview is to address the issue of their handicap characteristic," says Cannon. "It's my feeling that even if the question is not on the lips of the employer, it's on their mind."

Cannon says many employers have the misconception that a handicapped worker will require extensive special accommodations. But a study of 367 corporations done for the U.S. Department of Labor revealed that out of 19,000 handicapped workers employed by those companies, only 4,000 needed any type of special accommodation.

For sale: Houses complete with an idiosyncrasy or 2

By Louise Okrutsky
staff writer

Tramps and bootleggers, sweet young couples and people on the lam find a place in real estate agents' professional memories.

For every sold sign stuck in the middle of a lawn there remains memories of houses that couldn't attract a bid.

For Joan Davis of the Century 21 J. Scott Inc., Livonia, that memory may well be of the vacant house with a few unofficial tenants, both human and non-human. Davis remembers the day she showed a potential buyer the handyman's special abutting an industrial property in Livonia. Vacant for several years, the house had become the unofficial home of two vagrants and their cat. According to neighbors, the two men kept the cat on a red harness and took it for a walk when people came to see the house.

Like some homeowners, they managed to turn a liability into an asset. "There were bees in the chimney," Davis said. "The neighbors later told me that the two men waited until the fall so they could get the honey from the bees. Then they sold it to finance their trips down South. It was their travel money."

If that wasn't enough, once the agent and client sniffed out the fact that there were skunks living under the house, the two squatters didn't have to worry about losing their summer home.

If chimneys can double for beehives, then basements can become walk-in refrigerators. That was the case when Davis showed a home several years ago. As she and her clients checked the basement and agreed that its fireplace offered possibilities, they turned a corner and came upon a walk-in refrigerator. The new owners turned it into a shower.

The same house features an unusually deep walk-in front closet. "You can walk in from the front coat closet all the way to the closet in the master bedroom," she said. "But it is a beautiful home."

CHILDHOOD MEMORIES of home prompted an older woman and her sons to convince Davis to show a house in the middle of a blizzard. "They insisted on me showing the house. It was an exact replica of a mansion only on a smaller scale. I went out at 8 p.m. on a Sunday in a blizzard. She said it reminded her of her childhood home in the Upper Pennisula. She paid for the house in cash."

There may be nothing like a cold cash deal but sometimes owners put a real chill on a sale. Bunny Huckabone, now with Michigan Group Realtors in Livonia, remembers the winter she spent selling a two-bedroom home.

> 'The neighbors brought in kerosene heaters. They brought in blankets and brought me hot coffee. People would come in and talk to me, and you could see their breath.'
> — Bunny Huckabone

"It was a little house. It was an estate. The mother died and left it to her son. But the seller wouldn't turn on the heat. They wanted me to have an open house every Sunday. I asked them if I could have a fire in the fireplace, but they didn't want to smudge the walls," she recalled.

To prevent the water lines from freezing and bursting, the owners had the pipes pumped and the water turned off. So Huckabone sat in the living room of the little home, unable to use the kitchen or bathroom. She threw her coat over her knees and huddled near two space heaters.

"The neighbors brought in kerosene heaters. They brought in blankets and brought me hot coffee. People would come in and talk to me, and you could see their breath," she said.

Her chilly tale carries a warm ending. After she sold that house, the neighbors called on her to sell homes for their relatives as well as themselves. "I kept on meeting people through that house. I sold a dozen houses from that house," she said.

HUCKABONE'S BEEN in the real estate business for seven years. At the start, it was planned as a temporary job before she entered graduate school. But the course and the test proved so tough that she felt obligated to stay.

"I always made a big thing with my children about failing. So I had to succeed because I had all these people looking at me. It was such hard work that I decided I'm going to do something with it," she said.

Her first sale remains a sweet memory. "It was a young couple and a little house in Dearborn. They had one baby. No one on either side of their family had ever owned a house; they had always rented. I found a little house in Dearborn for them. They had put together a couple thousand dollars and they bought it FHA.

"Now here I was new, and handling the FHA paperwork. They were so excited. She began packing as soon as soon as the offer was accepted. And you know with an FHA it takes months before closing. When they did close, they came to the closing with all of their belongings in a truck, ready to move," Huckabone said.

"They send me a birthday card and a Christmas card every year," she said.

HOUSE SALES run the gamut from the long-held dreams to mad-impulse buys. On their way to buy a camper, a family drove past a home Hucakbone was showing. They stopped out of curiousity. It became a case of they came, they saw, they bid.

"Within four hours, they had bought that house," she said. "They said, 'We didn't want to buy a camper, we're going to buy that house.' "

Quick buys can sometimes get a sales agent in a jam. "I once accidently sold the wrong house," Davis said. "It was dark and there were two ranches next to each other with for sale signs in front of them. I didn't know I had the wrong house until the people (from the correct house) called the office and wanted to know when I was going to show their house next." The buyers liked the wrong house right away and bid on it without ever seeing the house next door.

Then there are homes that attract repulsive renters instead of impulsive buyers. The owner, living in Florida, leased the home to several tenants. Not only were they uncooperative about showing the house, the tenants refused to move, and Huckabone started eviction proceedings in court. It took a trip to court to learn that the tenants were wanted by the police.

"It's lucky I didn't get shot. I don't know what they did, but they were not nice people," Huckabone said.

In Davis' 10 years as a real estate agent, the closest she's come in contact to the less than law abiding was when she sold a former speakeasy. The home was built from plans and materials once sold by Sears Roebuck. Among the reminders of the home's lawless past is a seat across the toilet in the upstairs bathroom. It was used by patrons when they became too ill to stand.

Although the boiler room looks like anyone else's furnance area, it's purported to be the scene of a crime. Back in the days of backroom boozing, local legend says someone was murdered in the boiler room.

Patent attorney has an eye toward history

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

It has a history as old as the U.S. Constitution.

Thomas Jefferson was the first one responsible for it. And since 1837, patents — the legal protection of new ideas in technical and other fields — have been enforced the same way.

Bernard J. Cantor has been a part of that history for 35 years. An engineer who worked in the U.S. Patent office in Washington D.C. for four years, Cantor is a patent attorney who recently joined the Birmingham office of Harness, Dickey & Pierce.

He is also the author of a traveling exhibit called Patents that Made History.

"As an examiner, I started collecting old, interesting patents," said Cantor.

On his own first day on the job, a worker from the archives section impressed the new examiners with a patent signed by Queen Elizabeth I in the 1600s.

Included in Cantor's collection are Thomas Edison's patent for the light bulb, the Wright Brothers airplane, the Colt pistol, barbed wire ("a very important invention which made it possible for the West to be settled"), Fermi's atomic reactor, the Gillette razor and blade, and Edison's phonograph.

Included in Bernard J. Cantor's collection is Thomas Edison's patent for the light bulb.

The collection was on display recently for the 20th birthday celebration of the Bloomfield Township Public Library. Cantor is a Bloomfield Township resident.

PATENTS EXIST to protect original ideas.

"Patents are enforced in federal court," said Cantor. "And there's enough infringement to keep lawyers busy. A suit usually arises with a successful product."

Cantor has worked on both sides of the fence — either bringing suit or denying infringement.

"About 100,000 patents are issued each year," he said: "Today, there are close to five million."

A patent is valid for 17 years, after which time it becomes part of the public domain.

"There are some exceptions. A drug, for example, may take several years to market because it must be approved by the government."

In such a case the patent would be extended to give the creator time to reap the benefits of a successfully marketed drug.

The 17 years of validation was decided by Congress in the late 1800s, according to Cantor.

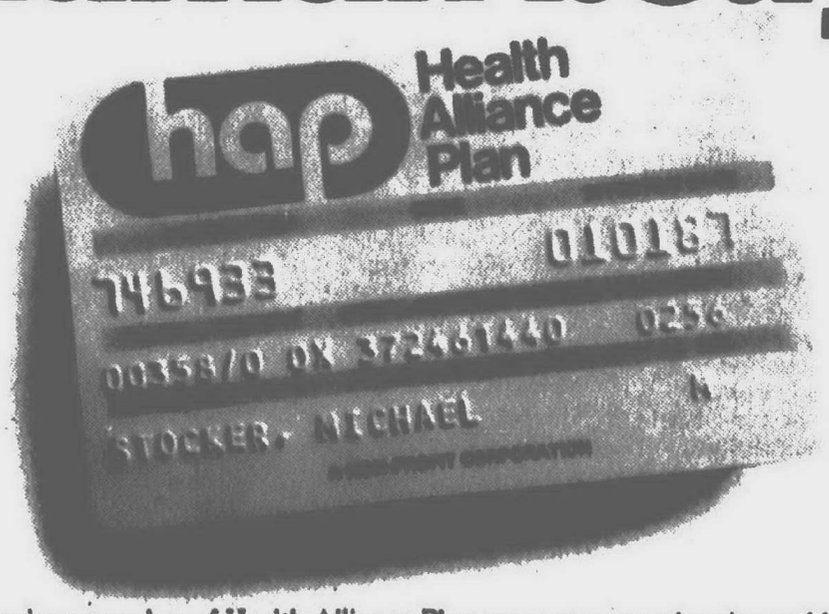

"The question was raised: Should (a patent) be valid for 14 or 20 years? Congress split that down the middle and 17 was decided."

BEFORE THE current office was established in 1837, a commission was charged with the task. Prior to that, Thomas Jefferson was the patent investigator — with President George Washington signing the approved patents.

Every country in the world issues its own patents. And if a company is interested in marketing its product abroad, representatives must deal with the patent office in the targeted country.

Patent history

Earlier this year, Cantor visited China on behalf of a Canadian client investigating a joint venture.

"The company wanted to protect its technology," he said.

The Chinese patent office, established only three years ago, made Cantor feel like he was back in Washington, D.C.

"I was giving them as much information as they were giving me," he said.

Chinese examiners trained in the U.S. patent office as well as in Germany to set up their operation. Much of the process is universal, Cantor said.

Examiners deal with a written description of the material and ink drawings. To determine if the idea is new, the examiner must look through office records of similar subject matter.

"Computers are not advanced enough to do this work," Cantor said.

Each examiner has one particular area of specialty. Many, like Cantor, are trained engineers. Others might be biologists or chemists.

"The difficulty in finding something is that descriptions are subjective," he said. "You try to go by concepts, not words. It's a lot of searching for a needle in a haystack."

If someone thinks they have an original idea, they should first see a patent attorney.

IF THE IDEA appears to be original, a patent application is sent to Washington, D.C. The examination process then takes months.

"If (the finding) is negative because (the examiner) found the same idea, that's the end. If it's negative because of a similar concept, it can be argued and, hopefully, a patent granted. If there is no objection, the patent can be granted promptly."

Close to 2,000 examiners work in the U.S. patent office.

Patents are granted in about half of all requests made. Several thousand more requests are screened through attorneys' offices across the country.

The purpose of a patent is to get people to invest time and money in new products.

"Its a dual philosophy. To encourage business to invest time and money is fundamental," Cantor said. "There's also the political conservatism, a sense of public fairness. To protect our interests."

The new administration will continue to enforce patents vigorously, Cantor predicts.

Cantor represents companies as large as General Motors but also individuals and "everything in between."

He has taught at the University of Detroit and Wayne State University.

The Yugo stumbled, but others might not

Dan McCosh

If you are one of those people who believes that what this country needs is a good $5,000 car, the trials of Global Motors aren't encouraging.

Global Motors imports Yugos. Brainchild of promoter Malcomb Bricklin, Global is in the midst of what is politely referred to as "reorganization," the aftermath of Bricklin selling it to a group of investors represented by Mabon Nugent and Co. for $20 million.

Almost from the start, the Yugo was not a well-loved automobile, whether it was voiced in spray paint on expressway underpasses by irate Albanianians or in frequent consumer studies that indicated it had the worst quality record of any car sold in the United States. Regardless, it had one ingratiating quality: the $3,995 advertised price tag.

On the surface, there should have been a strong market for such a car, whether as a second-car commuter, a first-car buy, or even an act of desperation. Along with being one of the few Western nations without a national health insurance program, the United States and Sweden are among the few car-making nations without cheap cars.

One reason cited is that domestic manufacturers chronically complain there is no profit in cheap cars.

BRICKLIN TRIED to sidestep the manufacturing cost problem by importing cars from underdeveloped nations. First the Yugoslavian-built Yugo, and later the plan was to include a Japanese-designed car built in Malasia.

The idea wasn't as crazy as it seemed on the surface because established manufacturers were supplying the expertise for the projects, and the lure of export earnings prompted the local governments to bend over backwards to supply the cars if Bricklin could sell them.

As it turned out, he couldn't. Yugo sales are about a 30,000 annual rate — about a third of the volume a reasonable import franchise network needs to be profitable. Comprehensive warranties, easy, if expensive, financing and even a couple of sport models did little to change the picture for Yugo, with the main hope left for Global the yet-to-be-delivered Proton Saga.

Global's troubles can be quickly traced to product quality, consumer mistrust or problems with setting up the dealer organization.

On the other hand, I suspect the most significant factor in the Yugo saga may have been the nature of the cheap car market in the United States.

ONE OF THE problems Yugo ran into was qualifying credit for first-time or otherwise indigent buyers. Loosening credit requirements translated into credit-card-like interest rates — terms that offset the initial low price of the car.

In the same market, U.S. urban car insurance rates quickly equal a monthly car payment, and the total of the two monthly installments on a $5,000 car lands in the neighborhood of $350. In other words, the paper costs of car ownership — mainly interest and insurance, is such a high portion of the total, the low cost of the car becomes almost incidental.

Regardless, the Yugo enterprise is being closely watched by others interested in similar imports, including the Romanian Dacia, the Indian Mahindra and the Grecian Desta all built in countries poor enough that a Yugo seems like a luxury beyond their wildest dreams.

Don't overlook Social Security when figuring retirement income

By Sid Mittra
special writer

Most of our clients don't have complete information on their Social Security income — many don't believe Social Security will be there when they retire.

The accompanying chart (Money, August 1988) presents a summary of your expected Social Security earnings in 1988 dollars. For instance, if you are 55, have a non-working spouse and earned more than $45,000 in 1987, you may expect to receive $18,048 a year from Social Security when you reach 65. In preparing this table, the Social Security Administration assumed that your annual income, adjusted for inflation, will rise by 1 percent per year.

1. The earliest you can claim Social Security benefits is at age 62. However, at that age you can get just 80 percent of your full benefits. You will receive your full benefits if you wait until age 65.

2. If you continue to work until you are 70 and then claim Social Security income, your benefits will increase by 33 percent.

3. Upon your death, your children will receive Social Security benefits until they reach 18 or 19, depending upon when they finish high school. Also, a non-working spouse can collect Social Security until the youngest child is 16. However, if the single spouse starts working, he or she will lose $1 for every $2 earned in excess of $8,400 a year for those recipients between 65 and 70.

4. In addition to retirement benefits, Social Security pays disability benefits. However, you receive these benefits only if you are unable to work for a year or if you are terminally ill. Also, disability benefits include income for dependent children.

To get your Social Security benefits in the form of an eight-page document, "Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement," call 1-800-937-2000 and request form SSA-7004.

Be on the look out for indirect competition

By Mary DiPaola
special writer

Knowing the competition is critical for any business. It may take months to do this because it isn't always the same or similar type of business that poses the biggest competitive threat. Owners must evaluate and identify the competition.

In "Practical Marketing for Small Business," Herman Holtz suggests that owners must determine whether their competition is primarily direct or indirect. Direct competition exists when two or more firms offer the same, or very similar, products or services.

For example, a specialty pastry shop may experience direct competition from the gourmet dessert section of a nearby grocery store, an independent dessert caterer or another pastry specialty pastry shop.

OR THESE merchants may compete indirectly with unrelated businesses that attract the same type of clientele and have products or services that satisfy the same needs.

A local fitness club, bookstore or florist may represent major competitive threats to a pastry shop. As Holtz points out, ". . . one common cause of failure in business ventures is improperly identifying and underestimating the competition."

The competition is not always limited to establishments situated within and around a shop's location. This is especially true when the products or services offered include specialty or higher-priced "shopping" goods.

"My customers come from everywhere including Bay City and Windsor," said one Southfield cigar distributor. "And since I'm the only business in the state selling such a wide range of imported cigars, my major competitors are based out of Canada."

Youtheatre for all

Kids, parents, volunteers and seniors enjoy it

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

KIDS AREN'T the only people who love the musicals, biographical dramas, international entertainment and puppet shows produced by the Detroit Youtheatre at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

A total of 410,000 young people last year saw Youtheatre shows. Nobody is surprised when preschoolers whose feet can't touch the floor and first graders missing one or another of their teeth love the shows, or when their older brothers and sisters applaud with enthusiasm. The surprise comes with the number of adults who count themselves fans of the Detroit Youtheatre.

Some grownups bring children as cover for their secret relapses into the whimsical enthusiasms of childhood. Some volunteer with the Friends of the Detroit Youtheatre and get to see the shows as a perk that comes with volunteering. Others abandon all pretext and buy tickets just for themselves.

Detroit Youtheatre curator Mickey Miners says senior citizens particularly like the shows and their attendance increases yearly as word gets around about the live, professional performances at one of the best prices in town. The most expensive tickets for Youtheatre productions cost $5. Most are $4.

He says seniors, especially those on fixed incomes, appreciate the affordable tickets, and they like the fact that Youtheatre productions are during the day. Shows run an hour to an hour and a half, designed to please wiggly youngsters who can't sit still long.

REASONABLE-LENGTH shows also please older folks who find sitting for long periods difficult for entirely different reasons than those of the younger crowd. Miners feels strongly that entertainment for young people should not be the condescending "kiddie" variety. "We don't insult the intelligence of the audience," he says, so shows that mesmerize 5-year-olds also please adults.

Many adults start coming with their children and decide to support the Youtheatre by volunteering regularly, with 63 members of the Friends of the Detroit Youtheatre.

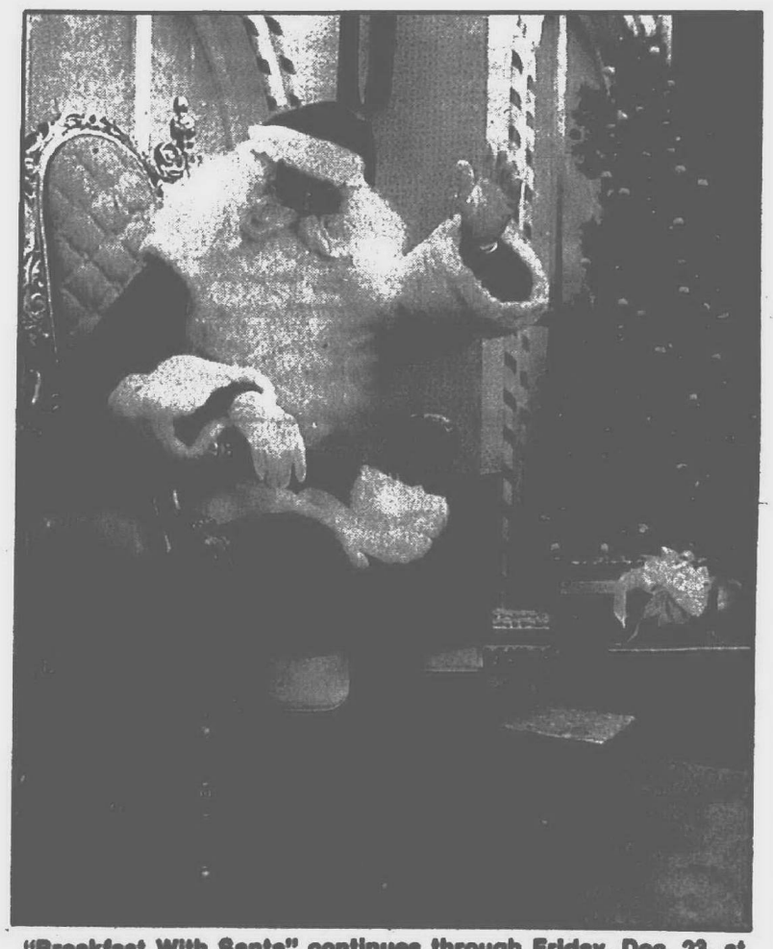

Diane Wahl, who chairs the Friends, says the group welcomes new volunteers and invites those interested to leave their names with the Youtheatre Ticket Office, 832-2731. She has been a member of Friends for 15 years.

"I love it," she says. "It's not only nice for me, but my children have benefited." The Friends are divided into groups according to the day of the week volunteers work. There's a group for Wednesday, Thursday, Friday; two for Saturday, as well as a group that runs the Lobby Shop where children can buy gifts and souvenirs priced from 25 cents to $10.

Wahl says, "With more mothers in the work force, it's more and more difficult to find weekday volunteers. The majority of our volunteers during the week are senior citizens." Many working mothers find Saturdays an ideal time to do volunteer work without guilt because their children come with them to enjoy the show and the outing with Mom.

Ten performances of the Prince Street Players musical production of "Alice in Wonderland" will be presented Tuesday-Saturday, Dec. 27-31, at the Detroit Institute of Arts' Youtheatre.

"Breakfast With Santa" continues through Friday, Dec. 23, at the DIA's Kresge Court Cafe. Santa, Alice and helpers from Wonderland will visit each table.

WHAT DO Detroit Youtheatre volunteers do? Those who work weekdays greet busloads of schoolchildren when they pull up at the DIA door. They guide classes to their assigned seats in the auditorium and keep an eye on students during the show. Afterwards they dismiss classes row by row and make certain stragglers don't miss their buses.

Besides ushering, volunteers also prepare and serve a hot pot-luck lunch for players. Cast members don't have time to take off their makeup and costumes to go out for a sandwich between the morning and matinee shows, so volunteers provide a homemade lunch. Casseroles, big pots of soup, nut breads and giant salads satisfy the appetites of cast members hungry for home cooking because they're so often on the road. On Saturdays, volunteers serve lunch to the cast and to the Wayne State University students who usher for performances.

The Lobby Shop group uses proceeds of the non-profit shop to buy Youtheatre tickets each year for 200-300 underprivileged and handicapped children. Lobby Shop volunteers arrive an hour before curtain time to arrange merchandise in the shop, which opens one half hour before show time and remains open a half hour after the show.

Vickie Rubin of West Bloomfield discovered the Youtheatre when her daughter's nursery school came downtown for a show. "I couldn't believe how terrific it was," she recalls. For the last year she has volunteered in the Lobby Shop. Almost every Saturday, except when chicken pox intervened, she comes downtown with her son, Scott, who's almost 6, and her eight-year-old daughter, Stephanie.

She works the Lobby Shop, catches the show with her children, and they get the thrill of having lunch with the players dressed in full costume. Afterward they roam the art museum. Rubin says, "I'm having a ball. The Youtheatre came at a perfect time in my life. I was looking for something."

A YEAR AGO Georgia Locey of Birmingham signed up as a volunteer with Friends of the Detroit Youtheatre because she wanted to put in some worthy service time and because she admits she was looking for a grownup way to legitimately indulge her craving for childhood pleasures. "It feeds the little kid inside me and gives me a real people experience," she says of working with the Friends.

Locey's children are teenagers now, and the former nursery-school teacher no longer had a class of children to shepherd to the theater. For the last year she has worked a schedule which averages about one Friday a month during the fall, winter and spring when the Youtheatre stages shows.

Locey chairs the Friday group of volunteers and says her group particularly needs more helpers. She delights in watching children's reactions to the shows. "For some kids coming to the Youtheatre is the first time they've seen live theater and the first time they've been in Detroit," she says.

Here's what's coming up for children at museum

The Youtheatre specifies what age group each show is designed to please. Shows billed Wiggle Club are specially designed to hold the attention of 3-5-year-olds. Older children and adults are welcome to attend all shows but the Wiggle CLub set is permitted to attend only shows designed for the very young.

"We enforce age restrictions, which to the chagrin of some parents, but we want young people to enjoy the show and want to come back," Youtheatre curator Mickey Miners said. "We could make more money if we let anyone in, but we want it to be a positive experience."

For almost 24 years, the Youtheatre under the direction of Miners has been bringing to Detroit the best in family entertainment from all over the United States, Canada and the world, adding variety to the shows produced by the Youtheatre's own professional company, the Prince Street Players.

KICKING OFF the holiday season Saturday, "Eric Nagler's Holiday Hoopla" features live swing-bounce-clap music for the Wiggle Club and the entire family.

Saturday, Dec. 10, large rod-puppets bring Clara, the Mouse King and the Sugar Plum Fairy to dance Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker" in a show for ages 5 and older.

After the downtown Hudson's store closed, Santa moved his official Detroit residence to the Detroit Institute of Arts. Children and their parents can have "Breakfast with Santa" in the Kresge Court of the DIA at 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays-Saturdays. Breakfast with the season's important celebrity costs $5 per person and requires reservations.

After breakfast, children and their parents receive a booklet inviting them to take a "Holiday Art Adventure," a self-guided treasure hunt through the museum's galleries. This year, Santa's helpers will be dressed as characters from "Alice in Wonderland," the new musical by the Youtheatre's own Prince Street Players.

"Alice in Wonderland," a musical for the Wiggle Club and the entire family, runs Tuesday-Satuday, Dec. 27-31.

Coming in January — Amelia Bedelia on Jan. 14, a marionette show about Cinderella on Jan. 21, and "How Computers Rock and Roll" on Jan. 28. For tickets and information, call 832-2730.

She is enthusiastic about exposing children to theater and to the exciting resources in the city — resources like the DIA. "I get real concerned when I hear people from the suburbs talk about being afraid to come downtown. There's some danger anywhere, but I'm not going to let life go by me while I sit in my house." Most volunteers park in the nearby Detroit Science Center lot and say they feel completely safe walking around the Cultural Center.

Elizabeth Donohue Colvin of Southfield, treasurer and membership chair for Friends, began volunteering 12 years ago when her son was 4. Early exposure to theater made an impression on him, and at 16, "He's in all the school plays." She speaks highly of the lasting friendships she has made. "There's a core of people who've stayed in through the years. We've watched each other's kids be born and grow up. It's a slice of life."

Elizabeth Donohue Colvin of Southfield, treasurer and membership chair for Friends, began volunteering 12 years ago when her son was 4.

● WORLD PREMIERE

Stagecrafters Baldwin Theatre in Royal Oak presents the world premiere of an original play, "The Folly of '45" by award-winning playwrights Robert Schroeder and Jan Henson Dow. This comedy opens Friday, Dec. 9, and continues through Dec. 17, with performances at 8 p.m. Saturday-Sunday, Dec. 9-10, and Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 15-17, and at 7 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 11. Area residents in the cast include Allison Mould and Phillip Martin of Troy, Jeff Honte of Rochester and Mark Maccagone of Farmington Hills. A "Talk Back" with the playwrights and actors follows each performance. On Sunday, Dec. 11, any World War II veteran who attends the performance dressed in World War II service attire will receive a discount coupon for a future Stagecrafters production. For reservations and further information, call the box office at 541-6430.

● BARD'S PLAY

The University of Michigan Department of Theatre and Drama's University Players will present William Shakespeare's comedy of love, mischief and magic, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Thursday-Sunday, Dec. 1-4, at the Power Center for the Performing Arts in Ann Arbor. Tickets are $10 and $7, with student seating available at $5 with I.D. Tickets may be purchased at the League Ticket Office inside the Michigan League. League Ticket Office hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. To charge tickets, call 764-0450.

● FOX THEATRE

Motown star Stevie Wonder, who launched his career from the stage of the Foxd Theatre in Detroit, will make a homecoming appearance at the theater Tuesday-Wednesday, Dec. 6-7. Kenny Rogers brings his "Christmas Show" to the Fox on Tuesday-Wednesday, Dec. 20-21. For general information about these attractions, call 567-6000.

The Greeks have a word for it: hilarious

Charles Sutherland is Sosia and Clara Burris is Charis in the musical spoof "Olympus on My Mind," presented by the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford.

Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford's production of "Olympus on My Mind" continues at 8 p.m through Sunday, Dec. 11, at the playhouse in Redford. For ticket information, call 427-1905.

When a cast is having great fun on stage, it's amazing how laughter becomes contagious as the silliness virus sweeps through the audience like an avalanche down the Swiss Alps. And so it is with the Theatre Guild of Livonia-Redford's "Olympus on My Mind" — a hilarious spoof of the musical comedy genre.

You know you're in for an evening of mirth and merriment when a show has a Greek chorus that goes by the name of Tom, Dick, Horace and Delores. Delores (it turns out) is a klutzy chorine who is the wife of the show's financial backer, Murray, the Furrier. Which of course explains how she got her role, and why she wears so many different furs.

The musical tells the story of Jupiter and his son, Mercury, when they come to earth as humans.

Jupiter (disguised as her husband) seduces the beautiful Alcmene. Love flourishes. Then her husband, Amphitryon, returns home after defeating the Spartans. Alcmene discovers her gift belt is inscribed with a "J" instead of "A," and realizes she has mistaken her husband for another man.

There is mass confusion — and jealousy. Poor Jupiter discovers that being a god isn't all it's cracked up to be. The spurned lover cannot even commit suicide — he's immortal. And so it goes.

JOE DIEDERICH is outstanding as Jupiter. His rich, full baritone voice, deft comic touch and roguish looks are a treat to the eyes and ears.

Charles Sutherland is excellent as his loyal bumpkin slave, Sosia, especially when he does a variation of Abbott and Costello's "Who's on First" routine in trying to explain this person who seems to be impersonating him.

The imposter turns out to be Mercury, played engagingly by William Butler, who certainly has a pleasant, well-trained voice.

Sandy Martin is stately and charming as Alcmene, the slightly perplexed wife who knows how to handle a man. And Clara Burris is too much for words as Sosia's wife, Charis — especially in her show-stopping number, "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Lord."

Mary Seldon-Schmidt is delightful as the high-energy, low-talent Delores. It's not easy to sing and dance badly (on purpose) and do it with style.

AND KUDOS to the rest of the chorus, Bruce Gellasch, Roger Loeb and director Jim Posante (filling in at the last moment), for maintaining a high level of campiness and comedy.

The set is well done, as is lighting and Judy Pierson's many Greek costumes. Dill Murrell's orchestra is in fine tune except, of course, when contributing bizarre special effects.

Bob Weibel of Westland is a free-lance writer who has spent more than 25 years in community theater as a director, designer and performer.

You know you're in for an evening of mirth and merriment when a show has a Greek chorus that goes by the name of Tom, Dick, Horace and Delores.

Youngster's 9-1-1 call stops Southfield apartment fire

JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

Anthony Grinblat called his mom to tell her he was being interviewed. He used this telephone to summon 9-1-1 on the day a fire broke out at the Southfield apartment building where his grandparents live.

By Tim Smith
staff writer

A red 9-1-1 sticker is pasted on the telephone inside the Southfield apartment where 7-year-old Russian immigrant Anthony Grinblat's grandparents live.

It wasn't there Oct. 13. But that didn't stop Anthony from knowing what to do in an emergency that afternoon after he smelled, then saw, smoke in the sixth floor rental unit at Highland Towers.

First, Anthony thought his grandparents' apartment was on fire. But it turned out to be coming from the next unit, whose tenants weren't home at the time. No matter, he remembered a school lesson and called 9-1-1.

As a result of Anthony's quick thinking, Valentina and Moisey Grinblat have an apartment. So do many others living in the 12-story complex on Greenfield near 10 Mile. Many senior citizens live among the 250 tenants.

"I feel good, because I saved peoples lives," said Anthony, a Schoenhals Elementary first-grader who speaks English remarkably well for someone who has been in the United States only about 18 months.

HE MOVED from Kiev, the Ukraine in June 1987 with his parents, Gregory and Marina, and a brother, Vitaly, 12. They also live in Southfield.

The youngster's heroics began innocently enough.

On that fall afternoon, Anthony's grandparents picked the boy up after school for a visit. They dropped him off at their apartment and went to a nearby fruit market. When they returned at about 4:30 p.m., they found the hallway by their apartment filled with smoke. A fire alarm apparently had failed to sound.

"They (grandparents) came running, afraid Anthony did something wrong, like playing with a match or lighter," said Gregory Grinblat. "They thought the fire was in their apartment."

But all Anthony was doing was sitting on a couch, watching TV, when he first smelled smoke.

"I thought it was my imagination," Anthony recalled. He knew better when he saw smoke creeping both under the apartment's front door and through kitchen electrical outlets, then feeling heat when he touched a wall.

SO HE called 9-1-1. He learned about the emergency number in Patty Campbell's first grade classroom at Schoenhals. Persuading the person on the other end of the line about the fire was his biggest obstacle.

"They (9-1-1 operators) thought he was playing a joke," Campbell said. "He (Anthony) hung up and called back, and they finally did believe him.

"He was persistent. He told them his name, where he was, and was very clear about all of it."

Cathy McCormick, public safety coordinator for 9-1-1 in Southfield, said the operator who took the call thought Anthony seemed confused. "He may have thought we didn't believe him because we were asking so many questions" about the location of the fire, McCormick.

Had firefighters responded as little as five minutes later, the blaze "would have moved from the apartment into the hallway and then spread," Gregory Grinblat said, standing in the apartment where the trouble was spotted. Outside the doorway, a trace of odor remained from the fire.

As it was, the apartment next to Anthony's grandparents was destroyed.

After phoning for help, Anthony grabbed a school bag and toys, then left the building with his grandparents, according to his father.

THE FIRE could have been another family setback for the Grinblats.

Gregory Grinblat said his wife, 31-year-old Marina, is fighting against an inoperable brain tumor at Ann Arbor University Hospital, where she's being treated. She sustained the tumor following the nuclear accident at Chernobyl, which he said is located only about 80 miles from their former home.

Later, after Russian doctors said they couldn't sufficiently treat her, Grinblat said the family left for the U.S. "We hope the doctors here can do something to help her," he said.

Anthony's own bravery has brought him rewards. He got to wear a fireman's hat and was allowed to step up into a fireman's truck; Highland Tower tenants signed and delivered a petition of thanks; and all Schoenhals students received those red 9-1-1 stickers.

Anthony didn't need any sticker to follow through on a lesson learned in school, his teacher Campbell said.

"We go through all the 9-1-1 information in class all the time, including when to call and why to call," Campbell said. "But in a situation like this, when there was a true emergency, he remembered and was able to do it.

"Kids can be petrified, and adults too, by something like this. But he was very brave."

Checkups can detect diabetic eye disease

Many Americans figure getting eyeglasses is just a part of growing older. Reading the newspaper, menus, price tags, books — you name it — bifocals are thought of as a must.

Judith Weitz, 57, of Farmington Hills, thought the same thing. When her eyesight began to cause her problems reading last April, she assumed she needed bifocals so she could see the fine print. Unfortunately, Weitz's age had nothing to do with her failing eyesight.

Weitz, like millions of diabetics across the country, was suffering from the number one leading cause of blindness among persons age 20-65. Weitz had diabetic eye disease.

Her symptoms — blurred vision, sensitivity to light, trouble walking up and down steps, and dark spots — were similar to those of an aging eye. Yet in reality, she was unknowingly dealing with a much more severe eye disorder.

Diabetic eye disease affects the blood vessels in the retina, the paper-thin lining in the back of the eye. The retina functions like film in a camera; when it becomes damaged, eyesight is impaired. Over time, diabetes can cause the blood vessels in the retina to swell and bleed, thus impairing eyesight.

When Weitz's symptoms forced her to stop driving, doing needle point, and reading the paper, she knew something must be seriously wrong with her eyes. "I had heard about diabetic eye disease but my eye doctor had never detected it before. I couldn't believe it could have progressed as quickly as it did and cause me all these problems," she said.

ACCORDING TO Dr. Harold Weiss, the retina specialist who treated Weitz, it was not uncommon that her eyesight deteriorated so quickly. "We've seen patients who have become blind nearly overnight — they have no warning symptoms so they figure their eyes are OK — but with diabetes, the eye disease often cause no detectable symptoms in the early stages."

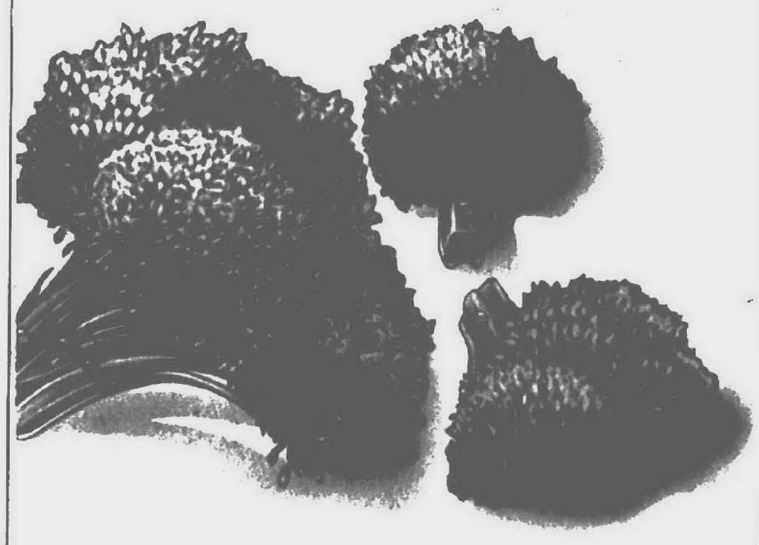

Over a period of a month, Weitz had laser surgery performed by Weiss in each eye on two occasions. "Dr. Weiss told me that it was hard to predict how successful the surgery would be and that improvement would be slow and gradual," she said.

Weitz began to notice improvements in her sight within two months of her laser surgery. "You can't imagine how good it feels to be able to read and drive again. Before the surgery, I was so frightened. I had no idea whether I'd ever regain my sight and the thought of becoming completely blind was very frightening. I used to take my eyes for granted - but never again."

Today, Weitz is continuing to have her eyes checked regularly. She also has become a spokesperson on diabetic eye disease.

A defense against cancer can be cooked up in your kitchen.

There is evidence that diet and cancer are related. Some foods may promote cancer, while others may protect you from it.

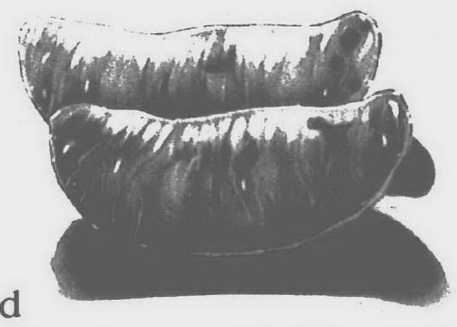

Foods related to lowering the risk of cancer of the larynx and esophagus all have high amounts of carotene, a form of Vitamin A which is in cantaloupes, peaches, broccoli, spinach, all dark green leafy vegetables, sweet potatoes, carrots, pumpkin, winter squash and tomatoes, citrus fruits and brussels sprouts.

Foods that may help reduce the risk of gastrointestinal and respiratory tract cancer are cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, kohlrabi, cauliflower.

Fruits, vegetables, and whole-grain cereals such as oatmeal, bran and wheat may help lower the risk of colorectal cancer.

Foods high in fats, salt- or nitrite-cured foods like ham, and fish and types of sausages smoked by traditional methods should be eaten in moderation.

Be moderate in consumption of alcohol also.

A good rule of thumb is cut down on fat and don't be fat.

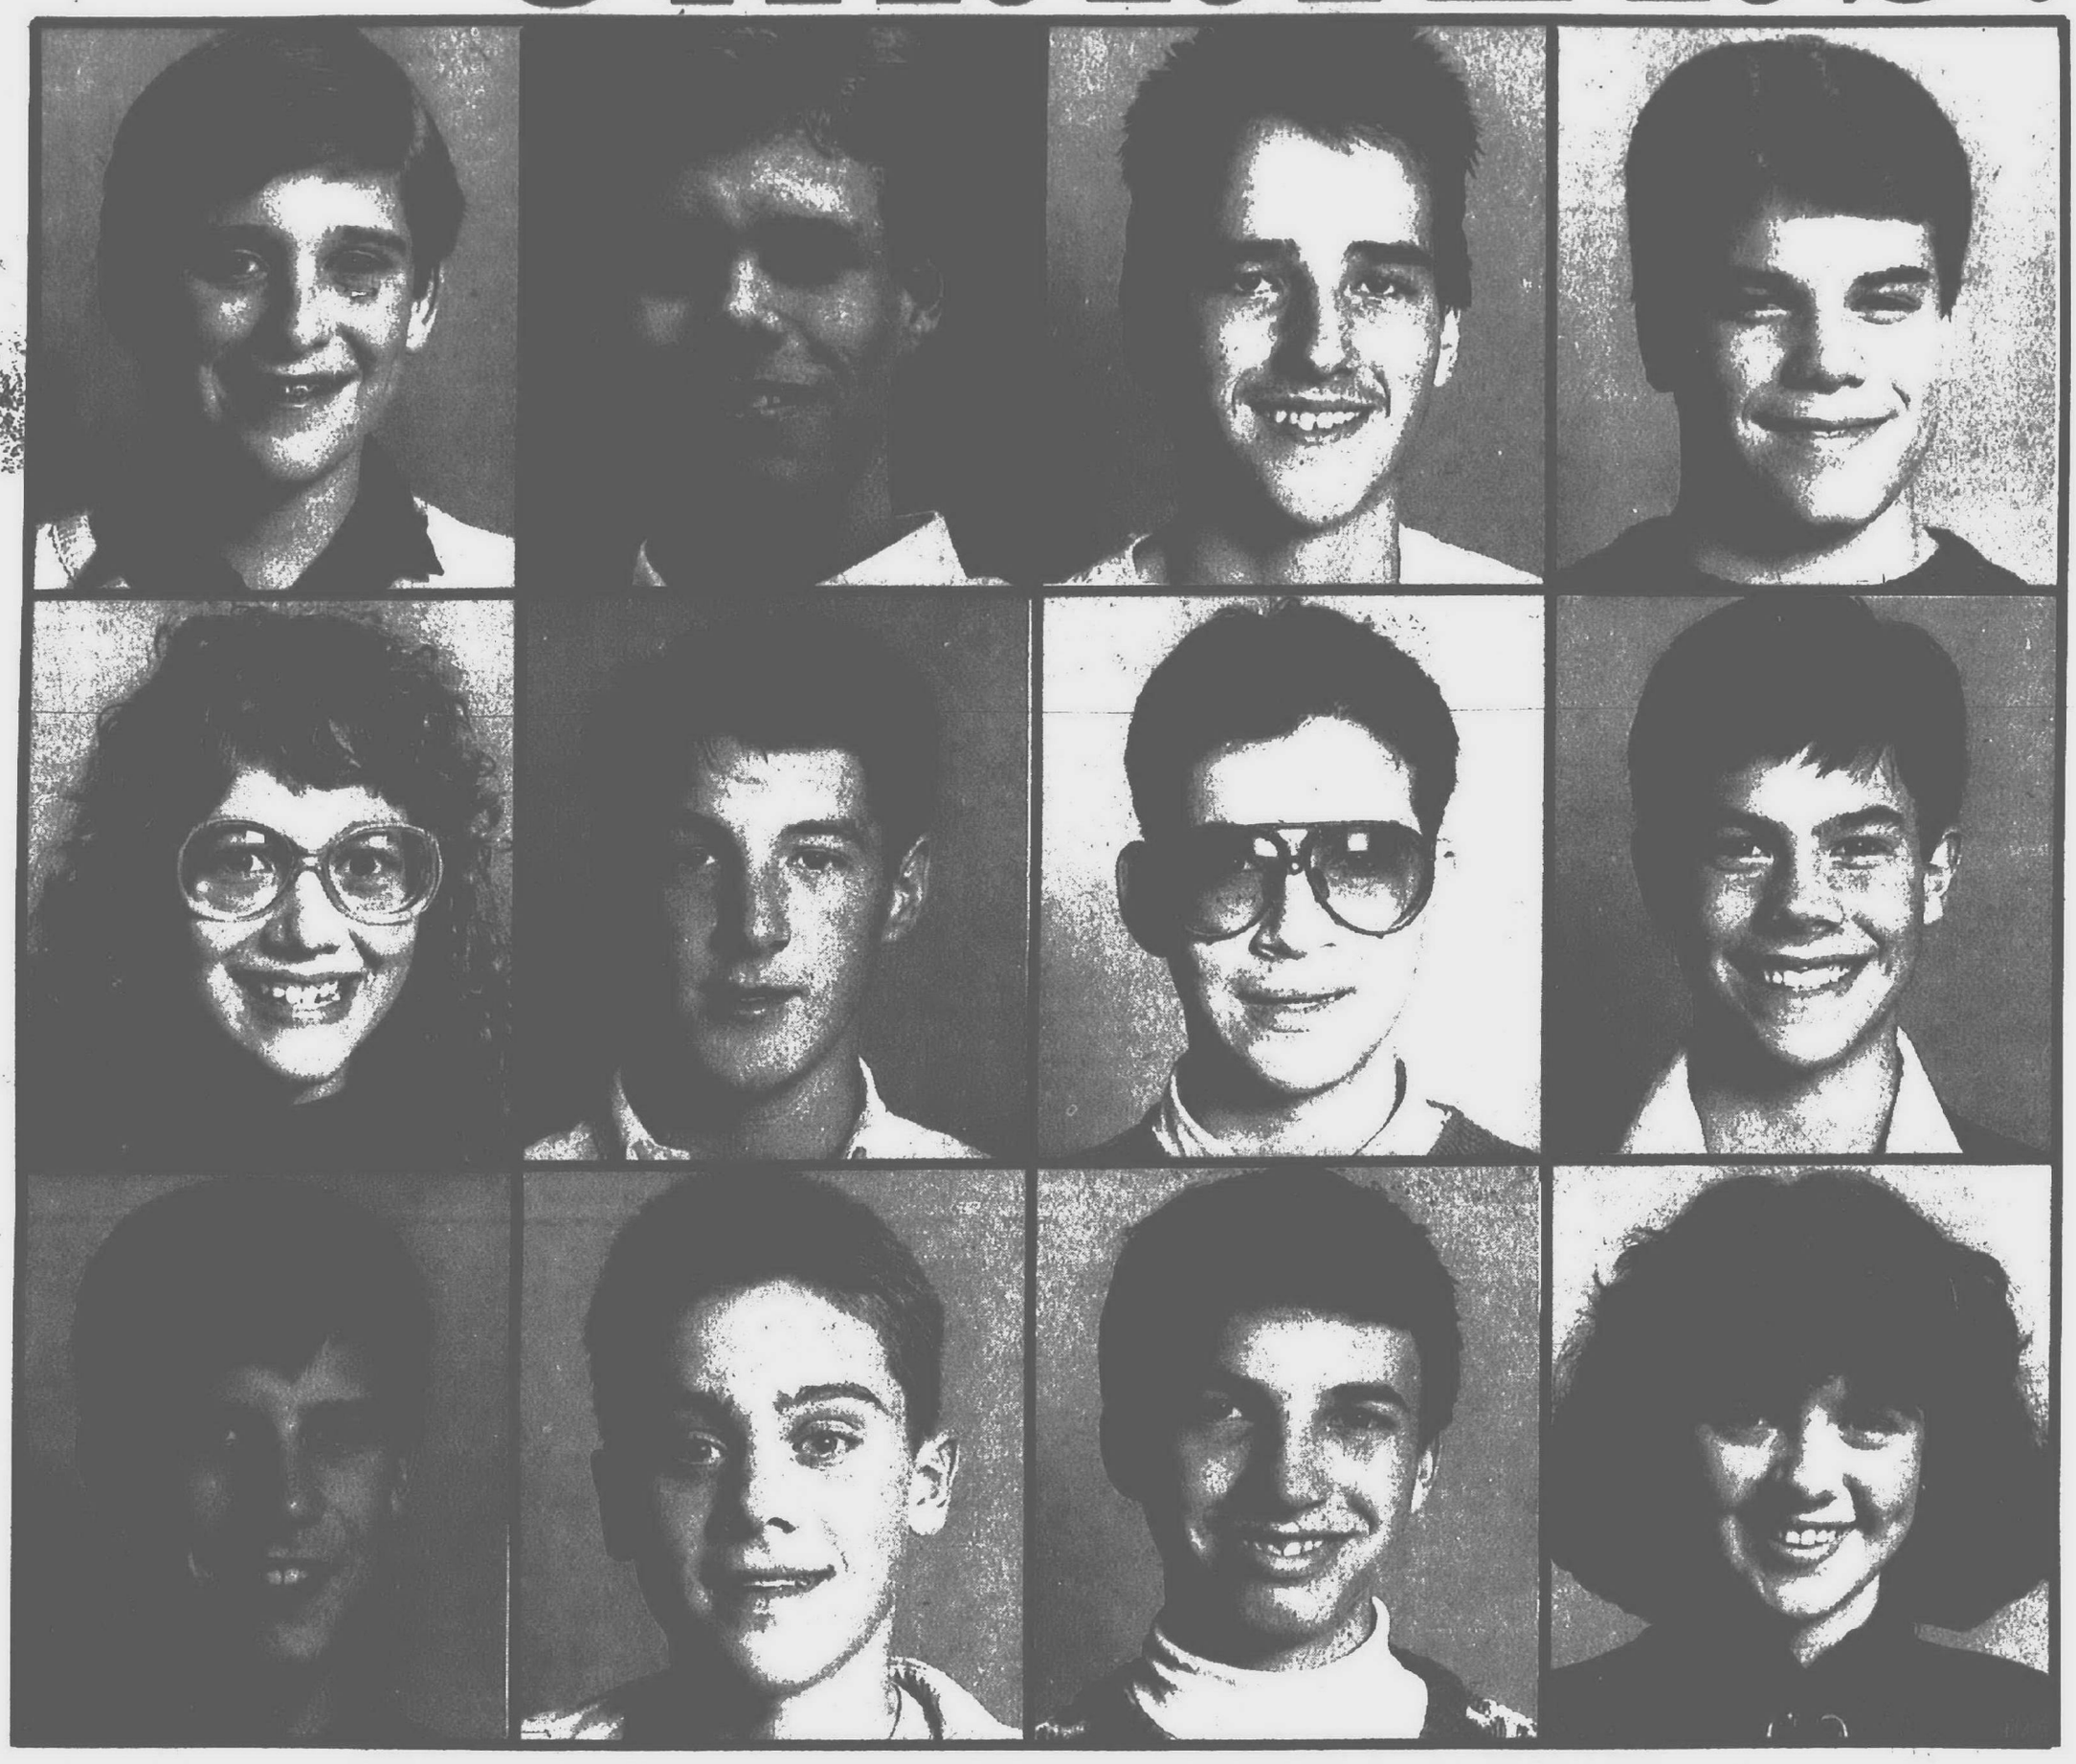

Weight reduction may lower cancer risk. Our 12-year study of nearly a million Americans uncovered high cancer risks particularly among people 40% or more overweight.

Now, more than ever, we know you can cook up your own defense against cancer. So eat healthy and be healthy.

Thanks to these terrific young men and women who are our 1988 Carriers of the Year.

Throughout this year our 12 Observer & Eccentric carriers have delivered their hometown news twice each week in all kinds of weather. They have done a super job in keeping their collections organized and settling their accounts promptly. We select carriers who have exceptional collection records, carriers who have been Carrier of the Month. Their length of service, their diligence, character and commitment to their work are all qualities that we consider when the time rolls around to honor these special carriers with a trophy and a dinner.

The osage-orange tree was used by Indians for archery bows. In the foreground is a closeup of the brainy textured fruit.

Osage-orange tree is useful

Timothy Nowicki

A GREAT deal of discussion was generated when we placed an osage orange fruit on display at the nature center.

This green, brainy textured, baseball-sized fruit is unfamiliar to most. Those of us who have seen them will likely remember spotting them along the road, serving as a natural fence.

They are fast-growing trees, resistant to pests and fungus, and are armed with stout thorns. For these reasons, farmers planted them as fence rows.

IF YOU EXAMINE a fruit, you will find it does have an orange-like fragrance. Wood of the tree is orange in color. The sapwood just under the bark is yellow, hence another common name — yellowwood.

Osage comes from the Osage Indians of the American southwest where osage-orange is native. Probably these people discovered the wood of the osage-orange was very good for making archery bows.

Before the days of iron ore and modern metallurgy, man used wood for many things that are now made of metal. And just as we use different metals because of their differing qualities for various purposes, so were different woods used for different functions.

BLACK LOCUST, for instance, was fashioned into pegs and used in shipbuilding because they did not shrink.

Basswood is a very soft, even-grained wood commonly used by woodcarvers. It was also used to make rope. Long fibrous strands were peeled from inside the bark and woven into a strong rope, often used as the string of an archery bow.

Hickory was and is used for tool handles. It was a good thing I had a hickory handle on my ax when I was trying to split some elm for the woodburner. I learned the hard way what they mean by elm being very stringy. There were several colorful and choice words used during that session.

BUT BECAUSE of this quality, elm was used as the hub of wooden wheels. Sycamore was often used as the rim of the wheel.

Large trees suitable for wheels were often hollow already, so pioneers only had to cut it to the proper thickness.

Alhough all wood is cellulose, different species of trees bond and arrange their cells in various ways to produce stringy, hard, soft or tensile qualities.

The writer is staff naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park.

State's tree growers hope for jolly Yule

AP — Michigan Christmas tree growers expect to harvest about 6 million trees this year and hope better quality trees will help them beat back their artificial competition.

"If we can sell a clean tree and a straight tree we are not going to lose customers to the artificial tree," said Wilbert Matthes, owner of Matthes Evergreen Farm in Ida, 40 miles southwest of Detroit.

Experts say about one-third of the trees used every year are artificial.

Barry Brand, executive secretary of the Michigan group, said about 6 million of the trees felled in the United States this year will be from Michigan forests or tree farms.

Edward Cole, owner of the Ed-Mar Tree Farm in Mayville, said he expects tree prices to range from about $20 for a 6- to 7-foot scotch pine to about $30 for firs of the same height.

For the past two years, the Michigan Christmas Tree Association has been involved in a program to boost the quality of the trees grown and harvested in the state.

THE TREES, which carry a "Snowfresh" tag, usually cost about $2 more than other trees. Requirements for the special tag vary, including whether the tree is commercially cut or if buyers are allowed to cut their own.

While other states market their own Christmas trees, "Michigan probably has the most defined program", said David Baumann, associate executive director of the National Christmas Tree Association in Milwaukee.

Baumann said about 34.1 million trees will be sold nationwide this year, about 2 percent more than in 1987 and 21.8 percent more than the number sold 11 years ago.

Jill Estey makes a determined effort to cut off a pass intended for Trenton's Katie Mans. The Rocks couldn't stop their opponent often enough in the Class A regional game, falling 55-47.

Trenton dictates outcome to Salem

girls basketball

Dictators force their will, their way, then enforce it with power. Such a description fits Trenton's girls basketball team.

The Trojanettes were at their tyrannical best in Tuesday's Class A regional semifinal, crushing every Plymouth Salem uprising to secure a 55-47 triumph at Plymouth Canton.

Trenton gained control of the game from the opening tip, powering to an 11-0 lead. Salem never evened it, although the Rocks did pull to within two, 47-45, in the game's final minute.

"If we don't start 0-11, we've got a shot," said Salem coach Fred Thomann, whose team bowed out at 18-5. "I think we pressed a little bit after they came down and got that lead. We were a little tight, but they put us there."

And kept the Rocks there, for most of the game. Every Salem outburst was answered, even in the last quarter when it seemed Trenton's grip might be slipping.

THE ROCKS trailed 43-32 early in that final period, but their pressure defense began to wear their opponents down. The Trojanettes had nine turnovers in the first three quarters; they committed eight in the last. With more than four minutes of the period gone, they had taken just two shots.

Salem was hardly shooting the lights out, but the Rocks made enough to get to within 43-39 with 2:05 to play. Jill Estey, her team's only offensive threat, had stepped into three-point land to try and save the game.

"We had to get back in it with threes," explained Thomann. "If we had connected, we would have been all right."

But Estey couldn't deliver on enough of them. She made four-of-14 fourth-quarter shots, including two triples, after making seven of her first 15 attempts (one triple). She finished with 25 points.

"If only I had made a few more of my other shots," the senior guard lamented afterwards.

SHE HARDLY deserved any fault. Estey never surrendered. After Stephanie Chaffin drove past her to put Trenton back up by six with 2:05 left, Estey answered with two triples in a 35-second span, sandwiched around two free throws by Trenton's Kim Hoppes.

It was Estey's shooting that trimmed the Trojanettes' lead to 47-45. But that was as close as the Rocks could come. Trenton hit eight-of-10 free throws in the final 43 seconds to clinch the win and move into Thursday's regional final against Adrian, which beat Belleville 48-45 at Canton earlier Thursday.

"That Estey is something," said Trenton coach John Biedenbach, shaking his head. "She can shoot the lights out."

Unfortunately for Salem, she was it on offense. The Rocks' next highest scorer was Sarah Ruete with seven.

Trenton, by comparison, had three players reach doubles in scoring: Katie Mans (17), Hoppes (14) and Chaffin (13).

"I think that's the whole story — balance," said Biedenbach. "It wasn't one person."

FOUR TROJANETTES scored in the opening quarter, with Mans doing most of the damage with six. Chaffin added five. Trenton hit four of its first five shots, including a Chaffin triple, while Salem when 4⅓ minutes without scoring, missing six straight.

Estey started to connect in the second quarter and Salem came to life, closing to within 22-17 with :54 left in the half. But baskets by Hoppes and Mans allowed Trenton to rebuild its nine-point cushion.

The third quarter was much the same, the Rocks getting to within 44-39 with three minutes left, then Trenton closing the quarter with a 7-3 spurt to again lead by nine with one quarter to play.

The win was Trenton's first over Salem in four meetings, spanning five seasons. In their second game this season, Salem beat the Trojanettes — in their opener — 41-39. That was the last time Trenton, now 23-1, lost.

Chiefs counting on program's strength

By Dan O'Meara

basketball

In three years as Plymouth Canton's boys basketball coach, Tom Niemi has won three division championships and built the foundation for a solid program.

As he enters his fourth season, Niemi is depending on the continuity an established program affords to keep the Chiefs among the best teams in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

The 1987-88 ballclub was the most successful in Canton history, posting a 19-5 record and winning its first district title in eight years.

But the Chiefs lost eight seniors from that team, six of whom made key contributions to a well-balanced outfit.

Graduation losses included Roger Trice, Brad Carey and Matt Littleton from the backcourt and Mitch Fyke, Jeff Anulewicz and David Foxworthy from the front line.

"WE LOST some tremendous players who did a lot for us," Niemi said. "It's difficult to replace players of that caliber. But that's what our program is about. You continue on.

"I have to believe we've developed a program, and you have to expect younger players to step in and replace those who distinguished themselves."

But the Chiefs aren't starting over completely. The cupboard certainly wasn't left bare, and Niemi's task is to mesh six varsity holdovers with a eight newcomers.

The key returnee is 6-foot-5 senior Brian Paupore, who averaged 10½ points and 4⅘ rebounds. He's a three-year starter who can play any position but is at home on the wing.

"I think he's one of the outstanding shooters in the area," Niemi said. "He's an all-round athlete. Many colleges are interested in Brian."

While most of the other top scorers and rebounders were lost to graduation — Fyke averaged 13½ points, Trice 11, Carey eight, Littleton 7⅕ and Anulewicz six — Canton returns a core group that saw considerable court time.

THE CHIEFS play an up-tempo brand of ball, and the other five veterans frequently gave the aforementioned players a rest during fast-paced games.

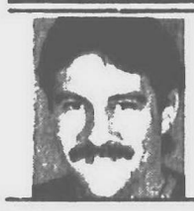

Jim Young, Troy Waldron, Fernando Johnson, Ray Penman and

C.J. Risak

EVERY COACH HAS a style. Tom Teeters is no exception.

"Tom tends to get in your hair," was Chris Paciero's description. Nikki Stubbs was more eloquent as she recalled last summer's running in sand dunes.

"Tom, I hate you, I hate you," she remembered thinking.

If communication is how a coach is graded, Teeters deserves an A. But it isn't. Coaches are judged on cold, hard, black-and-white figures. Won-loss figures. Explanations may be allowed, but are rarely remembered. The record is.

Which makes Teeters all the more unusual. He gets through to his players. His love-hate relationship, a style he relishes nurturing, works.

And he wins. Always.

"To get the kind of results Tom does, well, I just don't know how he does it," said Paciero.

The results are remarkable. A volleyball coach since 1974, the 35-year-old Teeters has guided two different high school teams to state titles. Of the four prep teams he's coached, three have won league championships. So have both his college teams.

LAST WEEK came the crowning achievement in his career — thus far. He prodded, goaded and eventually guided Schoolcraft College's volleyball team to an NJCAA championship. The Lady Ocelots — thanks to great performances from Stubbs (the NJCAA tournament's most valuable player) and Paciero — defeated Texas Southmost 15-11, 15-9, 12-15, 15-5 in last Wednesday's final.

How does he manage it? His teams aren't the most talented. Their success sometimes even surprises their coach. Like last week. "I didn't think we had as good a chance (as previous SC teams) because of our lack of height," he said.

But win they did, maximizing their talents and overcoming their deficiencies. Well, maybe not maximizing. Teeters would never admit one of his teams had reached full potential.

"He's very demanding," said Paciero. "He expects 100 percent all the time."

Not just at SC, either. Last spring, Teeters led Livonia Ladywood's team to the Class A state title in just his second season as coach.

NEITHER WAS accomplished by the good fortune of having great talent. Nor was his first state title, at Livonia Clarenceville in 1978, his first stop on a circuitous coaching trip. "When I first started at Clarenceville," he said, "we practiced in the cafeteria. They wouldn't give us any gym time."

The Trojans reached the state semifinals in 1979 and finished second in the state in 1980. He also coached at Wayne State in '79 and '80. The Tartars rose from the Great Lakes Conference cellar the league title in his second season.

His other coaching stints, at Garden City and Farmington Hills Mercy, have been equally successful. He coached at SC in '77 and '78 before going to WSU. He returned to SC in 1985; the Lady Ocelots haven't lost an Eastern Conference dual match since. They finished fifth in the nation in '85 and fourth in '86.

ALL THIS from a 1971 Garden City West graduate who played two years of soccer at SC, and never got his four-year degree. His interest in volleyball was initially kindled by Artur Wyszinski, a Pole who played on his homeland's national team before defecting. His team later won the '76 Olympic gold medal.

Teeters played on Wyszinski's club team in Hamtramck. Wyszinski was hired to coach Clarenceville, but broke his leg. He suggested Teeters take his place.

Since that first practice in Clarenceville's cafeteria, Teeters has never let up. He works at United Parcel Service, but he lives to coach.

"He's always thinking about something new to try," said Stubbs, who has been coached by Teeters for five years — three at Garden City and two at SC. "He comes into practice with all this stuff written on scraps of paper."

Like running sand dunes between matches at a beach tournament in Grand Bend, Ontario, last August. Or, instead of the dunes, running in chest-deep water in Lake Huron — "with our arms up, for 45 minutes," according to Paciero.

And what did the team do for fun while at the summer resort? "That," Stubbs said, "is his idea of having fun."

EVERY SC player has had moments when they would have

Rocks will be smaller, quicker

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The annual fate imposed by graduation did an injustice to Plymouth Salem's boys basketball team.

That appears to be the case at first glance.

The five seniors on last year's 10-12 ballclub were frontcourt players. The Rocks lost all of their height, and fifth-year coach Bob Brodie had only guards returning for 1988-89.

To compensate, Brodie balanced the scales by re-assigning his abundance of backcourt players to other positions, which means Salem will have a smaller, quicker team this year.

"What we've done is move some of those guards inside," Brodie said. "They've gotten a little bigger and move real well.

"IT GIVES US more diversity, more ball-handling ability at all positions. It's easier to move a guard inside than it is to take a big player and try to play him on the perimeter.

"We'll be an aggressive team with good, overall height but no giants," he added.

Of the seven returnees, 6-foot-2 seniors Jeff Elliott and Scott Hale, 6-1 seniors Mike Albertson and Jeff Jagacki and 6-2 junior Ryan Johnson will assume new roles as forwards in Brodie's eight-man rotation system.

The switch is a major one for Elliott and Hale, both of whom spent a lot of time running the offensive show a year ago.

They are also Salem's top returning scorers, which could work to the Rocks' benefit to have them playing closer to the basket. Elliott averaged 12 points, three rebounds and six assists in 13 games, and Hale's stats were 10, four and three, respectively.

"They feel real confident at that position," Brodie said. "It's taken a lot of heat off them. They don't have to run the offense or handle the basketball as much. But, if they need to, they can."

REMAINING TO handle the guard duties are 5-10 junior Jeff Gold and 6-0 senior Craig Marshall. After coming up from the JV team in early January, Gold averaged four points and three assists, Marshall three points and two assists.

"They love to press and trap," said Brodie, citing the duo's quickness, "and they have the ability to recover if they get beat.

"They're going to score mainly off the defense and the transition. They're penetrating guards, so most of our scoring will come inside."

Furthermore, Brodie has one of his most experienced teams, with the exception of the 1986-87 squad that won the Western Lakes Activities Association title and was a regional finalist.

Injuries and illness afforded others playing time. Bill Anderson missed half the season with mononucleosis, M.J. Ewald was out four weeks with a broken nose and Elliott was sidelined most of the year by a broken wrist.

The latter's injury allowed Marshall to gain a lot of playing time and necessitated the promotion of Gold to the varsity.

"THE TEAM WE put on the floor will probably have more minutes than any except that team two years ago," Brodie said.

"We've had teams in the past that weren't as athletic as this team but were very determined. If we combine that kind of determination with ability, we should do OK."

Compensating for the loss of height that departed along with 6-4 Keith Smith, 6-6 Ewald, 6-5 Anderson and 6-4 Pat Rzepecki will be the key for this team. In addition, the Rocks graduated their top scorer from a year ago, Todd Marion, who averaged 13 points and six rebounds.

Marion is playing baseball for the University of Michigan, and the 210-pound Smith, who contributed 11 points and led with eight caroms per game, is the starting tight end on the Cal State-Fullerton football team. Anderson is a member of the Henry Ford Community College basketball squad.

"We can make up for (being shorter) with some other things," Brodie said. "I think we can outquick some teams. We jump surprisingly well for our size.

"And other teams have to step out and guard them or they'll hit the open jumper. Lack of size will hurt us, but it will open some other avenues, too.

"THAT WILL BE the key — how well our forwards can adjust and take advantage of their abilities," he added.

Salem's tallest player is 6-5, 195-pound sophomore Jake Baker, who will start at center. He led the JV team in scoring (14 points) and rebounding (10) a year ago.

The remainder of the varsity roster — 5-10 guards Brian Rudolph and Tom Noonan, 6-3 forward Bryan Schultz and 6-3 center Curt Wachlarz — are juniors who started on the JV squad along with Baker, a great vertical leaper.

"(Baker) jumps out of the gym for his size," Brodie said. "He's one of those players who can drop step and dunk.

"He's one of the better players I've seen who's a sophomore. He's going to take his lumps early, but he'll get better as the season goes on and we continue to work with him."

The Rocks, who got to the WLAA title game last year despite finishing third in the Lakes Division, are expected to contend again. Salem will toughen up early with a non-league schedule Brodie calls "one of the toughest in the suburban area."

SALEM PLAYS Trenton, Southfield, Monroe and Ypsilanti in its first six games. The other two are against the defending division winners: Walled Lake Central in the Lakes and Plymouth Canton in the Western.

But the Rocks more than held their own, according to Brodie, in preseason scrimmages with such traditional basketball powers at Wayne Memorial, Grosse Ile and Inkster.

"We played for the league and district championships the last two years, and we're looking to get that opportunity again," Brodie said.

"We've got the ability to win. To compete in our league and with a schedule such as we have, we'll have to come ready to play every game."

Scott Hale averaged 10 points as a junior last year. He moves from a guard position to forward this season.

Salem grad helps Ocelots claim title

Finally, a challenge. If that's what a 17-point victory can be called.

Schoolcraft College's womens basketball team ran its record to 8-0 by capturing the Partners Press-Erie (N.Y.) CC Thanksgiving Tournament last weekend. The Lady Ocelots clobbered Monroe (N.Y.) CC in their opener Saturday, 92-40, before being "tested" by the host team in Sunday's championship game.

The final score against Erie was 72-55, but SC coach Jack Grenan swore "it was a lot closer than that." The Lady Ocelots, whose four previous wins were by no less than 34 points, had a comfortable lead until, with six minutes left, starters Michelle Dyksinski and Lisa DePlanche fouled out.

Erie sliced SC's lead to four, but Darlene Bazner drained a three-pointer — the Lady Ocelots' only triple of the game — and the gap was never less than seven after that. Denise Wendt converted seven-of-eight free throws in the final two minutes to insure the win.

DEFENSE PROVED to be SC's key to victory, particularly in the pivot, where Barb Krug and Dyksinski combined to hold Erie center Gretchen Van Den Vouver to five points (she was averaging 16). Wendt led the Lady Ocelots with 19 points, Dyksinski had 15 and Krug and Bazner added 10 apiece.

Krug topped a powerful SC rebounding performance with 19. Dyksinski and Ann Hardy had 12 each.

Leslie Paine's 23 points was best for Erie (5-2).

In Saturday's opener against Monroe, DePlanche connected on five triples, scored 20 first-half points, and finished with 35 to pace the rout. Wendt had 13 and Dyksinski 10. DePlanche also grabbed eight boards; Dyksinski had seven.

"It was the same story as before," said Grenan. "Our press was more than they could handle."

SC led 49-23 at the half. Tricia Williams got 14 points for Monroe (1-3).

Bazner and Wendt were named to the all-tournament team. SC hosts Kalamazoo Valley CC at 6 p.m. Saturday.

SC'S MENS BASKETBALL team earned itself a win Monday, beating Alma's junior varsity 85-73 at Alma. It was the Ocelots second win against five losses.

SC jumped in front from the start, leading 12-2, and was never in trouble — in spite of 61 fouls, 29 against SC.

"We had a good first half," said SC coach Dave Bogataj. "We shot well; passed well. Then we got into foul trouble. I thought we were going to have to stay overnight, there were so many fouls called. It was not a pretty second half."

Ed Hudson paced the Ocelots with 17 points. Bernard McGee and Dameon Smith had 13 each, with Smith getting 14 rebounds, and Rob Harmon netted 10 points.

Mercy still No. 1

Farmington Hills Mercy won its 22nd consecutive Catholic League swimming and diving championship on Sunday, Nov. 20, at Oakland Community College.

Team depth tipped the scales in favor of the Marlins, who prevailed over Royal Oak Shrine, which stayed close for a while but eventually faded. Mercy scored 379 points to Shrine's 240. Birmingham Marian was third with 230.

The Marlins dedicated their performance to the memory of former longtime Mercy coach and teacher Deloris Yager, who died Thursday, Nov. 17. She led the Marlins to their first league title and, with her 1972 team, the initial high school girls state championship.

Karen Neyer, who captured two events — the 50- and 100-yard freestyles — and anchored the winning medley relay team, led Mercy to league honors once again.

She was timed at 25.87 in the 50 free and 57.19 in the 100. The relay unit, which included Katie Westhoff, Katie Knipper and Liz DeMattia, posted a 1:56.08 time.

DeMATTIA, A JUNIOR, won the butterfly championship for the third straight year in 1:02.89, and Knipper, a freshman, captured the breaststroke in 1:11.84.

Mercy's last victory occurred in the freestyle relay in which Polly Tenuta, Michelle McCaffrey, Mary Quinn and Becky Wiquist won with a time of 3:51.80.

Westhoff, despite swimming her season-best time of 1:03.71, was touched out in the backstroke by Shrine's Audrey Janelle, who won that event in 1:03.62 and also the individual medley in 2:20.28.

Nancy Warson of the Clarenceville Swim Club placed in four "A" Division events last weekend at the 15th annual Windsor (Ontario) Aquatic Club International Invitational.

The meet attracted 30 teams and 450 swimmers.

Warson, competing in the girls 11-12-year-old category, finished third in the 50 and 100-meter freestyles with times of 27.33 and 59.86, respectively. She also grabbed fourth in the 100 backstroke (1:10.51) and sixth in the 200 individual medley (2:28.89).

OTHER C'VILLE FINISHERS
(all B Division events)

Girls 10 and under: Rebecca Bea — third place, 100 individual medley (1:24.1); fourth, 100 freestyle (1:14.28); sixth, 50 freestyle (33.76). Janell Fisher, third, 50 backstroke (40.16). Becky Noechel — fourth, 100 breaststroke (1:34.49). Lynn Knapp — fourth, 50 freestyle.

Girls 11-12: Carla Karoub — first, 200 IM (2:35.4); Jamie Hilliard — second, 100 backstroke (1:15.93). Rhea Tomlinson — fifth, 100 backstroke, 1:17.53.

Boys 11-12: Stephen Scanio — third, 100 freestyle (1:05.32); fourth, 100 backstroke (1:18.91). Greg Tracy — fifth, 50 butterfly (33.62); sixth, 100 freestyle (1:06.20).

Girls 13-14: Jenny Fisher — second, 200 IM, 2:32.43.

RELAY EVENTS

Teeters always gets results

Tom Teeters a coach who wins

liked to strangle Teeters. "He'd call and ask me why I didn't come in early to practice," said Stubbs, the team's most gifted player and a certain NJCAA All-American. "I'd tell him, 'Tom, I spend my life here now.' "

His idiosyncrasies are all part of that love-hate relationship. Teeters is a vegetarian; he snacks on sunflower seeds. He delights in imposing his eating habits on his players. For example, he won't allow them to drink pop in his presense.

After winning the title last week, Teeters relented — somewhat. "At our Thanksgiving dinner (in Miami), he let us have pop," said Stubbs. "But we had to pay a dollar for it."

Said Paciero: "Friends asked me after we won, 'Didn't you celebrate?' I told them, 'Well, we had some pop.' "

His practices border on unbearable. SC started lifting weights in May, continuing through the heat of summer right into the season. It was more common than unusual for them to do a workout in the weight room before or after matches.

"I THINK I'VE had almost all of them in tears at one point in the season," Teeters admitted. "You're bound to hit those breaking points. But I don't think any of them would have wanted it any other way."

Besides, Teeters noted, disagreements during practice didn't matter. "What was more important was how they interacted on the court."

Paciero reflected, "I think he makes us get mad at him so we have a common bond."

And it does work. Neither she nor Stubbs would have it any other way. "The experience was something I'd never trade," said Paciero. "The closeness of the team . . . It'll be really sad to leave because we have such good relationships. We had a lot of fun this season."

Stubbs put her five-year relationship with Teeters in this perspective: "I'd see something and tell him, Tom, that's not fair. Know what he says? 'I'm never fair, Nikki.'

"I consider him a good friend — but he still makes me mad."

Taylor Center fights off Franklin

girls basketball

By Brad Emons
staff writer

When the Taylor Center girls basketball team takes the floor, the first question that comes to mind is "How's the weather up there?"

Livonia Franklin got caught looking up at the towering Lady Rams, who boast one of the state's tallest teams, falling Tuesday in a first-round Class A regional game at Southfield, 59-45.

The weather inside Southfield's gymnasium ended up stormy for the Patriots, who bowed out with a 16-8 overall record.

Taylor Center (23-1) advances to Friday's regional championship final. The Lady Rams will play against the Livonia Ladywood-Detroit Cooley winner. (See related story).

Wendy Jamula, a 6-foot junior guard, paced the winners with a game-high 22 points. Jennifer Miller, a 6-3 junior center, added 16 points, hitting 12 of 16 from the free throw line. And 5-10 sophomore Tila Thomas surprised, scoring eight of her 14 points in the decisive fourth quarter.

"PART OF OUR game plan was to get their big people in foul trouble," said Franklin coach Dan Freeman. "I don't know how many times we had the ball on the block — down low — and didn't put the shot up.

"We just passed off too much when we had the ball inside. Not to blame the kids, but I think we were a little intimidated by their size."

Franklin appeared tight at the start, missing three uncontested layups.

Taylor Center, behind the passing and scoring of Jamula, roared out to a 17-6 first-quarter lead and led by as many as 12 before the Patriots got untracked.

Dawn Warner, the freshman guard, helped get the Patriots back in it by halftime. Her basket with 13 seconds left pulled Franklin to within six, 28-22, but Miller made a free throw with three seconds to go to put the Lady Rams up by seven at intermission, 29-22.

Franklin then started chipping away in the third quarter, eventually taking the lead, 36-35, with 28 seconds to go in the period on a shot by freshman Patti Shea.

LESLIE SZARFLARSKI then made the first basket of the fourth quarter to give Franklin a 38-35 advantage.

But then the Patriots got a little careless with the ball, and Taylor Center answered with 20 straight points. Franklin went without a point for nearly seven minutes.

"It was nice to see Thomas get strong in the last quarter," said Taylor Center coach Mike Leever. "They were pressing us and our girls lost their composure.

"It was nice to get it back in the fourth quarter. I didn't know if we'd ever get it back.

"They made some adjustments defensively and it took our girls awhile to figure out what they were doing. We were just not rebounding at all in the middle part of the game."

Freeman, whose team had a hard time solving Taylor Center's 1-3-1 and 2-3 zones, got back into the game with a defensive spurt.

"THE REASON we got back was because we started pressing," he said. "We considered it, but I wasn't confident about it coming in.

"We started to frustrate them and they started taking shots that they normally don't take. We ran a good, solid half-court defense, but I think we ran out of gas."

Franklin's inability to take the ball inside was never more evident than in the final free throw statistics.

Taylor Center hit 19 of 26, while the Patriots were two of three.

"Had we taken it to them inside, that would have complemented our outside game a lot better," Freeman said. "But they (Center) are just not tall. They're a good club."

Warner paced the Patriots with 19 points, while Szaflarski and Julie Stesiak added six each.

And while the Patriots had their problems at the offensive end, they also had a hard time on the defensive side.

"They didn't do anything that we were expecting, but we had a tough time defending," said the Franklin coach. "It was a tougher assignment than some of the girls expected."

Paupore among area's top players

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Who are some of the top returning basketball players in Observerland?

The faces will be new to many as all seven first-team All-Area picks have graduated.

Where are they now?

Borgess's Parish Hickman scored six points for Michigan State in Monday's victory over Furman.

Da Juan Smith of Borgess is at Eastern Kentucky, while teammate Dwayne Kelley, a Proposition 48 victim, is spending a year in junior college in Florida before reporting next season to Central Michigan.

Of CC's All-Area contingent last year, Bill Vitti and Brian Dugas are members of the Saginaw Valley State team. Teammate Anthony Arrington attends Albion College.

Wayne Memorial's Shawn Wimberly attends Owens Tech in Toledo. He scored 19 points in a victory last weekend against Schoolcraft College, of all teams.

PRESEASON TOP 10

1. Shawn Respert, junior guard, Bishop Borgess: The school has produced several outstanding players over the years including Lewis Scott (Eastern Michigan), Joe Gregory (Bowling Green) and Hickman. Respert will be the next. The 6-foot-2 guard is a sweet shooter with range and could be the school's all-time scoring leader before he's through.

2. Matt Hoffman, junior guard, N. Farmington: Only 5-10, but the point-guard led his team to the WLAA title in 1988, averaging 16 points per game on the year. An adept ball-handler who can penetrate and find the open man. A decent three-point shooter as well. A basketball junkie who is a genuine floor leader. He will be slowed early in the season by an ankle injury.

3. Chad Burgess, junior forward, Harrison: His job is to score as evidenced by his 19-point per game scoring average last season. He tallied a school-record 44 points last year against Clarenceville. At 6-2 he is a good leaper. If Burgess improves his ball-handling, he could attract interest among Division I college coaches.

4. Terry Boykin, senior guard, Redford CC: A good ball-handler who gained confidence running the point last year for the Shamrocks. Boykin, a 6-footer, can shoot off the dribble and create. He is an intense competitor who should come into his own this season.

5. Ray Richards, senior forward, Redford CC: At 6-5 he has a good touch around the hoop, but needs to toughen up on the boards as Vitti did for the Shamrocks a year ago. He could be the key to CC making a run at the Central Division crown.

6. Brian Paupore, senior forward, Pty. Canton: At 6-5, the lefty can shoot with range, but like Richards, he needs to toughen up his game and be a force inside. Tends to float at times, but has the scoring touch to be a reckoned with in the WLAA.

7. Bryan Wauldron, senior forward, Farm. Harrison: We all know what he could do in football and he'll be a treat to watch in basketball. His leaping ability is second to none. He dunks easily and will be a stopper on defense. He's worked on his shooting and should make life miserable for WLAA opponents.

8. Mike Boyle, senior center, St. Agatha: A bruising center who averaged 14 points per game last year. He's a good athlete, making the All-Catholic League football team. The 6-5 returnee likes to rebound and mix it up inside.

9. Chris Poplin, senior forward, Westland Glenn: Maybe a surprise to some, but not to this writer. At 6-4, he's got an inside-outside body and will be the man the Rockets look to for scoring in the paint. A good touch for a big man. Came on strong last year and should compliment Glenn's two outside shooters, Greg Anderson and Casey Killingbeck.

10. Jason Belaire, senior center, Liv. Churchill: The only returning starter from last year's team, Belaire is a 6-3 leaper who should get his points in the paint. His outside shooting and ball-handling is a question mark, but his inside game is solid.

Chiefs plan title defense in Western

Gordie Risbridger comprised Canton's bench last season and will be expected to fill larger roles this year.

"We had the luxury of playing a lot of people to keep the pressure on teams," Niemi said. "Maybe we're able to bring young players along faster than others can. The style we play increases playing time for our bench."

Johnson, a 6-3 senior, is expected to fill one of the two post positions, and the other could end up being 6-0 senior Mike Sulak, who didn't play last year but is a tough inside player despite his relative lack of height.

The latter is something the Chiefs will have to overcome with added hustle under the boards.

"Our offense is based on all five (players) being involved, and there's a lot of movement," Niemi said. "Mike plays with a tremendous amount of intensity."

CANTON LOST a great deal of height with the departure of 6-3 Fyke, 6-5 Anulewicz, 6-4 Foxworthy and 6-7 Cedric Beguin. Plus, Trice averaged six rebounds a game despite the fact he was a guard.

"We're smaller this year, but I think we have some quickness," Niemi said. "It'll take some time for the young players to fit in with the veterans, but we have a program established now.

"The transition between players moving up is easier because they're more accustomed to what is expected of them and the system we're running.

"I think we got hurt at graduation more than other teams," he added, "but this is where a quality program has to pick up."

Other frontcourt players are 5-10 junior Ron Staples, 6-2 sophomore Kevin Holmes, the son of former Livonia Franklin coach, Bob Holmes; and 6-4 junior Aaron Adkins.

Holmes, who Niemi believes could become another Paupore-type player, is pushing hard at the post positions. Staples and Adkins, who played JV ball along with Holmes, are excellent leapers, according to Niemi.

CANTON HAS an abundance of guards, and the starting duo could be Waldron and Young, a pair of 6-foot seniors. Risbridger and Penman should see lots of playing time, also.

Waldron will replace Trice at the point and lead the fast break. Young will be the off-guard, a role previously filled by Littleton and Carey.

"Troy Waldron has developed into an outstanding guard, and he'll be our floor leader," Niemi said. "He's developed an outside shot, so we'll have another 3-point threat along with Brian. Risbridger can shoot the three, too.

"Young is an outstanding defensive player who can rebound. We're looking for him to shut down the opponent up front."

The Chiefs also have at guard 6-foot junior Geoff Allen, who can also play forward; 5-9 junor Daryl Magreta, a transfer from Taylor Center; 5-10 junior Dave Makara, and 6-6 junior Jim Figge.

BUSINESS NEWS 591-2300 Ext.325

The business section is published Thursdays. In addition to the story coverage and columns, the section contains several calendars; BUSINESS PEOPLE covers promotions, internal awards and retirements for anyone living or working in our circulation area. We will print photographs if space permits. DATEBOOK covers upcoming meetings and courses of interest to business people.
MARKETPLACE briefly covers new businesses, new products and other business-related items. Submit items for these in writing by 5:00 p.m. Monday. For these calendars, call Barry Jensen (ext. 325) For all other items, call Marilyn Fitchett, 591-2300. Ext. 331.

WEDDINGS, ENGAGEMENTS, ANNIVERSARIES

We publish photographs and announcements of weddings, engagements and major anniversaries of local residents or former local residents. These appear as soon as possible, depending upon available space. Forms for announcing these events are available from any of our local offices, or you may model your announcement on an example you've read in the newspaper. The best reproduction can be made from a 5"x 7" black and white photo, but others will do. Please avoid regular or color Polaroid pictures.

PHOTOGRAPHS

Reprints of photographs that appear in the paper are not available. However, if a photograph is used and not needed for our files, it will be made available to the first person calling in. Such photographs will be held in any of our offices for two months, awaiting pickup. To inquire about a photograph, please call the editor who ran the picture, i.e.: Sports, Suburban Life, Entertainment, Creative Living, News.

RELIGION

Religious news is published Thursdays. The religion calendar is published on these pages. Calendar deadline is Monday noon. All material must be in writing. For more information, call your local suburban life editor

OBITUARIES

We publish obituaries of local residents and former local residents. Most obituary information is received from area funeral homes. If a local funeral home is not involved, please call the community editor at the appropriate telephone number. All obituaries appear at the discretion of the community editor. Obituaries are printed without charge.

CREATIVE LIVING

News of the arts appears every Thursday. Deadline for notices of gallery shows (which must be legibly written) is 5:00 p.m. Monday. For more information, call the appropriate Creative Living editor.

ENTERTAINMENT 591-2300 Ext. 305

Entertainment pages appear Thursday and include feature stories, theater and other entertainment reviews, TABLE TALK restaurant news column, and the UPCOMING calendar,, which deadlines each Thursday (for items to appear the following Thursday). Submit all information to Ethel Simmons, entertainment editor.

MOVIE REVIEWS 591-2300 Ext. 302

All questions about movie reviews, which appear every Monday in our STREET SCENE section, should be directed to Sue Mason.

Hot glass, heavy art

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

BARBARA WALLACE SAYS she's a glass blower because it combines three things she loves — art, music and dance. The art part is self-explanatory. The music is what she turns on to work by and the dance, more precisely choreography, is the fast-paced, timed movements she goes through nonstop for 45-60 minutes at a crack.

No hesitations, no stopping to look around, just intense activity, from the time she first puts the glass on the end of the long blow pipe or punty, until she cuts it loose to put into the annealing oven.

Betweeen the the beginning and the end, she will have the piece in and out of the furnace and the glory hole beside it (to reheat) from 20-25 times.

AT THE glass studio at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association (BBAA), she and her assistant, Gerry Mace, two 100-pound lightweights, had danced and strained their way through a couple of rounds before the glass furnace and were getting ready to go one more round before they called it a day. It was a 55-degree November day.

"In six hours, we'll do three large pieces and five small ones . . . I can wring my clothes out when I leave here," Wallace said.

Wallace is one person you'd never choose to complain to about how busy you are. In addition to a full-time job in advertising, she teaches glass blowing at the Center for Creative Studies on Monday evenings and Saturdays and at the BBAA on Wednesdays.

SHE PUT herself through three years of college making stained glass, heading toward a degree in elementary education. After student teaching and more work with glass, she decided to change direction. Instead of completing her degree in elementary education, she decided to go for a degree from the Center for Creative Studies. It took six years, but in 1986, she received her degree.

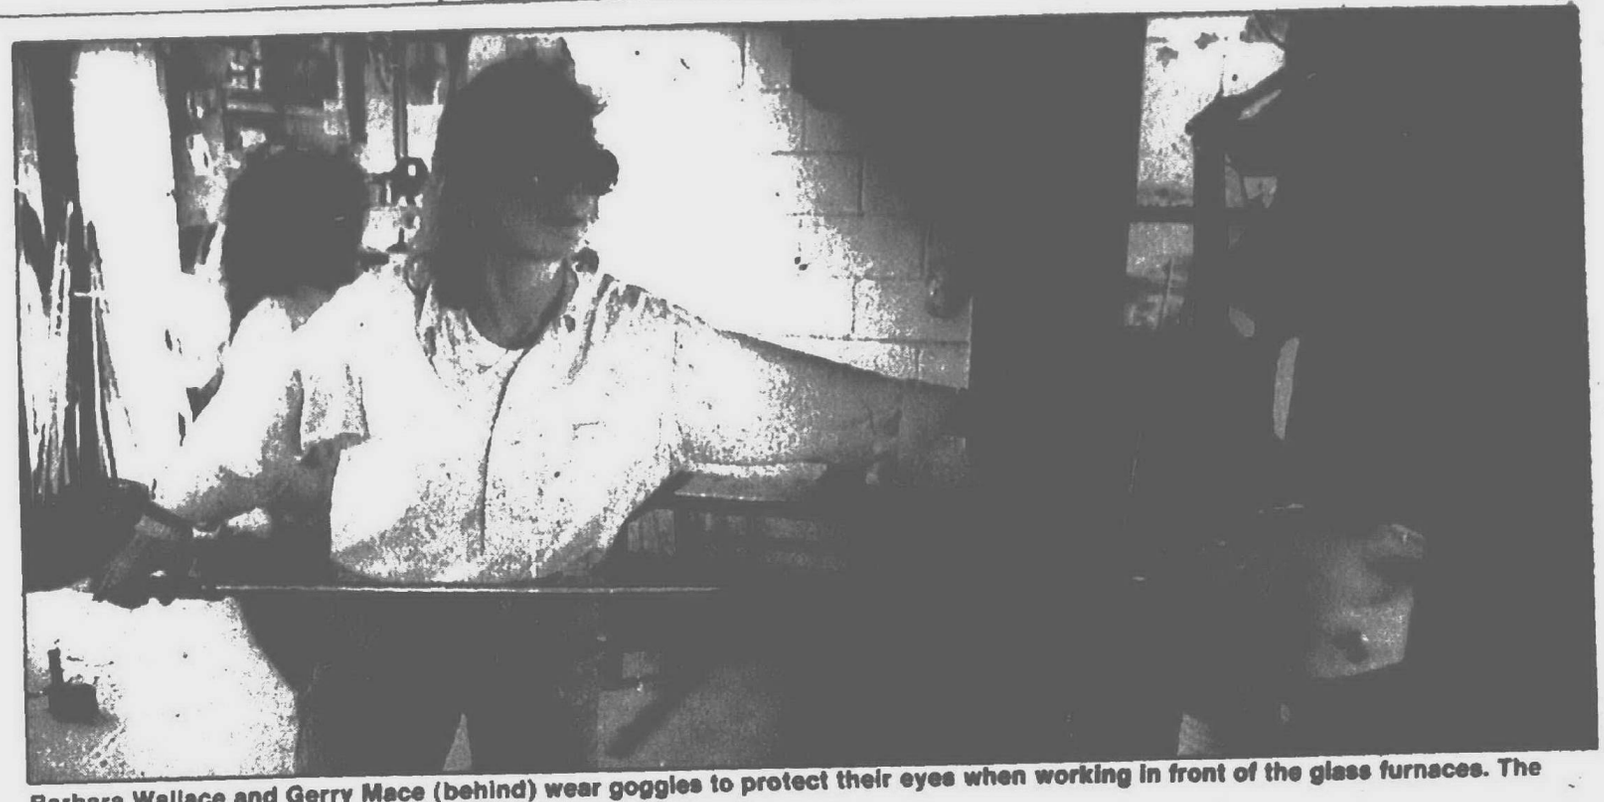

Her first exposure to working with hot glass was at the Toledo Museum in 1981. She knew then it was her medium. She has since gone to glass workshops in Maine, Seattle and North Carolina.

"I've had my hands in it for a long time," she said.

SHE WORKS on two to three different levels. The small pieces like those she has in the BBAA Holiday Sales Show, through Dec. 10, are her bread and butter pieces. Larger works such as overlay vases are at Ilona Gallery of Farmington Hills, Signature Gallery in the Michigan Design Center and the Detroit Artists Market.

Yet, when describing her work, she said, "I'm known for sculpture — bronze with glass. The Detroit Institute of Arts purchased a piece of mine (like that) in April and it's been on display for four months."

She will be at the Detroit Institute of Arts doing a demonstration and talk for Founders Society members Thursday, Dec. 8, with Herb Babcock of the Center for Creative Studies. They should be a good combination, Wallace said.

Barbara Wallace and Gerry Mace (behind) wear goggles to protect their eyes when working in front of the glass furnaces. The vase is already well on its way.

"We're both sculptural types."

Mace, a free-lance photographer, came into glass blowing by fluke. She arrived here from Boston to do a piece on glass blowing and ended up at the business end of a blow pipe.

"I talked her into staying," Wallace said. "She does the actual blowing for me. I have to move real fast."

WALLACE'S VASES are complicated. She uses one color glass for the inside, another for the outside. Then she adds glass shards that she makes herself ahead of time for color and texture, and canes that attach themselves to the sides when the vase is almost complete.

The vase they were doing that warm November day was to be jade green with a white overlay. The molten glass came in and out of the furnace many times — to pick up the second color, to be turned from a blob into a large teardrop by Wallace, cupping and shaping the hot glass with a damp, folded newspaper, to have the initial bubble blown in by Mace.

"By her blowing and me papering I can get a larger and a thinner piece. Besides, it's not so lonely when you have someone working with you," Wallace said.

The pace quickened as the glass at the end of the blow pipe began to grow larger and rounder. Mace blew again and again and raced over to get more shards ready as Wallace shoved the pipe into the furnace as deftly as a pool hustler putting the six ball in the side pocket.

IN THE furnace the shards became soft and congealed with the whole. As soon as that happened, Wallace would put it out quickly to pick up more shards — paper, blow, shape, heat. Repeat.

"Two more blows. Keep going — blow. Blow. Blo-o-o-ow — nice."

In and out again to pick up the cones on the marvering table. It took two tries to get all of them in position.

"I got it. I'm gonna go for the other one to see if I can get it across — I got it. Perfect."

In the lightning-fast series of finishing steps, the shape had been refined and flattened, the irregular top opening cut, shaped, polished and reshaped again slightly, before it met with Wallace's approval. It would came in and out of the furnace at least 10 more times for minor but important touch-ups.

In the annealer, it would then cool down slowly for about 12 hours "so there is no stress on the glass," Wallace said.

In the entrance to the glass studio, Wallace smiled, wiped her sweaty hands on her jeans and talked about a piece she and Mace had done a short time ago, a beautiful one that got so big it wouldn't go into the glory hole and couldn't be finished. But it had been a beauty.

"This is something I always wanted to do and I love it," Wallace said.

And the future? Well, in Japan there are some incredible glass artists — and she'd sure like a chance to work with them.

Barbara Wallace just dropped a piece of overlay glass made especially to smash for shards. She retrieves the best to use for the piece she is about to make.

Tour visitors welcome

"Yuletide Treasures" is the theme of the 29th annual Christmas Walk sponsored by the Detroit Symphony League. The Birmingham-Bloomfield Walk, featuring six homes from contemporary to New England farm traditional, decorated for the holidays, will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 7.

Grosse Pointe homes will be featured in the walk there from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 14.

Those attending the Birmingham-Bloomfield walk will visit Magnolia Hill, the old Vernor estate; Victoria's basement completely decorated with Middle Eastern treasures; a charming home with seven Christmas trees; a country style home done by Bonnie L. Meyer, ASID; a home decorated in the Williamsburg style and the Frank Lloyd Wright-designed Affleck House.

The door prize will be Christmas tree done by Bonnie L. Meyer, a first-prize winner in the Festival of Trees. Tickets are $6 for groups of 10 or more, $8 advance and $10 at the door. For information, call 851-2132 or 642-9585.

Symphony leads candlelight caroling

The Ann Arbor Symphony Orchestra will present its annual "Caroling by Candlelight" concert on Sunday, Dec. 11, at the Michigan League Ballroom. Due to the great popularity of this event in its first two seasons, the symphony has decided to present three performances at 3 p.m., 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Featured in the sing-along concert will be the Symphony Strings Chamber Orchestra and Brass Quintet conducted by Don Schleicher, U-M professor of conducting.

Connie Barron will be mistress of ceremonies, and a handbell choir led by Carol Muehlig will lend a special note. The Boychoir of Ann Arbor, Thomas Strode, director, and an adult chorus comprised of members of the University Choral Union, Donald Bryant, director, will lend their voices to the audience's.

General seating tickets are priced at $6 per adult and $4 per child. Preferred seating for patrons is priced at $15 for adults and $10 for children.

Tickets may be purchased by sending a check and self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Caroling, 305 Dhu Varren Road, Ann Arbor 48105. Ticket orders received by Dec. 5 will be mailed; orders received after that date will be held at the door.

Call 994-4801 for more information.

Family fare

It's be a magical musical program in more ways than one Sunday when the Livonia Symphony Orchestra performs its annual holiday concert. An added attraction that makes the event appealing to the entire family will be the presence of "amusionist" Al the Only, presenter of magical entertainment shown at the left with his assistant Lori Ulman. Another fun part of the program will be the performance of Tubby the Tuba, featuring soloist Michael Andrew (below, left). Narrator of the Tubby sequence will be Livonia Mayor Robert Bennett. The show is at 3 p.m. in Madonna College Activity Center, Levan and Schoolcraft. The event is co-sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission. Tickets are $8.50 general admission; $5 for students/seniors.

Gift books for would-be writers

Mona Grigg

THIS IS the season for wish lists and gift ideas, and I'm not about to let it go be without suggesting books, books and more books. But give me a moment to ask you for something.

The "Gift of Reading" program organized last year by Louise Reid Ritchie and the Detroit Free Press needs help from all us book people. Last week, Louise told me that though the program provided over 40,000 brand new books last year to needy Detroit area children up to the age of seven, the numbers aren't anywhere near that this year. The books will be distributed by FOCUS Hope and seven other groups, including Michigan Human Services and the Plymouth-Canton Adult Basic Education program.

You can buy books at several area bookstores serving as "Gift of Reading" drop-off-points. All Waldenbooks stores will also gift wrap books for the program.

Borders in Birmingham, Novi, and Ann Arbor are participants, as are the Metro News Centers in Birmingham, and Canton, and Bookpeople in West Bloomfield. What's missing is enough people to buy the books. Please encourage potential young readers by buying a book to treasure or by sending a check to A Gift of Reading, P.O. Box 64701, Detroit 48264.

NOW FOR A FEW gift suggestions, this time for the reader who is also a writer. I like to think there is a writer in every family, and that sooner or later every writer wants to know everything there is to know about writing — business, art, craft, biography. So, though I make no promises and offer no guarantees, I can tell you that if I didn't already own the following books, they would be at the top of my wish list:

For the journalist or non-fiction writer:

● "The Complete Guide to Writing Nonfiction," by the American Society of Journalists and Authors (Perennial Library, Harper and Row). This thick compendium, now in paperback, offers up everything from research to specialization to writing habits to publication. It includes in its 671 pages the ASJA Code of Ethics and position statements on the bugaboo "Work for Hire" and "Blanket Indemnification" clauses foisted on writers by publishers. Authors like Alex Haley, Betty Friedan, Vance Packard and Alvin Toffler offer advice, along with Birmingham's own Julie Candler, former Woman's Day columnist and author of "Womam at the Wheel."

● In the 1960s writers like Tom Wolfe, Joan Didion and John McPhee perfected what became known as "new journalism" — personal reportage that reads like fiction. "Dramatic nonfiction," Jon Franklin calls it in "Writing for Story," a Mentor paperback by the two-time Pulitzer Prize-winner. In this gem of a book, Franklin dissects two of his own stories and offers the secrets to this kind of writing.

● "The Literary Journalists," edited by Norman Sims, a large paperback from Ballantine Books, offers up pieces by the giants of new journalism, including Wolfe, McPhee, Didion, Tracy Kidder, Mark Kramer and others.

● A new annual series, "The Best American Essays," from Ticknor and Fields is a companion to the annual "The Best American Short Stories." Last year's edition included "On Boxing" by Joyce Carol Oates and "The Follies of Writer Worship" by Julian Barnes.

● Each year since 1979, the Pointer Institute for Media Studies has published their choices for the "Best Newspaper Writing" of the previous year. Each winning piece is published along with an author interview, observations and study questions. The categories are deadline, non-deadline writing, commentary and editorial writing. Past winners are writers like Roger Simon, Jimmy Breslin, Bradley Graham, and even humorist Dave Barry for commentary. For the 1988 edition send $9.95 to The Pointer Institute, 801 Third Street South, St. Petersburg, Fl. 33701 or call (813) 821-9494.

FOR THE FICTION writer:

● "Writers on Writing," by Jon Winokur (Running Press, large paperback). Mostly one-liners by the greats and lessers — funny, thoughtful, sad, angry, contradictory. Peter De Vries: "I love being a writer. What I can't stand is the paperwork." Boltaire: "Every style that is not boring is a good one." Truman Capote: "I've known all my life I could take a bunch of works and throw them up in the air and they would come down just right. I'm a semantic Paganini." John Steinbeck: "When those old writing boys get to talking about The Artist, I want to leave the profession."

● "The Art of Fiction" and "On Becoming a Novelist," by John Gardner. Intended for what the late teacher — mentor called the "serious, literary writer," these books offer up technique and exercises, encouragement, and often discouragements. Gardner believed that, while there was such a thing as talent, "writing ability is mainly a product of good teaching supported by a deep-down love of writing."

● Then there is the rascally Rita Mae Brown. "Starting from Scratch, A Different Kind of Writers' Manual" is an infinitely funny book for serious writers. The opinionated toppler of icons starts out by writing, "I believe all literature started out as gossip. I believe self-pity stinks. I believe that hen never cackles until she's finished her job. I believe in art that conceals art." She signs her introduction, "Your far from humble servant," so you can't say you haven't been warned. And if you can put her book down from there, you're a far better person than I am.

Rita Mae wouldn't write with anything but a Mont Blanc Diplomat fountain pen. She doesn't believe you can really, really write unless you've studied Latin. She has a way with words: "What's the difference between involvement and commitment. Think of ham and eggs. The chicken is involved. The pig is committed. See what I mean?" And about her first novel, "Rubyfruit Jungle," she says, "I wanted my novel to be so witty that even Republicans would be forced to enjoy it."

● And last, but only because it's my newest addition, comes "Falling Through Space, the Journals of Ellen Gilchrist." The author of "In the Land of Dreamy Dreams," "Drunk with Love," and "Victory Over Japan," talks about her life and loves, her dreams, her fears, and now and then gives a lesson or two on writing.

"How often I have tried to tell writing students that the first thing a writer must do is love the reader and wish the reader well . . . Only in such well wishing and trust, only when the writer feels he is writing a letter to a good friend, only the will the magic happen."

In my next column I'll pass along another biased list of books — my own favorites for the general reader.

, Bookstall on the Main in Northville will host a book signing 1-3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 4, by poet Kathleen Ripley Leo. Her book, "Town One South," celebrates Northville and its people.

Shades of blue cover an enormous range. They can be contrasted with each other and with a great many other colors for interesting and varied effects.

Blue and white, blue on white and blue with white are perennial favorites for room schemes. Blue is a great accent with yellow, cream or red. Blue and rose work well together as equal tones, as do blue and yellow.

Blue and white is the immediately obvious choice for any contrasting blue scheme, whether it is the sunny look engendered by clear sky blue or the crisper, clean cut navy blue.

A TRIP to an Oriental carpet store will provide a plethora of color schemes.

For example, powder blue contrasting with pinky beiges, dark blue and the Indian reds of Kashan rugs or the beautiful cream and turquoise of Turkish rugs in dark blue and reds. Picture the latter with dark blue walls, red, blue and gray fabrics enlivened by yellow and the green of leaves.

Nature is always a source of ideas for schemes that center on blue. The sky is an obvious one. Plain blue walls and ceiling with white trim used with green and varying shades of blue will provide a soft, cool, calm effect. Add appointments with red as the dominant color and you will add a touch of warmth.

More interesting combinations with blue are terra cotta, rose, apricot and lavender.

Area dancers in 'Nutcracker'

Two area students will be part of the dance ensemble of the forthcoming presentation of the Nutcracker ballet by the Ann Arbor Ballet Theatre.

Acting in part of the Snow Fairy sequence as well as others will be Kathy Hoffman of Canton and Laurie Bean of Plymouth.

The complete ballet will be presented in the historic Michigan Theater, 603 E. Liberty in downtown Ann Arbor at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 9; 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 10 and 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 11.

Musical accompaniment will be provided by the Ann Arbor Chamber Orchestra. Tickets are available at the Michigan Union ticket office in Ann Arbor or all Ticketmaster outlets. Tickets are $12 for adults; $7 for senior citizens and children under 12.

The production is Ann Arbor's only production of the Nutcracker and the only production other than Detroit with an orchestra. The orchestra plays Tschaikovsky's full Nutcracker musical score that has been adapted for a smaller orchestra by Carl Daehler. Choreography is by Carol Sharp, director of the Ann Arbor Ballet Theatre.

For more information. call the ballet theatre, 662-2942.

Renaissance spirit

Ford-inspired events spark Fair Lane calendar

Area florists are once again cooperating in turning the Henry Ford Estate-Fair Lane into a magical place this holiday season.

This year's theme will be "The Renaissance" with floral arrangements provided by florists including the Village Green and Merri-Craft Florists both of Livonia. Others include English Gardens of Dearborn Heights, the Bloom Shoppe, Harry Miller Florists and Kit's Creations of Dearborn.

The estate and the powerhouse is now open for tours through Dec. 31 (except Dec. 24-25). Guided tours will be available 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. The cost is $5 for adults and $4 for students and seniors. Children under six are admitted free.

Visitors also may travel back in time to the golden age of the Renaissance by joining in a Winter Holiday Feast on Friday, Dec. 9. The feast will be provided by Moriah: Caterer to the Kings, who will serve the meal and hors d'oeuvres made from Renaissance-period recipes. Entertainment will be provided by pianist Curtis Posuniak, the Livonia Civic Chorus and the Renaissance troupe of Moriah which consists of jugglers, magicians and puppeteers. Costumes are encouraged and prizes will be awarded for the most imaginative attire.

RESERVATIONS MAY be made for the entire feast or the the hors d'oeuvres cocktail hour. Cost for the meal is $50 ($100 for a seat the head table) or $25 for the cocktail hour and entertainment.

Other entertainment during the holidays will include luncheon concerts at noon on Tuesdays, Dec. 6, 13 and Thursday Dec. 15 in the estate music room. Featured at the separate luncheons will be Posuniak, director of the Michigan Bach Festival, the Trenton Senior Chorale, and Christmas music on the piano by the University of Michigan-Dearborn's Dianne McMullen. Tickets for the luncheon concerts are $14.50.

Youngsters will be delighted to participate in this year's children's events which include Breakfast with Santa and a visit with Santa and his elves (Dearborn Heights Civitans) on Saturday.

Santa's workshop, an idea born in the imagination of Henry Ford, will be re-created for children's delight again this year. Children will follow a marked path to Santa's cottage where they can visit with Santa and warm themselves with some hot oyster soup. Each child will receive a token gift commemorating the visit. Santa's cottage is open to the public Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 7-8 from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 10 from noon to 5 p.m. for $3 per child.

On Saturday-Sunday, Dec. 17-18, the cottage will be held for group reservations which run from noon to 5 p.m. For more information, call 593-5590.

Aldingbrooke

Superlative Rental Living In The Hills of West Bloomfield

NEW lavishly large 1, 2 and 3 bedroom terrace ranch dwellings of unsurpassed size that are utterly extraordinary - up to 2,800 square feet and every amenity: private entries, attached garages, fireplaces, cathedral ceilings, designer kitchens with separate breakfast areas, master bedroom suites with dressing area, double vanities, double closets and walk-in closets too, in-residence laundry and storage, full carpeting, central air conditioning, patio or balcony.

Truly resort-like recreational facilities include: oversized pool in a spectacular wooded setting, a manor-home like clubhouse — ideal for private parties — tennis courts and, of course, a 24-hour manned gatehouse with package reception services. There is even a private lending library. All on over 130 incomparable private acres for estate-like living.

Unquestionably the standard for beauty and luxury. For their size, design and breathtaking setting, YOU MUST SEE the 1, 2 and 3 bedroom terrace homes of ALDINGBROOKE.

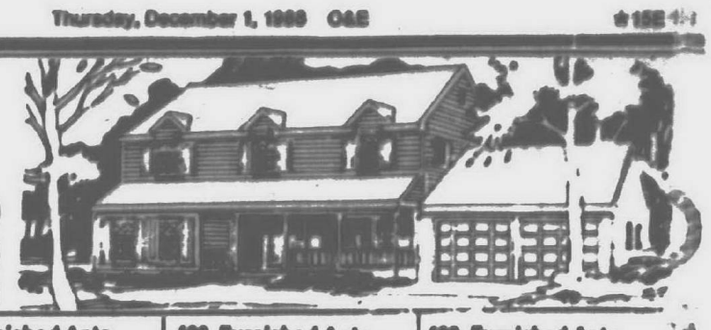

Travel Maple Road to Drake Road; turn north and drive through the woods, to the summit of the hill, and enter ALDINGBROOKE through the manned gatehouse on your left.

Note: Limited number of short term executive rentals available. 1 and 2 year leases being offered.

Who says lake living's just fun in the summer?

If you think saving money's fun you'll love living free at Schooner Cove for 30 days. Plus you'll love the 365-day pleasures of living on Ford Lake. In winter, the cross-country skiing, snowmobiling, snowman-building, ice-skating and ice-boating are tops. (So is the indoor fun of watching the snow fall through your balcony window.) You'll especially enjoy the totally new interiors from appliances to cabinets to designer decor. So your days will be pleasant, inside or outside. See all that these free contemporary 1 and 2-bedroom apartments can offer you. Now.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, You make me see everything & show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me & You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you, my Loved One, in Your perpetual glory. Amen.
