Annual July 4th parade begins at 1 p.m. Tuesday

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Spectators at the annual Fourth of July parade sponsored by the Plymouth Jaycees can expect to see a few new twists on Tuesday.

Marchers, bands and floats will take a reverse route from previous years. Participants will assemble at East Middle School, proceed west on Hartsough, then north on Main to Central Middle School.

The reason — "just to be different," said Chuck Lowe, spokesman for the Jaycees.

Also, marching units won't stop to peform during the parade route so that gaps don't develop along the way. Complaints have arisen in years past about lag time between some units.

Bicycle decorating and clown contests also will be held in conjunction with the festivities, Lowe said.

"KIDS 7 to 13 who want to be in the parade can decorate their bikes. They will be going off first to signify the start of the parade," Lowe said.

There is no fee, but bikers must register in advance at the Dunning-Hough Library, 223 S. Main, the recreation department in the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer, or Jerry's Bicycle Shop, 1449 Ann Arbor Road.

The Plymouth Vietnam Veterans Association will dedicate a memorial to local soldiers who served and were killed in the Vietnam and Korean wars.

People at least 16 years of age who want to dress and act like clowns and march in the parade may do so, Lowe said. Again, participants are asked to register at the library or recreation department.

THE PARADE is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. and should take about two hours to complete. It will be held rain or shine.

Pam Cohn, a Plymouth resident who won an Academy Award in 1988 for a short documentary film, will be Grand Marshal.

"We just wanted to honor one of our local talents," Lowe said.

Also expected to appear are:

- Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps.
- Michigan Scottish Pipe and Drum.
- Plymouth Salem Rockettes.
- Plymouth Canton Chiefettes.
- Fred Hill Harberdashers Marching Briefcase Drill Team.
- Wayne County Sheriff's Mounted Division.

SEVERAL GROUPS have indicated that they intend to sponsor floats, Lowe said. Those include the Polish Centennial Dancers, YMCA Indian Guides, Huron Valley Girl Scout Council, Westland Jaycees and McDonald's.

And, of course, count on the usual batch of politicians there to press the flesh.

Thousands are expected to line the parade route.

Traffic barricades will be erected starting at about noon, said Paul Sincock, assistant to the city manager.

People who can walk to the parade route were encouraged to do so.

Out-of-towners should consider parking at municipal lots like the Central Parking Deck behind Main (enter off Harvey or Ann Arbor Trail), the East-Central Lot behind the Penn Theatre and the library and the Weidman Lot next to the Mayflower Hotel.

There is no charge to park in city lots on holidays.

NO SANCTIONED fireworks will soar skyward in the Plymouth community this year due to the loss of the major sponsor, Lowe said. "We'll have them again, but not this year," he said.

Two other special events will take place Tuesday.

The Plymouth Vietnam Veterans Association will dedicate a memori-

Family split

Murder verdict divides sisters

☐ Neighbors' reactions, 4A

The two daughters of Leonard Tyburski are divided in support for their father, who kept their mother's corpse for 3½ years in the Canton family's freezer and was convicted Monday of second degree murder.

Relatives of the victim, Dorothy Tyburski, however, showed their contempt for Leonard with loud applause in Recorder's Court after the jury deliberated two hours and rejected a lesser manslaughter charge.

Tyburski's daughter Kelly, now 20, is living with Ray and Carol Sutton of Garden City.

IN COURT, Kelly sat next to Craig Albright, now 22, who testified to having sex with Dorothy Tyburski when he lived in the family's Canton home.

Kelly wept Monday during testimony that her mother took massive amounts of prescribed drugs and had an affair.

She sat in the cluster of her mother's family and across the room from her 16-year-old sister, Kim.

Kelly was absent when the foreman read the verdict.

"Kelly feels her dad did something wrong and should pay for it," Ray Sutton said. "She doesn't want him to stay his life in jail. That's her father. But that's her mother too."

Kim, who has been extremely supportive of her father, looked pale but stoic as the foreman read the verdict rejecting claims by the defense attorney Carole Stanyar.

Ray Sutton said Kelly is much less supportive.

Larry Barker, Dorothy's brother, said the family was happy with the second degree murder decision. Her sister, Connie Beal, of Plymouth, said Tyburski deserved his sentence.

TYBURSKI'S BOND was removed and he was remanded to the Wayne County Jail Monday evening. Sentencing will be 9 a.m. July 13 before Recorder's Court Judge Richard Hathaway. Tyburski could receive from one year to life in prison.

Stanyar argued Tyburski, 45, acted in self-defense Sept. 28, 1985, because his wife, 37 at the time of her death, attacked him with a knife.

Stanyar also claimed Tyburski rammed his wife's head 11 times against a basement beam out of passion provoked by her taunting claims that she had an affair with Kelly's boyfriend, who was 18 at the time.

Wayne County prosecutor Glenn Page told the jury in closing arguments that Tyburski obviously lied when he said his wife continued to lunge at him with a knife after he repeatedly rammed her head in the basement beam.

Juror Alex Duchim, a 55-year-old Belleville man, said: "He should have done divorce court."

Millage increase reflected in summer tax bills

By Doug Funke
staff writer

'Tis the season for picnics, parades, fireworks — and property tax bills.

Sorry to ruin your holiday, Plymouth and Canton property owners, but summer tax greetings are about to come your way through the U.S. mail.

Half of the 4-mill increase approved by voters in the Plymouth-Canton schools just 2½ weeks ago will appear on those bills.

About 8,500 notices will be mailed to property owners in Plymouth Township tomorrow, said township treasurer Mary Brooks.

They will request payment of one half of the total school tax, $19.77 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation (half of market value), and the entire Schoolcraft College millage, $2.02 per $1,000 of SEV. The total figure would be slightly less than $1,100 for someone living in a home with a market value of $100,000.

Payment can be mailed or paid in person at township hall, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, during business hours, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Payments in all three municipalities can be made with check or cash. Credit cards aren't accepted.

HOMEOWNERS in Plymouth and Canton whose mortgage companies pay their property taxes should still receive copies of their bills.

Brooks estimated that about half of the homeowners in Plymouth Township pay their own taxes, while mortgage companies take care of the rest.

The 15,000 tax bills and notices in Canton could be mailed between next Wednesday and Friday, said treasurer Jerry Brown.

Those bills will also contain only half of the school tax.

Payment is due Sept. 14 and may be dropped off in person or mailed to township hall, 1150 S. Canton Center Road. Business hours are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Brown said he would guess that upward of 60 percent of residential tax bills in Canton go to mortgage companies.

TAX BILLS in the city of Plymouth probably will be mailed next week, said Ken Way, city treasurer.

Subdivision wants to join P-C schools

More than 150 Canton residents are requesting that their subdivision, Greenbrook Village near Canton Center and Palmer, be annexed to Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

If approved, it will mark the first time the district has annexed property.

The 55 children currently living in the subdivision attend Wayne-Westland schools.

"They evidently were promised a school would be built for them, but it never was. They've been looking with jaundiced eyes at Hoben Elementary," said Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John Hoben.

Hoben Elementary opened last fall.

Greenbrook children attend Walker School, three miles away at Lotz and Michigan.

Hoben Elementary is two miles from Greenbrook. Field Elementary is a mile and a half away.

It's up to the Wayne County Intermediate School Board to decide whether the property can be annexed. An annexation hearing date will be set at the WCISB's July 12 meeting, said Dick Egli, Plymouth-Canton community relations director.

"I have no idea how they go about this kind of thing," said Hoben. "I feel we'd probably have an opportunity to make a statement. As far as how our board feels, we'll be discussing it July 5.

"I know from talking to Dennis O'Neill (Wayne-Westland school superintendent) that they're not interested in losing them."

While annexation would "probably increase our tax base, it would create a space problem and increase our expenditures," said Hoben.

Both Hoben and Field, which have five portable classrooms, are at capacity, Hoben said.

Despite space concerns, the matter "is out of our hands unless we can influence the intermediate school district," said Hoben. "I'm sure hopeful we will have some say, but it's hard to say."

Wayne-Westland homeowners have financial incentive to switch districts as well. Plymouth-Canton taxpayers are assessed about six mills less than their neighbors in Wayne-Westland.

The intermediate district will explore, "the impact on children, and the impact on the school districts," said Egli. "Usually if one district doesn't want the annexation to happen, it makes it difficult unless there are compelling educational reasons. In the last three years Wayne County has had only one other request.

Truck, dirt bikes stolen

crime watch

DIRT BIKES STOLEN: Two boys dirt bicycles were reported stolen in separate incidents in the township on Sunday.

A black-and-red Open Road model bike valued at $150 was taken from Mona Street between 8 and 9 p.m. The bike was locked but not attached to anything.

The theft of a yellow Iguana model valued at $335 from a garage on Marilyn Street reportedly occurred 9-11:30 a.m.

A blue Yamaha moped valued at $215 was reported stolen from behind the Hillside Inn on Plymouth 3:30-10 p.m. An employee said the moped was locked, but not attached to anything.

TRUCK TAKEN: A red-and-gray 1989 GMC 4-by-4 was reported stolen from the Jeannote dealership on Sheldon over the weekend. A punched door lock was found in the empty space where the vehicle had been stored.

WALLET STOLEN: A wallet containing a credit card was reported stolen from the glove compartment of a car parked on Canton Center Road at about 3:30 a.m. Saturday.

A resident scared off two people shining a light into his van at that time, police reports indicated. The wallet was found to be missing from another vehicle later in the day.

CAR VANDALIZED: An employee at the Great Scott on Ann Arbor Road reported that someone scratched the side of her car and ripped off the radio antenna between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

Damage was estimated at $1,000.

WINDOW SMASHED: A baseball-sized rock was tossed through a window at a house on Albert between 9 a.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday causing an estimated $100 damage.

LARCENY: A Highland man told police he lost $800 worth of jewelry, $5 in loose change and a mirror from his tent at the Old Village Arts Festival sometime between 7 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Sunday.

The thief or thieves entered the man's tent and took the items which were left overnight for the next day's sale, officers said. Police have no leads or suspects.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY: Police made several arrests after a disturbance early Sunday at the Side Street Pub in Plymouth.

The bartender told police that a fight ensued after he asked a group of six or eight patrons to leave and tried to close the bar at about 2 a.m.

Police said a gentleman from Chicago told the bartender, "Where we come from you have to be kicked out of a bar."

After the bartender said he wanted no more problems and that it was time to leave, he was pushed and a verbal confrontation started. Three men began beating him, witnesses told police.

The bartender suffered a fat lip and a bloody nose, police said.

Officers at the scene were told by the Chicago man that he and his wife were assaulted by a cook at the pub.The Chicago man had a 3-inch cut below one ear. Two of his friends had cuts and lacerations.

Three men, two from Chicago and one from Galway, Ireland, were issued appearance tickets for assault and battery after uttering obscenities at police.

DRUNKEN DRIVING: Police arrested a 42-year-old Northville man near Main and Palmer near the Clark service station at about 10:30 p.m. Sunday.

An officer northbound on Main said a man in a southbound 1969 Mercury shouted something as he passed the patrol car. The officer then observed liquid being thrown out of the vehicle, which was proceeding erratically. The driver was pulled over after crossing the double line twice. He failed several sobriety tests and blew .21 on a Breathalyzer test. A level of .10 is considered legally drunk.

These are just some of the incidents recently reported to and by Plymouth police. Telephone 9-1-1 or 453-8600 to contact city police, 9-1-1 or 453-3869 to reach township police.

municipal operations and debt retirement approved by the city commission June 12 will be on those bills. So, too, will half of the Plymouth-Canton school tax and the Schoolcraft College millage.

City charter mandates the payment of city taxes by Aug. 10, Way said.

Taxes may be paid at city hall, 201 S. Main, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. Three local banks — First of America-Plymouth on Main, National Bank of Detroit on Main and Detroit Bank & Trust on Wilcox — also will accept payment.

Nearly three-quarters of the 4,460 tax bills mailed in the city go to homeowners, Way said. He couldn't speculate on what percentage of those are paid directly and what percentage are paid by mortgage companies.

CITY AND TOWNSHIP property owners who are at least 65 and have household incomes of less than $20,000 may defer payment of summer property taxes without penalty until next Feb. 15.

Applications are available at township halls and city hall.

Other property taxes — the second half of school taxes, county taxes, the millage for Metroparks and township taxes in Plymouth and Canton — show up on the winter bills in December.

Slugging it out

Canton senior women's softball team brings home the gold

By Julie Brown
staff writer

At one point, things weren't looking too good for the Canton Seniors Sluggers.

They were facing some tough competition on the part of another women's softball team from Colorado. The teams competed at the U.S. National Senior Olympics, held June 19-24 in St. Louis, Mo.

In the third game of a best-three-of-five championship series, the Sluggers were behind 10-5 late in the game.

"All of a sudden, we busted loose, scored a bunch of runs on no outs," said Louise Spigarelli of Canton, v coaches the Sluggers. "They lived up to their name. It was really something."

The players went on to a 20-10 victory, following earlier victories of 23-13 and 14-8. For their efforts, they brought home the gold medal. Each athlete received a medal, in honor of the team's first-place status.

"I couldn't jump high enough," said Eleanor Hoelscher of Canton, team captain. "It was really great, a good feeling. We said before we left we'd bring it back and we did."

GARDEN CITY resident Jeanne Hynes is equally enthusiastic in describing her team's victory.

"It was the best experience I've ever, ever had in all my 60 years," she said. "It was really an upper to see."

The average age for the victors was 64, though players ranged from 55 to 73. Athletes must be at least 55 to compete at the U.S. National Senior Olympics.

The slow-pitch softball team was made up primarily, though not entirely, of local women. One woman from St. Louis, Mo., played with the Sluggers. A team she'd been playing on folded and she asked if she could play elsewhere.

A woman from Greenville, Ohio, also heard about the competition and asked if she could play with the team.

"We ended up being able to put her on the roster too," Spigarelli said.

This is the second U.S. National Senior Olympics. The first was held in 1987. The event is held every other year.

Each team member received a gold medal. The athletes hope to compete at the next U.S. National Senior Olympics in 1991. "They're already talking about it," coach Louise Spigarelli said.

This year's competition attracted some 3,500 participants from 47 states, Spigarelli said. Events included track and field, swimming, archery, bowling, golf, table tennis, volleyball and horseshoes.

THIS IS THE first time a women's softball team from Canton participated. The team's victories were hard-fought, Spigarelli said. Knowing they'd won the gold medal gave the team something to cheer about.

"They went wild. They jumped up and down. The action on the field next to us stopped."

The team includes: Rose Booth of Dearborn; Monica Doig of Dearborn Heights; Dottie Finfrock of Westland; Alma Foerster of Plymouth; Bernie Gaddis of Pontiac; Jerry Gawura of Canton; Eleanor Hoelscher of Canton; Jeanne Hynes of Garden City; Emily Jansen of Northville; Joan Jasin of Canton; Sarah Kahaian of Garden City; Evelyn Nealeigh of Greenville, Ohio; Kay Oswalt of Garden City; and Jackie Schapp of St. Louis, Mo.

Michigan was represented by 179 participants, one of the largest contingents, Spigarelli said. Frank Reimann, a Canton Seniors member, also traveled to St. Louis, competing in the discus and shot put events.

Many of the Canton Seniors Sluggers played softball in their younger days. Team captain Eleanor Hoelscher played with a group of high school girls when she was still in grade school.

"I played with my brothers all the time." Hoelscher played for about three years for a team from the Daisy Air Rifle Co., based in Plymouth at the time. She didn't work for Daisy, although the team's manager did.

IT GOT TO the point where Hoelscher would have had to drive all the way to Detroit's east side to play softball, so she stopped playing. She's played with the Canton Seniors for several years.

"I enjoy people," she said. "I like to see how well I can do. I don't always do well, but that's part of the game."

Hoelscher's glad to see more opportunities for women to compete in sports.

"I think that's great, I really do. I think women should participate, really."

Jeanne Hynes is also an experienced player.

"I've played all my life," said Hynes, who brought her 20-month-old grandson, Brandon, to Tuesday's practice. "I used to play fast pitch for years."

Hynes played in church leagues over the years and played as a teenager at her boarding school. She now plays for an over-30 women's team, in addition to playing second base for the Canton Seniors Sluggers.

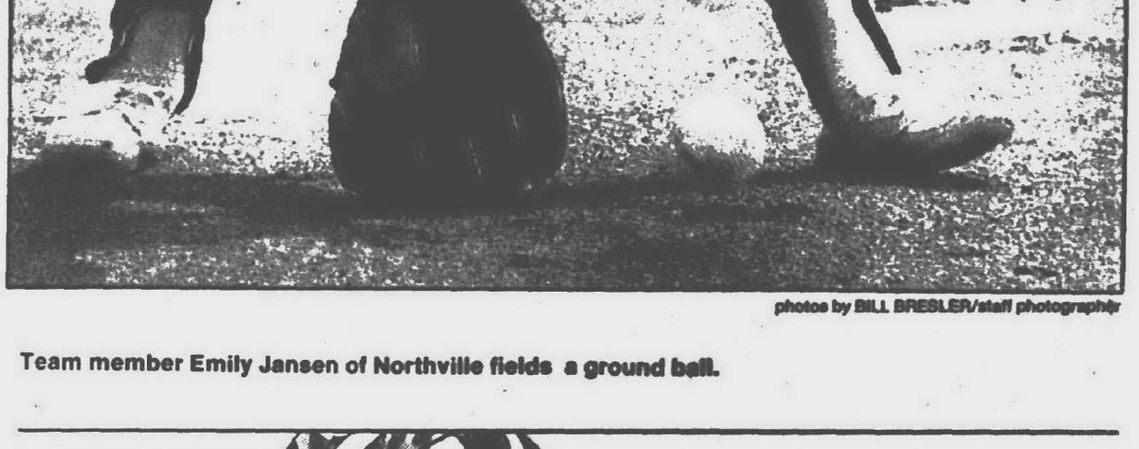

"I love it," she said. "It's not what you'd call real fast. If you're in the infield, there's a lot going on."

The hard-working team members had no time to rest on their laurels. Tuesday morning, the women were out on the fields behind the Canton Township Administration Building, practicing for a tournament to be held this weekend.

That tournament, in Mount Clemens, is run by the National Association for Senior Citizen Softball. The team will have a couple new members, Spigarelli said, as athletes age 45 and older are allowed to play in that tournament.

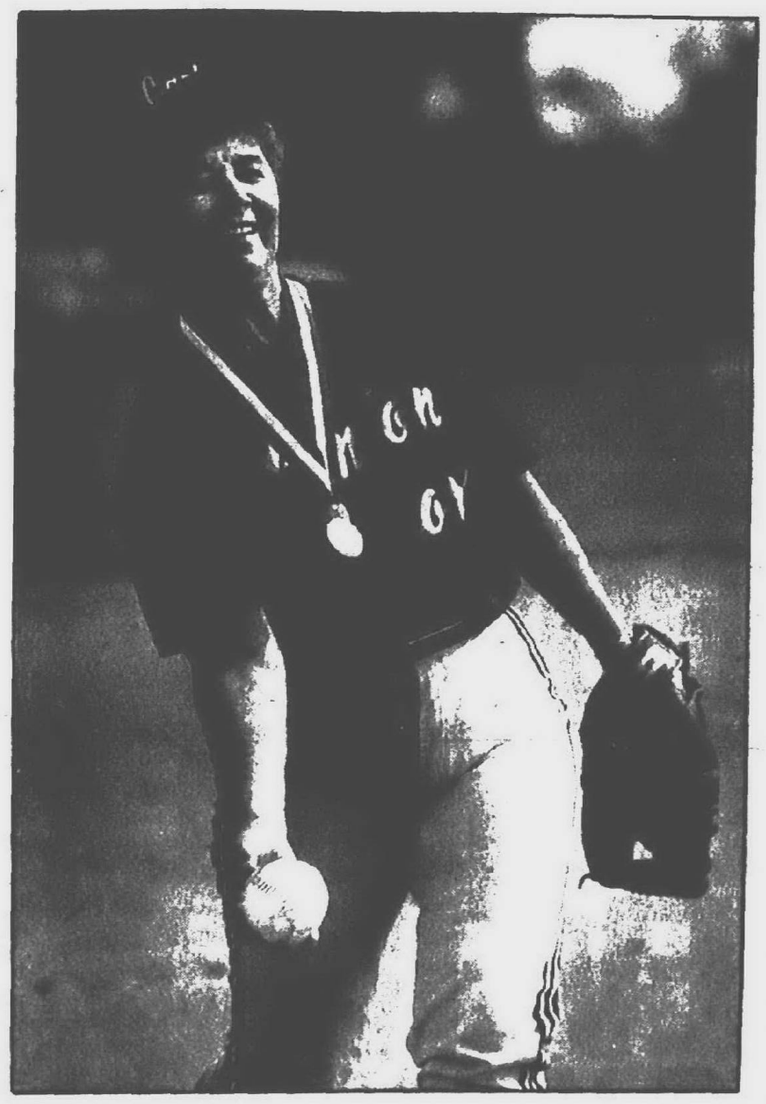

The victors are already anticipating traveling to Syracuse, N.Y., in 1991 for the next U.S. National Senior Olympics.

"We hope we can all stay healthy enough," Hoelscher said. "It was a great time down there."

Neighbors differ on sentencing

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

The quiet little subdivision was hit with the news almost exactly six months ago. And after Leonard Tyburski was found guilty this week in the so-called freezer murder case, two of his neighbors expressed opposite reactions to the verdict.

"I just hope he gets the stiffest sentence possible," said one resident of Avon Street, where Dorothy Tyburski's body was found in a basement freezer on Jan. 2.

Another neighbor is hoping Recorder's Court Judge Richard Hathaway shows leniency when Tyburski is sentenced July 13.

"Killing isn't right, I know that, but I believe that she just pushed him right over the edge," another neighbor said, referring to the alleged conduct of the victim, who died Sept. 28, 1988.

Both neighbors, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the affair was a sad one. But their sympathies lay with different individuals.

"As far as I was concerned, he made her life a living hell," said one.

The other holds the view that Tyburski "was a wonderful father and a wonderful husband."

The defense attorney alleged that Dorothy Tyburski provoked her husband by telling him she was having an extramarital affair. According to testimony, Dorothy Tyburski initiated sexual contact on two occasions with Craig Albright, who was dating the Tyburskis' oldest daughter at the time.

"Going with a 17-year-old guy and her daughter's boyfriend, that's the 'sickeningest' part I've ever heard," said the neighbor who supports Tyburski.

'I think (Dorothy Tyburski) would turn to anyone who would give her attention after what she went through with him.'

— A Tyburski neighbor

The other neighbor had said she felt compassion toward Dorothy Tyburski.

"I think she would turn to anyone who would give her attention after what she went through with him," she said. The woman described Tyburski as a "Hitler-type" who kept a close rein on his wife.

That neighbor also took exception to the defense's use of disparaging information about Dorothy Tyburski.

"It's almost like they were trying her instead of him," the neighbor said.

Tyburski was convicted of second degree murder. The maximum sentence he could receive is life in prison.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Connie Beal, sister of Dorothy Tyburski, stayed to hear the verdict.

Verdict divides family

"The question people (other jurors) had was were his (Tyburski's) statements true or false? People weren't sure. He contradicted himself three times about the same thing. When a person who is not there, there's no rebuttal. It's hard to believe Leonard because Dorothy is not around."

When Tyburski confessed to Canton police last January that he killed his wife, he said she fell into the Sears Coldspot freezer. However, in court, he said he threw her into the freezer.

"If he had admitted it he would have gotten away, but to lie about it for three years," Duchim said.

Tyburski, dressed in a mauve suit jacket, beige shirt and gray pants, sat at the end of his chair during the hearing and remained expressionless for at least a half hour after the verdict.

Tyburski, an administrator at Mackenzie High School in Detroit, tapped his attorney's arm and seemed to console her as she wept quietly in a corner of the courtroom.

Stanyar couldn't be reached for comment earlier this week about whether an appeal would be filed.

IMAGINE DYING FROM A DISEASE YOU NEVER KNEW YOU HAD.

Eleven million people in the U.S. have diabetes. But almost half of them don't know it.

Untreated, diabetes can lead to heart disease, kidney disease, blindness and gangrene.

And for 150,000 people each year, it leads to death.

That's why you should be aware of the symptoms of diabetes: blurred vision, excessive thirst and frequent urination are just some of the warning signs. Because the sooner you find out if you have diabetes, the more likely you are to get it under control, before complications set in.

Finding out you have diabetes can be scary. But not finding out can be fatal.

Temporary lots open to handle Metro parking

The county has closed two levels of the parking deck at Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport because they are unsafe, said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara.

Two temporary gravel parking lots have been completed and will replace approximately 2,000 parking spaces taken out of service in the parking deck. A third lot, which will be paved, will be ready in about six weeks, according to county officials.

The Red Lot, located at the corner of Lucas Drive and East Service Drive, will provide 1,000 spaces. The Orange Lot, located on East Service Drive between the Northwest and Delta hangars, will offer 1,200 spaces.

These temporary gravel lots will cost $2 per day and will remain in service until an enlarged, 2,800-space paved Green Lot opens in A ust. This $3 per day lot will open on Goddard Road north of the airport across from the existing employee lot. Shuttle-bus service will be available to all terminals from all lots.

The temporary gravel lots will cost $2 per day and will remain in service until an enlarged, 2,800-space paved Green Lot opens in August. Shuttle-bus service will be available to all terminals from all lots.

MCNAMARA SAID the parking deck deteriorated more than county officials originally anticipated. The deck has been closed for "study and rehabilitation" over the past six months.

"We are closing the entire second and third levels to conduct a more comprehensive evaluation," said McNamara Tuesday in a prepared statement.

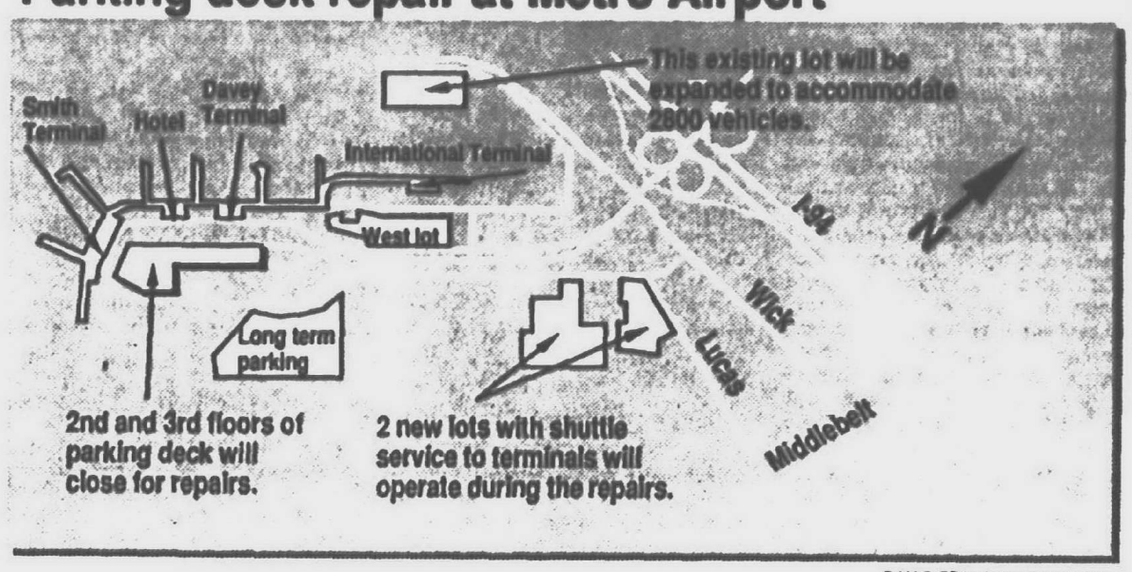

McNamara said in order to minimize confusion and traffic flow problems which will result from the opening of the temporary lots, the airport has set up a hot line 942-3838. Callers will be advised as to which parking lots are available and how to get to the new lots.

Wayne County is seeking environmental approval to update its master plan for future airport projects. In addition to a new south access road to ease traffic congestion, more parking is proposed. Prior to the addition of these temporary lots, there were 13,000 parking spaces, 4,700 of whch were in the parking deck.

Gregory Dobson, manager of field services for Albert Kahn Associates, engineering consultants for the project, found nothing unusual in the condition of the parking deck.

"Any open-air concrete structure which is contantly exposed to moisture and salt will suffer this kind of deterioration. Other parking decks over 20 years old in cold weather climates like Michigan are also undergoing replacement or rehabilitation," said Dobson.

Board backs bid to save tax-free municipal bonds

The Wayne County Board of Commissioners has thrown its support behind a drive to preserve the tax free status of municipal bonds.

Last year the U.S. Supreme Court, overturning a 100 year precedent, ruled that nothing in the Constitution says the federal government cannot tax public purpose bonds. Tax exempt municipal bonds cost the U.S. Treasury $50 billion annually in lost tax revenue. Conversely, the amount of local and state tax exempt bonds outstanding as of February 1989 was $738 billion, according to Michigan Township News.

"This has important implications for state, county, and local treasuries," said Wayne County Commissioner Susan Heintz, who drafted the resolution.

As a one-person fact-finding commission, Heintz issued a report stating the possible effects of taxable bonds and requesting congressional action to stop restrictions on tax exempt bonds.

"Without a doubt the cost of borrowing for state and local projects would increase," said Heintz. "The direct result would be a drastic reduction in public services and/or increased state and local taxes."

SOME POSSIBLE Congressionally imposed restrictions are:

- A bill to remove the exemption.
- A bill to limit tax exempt bonds to purely governmental functions.
- A bill to cap the amount of obligation issued in each state.
- A bill to limit the costs of issuing the bonds.

"Anything that is not currently taxed is fair game as long as it's politically possible," Heintz said.

'This has important implications for state, county, and local treasuries. Without a doubt the cost of borrowing for state and local projects would increase.'

— Susan Heintz commissioner

One theory is that Congress has no intention of removing the tax exempt status for general obligation bonds. But on the other hand U.S. Treasury officials are constantly thinking up new ways of raising revenues. Treasury officials and federal lawmakers have teamed up in the past, such as in removing sales tax as a deductible, and the loss of revenue sharing.

Tax exempt bonds are used to finance schools, water and sewer projects, public housing, recreation, roads and public buildings.

Last March, Michigan received voter approval to spend $800 million for environmental cleanup and recreation to be financed with tax exempt bonds. If interest on those bonds were taxable, borrowing costs would increase by 20 to 30 percent.

The Oakland County Board of Commissioners passed a similar resolution in March, with copies sent to Michigan's congressional delegation and President George Bush.

Blue Angels return to county air show

The U.S. Navy Blue Angels will have a local flavor when they return July 29-30 to perform at the Wayne County Air Show at Willow Run Airport.

Navy Lt. Matt Seamon, pilot of the team's No. 7 F/A-18 Hornet and narrator for the crack precision flight team, is a 1981 graduate of the University of Michigan with a bachelor of science degree in aerospace engineering.

The 1989 Air Show season marks Seamon's first with the team, which traditionally selects its pilots for a two-year tour of duty.

His predecessors as narrator, Lt. Cmdr. Cliff Skelton and Lt. Cmdr. Doug McClain, are now part of the demonstrations, Skelton as the lead solo pilot and McClain as left wing.

Seamon was raised in Port Washington, N.Y., and became interested in flying as part of a high school senior project. His interest continued during his college years at U-M, where he became a certified flight instructor as an undergraduate.

Upon leaving U-M, he became an ensign in the Navy and was selected as the first of three "Navy Nuggets" to fly the Hornet. After training, he became a member of the Navy's first Hornet squadron, VFA-113, and completed the fighter's first extended carrier deployment on board the aircraft carrier USS Constitution.

Seamon also graduated from the Navy's Fighter Weapons School "Top Gun."

He is one of four new members of the team. The team has had only 236 officers since it was formed June 15, 1946. Since that time, the team has flown almost 2,000 air shows.

Navy and Marine Corps pilots who apply for assignment to the Blue Angels must meet three criteria. They must volunteer, must be career-oriented and must have accumulated 1,500 flight hours in tactical jet aircraft.

The team flies more than 140,00 miles during a show season.

The team will make its first appearance in the Wayne County Air Show since 1982 and the only Michigan appearance in 1989.

The Wayne County Air Show also will host an impressive array of civilian performers including wing-walkers, stunt pilots and the highly regarded Holiday Inn Aerobatic Team.

Dozens of civilian and historic aircraft will be on display and the show expects solo demonstrations by several of the country's top military jet fighters. Additional military aircraft will be on ground display for close-up inspection.

The Willow Run Airport, which is owned and operated by Wayne County, is a historic part of America's aviation heritage. During World War II thousands of B-24 bombers were manufactured there, the first time assembly line production methods from the automotive industry were applied to building aircraft.

Advance tickets are available for $7 adults, $5 children pluse a service charge from all Michigan TicketMaster locations. Tickets at the gate are $10 for adults and $7 for children ages 6 to 11. Children under 5 are free.

For more information about the show, call 313-482-8686.

The show is sponsored by Wayne county and a portion of all ticket proceeds go to benefit the Easter Seal Society of Wayne County.

Chinese balloonists visiting Plymouth

They made it.

Balloonists from the Peoples Republic of China arrived in Plymouth on Tuesday night for a three-week goodwill tour of Michigan.

Actually, they flew in by jet. Their hot air balloon was still in Los Angeles on Wednesday morning.

The delegation, which includes Zhang Jie, president of the Anyang Aviation School, and Hao Dongshan, China's most skilled balloonist, will participate in competitions in Traverse City this weekend and Howell the weekend of July 7-9.

R. Scott Lorenz, owner and general manager of the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth, invited the Chinese to visit Michigan as his guests last fall when he participated in a balloon competition in Anyang.

"I think it's great, I was ecstatic when I saw them at the airport," Lorenz said.

Hao and Zhang Futai and Lorenz plan to launch in the community as time and weather permit.

Visits to Niagara Falls, Mackinac Island and Greenfield Village also are on the itinerary.

Qin Jianmin, interpreter for the group, said they really didn't have much trouble getting permission to visit now even with the unrest in their country.

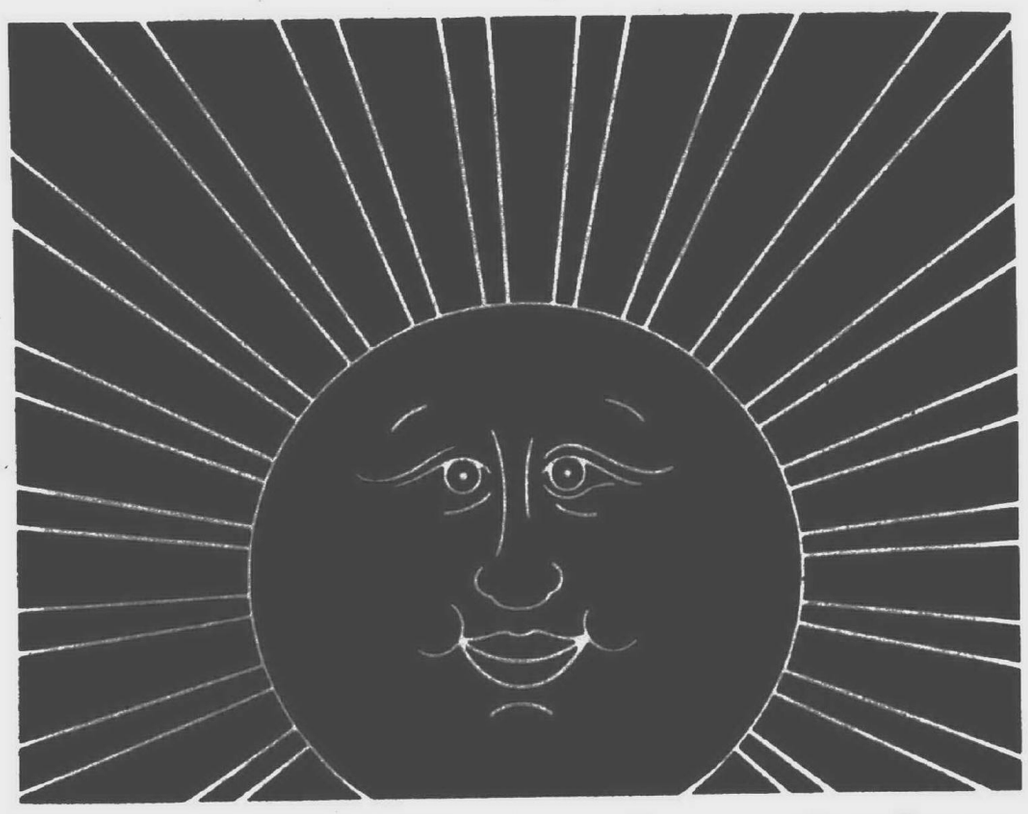

"The four of us, we are not students. It's very easy to get a visa," Qin said.

Of first impressions — "Plymouth is very nice, very clean," said Qin.

Patents keep the wolves from inventors' doors

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

The old saying invention is 98 percent perspiration and 2 percent inspiration still rings true, says patent attorney Raymond Scott.

A patent, legal protection of a new idea, won't make an inventor rich without a lot of effort and cunning. And even that doesn't always work.

"There are a lot of wolves out there who will take your money. It's tragic," said Scott, an attorney in the Renaissance Center offices of Dykema & Gossett.

"Market (the invention) yourself directly or by contacting interested companies. No reputable firm will take your idea as their own. And deal with a registered patent attorney."

Scott's firm has arranged patents on everything from fish hooks to telecommunications satellites.

"If it's new, if it's not obvious, then I would say go back to the 98 percent perspiration."

Some ideas are wacky. A Birmingham patent attorney met an inventor trying to market a design for a solar panel strung between two helicopters to melt snow on ice covered roads. He admitted his invention wouldn't do much on cloudy days.

"The vast majority are looking for a marketable product to catch somebody's eye, to be used by some company," Scott said. "Usually with the nuttier ideas we try to convince a client the idea is not sellable, and an alternate approach might be considered."

LIVONIA PATENT attorney Charles Chandler works with what he calls "kitchen inventors."

"They're not really in the business. Most inventors don't know about patents or what I can do for them."

One bit of advice Chandler gives to inventors is to attend an Inventors Council of Michigan meeting, a group which meets the last Wednesday of the month in various locations, including Livonia. Speakers and advice are available for "kitchen inventors."

"People are inventing everything these days: salad dressings, recipes, arts and crafts, most things can be protected in some way," Chandler said.

Chandler's clients have included a woman hunter who patented a disposable deer hunting jacket and a Novi woman who created fireplace fire starters resembling rolls of one hundred dollar bills called Money to Burn.

While the burning money was an instant success, a ball in a cage puzzle dreamed up by another inventor fizzled.

"These things go in fads," said Chandler. "When the (state) lottery began we had lottery fad items, like a lottery number shaker shaped like a ladybug."

Most inventions aren't as dramatic as the lightbulb, but most inventors are hoping their idea will translate into dollars.

"(Getting a patent) is too expensive — $1,000 to $5,000 — to be doing it for the fun of it," Chandler said. "They hope to be profitable."

Some ideas are changes in well-established products.

"VERY OFTEN it's some minor improvement, some (product) modification. There are probably hundreds of patents on the paper clip," Ray Scott said.

Patents are both the shield and the sword, protecting ideas but also allowing the patent holder to bring charges over infringement.

One case Scott has in litigation now involves a client who invented the cloth maid vacuum cleaner cover.

"The cover fits over the vacuum cleaner and it looks like a maid — it's more attractive standing in the hallway. The client sold these and the manufacturer decided to take it over," Scott said.

About 80 percent of all inventions fall into the industrial/business category, Scott said.

"Everyone is looking for the competitive edge. Last year 38 percent of all patents filed in the U.S. were filed by the Japanese. It's a powerful business tool.

"Patents are up 50 percent at General Motors and Ford. A patent is a hot ticket right now."

So if you're sitting on the next hottest new invention, how do you get it patented?

'People are inventing everything these days: salad dressings, recipes, arts and crafts, most things can be protected in some way.'

— Charles Chandler patent attorney

"First it has to be new, it has to have utility, and it can't be obvious in relation to the industry, whether it's fishing lures or computer science," Scott said.

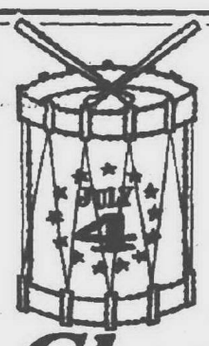

Added Chandler: "Talk to a patent attorney. Call for a consultation. Find out what it's all about. Don't be intimidated."

Patents have been enforced the same way since 1837. Annually 100,000 patents are issued. There are close to 5 million patents in existence today.

$1,500 is raised for cancer group

Participants in a recent Plymouth-Canton area golf outing helped raise nearly $1,500 for the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

An estimated 100 golfers participated in the Al Howell Memorial outing June 17 at Fox Hills Country Club, Plymouth. The 17-year event was recently renamed in honor of Howell, a co-founder who died within the past year.

Though initially begun for the pleasure of area automotive dealers and suppliers, the event is now open to the public.

Money raised through the outing will be used to assist cancer patients.

The Michigan Cancer Foundation operates an office at 173 N. Main, Plymouth.

'Say yes to success'

State BPW president is more than a cheerleader

By Susan Buck
staff writer

Nancy Zimmerman gives kudos to women in the workplace.

The Farmington Hills resident took over as the youngest president of the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women (BPW) last month.

She is a second vice-president at Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit, in charge of the Renaissance Center branch.

A diversified group, BPW is the oldest and largest national organization established to promote the interests of working women.

The Michigan BPW, formed in 1918 to promote the interests of women in business and the professions, has 5,000 members.

"Generally, I've found that if a woman is a president in the organization, she also is a leader in the workplace," said Zimmerman, 32. "Michigan has had four national presidents."

As president of the state BPW, it will be Zimmerman's responsibility to organize the 1990 state convention, entitled "Say Yes To Success," which will be held at the Clarion Inn in Lansing. Coinciding with the initials BPW, the theme will be "Building Personal Worth."

ZIMMERMAN JOINED the Canton BPW in 1981 and was named a Young Careerist, an honorary position, at both the chapter and district levels in 1982.

The position recognizes the honors and achievements of women on their way up.

Zimmerman was born in Deckerville and raised in Erie, south of Monroe, near Toledo. Her parents were potato farmers for a short time. She is the seventh of 11 children. The last four were adopted grandchildren.

"I'm the only one out of the 11 who went on to college," Zimmerman said. "I started getting involved in high school. I was a cheerleader. Where other kids would skip school, well, that wasn't even in my vocabulary. I just enjoyed school."

Zimmerman was also a cheerleader at Eastern Michigan University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in business education in 1978.

For six months until June 1979, she taught pregnant high school girls typing, shorthand and accounting for the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

"When I graduated from college, they were pink-slipping teachers with 10 to 15 years experience," Zimmerman said. At the same time, she taught adult education for the Melvindale-Allen Park school district.

She did her student teaching at Plymouth-Canton High School.

'Generally, I've found that if a woman is a president in the organization, she also is a leader in the workplace.'

— Nancy Zimmerman

ZIMMERMAN WORKED her way up from a clerical position as a Kelly Girl at Manufacturers Bank.

In 1979, she started in the management training program.

"A lot of it has been on-the-job training. As long as you have the people skills, that's very important in our business. People skills are not something you can learn overnight. You either have people skills or you don't."

Zimmerman said that her career has been aided by a supportive husband, Robert, a CPA for Ernst & Whinney in Detroit.

"I am very fortunate. I have a very supportive husband and a very supportive employer.

"My husband encouraged me to get involved. He didn't hold me back. He wasn't intimidated by the honors and awards I received. He pushed me to do more."

She added that when she goes away for the weekend, she returns to find her laundry done.

Zimmerman's employers at Manufacturers Bank, both males, are equally supportive. The bank helps to finance her travel activities and allows her time off.

"I think they are gaining from it because I have grown personally and professionally with BPW. Because I'm dedicated to my job, they are willing to support my activities, which will help them out as well," she said.

ZIMMERMAN BELIEVES the public speaking skills she has acquired improves her ability to confront employees in difficult situations and when she has to do customer calling.

The National Federation of Business and Professional Women will hold its national convention in Detroit at Cobo Hall July 23-27. It is expected to draw 3,000 members.

"Women have always been in the workplace. That's what the organization is all about. It's women helping women."

Zimmerman is committed to cheering them on.

Humane Society $500,000 in debt, says interim head

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

An independent audit will determine the status of the budget- and problem-plagued Michigan Humane Society, interim executive director Gary Tiscornia said Tuesday.

Tiscornia, who took over last week following the resignation of longtime director David Wills, said the society's $5 million budget is at least $500,000 in debt.

The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers received an anonymous "information sheet" on MHS, alleging charges ranging from embezzlement to mismanagement. No names were attached to the charges, which also included the claim that board members don't support management.

"I'm familiar with the sheet; it's been circulated to other news operations," said Tiscornia, who discounted the rumors. He said the audit is necessary "because of the administrative transfer. I want to start with a clean slate."

Wills, of Birmingham, resigned at a board meeting along with board members John Kelly, Marilyn Turner, Paul Henecks and Robert Sorock. Attempts to reach Wills and the resigning board trustees were unsuccessful.

Wills announced his resignation shortly after the board rejected his proposal to create a national center for animal protection to be affiliated with MHS. The idea behind creation of such a center was for it to insure long-term financial security for MHS.

Board trustee Daniel Mincus said the resigning trustees made no public statement regarding their departure.

"I can't attribute any motive for their departure," Mincus said.

MHS employs more than 100 full-time workers operating out of shelters in Westland, Detroit and Auburn Hills. MHS also operates animal hospitals at each site.

The bulk of its budget is generated through private contributions. Corporate donations and government grants from time to time provide some revenue, as well as service fees.

Tiscornia, 43, of Milford, worked for the society for 5½ years and was director of corporate affairs before leaving to open a business with his wife. Before his first tenure with MHS, Tiscornia was in private law practice in Arizona.

Interim executive director Gary Tiscornia said an audit will be conducted to determine the extent of the society's budgetary problems. He said an audit is necessary because he wants to "start with a clean slate. Tiscornia replaces David Wills, of Birmingham, who resigned last week along with board members John Kelly, Marilyn Turner, Paul Henecks and Robert Sorock.

"The board asked me to return," he said.

Board trustee Mincus also discounted rumors of discord between MHS management and board members.

"We have a good working relationship," said Mincus, who has served on the board since 1985.

The dozen remaining board members will select four replacements to fill the seats of the resigning trustees, he said.

"The nominating committee has already received some resumes," he said.

Mincus added that a search committee will name a permanent executive director.

The MHS board of trustees must meet once per quarter, by law, but Mincus said the board meets more often than that.

While animal related services will not be cut, budget cuts already in place include an employee wage freeze, elimination of some guard services and cutbacks in computer training programs.

"We are always looking for ways to trim the budget," Mincus said.

Donations sought by camp for handicapped

Last summer SCAMP, a summer day camp for children with handicaps, first implemented a camp store program.

The program is designed to encourage positive behavior and to teach basic survival skills to the campers, according to Jean I. Walker, coordinator. Campers earn points for good behavior which can be redeemed for items in the store. Last year's program was made possible by the donations of local merchants.

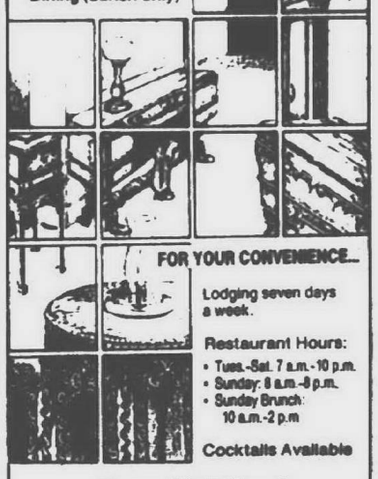

In order to continue this program, donations are again needed to stock the store, Walker said. In the past, these donations have included promotional items such as T-shirts and bumper stickers with station logos, as well as items from concerts and sporting events.

SCAMP is a six-week summer day camp for children with handicaps run through the Bloomfield Hills School District at West Hills Middle School in West Bloomfield. It is funded through tuition and donations. SCAMP is a tax-deductible, nonprofit organization, which serves youth from preschool to age 26 from school districts in Southern Oakland, Wayne and Macomb counties. These children may be hearing impaired, emotionally impaired, learning disabled, mentally or physically handicapped.

SCAMP is designed to provide campers with an enriching summer day camp experience of recreational activities as well as academic study and reinforcement, Walker said.

For donations, call 540-5278.

Smoking ban

District should enforce it now

We urge the district to stop smoking now. Letting kids smoke on campus just doesn't work.

THE PLYMOUTH CANTON school district is looking at banning smoking on the campuses of the two high schools either this summer or by 1990.

We urge the district to stop the smoking on campus right now. It seems that in this day and age of awareness of what smoking does to a person's health, that the district would ban it now. Letting kids smoke at school smacks of the 1970s attitude of let kids do what they want at any time. It just doesn't work.

Public buildings, hospitals and businesses have banned smoking for adults. In contrast the school district looks utterly backward by allowing smoking by students. This is going on even as a state law that makes it harder for young persons to buy tobacco products is being considered.

Let's remember, too, that most of the kids smoking in high school are under 18 and that smoking is a habit that generally begins in late adolescence. The older a person is before sampling his or her first puff, if ever, the less likely that person is to become a smoker.

Currently, the school board is split on the issue. Board President David Artley wants the smoking ban to go into effect in 1990, while other board members and school officials want it to go into effect now.

One official is Michael Homes, assistant superintendent of instruction. His idea is to put the smoking ban into effect now to gauge its effectiveness during the summer.

We agree with Homes.

But even if it isn't 100 percent effective, we think banning smoking is the right thing to do. We know that kids are going to try to smoke in bathrooms and outside the school. We aren't naive.

But having smoking areas at a high school is a tacit endorsement of smoking. We don't like having even a backhanded stamp of approval on such a life-threatening habit.

In the debate by the school board, we also detected some leadership problems and classic bureaucratic bungling.

Homes said that the district would need to hire five additional security guards to stop the smoking. We see that as outrageous spending of the taxpayers' money. Principals and teachers should be enforcing such rules. We remember the days — not all that long ago — when smoking wasn't encouraged in our schools and we don't recall anybody having to be hired to enforce the ban.

We find that suggestion as tragic, especially in the wake of a tough millage campaign that gave the schools more money. By hiring five guards, the district would be sending voters the message that they are not good caretakers of the public trust.

Also, during the debate a study was suggested of how smoking bans have worked in other school districts. We need another study about smoking like we need a hole in the head. There's plenty of evidence out there for all to see.

The point in all this isn't to punish young smokers, but to save them from an expensive, unhealthy habit, one they would do well to avoid.

Let's face it, smoking leads to death. Let's save some of our kids from the life-long agony of smoking by banning it now. And let's not make it at taxpayer's expense.

AIDS

Business must face the disease

Government officials project that up to 480,000 persons in the U.S. will be infected by 1991.

IN A SOCIETY comfortable only with solutions solved in half-hour TV melodramas and 30 second sound bites, the concept of combating a disease with no cure in sight is nearly unimaginable to most Americans.

But dealing with AIDS will be the challenge of American business at least into the next century.

A recent survey of Detroit area businesses demonstrate that this segment of society is anything but ready for the challenge.

Most companies participating, 94 percent, in the Crains Detroit Business survey admit having no AIDS policy on the books. Only 29 percent of responding companies would allow workers displaying symptoms to remain on the job.

These demonstrably naive attitudes, if continued, spell disaster for American business. And because of the fragile nature of business in metro Detroit, our market could be especially vulnerable.

NOT ONLY can't it afford the lawsuits wrought by an uneducated leadership, it can hardly afford to lose valuable employees because they, too, went without the proper education.

Business just can't expect to sit and wait for a miracle cure. It's not on the horizon. It must take action.

In the next five years many of those undiagnosed will see their cases become active. AIDS does have a deceivingly long incubation period, leaving many with a false sense of security.

Many of those people whose AIDS will become active in the near term are those who up to this time have been considered outside the high risk groups — the heterosexual community.

Recent statistics show that the spread of AIDS is much more prolific than imagined, even by the experts.

Government officials project that up to 480,000 persons in the United States will be infected by 1991. Previous estimates stood at from 185,000 to 320,000, as reported by the Center for Disease Control.

Much of that underreporting exists in the heterosexual community, which seems to nearly have forgotten that the epidemic exists.

Metro Detroit certainly has its share of homosexuals and more than its share of intraveneous drug-users, high-risk people for sure.

But this is a disease that is an equal opportunity employer. Any of us could be at risk if we aren't educated properly. And the survey certainly shows that many in the busness community are uneducated.

More and more businesses will soon find themselves with employee next to employee — one with AIDS, one without.

COMPANIES must act now to establish policies so the rights of the AIDS-infected employee are protected.

To make it easier for all employees to work in this environment, education is a key. And that education must include all employees, from the maintenance crew to the CEO. Everyone must have a clear understanding of what AIDS really is and how it is and isn't transmitted.

The Crains survey demonstrated that many executives polled didn't have a clear understanding of the disease.

Many believe the fear of AIDS has been blown out of proportion.

Nearly half of those surveyed feared a negative public relations image if they have an AIDS-infected employee. Most were either unsure or definitely opposed to retaining such employees.

The disturbing results of the survey is the number of executives who are unsure of how they would handle AIDS in the workplace. Most agree such a case would cause great distress to other employees, but beyond that, they just aren't sure.

It is certainly true that the American business psyche has inhibits the typical executive from dealing with social problems at the workplace. For years the advice has been to make personnel decisions on a business basis and leave personal problems to other agencies.

But AIDS is a social crisis that just won't allow for this head-in-the-sand attitude.

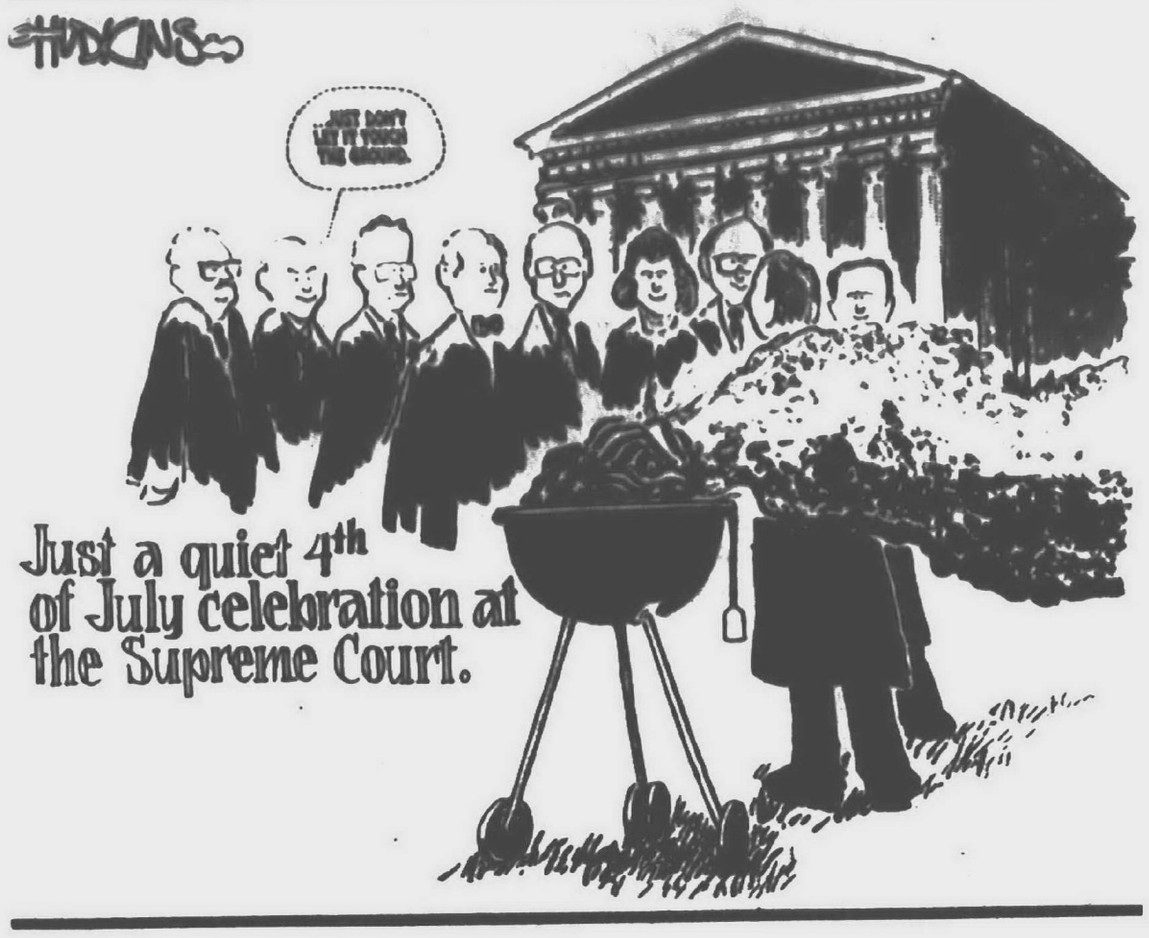

Don't take freedom for granted

THIS July 4, some of us will go to the beach, others to parades, others to a cookout or ballgame. That is as it should be.

But this year, give a thought to those brave people, in China and elsewhere, still struggling to achieve the kind of freedom we often take for granted.

Democracy, the right to self-government, is an inalienable right, not just for we Americans but for people of all nations.

Sadly, the road to democracy is paved with sacrifice. Recent events have not only proved that point but brought it into our own living rooms. This year, while on our way to a pleasant holiday in the sun, let us pause for a moment to remember those who have been willing to make that sacrifice — from our nation's founders to those, from other nations and other times, who have followed in their footsteps.

Anti-smut crusaders wound a free society

Steve Barnaby

I, FOR ONE, refuse to have my First Amendment rights trampled because some parent is too lazy to watch out for his kids.

Censorship, the weapon of the weak and unsure, often is touted as a socially necessary weapon. For those of us who believe free speech is more important than stopping Susie and Johnny from reading naughty magazines, the First Amendment is all we've got with which to fight back.

While some governments use tanks to crush ideas, others use morality. The object is the same — preservation of the status quo through control of ideas.

And if censorship is no good in China, it sure in heck is no good in this country.

The most recent example is the holy war being lead by Farmington Hills police chief William Dwyer. His troops have hit the streets in an ideological war against, of all things, pornography.

Urged on by the erstwhiles from the local Citizens Crime Advisory Committee, the anti-smut ghostbusters recently arrested a party store owner for selling what Dwyer has judged to be pornographic. The hit was made after the police talked a 15 year-old son of a police officer into buying a magazine.

NOW THAT really is sick — using a kid to do your dirty work.

Dwyer feels justified in this little act of exploitation because "we aren't going to tolerate this kind of trash in Farmington Hills."

Tough talk is cheap, chief, cheaper than the garbage you're trying to keep off the shelves.

His allies from the advisory committee load up with some pretty faulty logic in their battle to uphold the standards and morals of Farmington Hills, as committee member Betty Nicolay portrays it.

Jim Dorrell put his concern this way:

"If you are acquainted enough with this stuff, you begin to fantasize and you begin to do these things," he says.

Show of hands, please.

Wrong, Mr. Dorrell. Most everyone in this country has had a peek, even a long look. And most of us haven't turned out to be sexual perverts.

The committee's logic dictates hiding the material out of youthful eyesight.

Nicolay: "The thing that bothered all of us was that it wasn't undercover."

But putting the material under the counter will solve nothing.

THE REAL problems rest elsewhere.

● This material sells because a very profitable market exists and in this country, the bottom line dictates societal standards. Until we change the standard by which we measure society, pornography will continue as a booming market.

● Until concerned parents become more willing to monitor their children's source of income and spending habits, our youth will continue to buy pornographic magazines and drugs and junk food and . . . .

Dwyer noted that some of the material garnered in the 36-store taxpayer spending spree costs as much as $20, pretty easy pickings for children whose parents let them earn and spend at will.

Parents must spend more time with their children, influencing them by example — not by police state coercion.

Ford Road needs signs

To the editor:

I am concerned for the welfare of drivers in Canton Township. As our township grows, it is increasingly difficult to make left-hand turns onto Ford Road. Sometimes drivers must drive out into the intersection and turn part way before they can see the turn signals on oncoming cars.

Out of frustration, many people turn left during the red light. In fact, it seems it has become an unwritten law that two or three cars pass through intersections after the light turns red.

Although studies have been done about the traffic problems on Ford, nothing has changed. Citizens must not feel that they have to put their own and other people's lives on the lines just turn left onto Ford.

The answer is this: we need left-hand turn signals at every intersection on Ford Road. Only then will the high rate of accidents in this area be reduced. It is about time we put human lives before money.

Avoid those plastic plates

To the editor:

What! Plastic plates? (O&E June 12, 1989, Taste). Aren't we in trouble with too many plastic plates, cups, forks, spoons, diapers, bags and on and on? I don't use plastic plates or utensils at home and I certainly would not condone their use at a restaurant.

We all need to be more concerned about plastics and the effect our throwaway society has on the future and the present.

For now, I won't eat at a place that serves on plastic! I hope Kruse and Muer has a change of heart and conscience. We all need to do our part if we are to save our home. It's the only planet we have.

Parking laws merit involvement

Judith Doner Berne

One of the most important things the new law does is allow police departments to deputize civilians to assist with parking citations.

NOT GOOD TIMING for an aspiring politician.

Rosna Romney of Bloomfield Hills recently tried to cop a plea on a ticket for unauthorized parking in a handicapped space. Bad in itself, but it also came at a time when all eyes interested in that issue were on Lansing.

And Lansing has responded with new legislation, signed into law last week, which puts more bite into and expands Michigan's handicapped parking laws.

Now the minimum Michigan motorists who park illegally in parking spaces reserved for the handicapped can be fined is up from $25 to $50. The maximum fine remains $100. It also punishes those who fake a handicap to obtain access to the close-by parking with a fine of up to $100.

But probably one of the most important things the new law does is allow police departments to deputize civilians to assist with parking citations.

IN ROMNEY'S case, she was caught by a Troy patrolman. But that probably is the exception. You know yourself how often you see cars without the proper authorization parking in handicapped spaces.

Birmingham may be the exception. Police there write about four tickets a week and police Capt. Millard Squire said it is given a high priority with enforcement both of public and private parking — such as apartments. "We've had a high fine to discourage civil infractions," he said, $50, and $75 if not paid in 10 days. But that city, which has metered on the street parking, has meter maids, whose sole job is to monitor parking.

West Bloomfield may be more typical. Police Sgt. Mike Madigan acknowledges handicapped violations aren't a high priority. "If they're (officers) busy, it's an afterthought." He estimates that most of the 158 handicapped violations ticketed last year resulted from citizen call-ins.

However, he's not overjoyed with the deputizing idea. "You'd have to screen them carefully."

BUT TROY Republican Sen. Doug Cruce is taking this part of the law into his hands.

Cruce sponsored the bill in the House and led it through the Legislature. Now, his office staff is working on a manual to help police departments train citizens to pass out either warnings or citations for handicapped violations.

The program is modeled after a successful one in Flint. In Flint, part of that program includes a colorful "Save a Space" coupon, funded by a coalition of community businesses and non-profit groups.

The coupon is both a warning and educational. It says in part: "This coupon has been placed on your vehicle as a courtesy. Parking in this space could have resulted in a $100 fine." It also contains information on who is eligible and how to obtain handicapped parking.

Either with a specially assigned police officer or trained citizens, why not bombard a mall or two with enforcement over an intense period — just like earmarking a road for a speed trap. You know you slow down when you approach a place where you once got a ticket.

As citizens, you can call for it. Your taxes pay for police who are enpowered to enforce all laws. Go to your city council or township board and say you want handicapped parking laws to be enforced — either by the police or through such a citizens watch program.

Courts are rewriting state budget

Tim Richard

THEY OUGHT to set up an appropriations committee in the Michigan courts. That's where the state budget may be decided.

A third major lawsuit was filed last week against state government. Two nursing home groups went to the U.S. District Court in Kalamazoo charging that 70 percent of the 449 nursing homes in Michigan are receiving less than what it costs to care for patients.

Plaintiffs are the Michigan Non-Profit Homes Association and the Health Care Association of Michigan. They say the state violated a 1980 amendment to the federal Medicaid program requiring states to pay rates that are adequate to meet costs. The shortfall, they contend, is $13 million this year.

Nursing homes receive an average of $49 a day per patient, but the nursing homes say that isn't enough.

Hike takes? No need, they say — the state needs to set new priorities.

IN-FORMULA school districts — those receiving state aid — have their own case going.

They say the state is shortchanging them on educational opportunity. These are the school districts without the high-tech plants, the auto assembly plants, the bank headquarters, the childless condos and air-conditioned shopping malls that generate local property tax revenue.

Meanwhile, our counties and cities are deciding whether to join a lawsuit — a class action case against the state over court funding.

They argue the Legislature committed itself into taking over subsidizing of trial courts in 1980. The state took over Detroit and Wayne County courts. Now the other 82½ counties are asking for the same monetary sauce.

(Offhand, I would say the latter two suits have some merit. The Michigan Constitution has a whole page of fine type about the state's role in public education, and it also contains some verbiage about "one court of justice." But it's not my purpose to play chief justice here.)

Those suits reminded me of my visit to the new Oakland County Jail — as a tourist, of course. The officer guiding us kept pointing out that facilities had to be a certain way because the court ordered this, the court ordered that, and so on. In short, the jail was designed that way, not because it was a good way to design jails, but because a settlement in a federal court suit required it.

WHAT WE'RE seeing, friends, is more government by lawsuit.

And that's why I'm serious in suggesting that our court system needs an appropriations committee, just like the state Senate and House.

The trouble with government by lawsuit is, to take the nursing home case, that only the nursing home segment of the federal and state budgets will be looked at.

Now, in an appropriations committee, you balance the needs of nursing homes against, schools, community colleges, universities, courts, social services, toxic waste cleanups, game wardens, state police, social workers, banking regulators, day care inspectors and so on.

Then you balance those needs against the experts' projections of revenue under existing taxes.

Finally, you balance the sum of needs against the perceived resistance of taxpayers and make a tough decision: Can we (hrrumph!) enhance revenues without getting recalled by voters?

IT'S POPULAR to bash legislators. Their system for making budget decisions is imperfect, as are all human institutions.

Yet the legislative process is much closer to both the real and ideal worlds than the judicial system.

Perhaps it's helpful that we have these three lawsuits going on at once. The judges in each case might just read the papers and grasp the full impact of what they're being asked to do — rewrite the state budget in court.

Anti-drug message should begin early

Doc Doyle

The answer is to start drug education programs in early elementary where childrens' minds are like sponges . . .'

Q: Why haven't drug education programs been successful? It seems like the problem has increased over the years. I thought schools started programs back in the "hippie" period.

I don't believe we've had the success we hoped for because we primarily targeted high school students. It was like saying, let's wait until they get into drug abuse and then we will rehabilitate them.

The answer is to start drug education programs in early elementary where childrens' minds are like sponges and literally "brainwash" a new generation to the self-destructiveness of alcohol and drug abuse.

ONE POSITIVE thrust made in the '60s was in addressing cigarette smoking. Elementary children over the last 20 years have been consistently educated to understand the danger of cigarette smoking. And, indeed, the latest research indicated that smoking among adolescents has dropped from 35 percent to 20 percent and from 50 percent to 30 percent for the adult population in the last 20 years. I believe anti-smoking elementary programs have played a major role in the decrease in smoking this generation is now experiencing.

Therefore, there is reason to believe that if we focused our educational efforts on alcohol and substance abuse at the elementary level rather than primarily at the middle school and high school levels as we did with cigarettes, we would bring up a generation of children who will see little glamour in "tying one on."

PROGRAMS won't completely do away with the adolescent alcohol, drug or cigarette problem but a sound program started in kindergarten will pull away many children who teeter on the fringe of the drug scene at adolescence because of their earlier saturation about the dangers of drugs and alcohol.

As with all education programs — reading, writing, math, science, social studies — the more resources and energies given at the elementary level, the less remediation or "catch up" classes needed at the secondary level.

There is no reason not to accept the fact that an early start in addressing substance abuse in school is in our children's and society's best interest. Programs such as "Growing Healthy" are now available to address how alcohol and drugs damage and destroy the body as well as the mind. These programs systematically work their way from kindergarten through the elementary years and fit right in with the middle school and high school efforts.

It should be noted that one of education's major problems is the $6 billion spent by the alcohol and tobacco industry on advertising. Consider what $6 billion could do in educating children of the dangers of drug abuse.

THERE IS a drug problem in our society and schools are a mini-society within our large society. However, I don't know of one high school principal or assistant principal who packages alcohol, a nickel bag of marijuana, steriods or LSD and distributes them to students who come to school in the morning. Nevertheless, society's drug problem does carry over into school settings and we are responsible for dealing with the issue.

I know schools are willing to do their part through drug education programs. I believe the early elementary level is the starting point.

In the long run, however, it will take a combined school, home, community and law enforcement effort to positively impact the adolescent alcohol and drug abuse problem.

The bottom line is, we as adults must look at our own behavior before we cast stones at young adults. The degree of drug or alcohol use by young adults, in most cases, is directly proportional to the degree of drug and alcohol use by the parents.

Mock drill preps team for national emergency

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

A ravaging earthquake or major air crash can happen anytime, and trained rescue teams must be ready to respond.

That's the calling of the Delta DMAT Team, a group of medical personnel who will be called upon in the event of a national disaster.

"The group was formed in May, but it's been on the drawing board for a couple of years," said Nancy Sciba, a registered nurse at St. Mary Hospital, Livonia.

Sciba is one of a dozen volunteers from St. Mary on the DMAT (Disaster Medical Assistance Team). The team consists of 90 people, who work in three groups. Livonia nurse Lori Ratkos, on staff at Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills, is another team member.

Since they are trained to work together as a team, they are also asked to be available in the event of local county or state disasters.

Sciba took part in a staging exercise at Detroit Metropolitan Airport June 21. The practice run was a mock earthquake aftermath, with "victims" flown in from San Francisco for treatment in local hospitals, including St. Mary. Student volunteers are commonly used as "victims."

"These patients were already stabilized," Sciba said. "I think the practice went very well."

SEVEN "VICTIMS" were taken to St. Mary, which has by far the largest hospital representation on the team. Besides Sciba, of Westland, registered nurses Barbara Battey, Barbara Dowel, Ann Ferrari, Terry Kraft, Mary Ann MacMurray, and licensed practical nurse Paulette Tamm, all of Livonia, are DMAT members. Registered nurses Genie Nehs and Tanya Steinhauser of Northville, Mary Noel of Wayne, Kathy Schillaci of Garden City, and Marie Steiniger of Walled Lake comprise the rest of the St. Mary's team.

"I think it says a lot for them. It shows they're interested in helping society and are committed as professionals to their career," said Audrey Zavodsky, St. Mary head nurse.

The volunteers have made themselves available for training on days off from their regular hospital duties. The mock disaster drills are staged with the help of the U.S. Army and other military personnel.

St. Mary conducts regular mock drills in conjunction with Owen Chemical "to get the kinks out of the system," Sproul said.

Going to the dentist doesn't have to be a frightening experience. Dr. Janis Hayward and other dentists are adept at working with cowardly patients.

Worry

Dentists help ease fears

By Julie Brown
staff writer

The movie "The Marathon Man" didn't do much for the public image of dentists.

In that movie, the character played by Dustin Hoffman suffers mightily while a sadistic dentist drills a hole in one of his front teeth. No anesthetic's administered to ease his pain.

Real-life visits to the dentist don't bear much resemblance to that fictional incident. Dentists don't take pleasure in watching their patients suffer; even so, many people are reluctant to go to the dentist.

"Dental phobia is very common," said Dr. Donald Davies Sr., a Plymouth dentist who's been practicing for 35 years. "Unfortunately, it prevents a lot of people from seeking dental care."

That means those people are unlikely to go to the dentist unless they're in acute pain. Procedures needed at that point are more extensive than would be the case if patients had sought help earlier.

THERE ARE several reasons why people are afraid, said Dr.

This fearful patient has something to smile about

David Mackinder remembers being afraid to go to the dentist.

"I'd been in so many traumatic situations that caused me a lot of stress and discomfort," he said. "I didn't trust any of them."

Mackinder had gone for 10 years or more without visiting a dentist.

"I didn't want to go anywhere near a dentist's office," said Mackinder, a Grass Lake, Mich., resident.

He remembers going to the dentist many years ago and having people work on his teeth with dull tools. Procedures weren't explained to Mackinder and he didn't know what to expect.

"Many times, I would let things go to the point where there wasn't anything that could be done. I was a real basket case."

He'd passed out more than once while in the dentist's office. Mackinder remembers leaving in the middle of an extraction procedure rather than having the work finished.

ALL THAT has changed for Mackinder, who works at the Hydra-Matic Division Willow Run Plant in Ypsilanti. About two years ago, he started going to Dr. Janis Hayward, a Canton dentist, for treatment.

Family members and friends were giving Mackinder gentle suggestions that he needed to have work done on his teeth. At first, Mackinder asked Hayward about having all of his teeth pulled and then replaced.

"She was very persuasive and talked me out of that."

He started with a couple sessions at the dentist's office where no work was done. Mackinder and Hayward talked about his fears and about the treatment he'd need.

He went to the dentist's office frequently in the beginning. Mackinder needed to have extensive restorative work done.

That work included root canals. He's now having bridge work done to replace his missing teeth.

"We still have a considerable amount of work to do."

Mackinder has some down-to-earth advice for others who are afraid to visit the dentist. It's important to look for a dentist who's willing to take time and answer questions.

"For me, it was quite a search until I found Dr. Hayward. She built up my confidence over a period of time."

Having that needed dental work done has boosted Mackinder's confidence. He's not as self-conscious about smiling or speaking.

Going to see the dentist no longer causes Mackinder to break out in a cold sweat.

"I'll tell you quite honestly that I look forward to going there. Two years ago, it was the last place in the world I wanted to go."

Fun's in the cards

THE EMPHASIS isn't on competition when members of the Canton Seniors Pioneers Club get together to play cards.

"It's friendly," said Rose Walker of Canton, club president. "It's not competitive."

Club members held their annual card party the afternoon of Friday, June 23, at the Canton Recreation Center. About 75 seniors bought tickets in advance, with a few more doing so at the door.

"I think seniors look forward to any event that brings them out of their homes," Walker said.

Mildred Robine of Canton agreed.

"Seniors love to socialize," she said. "I'm enjoying it very much. We have a good time playing Uno."

Pinochle and euchre were among other card games club members and guests enjoyed Friday.

They help to ease fears

James Glinski, who's starting his 10th year practicing dentistry in Canton, "A patient's longtime dentist may die or retire, necessitating a search for a new dentist.

"It's difficult finding somebody you can confide in," Glinski said. "You build up a loyalty."

Some people only go to the dentist when they have a severe problem, and thus associate dental visits with pain and suffering. Some haven't gone to the dentist in 20 or 30 years; their views of dentistry may be outdated and distorted.

An estimated 50 percent of the population doesn't receive regular dental care.

"We never see those really frightened people, probably only when they're in dire need," said Dr. Janis Hayward, a Canton dentist who's been practicing for five years.

Some patients may have had a bad experience with a gruff dentist.

"I think it has to do with previous experience," said Dr. Bonnie Misiak, a Canton dentist who has been practicing for six years and is Hayward's partner. "You hear all kinds of stories."

Some nervous patients remember childhood experiences, "with a great big gap between then and now," Misiak said. They don't realize that tools and treatment procedures have changed for the better in recent years.

THE MOST important thing for a dentist is simply to take the time to answer questions and explain procedures, she said. Doing so helps to create trust.

Glinski views meeting with a patient as a two-way interview. He informs patients of procedures and possible complications.

"You've got to tell them what can happen and what to expect afterward," said Glinski.

Patients need to be aware of the costs associated with dental care, he said. That too can be a source of fear for many patients.

If cost is a concern, a treatment program can be set up in stages, Hayward said, with the most important work done first.

Improved anesthetic techniques, including use of nitrous oxide, "the so-called happy gas," can help patients cope, Davies said.

Relaxation techniques can help as well. Some patients find it helpful to tense and relax certain muscles while breathing deeply, he said. Some dentists use hypnosis, although Davies hasn't done so.

Some procedures, such as having a root canal done, can frighten patients. Davies takes time to explain the procedure, emphasizing that most are routine and relatively painless.

HAYWARD LIKES to spend some time with frightened patients, discussing their previous experiences and their fears. She tries to give a patient some control over the procedure, such as having him or her raise a hand to interrupt the work.

Some patients are so afraid of anesthesic they ask about having work done without it. That's a possibility, although Hayward explains that an anesthetic can be administered without much pain.

"It's usually not as bad as they think it might be," she said. Hayward can use a topical anesthetic to numb a patient's skin, and can administer the injection slowly, giving tissues in the mouth time to expand.

The dentists emphasize the value of preventive care. Visits to the dentist — typically twice a year, more often for patients with special needs — can go a long way in preventing major problems. Seeking treatment for problems early means they're not as difficult to treat.

"I think we have a better educated population for dentistry today than we ever had before," Davies said.

Good care at home is essential as well; dentists and dental hygienists emphasize the importance of proper brushing and flossing.

The dentists concentrate on helping the next generation of dental patients — today's children — get used to regular visits. Children can start coming in for checkups as young as age 2; some come in even earlier just to visit and get used to the surroundings.

"Most kids come in with no problems whatsoever," Misiak said.

She remembers treating one 5-year-old girl who had many cavities. Misiak found working with that youngster rewarding.

"She told me at the end that she wanted to grow up and be a dentist."

Dr. Janis Hayward and other dentists are accustomed to working with nervous patients. "What I like to do is, number one, take some time with them," she said.

is a popular one, Walker said. In addition to the card party, a salad luncheon, a raffle and "oodles and oodles of door prizes" were featured. A bake sale was part of the fun.

Many of those at the party were experienced card players.

"You know, they play here every week," Walker said. "Most of them do play pinochle."

Pioneers Club members enjoy other activities as well, including pool tournaments, speakers and dances. Club members enjoy the pleasure of each other's company, even when they're facing each other across a card table during a friendly game.

"I don't like it if people take it too seriously, anyway," Walker said.

Good food and good company made the time spent at the card party enjoyable. Pioneers Club members have a number of other activities, including dances and special speakers.

Arts festival highlights Old Village

By Julie Brown
staff writer

The arts festival in Old Village had something for just about everyone.

The festival, held Saturday and Sunday in Plymouth, replaced the Dearie Days promotional event.

"It doesn't compare at all," said Richard Montgomery of Plymouth, president of the Old Village Association. "Dearie Days was more of a garage sale event."

He and others from the association would like the festival to become an annual event, similar to Ann Arbor's arts festival but on a smaller scale.

"I think it's going to work too," said Montgomery, who has a business in Old Village specializing in industrial auctions. "We've got quite a few exhibitors this year."

About 100 artists and craftspeople participated. Many demonstrated their work, in addition to offering it for sale.

ENTERTAINMENT WAS included, "two solid days of it, from jazz to blues to dancing, comedy, everything. A good lineup," he said.

The event gave Old Village business owners a chance to put their best foot forward.

"I think it's great," said Judy Mullen of Royal Oak, owner of Moments in Time Antiques. She'd like to see more antique dealers represented in future festivals.

"But it takes time." As a sole proprietor and a relative newcomer to Old Village, it's difficult for Mullen to be active in the association. Living in Royal Oak means she spends a fair amount of time commuting.

"Old Village is so unique. I think this street's great," she said. "In fact, I'd like to live over here." If all goes well with her business, Mullen plans to move to Plymouth.

Mullen has been in business since last Thanksgiving. She sells a variety of antiques, and would eventually like to specialize in reproductions of vintage clothing. She has an extensive collection of clothing patterns from the 1890s and from 1900 to 1955.

Sharon Dillenbeck of Canton was also keeping busy during the festival. She owns D & M Studios, an art studio in Old Village.

"It's a lot of work, but it's a lot of fun," she said. The arts festival is a much bigger event than Dearie Days was.

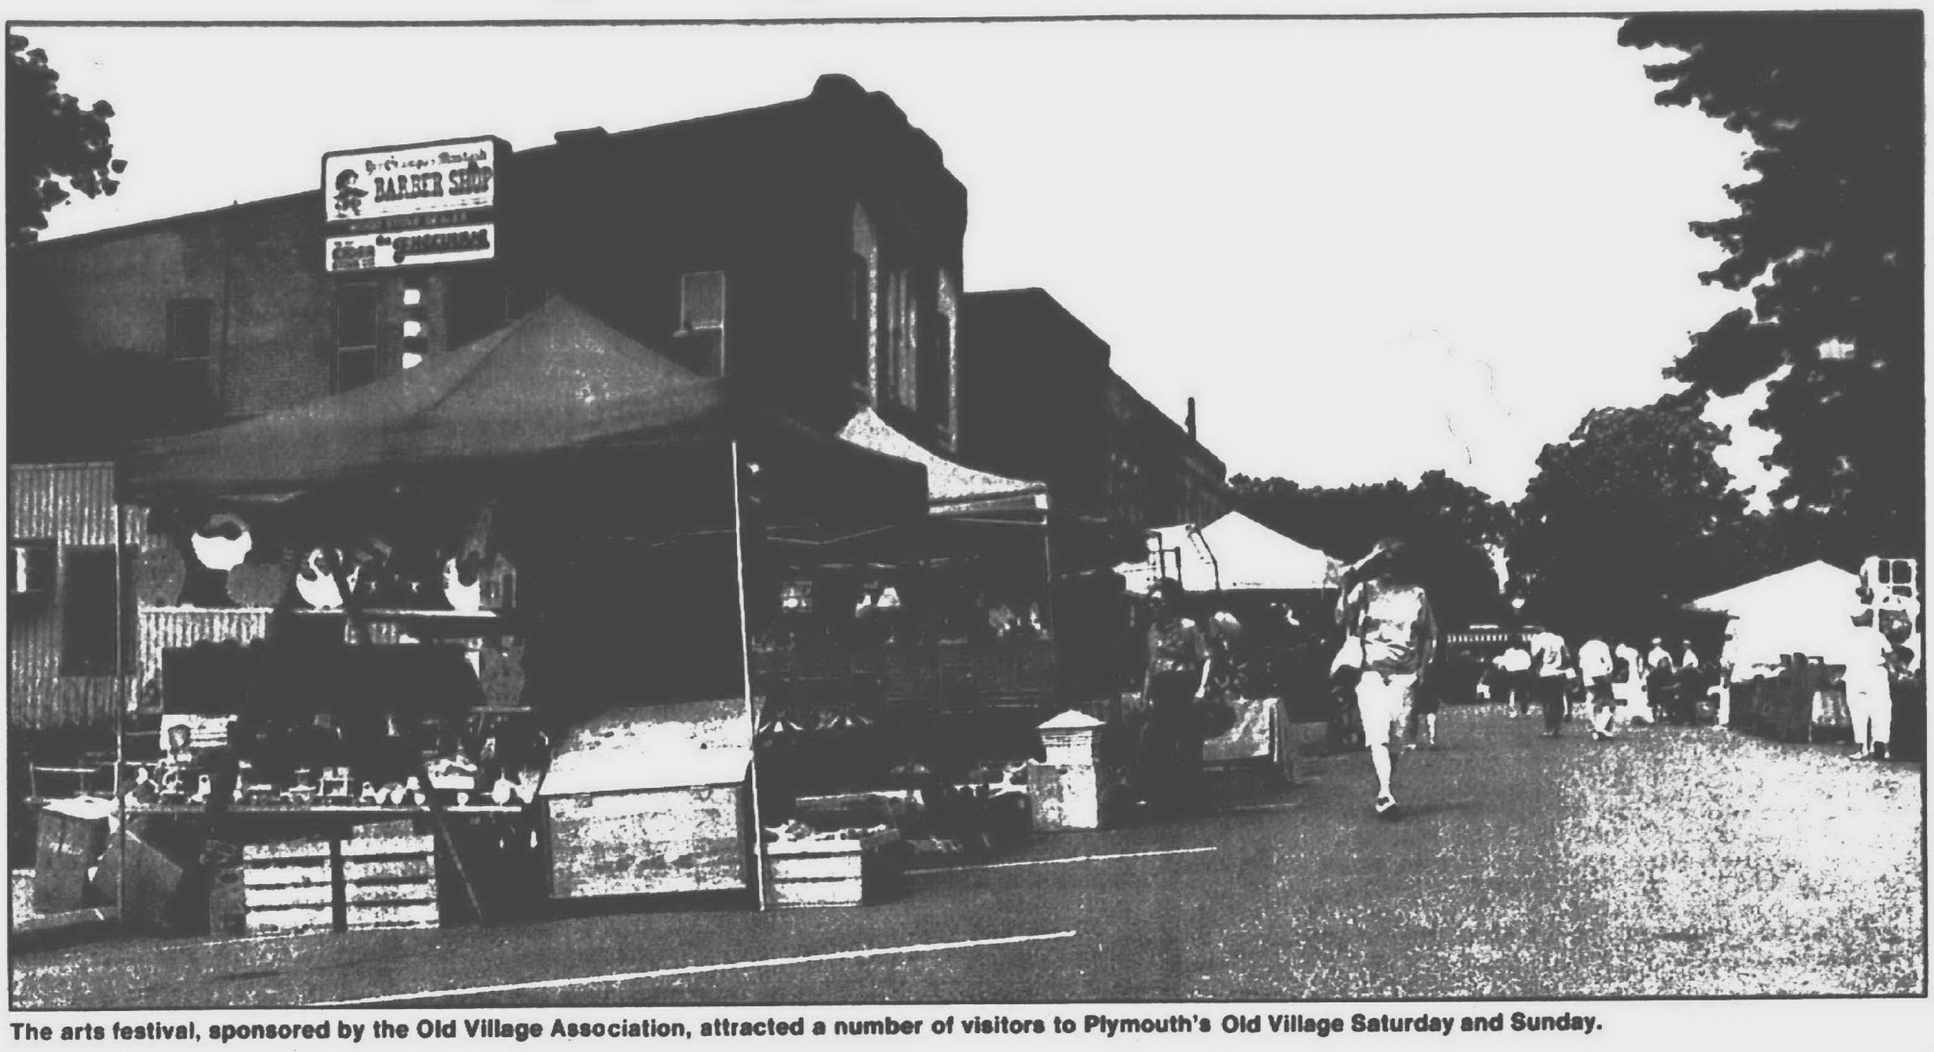

EVENTS SUCH as the festival help increase people's awareness of Old Village and what it has to offer, said Montgomery, president of the Old Village Association.

"This is Plymouth. It just happens to be the Old Village of Plymouth."

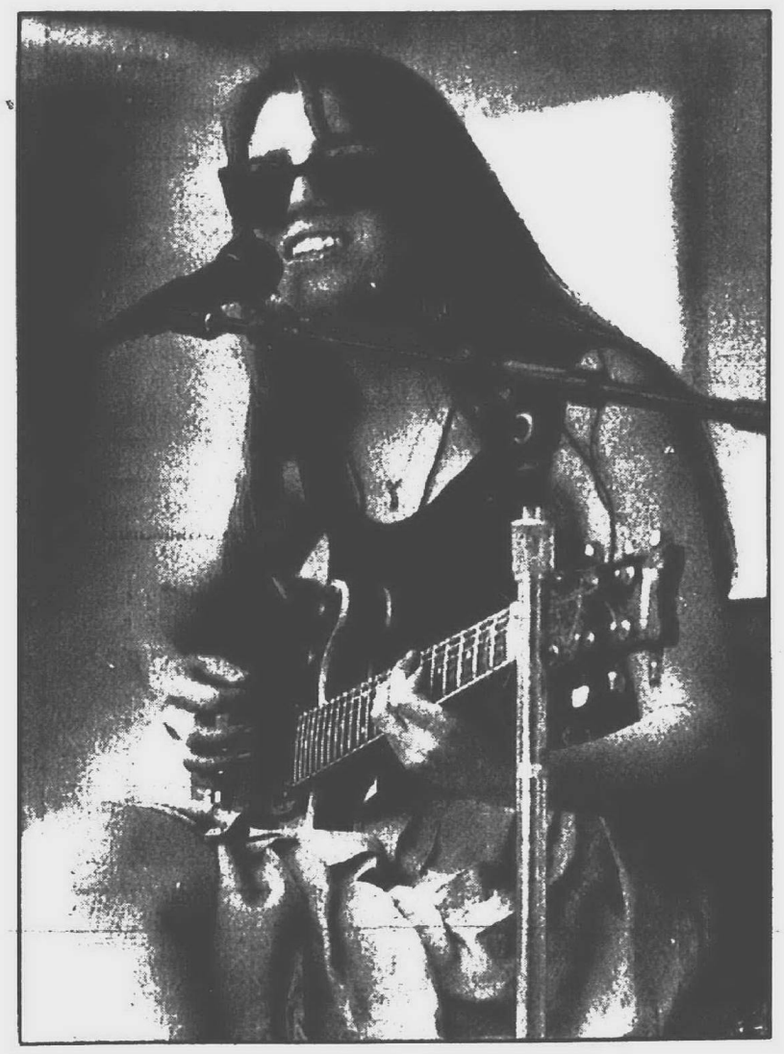

Montgomery doesn't believe in separating Old Village from downtown Plymouth's retail district. His business takes him into downtown Plymouth regularly.

"It's the same community. All our money is in the same town. This is just a little jewel in the center of it."

The arts festival, sponsored by the Old Village Association, attracted a number of visitors to Plymouth's Old Village Saturday and Sunday.

moral perspectives

Rabbi Irwin Groner

Ethics overlooked in today's society

We are living in a time when ethical standards are being violated on every level of our society, and particularly on the highest level. We have been assaulted by scandals and corruption, by deceitfulness and hypocrisy, by betrayal and sleaze. Pick up the daily newspaper and you'll find another episode, another incident, another leader.

The culprits are not common criminals, victims of poverty, ignorance or neglect,or the castoffs of society who have led brutish, despicable lives. Some of these names and faces are identified as leaders and representatives of major institutions of our society: of government; of the investment community; of religion; institutions in which we place our trust and confidence.

How sad it is that the Speaker of the House of Representatives has had to resign his high position because he failed to meet standards of ethical responsibility. Other prominent figures had been the objects of disclosure of improper and unseemly conduct.

The Children of Israel, as they journeyed in the wilderness, carried with them the restraints and disciplines of the moral code. But somehow, we have lost our way, the landmarks are no longer visible anymore. They have been obscured by the winds of self-indulgence. Do what feels good, do what's right for you. As the popular song say, "Don't worry, be happy."

ETHICS IS not always what is expedient or profitable. We live in a society that places a premium on personal freedom, and this has made us the envy of the world, but has also made us vulnerable to corruption.

An industrial psychologist reports that three out of every 10 prospective retail workers admits stealing from a previous employer. The Chamber of Commerce believes that employee theft raises the cost of consumer goods as much as 15 percent.

We are not dealing with the most deprived and disadvantaged people in our society, but rather with elements of the secure majority. The hedonism so prevalent in our culture found expression in a message that was preached during every television hour, "You can only go around once in life, so get all the gusto you can."

This is not only a statement about beer, it's also about ethics and theology. I can't tell you much about the beer, but it's very bad ethics and equally bad theology.

Meg Greenfield once wrote an essay called "Why Nothing is Wrong Anymore." She points our that in our age, we have chosen not to change our ways, but to come up with alternative names for wrong.

FIRST, WHAT is wrong is not really wrong anymore, we call it "stupid." Next, she notes, what's wrong is not really wrong anymore, but "within legal bounds."

If an action is legally permissible, it must be morally acceptable, and possibly even good. Third, what's wrong, is not really wrong anymore, but "sick." Wrong deeds are done not because they are intentionally wrong, but because the person who does them isn't well, which means he is no longer culpable or responsible. What's more, society has to take its share of the blame for bruising that person's self-esteem and tearing down his or her moral barriers.

Finally, what is wrong is not really wrong anymore, but "complex." No issue can be painted in black and white anymore. The world has become too complicated, too sophisticated. There are no longer moral absolutes. And she concludes by saying, "As I listen to the moral arguments swirling about us, I become ever more persuaded that our real problem is this: The still small voice of conscience has become far too small — and utterly still."

Habitat builds low-income housing, fellowship

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

One nail at a time, Habitat For Humanity International helps build fellowship.

The goal of the ecumenical Christian organization is to eliminate poverty housing from the world, but not by simply throwing money at the problem. Instead, Habitat For Humanity has created an innovative program where future homeowner and volunteers work together to rebuild houses for the lower income families.

The program is growing, reaching Canada and South Africa along with the United States. Some 384 projects are under work, including several in the Detroit area.

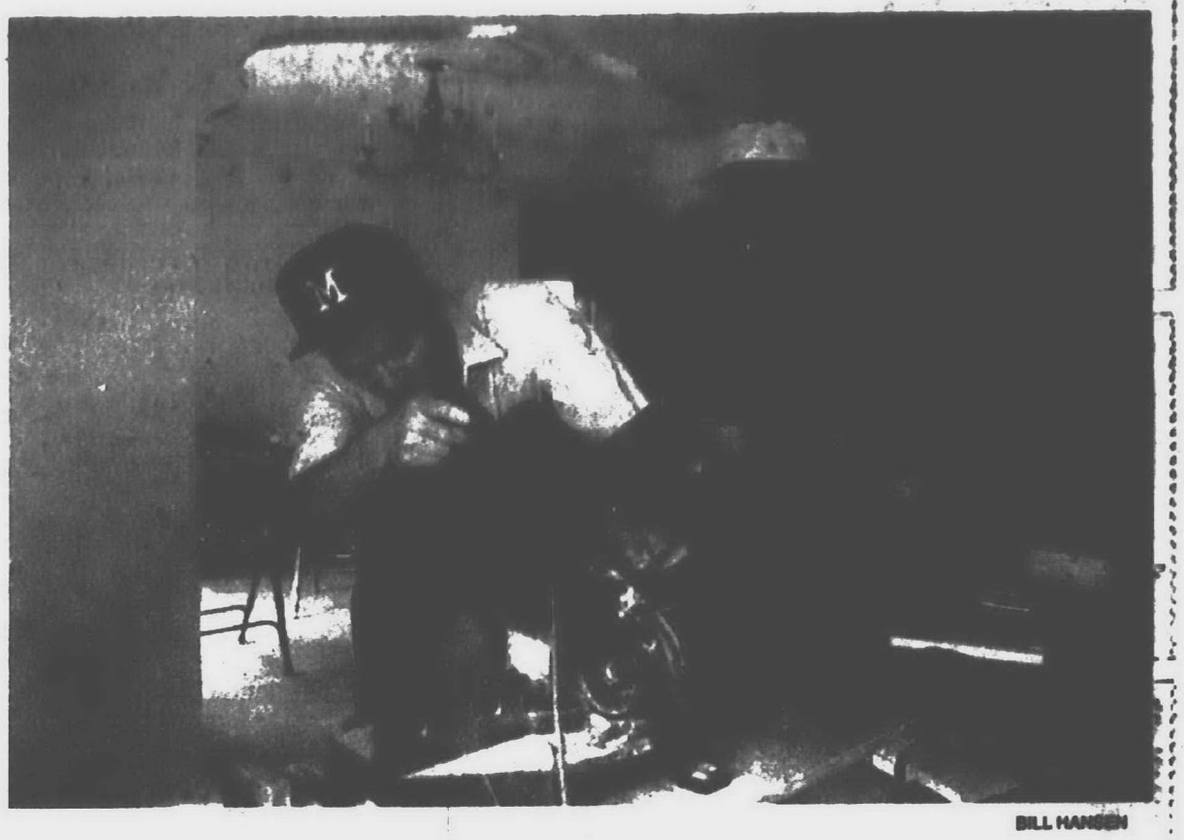

Locally, the number of church groups participating is also growing. Some of those included in the list are Grand River Baptist Church in Livonia, Riverside Park Church of Christ, Trinity Church of the Brethren, St. John Episcopal in Plymouth, Holy Trinity Lutheran, St. Timothy Presbyterian, St. Edith Catholic in Livonia, Church of the Savior Reformed, Newburg United Methodist, Nativity Church of Christ and St. Matthew United Methodist.

Recently, a delegation of volunteers from Newburg United spent a Saturday afternoon, working on a home. The group helped paint the inside of the home and refinished a door.

The program not only helps those who can't afford housing, but also opens the door between the suburbs and the city.

"I THINK they get a sense of helping their neighbor," said Elizabeth Pierce, who is vice president and volunteer coordinator for Metro Detroit Habitat. "They can also do something concrete that they can see. I've been involved in my church's oversea missions where that isn't the case. It broadens their view of the world.

"I didn't realize how things are down there," said Cassie Norman, 19, of Livonia. "I was just happy to contribute. . . . I learned about the people and came to the reality of the situation in Detroit."

BILL HANSEN

And the reality of the situation is many Detroit resident can't afford to buy a new home. Habitat buys the homes and, in turn, sells them to families who qualify at 80 percent of the appraised value. The average home in Detroit sells for $20,000.

To meet the program's requirements, they have to below the poverty line. The loan period is spread out over 10 to 20 years with no interest. Sounds simple enough, but it isn't.

"There are no handouts at Habitat," said Scott Wilkinson, a United Methodist minister at Wayne State University who is involved with the program. "It's sort of a foolproof system."

In addition to proving financial need, a family has to contribute 400 hours of "sweat equity" where they work on rehabilitating the home themselves. Part of that time can also be spent working on other Habitat houses.

DURING THE next five years, people from Habitat inspect the homes. If a person is not maintaining the home, it can be taken away.

Since 1983, Metro Detroit Habitat has provided five homes to people in Detroit. The group will be working on two more houses in the future.

Funding for the organization comes from individuals, churches, corporations and organizations. No government money is used. Mortgage payments are put into a local "Fund for Humanity," which goes into building new homes.

Habitat for Humanity International is based in Atlanta, Ga. People have become familiar with the group after seeing former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, working on Habitat projects.

Pierce said the organization needs administrative volunteers. Local churches and other individuals have been more than helpful working on homes.

With that, a spirit of community is certainly present at Habitat projects.

"People in the neighborhood will drive by and see our sign. They ask, 'What are you doing here?,'" Wilkinson said, "and they'll stop and help."

Composting can trim need for waste disposal

Q. I've heard that composting grass clippings and leaves will soon be mandatory in Michigan. Please explain what composting is and why it's become so important.

A. Composting will be mandatory for all Michigan communities in 1991. Diverting grass clippings, leaves and other yard wastes out of landfills and/or incinerators will reduce our solid waste stream by about 16 percent annually.Several communities in the tri-county area have already started composting programs with positive results.

The following questions are the ones most often asked about composting:

WHAT IS COMPOSTING?

Composting is the breakdown of organic material (plant or animal) until it's ready to be used as nourishment by plants. Leaves, weeds, grass clippings, fruit and vegetable trimmings, coffee grounds and tea leaves all break down naturally. By composting, the process is just speeded up.

WHY SHOULD WE COMPOST?

Composting creates a rich organic fertilizer, solves disposal problems and saves the composter money.

Terry Gibb

WHAT IS THE CORRECT WAY TO COMPOST?

To put it simply, just layer the compost materials in approximately five-inch layers, mix with dirt and water and provide air.

Composting can be done in a hole, free standing (as in a pile), or a garbage can punched with holes.

Each day dump the compostables in your pile and cover with a little dirt. Once a week turn the contents with a shovel to mix and add air. In about seven weeks it should be ready to use.

Lime, phosphate or manure will speed up the decomposition process.

Keep the compost damp by occasionally spraying it with water, but do not soak it.

WHAT THINGS CAN I PUT IN A COMPOST PILE?

Grass clippings, leaves, dryer lint, feathers, tea bags, egg shells, toilet paper, shredded newspaper (but not colored comics), rinds, coffee grounds, hair, potato skins, corn cobs, saw dust.

DO NOT USE IN COMPOST PILE: Meats or meat products, bones, twigs.

HOW DOES THE GARBAGE BAG COMPOSTING METHOD WORK?

This method is called anaerobic composting because it is done without the additon of oxygen. Fill your garbage bag with compost materials. Add a few shovels of dirt, one shovel of lime and two shovels of manure. Water the contents, tie the bag lightly to elimate any air, roll the bag a little to mix the contents and let it set for about one month (longer in cold weather).

CAN I COMPOST IN WINTER?

Yes. You can use the just mentioned garbage bag method or the traditional method. Combine the pile in the fall and cover with black plastic. After three weeks, turn it over with a shovel, water it well, recover with the black plastic and let it work through the winter.

HOW CAN THE COMPOST BE USED?

Seedlings can be started in new compost, called humus. Spread humus over your entire garden area to add nutrients to garden platns. Humus can be mixed around the base of trees, plants and flowers instead of expensive fertilizer.

Bad Boys' death greatly exaggerated?

By Noreen Flack
special writer

Bad news is still good news for Athletic Supporter Ltd. of Farmington Hills.

Although sales of Detroit Pistons world championship T-shirts have fallen off since their peak shortly after the Pistons beat the Los Angeles Lakers for the NBA title, sales of Bad Boys shirts have increased, according to Sandy Berris, company vice president.

Undaunted by the death sentence given to the Bad Boys nickname by Piston captain Isiah Thomas, the company, which holds exclusive rights to the Bad Boys logo, will expand its marketing efforts by offering Bad Boys coffee mugs and water bottles. And it will start campaigning on Friday by providing retailers with free buttons bearing the plea, "Save Our Detroit Bad Boys."

The Bad Boy best-seller T-shirt is designed on black, a basketball with a skull and crossbones in the center, and the lettering — BAD BOYS — across the top. The T-shirt sells for approximately $13 retail.

Employees are still working "around the clock" logging 75-hour workweeks. They'll get their first chance to spend some of their overtime pay this weekend when the company closes for four days with employees receiving Monday and Tuesday off as paid holidays.

Maybe then they'll be able to reflect on the Herculean task they performed.

"We're making as many as 15,000 T-shirts a day," said Bill Berris, president, at the height of the frenzy. "Everyone wants their goods the next day. Department stores are physically coming here and picking up merchandise. Bad in this instance certainly means good."

Forty-eight hours after the championship, Berris was working with six hours of sleep, trying to keep up with T-shirt demands from distributors. Demand will continue for at least a couple more weeks, Berris said.

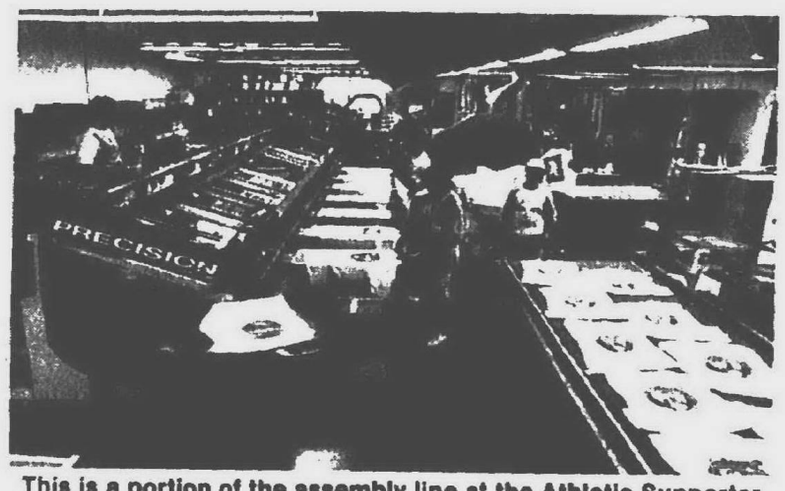

So far, Sandy Berris' prediction of brisk sales despite Isiah Thomas' comments to President Bush during the team's visit to the White House last week have been correct. Thomas said the Bad Boys image is dead because the original Bad Boy, Rick Mahorn, is headed to the Minnesota Timberwolves as a result of the NBA expansion draft.

"We think to the fans the Pistons will always be the Detroit Bad Boys. The fans sort of gave them that name and image, and I don't they'll want to give up on that," Sandy Berris said.

Bill Berris, president of Athletic Supporter Ltd., is standing in the showroom of his company wearing a T-shirt with the Bad Boys logo that his company developed. Other Pistons T-shirts visible in the background also are designed and manufactured at the Farmington Hills facility.

staff photos by RANDY BORST

This is a portion of the assembly line at the Athletic Supporter Ltd., a Farmington Hills company that produces T-shirts with Detroit Pistons logos and designs.

ASSISTANT PRODUCTION manager Debbie Bottomly clocked more than 80 hours in a recent workweek. She said employees are determined to meet all requests.

"I just keep seeing cases and cases of shirts," Bottomly said. "This is the first time this company has experienced this type of growth and the growth problems that come out of this.

"But I'm more concerned with getting the work done and making sure things are running," Bottomly said. "It's like taking a puzzle and making all the pieces fit."

With a shortage of skilled workers, Athletic Supporter Ltd.'s 40 full-time employees were joined by 20 new hirees, Berris said.

Todd Robinson, screen printer, expects to work 80 hours during each week until business slows down.

"The monotony gets to you," Robinson said. "But I hope we can get something like this going again in the future. Just one design and you can make $1 million."

"How well a team does definitely affects the business," Bill Berris said. "Michigan has had a fantastic year with the Red Wings winning the National Hockey League Norris Division and now the Pistons. Sales have skyroeketed. We have had a 400 percent increase."

BERRIS AND art director Robin Brant designed the Bad Boys logo in November 1988 and began to market the design on T-shirts.

"We were sitting around trying to come up with something," Berris recalled. "We were thinking of this tough, serious image.

"I know a lot of the players and they are tough, strong winners. This Bad Boy thing got right behind them."

AS MUCH as the design has complemented the team and pleased Detroiters, Berris' marketing strategy does not limit the Bad Boy logo to the Pistons or to the Motor City.

"Initially it was meant for Detroit," Berris said. "But now it has gone nationwide. We're selling Bad Boys stuff all over the world."

Athletic Supporter Ltd. also manufacturers a series of character designs for Pistons Joe Dumars, Bill Laimbeer, John Salley and Dennis Rodman and Rick Mahorn.

Other championship T-shirts include "We Beat LA," "Bad Boy NBA Finals 1989," "CityScene," and "The Sweep."

Berris started Athletic Supporter Ltd. in 1978 designing full body imprints, which graphically illustrate the anatomy and are marketed for the medical industry. Another popular design is the tuxedo shirt.

Athletic Supporter Ltd. is licensed with the University of Michigan, Michigan State University, the Detroit Tigers and the Red Wings.

The company also distributes jackets, caps, sportswear, sweats and pants, with distributors as far away as Hong Kong and Europe.

And although Athletic Supporter is still hoping the Tigers catch fire, workers have begun working on new Red Wing designs.

What to save, where to store it practically speaking

You've just been accepted for a new job. Your employer asks you to report to work with your Social Security card. Oops. You can't remember if it's in that manila envelope in your desk or in the shoe box at the bottom of your closet. The Farmington Hills-based Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants believes you have a record-keeping problem.

Every day, in every city, people are thrown into a state of panic when asked to produce anything from an original birth certificate to documentation supporting tax deductions. The answer to such problems is simple: Get out of the shoe box and into the file cabinet.

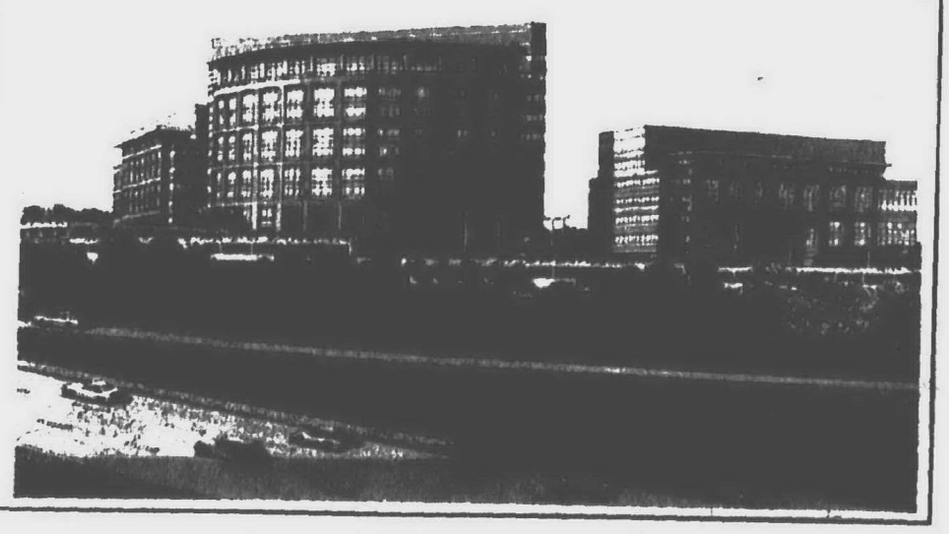

Organized records can make life a lot simpler and, in the long run, less costly. Efficient record keeping can help you track investments, support insurance claims, protect your family's financial security, shave hours off your tax preparation time, cut your tax bill and make it more difficult for the Internal Revenue Service to disallow your tax deductions.

Considering the results of good record keeping, the means can be quite simple. First, invest in a safe deposit box or a fireproof filing cabinet to safeguard your permanent records and those papers that would be difficult to replace. Don't let the cost of a safe deposit box dissuade you from renting one. As long as you use the box to store papers related to your investments, the fee is deductible as a miscellaneous expense, subject to limitations.

EXAMPLES OF ITEMS that should be kept in a secure location include documents recording how much you pay to purchase and improve your home, forms indicating the amount of your non-deductible Individual Retirement Account contributions and photographs or a video inventory of valuables in your home (for insurance purposes.) An unsigned copy of your will, a letter of instructions listing the location of your original will and any vital records or phone numbers a beneficiary may need if you become severely disabled or die should be stored in a fireproof container at home rather than a safe deposit box — which may be sealed after an owner's death.

Your next priority is weeding through your other more temporary papers. Start by tossing any papers that are unnecessary, such as cash register receipts for small, daily purchases. The simplest guideline is: If you can't use the document now, during an audit, after a casualty, when making investment decisions, or after selling your house, you probably don't need it. If you need additional guidance on which items fall into these categories, consult your CPA.

Other temporary papers, such as credit card bills or receipts for withdrawals from a bank, should be kept long enough to back up your monthly statements.

As you sort through your papers, devise a meaningful filing system. Some people merely separate their papers into those related to income and those related to expenses. A more efficient system is to establish distinct categories, such as tax materials, insurance information, investment records and homeowner documents.

IF YOU NEED help in organizing your tax records, review your most recent tax return for clues on what information you should have on hand. Remember, you should be able to document every item listed on the return, including all sources of income and any tax-deductible expenses. Most tax records — including canceled checks and other papers related to medical bills, charitable contributions, rental expenses, alimony payments or business expenses — should be maintained for at least three to six years. In addition, keep careful records of where you deposit and how you spend loan proceeds since this information determines the tax treatment of the interest you pay.

For insurance purposes you should maintain accident reports, policy statements, an inventory of assets and receipts for any major purchases. To document your investments, you will need proof of your initial cost, receipts for brokerage or mutual fund transactions, dividend or interest statements and any other papers that can substantiate a capital gain or loss. Necessary homeowner records include your deed, insurance policies, receipts or cancelled checks for home improvements and possibly rental records if you rent your property for more than 14 days a year.

Where and how you store your files is almost as important as what files you save. First of all, store your files in one specific location. Your best bet is a file cabinet or, at least, an alphabetized accordian file folder kept in a desk drawer. Make sure the file in conveniently located. If the file cabinet is located in the basement behind the boxes of Christmas decorations and vacation souvenirs, you will probably be less inclined to keep your records up to date.

Separate your receipts in a way that is meaningful to you. Whatever method you choose, make sure that you clearly label all folders. If you are married, take time to explain your filing system to your spouse.

New-model hoopla is not big deal anymore

auto talk

Dan McCosh

I remember when the annual model change was an event ranking with the first day of baseball, and we looked forward to getting a first look at the new cars like pigeons waiting for the unveiling of a new statue.

Searchlights waved up and down new-car row, and something like the introduction of four headlights had people talking as if Barbara Bush had gone punk.

Now it seems that new cars kind of dribble into the showrooms, generating all the excitement of a new shipment of milk at the 7-Eleven.

THERE ARE lots of reasons for the change. One being that there isn't really a "model year" anymore. The Environmental Protection Agency, which decides these things, says a car can be designated a 1990 model roughly in April of the previous year. Which means among other things that the car stays one year old for 18 months, and we get "new model" launches all year long — sort of like summer football.

Also the Germans and the Japanese traditionally launch new models later in the year than the U.S. manufacturers. There are two popular explanations for this phenomenon.

ONE IS that U.S. cars used to be assembled mainly by farmers working part time on the assembly line, and production had to wait until the crops came in. The other is that it was in the interest of car companies to show their new cars at the New York Auto Show in January to assure their backers they were still in business — the earlier the better.

Another reason the fall hoopla has been diminished in importance is because auto publicists like to get a picture of their new car on the cover of automotive magazines, and they quickly noticed that magazines are published more than once a year.

THIS LINE of reasoning has led to a series of carefully orchestrated press events timed to get the announcement of a new car out a bit early, but not so early that people buying the old model car will hesitate and wait for the newer model.

Which has led to a series of premature stories in car magazines about cars that never existed or were put into production so late some months lapsed between its appearance on the newsstands and its appearance in the showroom.

Car and Driver, for example, is now up to two cover stories on the ZR1 Corvette, although the actual car has been delayed until the 1990 model program. They are reportedly planning yet another sequel called "Indiana Jones drives the Corvette ZR1."

THE FOUR-WHEEL-DRIVE Pontiac was another victim of premature publicity, with one magazine actually doing a "long-term test" before the car was put on sale.

The Pontiac Fiero achieved a high level of magazine surrealism when it was dropped from production shortly before several enthusiastic magazine reviews were due to hit the newsstands, too late to stop distribution.

New car launches also have spawned some notable diversionary tactics. When technical problems with both the car and production process delayed production at the new GM-Hamtramck assembly plant a few years ago, Cadillac public relations hired strolling violin players and catered a black-tie affair in the idle facility.

THE HIGH point was when one of the few available finished cars was rolled out on the floor, and Aretha Franklin jumped out and started singing "Pink Cadillac." Actually, it was a white Cadillac, since GM had hardly made any Cadillacs, let alone any pink ones. To solve this technical problem, they tried shining pink floodlights on the white car. Unfortunately, this turned Miss Franklin sort of purple, with pink eyes.

Maybe we were better off with the searchlights on Livernois, after all.

Financial planner owes you these finances and you

Sid Mittra

In recent weeks I have published several columns on how to select a financial planner. Today I wish to share with you the Financial Bill of Rights developed by Peg Downey, a certified financial planner with Money Plans Inc.

Please note that the Bill of Rights also puts important responsibilities on YOU.

A financial planner works with you to shape your financial future. You share your dreams with the planner and work together to make them a reality. The result is peace of mind and financial security.

With that demanding agenda before you, you have the right to expect the following from your financial planner:

I You have a right to feel comfortable with your planner. Planners set up criteria for the kind of clients with whom they will work. Similarly, you have a right to work with someone whose approach and personality allow you to participate fully and comfortably.

II You have a right to have your goals and concerns treated with respect, with no value judgments made by the planner.

III You have a right to confidentiality concerning every piece of information provided to your planner. This is vital since you will be sharing personal, private information that you may never have told anyone else.

IV You are entitled to written recommendations that are specifically related to your goals. That is, you have a right to a customized plan that takes into account the uniqueness of your individual situation. Keep in mind that the planner is working for you, and you have a right to require certain behavior.

V You have a right to full disclosure by the planner of fees and commissions charged, and for what services, so that you are fully aware of where there is any potential loss of objectivity. As a consumer, you have a right to know exactly what services you will be receiving and the full cost of the services you are buying.

VI You have a right to clear explanations for all recommendations and to thorough answers to all your questions. The planner, who also has the responsibility to be an educator, should assure that you understand any actions you are taking before you take them.

VII You have a right to assistance in the implementation of your plan. Without help in obtaining the appropriate products or accomplishing particular strategies, your plan might never be more than another pile of papers on your desk.

VIII You have a right to a planner who is available to you. You and your needs are important, and you have a right to be treated accordingly. If you need information — or just reassurance and support — while implementing your plan, your planner should be there for you.

IX You have a right — and, in fact, you should demand — a written contract that spells out the terms of your working relationship. Most importantly, the contract should contain a clause for either you or the planner to discontinue the relationship if you find it inappropriate or unsatisfactory.

X You have a right to obtain references from any planner you are considering. You should also request an initial exploratory meeting with the planner at little or no cost to you.

In exchange for having your bill of rights honored, you have the responsibility to work conscientiously with your planner, providing promptly all information requested.

You must be prepared to discuss your personal feelings and concerns without withholding any information and to be as clear as possible about your financial objectives. You must implement the agreed upon actions in a timely fashion.

And you must also be open to being educated by your planner and to learning what are reasonable expectations, particularly for investment performance.

Together with the appropriate planner you can make your dreams come true.

You're a professional. A wife. And you may be a high-risk mother-to-be.

Pregnant women are more than just mothers-to-be. They are also lawyers, doctors, engineers, teachers.... This often means that women are postponing first-time pregnancy until their late 30s, even into their 40s.

There are plenty of good reasons to wait to have a baby–but there's not a single reason to wait for good prenatal care. Because how you care for yourself and your baby during pregnancy is just as important as what you do after your baby arrives. And, while simply being an older mom doesn't necessarily put you or your baby at risk, you should find out just what potential risks there are. The sooner you find out, the better–for both of you. We're here to help.

At Oakwood Hospital, you'll find obstetricians, perinatologists, neonatologists, geneticists, and specialists in reproductive medicine. When you choose one of our doctors, all the resources of Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn, a 615-bed teaching facility where over 4,000 babies are delivered annually, will be available to you. As a Level III perinatal center, Oakwood Hospital's Women and Children's Health Care Center is equipped to handle high-risk deliveries, premature infants and other special-need babies. Our Neonatal Intensive Care Unit is staffed by physicians around the clock. And our specialists in perinatology care for the high-risk mother through pregnancy and delivery.

You've worked for years on building a satisfying career and a healthy marriage. But these are the most important nine months of your baby's life. So give your pregnancy the thought and care it deserves. Call Oakwood Hospital at 1-800-543-WELL for the name of a physician on our staff.

You and your baby are worth it.

Business must first satisfy the customer focus: small business

Mary DiPaolo

The parents had planned a gala event to celebrate the marriage of their only daughter. They hired an 18-piece orchestra to provide the entertainment, commissioned a shop to bake the perfect cake and made catering arrangements at an area banquet facility.

"Everything was supposed to happen without a hitch," the father of the bride said. "When the banquet hall owner told me I didn't have to worry about a thing, I believed him, and that was my first mistake."

Some time and several thousand dollars later, the father is still disturbed about his family's experience and urges others to remember that "you can't always judge a book by its cover."

As with any business transaction, customer satisfaction must always remain a top priority.

"Once they had our money, they stopped caring," the father said. "It wasn't until the night was over that I realized just how much they didn't care."

So what went wrong?

"You name it," the mother of the bride said. "No numbers to indicate where guests were to sit. Missing placecards at the entry. No champagne although we paid for it. Not enough food. Horrible service. What else would you like to know?"

"You would think my being in the food business would have encouraged management to do a good job for us. I ran back and forth to the kitchen so many times that night, I felt I was at work," the father said.

To top off the evening, the person responsible for cutting the wedding cake distributed the whole cake without saving the top layer for the bride and groom.

The father summarized the ordeal by explaining that trying to do "too much" as a business owner can spell disaster for the unsuspecting customer.

"If I had known what we were in for, I would have catered the reception myself."

And what advice does he offer to others who hope to avoid a similar situation?

"Tell your kids to elope."

Twin brothers share stage in children's concert

Gemini will perform at 11 a.m. Saturday on the Meadow Brook Music Festival stage as part of the Children's Concert Series, on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills. For ticket information, call 377-2010.

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

LITTLE KIDS STARE and adults swivel for a double take because Sandor Slomovits and his brother Laszlo are identical twins.

The 40-year-old, Hungarian-born brothers take the attention in stride and capitalize on the genetic windfall that gives them an immediate "in" with audiences. The Ann Arbor-based folk musicians often wear matching or complementary outfits on stage, and their profesional name, Gemini, comes from the mythological twins in the zodiac.

Even though San is a half-inch taller and 10 pounds heavier than his brother, those who don't know them well struggle to tell them apart. San admits he collects twin stories of people's reactions, and he cheerfully apologizes for being "punny" when he says they're used to double takes. Las chuckles about their being invited to sing the National Anthem on Sunday, July 30, at Tiger Stadium when the visiting team will be — who else — the Minnesota Twins.

BEING IDENTICAL twins is a guaranteed attention-grabber, but it's not a focus of their music and doesn't explain their escalating careers. San and Las excel at getting audiences involved in their singalong, hand-clapping music. Their reputation is growing rapidly and they're playing to larger audiences, not because they're twins, but because they're able musicians who put on a good-time, upbeat show.

In April they played Ann Arbor's large Power Center auditorium. The music festival will be their largest Michigan audience to date. Because they are attuned to the dynamics of audiences, they love the high energy generated by great numbers of people.

In honor of the new directions in their career and bigger audiences, they sometimes perform with a backup band of drums, piano, synthesizer and bass, as they will do for the Meadow Brook concert.

The pair specializes in two kinds of concerts: live shows for school assemblies, and folk shows with songs slanted toward a young audience but not clearly kids' songs, the kind of show-for-all ages they have planned for the Meadow Brook children's concert.

Seven or eight months a year they perform at close-to-home locations. They have played in Detroit-area schools, for family concerts at the Detroit Institute of Arts and at WDET's music festival at Meadow Brook. Three or four months out of every year they take their show on the road to the East Coast and the South.

UNTIL RECENTLY they hadn't played farther West than Chicago. Now they're heading West and have played in Texas and the Dakotas. San and Las have chalked up a few local TV appearances on the children's show, "Daedel Doors," and on "Good Afternoon Detroit," but live performances and recordings have been their main focus. They have recorded four albums, two for families, including their latest, "Growing Up Together," and two for adults.

The themes they sing about are common events in their lives, events with a positive, life-affirming attitude, and they often spice their songs with humor. San says about half the songs they sing in concert they write themselves, and they complement their own material with traditional favorites as well as contemporary songs by other songwriters.

San playes guitar and Las plays a mean fiddle and mandolin, but they also play an intriguing collection of international instruments. San plays some offbeat percussion instruments such as the bones; the limberJack, an Appalachian puppet doll that dances; and a big Irish drum called a bodran. Las plays the ocarina, a small flute that "looks like a sweet potato with holes."

Their original songs like San's "Loose Tooth Blues" and Las' "Just One More" celebrate childhood. Any kid over 6 identifies with the wiggly demise of baby teeth in "Loose Tooth Blues," and every parent recognizes the classic stall tactic of children who plead for just one more — bedtime story or glass of water.

Another song, "I'm Gonna Tell," stirs memories of childhood vengeance. The duo even wrote a song about Ann Arbor's famous Zingerman's delicatessen. Las says he "put the menu to music." The lyrics begin, "I'm going to get a sandwich at the deli. I'm tired of peanut butter and jelly" — a silly celebration of one of life's (and Ann Arbor's) simpler pleasures.

SAN AND LAS are both married and have lived in Ann Arbor for the last 16 years. They like the geographic smallness of the town, its small-town feel with big-town events. The Ark coffeehouse, an Ann Arbor folk tradition, has exposed them to other styles of music and enriched their own repertoire.

They especially admire Tom Paxton and regard him as both musical mentor and friend. Neither Las nor San has children so they write songs from their own memories of childhood and from experiences with friends' children.

The international flavor of their show comes naturally to the pair who have lived in Hungary, Israel and the United States. They often open their shows with the "Greeting Song," which says hello in eight languages.

A Russian folk song they sing in English reflects both the uplifting tone of the music they prefer and their international roots. It begins, "May there always be sunshine."

The Slomovits family left Budapest during the Hungarian Revolution when Las and San were 8 years old. Their father was a cantor in a synagogue. The family emigrated to Israel where they lived for a few years before coming to the United States and settling in Kingston, New York.

GROWING UP, they sang often as a two-man chorus with their father in the synagogue, and they give him credit for their good tenor voices and musical training. At 7, San began studying piano and Las playued violin. The showmanship in their personalities they attribute to their mother.

Both San and Las went to college at the University of Rochester in New York. Sometimes people assume identical twins choose to lead identical lives. San and Las graduated from the same university, but they didn't plan it that way. Each applied to many different schools.

The University of Rochester offered both of them scholarships, so their lives continued to run parallel. Las majored in English intending to be a teacher, and San majored in history with thoughts of becoming a lawyer.

They had been singing together for years, and after graduation they decided to give a performing career a try. Gemini came to Ann Arbor because one of their wives wanted to attend graduate school at the University of Michigan.

San's wife, Brenda, works as a graphic artist for the university. She designs Gemini's album covers and play autoharp backup at recording sessions. Las' wife Helen runs a picture-framing business and plays backup flute.

Family concerts are a big part of the musical offerings by Gemini — Sandor and Laszlo Slomovitz. The Hungarian-born twins sing and play more than a dozen instruments.

Neville Brothers on track with 'Yellow Moon'

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Is it live or Nevillized?

For several years the Neville Brothers have had difficulty getting that high energy of their stage show documented on vinyl. That is until now. "Yellow Moon" (A&M) is the group's most successful album to date in terms of sales and critical raves.

Enter a young Canadian producer, Daniel Lanois, who has worked with the likes of Peter Gabriel and U2 in the past. Lanois' approach is somewhat different compared to most knob-turners in the studio.

"When he came to New Orleans, he wanted to hear everything each Neville Brother did individually, as well as the stuff we had did together as a group," said Cyril Neville, vocalist with the group. "Immediately, that endeared him to each one of us.

"Nobody — I mean nobody — had ever approached us in that way before. He said, 'What's in your heart? What do you want to do?' "

Lanois did other things to make himself at home with the Neville Brothers. Instead of a sterile setting of a conventional studio, the band and producer took residence in an abandoned apartment building in New Orleans. Lanois lived there along with members of the band.

Tracks were recorded in a live setting, which Cyril Neville likens to "a church revival of the soul."

Neville Brothers are Charles (back row, left) and Aaron, Cyril (front row, left) and Art.

"YELLOW MOON" certainly benefits from it. The album highlights the political side to the Neville Brothers, a side that other record people wanted to downplay in the past.

"My Blood" is a track on the album that touches upon the situation in South Africa as well as the plight of Native Americans in the United States.

Another number, "Sister Rosa," is a tribute sung by Cyril Neville to civil rights activist Rosa Parks. Discussion about the song gets the usually soft-spoken Neville brother quite impassioned, revealing the spark that makes the group one of the best in America.

Cyril Neville was particularly appalled at the number of people he found who didn't know about Rosa Parks, or even the Civil Rights Movement for that matter.

"We have nieces and nephews in school. We saw that they weren't being taught this in the schools in American history," he said. "I didn't say Afro-American history . . . I said American history. What these people did was good for everybody."

"That's why there's so much youth violence today," he added later. "They don't know who they are. The black kids don't know who they are. The white kids don't know who they are. They're all getting mis-educated."

In his heated explanation, Cyril Neville lets slip a mild profanity. "Oh, excuse me," he said. "I tend to get carried away."

THE POLITICAL side of the Neville Brothers has never been obscured on stage. And the live shows are what the band has been all about.

The Neville Brothers formed 13 years ago, featuring brothers Aaron, Art, Charles and Cyril, along with Tony Hall, Willie Green and Brian Stoltz. The band has six albums to its credit, including a double-LP retrospective "Treacherous" (Rhino).

The Nevilles' sound encompasses many musical facets from blues to jazz to funk. Cyril Neville gets a laugh when a person tells him he found their latest album under the Cajun section at the record store.

Again, the performer becomes the educator. Cyril Neville tears down some of the misconceptions about New Orleans music.

"A lot of people have trouble classifying New Orleans music, period," he said."New Orleans is so diverse that there's no one label to put on it. It's a waste of time trying, really.

"It's like the food. Everyone thinks all the food is Cajun. Actually, New Orleans was Creole long before Cajuns arrived.

"It's more like gumbo. It's a mixture of all the humanity that's been there: French influence, Spanish influence and African influence. Few people realize that it was one of the busiest slave ports. It gets played down a lot of times, but there is a lot of African blood there."

THOSE AFRICAN rhythms are one component of the Nevilles' sound, which like New Orleans music, doesn't fit snugly into any particular category. Yet the group has developed quite a following, including the eclectic college crowd.

"I love to talk to one my favorite audiences — the college students," Cyril Neville said. "They've got some great ideas about the world."

The Neville Brothers will perform as an opening act for Jimmy Buffett and the Coral Reefer Band at 8 p.m. Friday, June 30, at the Palace in Auburn Hills. Tickets are $22.50. For information, call 377-8200.

WRITE IT AND REAP!

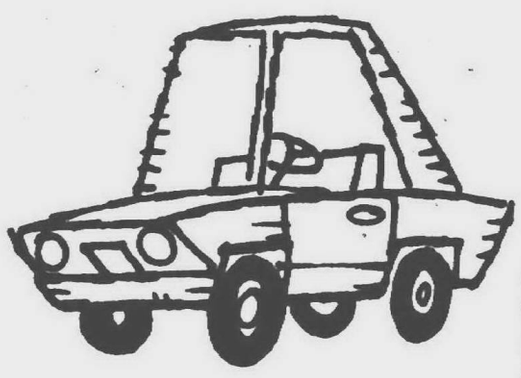

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

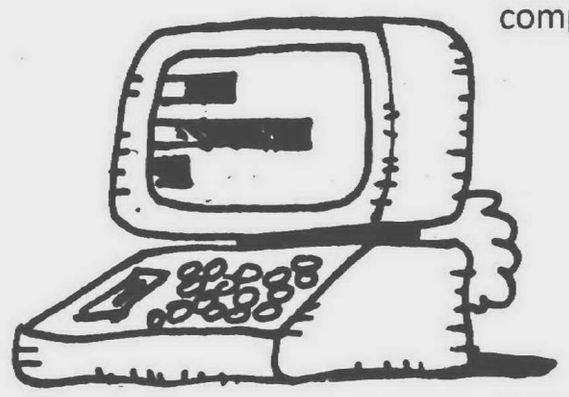

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

Bob Blohm, who guided Plymouth Salem's girls basketball team to prominence earlier this decade, returns this fall to coach neighboring Plymouth Canton.

Blohm gets Canton post

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

By next fall, Bob Blohm may need help dealing with a split personality.

Blohm has returned to the profession he left seven years ago, but with significant reservations, he says. The man who molded Plymouth Salem's girls basketball program into one of the state's finest will be back coaching a varsity girls team next fall — Canton's.

Not that Blohm ever really left. He assisted Fred Thomann in coaching Salem's girls team in 1983, and for the past four years he has coached Canton's junior varsity girls program.

But it was as Salem's coach that Blohm made his mark. In an era of talent-laden local teams — Kim Archer at Livonia Bentley, Mary Kay McNall (now Whalen) at Livonia Franklin, Lavetta Willis at Livonia Ladywood, Sarah Basford at Farmington Hills Mercy and Pearly Cunningham at Canton — Blohm made champions out of squads with less ability.

WHETHER HE can duplicate that success at Canton is a question that can only be answered in time. Blohm's talents have not diminished, but he's approaching his new position apprehensively.

"What I'd really like is to have Rob Neu coming back," said Blohm, referring to the former Canton coach. Neu has begun working in his family's computer business and recently landed the boys varsity basketball coaching position at Class C Boyne City.

Blohm is hesistant because of his duties as Canton's athletic director. "I just don't know how well I can do both," he explained. If he wasn't Canton's AD, Blohm claimed, "I wouldn't have hesitated."

During the years he both assisted Neu (as JV coach), and working as his superior (as AD), Blohm developed a respect for him. "I know the kids were disappointed that Rob left, but he felt it was something he had to do," said Blohm. "I'm going to try to keep the program going in the direction he's got it going."

What Blohm appreciated most about Neu — who once played for Blohm on Salem's junior varsity team — was his ability "to utilize the people he had available. He had the ability to draw upon the people around him."

INCLUDING BLOHM. Without doubt, his return to varsity coaching next season should provide one of the more interesting stories.

For starters, Blohm will be facing former ally Fred Thomann, who took over Salem's girls when Blohm resigned and still holds the position. When Thomann coached Salem's boys team and Blohm handled the girls, the school could boast one of the best coaching tandems in the state.

"When you talk about boys and girls basketball and mention Fred's name, you're talking about one of the best coaches around," said Blohm. "I learned a lot from him when I first came here.

"Coaching against Fred is hard because he prepares his team to play better than anyone else. The key thing about Fred is he gets his team to play to their strength. It's going to be fun coaching against him, but it's going to be hard. We'll have to be ready."

Preparation is something Blohm believes cannot be overemphasized. "It still comes down to the players playing the game," he said. "I think coaching during the game is overrated. Preparation up to the game is what's important. That's the key."

BLOHM'S STYLE — a native of Indiana, he's a firm believer in Bobby Knight's man-to-man basketball — remains basically unchanged. "I'm still real set on playing that way," he admitted, "although defensively we'll do more switching, more trapping. But what we're doing (differently) is adjustments more than changes.

"Offensively, I'm still a motion coach. The thing we've emphasized the last few years is screening and spacing. We want the players to be able to see and take advantage of what's available."

Top-notch

Observer stars have right stuff

By Brad Emons
staff writer

OFFENSIVELY, the mix is power and speed.

Defensively, the main ingredient is pitching.

Those combinations make up this year's All-Observer Baseball Team.

For the second consecutive year the Observer sports staff, with input from the coaches, selected the all-star squad.

The latest All-Area squad consists primarily of players from Observerland's top teams. But there are a few exceptions.

Among the season highlights from area teams:

- Redford Catholic Central (25-10) tied for third in the Catholic League's tough Central Division, but made a run in the state Class A tournament, reaching the semifinals before losing to Milford, 2-1.
- Along the way the Shamrocks upset top-ranked and previously unbeaten Taylor Center, snapping the state's longest winning streak — 29 games — in the regional championship.
- Perhaps the biggest story this season was Farmington Harrison (20-6), which tied Plymouth Salem (13-8) for the best overall record in the 12-school Western Lakes Activities Association.

Harrison won the WLAA's Western Division outright, while Salem took the Lakes.

- Redford Union repeated as champions of the Northwest Suburban League, while Westland John Glenn and Plymouth Canton were runnersup in the WLAA. Canton also won a district title.
- John Herrington is no stranger to Observerland Coach of the Year honors.

Herrington has won three state football championships at Farmington Harrison and has been to the playoffs numerous times.

But he is no slouch when it comes to baseball either, guiding two of his teams to the final four in state tournament play.

The Hawks, however, were a question mark before the '89 season. They surprised the experts by winning 20 of 26 games to go along with a district and league crown.

Hats off to a job well done by Herrington and his staff.

Presenting the 1989 All-Area Baseball Team:

FIRST TEAM

Leo Hutchinson, Redford CC, pitcher: A four-year varsity player, Hutchinson became the workhorse of the Shamrocks' staff, hurling 112 innings.

He finished with a glittering 15-3 record, recording a 1.06 ERA. He fanned 79 batters and allowed 54 walks.

During the '89 campaign, Hutchinson tossed a no-hitter, a one-hitter and three 3-hitters.

His career record is 30-11.

Hutchinson played right field when he didn't pitch, hitting .299, third best on the team.

"Leo is not the fastest guy around, but for strikeouts and durability, he helps your defense," said CC coach John Salter. "His fastball is in the low 80's (MPH) and in college, with added work, I think he'll get it up there."

Hutchinson has signed a letter-of-intent with Eastern Michigan University.

all-area baseball

Craig Murray, Harrison, pitcher: The senior set four school records this season including won-lost percentage (9-1), innings pitched (77⅓), strikeouts (117) and strikeouts in one game (16 vs. Oak Park).

He walked 42 batters, gave up 44 hits and only 14 earned runs for a 1.26 ERA.

"It was phenomenal," said Harrison coach John Herrington. "Craig made us a good defensive team when he pitched. The players had a lot of confidence when he pitched because they thought they were going to win the ballgame.

"I think he probably had the best year of any pitcher we've had here. Some have better overall stats for a career, but he was the best of any year."

Murray's only loss came against Class B state champion Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher in the regional when he was forced to leave a scoreless deadlock prematurely after being struck by a line drive.

Murray plans to play for Henry Ford Community College.

Joe Delfgauw, Redford Union, catcher: The 5-foot-10 senior swings one of the meanest sticks in Observerland.

He batted .520 in league play en route to all-Northwest Suburban MVP and league honors.

Overall, Delfgauw batted .489 with 22 hits (including three homers) in 45 at-bats.

"If there was a guy to get a hit in the late innings, Joe was that type of person," said RU first-year coach Chris Vangoss. "Joe is a real competitor. He thrives on being the deciding factor when it comes to winning."

Delfgauw was also an All-Observer pick in football where he averaged over 41 yards per punt and caught 67 passes.

Bryant Satterlee, John Glenn, utility: Another All-Observer choice in football, Satterlee was a valuable member of the Rockets' baseball team, too.

The all-Western Lakes Conference selection started the season at first base, playing seven games before moving back to his natural spot as catcher for the remainder of the season.

One area college coach called the 6-3, 220-pound senior "the best defensive catcher around."

Satterlee batted .421 with 35 hits (six extra-bases) in 83 at-bats. He scored 24 runs and knocked in 24 more.

He was named to the All-Region and All-District squads.

Satterlee will attend Central Michigan University this fall on a football scholarship.

Tim Lake, Salem, first base: The senior Lake was a run-production threat every time he stepped to the plate.

The all-WLAA and all-District and Region choice batted .409 (27 for 66) with four doubles and one homer. He scored 15 runs and knocked in 18.

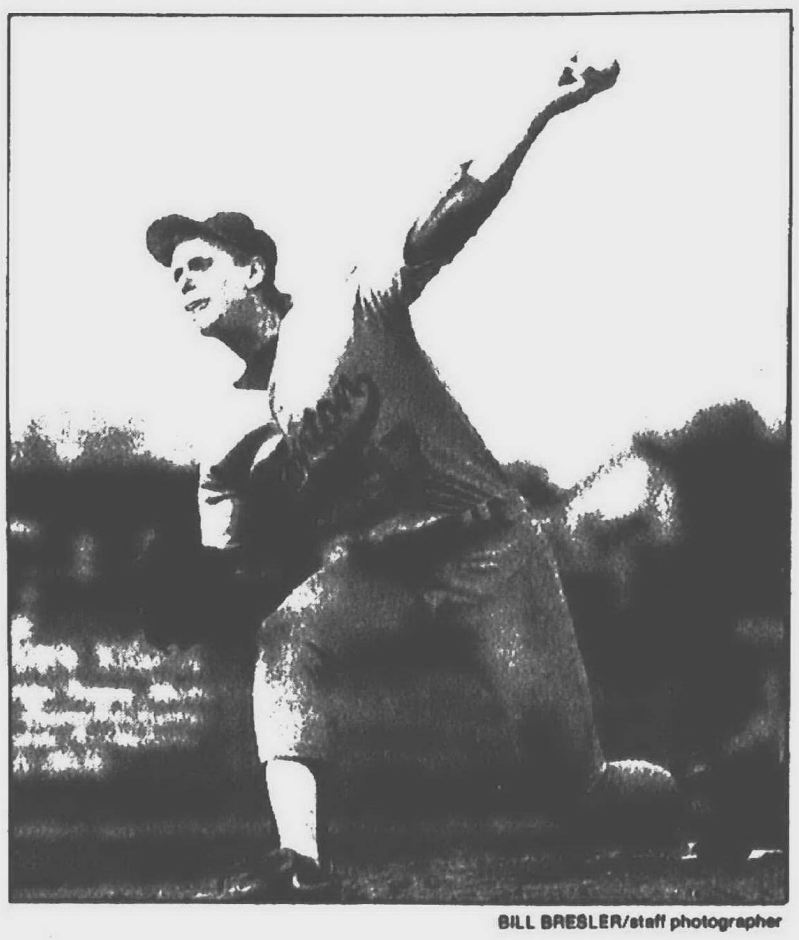

"I can't think of anybody I'd rather have up when you need a run," said Salem assistant coach Dale Rumberger. "He may be the best two-strike hitter I've ever seen. He is as tough an out as I've seen."

Lake, who helped the Rocks gain a share of the WLAA's overall crown, struck out only seven times this season.

Joe Brusseau, Bishop Borgess, infielder: The senior shortstop/second baseman drew rave notices from fellow Catholic League coaches for his defensive prowess.

Headed for Madonna College, Brus-

Canton left-hander Jeff Kugelman was 6-2 as a pitcher and even more effective as a batter, hitting .417 for the Chiefs, a Class A regional qualifier.

Record slashed in Canton run

Barny Purse of Onstead posted the best time Saturday in Canton's 11th Annual Five Mile Run, but Westland resident Marianne Bayne was the "star of this year's run," according to Bob Dates, Canton Recreation Supervisor.

Bayne, running in the 40-49 age group, finished the course in 35:08, breaking a record she previously held.

Purse's time of 25:34 won the men's 20-29 age group, and that was a "very good time, considering the humidity and heat of the morning," Dates said.

THERE WERE 125 entrees in this year's race, beating last year's turnout by 12, Dates said. The men's division included six separate classes, beginning with the 14-Under entrees. There were five classes in the women's division, also beginning with those 14-Under.

The men's 20-29 and 30-29 age groups have "by far the most entrees," Dates said.

"The 125 entrees are a nice size to work with. We can take more but we'll take what we can get."

Observerland runners won nine of the 11 classes. In the boys 14-Under, Canton's Russ Conser had the area's best time, finishing third in 37:35.

Canton runners swept the top three spots in the men's 15-19, with first going to Alan Byrnes, 28:14; Scott Stryker, second, 28:17; and Jay Swiecki, third, 29:12.

JOHN SPRINGER of Redford was second behind Purse in the 20-29 men's, clocking 26:33. Canton's Gregory Duerr won the men's 30-39 in 29:05. In the 40-49 age group, Bill Boyd of Canton took first, clocking 31:50, and David Newby was third in 32:16. Plymouth Larry Mishler won the 50-Over class in 34:00 and Livonia's Del Sister clocked 38:10 for second place.

U.S. Open eludes Plymouth golfer

By Bill Parker
staff writer

Bonnie Bryant hasn't competed in the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour in several years. But Tuesday, in the United States Women's Open qualifier at Tam-O-Shanter Country Club in West Bloomfield, Bryant came charging back to the tour with an eye-catching performance.

Bryant finished two-over par 73 to win the tournament and qualified for next month's U.S. Open (July 10-16) at Indianwood Country Club in Lake Orion. Bryant started strong, making the turn at 1 under par 34. She struggled on the back nine, bogeying the 14th and shooting a double bogey at 15, but held on for the win.

"I'm real pleased," said Bryant. "I haven't been in competition since '83. I live in Kalamazoo and this tournamenmt was close to home. Some friends had been telling me to try out for the Open, so here I am."

The top five finishers from Tuesday's qualifier advance to the Open. The four other qualifiers are Jan Kleiman of Lakeland, Fla., and Kristal Parker of Cable, Ohio, each finishing with 74, and Dearborn's Lisa Marino and Kim Tyler of Frankfort, Ky., with rounds of 75 each.

SIX WOMEN were clustered at 76 and were forced into a playoff for the four alternate spots. The four alternates are Laura Broadbent of Sylvan, Ohio; Faith Egli of Bellaire, Mich.; Michelle Gilbalt of Tallahassee, Fla.; and Ann Marie Goslak of Brighton.

A couple of local gals, Orchard Lake's Susie Green and Plymouth's Lynn Waldecker, just missed the playoff with rounds of 77 each.

Green shot par (38) on the front nine, but finished with four bogeys and a double bogey on the back nine to finish six over.

"I'm real disappointed," said Green. "I was swinging well, I just had a couple of bad holes in the back.

"I've been struggling with my game lately. Today I could have done something, but I let it slip away. I guess my game is coming back, so I can't be too disappointed. It's not often I can screw up and still shoot a 77."

Waldecker got off to a rocky start with a pair of bogeys and a double bogey on the first three holes. She settled down and was consistent through the middle of the course, but ran into trouble again at the end. Waldecker was just four over after 16, but bogeyed 17 and 18 to finish at six over.

OVERALL, 18 of the 49 golfers finished the par-71 course with scores of 77 or better.

"The scores were just outstanding," said Betty Richart, chairman of the United States Golf Association's Women's Committee. "The course was wet and long. We had heavy rain early this morning. If it hadn't been for Warren Orlic and the ground crew at Tam-O-Shanter, I don't know what it would have been like. They really swung the course into shape. They had to pump seven bunkers, change seven pins and squeegee eight greens. The crew did an outstanding job and Mr. Orlic was an important cog in the wheel."

Other locals competing in the tournament included Birmingham's Sue Hixon and Orchard Lake's Lindy Kosak, who each finished at 79, and Southfield's Fran Kocsis, who finished at 83.

Caesars pitching sobers Hines

By Steve Kowalski
staff writer

Redford Little Caesars coach John Moraitis probably never knew how much he liked Jack Daniels until Tuesday night.

Daniels — not to be confused with the whiskey — showed he and the Caesars team are a good mix, helping them claim a 7-1 win over Hines-Park Lincoln Mercury.

The lopsided game, played at the old Plymouth High School, gave Caesars a half-game lead over Hines-Park in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League at 12-3-1. Hines-Park, which split a double-header Sunday with Caesars, slumped to 12-4.

Daniels, a Taylor resident, was 1-for-3 as a designated hitter, but Moraitis plans to play him the rest of the way at catcher. Moraitis said Daniels also gives Caesars another pull hitter with power. Tuesday he batted fifth.

"He sure showed me a lot tonight," Moraitis said. "He only went 1-for-3 but he had two tough outs. The two balls he got outs on he hit shots. He's got a lot of power and real quick hands. He gets right up on the ball and can catch and throw."

Chris Kloc was the winning pitcher, raising his record to 3-0 with the complete-game two-hitter. Kloc also struck out 10.

Jim Miller, who graduated from Waterford Kettering and will play baseball and football next year at Michigan State University, had three hits, including a two-run home run. Sean Maloney recorded two hits and three RBI for the winners and Redford Catholic Central product Leo Hutchinson stroked two hits and drove in two runs playing in right field.

Brett Loomis was tagged with the loss, leaving after allowing six runs over 4⅓. John Bonham's RBI single drove in Chris Sisler with Hines-Park's only run in the fifth, but coach Dave Racer's team couldn't do further damage.

Racer looks forward to an exciting second-half of the season, and better results Friday against the league-leaders at 6 p.m. at Plymouth Canton. Racer's ace Derek Darkowski, a left-hander, will be on the mound for Friday's showdown.

"It's going to be a good run," Racer said. "There was a lack of intensity tonight on our part. It would have been nice to have that one."

In the double-header played Sunday at Livonia's Ford Field, Caesars won Game No. 1, 7-3, but Hines-Park took the nightcap, 7-3. In a game played Friday, Hines Park edged Wendy's of Ann Arbor, 6-5, at Canton.

WALTER'S APPLIANCE moved into third place in the LCBL at 9-6 after sweeping a double-header Sunday from Wendy's of Ann Arbor, 11-1 and 5-1, at Ann Arbor Huron.

Dave Houghtby, a 1988 Livonia Stevenson graduate, had four hits and five RBI in the double-header.

The first game was halted after five innings because of the mercy rule with the win going to Randy Buchler, who tossed a three-hitter with five strikeouts. Houghtby — who drove in three runs — and Chris Day had two hits apiece. John Gott had two RBI in the lopsided win.

Game No. 2 was won by Joe Macklewicz, who allowed only two hits in going the distance. Houghtby's two hits and two RBI led Walter's eight-hit attack and Day had two hits and one RBI. Day's single in the sixth inning drove in Tim Crabtree with the eventual game-winning run.

On Friday, Walter's kept Tom Holzer Ford winless, beating the cellar dwellers, 6-3 behind the combined pitching of Steve Owens and Kevin Walker.

Owens, the starter, gave up six hits in 5⅓ innings, and Walker pitched 1⅔ innings of scoreless relief.

Rick Rutledge drove in four runs and was 2-for-3 at the plate and Joe Sturtz also collected two hits. Marty Wolfe (Indiana University) scored two runs.

Eric Regnier had three hits, including a double to lead Holzer.

DUFFY'S PLUMBING, 6-6-1 overall, beat Holzer, 6-3 and 12-3, Sunday in a twinbill played at Livonia's Ford Field.

Duffy's won Game No. 2 by mercy, riding the two-hit pitching of Steve Young. Steve Michels's three-run homer highlighted the scoring. Michels finished with four RBI.

Ted Shymanski also had a homer — a two-run shot — and Dave Crespi stroked a single, double, triple and drove in four runs in a 3-for-4 performance.

Jason Hicks pitched the entire seven innings in the opening game, allowing only four hits in picking up the win. Todd Fracassi had a solo homer while Joe Jentzer drove in two runs and Crespi added one RBI.

Rama excels

Andy Rama, twice an all-state soccer player while enrolled at Redford Catholic Central High, continued to master the sport at the Air Force Academy.

A May graduate of the academy, the Plymouth native was a four-year starter at fullback and as a senior was a team co-captain.

The Air Force made it to the third round of the NCAA tournament when Rama was a freshman, and the highlight of his senior campaign came when the academy defeated St. Louis for the first time in history 3-2 in overtime.

Also during his freshman year, the Air Force played against the England and Canadian national teams while the two countries were in Colorado Springs, Colo., training for the World Cup.

Rama, who majored in human factors engineering at the academy, recently was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Air Force.

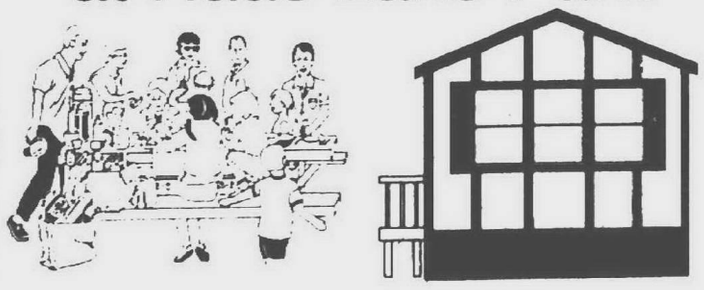

He plans to spend the summer traveling to California, Hawaii and Australia before reporting to Columbus, Miss., in October to start pilot training.

Rama graduated from CC in 1985, ending a distinguished prep soccer career in which he scored 101 goals. In 1984, his senior year, Rama scored a state-record 62 goals.

Top talents sign for summer

By Steve Kowalski

hockey

A sure way to promote the Metro Summer Hockey League is to sign players with a big league reputation.

And if the MSHL continues to get players like Plymouth native Neil Carnes, the league will prosper.

Carnes, a third-round draft choice last year of the Montreal Canadiens, will play this summer for the Lakers, one of eight MSHL teams.

The Lakers and Wildcats opened the MHSL season Tuesday, and Lakers coach A.J. Baker said Carnes can only help promote the league's image.

CARNES, A forward, played Major "A" junior hockey last winter for Verdun, Quebec, and Baker believes one day he'll make it to the NHL.

"He's played for us before," Baker said. "I know him and his family quite well. His brother (Alan) will be a player-coach on the team and he's not a bad player himself.

"When people hear Neil's playing it makes them think twice and makes them want to play. Neil is someone everyone knows."

Two MSHL games were played Wednesday and one game is scheduled tonight, Baker said. Teams play an 11-game season, with each team automatically qualifying for the playoffs. Most games will be played at the Plymouth Cultural Center, while some will be held at the Wayne Arena.

Carnes isn't the only recognizable name playing in the Over-15 league. Others include University of Michigan-Dearborn stars Larry Pilut and Dave Church, both members of the Lakers; Mike Green, a member of Wisconsin-Stevensport, the Division II national champion, and the Wildcats; and Alan Lariviere of Western Michigan University, who plays for the Wildcats.

BAKER SAID the league prides itself on parity, and two weeks ago the teams were divided as evenly as possible. Baker, Tom Yockey, Bill Trisch and Ed Bolinger did the drafting.

"We look for as much parity as possible; that's utmost of what we did two weeks ago," Baker said. "The first couple years of this league, we had one team that always seemed to be really out of it. It would get beat real bad.

"In finding out who was who, we've done quite well and kept it even since then. Every team is a hodgepodge of various ages and background."

There is a $1 admission charge to each game, Baker said. The league this summer is co-sponsored by Micron Skates and Metro Sports, a sporting goods store in Royal Oak.

Canton bounces back to take 2 from Salem

It seems absurd, but South Farmington's Connie Mack baseball team almost needed an even better performance than what it got Sunday from Craig Murray.

Murray, a Farmington Hills Harrison graduate, struck out 21 batters and one-hit Windsor, but South barely prevailed, 2-1, over the host team.

Kevin Young had two hits and the game-winning RBI. He also threw out a Windsor runner, who would have been the tying run, at third base in the sixth inning.

The only put-out in the field recorded by South fielders was a pop out. One of Murray's strikeouts did not count as a put-out because the South catcher dropped the third strike, enabling the Windsor batter to be safe at first base.

On Tuesday, South raised its record to 5-2 with a 7-0 win over host Canton. Chad Burgess was the winning pitcher, tossing a three-hitter over six innings. Rob MacDonald's sacrifice fly and two-run triple highlighted South's scoring. Leo DeVine had two hits.

CANTON SWEPT Salem, 3-1 and 13-3 Saturday at home. Geoff Allen's complete-game four-hitter in Game No. 1 raised his record to 1-1. He had 12 strikeouts.

Jim Frigge's RBI single in the sixth broke a 1-1 tie and a wild pitch later in the inning scored Frigge with the third run.

Canton's Aaron Adkins drove in the game's first run in the fourth with a single. Rob Kowalski, the losing pitcher, scored Salem's only run in the fifth on a sacrifice fly. Kowalski reached base on a two-base error and stole third.

A 19-hit attack sparked Canton's easy win in the nightcap. John Anthony, now 3-0, picked up the win in a starting role. Canton broke the game open with a six-run second inning off starting and losing pitcher Jim Blanchard, who went only three innings.

Chris Robinson and Sean Branham had four hits and two RBI apiece. Ron Groh, Jason Dembny, Allen and Steve Brzezinski clubbed two hits each.

Westland I routed Canton 8-0 Thursday, behind Jeff Kugelman's one-hitter. Dembny banged out Canton's only hit, a second-inning single.

Late rally enables Craiger to stay 1st

Plymouth Craiger extended its Babe Ruth League-leading record to 6-1 with a pair of comeback baseball wins last week.

Using four consecutive hits by Scott Kapla, Kevin Goff, Steve Leiger and Chris Thomas, Craiger scored six runs with two outs in the sixth inning to derail the Dry Clean Co., 8-4. Sammy DiPrima pitched three scoreless innings of relief and struck out six for the victory.

Rob Eyre was 3-for-3 and Kurt Singleton had two hits in three trips to lead Dry Clean.

In a 10-inning, 7-6 win over the Express earlier in the week, Craiger sent the game into extra innings in the bottom of the seventh on DiPrima's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk to Kevin Goff won it in the bottom of the 10th.

DiPrima, who now has allowed only three runs in 16 innings, earned the win. Thomas and Kapla each went 2-for-4 to lead Craiger's offensive attack, and Mitch MacDonald was 2-for-5. Todd Pniewski led the Express with two hits, including a bases-loaded triple.

THE DRY CLEAN remained in second place with an 11-6 win over the Express and a 20-9 thumping of Twist 'N' Shake. Dry Clean's Singleton pitched four innings, striking out eight for the win over the Express. Scott Bailey provided most of the offense, going 3-for-4 with seven RBI, including a grand slam homer.

In the rout of Twist 'N' Shake, the Dry Clean was led by Marc Pennebaker's 4-for-4, five RBI performance. Pat Adams and Bailey also drove in five runs, and Brian Tiell had three hits in four trips.

Twist 'N' Shake was a 2-1 winner over the Junction Express, as Vince Turri clinched the outcome with a sixth-inner homer. Jim O'Doherty went the distance, allowing only two hits and fanning eight.

seau was "a rose" in what only could be termed a "thorny season" for the 4-18 Spartans.

Brusseau led Borgess in every offensive category including batting average (.343), slugging percentage (.620), on-base percentage (.475), runs scored (14), RBI (16), hits (24) and walks (14).

The senior was voted all-Catholic League and All-Central Division.

"Offensively, he has lots to learn, but even though I'm his father, he's one of the best gloves I've seen," said Borgess head coach Norm Brusseau.

The younger Brusseau is also a standout hockey player. He was recently drafted in the fifth round by a Junior A club.

Derek Humphries, Canton, infielder: The senior shortstop took a leadership role with the Chiefs, batting .417 (34 for 86) with one homer, two triples and an astounding 15 doubles. The left-handed swinger scored 29 runs and struck out a mere four times.

"He uses the whole field and he worked very hard at taking the ball up the middle and going the other way," said Canton coach Fred Crissey.

Defensively, Humphries struggled a bit, but often made the spectacular play. He was also hampered offensively for seven games with strained ligaments in his left arm. He missed two games because of the injury.

Humphries is undecided about his collegiate choice.

He has an offer from Wayne State, but could wind up at Western Michigan University, where his older brother Joe was an all-Mid-American Conference pitcher and later played in the minor league systems of the Toronto Blue Jays and Los Angles Dodgers.

Bob Stubbs, Garden City, infielder: The senior played shortstop and third base for the Cougars.

Stubbs batted .325 with 20 hits in 62 at-bats. He homered three times and knocked in 10 runs, while scoring 14.

"He swings a quick bat," said GC coach Bob Dropp. "He got two of our three hits against (Bill) Kostich of Taylor Center (an All-Stater who was a ninth round pick of the Seattle Mariners)."

Despite a strain of measles which depleted the GC squad this, Stubbs missed only one game.

As a junior outfielder, Stubbs set a school record with 42 hits.

"He filled in where he was needed," Dropp said.

Stubbs, an all-NSL choice, is considering Henry Ford CC next season.

Joe Sturtz, N. Farmington, outfielder: The all-Western Lakes and all-Region selection was nearly a one-man wrecking crew for the Raiders in '89.

He batted .558 (30 for 51) with six homers and 25 RBI. He added four doubles and scored 20 runs.

His career statistics are also impressive: 13 homers, 59 RBI, 81 hits, two triples, 13 doubles, .430 average.

"He's as close to being a Division I player as you can find in this area," said one area college baseball coach. "He hit one of the longest homers I've ever seen and he barely swung the bat."

Sturtz is leaning toward Indiana University.

The 5-10, 180-pound senior was also an All-Area pick in football.

Joe Ransley, Franklin, outfielder: Speed to burn, the 5-10 senior was an acrobat in center field for the Patriots.

"He runs well and has an excellent throwing arm," said Franklin coach Gerry Cullin. "He ran down balls in our open field that would have been home runs in other places."

Offensively, Ransley was also impressive, batting .403 with 25 hits in 62 at-bats. He had a team-leading seven homers and 25 RBI. He also collected four triples and four doubles.

"He hits the ball hard," Cullin said. "He's very intense, kind of loose off the field, but gives you everything he's got when it's time to play."

Ransley, an All-Area defensive back in football, will play this fall for NAIA power Hillsdale College.

Jeff Kugelman, Canton, outfielder: The 6-3, 210-pound senior was the Chiefs' most versatile performer.

Offensively, he batted .417 with 36 hits in 84 trips to the plate. He homered five times, tripled twice and socked eight doubles. Kugelman finished with 28 RBI and scored 27 runs.

When he wasn't playing left field, Kugelman was one of the aces of the Canton staff, posting a 6-2 record with a 2.32 earned run average in 68 innings. He tossed a pair of two-hitters.

Canton coach Fred Crissey said of the all-Western Lakes selection and team MVP: "On his own he took off 27 pounds before the season and really got himself into shape. I think that was the big difference. He really dedicated himself to having a superior senior season. The dedication paid off. The weight loss made a particular difference in his stamina and endurance."

Using right bait keeps bass biting

Bill Parker

THE MAN at the bait shop baid to "fish deep" when he heard we were going after largemouth bass. But my host, Farmington Hills resident Pat Leavy, knew better.

Unable to locate an open bait shop at 6 a.m. in Waterford, Leavy decided we could use artificial bait for a couple hours, then return later for live bait. So, armed strictly with K&E purple worms, we headed out in the early morning rain for some serious bass fishing on Watkins Lake. And we didn't have to wait long for the action to begin.

Working the docks, boats and overhanging trees along the shoreline, Leavy reeled in a 14-inch largemouth on his fourth cast. A few minutes later I hooked a small, but feisty largemouth. Within the next 45 minutes we landed three more fish — a 20-inch pike and a pair of beautiful three-pound lunker largemouths. Never once did we fish in more than five feet of water.

LEAVY, A RECENT graduate of Northwood Institute, is an avid bass angler. When he called last week with an invitation to go fishing for "some huge bass," I couldn't resist. We met early last Wednesday morning in the midst of a tormenting rain. But since there was no menacing thunder or lightning, we decided to hit the lake anyway, knowing that our prey would be feeding actively in the rain.

We used artificial bait for an hour, then left the lake in search of some lively night crawlers. Unfortunately, stormy weather moved in while we were away, and the fishing trip was quickly cancelled.

We met again on Monday in warm, dry weather, but the fish weren't hitting as they had been in the rain. It took a couple hours, but through quiet, calm persistence we finally tied into a half dozen, average sized largemouth. The biggest was about 18 inches long, but none were quite like the lunkers we caught on that first day.

LEAVY PREFERS fishing in the morning and always in the shallows.

"In the morning the bass are in the shallows feeding on the bait fish," Leavy said. "Like they say, 'The early bird gets the worm.' I prefer morning fishing by far. In the morning, you pretty much know where the fish are and you know they're feeding. It's a little tougher in the afternoon and evening. Then, you have to look in the deep weed lines and in shady areas."

Another tool Leavy favors are polarized sun glasses.

"If you can see the bass in the water, half the battle is won — you already know where he is," explained Leavy. "Watch for their (black) tails. Their body color blends in with the bottom of the lake real well, but you can always pick out that black tail."

OBVIOUSLY THERE IS more to catching big bass than polarized glasses. According to Leavy, some of the necessities for a successful bass outing include a balanced rod and reel, knowledge of the area you're fishing and a good selection of bait.

"I always use live bait (night crawlers, minnows and crayfish) first and present it as natural as possible," explained Leavy. "No snap swivels or bobbers. Presentation is the key. If you don't present the bait naturally, you'll spook the fish.

"If natural bait fails, then I switch to artificial bait, but the live bait usually prevails."

Leavy's favorite lure is the K&E purple worm, which worked extremely well in the rain. But he also uses a variety of spinner bait and crank bait.

LEAVY HAS been bass fishing for several years. In recent years, he has competed in a few local tournaments and has done pretty well.

He won "biggest fish" honors in the Pontiac Lake Invitational in 1986 and last year he won the Deer Lake Tournament with the most inches overall. (His largest fish was a 17-inch largemouth.)

"I just love to fish," admitted Leavy, who graduated from North Farmington High School in 1985. "I started fishing with my uncle when I was a kid. Now I like to go out (fishing) as often as I can. If I can get out every day, I do."

New coach

What Blohm is determined to have survive is the basic structure of the program. "They've done a real good job over here," he said, backtracking to Mike McCauley's tenure as coach. "McCauley's teams set some records here I don't think will ever be equalled."

Mike Shea, who assisted Neu last year, will take over for Blohm as JV coach.

Student dancers warmly received in Soviet Union

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

WHEN 10 Cranbrook Kingswood School dance students and their teacher, Jessica Sinclair, went to Russia last spring, they took their dance heritage with them.

And that all-American style program was warmly received wherever they performed — so much so that Sinclair has a standing invitation to do choreography for the dance department at the performing arts school in Tbilisi, capital of the province of Georgia.

The short term benefits of the two-week trip to Russia surfaced almost immediately. The long term ones may stretch over many years.

"It was so exciting to see historical and classical dance for which Russia is known, " Sinclair said. "At the Bolshoi, we saw "Raymonde." The theater is so beautiful in red velvet and gold . . . and it was so wonderful to be able to perform for them and be so warmly received. The students exchanged addresses with many Russian students and they were given flowers after every performance."

She said she wanted her program "to be very American." For one dance the students wore white T-shirts with greetings and phrases such as "everybody" dancing written in Russian in black and red with black biking pants. Also on their program were: a modern dance to musical figures by Orff; "Country," featuring the essence of country and hoedown style; and a dance to "Wake Him Up" from the musical "Purlie."

SINCLAIR SAID SHE included a very experimental work that she was "a little dubious about," but it created a lot of excitement in the viewers.

"They responded very warmly to that and clearly Russian dancers are wanting very much to experiment in their own style."

At the Rinsky Korsakov Theater in Leningrad, they gave a shared concert with dancers from Kirov Conservatory and found out how important American culture is to them. One of the Russian dancers did an interpretation of Michael Jackson's, "He's Bad."

She said, "It was the kind of trip I had dreamed about. We performed in historic places. We met Russian dancers, we met all kinds of people. We made many friends and we visited a lovely, lovely city, Tbilise in Georgia. The school there might be able to send us 10 dancers.

"When we arrived in Moscow, an in-tourist guide met us and he went with us everywhere."

She said that everywhere she went people were curious about her and all aspects of her life, "What kind of a house I lived in what kind of a car I had, what I did for fun."

She said she made it clear when she planned the trip with the agent that her dancers in grades 9-12, were not to be put into any uncomfortable performing situations. She emphasized they were students, not professionals and that they should be regarded as such.

Sinclair is well versed in what student dancers can do. She keeps standards high while making it enjoyable and exciting, realizing that dance will be an avocation rather that a career for most of them.

Still those who have chosen dance as a way of life have done well. Gayle Enbanks, a successful dancer, came to mind immediately. "And Gordon White started to dance with me. He went to New York, auditioned for Jose Lemon — and they took him."

Sinclair said she came to Cranbrook 22 years ago to teach dance for two hours a day three times a week in the physical education department.

"Then we started to work on musicals, then I began to teach a class — it's taken 20 years to develop a department."

OVER THE YEARS she and her students have gone on performing tours to Portugal, Venezuela, Finland, Belgium (2), France (2), Germany and Austria.

She said, "The Russian people are not afraid to express their feelings. They're not worried about telling people how they feel. There was a lot of hugging and holding and the students were very comfortable with that. I'd like to go back. I haven't decided when. I feel it's a great honor to be invited. Nureyev studied there as a young person, so this is a school of classical tradition. It is a school that selects the people they want and they come from various regions. It's like a performing arts school with an emphasis on dance."

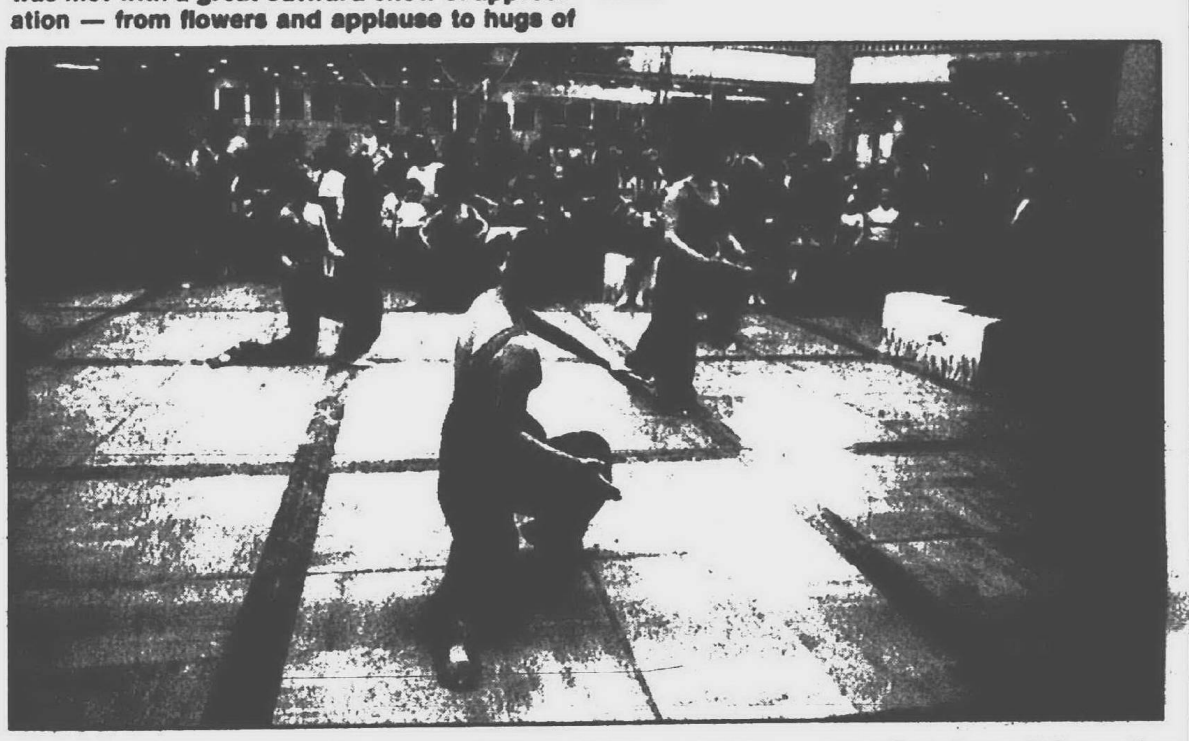

Sinclair said that if she can arrange for a leave of absence from Cranbrook Kingswood, and she does go for a brief time, language won't be a problem. "Many speak English and they speak Georgian and Russian. I speak a little Russian. I spoke Ukranian until I was 5. My mother was Polish and my father Ukranian."

She said she noticed in the concert which they gave on their return "how much they had grown."

She said many of her student/dancers are well-traveled, there were no problems, "these kids are very responsible," she added with a smile that conveyed both pride and pleasure.

The All-American style that Cranbrook Kingswood dancers presented to Russian audiences was met with a great outward show of appreciation — from flowers and applause to hugs of friendship. Below they perform at the Children's Palace in Moscow for children and parents.

Dance instructor Jessica Sinclair was invited back to the performing arts school in Tbilisi to do choreography. She models the T-shirts they took with them, which are printed with "everybody dancing" in Russian.

Gallery director diligently tracks treasure

K.C. Larson Gallery opened in Birmingham last December with a modicrum of fanfare. While it's on the second floor at 211 N. Woodward and still low profile, those who climb the newly carpeted stairs will be rewarded with an exciting, electic atmosphere that looks more like a beautiful home than a gallery.

Larson, (the K stands for Karen) had interior design studios in Washington, D.C., and Maryland before she married one of her clients, moved to Birmingham and combined families for a total of seven children. Now, with only her son, Joey Chase, still at home on a full-time basis, she has more time for running the gallery and doing all the traveling that goes with the territory.

Her design skills are clearly evident in the extent and quality of the renovation that she undertook for her gallery setting. She has two very large rooms with white walls, gleaming hardwood floors and lots of shelf and built in display space for everything from room settings to choice antique jewelry.

FROM PRIMITIVE to pre-Columbian sculpture, from fine French and English furniture to African masks and English inkwells, Tiffany perfume bottles, Mycenaean pottery and shelves and shelves of antique books, she arranges as they might be found in a tasteful home. It's an art in itself and she is meticulous about how each is displayed.

"It's a lot of fun, very challenging and a tremendous amount of work, she said. "Every single item is hand found. I was in London last week. I'm doing a lot of buying right now. When you open up a business like this you don't know right away what people want."

Some of the things that sold surprised her, other things that have haven't been snatched up immediately, such as two very large jade green ceramic vases, leave her puzzled.

"I expected jewelry to be popular, but antique jewelry is getting to be such a hot ticket in the last couple of years that it's really difficult to find the good pieces." Now, after six months of testing the market, she can say confidently, "One of the major things we do is books. We specialize in leather-bound books with fine binding — all four centuries, but primarily 19th century. We are expanding the books. All of them have to be found and individually selected."

LARRY RUBIN, who has a master's degree in art history, specializing in 19th century prints, is her resident expert on the books. Nancy Anderson, who has a master's in art history, also works at the gallery and Larson said all of them work on the extensive research that's done on everything in the inventory.

"I plan to spend the summer looking for things, mostly in the U.S. People are coming here from Europe to buy. There's a lot of stuff all over the United States. I may go to France and Germany in August. I'm not sure yet. . . We also do searches for people."

She said her daughter, Whitney Chase, 25, now working for Sotheby's in London may eventually go into business with her, probably as a buyer in Europe.

K.C. Larson Gallery is open 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday and until 8 p.m. Thursday.

Karen Larson pets a carved wood dog by Louise Kruger. She had the second floor of the building renovated from a dark, unattractive area into this light, wide-open interesting space.

Fine leather-bound books spanning five centuries and antique jewelry are two areas that have been very successful at K.C. Larson Gallery. Pictured with the stack of three books is an 18th century writing etui, sometimes called a necessaire, of leather and silver.

Tempestuous Dodges is theme

Victoria Diaz

VETERAN writer Jean Pitrone marked the publication of her eighth book last week at a reception-luncheon at Meadow Brook Hall. The publication of "Tangled Web: Legacy of Auto Pioneer, John F. Dodge" coincided with the 75th anniversary of the manufacture of the first Dodge automobile.

Though story after story has been published about the Ford family, relatively little has been written about the tempestuous Dodge brothers, two ambitious machinists who came here from Niles, Mich. in the early part of the century, and began to make their mark soon after, working closely with Henry Ford I.

When Pitrone began entertaining the idea of putting together a Dodge biography 18 years ago, she dropped in at the Main Branch of the Detroit Public Library one day, and found more than 60 books centering around Ford and his family, but not a single one on his early partners, John and Horace Dodge.

That, for Jean Pitrone, was "sufficient reason" to start work to fill the gap then and there.

IN 1981, THE, Trenton writer co-authored (with Joan Elwart) the first Dodge biography, "The Dodges: the Auto Family Fortune and Misfortune."

She chose to go on to write "Tangled Web," she said, because "the story couldn't be contained in one book."

When working on the Dodge books she was granted access to the family's archives. But one of her most important sources of information turned out to be Amelia Rausch Cline, the younger sister of Mrs. John Dodge, who Pitrone talked with regularly over a period of about 10 years.

Blessed with a vivid memory, an ability to express herself well, and having personally amassed a great deal of Dodge memorabilia, Cline (who died in 1981 at the age of 95) seemed more than happy to finally share her stories with someone, Pitrone said. As an experienced biographer and researcher, Pitrone — though greatly appreciative of Cline's accessibility — was not particularly surprised by it.

"People are often eager to talk or to help out," she said. "Sometimes, it's strangely simple to gain access to information."

"TANGLED WEB" BEGINS, shortly after the turn of the century, with the city of Detroit at the threshold of remarkable growth, and the hard-driving John F. Dodge in love with his fiery-tempered secretary and future wife, Matilda Rausch, daughter of a Detroit waterfront saloon keeper.

The book includes intriguing bits of automotive history, highlights early Dodge-Ford business relationships, and also points up a number of odd similarities and parallels between the Ford and Dodge families through the years.

Its main focus, however, is the legacy of the elder Dodge brother why, before his death at 55 of influenza in 1920, had amassed a fabulous fortune which, in turn, wou'd seem to often bring great misfortune to his survivors and descendants.

Much of "Tangled Web" takes a close look at the mysterious claims of Frances Mealbach, a Dearborn woman who had been adopted as an infant, and who came forward in court in 1984, saying she believed herself to be a Siamese twin daughter of John and Matilda Dodge. (The twins had allegedly been separated shortly after birth, Pitrone said, and the other twin had later died, though she lived to adulthood.) Pitrone interviewed Mealbach, her family, and attorneys numerous times in preparation for the book, but takes no stand on the validity of the claim, leaving readers to form their own conclusions. The case is still before the Michigan Court of Appeals, its outcome hinging mainly on whether the woman's sealed adoption papers will ever be opened.

Regular viewers of NBC-TV's "Unsolved Mysteries" may remember Jean Pitrone's appearance on the first show in that series back in 1987, in which she talked about the bizarre case.

Full steam ahead for July 4

From the little engine that could, to the big engine that did, the machines that led America through the industrial revolution will be in action at Greenfield Village's Pageant of Power, July 1-2. Power and machinery enthusiasts from around the nation will gather to exhibit and demonstrate the sputtering, puttering contraptions that helped to change the face of the world.

Throughout this "power-full" weekend, visitors can observe the evolution of engines dating from the 1600s to the mid-1900s, as improvements in technology enabled smaller and smaller machines to put out more and more power. Visitors can also take part in debates comparing the advantages of gasoline-powered engines over those run by hot air or steam.

A total of 18 "special weekends" have been scheduled through 1989 to mark the 60th anniversary of Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village. These weekends have been themed to reflect both the scope of the museum's collections and visitor interests, with activities ranging from small, intimate demonstrations to major, large-scale productions. Upcoming programs include A Family Fourth, July 4, Colonial Life Festival, July 8 and 9, and Fire Engine Muster, July 22 and 23. There is no charge for special weekend activities beyond regular village admission

all about color

Helen Diane Vincent

Q. My husband and I do not agree on the color scheme for our new retirement home in northern Michigan. We've always lived with dark greens, golds and browns. I'm looking for a change, but he is not. Lately, I find myself attracted to pinks and would like to use them in our new home. How should we work this out?

A.It appears your husband is looking for continuity in a disruptive situation, no matter how happy it looks from the outside. You, on the other hand, seem to be seeking some kind of protection and expressing a need for a show of appreciation by your gravitating toward pinks.

My recommendation is to recast your old colors into brightened and lightened variations. Substitute a pale and brighter yellow for the older gold; shift into the clearer jade for bluer greens for the dark greens, and translate the brown into lighter tan and the use of lighter wood tones. These variations on the old color harmony will now allow you to introduce a mdeium, warm-cast pink, perhaps, as an accent in the living room, or as a key color in the bedroom, with soft greens as secondary colors.

Q. Our old brick house has many additions constructed of different materials. It's the only traditional house, with porch and shutters in a neighborhood of split-level homes. We want to do some painting and renovation. What colors do you suggest?

A.Pull together the different textures and materials by painting the house in a soft, fairly light, cool gray. Paint all of the trim in white and the shutters in black. If you are considering substituting the porch with a deck with rails, use the light, natural looking wood. You could even introduce grey through light-colored gravel in the landscaping.

Light grays are appropriate to traditional homes, yet harmonize with contemporary. And because gray is unobtrusive, it makes a nice neighborly statement.

Q. My boyfriend likes me the way I am, but my girlfriends keep telling me I should try for a new brighter look. I'm interested but also afraid of making a change. I'm 26 years old, weigh 130 pounds, have dark, ash blonde hair, hazel eyes and peach skin that tans easily. I like a lot of different colors, except I really hate brown. I see a lot of bright pinks and purples — sometimes shown with orange — in the stores and wonder they're something I could wear.

A. First of all, it's more than likely that your boyfriend accepts your appearance because the underlying relationship is satisfactory, and not the other way around. You should make a change if your feel it's necessary. Ask yourself if your wardrobe looks dated. Are you being overlooked for promotions in your job for unspoken reasons? Your image could be getting out of phase with your inner self and your career, and that may be why your girlfriends are telling you to change.

If you are fairly content, don't try to project an overly aggressive image, it won't fool anyone. Once you have decided that you want to convey, work in harmony with your coloring. This means staying within a middle, fairly blended range of colors because your coloration seems to be quite muted, in that way it doesn't have contrasts.

Ash blondes should usually stay away from orange and the green-yellows. However, the pinks and purples, as long as they are not too bright, could be a good addition to your wardrobe. Disliking brown usually means you reject restraint but may be suffering from some guilt feelings.

Artrain exhibit 'toys' with memories

An unusual array of delightful displays will highlight the Artrain exhibit which is scheduled for July 1-4 at Dearborn's North Commerce Park. The event will be open to the public from noon to 8 p.m. daily. Admission is free of charge although small donations are appreciated.

Artrain, the nation's only traveling museum on a train, is comprised of three gallery cars of a wide variety of antique and classic toys including model trains, historic board games, whimsical mechanical banks, beautifully crafted china dolls and a timespan of well-loved teddy bears. The exhibition, "Treasurers of Childhood: 150 Years of American Toys," presents over 300 of the finest objects from the Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson Collection, one of the most distinguished toy collections in the nation.

A VISIT TO Artrain will evoke the look and feel of childhood in the distant and recent past. In addition to providing a nostalgic view of lay and playthings, the exhibition will help the audience explore the lessons that toys teach and the social values that they transmit.

Upon entering Artrain, visitors will view an audio visual presentation introducing the "Treasures of Childhood" and featuring historic photographs of children at play. The first gallery features early childhood toys, including blocks, Mickey Mouse and Mother Goose toys.

Several displays compare ancient, antique and modern toys, dolls, dice and tops from the Fourth Century A.D., borrowed from the University of Michigan's Kelsey Museum of Archaeology, rest alongside remarkable similar toys made as recently as 1982.

Through reading labels to a magical window filled with teddy bears, visitors will see how the bear was "invented" and discover how today's versions of bears are similar to those of their parents. Recreated toy shop windows from 1895, 1920, 1945 and 1960 display dolls, trains, games, and other toys of each era.

IN THE SECOND gallery car, visitors will find a variety of toys, many with accompanying hands-on displays. Rows of cartoon character toys, from early figures like Buster Brown to ageless heroes like Dick Tracy, recreate the Sunday funny pages on the walls of the gallery.

The history of board games from the victorian period to contemporary times will intrigue viewers of all ages. Visitors will be able to try their skill at three different games from the 19th century. Hands-on mechanical banks and videotapes of mechanical toys in motion will allow visitors to experience how these fascinating objects.

Gallery Three provides a panorama of transportation toys, including boats, trains, horse-drawn carriages, automobiles, airplanes, and spaceships, all in specially "landscaped" displays. The third gallery ends at the Museum Shop where a variety of toys, including ones handcrafted by Michigan artists, are offered for sale. After touring the galleries, visitors will see toymakers and artists at work in Artrain's demonstration car.

Lawrence Scripps Wilkinson is a former buyer and vice president of F.A.O. Schwarz, New York's famous toy store. His collection of over 5,000 toys represent American life over the last century and a half, from horse-and-buggy days through moon landings and space travel. Portions of the Wilkinson Collection have been exhibited in the United States, Europe and Asia.

London's Victoria and Albert Museum described the exhibition as "the most important and comprehensive collection of American Toys ever assembled for exhibition in this country."

Artrain has traveled to 28 states and has welcomed aboard nearly two million visitors since it began touring 18 years ago. Artrain is sponsored in part by the Michigan Council for the Arts, the Institute for Museum Services, and the Michigan Council for the Humanities.

Plant curiosities topic of tours

All tours start at 1 p.m. The tours last 50 minutes to one hour. Reservations are highly recommended, although interested persons may sign up on the day of the tour on a space-available basis. A maximum of 30 participants will be allowed each hour. Baby strollers are not permitted. For reservations, call 763-7061.

Students honored

Retired Livonia elementary school principal Ruth Knight, now living in Philadelphia, combined business with pleasure on a recent trip back here.

Knight presided at the awards ceremony at the Livonia Board of Education meeting at which winners of the recent student art show were honored. The awards — given annually in her name since 1981 — are presented by the Livonia Cultural League in honor of Knight's long-standing commitment to the art community both as a teacher and member of the Livonia Cultural League.

Honored were: Churchill High School students Mike Hudzik and Kathy Dzuirgot; Stevenson High student Janice Amodeo; Riley Middle School student Joe Alholinna; elementary students Kelly Mitchell of Coolidge and Matt Hwozdik of Roosevelt.

Judges were award-winning watercolorist Electra Stamelos and former Stevenson High School art instructor Ken Rose.

Joel Alholinna (left) shows Ruth Knight his winning jewelry piece — a ring — originally designed by his grandfather and given to his father. Alholinna redesigned the setting. Other award winners are (back row) Mike Hudzik (left) and the ceramic vase he created, one of several outstanding pieces in the student art show; Matt Hwozdik, oil pastel and crayon tigers; Kathy Dzuirgot, ceramic bowl. Front row, Janine Amodeo (left) with intaglio print and Kelly Mitchell with oil pastel.

Eve Garvin

'Ballerina' ties give chair seats new look

Q. My kitchen chairs are ladder-back and have rush seats. We've had the chairs for many years, and the finish on the seats has worn. Should I shop for a place to redo the rush, and where would I find such a place?

A. Forget replacing the rush seats, it would be very costly. Buying new chairs would make more sense. I suggest you add seat cushions over the rush. Tie backs to hold the cushion in place can be made to have large saucy bows with streamers 14 inches long.

Another way would be a seat cushion with "ballerina" ties. Wrap the ties around the back chair leg the way you would a ballet slipper. In this case your ties would be very narrow and the bottom bow short.

If you are redoing your kitchen, wallpaper with matching fabric would be nice to have. The seat cushions would then be made of the same fabric. Repeating the fabric on the windows in that case would be attractive.

Eve Garvin has been an interior designer in the area for many years. Her column appears every other week in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. She welcomes comments and questions from readers. Send those to her in care of this newspaper, 36251 Schoolcraft Road, Livonia 48150.

"I finally found a townhome as large as a home."

"I looked long and hard to find a 2000 sq. ft., cathedral ceiling elegant three-bedroom townhome. (Of course, I could have chosen a two or three-bedroom ranch.) With my own two-car attached garage, my own private basement and patio. And–luxury touches like deluxe kitchens and whirlpool tubs plus landscaping that I love. Nothing could get me to move from Covington. Nothing."

506 Help Wanted Sales

ARE YOU GETTING PAID WHAT YOU'RE REALLY WORTH?

We firmly believe that our associates should grow with the company, rather than the company growing at the expense of the sales associate. That's why, at the Michigan Group, you are paid the maximum portion of the commissions for which you work so hard. The day you join us, you are on a 50-50 split with the company, until you earn $14,000.00. After that, until the end of your contract year, you keep 100% OF EVERY COMMISSION YOU EARN, minus $25 for our Legal Defense Fund. Unbelievable, but it's true. NO DESK FEE collected each month, regardless of your earnings. NO EXPENSE FOR PHONES, SECRETARIAL HELP OR COMPANY ADVERTISING. Imagine all the extras you can provide yourself and your family: vacations, college tuition, jewelry, a second home, luxuries you never thought you could afford!
