CBE's political financing status eyed

staff writer

The Wayne County Clerk's office has sent a letter to Diane Daskalakis of Citizens for Better Education, informing her that it has reason to believe she is in violation of the state Campaign Finance Act.

"We've had an awful lot of inquiries on this one from quite a few voters. All we can do, because of all the inquiries, is to send her a notice saying we have reason to be-lieve she should be filed" as a political action committee, said a clerk's office spokes-

Failure to file is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $1,000.

CBE, a group of Christian conservatives founded by Daskalakis, is supporting Robert Anderson Jr. of Canton, a candidate for school board. The election is June 12.

A COUPON in a CBE newsletter mailed to district residents during the past week asks recipients for donations. The coupon doesn't specify how the money will be spent. However, "electing a new school board" is among the goals the CBE newsletter lists.

Bradley Wittman, supervisor for the state's Bureau of Elections, said "in order to determine whether any kind of violation might be occurring here, you have to determine whether an account has been established to collect funds for the purpose of supporting a candidate.

'As soon as a committee comes out and supports or opposes any candidate, the $200 threshold comes into play."

Neither Anderson nor Daskalakis would say whether the Anderson campaign has received $200 or more from CBE.

"I am here, and I'm in favor of his (Anderson's) candidacy. What comes of it is yet to be seen. I don't know what kind of help he needs," said Daskalakis. "There are always the standard things that need to be done

Repairs due for railroad crossing

By LeAnne Rogers staff writer

State officials are calling for improvements to the railroad signal system and crossing rehabilitation at the CSX track intersection at Haggerty Road in Plymouth Township.

Trains are often slow in approaching the crossing, and a signal system is needed to warn traffic better, said Clarence Magoon, a state Department of Transportation official. The work would take one to two weeks and traffic would be rerouted, Magoon said. Starting day of the repair work hasn't been determined.

Some emergency repairs, which will not require the crossing to be closed to vehicles, have been tenta-tively scheduled for next week, said Tom Frost of the CSX Transportation engineering department.

"If and when we rebuild, we will have to coordinate with the road authority for a full or partial closing of the road," he said. "We would prefer a full closing. We will have a better idea about a rebuilding after next

To rebuild the crossing, the railroad would have to resurface it and install new ties, Frost said. Sections of rail may need replacing, he said. The company has not determined the extent of the repairs that will be done at the crossing, Frost said.

THE RAILROAD crossing rehabilitation is aimed at giving drivers a smoother path over the tracks and eliminating the need to reduce traffic speeds below the posted level. Vehicles that haven't reduced their speeds have been damaged, officials Plymouth Township public services director Paul Jones said state inspection of the crossing was scheduled in response to citizen complaints about the four-track crossing.

'You have to slow down below the speed limit at the crossing and you might get rear-ended," Jones said. "It can also be very rough on your car or truck undercarriage."

Educational inequality is a persistent problem for Michigan's public school districts. Wealthy districts are able to pending bridging the gap provide their students with high-

tech educational options that might even make a small college envious, while other districts have trouble providing each student with a textbook. The problem isn't the suburban-urban gap, or the suburbanrural gap, envisioned by many legislators. There are vast differences among suburban districts as well.

Even in financially stable western Wayne County communities, the education a student receives could well depend upon which side of the street he

While the state aid formula was long ago drafted to provide at least rough equality among Michigan's public school districts, it's difficult to find a district, whether rich, poor, or in the middle, that believes the formula doesn't need re-formulating.

In this series, Observer reporters examine the problem of educational inequality.

By Doug Funke

Public school financing reform has become the key legislative issue in Lansing this year.

Long-running resentment between rich and poor public school districts, and among taxpayers, has spilled over into heated debate among legislators.

"The problem has finally time," he said. AT FIRST glance, differences are enormous

Administrators in less wealthy school districts like Garden City and Redford Union talk about scrimping and saving as they search for federal grants and beat the bushes for community donations of equipment and supplies.

Meanwhile, administrators in wealthier districts like Southfield and Livonia talk about being able to provide advanced science and language classes, some with les than 10 students, as well as fulltime instructional aides in each kindergarten class.

Education already is big business in Michigan.

Public schools statewide collected $5.7 billion for grades kinder-garten through 12, adult education and special education programs during academic year 1986-87.

That figure, according to Wallace Beggs, a state education department financial consultant, breaks down to: • $3.7 billion in locally generated property taxes.

• $1.8 billion in state aid. • $234 million in federal dol-

There are major differences in how individual districts raised that

SOME SCHOOL districts, such as Livonia and South Redford, receive almost all their operating revenue from local property taxes. Others, like Garden City, count on state aid as their major revenue Redford Union and Wayne/Westland are also among districts that derive roughly half their revenue from the state.

Districts spent different amounts per pupil, too.

Plymouth-Canton is spending $3,523 per student, according to Wayne County Intermediate School District figures, while South Redford spends $4,850. Nonetheless, Plymouth-Canton has a higher school property tax rate than South Education: An equal shot for all?

Some argue that the quality of education shouldn't depend on where students live. Others question whether equity is even a real-

Still others argue social factors, not per-student spending, play a greater role in whether students succeed or fail in the classroom.

Demand for property tax reform further complicates the entire school financing question.

THE INABILITY of the state legislature and the governor to reach a consensus on a reform school financing/property tax package to present to voters illustrates the scope of the problems.

"It's a very complex issue," said Frederick Ignatovich, a professor of education at Michigan State University. "It gets so complex, sometimes you get hung up on emotional many new spending initiatives. Are state policy makers wrong to link property tax reform to school financing reform?

State Rep. William R. Keith, D-Garden City, chairman of the House Education Committee, doesn't think so.

"EVERYONE'S GOING to say, 'what's in it for me?' " he said.

Under state law, trains are not subject to tickets for blocking intersections longer than five minutes, Jones said. He said the Haggerty-Plymouth Road crossing has a worse problem than most since the crossing is almost in the railroad switching yard.

CSX Plymouth yardmaster Harry Rodman said that on May 3, 19 trains moved east through the cross-ings and 17 trains moved west.

Hands-on education

Students learn how businesses operate

By Mary Rodrique

Industrious Wayne-Westland teachers put their students to work in ventures ranging from a candy making business to video production in projects financed by a small grant from the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

"Hands-on learning is especially valuable for special education students. It removes the abstract from learning. It's fun and motivational," said Betty Kwierant, whose Hoover elementary special education and learning disabled students established a candy making business with the $365 she received.

Kwierant received the money in time for a Valentine's Day sale. Before Easter, the group sold 1,000 pieces of candy — far more than Kwierant anticipated. Sometimes the students work one on one with para-professionals. Sometimes they work side by side, assembly line fashion. A Mother's Day sale rounded out this school year's agenda.

The original $365 grant allowed Kwierant to buy chocolate, various molds, aprons — even a small refrigerator. The sales to other students in the school have generated enough money to ensure continuation next year.

"WE'RE AT a break even point. We're not in this to make a profit," Kwierant said. "If we do make a profit, we'll make a donation to the school library."

Two different classes are involved: educably mentally impaired students in grades four to six, and learning disabled youngsters in grades one to three.

"It helps them learn fine motor coordination, money skills, time skills, and pre-vocational skills which will be a part of their future," Kwierant said. "I had no idea we would do so well."

This week the students were treated to a class trip to the Jiffy cake mix factory in Chelsea for a look at how the pros do it.

Barbara Dankert, a teacher at Patchin Elementary in Westland, received a $232 grant that allowed her fourth grade students to hook up via video with pen pals at Lincoln Elementary in Anaheim, Calif.

Activities included two video productions, a baking project, letters, a holiday ornament exchange and sending the West Coast class a Michigan products basket containing goods manufactured in the state.

OTHER GRANTS obtained by teachers in Wayne-Westland included $440 for a film class at Wayne Memorial High, which brought in noted documentarian Peter Davis to discuss his six films, screen his recent work "Mandela" and view students' work on Apartheid.

Walker Elementary teacher Jan Brown spent her $500 grant on an outer space colony for American history students. Costumes were bought to enhance lessons on various time periods. A $500 grant at Wayne Memorial allowed a mobile telecommunications system to replace a slow system that required students to leave the classroom.

Two other grants enhanced reading programs at P.D. Graham and Fischer elementary schools. Hicks elementary teacher Robert Kover snared a $660 state mini grant for a self-sustaining business operated by special education students.

GARDEN CITY Schools grants coordinator Cheryl Willett was so impressed with response of her district teachers that an additional $1,799 was allocated from the local curriculum development budget to finance the projects.

"We felt the ideas were so good,"

"We felt the ideas were so good,"

We find the best changes occur closest to where the kids are, so we funded our teachers to do their own curiculum desclores to do their own cur-

A well-rounded group of teachers from elementary to senior high, special education to adult education, were recipients of a dozen mini grants in Garden City, ranging from from $125 to $427.

KAY PAUPORE, an art instructor at Garden City High, used $400 to bring in a visiting teacher from Japan to teach Japanese character making using Japanese brushes and ink. "And it was nice to have the correct ink. It worked out really well," Paupore said. "And it was really enlightening."

ALSO LEARNING more about Japan were fourth grade students in Henry Ruff Elementary, where teacher Betty Ann Navoy got $280 for ethnic enrichment.

"Originally we planned to go down to the International Institute but they were closed for renovations," Navov said.

The closure was a blessing in disguise, she said.

Instead a staff member from the International Institute came to class armed with Japanese artifacts, kimonos and games. With the extra money, Japanese musicians performed another day for the children. And finally, the district's Japanese teacher in residence came in and cooked rice balls, green tea and rice crackers with the students.

"The kids had a ball and we got more than we bargained for," Navoy said. "It was really a positive experience for the kids."

Other Garden City grants were $250 for a computer touch window at Lathers Elementary; $415 for a creativity project at Garden City High; $425 for a puppet theater troupe at Memorial Elementary; and

That is exactly what kindergarteners in Vandenberg Elementary School in the South Redford School District were lucky enough to do thanks to a small grant from the Wayne County Intermediate School District

Teachers Dorothy Richie and Barbara Silberberg used the $300 grant plus a $50 c ntribution from the Vandenberg P FO to buy a toaster oven, cooking materials and food for classroom projects.

"The teachers use cooking as a vehicle to integrate language arts with actual hands-on experience, such as teaching math skills," said Nina Robins, Vandenberg principal and grant coordinator for South Redford Schools.

The children served the soup to their parents on a special day when parents were invited to the classroom.

"The cooking is used periodically to augment classroom activity," Robins said. "Another time, they were working on the consonant B and made bear shaped cookies."

For four years now, WCISD has been doling out mini-grants, this year, $50,000 worth in increments of $500 or less. The Michigan Department of Education contributed an additional $16,471 for 29 grants of up to $750 each.

"One hundred and ninety-eight teachers were awarded county minigrants. Twenty-nine won state grants," said Marge Dushane, grants assistant for WCISD.

The philosophy behind the grants is "to allow teachers to implement creative approaches in their class-room to improve education in Wayne County," according to Dushane.

Everything from puppet making for speech-impaired students to Japanese character making at Garden City High was included this year. Recipients of the awards will be honored at a reception for teachers Wednesday, May 24 at the intermediate schools education center.

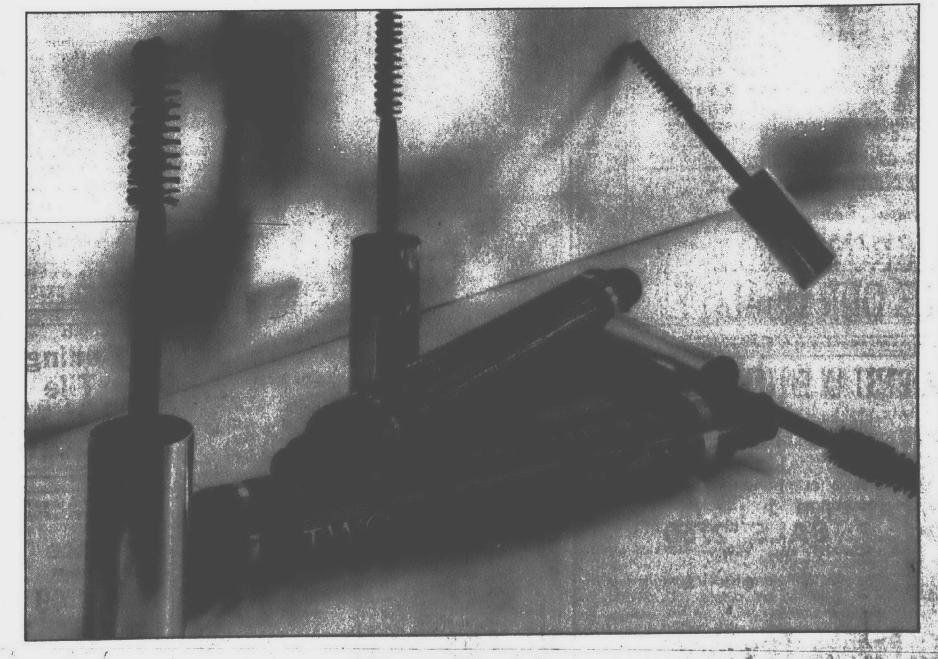

Grants were awarded in South Redford, Redford Union, Plymouth Canton, Wayne Westland and Garden City. Livonia Schools did not participate.

In addition to the kindergarten cooking class, South Redford received grants for an assertive discipline plan where children earned small rewards for good behavior, and a state grant for a children's authorship program to help special education students improve their shift ty to communicate likes through processing. # State aid loss poses problems

staff writer

Out-of-formula school districts are considered wealthier than their informula peers, but sending your children to public school in an out-of-formula district is no guarantee they'll get the best education money can

There are exceptions to every rule - just ask the folks in South Redford and Plymouth-Canton.

The South Redford School District, for example, is an out-of-formula district with an image problem.
"It's ironic, really," Superintendent Jan Jacobs said. "People hear that we're out-of-formula and they lump us in with Bloomfield Hills.

"BUT WE'RE facing some severe money problems here," he said. "Sometimes it's a battle just getting people to believe that."

The 3,018-student district sliced $500,000 from its budget and cut two positions from its 130-member eaching staff this year, Jacobs said. Because enrollment in the district is increasing, there will be a higher student-teacher ratio and less money spent to educate each student.

South Redford receives no state aid for basic classroom programs and even though it spends more per student than most in-formula districts, the difference is shrinking every year.

The $4,664 spent per pupil in South Redford this year is an 11-percent increase over what the district spent five years ago. That figure includes an additional 0.85 mill approved by voters in two separate elections last

Nearby Inkster, however, is spending $3,618 per student — a 40-percent increase over the same period. Wayne-Westland, also in-formula, is spending $4,231, a 32-percent rise

JUNE 12, South Redford voters will be asked to approve a Headlee override to increase their taxes fur-

"I think the voters will realize that in order to provide a better education they're going to have to continue to be supportive," Jacobs said.

FOR Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, the problem isn't being out-of-formula, but getting there. The 15,000-student district is in the transition process and is scheduled to lose its state aid next fall.

District officials consider the move a mixed blessing.

On one hand, Plymouth-Canton will have "a better future" as an outof-formula district, according to Raymond Hoedel, associate superin-endent for business and operations. "We're going to have more money available for more projects based on our millage rate," he said.

But Hoedel said the transition has created a financing problem this year that could have long-term effects for current students. While district assessments increased by $4 million last year, the district lost more than $5 million in state aid.

Beginning next year, Plymouth-Canton will have to work harder to maintain its image as a "quality district," Hoedel said, referring to the downside of being out-of-formula.

"If the community drops its support and refuses to pass a millage you don't have that crutch of state aid to fall back on," he said. DISTRICTS CAN fall out-of-formula for a number of reasons. If property tax assessments rise sharply, if enrollments drop, if a district's miliage rate increases, or if any combination of these factors occurs, then the district could lose state aid for basic classroom programs. Out-of-formula districts do receive relatively small amounts of state money (typically 1-5 percent of their operating budget) for other

Of Michigan's 562 public school districts, 520 are in-formula.

The majority of out-of-formula districts are concentrated in suburban Oakland and Wayne counties.

Only five of the 14 districts the Observer looked at for this series are in-formula. They are Wayne-Westland, Garden City, Inkster, Redford Union and Clarenceville.
"BEING AN in-formula district is a constant struggle," said Mike Shibler, Clarenceville Public Schools superintendent. "You're locked into what the state guarantees and that's just not sufficient to run a big program with all the frills like extensive foreign languages or big-budget extra-curricular activities." But Shibler said efficiently run informula districts offer g preparatory education and may even outshine out-of-formula districts when it comes to educating students who aren't college-bound.

One of the most comprehensive vocational education programs in the state, he said, is offered through in-formula Wayne-Westland's William D. Ford Vocational/Technical Center.

This semester the center has approximately 1,750 high-school students enrolled in 23 programs, according to principal Edwin Ferguson. The center offers career training in fields ranging from culi-nary arts and graphic design to welding and auto mechanics.

In 1972, some 29 percent of the state general fund budget went to schools; today it's only 7.4 percent. More and more districts go "out of formula," meaning they're deemed rich enough to require no state aid. Winners: social services and prisons.

Smoothing out per-student spend-ing among rich and poor districts and boosting state aid aren't the only tasks at hand.

There's also tremendous public support for redscing scaring school operating property taxes, particularly because residential assessments are rising faster than the rate of consumer price inflation. Back-to-back increases of 15 percent are common in stable suburbs, like Livonia. In rapidly growing Plymouth Town-ship, increases are even higher.

NUMBROUS "reform plans" have there's some movement for ear-.marking," said Fessler, referring to Senate majority leader John Engler, R-Mount Pleasant. Republicans have a 20-18 majority in the Senate. In Fessler's mind, the big issue is soaring assessments.

ing for property tax reduction," said Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn. "It's going to take bipartisan cooperation. I don't see it yet." Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, sees every issue as raising many ques-tions. After conferring with House minority leader Paul Hillegonds and Republicans on the Education Committee, she said:

By Mery Rodrique staff writer

Redford Union High School is a blast from the past -1954, according to the cornerstone.

Its narrow, dimly lit hallways make it a good candidate for one of those TV shows nostalgic for the 1960s.

But officials in Redford Union, Garden City, Clarenceville and other financially pressed school districts say they are moving with the times, though it takes student, staff and community support.

Shoestring budgets, they said, need not translate to shoestring education.

"We have a very supportive community here," said Robert Schramke, in his 16th year as principal at Redford Union High School. "They've never defeated a millage (request). They don't have to say much more than

New this school year is a program to identify and help students at risk.

"TT'S NOT a big secret that there are a lot of dysfunctional families out there — a number of kids who really need our help," Schramke said. "We got a group of teachers together under Bob Green to adopt a number of students. That was somewhat successful."

Things like a learning skills workshop staffed with volunteer teachers and peer tutors don't require a lot of money. Schramke is very aware of the budget constraints of an in-formula district.

"Our teachers do a lot of volunteering," he said. "We get an awful lot of teachers who are very concerned about kids - they don't leave when the bell rings.'

Neither apparantly do students once they graduate. RU has an unusually active alumni association, with more than 8,000 members.

'We have some very successful people, all over the world," Schramke said. "We are looking for a big million dollar donor. There are so many things we could use the money for if we get an endowment fund.'

Currently, the association is raising $40,000 to modernize the school auditorium, primarily by providing a new lighting system. About $8,000 has been raised so far.

"VOLUNTEERS FROM the community who are electricians will put the electrical work in place," Schramke

GARDEN CITY officials also praised their communi-

"I've said (to administrators) go out and see what people will give us," Superintendent of Schools Michael Wilmot said. "We've gotten everything from new cars to three ring binders to motorcycles. We deal collectively with every major issue."

All junior and senior high students are on a six hour day, there is a comprehensive computer program, a novel teleconferencing hookup with students in Japan, a full range of extracurricular programs including music, art and physical education in elementary schools, and a comprehensive computerized curriculum review process. Almost half of all Garden City graduates go on to

Superintendent Michael Shibler is so confident students get a good basic education in Clarenceville, he began guaranteeing diplomas a year ago June. Like a brand new appliance, Clarenceville graduates can enter the job force with a warranty — this student guaranteed to be proficient in reading, writing and math or employer is entitled to send graduate back to night school at

But Shibler hasn't had any takers yet. That's probably because another district policy is a ban on social promotions. Students must be 70 percent proficient in the basics to move to the next grade level.

"Every student eligible for graduation last year did receive a diploma," Shibler said.

Although superintendents would like to see education comparable on a geographical basis, they don't foresee solutions from Lansing.

"It's too political," Wilmot said.

Reform: Dollars and sense

By Brian Lysaght and Diane Gale staff writers

Education is more than a dollars and cents issue, area school

"Lack of money should not be used as an excuse for poor student performance in basic areas," said Superintendent Michael Wilmot, whose Garden City Schools are currently saddled with a $600,000

Wilmot and other educators believe a variety of factors, including parental involvement, peer pressure, family expectations, and parental education levels are more important than dollars spent per student in boosting classroom performance and encouraging students to stay in school.

MONEY ALONE isn't enough, they said.

An examination of the number of students who continue their education beyond high school produced evidence to back that argument.

For instance: '

• Plymouth-Canton spent $3,377 per student last year, the lowest level among districts surveyed for this article. Birmingham spent the most, $6,170 per student. Yet, the two district's dropout and college bound results were similar. While 85 percent of Birmingham students continued their education beyond high school, 81 percent of Plymouth-Canton students did likewise. At Redford Union, 45 percent of students continued their education, the lowest level among districts surveyed, though that district spent nearly $300 more per student than Plymouth-Canton.

Despite that, Redford Union's 7 percent dropout rate wasn't substantially higher than that of Plymouth-Canton where five percent of students failed to complete their education. Nearly 99 percent of students failed to complete their education.

cent of all Birmingham students complete their education.

Educators aren't saying money isn't important, however, and are constantly campaigning for more money.

"IF YOU have more money you have more resources to give kids so they can do better," Wilmot said.

More cash buys better supplies, modern equipment and varied class offerings, educators say, but it doesn't ensure high test scores or student motivation. "If I want to raise test scores I can do something with the curric-

"If I want to raise test scores I can do something with the curriculum," said Anthony Aquino, Livonia research evaluation specialist. "If you need to purchase different textbooks it might cost a lot of money. If you need to realign curriculum it might mean workshops for teachers and that's cheap."

Educators said it was hard to prove high per student spending guarantees a good education because factors used to determine student success could often be misleading.

Drop out rates are misleading, they said, because often times students return to school a short time later, they said. Individual situations, like pregnancies, affect drop-out rates the same way they affect the number of students choosing to continue their education, said Turry Davidson, Livonia research specialist.

Richard Johnson, Redford Union director of instruction, said, statistics aside, the district's best qualities are motivated families and students who want to do well in the classroom.

"We have pluses and we have minuses, and I would say finances are our biggest minus," Johnson said.
"You don't live and die by each year's data, each class has its own personality."

Districts surveyed for this article include Garden City, Wayne-Westland, South Redford, Redford Union, Plymouth-Canton, Birmingham, Farmington and Livonia.

How schools are getting by with less

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

For superintendents of the area's smaller, less wealthy school districts, educational inequity isn't an abstraction.

It's something they live with every day.

For Garden City Superintendent Michael Wilmot, inequity means his squeaky, shakey chair isn't replaced because his district has to put repair money to use else-

Taxable income behind each student in RU, a district of working class neigh-borhoods without much business or industry, is $41,988. In neighboring South Red-ford, industrially-rich and out-of-formula, taxable income behind each student is $125,631. "(South Redford) is part of the same township," Erick-son said. "We're in the north and they're in the south. The difference is the railroad runs through their district, and they enjoy the industrial benefits that this brings. That's why their citizens pay lower taxes and gain greater financial benefit."

CLARENCEVILLE Schools Superintendent Michael Shibler can sympathize. The tiny Clarenceville district slices through Redford Township, Livonia and Farmington Hills and is also bordered by larger, wealthier districts like Livonia and Farmington.

"Our primary position is to change lawmakers attitudes to the disparity of in-formula districts," he said. "We must become politically active, to provide lobbying activities to change the manner in which schools are fi-

It wasn't supposed to be like this, school officials and

In-formula districts, like Garden City, Redford Union and Clarenceville, receive a major portion of their operating budget from state aid. State aid was supposed to bring them into rough equity with wealthier districts.

But school officials said the current formula still leaves their districts far behind.

Then, too, the unpredictability of state aid shares can take budgeting a nightmare.

Minor fluctuations in the number of students can cost in-formula districts thousands of dollars.

Those years when our enrollment doesn't reach expected levels, we must cut back programs to accommodate our loss," RU's Erickson said. "The frustrating thing is the budget must be prepared by the end of June, without knowing the state aid formula or enrollment."

Unexpected loss of 100 students a few years ago cost

Voters in Clarenceville and Redford Union have recently raised taxes - even though the move costs average homeowners an additional $100-$150 a year.

Garden City, meanwhile, has been in deficit since 1983-84. Each year, the district must present a deficit reduction plan to the state for approval.

"IF WE ARE moving in a positive direction, they have allowed us to extend our plan," said Richard Witkowski, director of business services. Thus far, the district hasn't had to eliminate classroom programs. Officials admit the cost has been high.

Equipment replacement and building maintenance are slack, as evidenced by Wilmot's broken chair.

Even though have haven't campaigned for a miliage increase for day-to-day classroom expenses, the district recently asked voters for a $12.5 million hand issue to spruce up Garden City High after nearly two decades without change. It allows for updated science and academic laboratories, as well as library expansion, it also means new chairs, desks and hallway floors in the elementary exhalics.

A 3.5 MILL increase Redford Union voters approved last September will help that district get out of debt, restore programs like elementary physical education, music and art, and arrive at an interim settlement with

Bowman: SEV rise good sign

The State Tax Commission reported state equalized values (SEVs) for the state rose 8.16 percent overall in 1988 to $128.8 billion. One-third of the increase was due to new construction, the rest to rising values, Treasurer Robert Bowman said.

There was an 8.65 percent increase in real estate (land and buildings) to $112.7 billion and a 4.86 percent increase in personal property (machinery, equipment and inventory) to $16.1 billion.

The increase in SEVs represents a strong and vibrant economy in Michigan," Bowman said. "Nearly one-third of the increase can be attributed to new construction, something I believe we haven't seen since the building boom of the early '70s."

A breakdown by class of property:

Commercial valuations increased by 10.3 percent, down from

• Residential valuations increased 9.6 percent due to increased new construction, up from 8.2 percent the previous year.

• Agricultural valuations decreased by 0.4 percent overall, compared to a 4.5 decline in 1987.

Equalization is a process to ensure that similar properties in different areas are not over or under assessed in relation to each other.

'Older cities' development plan faces debate

We think it's good public policy to not encourage companies to go into green fields," said Dewitt (Dewey) Henry, director of Wayne County's Department of Jobs and Economic Development.

THE BIG FOUR are County Executives Ed McNamara of Wayne and Dan Murphy of Oukland, Detroit Mayor Coleman Young and Macomb Board Chair Mark Steenburgh.

Collectively, they have no legal authority and no staff, though they bill themselves as the "Greater Detroit Economic Development Group." They are trying to exercise political leadership to influence state Commerce Department poli-

"Our principals feel, because of the severely competitive nature of economic development, we have to find areas where we can agree,"

Henry said last week during one of SEMCOG's county meetings to put out the brushfire of revolt.

Although the region has seen six years of economic growth and declining unemployment, Henry said, that growth has come "in pochets." Left behind are Detroit, Pontiac

Graham questioned the use of certain materials, including the Metro Times, an alternative urban weekly newspaper.

When the story broke, the newspaper covered the issue, and its headline on the cover said: "Banned in Plymouth?"

It was a bit much.

The reaction was out of proportion to what happened. But it brought up a larger issue that is probably helping the pro-tax increase forces in Plymouth-Canton. It's the issue of classroom

Graham isn't a member of Citizens for Better Education, but is a fellow traveler. CBE is opprosed to both the 4-mill increase and 8-mill renewal and claims that R-rated movies are shown in the schools and Satanism is taught.

The visit wasn't bad as everybody seems to have made it out, but it has given the pro-tax Increase campaign a clear cut issue.

And we hope they run with it.

Another good sign for the tax increase was the endorsement of both questions by the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce. The chamber is a good mainstream organization that took a tough look at school financing.

However, the chamber's endorsement did have cone caveat — that a study, from a business member's perspective, be done of the school district's financing after the election.

That's something we'd like to see happen. But things often fall through the cracks after an election. We just hope this isn't one of them.

The chamber's wish for such a study suggests that the group is a bit skeptical of school financ-

But the issue that has stirred most of the debate is the visit by school board member Barbara Graham to the high school classroom of Barbara Masters.

MILLAGE MADNESS: The I Care Committee has been hurt again by worksheets it handed out to residents to figure out their taxes and to show them how much their taxes would go up, if the 4mill tax-increase proposal is approved.

When the committee first passed out the forms, they said they were correct. Later they said they were wrong. Now, they say they are correct.

It's got us and probably plenty members of the public confused. And that's not good. A tax-increase campaign in the Canton-Plymouth community needs all the help it can get. It's fighting a history of tax-increase defeats.

And when it looks like the tax-increase committee doesn't know what it's doing, it hurts. The credibility of the campaign has been damaged.

It looks like the committee could have used some more help when developing the worksheet. It should have been sent around to tax experts in the school system and government for review before being sent out.

The latest is from Diane Barnes, school finance director, who says the forms are correct. Let's hope they are, and let's get on with the

FOR YEARS I felt responsible for it. That nasty business with the BB

All of my friends had them. There were single-shot models, carbine repeaters, pistols.

Mine was a 50-shot, pump-action beauty that was a gift from an uncle who had been, at various times, a policeman, a suilcr and a railroad man. My mother was less than thrilled with his choice of a birthday present for an 8-year-old, but she let me

I felt sick. I wanted to throw up. I put the gun down, took the small body to the back of the yard and buried it. I took the gun inside and put it away. I didn't touch it for months.

BUT ONE DAY my friends and I were playing cops and robbers, using our thumbs and fingers as pistols and saying things like "Bam! Bam! You're dead!'

Someone suggested we get our BB guns, take the pellets out and use the guns in the game. At least they made a clicking sound when you pulled the After a few minutes of that, and

But when someone fired a pellet at my leg, it bounced off the jeans with no damage. So the game continued, with live ammunition.

Then it happened. I stuck my head around the corner of our front porch, just as one of my friends pointed his Daisy carbine around the edge of the house and pulled the trigger. The BB got me right between the eyes. It didn't hurt, but blood was dripping onto the porch railing. For a few seconds I didn't move. In my mind, I saw a bird falling from a tree branch.

When I realized that I wasn't dead or blind, I told my mother I had fallen on a rock. She knew better. But she was too worried to be angry. My father called it a "damn fool stunt." Nobody, including me, blamed the kid who had shot me. We were all to blame. At least, that's the way we felt then.

WE DIDN'T HAVE television, you see. We didn't have social scientists and action committees and concerned parents blaming the tube for instilling in us the notion that violence was a way of life.

No one was saying that it really wasn't our fault, because some electronic device was brainwashing us to believe that it was OK to go around shooting each other. And no one suggested legislation to ban the kind of guns that did the dirty deed.

We were just kids playing cops and robbers, and we got a little car-

Our schools

More state aid is not enough

77HY DO some public school children receive a better education than others?

The question has tied the state Legislature in knots this past year. It is also the focus of the guide to local schools that appears elsewhere within these pages.

Observer Newspapers reporters examined the question from all angles. They compared local districts not only with each other but also with the districts to which our schools compare them-As material was gathered, several factors became clear.

Michigan's current school aid formula is a failure. Although designed to smooth out financial differences between rich and poor school districts, gross inequality still exists.

Far too often, the quality of a child's education is dependent upon his or her address. The situation is indefensible morally, let alone on legal grounds, and can hardly benefit a society that increasingly demands well-educated, welltrained workers.

It is not as if taxpayers are shirking their responsibilities to local schools. In several instances, home owners in less wealthy districts, with lower property tax assessments, are paying more in school taxes than their neighbors in wealthier districts. WE ADVOCATE a change in the state aid formula, allowing taxpayers in these financially pressed, heavily taxed school districts to provide their children with an education that, at bare minimum, gives them a fighting chance for success in college or the job market. To do so, we urge Gov. James Blanchard and Senate Majority Leader John Engler to end their political posturing and lead their fellow Democrats and Republicans to an equitable overhaul of the present system.

Lansing politicians may well have to raise taxes, something they are loathe to do. A state sales tax increase could prove the most politically popular option. Regardless, more money is d for education, and no amount of political sleight-of-hand can obscure that fact.

Simply put, we need a better state aid formula, and we need it now.

But while increased state aid is a solution, it is wa partial solution. Local school boards and government also have important roles to ore receiving the "manna from heaven"

More money can buy more hardware, but hardware alone is no guarantee of a good education.

that increased state aid would bring to those districts that receive it, we urge each local school district to put its own house in order with regard to educational programming as well as finances.

MORE MONEY can buy more hardware, but hardware alone is no guarantee of a good educa-

A computer cannot benefit a child who cannot read its instruction manual.

Instead of comparing the number of computers in neighboring classrooms, we suggest districts compare the number of students who can spell properly.

Rather than comparing the number of robotics workshops in neighboring high schools, we suggest districts compare the number of students who can perform long division.

While we urge Lansing to provide more money for schools, we also urge our local districts to see to it that the money is spent wisely.

Long-range financial solutions also lie within our local districts.

While we believe an increase in state aid is necessary, we believe local districts could work more closely with local government.

Rather than complaining about their lack of commercial tax base, we urge school officials to work with city and township planners to promote business growth within their mutual territory.

WE ALSO URGE local officials to resist the temptation of commercial and industrial tax breaks, as well as tax increment financing authority districts, knowing that they rob school districts of precious tax revenue.

As we said before, when tax rates and average house sale prices were compared, it bec me abundantly clear that most local taxpayers are paying plenty to provide for quality schools. For every Plymouth-Canton, where voters have traditionally rejected new taxes, there is a Wayne-Westland, where property owners are taxed to the legal limit.

With each property tax payment, local homeowners declare their commitment to quality education. It's time for our elected officials, both in Lansing and at the local level, to do the same.

So long, my little man

A FRIEND passed away recently, but I didn't find out until last night.

Rodney joined our family in May 1983 when my wife, Barbara, sewed and stuffed a fabric baby-size doll with big blue eyes and curly red hair. I don't know his name was Rodney, but that's what his "big brother" called him, so that was his name.

Rodney's first clothing was a sweet pea Big Brother had worn five years before. He grew up to wear a Tampa Bay Bucaneers jogging suit, a present from Santa.

I knew Rodney had passed away because when I said, "Good night, Rodney," there was no answer, although he was somewhere in the bedroom and could easily hear me.

Rodney was in the bedroom somewhere because Big Brother did not go to bed without Rodney, if it could possibly be helped. Sometimes Rodney hid on the first floor, and a search had to be instituted to find him. But Big Brother expected him to be in his bed at bedtime.

Rodney had spent almost every evening of his brief life in that bedroom, occasionally visiting Gramps and Grams overnight — hidden in a pillowcase so Gramps (who disapproved of dolls for his grandson) wouldn't see him.

WHEN BIG Brother was younger, I always made a point of saying good night to both Rodney and his big brother. Rodney's big brother would say "Good night," and then Rodney would respond in that silly little voice of his, "Good night, Daadee."

Barry Jensen

Perhaps Rodney passed away because Big Brother was now in the fifth grade and growing too old.

Rodney was a big help. Sometimes Big Brother didn't want to talk about a problem or a feeling. But Rodney always was willing to.

It has been a long time since Rodney spoke to me of his own volition, but every once in a great while I'd venture a "Good night, Rodney," and he would reply "Good night, Daadee."

But I didn't say good night to Rod-ney very often; I knew the end was coming - just as the end came for nightly piggyback rides up to bed — and I didn't want to face the truth. 1 don't know why I said good night last night; I should have known better.

away because Big Brother was now in the fifth grade and growing too old. Perhaps he passed away was be-cause of the day-glow orange school safety patrolman's belt Big Brother brought home proudly last week.

Once upon a time, I had a school safety patrolman's belt, too. I grew up with a stuffed dog named for my uncle. The stuffed dog is safe in a closet in my parents' house. The dog's namesake (or is it the other way around?) is still around, having fun with his grandkids.

Perhaps his grandchildren keep stuffed animals who are their special friends. I hope so.

KIDS GROW up. This is an iron rule. Many people know the story of Puff the Magic Dragon, who lived by the sea. When his good friend, Jackie Paper, grew up, Puff slunk back into his cave, never to appear again.

I prefer to think of the boy who had a Marvelous Toy that went zip when it moved, bop when it stopped and whir when it stood still The boy outgrew the M. valous Toy, but he had a son who aked the Marvelous Toy as much as Dad.

Perhaps Rodney will entertain Big Brother's child, just as he entertained Big Brother. Jimmy Durante used to close each show with "Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are." Good night, Rodney, wherever you Within this common ground, we should all take the time to consider our responsibilities regarding the school system in Plymouth/Canton. Our family has no children, but this does not relieve us of our re-as adults in the community, we have an obligation to provide the best possible educational climate for our children. That means the widest possible exposure to ideas, opin and fact, from all points of view. Only in this way can we prepare the next generation for their adult lives. By limiting that exposure, we limit our students' opportunity to form balanced, considered opinions of their own, and that shapes a society that cannot succeed.

Yes, our taxes are too high. Yes, the educational funding process in this state needs revision. But, no, we must not make the children in our school district pay for these problems. And no, we cannot afford to let a small group of disgruntled zealots dictate the opinions, thoughts and ideas presented in our schools. We must resist the efforts of the CBE and vote for the millage increase and renewal. That is the 'right" thing

Dear Ms. Graham:

Gerald M. Jarvis,

Ms. Graham, what purpose did you have in asking these questions? What exactly would you have done with a list of all the students who had read that paper? If you had any honest use for that information, or any realistic expectation that the ents would answer such questions from an unknown intruder who refused to identify herself, then please explain, because right now I can think of only one possible reason for your actions: to frighten and in-timidate students who had chosen a class you do not approve of, and to anter a classroom when the teacher is not present, question the students, and remove educational materials from that classroom. Let's face facts this is not only a breach of etiquette, but a breach of school security as well. If this had been allowed to happen at an intermediate or elementary school, angry parents would be (quite justifiably) up in arms over the safety of their children.

It is not your actions, however, so much as your motivations which concern me. During your "visit" to Ms. Masters' class, you allegedly asked students for:

CBE is wrong

Five years ago my wife and I found ourselves looking for a place to raise our children. Our main goal was to find a community that provided a quality educational system.

At that time our cidest daughter was in the first grade and our youngest was still a preschooler. So we were looking for long term quality. We did our homework, went to the schools in various communities and talked to people who raised their children in those places. After a thorough search we chose the Plymouth-Canton area. We thought that we had it made. We could sit back and reap the henefits of a really good school system. Sure, we would get involved with our kids and their school activities and of course we would vote ties and of course we would vote "yes" for all the miliages. We understand that in order for our children to receive a well rounded quality ed-ucation we need innovative programs, quality teachers and a finan-cially sound school system. The first two years were great, everything was on target, the kids were in school and we were sitting back getting ready to watch them grow into adulthood. Then about three years ago we heard about this group called Citizens for Better Edu-cation (CBE). They claimed that there was witchcraft and satan being taught in our schools. Of course we were alarmed, and checked it out. Our findings told us there was no call for alarm and that CBE was just a bunch of weirdos looking for something, anything, to find fault with. We assured ourselves that a good sound school district such as Plymouth-Canton could not be intimidated by CBE and they would soon be forgotten. Well, about a year ago we realized we were wrong and that a group such as Citi-zens for Better Education could have a negative affect on our school system. We decided to get more involved, go to school board meetings, join some committees and do what it takes to preserve the quality, excellence and freedom that Plymouth-Canton schools have built their repu-

We are now thoroughy convinced that GBE is wrong. They are willing to destroy our school system in order to have things their way. They have taken their own personal beliefs and are trying to force them on the entire community. This is not acceptable, it is not what the public schools are intended for. We (the community) need to let CBE, and all their kind know that we will not allow anybody to control our schools based on their beliefs and views of what is right and what is wrong. That is censorship and we can not allow it to

CBE hurts the schools

To the editor:

A few years ago when we first began receiving the abourd literature distributed by Citizens For a Better Education (CBE), we assumed that there couldn't be more than a handful of people in our community who would be senseless enough to lend them support and encouragement.

CBE has since elected one of their people, Barbara Graham, to the board of education. They are working effectively to defeat a school tax increase that is essential to maintain and improve the quality of our school system; and now, we as a community must bear the embarrassment of their school board member attenuating to being the CDP. her attempting to bring the CBE viewpoint directly into a classroom.

Nothing is more valuable to the social and economic health of a community than a highly regarded public school system. The reputation of our school system is being seriously damaged by CBE. The fact that we as Plymouth-Canton residents and parents have allowed things to go this far is an absolute diagrace.

CBE's efforts are going to result in our school system not having the funds to be progressive. The publici-ty surrounding CBE's claims that our teachers are conspiring to teach witchcraft and Satanism is making our community look ridiculous an backward. Plymouth-Canton has to be the first school system since the 13th century whose primary concern is defending itself against charges of witchcraft and sorcery.

In this atmosphere, bright, innovative teachers will not apply for open positions and we will lose or discourage the bright, innovative teachers we have. Parents who can affend it will release to teams with afford it will relocate to towns with better schools or opt for private schools. Transferees and other po-tential new residents will be steered away from Plymouth and Canton

The CBE members have a perfect right as parents and residents to exir views. But they do not have to intimidate teachers, hold the progress of our school system hostage to their agenda and injure our entire community in the proce

Break-in can ruin vacation

By Julie Brown staff writer

UMMERTIME travelers will soon hit the road in search of fun and adventure. Taking a few simple steps before leaving can help guarantee that those trips are enjoyable.

Area police officials know that unoccupied homes can be tempting targets for burglars.
"Make the house appear to be lived in on a daily basis," said Chief Carl Berry of the Plymouth Township Police Department.

Travelers should remember to lock all doors, including garage doors, and windows. Even if you're just working in the yard or barbecuing, it's important to lock the front door, Berry said. Failing to do so could give a burglar a perfect opportunity to get into a home and steal something.

"When I go, I usually have my mail stopped," said Chief Richard Myers of the Plymouth Police Department. That can be arranged through the post office. If travelers prefer, a neighbor or friend can pick up mail each day at the home.

GRASS THAT'S grown too long is a sign residents may be away. 'Make it look lived in, like it would if you were there," said offi-cer David Boljesic of the Canton Police Department. A friend, relative or neighbor can mow the lawn.

Wintertime travelers need to make sure snow is shoveled regularly, Berry said. In the winter, a friend or neighbor can periodically pull a car into the driveway, leaving tire tracks and making the home appear occupied.

Newspaper delivery should be stopped, or newspapers picked up regularly, for the duration of a vacation. Ad circulars should be picked up by a friend or neighbor.

"Make sure they're removed from the door and not left there," Berry said.

Lighting, too, can go a long way in making a home appear occupied.

"There's a wide variety of products on the market now," Myers said. Floodlights surrounding a home's exterior can shed some light on the situation, making a break-in less likely. Some exterior lights come on automatically as it gets dark outside. Others are triggered by motion in the area.

Lights shouldn't be left on around the clock while residents

INTERIOR LIGHTS can also go a long way in helping make a home appear occupied. Lights can be put on two or three timers, set to go on and off at different times through-

"Timers are inexpensive and are very practical," Boljesic said. Having a neighbor stop in to turn lights on and off is another option.

Travelers can enlist the aid of friends and relatives in keeping a home safe and secure. A friend or relative can stop by periodically, to make sure everything's OK.

"I also highly recommend that people be on good terms with their neighbors," Myers said.

That's a good way to live, he said. It also makes it easier to keep a home secure. Although police officers can keep an eye on homes when travelers are away, homes can't be watched around the clock. Neighbors have the advantage of being-nearby and noticing if something's amiss.

Some people opt to give trusted neighbors keys to the home. "Obviously, let them know where you can be reached in cases of emergency," Boljesic said. OTHER CRIME prevention/

Good health makes traveling more enjoyable

United States don't need to take all of the health precautions required for overseas travelers visiting more exotic climes. Even so, it's a good idea to keep health concerns in mind when making vacation

It's best to remember that a vacation is meant to be relaxing; vacationers shouldn't get so wrapped up in getting things in order beforehand at work and at home that they forget what a vacation's all about.

"Sometimes it takes people a couple of days to be able to change gears a little bit," said Janet Zielasko, health promotions coordinator at the Catherine McAuley Health Center in Ann Arbor. That's "Usually people are pretty good about being able to relax once they get the opportunity," Zielasko said.

VACATIONERS MAY forget the importance of good meal planning while they're traveling. It's important to maintain a nutritious diet; those traveling by car can carry juice, fruit and other healthful foods for snacks, Zielasko said.

People with medical conditions such as diabetes should plan for their meals in advance, knowing when to stop and get something to

It's important to take all necessary medications with you when traveling. If you'll be gone for a while, you may need a refill or a new prescription from your doctor before leaving home.

PEOPLE SHOULD continue to take their medication regularly. Zielasko said. It's helpful to carry a card listing your medical history; that's particularly important for people with many serious medical conditions.

Information on medical conditions, such as diabetes or high blood pressure, should be listed, along with any allergy problems.

Carrying a list of all your medications is helpful, Zielasko said. Some families find it helpful to bring along a health booklet listing information on such things as immunizations for children. The names and numbers of all physicians should be included. Vacationers should carry their health insurance and prescription insurance

A FIRST AID kit can come in handy for travelers. Bandages should be included, along with an over-the-counter antibiotic ointment for cuts and scrapes.

A painkiller should be carried as cids, Zielasko said. Those antacids shouldn't be popped with wild abandon, however, it's best to check with your doctor about ongoing indigestion problems.

Travelers visiting sunny climes should bring along a good sun block with a sun protection factor of at least 15, Zielasko said. A cream to treat cases of sunburn is also help-

Sunglasses and hats can protect children and adults from the sun's rays. Drinking plenty of fluids can help avoid heat prostration, Zielasko said.

THOSE TRAVELING by car

should stop and stretch every couple of hours. Using the restroom during stops can help prevent uri-nary tract infections. Stopping and stretching is beneficial for the driver and passengers alike in that it helps prevent fatigue.

"And, of course, wearing seat belts," Zielasko said. That's the most important health and safety advice travelers can beed, she said. Trying to cover too much distance by car in one day isn't a good idea. Taking it nice and easy is a

Parishioners at St. Thomas A Becket Catholic Church in Canton held a fund-raising garage sale Thursday-Saturday, May 11-13, Proceeds will be used to equip the kitchen at the church's new Family Life Center. The sale was held in the center, even though the construction isn't quite done yet.

The sale's specialty was "bargains," said Mary Lou Tuckowski of Canton, chairwoman for the garage

"A lot of appliances, clothes."
When the doors opened for the sale
Thursday, bargain-seekers were already waiting in line. "Some people live for it," Tuckowski said.

Furniture and other items, all donated by parishioners and others, were sold as well. The sale featured "millions and millions of books," Tuckowski said.

Books that weren't sold at the church were donated to the Priends of the Canton Public Library for that group's June 3-4 used book sale at the library, 1200 S. Canton Center Road in Canton.

AT LEAST 75 volunteers donated their time and talents for the sale at

St. Thomas A Becket, Tuckowski

"I think that's super. Anybody I asked said yes. You can't do this alone.

Tuckowski got some baby-sitting help during the sale from her fellow parishioners and other friends. She and her husband have five children, so that assistance came in handy.

A sign at the sale proclaimed "Mission: Possible" and let sale workers know "When we earn enough from this garage sale - this note will self-destruct." The sign remained posted on the wall, letting volunteer workers know their strvices were still needed.

Items that didn't sell were donated to charities. This weekend is also a busy one at the church. Parishioners are holding their annual festival Thursday-Sunday, May 18-21.

Kay Hendricksen and her husband were beside themselves. Very motivated people, they found it "hard to see a kid waste himself when he had the potential to shoot for the moon, if he wanted to." That statement referred to their son,

Rose Binder began to have prob-lems with her son, Christopher, when her husband was overseas. It was "like a bomb had been dropped" on her when Christopher started getting into trouble at school.

At one time, the parents had wondered if the two 16-year-olds would finish high school, let alone go on to college. That was the past. Now, they happily recount stories of their sons' renewed interest in school, better grades and a newfound maturity.

Their sons found what they needed to move them ahead in life at a school that challenges its students not only academically, but physically. The two teens are enrolled in St. John's School of Ontario, a small private boys school operated by the Company of the Cross. In Claremont, 20 miles north of Toronto, the school combines traditional values and adventure to challenge its students.

KIRK WAS a ninth grader at Northville High School, when his mother discovered St. John's. Her son had low self-esteem and no matter what the family tried, they couldn't snap him out of it, she said.

Labeled as emotionally impaired by the school district, he did so poorly in school that even in special classes, he was only able to get 21/2 of the six credits he should have earned his freshman year, she said.

"My son wasn't motivated; he wasn't passing in school, and he didn't like it."

SCHOOL ALSO "wasn't working well" for Christopher Binder, then a freshman at Rochester Adams High School. Some success came in finishing ninth grade in an alternative education program, but school as a whole wasn't challenging enough for him, his mother said.

"He needs a lot of challenge," she said. "The more you push him, the more he thrives.

Like Hendricksen, she found out about St. John's through a newspa-per article. She used it to track down the parents of a former student to find out more about it. And in the middle of his freshman year, the Binders carted Christopher off to St. John's for an interview. They had hoped to enroll him last year, but the school said no.

"He was so negative that they didn't want to take him in and have him upset the apple cart," Binder said. "They work so hard with the boys to get them to depend on each

Christopher and Kirk are at St. John's this year, repeating ninth grade because of a school requirement that students attend at least two years and because it only takes in boys in the seventh through 10th

She discovered St. John's from an old newspaper article and immediately called the school, "We felt it was so important to find a place like this and feel so lucky that we did," she said. "It mainly helps boys who don't have motivation, goals or life worth.

the change in their sons. The boys are more mature and more responsi-ble. And academically, they are slowly and steadily improving.

"I noticed a change in him after the cance trip," Hendricksen said. He was more mature, more re sible. Before, if he didn't feel like doing something he left it for some-one else. He would leave his dirty work for someone else."

The boys are considered "out-of-towners" at St. John's. (A majority of the students are from the Toronto area.) In fact, there are five boys — Kirk, Christopher and boys from Redford Township, Rochester and

BEING "OUT-OF-TOWNERS" at the school isn't easy. Just getting back to school after a weekend at home involves taking a train from Windsor to Toronto, the rapid transit to the outskirts of Toronto and a cab to Claremont. It is the boys' responsibility to make the appropriate con-

The parents said sending their sons to St. John's wasn't an easy decision, but one made because they felt they had to do something to motivate them, something they felt the alternative, a military school,

"I had mixed emotion," Headrichnen said. "I wonder if he was going to be treated properly. But here, the school district really didn't have a place for Eirk because he didn't fit in with what they called the norm. They wrote him off or shuf-fled him to another teacher. They don't do that at St. John's here."

They get a lot of care, love and concern at St. John's that they wouldn't get at a military school," Binder said. "The discipline is very tough at St. John's; it's sort of the old way, but not like at a military school. They're strict and what they stress is respect for others and for

"There's no words to describe the" sensation the boys are experienc-ing," she said. "They don't really push the boys; they're not made to be role models, just to be they best they

Parents interested in finding 1s out more about St. John's School can call the school at (416) 471-7! 6761. The Hendricksens and their Binders also invite questions's from parents. Call the Binders as 375-0658 after 8 p.m. or the Hendricksens at 348-1362.

A school year that starts off with a 21/4-week canoe trip and includes a 26-mile snowshoe race? Sounds more like a Scout camp than a

Don't let the call of the wild or the isolation fool you. St. John's School of Ontario is neither Scout camp nor military service. It's a living experience for its students. The responsibilities are part of a carefully thought-out game plan that teaches them to depend on themselves and Affiliated with the Anglican Church of Canada, St. John's is one of three such schools in the country, staffed mainly by members of the Company of the Cross.

In the town of Claremont, 20 miles north of Toronto, the school serves "as a rescue station for young boys who, for whatever reason, are unable to blossom in the public school system," as one parent said.

St. John's is neither a country club nor a prison. It is private school, situated on an old farm. The house serves as the classroom building, and old portable buildings from a lumber camp are the dormitories.

The enrollment is only 64 boys, 12 to 17 years of age, or in the seventh through 10th grade. The school limits the grade span because those are about life values are made," head-master Rodney Voss said.

A MAJORITY of students are from the Toronto area, with students coming from as far away as Hong Kong. Five students are from the Detroit metropolitan area - Northville, Rochester, Redford Township

The boys sleep in bunk beds eight to a room. They are allowed one drawer under the bottom bunk for clothes and a portion of a clothes rack at the foot of each set of beds for their clothing.

Forget the wild clothes - T-shirts promoting this or that rock band or decorated with off-colored sayings. St. John's has a dress code. Boys wear a school uniform — although with the rural setting, there's a definite need for sturdy boots and flannel shirts for doing assigned chores in and around the school. The students play a major role in the upkeep and total operation of the

THE SCHOOL offers a traditional curriculum — literature, grammar, mathematics, science, history, French and Latin — with small class sizes (20 to 22 students per class) and a healthy dose of physical activities. In addition to the cance trip and snowshoeing, the students all participate in intramural sports.

The students also participate in honey sales door-to-door in Toronto. The sales help reduce the cost of at-tending St. John's. But even with such sales, the cost is anything but

Tuition for out-of-town students is $11,400 Canadian. The cost is $500 to $1,000 more for first-year students because of the purchase of equipment, such as a sleeping bag and

There's also a billeting charge of $25 for out-of-town students for weekends when they stay with host families rather than go home. Twenty dollars goes to the host family and $5 to the student as pocket money.

TRADITIONAL IN its methods, respect is a key word at St. John's, respect for oneself and for others. For those who lack respect, there is corporal punishment. Nothing extreme, mind you, just three swats with the paddle, enough to get the message across to the wayward stubeing out of bed after lights out, making noise during the evening study hour or not answering appropriately in class.

So where do snowshoeing and cance trips fit into the scheme of things? The cance trip teaches the boys to work together and gets them attuned to the school's philosophy of doing the best they can be. Likewise," the snowshoeing puts into practice. The idea that "if you start something, it is the idea that "if you start something, it was finish to."

PARENTS ARE involved with the 4 school. While they don't see their sons their first month at school set-b the boys can adjust to the school set-14 ting, they are there to work at the school during the canoe trip, honeyld sales and snowshoe race. The school is selective in choosing 16 students. Both the boy and his paraw ents are interviewed. The registrar 1 could turn down a prospective stu-dent or his parents if there ins't a o clear understanding of the commitment and effort required in under-co-taking the school's various pro-

O DOCENT CLASSES

Docent preparation classes will start in September at the University of Michigan Matthaei Botanical Gardens, 1800 N. Dixboro, Ann Arbor. Docents are volunteers who help introduce visitors to the world of plants at the gardens and conserva-tory. Curiosity about plants and interest in people are required; some exposure to biology or botany is helpful. The course will include a review of basic botany, coverage of topics related to the gardens' collection, tour techniques and practice sessions. During May, those interested in becoming docents may follow a tour for a first-hand look at the gardens. To arrange a tour and to obtain an application, call Sue Boss, 763-7061, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. For more information about the program, call 662-5455 or 426-5101.

Sen. Fred Willingham's version of a patient's "right to die" bill sailed through the Senate recently. But it hit lots of rocks this week in the House Judiciary Committee. One rock was Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, who chairs the House

Another is Rep. David Hollister, D-East Lansing, who said at a hearing that "no consensus is possible" as long as Dillingham insists on protecting the rights of a fetus separately from the rights of a pregnant

"That (fetal rights) is the issue, and it's going to remain the issue," shot back Rep. Nick Claramitare, D-Roseville, who supports Dilling-ham's bill and the Right to Life view.

DILLINGHAM, R-Fowlerville, is author of Senate Bill 293, which allows a patient to give a power of at-torney to another to make medical treatment decisions if the patient becomes incapacitated. It amends the Probate Code.

But if the patient is a pregnant woman, a separate "guardian ad li-tem" would have to be appointed for the fetus. Hollister objects that Right to Life wants to "use" the probate bill to insert fetal rights into Michigan law.

Hollister, who has worked 15 years on his own bill, said he would ask the governor to veto a bill with fetal rights, adding:

"The only we group we don't have (agreement with) is Michigan Right major anti-abortion group.

A STATE BAR leader attacked

'dual tests" in the Dillingham

"My clients want the power of at-torney patient advecate legislation without restriction," said John E. Bos, Lansing attorney active in the probate and estate planning council of the bar.

Bos said 95 percent of clients want to be able to grant powers to a "pa-tient advocate," while he could recall only one who "under no circumwanted medical treatment

Bos also attacked a provision of the bill known as "nutrition and hydration." It would permit caregivers to withhold food and water to "allow" a patient to die but not to "cause" death. Faced with such a difficult diagnosis, Bos said, "Doctors won't allow medical treatment to be discontinued."

REP. DAVID Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, a Judiciary Committee member, said in an interview he favored the Dillingham bill.

Rep. David Hollister, D-East Lansing. said at a hearing that "no consensus is possible" as long as Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville, insists on protecting the rights of a fetus separately from the rights of a pregnant woman.

"We ought to allow the guardian at litem (for a fetus) to make an argument (in Probate Court," Honigman said. "You have to argue on a case by case basis."

Bullard said in an interview that the number of cases in which the patient advocate for a pregnant wom-an would have to make any kind of decision are rare. "Most women of child-bearing age would never issue a durable power of attorney or living will," he said.

In the hearing, Hollister offered a compromise - rejected by Right to Life - to exempt pregnant women from the bill. Thus, a pregnant wom-an would be unable to designate a patient advocate, and lawmakers could sidestep the question of fetal

But Right to Life spokesman Edward Rivet cited the case of a pregnant 15-year-old who was shot in the head and whose parents asked that the life support system be turned off.

"There was a second life in-volved," Rivet said. "At least let there be someone to speak on behalf

A Gallup survey, done several years ago, showed that 95 percent of all Americans have heard something about organ transplants, but only 50 percent are likely to want their organs donated after death.

The survey showed that awareness of organ transplant was as high more than 90 percent - among religious groups, and as with the over-all population, the willingness to have organs donated after death hovered around the 47-53 percent

The survey also showed that less than 10 percent of members of religious groups were aware that their religions have laws governing organ and tissue donation.

And while the answers vary from religion to religion, research by agencies like the National Kidney Foundation, have found that a majority of religions support transplan-

According to the NKF, the Amish will consent to transplantation, if they are certain that it is for the health and welfare of the transplant recipient. However, they are reluctant to donate their organs, if the outcome is considered questionable.

"THE AMISH believe that since God created the human body, it is God who heals," said John Hostetler, a world renowned authority on Amish religion. He added that "nothing in the Amish understanding of the Bible forbids them from using modern medical services including surgery, hospitalization, dental work, nesthesia, blood transfusions or im-back one way or another.

Among Catholics, organ donation is viewed as an act of charity, fraternal love and self-sacrifice, and transplants are ethically and moral-ly acceptable to the Vatican.

"We encourage donation as an act of charity," said Leroy Wickoski, director of the Office of Health Affairs of the Archdiocese of Chicago. "It is something good that can result from tragedy and a way for families to find comfort in helping others.

"We do caution, however, that the organs are removed only after death and that people's wishes are respect-

Christian Scientists, on the other hand, take no specific position on transplants or organ donations as distinct from other medical or surgical procedures.

According to the First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston, Mass., Christian Scientists normally rely on spiritual rather than medical means for healing. They are free, however, to choose whatever form of medical treatment they desire, including an organ transplant. And the question of organ donation is the individual decision of church members.

The Jehovahs Witnesses, like Christian Scientists, believe organ donation is a matter of individual conscience, although the religion doesn't encourage organ donation, according to the Watch Tower Society, the legal corporation for the re-

ALTHOUGH THE group is often assumed to ban transplantation because of its taboo against blood transfusion, it does not oppose donating of receiving organs, according to the society. However, all organs and tissue must be completely drained of blood before transplantation.

Similarly, Protestanism,, while encouraging and endorsing organ donation, respects individual conscience and a person's right to make decisions regarding his or her own body, a NKF spokesman said.

The Jewish religion teaches that saving a human life takes precedence over maintaining the sanctity of the human body, although a direct organ transplant is preferred.

"If one is in the position to donate an organ to save another's life, it's obligatory to do so, even if the donor never knows who the beneficiary will be," said Moses Tendler, an orthodox rabbi who is chairman of the biology department at Yeshiva University in New York City and chairman of the Bio-ethics Commission of the Rabbinical Council of America.

"THE BASIC principal of Jewish ethics - 'the infinite worth of the human being' - also includes donation of corneas, since eyesight restoration is considered a life-saving operation," he said.

The Moslem Religious Council initially rejected organ donation by followers of Islam in 1983, but it has reversed its position, provided donors consent in writing in advance. It also maintains that the organs of Moslems must be transplanted immediately and not be stored in organ

We have no policy against organ donation as long as it is done with respect for the deceased and for the benefit of the recipient," said Dr. Abdel-Rahman Osman, director of the Muslim Community Center in

Stocks require asset manager

"Money is a terrible master, but an excellent servant."

Larry and Pam Holton, the subject of this month's profile, hope to make their money work for them. Larry and Pam, who live in Troy, are both in their early 50s. Their children are grown and have completed college. Larry earns $79,000 in an outside sales position.

While the Holtons are looking forward to paying off their home mortgage this year and doing some traveling, their biggest concern is: "How much money will we need at retire-ment, and have we saved enough?" Larry is planning to retire in 10 years and hopes to have an income with the purchasing power of $3,500 per month today. At age 62, Social Security will provide $850 per month (inflation adjusted) of these retirement needs. Larry is also entitled to receive a payment of $1,000 per month for 10 years from a former emplo pension plan. Because he will not need this income stream currently, this effectively adds another $120,000 to his asset base by age 62. The remainder of his retirement income must come from his savings.

IF HIS ASSETS continue to grow at a reasonable rate - in line with historical norms - the Holtons should be able to maintain their desired standard of living throughout their joint life expectancies. This will be likely even without major additions to their current investment assets. Because Larry will likely add additional investments over the next 10 years (they have no major financial obligations), Larry and Pam should be able to add a cushion to their current savings. Any additional investment will allow them to retire at a higher standard of living or allow Larry to retire earlier if he so chooses. Overall, the retirement goal of 10 years from now appears to be easily reachable.

If Larry's current employer does not have a retirement plan in which Larry is an active participant, he should continue to fund Individual Retirement Accounts annually for the maximum amount of $2,250 (part of which must be in Pam's name). These contributions are tax deductible and the income is tax deferred until withdrawal. The tax deferral will allow these assets to grow at a faster rate.

Perhaps Larry can encourage his employer to implement a 401(k) cash or deferred account plan. These plans allow the employee to defer compensation up to $7,600 per year (adjusted for cost of living annually) into the plan and provide for a tax

Larry and Pam have paid careful attention to their estate planning. Each of them have a will, and Larry has a revocable living trust. These types of trusts, often referred to as 'loving trusts" because they are designed to protect loved ones, are designed to provide for an orderly transition of assets between spouses and then children, and to provide for minimizing estate taxes and probate costs. We strongly suggest that the Holtons review their estate planning every four or five years to make sure that asset changes, family changes or tax law changes do not necessitate changes in their estate

Assets are often titled in the name of a living trust prior to the death of the person who sets up the trust in order to mimimize probate and taxes. Most of Holton's investment assets are already titled in the name of the living trust, but Larry should make sure the beneficiary designations on any retirement plans and IRAs are properly titled. If Larry and Pam want to retain the option of allowing Pam to defer tax on Larry's retirement benefits at his death by making an IRA rollover, Pam should be named as the primary beneficiary with the living trust as the contingent beneficiary.

We would also suggest that the Holtons consider executing durable powers of attorney that would allow them to act on the other's behalf and direct assets in the event one of them became incapacitated. Without this power of attorney, a legal guardianship would be required to con-trol the assets of the incapacitated person. Many medical institutes also require this guardianship procedure for admitting incapacitated patients. This procedure can be costly and time-consuming.

LARRY AND PAM'S investment portfolio is unusally well balanced for an individual not receiving professional advice, and they are to be congratulated on this. We note two points that they might want to ad-

First, their liquid reserve funds are currently kept in a tax-free mon-ey market fund that is earning less than 5 percent at present. Though the Holtons are in a high tax bracket, we believe they would maximize their return in a fully taxable money market fund at this time. Most of these funds are earning more than 9 percent currently, and even if a 33 percent tax is paid on this income, the after-tax return would increase to more than 6 percent. This should, of course, be reviewed periodically because these are many majors to because there are many periods in which the tax-free money market fund provides a better after-tax yield for a high tax bracket investor.

sed a considerable portfolio of individual stocks. Unless they are particularly astute or interested in spending a significant amount of time following a number of specific stock issues, they should consider putting a portion of these assets un-er professional management. This can be accomplished either through the use of mutual funds or by using an asset manager who would choose a portfolio of individual stocks for him on a fee basis. If he investigates this area carefully, he will be able to find companies that consistently produce above average returns for investors. Thus, they might be able to make more effective use of the dollars allocated to the stock market. The decision whether to use professional manage-ment is one more of personal preference than of necessity.

Although the Holtons' financial condition seems to be unusually well structured, a surprising weakness is that Larry does not have adequate disability insurance. His employer provides one year of disability coverage. Subsequently, all employment income would stop.

Larry is certainly not yet at the point of financial independence, and any disability could impair his abili-ty to reach financial goals. We would advise Larry to purchase a guaran-teed renewable personal disability income policy that would pay bene-fits against disability until age 65 if he were to be disabled. To keep the premiums as low as possible, he might want to choose a one-year waiting period. This is the period after the onset of the disability before benefits are paid.

The Holtons received an income tax refund of $4,000 for this 1988 tax year. Although it was probably nice to receive this amount in a lump sum, this money was being held by the federal government for a number of months. It could have been in the Holtons' bank account earning interest for them.

We would suggest they review their tax situation with their accountant to determine whether the 1989 withholding continues to be too high. If so, completing a new W-4 form at his personnel office would be to his

New Japanese models have Germans worried

special writer

Not since the Russians entered the Berlin suburbs have the Germans been as nervous as they are today waiting for the launch of two new Japanese luxury cars.

Not that there is even a crack in German faith in their ability to build locks, clocks and cars, but they are acutely aware that the future of the luxury car business depends mainly on what the crazy Americans are going to do next.

Automotive status in Germany still can be built with a few speed records, a couple of wins in Formula One racing and a nice display at the Frankfort auto show.

But Americans are something else in the one-upping department jumping around from Cadillacs to BMWs to Saabs to Jeeps, although mainly standing by Mercedes - a car thought of as a nice taxicab by most Germans. The only common denominator in the U.S. status business is that the car probably ought to be from some country we defeated in World War II.

Regardless, there is smugness in Stuttgart and Munich, the hallowed halls of industrial design that proPorsches. The thought that a Japa-nese auto company could knock them off the status ladder is as unthinkable as losing their lead in cameras and binoculars.

In fact, on the eve of the launch of the Toyota Lexus and Nissan Infiniti lines, the musings in Munich tend to dwell on how these upstarts aren't "established" in the American psyche as, say, a BMW is.

IT'S A STRANGE line of reasoning, considering a scant dozen years ago nobody in the United States had heard of BMW either. In fact, as recently as seven years ago, a BMW was a curiosity, not a status symbol. Twenty years ago, a Mercedes was an oddity in the back of Studebaker dealerships - and an Alfa Romeo was a more recognizable marque. Rolls Royce had a certain panache for a while, as did Jaguar.

The prominence of German status cars, when it did begin to develop sometime in the mid-1970s, seemed to be rooted in Hollywood and Wall Street. They had become distinctly expensive, well out of reach of the successful working class.

Mercedes managed to maintain a certain stodginess that appealed to phasized performance, a more youthful sporting image — just the ticket for a successful software entrepreneur or a drug dealer.

BUT CAN fame, once gained, last forever? Witness the plight of Porsche, which is shrinking so dra-matically there is talk in Germany of a government-sponsored bailout Mercedes sales are soft, and BMW continues to play brinkmanship with continually escalating prices. And then there is Audi, with troubles of

It's not only thinkable that the Japanese could inherit the upper echelons of automotive stardom, it is likely. Although my opinion is that Honda will emerge on top, rather than Toyota or Nissan. And it will take approximately five more years.

There are just two constants in the status symbol business in the U.S. car market. One is that success inevitably distributes too many cars to too many people, leading to a watering down of the image.

The second is that there isn't much interest in being second best. Beyond that, the status game is open to any-

It has been estimated that just one of every 50 ideas ever makes it through the product development process. The first step of the process is called idea generation and represents the time when new ideas are identified for potential development. These ideas may come from customers, competitors, company staff or a variety of other sources. Overall, it is the imaginative exploration of customer perceptions, needs and wants that helps a company spot new idea opportunities. This line of thinking led the Maryland Cup Corp., the world's largest producer of paper drinking straws and cups, to produce plastic food containers of all types. Customers had identified the company as being in the "disposable container" business rather than just the straw and cup business. Once the company realized this, they were in a position to identify a variety of new product

THE SCREENING step in olves running new ideas through a series of product-market screening criteria. These criteria include both quantitative and qualitative components.

The quantitative components summarize the objectives of the business in terms of sales, profit and return on investment for each new product idea. The qualitative components summarize what kind of business the company wants to be in, what business it wants to exclude, what weaknesses it should avoid, and upon what strengths and trends it should

New ideas passing screening would be those that can be transformed into product strategies the company may implement with current resources. These same ideas should also lead to the development of products that will give the company a competitive advantage - one that lasts over time.

reening, the basic product concept needs to be evaluated more carefully. At this point, no tangible product has yet been developed.

As part of this "idea ev. lation step" of the new product de elop ment process, market res at h comes important. Through concept testing research, current and potential customers help determine whether the concept is worth pursuing. If the results are discouraging, the idea would be rejected in this When testing product concepts for industrial markets, idea evaluation becomes a more elaborate endeavor. In this situation, new product ideas are seen as substitutes for existing methods of doing things.

Yield from GNMAs isn't all it's cracked up to be

Recently I had a very pleasant, but intense, argument with my client, C.B., over the true yield he is receiving on his GNMA investment. C.B. argued, quite correctly, that he receives 12 percent from his GNMA fund even though in today's market of 9 percent would appear to be guite attractive. In this article I will demonstrate the problem of cal-culating the true yield from a GNMA of the standard yield in the case of a no-load fund is relatively easy. Divide the previous 12 month's dividends by the net asset value (NAV). Then study the average maturity and the quality of the portfolio.

These two independent variables will have an effect on yield, with the old truism, "high risk equals high return," still applicable.

The next step is a bit more compli-

STANDARD YIELD: Calculation cated. Compare the yield to the latest 12-month performance.

The latest 12-month performance is the total return of the fund, which equals the sum of the dividends and the capital gains during that period added to the recent NAV, divided by the NAV a year ago. The 12-month performance figure should be greater than the yield.

THE GNMA YIELD: The GNMA yield calculation is more complicated. Assume the ABC GNMA fund shows a 12-month yield of 10.3 percent and a total return of 6.1 percent. Here is how the NAV calculaavailable after expenses ($1.70). The key to this puzzle is in the loss of investments.

The explanation lies in the fact that this fund had included in the portfolio high-coupon mortgages by buying them for more than face value. High coupons allow the fund to make large distributions, which increase the yield.

When the mortgages backing the GNMA are paid off due to refinancing or people moving, the holder receives the portfolio of the mortgage's principal assigned to the certificate. Unable to reinvest this money at a high rate, the fund loses part of the premium it paid to high coupon payments.

The investor may have thought that he or she received large dividend payments, and certainly paid tax on them, but the true yield was much less than the perceived

Let us now compare yield and performance for ABC GNMA fund for the year ending Dec. 31, 1988:

distributions - yield final NAV

31.72 - 11.4%$15.15

ending NAV + distributions = 12-month performance beginning NAV

 $\frac{15.15 + 1.72}{15.94} = 5.8\%$

Note that during 1988 the investor's wealth has increased only 5.8 percent because of the principal erosion.

Actually, things are worse than they seem, because the investor paid taxes on the money that was actually a return of capital. Technically, this situation can be corrected when the shares are sold at a loss, but most investors neglect to recognize this tax loss and hence miss that opportunity.

So the moral of the story is this: If you think you are receiving an unusually high yield on your GNMA fund, think again. It may be too good to be true.

Education trust to hold fall sign up

Parents will have another chance to enroll their children in the Michi-gan Education Trust (MET) this fall. Applications will be accepted for new enrolless during a five-day peri-od Oct. 2-6. Applicants who submit a completed application form and re-quired fee by Oct. 6 will have the opportunity to enroll their child.

"We're happy to open enrollment again for MET, the nation's first college tuition guarantee program," said Robert A. Bowman, state treas-

The decision to establish another enrollment period was based on the actuarial soundness of the fund and public interest in the program."

In August 1988, the MET held an enrollment period that resulted in 40,400 participants in the MET program and established a fund worth $265 million. The MET board of directors also received an opinion on the tax except status of the fund from the Internal Revenue Service.

"The initial IRS opinion will have no impact on the individuals participating in the MET program," Bowman said.

Dr. Richard McDowell, president of Schoolcraft Community College and MET board trustee, said price for enrollment hasn't been established yet. Last year the cost was $6,400 for a newborn and climbed on a slid-

'We had an analysis to get an idea of the age groups (enrolled)," McDowell said. "The spread is encouraging. It would've been a problem if we had too many 14 or 15 year olds — with not that much time to invest the money.

"Likewise with all newborns we would have to project tuition in-creases for the next 18 years. The good news is that (applicants) are distributed in all age groups, from newborns to 6 year olds to 12 year olds to teens.

More definitive information on the fall period of enrollment will be available after June, when the MET board meets again, McDowell said.

The MET board can't hazard to guess what response will be this time

"Last time we thought we might get 20,000," McDowell said, "and 82,000 applied and 42,000 contracts were executed."

Last summer Gov. Blanchard and treasurer Bowman traveled across Michigan to present a synopsis of the plan to groups of parents interested in the tuition earoliment program.

"If people know what they're buying, they will respond."

McDowell doesn't feel the IRS ruling will impede the program.

The U.S. Supreme Court will not use the abortion case currently be-fore it to overturn Roe vs. Wade.

That educated guess may be the only matter both pro-life and prochoice forces agree upon when it comes to the controversial issue. Edward R. Grant, a Chicago attorney and president of Americans United for Life Legal Defense Fund, told a group of pro-life proponents Friday not to get their hopes up about the pending Supreme Court de-

"I don't think we should expect that Roe vs. Wade will be overturned," said Grant. "It's too much to assume that the court, despite the new appointments, will turn around this quickly."

THE SUPREME Court is considering the case of Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, a Missouri case that stems from a state law regulating abortion. Last November, the Reagan Administration filed a friend of the court brief asking that the justices consider using Webster to overturn Roe vs. Wade. The 1973

Roe decision legalized abortion.

Pro-choice proponents agree that the Missouri case is unlikely to lead to the elimination of legalized abor"I don't believe that Roe is going to be overturned with this case," said Carmon Franco, administrator of Womancare, a chain of area family planning clinics whose services in-clude abortion. "I would like to believe that the issue has been settled."

BUT GRANT, at a speech spon-sored by Right to Life-Lifespan of Metro Detroit, said that the pro-life movement will continue its efforts to get Roe overturned. The language of the court's decision in the Missouri case could provide "ammunition to continue to bring cases to the court and continue to have this issue ad-

"I think . . . we should go in with he the case that helps us turn the corner," Grant said.

Franco said Grant's assertion that the Missouri case will not get Roe overturned is the first time she has heard of a pro-life supporter making

"THEY HAD very high hopes that this would in fact be the case," Franco said. "The mood in the country may not be as supportive as they would like it to be."

Grant told the group of approximately 50 Lifespan members that the Missouri case itself may be reversed. That case reached the high court after an appeals court struck down a state law, passed in 1984, that required medical tests be done on the fetus and put a ban on per-forming abortions in public facilities (including hospitals) unless the mother's life is in danger. The law also says life begins at conception, but the appeals court said a state cannot "adopt a theory of life," Grant said. He called that part of the law "a very important provision."

"(THE PROVISION) brings the issue of the beginning of life back before the Supreme Court in a way that has not happened since 1973," Grant

But to the pro-choice side, the

"What better way to oppress wom-en?" said Jo Isgro, a member of the Western Wayne County chapter of the National Organization for Wom-

"If they do reverse Roe vs. Wade, then they're going to go after the Pill, then they're going to go after the IUD — 'killing a potential life' they'll call it," lagro said.

ODDY MCDOWALL is a consummate actor in every medium - stage, screen, television and radio - and also is a director, writer and photo-

He is one of the few performers blessed with a brilliant, half-century-long, still-thriving career. From his broad range of media experience, McDowall has derived profound understanding of the actor's craft and the wide, interactive range of the McDowall visited the Detroit area last week to promote his newest film, "Fright Night II," which is a continuation of the successful Part I. The sequel business being what it is, it's surprising that Number III is not yet on the drawing boards.

"Fright Night - Part II" is cast in the popular vampire genre. It stars McDowall as a late-night-TV horror film host who is more debonair than courageous but, nonetheless, must face up to the sister of the vampire he (and others) destroyed, in Part I.

McDowall, who was born in England before World War II, said, "My mother wanted very much to be in the movies so she did the next best thing and got me into the movies at the very early age of 8."

"SCRUFFY," HIS FIRST film, "was made in 15-20 days and never seen, just shown once at 9 a.m. to meet the quota," he said. In those days, the British government required that a certain percentage of films shown in England had to be home-made in order to protect the British film industry from domination by Hollywood, McDowall pointed out. From ages $-13 he made nu-merous "quota" films in England

"It was a wonderful training ground for actors, like the old Hollywood studios or, in the '50s, the "Golden Age" of television in New York, a gigantic gymnasium for people to build careers because if you failed on Monday, it didn't mean you couldn't work on Tuesday."

McDowall observed, "There's so

When World War II broke out, McDowall's father thought it best his family come to America where Mrs.

Designer Susan Barrett deserves double praise for a set that not only captures the ethereal palette and delicate lighting of the fairies' wood-land world but is simple enough to move easily from Oakland University's Varner Theatre to Oakland Community College's Wallace Smith Theatre where the play will also be LIGHTS PROJECT mottled leafy designs on elongated banners sus-pended from the ceiling to create an pended from the ceiling to create an impressionistic forest as simple as it is effective. Except for a peach light that throbs when Oberon's potions are working their magic, the lighting succeeds through subtlety. That high tech light befits a gimmicky science fiction set better than the fairy world, but to quibble about a detail so small as a throbbing light is to nitpick a production that is otherwise a visual delight.

Jerry Rathgeb as Bottom strikes a happy balance between being an egotistical jerk and a dear, bumbling man. Rathgeb's Bottom lacks the crude, porcine gestures some actors bring to the role. A ham he pulls off splendidly, but he plays a Bottom too civilized to fairly be called piggish.

His sidekicks, Morris Weinner as Peter Quince, Michael Curtiss as Flute, Brian Young as Snug, Leah Smith as Snout and Markest Tate play their roles with the broad hu-mor traditional for the rustics.

Tracy Wade makes a fine, light-footed Puck with an unconventional blue belly-button. The most memorable thing about the fairy king and queen (Andrew John Young and Mary Monroe) are their dramatic, metallic costumes. With his moussed hair and diabolical eyebrows, Oberon brings to mind Jack Nickolson in much younger days.

The fairies (Mary Kay Geb, Yvonne Rosseel, Dawn Hamblin, Kathy J. Williams and Erika Wood) flit about like bothersome little sisters or pesky mosquitoes, hovering around the human lovers tickling and teasing them.

Their antics underscore the playfulness not only of the impish sprites, but of Shakespeare's magical play that makes sport of tangled human affairs, then mercifully un-

McDowall's long career includes photography. His book of photographs to be published in October includes a half-dozen photos of Bette Davis taken with a Sure-Shot. "A wonderful little camera," McDowall reports, despite the fact that most of his work now is shot with a Nikon. His photogrpahy began many years ago with a Kodak Brownie, and he also used a Rolleiflex for some time.

McDowall directed one film, featuring Ava Gardner, which he reports, "had the bad manners to go bankrupt. I'd like to direct again but not for its own sake. It would have to be something I believe in."

Tremendous experience for more than 50 years has taught McDowall a great sensitivity to performance and a good-sprited attitude towards self. He quotes Ethel Barrymore who, when asked if she had seen her latest film, said, "Good heavens, no. I never saw myself on the stage. Why should I see myself in a moving pic-

Canton catcher Jason Dembny made the putout on Salem's Steve Mantay when the latter tried to score on a ground ball by Tom Noonan in the third inning. The Rocks put two runners

Sulak stars on mound as Chiefs beat Rocks

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

With the state baseball tournament getting serious right away, Plymouth Canton pitcher Mike Sulak figured he'd better knuckle down.

Adding an effective knuckleball to his pitching repertoire, he threw a two-hitter Wednesday to key a 4-2 victory over Plymouth Salem in a qualifying game for the pre-district

The Chiefs, who hadn't crossed paths with Salem until the district final the past two years, will play at Walled Lake Central on Friday, May 26. Canton is 13-7 overall, the Rocks

Sulak is known as a power pitcher and relies heavily on his fastball, but he figured he needed a bigger arsenal for Salem, anticipating the Rocks would be looking for the heat-

"My accuracy was OK and my location on the fastball was decent. but it was the knuckleball that kept me in there," Sulak said.

"I HAD IT all last year, but I haven't thrown it that much this year. I used it as a first pitch instead of the fastball, knowing Salem knew I threw a lot of fastballs.

"I think that surprised them, throwing as many offspeed pitches as I did," he added.

Canton coach Fred Crissey said Sulak is at that point in his career when he needs to have diversity in his pitches. Throwing the knuckler and palmball more this year has helped Sulak, he said.

He's always been able to throw the ball hard, but you have to have something to go with it," Crissey said. "Before this year, he really didn't need it.'

Sulak, who improved his record to

BILL BRESLER/staff photographe

Mike Sulak fired a two-hitter Wednesday as the Chiefs eliminated Salem in the Class pre-district qualifying

4-1, seemed to get stronger as the game went on, too. After a shaky first inning in which Salem scored its only runs and having a close call in the third, he pitched to just 13 batters over the last four innings.

The senior right-hander struck out eight, walked three and hit two batters in seven innings, and he faced the minimum in the final

"USUALLY, THE first inning is my weakest," said Sulak, who has done mostly relief work this year and didn't know he was going to start until an hour before the game. "Once I get in the groove, I settle Sulak got enough support from his teammates, who had seven hits off losing pitcher Howie Blanchard and reliever Rob Kowalski. Mike Culver and Jeff Kugelman hit solo homers off Blanchard, with Kugelman's lead-off shot in the sixth chasing him from the mound.

Salem wiped out a 1-0 lead gained by Culver's homer in the top of the first when Tim Lake singled with two runners on. The go-ahead run came home on one of two errors by the Chiefs in the first inning.

"I knew (the errors) might have been a nervous reaction to the game," Sulak said, "and I still felt confident with the defense I have behind me."

Sulak got out of the first inning with a bases-loaded strikeout. After the Rocks put the first two batters on in the third, shortstop Derek Humphries gunned down the lead runner at the plate in what Salem coach John Gravlin said was the "play of the game" and later initiated an inning-ending double play.

"I told the kids one thing: 'We were beaten by Mike Sulak,' " Grav-lin said. "We didn't get to him early when we had him. His breaking pitch, which he's not very successful with, was working for him.

"WE DIDN'T expect him to throw it for strikes. We were going to lay off that stuff and sit on his fastball. When he throws for strikes, it changes your strategy a lot."

Canton took a 3-2 lead in the fifth on the same play Salem scored. The tying run came on Jason Dembny's single, but the ball skipped past center fielder J.P. LaRoche, allowing the go-ahead run to score, too.

"That's not the play that beat us, though," Gravlin said. "The guy on

With nearly 82 percent of the Western Lakes Activities Association boys tennis tournament in, Tuesday's returns clearly showed that Plymouth Canton is again the

The Chiefs proved that their unbeaten dual-meet season was not a fluke, capturing the title with a team-high 20 points, outlasting host Livonia Stevenson (17) and Plymouth Salem (16). Northville was fourth.

Five of the seven flight champions were determined on Tuesday, but championships were scheduled for late Wednesday at No. 2 singles and No. 2 doubles. The two late matches, however, had no bearing on the final team standings.

Canton coach Jim Hayes knew going in that winning the WLAA would not be easy. "I said it would be close and we were just hoping to be in the top three," he said. "If the breaks went our way, we would win." The Chiefs made their own breaks and got some help from the host Spartans to repeat as champions. BUT FOR AWHILE it appeared Salem was on the verge of winning the crown.

Going into the five finals, Canton held a three-point edge over the neighboring Rocks, 18-15.

With each school participating in four of the five finals, the outcome was still in doubt, particularly when four of the five matches were forced to a third set.

But Canton gained a share of the crown when Stevenson's Jeff Wiegel and the big serving Alan Paterson rallied to hand Salem's top-seeded duo at No. 1 doubles, Scott Hobbs and Matt Lore, a 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 defeat. The outcome was sealed when Canton's No. 3 doubles team of Brad Flowers and Jeff Hines, the top seeds, won a tense three-setter, 6-4, 4-6, 7-6 against the second seeds, Jeff Elliott and K.C. Kirkpatrick. (It was 7-4 in the tiebreaker.)

"That was a scratch and claw match all the way," Hayes said. "They (Flowers and Hines) are the ones who gave us the (dual-meet) match 4-3 against Salem earlier this

THE NO. 3 doubles final was preceeded by the No. 3 singles championship where Salem's Wade Garard downed Canton sophomore Wade Garard, 6-3, 6-2, in the battle of top

Shortly after, the No. 4 singles crown was determined as Chris Harper held off Salem's Chris Marschak in another battle of top seeds 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Harper, who is unbeaten heading into Friday's state regionals, paid the price for victory.

He cramped up several times dusing the match and walked off with his knees and hands scraped up and

"Our guys work hard and never give up," Hayes said. "I told my grys there are only two days in the year where you have to be fit and that's the league and the regional meets?"

Christian is 9-8 overall and is 7-2 since April 25. One of the reasons for the surge was the decision to put Bryan Davies back at shortstop. He started the season behind the plate.

Brett Dremick in a non-league match, was the overwhelming favorite against Gallagher, having beaten the Canton netter twice in straight-sets during the regular season.

The Budapest native won the first set handily, 6-2, but the scrappy Gallagher pulled even after winning the second set, 6-3.

Gallagher changed his tactics somewhat for the re-match, hoping to eatch the 6-foot-4 Wolff off-guard, nixing his top-spin ground strokes with a series of lobs and drop shots.

"We talked about Jimmy keeping the ball short and then sneaking in," said the Canton coach.

The strategy worked for the most part, but Gallagher began feeling the effects of a long day on the court (his third match of the day) when he started cramping up as

That was all Wolff needed as he regrouped to win the GALLAGHER'S GRITTY effort was somewhat oversindowed by the contributions from the Chiefs' No. 2 team of Jeff Binder and Scott Jones.

The Canton unseeded pair pulled off a mild surprise in the quarterfinals, knocking off Salem's No. 2 seeded team of Jeff Rearick and Mike Sell, 6-4, 0-6, 6-4.

They won a three-setter after Salem had the bye, yes. "That match was a two-point swing. Jones and Binder had a pretty good tourney.

Brian Rottinghaus and Todd Stoneman earned a spot in the finals by surprising Stevenson's top-seeded pair of Bob Dimitriou and Matt Downer, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4. Meanwhile, Northville's unseeded duo of Todd Booth and Mike Mathes also reached the final by eliminating Jones and Binder, 7-5, 6-0.

The upsets kept coming at No. 2 singles when unseeded Matt Daniel of Livonia Churchill knocked off No. 2 seed Dan Orlandi in the semifinals, 6-2, 6-2.

Daniel was not seeded because of a broken finger, which kept him out most of the regular season. (He began playing again last week.)

ON THE OTHER side of the draw, North's Tim McMinn, the top seed, cruised to a 6-3, 6-0 semifinal triumph over Salem's Ryan Bannan.

With both No. 2 singles and doubles yet to be determined, the only thing still undecided was who get second and third overall in the team standings. With the final WLAA standings based 50-50 on overall dual-meet record along with final place in the league meet, second and third was still up for grabs between Stevenson and Salem. Each team still had to make up one dual meet match today - Stevenson taking on Churchill and Salem against Walled Lake Central.

Those matches indicate that Stevenson will get second overall and Salem third.

Complete results, including the other 28 percent of the WLAA meet along with final team standings will appear in Monday's Observer.

Eighty minutes of soccer produced a winner in the Farmington-Pimyouth Canton game but spawned another debate in the Emotions were still running high at the end of Monday's game after the host Fal-cons achieved a 3-2 victory on a controversial penalty kick.

Julie Dugan's goal with time running down broke a 2-2 tie and allowed No. 3-rated Parmington to remain unbeaten. The Falcons are 6-0-3 in the Western Lakes Activities Association and 11-0-3 overall.

The Chiefs, ranked No. 2 at the start of the week, suffered only their second loss against eight victories and slipped to 7-2 in the league. Despite the defeat, Canton had already won the Western Division championship and will meet Plymouth Salem for the WLAA title at 7 p.m. Friday.

Maybe we needed something like that to get us ready for the rest of the campaign," said Canton coach Don Smith, trying to find a silver lining in the outcome. "The girls. were upset, but I think they know they can still do the job."

REFEREE IVAN Neubauer was the object of the Canton spectator's ire after his call for pushing gave the Falcons, who blew a 2-0 halftime lead, the opportunity to break the deadlock.

Neubauer, according to Canton coach Don Smith, ruled Canton defender Chris Zawacki had pushed Farmington's Elleen Momblanco in front of the Canton goal.

"There was pushing in the penalty area, which requires a penalty kick," Neubauer said. "I'm the kind of official who does award penalty kicks. I'm not afraid to make a call."

Smith agreed there was contact between the players, but he said the ball was passed them when it occurred, adding the contact was incidental. Smith said Zawacki was going for the ball, too, when Momblanco

"The ball already was in front of the goal when she ran into her," he said. "She did run into her but didn't knock her down.

You very seldom see it. You almost have to tackle someone down there in the box to get a penalty these days. It seemed strange to get one so easily.
"That's the kinda call (Neuhauer) had been making all day," Smith added. "What I really dislike is it takes the flow out of the game. And then if somebody gets decked there's no call. The girls don't know how they should play."

FARMINGTON coach Cathy Cole said she didn't see the infraction clearly but indicated it was probably not a flagrant foul.

"If he says it was pushing, it wasn't that blatant of a push," she said.

As it turned out, the penalty kick — re-gardless of whether it was a questionable ruling or the correct call - was a stroke of luck for the Falcons, who appeared headed for a shutout until Canton quickly made up the difference on goals by Jenny Russell and

"It shouldn't have happened in the first place," said Cole of the need to win on such a play. "I give Canton credit for its never-say-die attitude, and I hope we learned a lesson from that.

"It's tough when a penalty kick decides the game. I'm happy it ended in our favor, but I'd feel the same way Smith did if it was determined by records against all confer-ench rivels. It is entirely possible for a team to finish second, even third, in its division and still win the overall WLAA title.

But both sports do follow the league's philosophy. Both have three titles to battle for. As Ron Holland, the athletic director for the three Farmington high schools, explained:

In girls succer, the division winners meet to decide who will be the overall conference champion. This year, Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem will battle for the title at 7 p.m. Friday at CEP. Jack-in-the-pulpit's name was derived from it's unusual shape. It reminded the early-hotanists of a preacher standing in his pulpit while delivering a sermon. Ex ing a spike-like spadix (jack, or the preacher) is a striped cup-shaped structure with a pointed flap that covers the top. This enclosure reminded people of the pulpit.

AT THE base of the spike, or jack, inside the spathe is where the actual flowers are located. Like its close relative the skunk cabbage, the flowers are hidden inside an en-

In order to see the flowers one must gently separate the overlap-ping flaps of the spathe and look near the bottom. If the flowers look like threads, they are the male flowers which are probably shedding light colored pollen. Pemale flo-wers, on the other hand, look like small green berries.

When you do look inside, you may find some small fungus files. They are lurred to the flower by an order that resembles a fungus which the flies would normally lay their eggs on. While the flies are searching for their fungus, they are collecting pollen, or transferrring pollen to a female plant.

THE STALK which supports the flower emerges from the base of the plant where the leaf stalks also emerge. At the end of each leaf stalk is a compound leaf with three large rounded leaflets. A female flower will often be large and have two leaf stalks with three leaflets at the end of each stalk, while a male will have only one leaf stalk and three leaflets.

Most spring woodland wildflowers emerge and blossom be-fore the trees leaf out completely. Early emergence insures that they will have enough sunlight to produce energy. Though the flowers may wither away by late spring, the leaves will persist and enlarge so they are better able to use what little sunlight reaches the forest about you. There may be one next door or down the street or just around the corner.

Writers show winning style

From Birmingham, where Elmore Leonard pens those hot-selling suspense thrillers, to Mancelona, where Gloria Whelan crafts her prize-winning short stories, to the campus at East Lansing, where Diane Wakoski puts together her artful poetry, to a secluded spot near Lake Leelanau, where Jim Harrison creates his gritty, no-holds-barred prose - in Michigan, there's a whole lot of writing going on.

And it's not just name writers like Leonard and Whelan and Wakoski and Harrison who are involved. Listen, and you'll hear the sounds of scribbling pencils and clacking typewriters, as hundreds in this pleasant peninsula apply themselves to the serious business of putting words to Fortunately, many Michigan writers have been recognized for their efforts recently, and awarded prizes for their well-crafted prose and poetry. The following is a partial listing of those writers. While some names are familiar, most are not. Congratulations to all.

• Approximately 1,600 short stories by almost 800 authors were entered in this year's prestigious PEN Syndicated Fiction Project contest.

When authors Alan Cheuse and Laura Furman, and Simon and Schuster editor Leslie Wells, had completed the final judging, Michi-gan writers Charles Baxter and Nicholas Delbanco of Ann Arbor, Stuart Dybek of Kalamazoo and Janet Kauffman of Hudson were among the 55 winners from the United States and Canada.

Winning authors receive an initial $500 for the right to circulate their work to participating newspaper markets, and to make an audio tape of their story for broadcasting on National Public Radio, as well as additional payment each time the story is published or broadcast.

 Winners of the 1989 University of Michigan Hopwood Awards for excellence in writing included Gregory Loselle of Wyandotte. Loselle won both a major drama/screenplay and poetry award, and also received the highest award - $2,000 in the major drama/screenplay category.

Other Michigan winners were Daniel Plice of Ann Arbor (major drama/screenplay); Brett Stevenson, ton, East Lansing (minor fiction); Charles Fogel, Ann Arbor (minor fiction); Amous Maue, Ypsilanti (major fiction); Kasha Fluegge, Manitou Beach (minor poetry); Stephanie Iva-noff, Dearborn Heights (minor poetry); Larissa Szporluk, Ann Arbor (minor poetry); and Robert Sayre Cox and John Reinhard, Ann Arbor

· Reinhard was also a winner in the New Voices poetry competition — conducted by the Poetry Resource Center of Michigan — along with Gail Griffen of Kalamazoo and Barbara Rebbeck of Farmington Hills. A cash prize of $100 was

All three poets read from their work at this year's 13th annual Michigan Michigan Poetry Festival, held at the St. Regis Hotel in Detroit on May 5 and 6.

 The game was afoot recently when the "Murder in the Library Writing Contest, sponsored by the Livonia Public Library, got under Selected as the first place winner in the mystery short story competition was William Neusser of West Bloomfield. Beth Long of Farmington took home the second place award, and Robert Friar of Livonia,

Judges for the contest were author Thomas Sullivan; author William Kienzie; former editor Javan Kienzle; and Free Press book editor Linnea Lannon. Winners received cash

· Also in Livonia, Phillip Sterling of Big Rapids has won the $100 first prize in the 1989 Poet Hunt contest, conducted through Schoolcraft College. Second and third place winners respectively were Jan Mordenski of Dearborn Heights and Ed Hoeppner of Rochester Hills.

indge and noted poet Herb Scott called the judging of this year's contest "very difficult." Of approximately 800 poems submitted, "at least 100 were of winning caliber," he said.

• In the junior division: fifth grader John Webster, seventh grader Jennifer Lee Peterson and ninth grader Eustaquio Pacot Jr. shared top honors in the second annual Westland Cultural Society Student Writing Contest.

Zipper

Closing the gap for young readers

special writer

AN YOU make an amazing Moebius strip? Do you know that your car can fly? Did you know that it is against the law to sing out of tune in North Carolina, and to grow dandelions in Washington, D.C.? Are you aware that Abner Doubleday invented baseball when he was only 16?

If you read Zipper, you'll know all of the above, plus a lot more. Zipper is a new newspaper especially for children — although it's reported that parents like to read

The publisher is Diane Lewis of Livonia, mother of three, who also edits, writes, creates the original illustrations, typesets and does all layout on the fledgling periodical. In addition, she's the marketing and distribution department.

While she does have some experience in marketing and typesetting because of part-time work in the family's manufacturing business, she doesn't have a smidgen of newspapering in her back-

She is simply a concerned parent with a strong creative streak who saw a real need for something like Zipper in the marketplace, and has set out to do something about that need.

"MY HUSBAND and I read a lot, and as we watched kids (read); we came up with this theo-ry," Lewis said.

"For kids who are not great readers, books are really struggles. We thought that, if a kid had something that was more bitesized,' they could enjoy and learn, too. It would build up their reading skills, and sort of get them

But there just didn't appear to be anything on the newsstands or in the bookstores that really filled 8-12 age group.

SOMETIMES, SHE put together "bite-sized" books for her sons, to help them with school assign-

"When my two youngest would bring their vocabulary words (assignment) home, I'd write these little stories and illustrate them, and run them off on the Xerox machine. I'd use their names and their vocabulary words in the stories and they thought it was great. They'd get so excited about it, and would read those little books a thousand times and, consequently, learn their vocabulary

"So, finally one day I just sat down and started putting my stories together and I started really looking at things, seeing what my kids especially liked," she said.

"I TALKED A lot with teachers," she said, "and I began hearing the same things over and over again from them - that there was this 'gap' that existed. There were no educational tools that really to kids in the 8-12 age range in 1989. Although there are lots of things out there for very young children, when you get the 8-12 group, something happens.

"I also looked around some at what was on the market which, generally, just seemed 'fluffy' to me," she said. "We took Children's Highlights for the boys and, when they'd get it, they'd do that 'What's Wrong with this Pic-ture?' section, and that would be the end of that.'

Eventually, Lewis said she decided to stop talking about it, and to "just do something."

Almost before she knew it, she found herself in the midst of creating the first issue of Zipper.

We were looking for words that were fun when you say them, and 'zipper' seemed like one of those words. When you say it, it's

THE 20-PAGE first issue from conception to printer took her approximately three months to complete.

Most of the work was done at home, with husband Craig serving as sounding board for Lewis' ideas and sons Matthew, 12, Chad, 10, and Ryan, 8, contributing ideas and suggestions along the way.

"The boys contributed quite a bit themselves, both directly and indirectly," Lewis said.

"All of us would sit around get on a kind of brainstorming thing for ideas. One night, I just said, Did you ever wonder what it was like before Newton discovered gravity?' As stupid as that is, somehow, when you sit and talk about what you said, it opens them up, gets them thinking. I've relied on them a lot."

Diane Lewis, publisher of Zipper

SHORTLY AFTER that first issue - printed at Newsprinting Inc. in Northville - appeared in March, Lewis found out her work had just begun. Zipper had to have some readers, of course, and soon she was out on the streets trying to find those readers.

Once we'd published an issue I started going out with it, seeing what hind of reaction I'd get," she

Michigan had just changed all their reading programs in the schools - no one was saying you could only read books on a certain reading list. They were telling kids to just read, whether it was a comic book or a cereal box or whatever it was.

"Also, Barbara Bush had just come out with the literacy campaign, so I think people tended to be just a little more receptive to something geared in that direction.

"We just went around to schools, libraries, parents, saying Take a look at this. Give one to your child.' I left some off at doctors' and dentists' offices, in the waiting rooms.

"Educators and parents and some of the people who are in charge of the reading program in the state were all very supportive. In fact, we've had nothing but good reaction," Lewis said.

THE GOOD reaction included a highly encouraging letter from first lady Barbara Bush, received after Lewis sent her several copies of the just-out Zipper.

"As for my own kids' reaction, when we got the first copies home — they fought over it." Lewis that my kids just went nuts over." Feedback from other young readers along the line has also been greatly encouraging. Includ-ed in the first issue was a kind of spelling competition, for which readers were asked to mail in

THAT HAS already drawn great response, Lewis said. Curiosity is also apparently high about one of the main features, a kind of ghost story entitled "The Mystery of the Hollow Key," which concludes with the second

"I have so many kids coming up to me and asking me to tell them what finally happens in "The Mystery of the Hollow Key," Lewis said. "It's really wonderful.

T SURE helps to have an architect in the family when you're breaking new ground in housing styles.

Patricia Moore, principal of a middle school in Plymouth, wanted a home that would provide peace and tranquility, with little maintenance. She teamed up with her son Brad, an architect, to develop a project that resembles condominium living, with more privacy.

The project, called LairdHaven, is an upscale community of nine "cluster homes" in Northville Township. Cluster housing is single family homes attached in such a way that there are no common living walls between units.

"They are attached through a garage wall or garden gate, so there is no noise," said Moore, 55, principal of Central Middle School. "None of the units look onto another person's unit. There is common ownership of the grounds, and common maintenance, just like a condominium."

The icing on the cake? The setting is woodsy, and there's a golf course within shouting distance.

LAIRDHAVEN, LOCATED off Six Mile Road between Sheldon and Northville roads, adjoins wooded areas which abound with birds, The four-acre project backs up to the Brooklane golf course, and a small stream flows nearby.

"This is just exactly what I wanted," Moore said of LairdHaven, which was designed by her son, J. Bradley "Brad" Moore. It is the first project developed under Northville Township's cluster housing soning option enacted several years ago.

LairdHaven units range in size from approximately 2,200 square feet to around 2,400 square feet. Three separate floor plans offer such amenities as spacious master suite, great room with cathedral ceilings, decks, formal dining room and kitchen features to satisfy the most exact-

The erts group's annual spring show/sale opens Tuesday, fay 23, in the lobby of the Livonia City Hall and continues ough Friday, June 9. Minners of the juried show will be honored at public reception to be held from 2-4 p.m. Sunday, May 28. Presentation of awards will be made by Dan Kachanowski, president of the Livonia Arts Commission

And as in years past, this year's juror Andrey DiMarco — herself a past winner of the show — had an outstanding field of art work from which to select winners in the various categories. The number of entries was also slightly up over previ-

BEST OF SHOW honors went to Livonia artist Judith Gresser, for a watercolor, "Mask." Of the painting, DiMarco said, "The color composition and excitement of color are just incredible. . .it hit me as soon as I walked into the room."

"Baskets," an oil by Dearborn Heights artist Irene Kallas, was selected for top honors in the oils category. "I think the color combination is the nicest part of the painting. Everything works," DiMarco commented.

In the watercolor division, Livonia artist Eileen Bibby took first place with "Flags — St. Augustine." Of the "strong painting," DiMarco said, "I think the structural area is what I liked best; countered with flag poles shooting up with the porch

Bibby, incidentally, will be featured in a one-woman show in Detroit's Scarab Club opening Saturday, June 3 and continuing for a month.

First in the combined categories was Ellen Kallick of Lathrup Village with a pastel, "Salem Lights." Kallick was successful in capturing strong emotion, DiMarco commented. "When you paint a person, it doesn't matter how realistic or abstract, when you capture the emotion, you have a painting. In this particular piece, there is fire and emotion," DiMarco

Other winners are — oil: Marge Stock, second and Ann Ni-parko, third; watercolor and mixed media: Ronda Harrison and Eva Samra, second and third, respectively.
