The Wilcox house on Kellogg Park in Plymouth would be renovated under the plan being proposed.

Wilcox project

City gives apartments, renovation preliminary OK

By Jeff Counts staff writer

Although there were objections about the height and parking, the Plymouth Planning Commission voted 7-1 on Wednesday to give preliminary approval to the renovation of the Wilcox house and the construction of two five-story apartment houses behind it.

The proposal by Jack Wilcox to build 60 apartments on the 2.7-acre site near Kellogg Park will now go to the city commission for possible approval.

The Wilcox house has been a much debated property in Plymouth because of its historical value and its location in the downtown area. "I'm happy with the approval," said Wilcox, "but I wished it had come without all the controversy."

Richard Moyer, a planning commission member who voted against Earlier, Moyer and others questioned the proposed five stories, saying that two buildings of that size would dwarf the homes around it.

Peter Pellerito, a commission member who voted for the project, said, "We'd like to discuss the height

"Is the five stories inflexible?" he

The proposal by Wilcox is the secd such for the parcel and historic home in recent years. In 1986, Wilcox was a member of a partnership that received city approval to build a six-story, 46-unit condominium on the property.

The units were to sell for between $161,000 and $250,000. However, marketing and financial problems arose, and the project never got off the ground. The rent on the new, proposed the project, said, "I've got problems apartments, which would be about with the scale." apartments, which would be about 1,160 square feet, would range from transient?" $900 to $1,400 monthly.

> The new plan calls for renovating the home to the way it looked when constructed in 1901, Wilcox told the commission and about 100 spectators on hand. The home would remain a single-family structure. Several large trees on the property would also be saved.

> The renovation work on the house has already been started, Wilcox said, and when it's done "it will be a value to the community."

> When the commission was voting on the project, Commissioner David Schaff said: "Everyone appreciates the renovation, but we shouldn't be blinded by it. We should look at the other two buildings, too."

Pellerito raised a question about a change from condos to apartments,

Residents raised questions about how much the project would add to the tax rolls, and were told by city officials that it wouldn't produce more money for school or the city because the property is in the Down-town Development Authority, which means additional tax revenue would go to the authority for projects. The city and chools would continue to receive the taxes, which they have

Robert Donohue, city planning consultant, recommended that the project be approved in concept, saying that it will save the historical house. He said there are 102 planned parking spaces, but noted that parking is an issue.

Chamber director to leave post

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

When Mary Roehr was named executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce in 1987, there were 375 member businesses.

Over a scant two years, she has presided over drives that have boosted membership to more than 400 members and moved the chamber office to a more prominent downtown location.

Throw in a marriage along the way (18 months ago to Stephen Roehr) and what develops is the profile of one busy woman.

Roehr is leaving her position with the Plymouth chamber Wednesday, Aug. 16, to become an account executive with Unysis. In typical Roehr fashion, she begins her new job the day after she leaves her old one.

"I HAVE mixed feelings about leaving," she said during an interview in her Main Street office Monday.

"I've grown a lot personally and professionally in the last two years. People have been terrific. I'll really miss them.'

But in her next breath, Roehr confides her enthusiasm for her new assignment. 'I'm very excited about the new job. I'll be selling computer systems to local governments - public safety departments — in Monroe, Washtenaw and Wayne counties," she

"Two years ago I didn't think I would be in sales, but you don't have to be a fast talker or a hustler, or the life of the party. I think you have to have certain skills - to be able to present yourself orally and in writing. This job and my background prepare me well for that."

AFTER OBTAINING a degree in journalism with an emphasis on public relations, Roehr took a position as communications specialist with the Livonia Chamber of Commerce. She stayed there 18 months before taking the top post with the Plymouth chamber.

Former boss John White isn't surprised to see her moving forward.

"I really think she has a lot of potential and will do an excellent job said White, executive director of the Livonia Chamber of Commerce. 'She has powers of organization like no one else.

AT THE helm of the Plymouth chamber, Roehr oversees six committees of volunteers, each with a different area of emphasis.

During her short tenure, five of those committees were formed with more than 75 chamber members actively involved.

She is quick to say she is not the chamber, rather the chamber is a collection of businesses, mostly small, that get together collectively to accomplish what can't be done

'Mary came to us when we were in a bit of upheaval," said Pam-Kosteva, Plymouth chamber president. "She jumped right in and helped us

Death trains:

The Freeland rescue operation was just great. But residents near the CSX railroad in that Saginaw County community told state legislators Monday to make sure tank cars carrying hazardous chemicals don't derail in the first place.

"Once an accident has happened, the system has failed - regardless of how good the evacuation is," George Blackhurst of nearby Midland told a House panel chaired by Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton.

CSX tracks in Plymouth and Canton carry similar chemical hauling trains for Dow Chemical Co. While there have been no accidents in the area, officials have expressed their concern about the trains. A similar hearing will be held 9:30 a.m. Sept. 11 at the Wayne City Council Chambers, 3355 S. Wayne Road.

"To them, it (a crash) is just one of the costs of doing business," said Wayne Ziegler, a Freeland resident who attacked CSX's safety record as the worst per mile in American rail-

"Freeland is a 5 or 6 on a scale of 1 to 10," said Tom Horrigan, spokesman for Citizens Against Toxic Trains, a group formed after an April 25 derailment in Oakland County's Highland Township. "Think in terms of a Saginaw, a Detroit, a Grand Rapids," he said.

A STANDING room only crowd jammed the Tittabawassee Township Hall for more than three hours to emphasize preventing the kinds of accidents that occurred July 22 when 40 were injured and 3,000 evacuated for several days.

Local reaction to two school finance proposals that will appear on the ballot Nov. 7 ranges from confusion to lukewarm suppport. One plan would increase the state sales tax by a half cent, generating $400 million in new school revenue. The other would raise the sales tax by two cents and would provide $1.4 billion in prop-

"I don't think either proposal is facing up to the need that is there in terms of school districts across the state," said Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John Hoben. "However, it's the only thing we have. The educational position is to support both issues and to vigorously support one or the other above that."

At a Monday workshop, the school board discussed both proposals. Before deciding to support one plan or the other, trustees want more information on the ramifications of both plans. They'll discuss the issue again Monday.

The two-cent proposal "has some (millage) capping features built into it . . . and is going to affect more equity across the state" than the halfcent plan, said Hoben.

Reaction lukewarm to tax plans

"I think this is a cop-out on the part of the Legislature to come up with confusing hallot issue. It's going to leave a lot of people wondering. That happened last night talking to heard. It's a complex issue. My gut feeling is neither will pass."

STATE REP. JAMES Rosteva, D-Canton, is among those backing the two-cent proposal. The supporters are borrowing a popular beer slogan to supporters are borrowing a popular beer slogan to clarify some points about the plan. It's "less filling," says Kosteva, because the net tax increase of the two-cent plan is actually lower due to the property tax decrease linked with it.

The plan would increase the state sales tax from 4 percent to 6 percent, raising about $225 million for schools while reducing property taxes by about $1.4 billion.

The half-cent proposal doesn't address property

Kosteva, who was joined by Rep. Michael Nye, R-Litchfield, in quoting the beer slogan, said the proposal also "tastes great" because it attempts to get at the root of the problem — overreliance on local taxes to fund kindergarten through 13th grade education public schools.

It also works toward closing the per-pupil spending gap between rich and poor school districts, he said.

Kosteva and Nye also said they were trying to dispel rumors that the plan to raise the sales tax to 6 percent isn't balanced.

Their grassroots campaign is just getting under way, and they acknowledged they have a tough task on hand. They must educate voters about the complex proposal and win them over without much financial support. Their biggest booster so far is the Grand Rapids Area Chamber of Com-

It was an unlikely journey Ralph' Lorens made from the mountains of Austria-Hungary to Plymouth, where he began his business career as a kid, trapping muskrats on Forest Avenue and selling the pelts for 75 cents to glove makers.

A few days before his 79th birthday, Lorenz took time out to reminisce about his life and his 50 years at the Mayflower Hotel, which he recently sold to sons Scott and Randy and longtime employee Creon Smith.

He remembers what it was like living in the midst of World War I. Lorenz lived with a brother, sister cia in the Carpathian Mountains in what is now Poland.

"I saw more war in World War : than I did in 30 months during World War II," said Lorenz. "Turmoil was in existence, and my dad had pas-sage to the United States, and was going to send for us. But for four years, we lost correspondence with

With the family savings in a suitcase, Caroline Lorenz and her young children made it to Ellis Island, and after being quarantined for two weeks, to Plymouth. Caroline Lorenz's sister wasn't as lucky. She was captured by the Russians, and forced to work in the salt mines. It was 1970 before she escaped along with a son from prison. A second son died in the attempt, Lorenz said.

In Plymouth, Joseph and Caroline Lorenz went to the local bank to exchange their suitcase of Austrian money for American cash.

"The banker told them to wait, it was going to go up in value. While they were waiting, they dishonored the money, and it was worthless,"

SCHOOL WOULDN'T have been difficult for Lorenz — as a fourth grader he'd already studied algebra and Latin - but he couldn't speak a word of English.

The language barrier also made it tough to make friends — until the Fourth of July.

"Until I came to Plymouth, I never had a pair of factory-made shoes. For the Fourth of July, my dad bought me shoes, cordurey knickers and a new shirt and hat," said

"The town bully took my hat, put a firecracker in it, and blew the top right out.

I picked up a stick and beat the living hell out of him. Well my shirt was ripped, and I went home to change clothes. Nothing was said.

"I asked why. He said he'd talked with the police chief.

"My dad said, 'Don't fight with sticks and stones. If someone wants to fight you, put your dukes up.'

That was my first lesson in self defense. Then he whipped me. I'd disgraced the family.

Overnight, I made friends, because this guy was a bully. All the kids came to my side."

Lorenz "never skipped school. To me it was a precious thing. I wanted to get an education. Today, you have to drive them to school. I don't know

As a collegian, Lorens was his school's golf captain, and he pursued the sport in Detroit district play, where he carried a handicap of two.

BY 1939, Lorenz was managing the Mayflower, built in just seven months in 1927.

"There's a lot of history in the old place," said Lorenz, recalling one of the last half century's memorable

"Some of the early movie stars stayed here," he said.

Bette Davis stayed here while she was doing a play or a poetry reading in Ann Arbor. We were the nearest hotel.

"She was a young, good-looking gal, but very noisy. She wasn't a very good guest.

"She had a stage voice that really carried. She was married then to Gary Merrill. She was so abusive with him - she used to let an expletive loose every once in a while. We had to close the doors she was so loud. I'd have been throwing her out the window," said Lorenz.

MANY WHO HAVE staved or worked at the Mayflower aren't people whose names people would readily recognize. They've been older people with drinking problems, young people who have exasperated teachers and parents, or folks in need of money. Lorenz has trained, hired or helped them in an effort to give something back.

"I've had a lot of breaks in my life, and it's very difficult to repay. I find myself quite often giving people money or hiring a guy who constantly gets drunk, because you can never pay people back in kind."

That's not to say he's an easy

"I'm probably over critical. I'm severe in some ways, and more de-

His early life helped make him that way, Lorenz said. "You learn to live with the ups and downs. I think you can take more, absorb more and understand more. Nothing's new. It's happened before.

"I feel in order to excel, you have to be a step ahead of everybody," he Lorenz celebrates his 79th birthday Aug. 11.

MARTY KREGER, president of Machus Restaurants and Pastry Shops in Birmingham, worked for Ralph from 1952-54.

"I went to school at Eastern Michigan and worked at the Mayflower two mornings a week as breakfast cook, two nights as relief boiler man and weekends in the pantry," Kreger

"When I first went to work as a breakfast cook, I made eggs. I can remember clear as a bell Ralph coming back to the kitchen with his eggs, telling me I was not to send any eggs out that had the yolks bro-without a flipper.' "I went through six dozen eggs before I got the hang of it," Kreger

"BACK IN those days, as it still is, Thanksgiving Day was the biggest day of the year. I can remember feeding 829 people in a 154-seat dining room.

"I had gotten up that morning and helped the baker make all the bread rolls. I worked in the pantry the whole day, and at 9:30 at night, Ralph came through and thanked me for a great job. That was the second time he congratulated me on a good job in two years." Once, reminiscing over lunch with three friends from the Mayflower, Kreger recalled how few times he was complimented.

These guys had worked there years and years, and never got a compliment. It just wasn't his style. He expected you to do a good job, and you got paid for it. That should be enough."

IT WAS on Lorenz's insistence that Kreger transferred to Michigan State from Eastern Michigan, "because he said I would learn more about food service.

"I rented my home in Livonia, and moved my wife and children up to Lansing. I have never regretted that, and I've often thanked Ralph for making that recommendation.

"I graduated in 1958 and came to work for Mr. Machus. I just finished my 31st year. I started as a kitchen manager, and now I'm the president."

It was Kreger who nominated Lorenz for one of the hotelier's most recent honors - the Michigan Restaurant Association's Distinguished Service Award.

WILLIAM "TINY" ZEHNDER, owner of the Bavarian Inn in Frankenmuth, and Lorenz have patronized each other's establishments for "at least 35 years," Zehnder said.

"I express my sympathy to Ralph. I always do when I find someone else in the same business," he joked.

"I give him credit for making Plymouth what it is today. The hotel brought in other shops, gift shops, the ice carving festival, balloon race - I think local people don't appreciate what he's done for Plymouth."

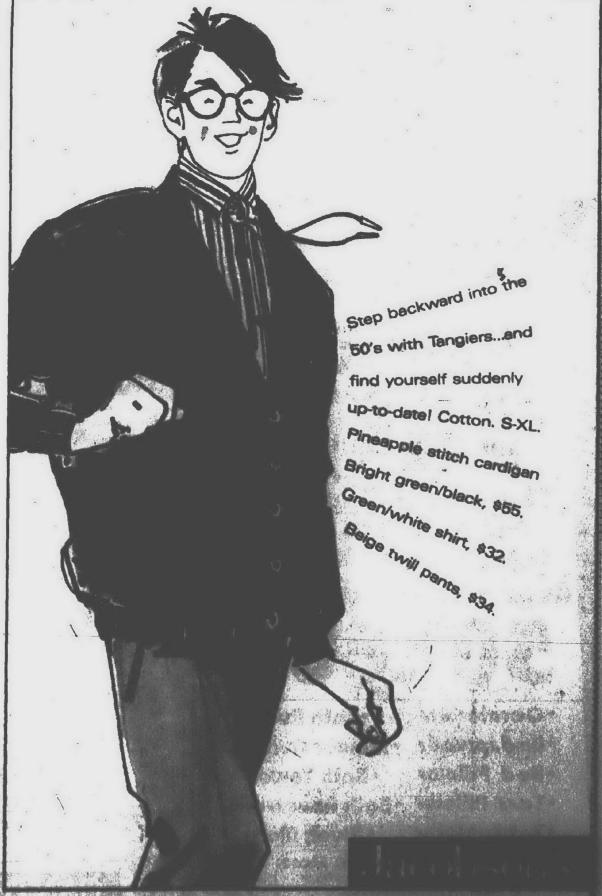

'Quite often he told me about financing. When we started to expand, he said, 'Don't look for local sup-

"We're working with the petrole-um industry to build a center for training in Lansing by the first of the year," said Lt. Arthur Nash Jr. of the State Police fire marshal division.

"In 18 months, we've trained more than 4,000 emergency handlers,' said Capt. Arlen Brower of the State Police emergency management division. But Brower said federal funding has run out and wasn't renewed for fiscal 1990.

RESIDENTS OF Freeland and nearby Midland had their agenda for legislators:

• An executive order of a 25 mph speed limit for trains carrying hazardous chemicals. The CSX Freeland train was traveling 37.

· A state fund to help communi-

 More frequent and more stringent track inspection. "The Fed-eral Railroad Administration doesn't have the manpower or budget to safely inspect these rails," said resident Kim Maxwell.

· "Lessen our dependence on products made with hazardous chemicals. Use the marketplace,' said Ann Hunt of Citizens for Alternatives to Chemical Contamination.

• Better construction of tank cars. "The CSX cars exceeded federal standards," said Kathy Garthoff of Concerned Citizens in Freeland.

The half-cent plan has the support of Gov. James Blanchard and several major education and business groups, including the Michigan Manufacturers Association.

Blanchard already has used speak-

The public can vote for both plans, either plan, or neither. If both earn a majority vote, the one with the most votes will take effect.

Every Wayne County household would have to begin recycling under newly proposed changes to the coun-ty's master plan for solid waste dis-

Milton Mack, chairman of the county's Solid Waste Implementation Committee, said he was strongly considering several changing the county plan to boost recycling.

A key element of Mack's proposal would restrict county landfills from accepting unseparated trash. Trash separation is a necessity for any recycling program. Under such a program, households would be forced to put selected items in separate trash containers.

THE GOAL, Mack said, is to force consumers to recycle waste items that can be recycled - including paper, plastic and glass products — while leaving landfills open only for those products that cannot be recy-

The proposed landfill restrictions would force communities to develop recycling programs, Mack said. It would also de-emphasize the 50 per-cent cut in county waste currently projected in the still-to-be adopted master plan.

The idea, he said, came from a recent waste handling symposium he attended

"We've been looking at numbers. But in talking to people from eastern states like New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, I've found numbers weren't as important as getting a system in place that will work," Mack said. "Recycling, I believe, will work."

Under the previous plan, communities would have to cut waste 50 percent from current levels by the year

Mack, D-Wayne, is a four-term county commissioner whose district includes Canton Township. He is also chairman of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. As SEM-COG chief, he said, he would try to promote regional recycling pro-

Local governments, especially those in western Wayne County, had complained that mandating a per-centage cut in trash would force them to build costly and controversial incinerators.

Plymouth Township supervisor Maurice Breen said Mack's proposal would represent a welcome change.

Teachers union backs half-cent hike in sales tax

Two leaders of the education establishment are going separate ways on the two state school tax proposals on the Nov. 7 ballot.

The Michigan Education Association is endorsing Proposal A, a halfcent increase in the 4 cents sales tax. The Michigan Association of School Boards is backing Proposal B, a 2 cents increase with part of the money going to property tax reduction.

'Supporting Proposal A is probably one of the most significant improvements for education in Michigan that could happen," said Larry Chunovich, the former Southfield math teacher who is MEA president.

CHUNOVICH said MEA is commiting $1.5 million to an estimated $3 million campaign.

After the union's 60-member board unanimously endorsed the proposal last weekend in Sault Ste. Marie, it began a leadership conference to train 550 members on how to mount a campaign.

"Proposal A not only provides dollars for current programs, it sets standards for improved curriculum and decision making processes in the school system," he said. It would pump about $400 million in new money into public schools.

Chunovich said Proposal A will help 90.3 percent of Michigan K-12 students and deliver more education money because it takes effect sooner.

Proposal A was developed by the so-called "Harden Commission" of business leaders, unions and educators. It is supported by Gov. James J. Blanchard.

If voters approve both proposals, the one with the most yes votes will become part of the Michgian Consti-

Grant aims to reduce minority mortality rate

The Wayne County Health Department office in Westland was among 20 health agencies receiving grants under a new $750,000 state program designed to improve the health of minority citizens.

The Westland office's grant is targeted toward reducing mortality rates for black adults from cardiovascular disease and stroke.

Other grants are targeted toward reducing infant mortality and increasing the number of minority workers in health care professions.

Minorities suffer significantly higher rates of cancer, cardiovascular disease, stroke, chemical depend-ency, diabetes, homicide, accidents and infant mortality compared with whites, state health director Raj Wiener said.

Michigan's minority population is approximately 1.76 million, includ-ing blacks, Hispanics, Arab-Ameri-cans, Asians, Pacific Islanders and American Indians. One out of five Michigan residents is a minority group member, Wiener said.

Lindsey is a 5-year-old diabetic. Her daily insulin shots, diet restrictions and constant blood monitoring only provide day-to-day control over the disease. They do not cure it. So Lindsey, along with 11 million other Americans, still faces the long-term risks of diabetes - like heart disease, blindness, stroke, amputation and kidney disease. The complications of diabetes will account for an estimated

150,000 deaths this year alone. But thanks to your contributions to the Juvenile Diabetes of diabetes and its treatment, Foundation, Lindsey and millions like her have something more to look forward to. In the past decade, JDF research has made great strides in isolating the causes and conditions of diabetes, bringing us closer to a cure. At the same time, diabetes increases by 6% every year. And in ten years the number of diabetics will have doubled.

So you see, your help is needed more desperately than ever before. For more infor mation on the warning signs and what you can do to help. call JDF at (313) 569-6171.

Ford agrees to buy gas from area landfill

A mile-long pipeline will be constructed by Waste Mangement to transport the gas to the Wayne Plant boilerhouse, where it will be used to fuel steam-generating boilers for Ford's Michigan Truck and Wayne Assembly plants.

Woodland Meadows is a 150-acre facility at Van Born and Hannan roads in Canton Township.

CONSTRUCTION OF the pipeline and a processing plant, to be built north of the facility by Waste Management, will begin in the fall, pending permit approvals from both Canton Township and the city of Wayne.

"The system will be similar to a gas recovery plant Waste Management has in operation in Ohio," said Ray Kellas, mideast regional landfill operations manager for Waste Man-

Burning methane is much cleaner than coal and produces no ash,' Kellas said.

SUBSTITUTION OF landfill gas for coal at the Wayne plant means an annual reduction of more than 40,000 tons of carbon dioxide emissions and 200 tons of sulfur dioxide emission, said Vic Sussman, Ford's director of environmental control. That's because Ford will use the landfill gas instead of burning coal to raise steam for the plant.

burn but has no use for the heat. The methane gas will be extracted using vacuum pumps and a series of wells linked together by a collection pipe system. The methane will be transported north under the county drain and ConRail right of way to a processing plant.

AT THE plant, the gas will be filtered, dehydrated and compressed before being placed in the pipeline, which will transport it to the Ford boilerhouse as a replacement for much of the coal now being used. An estimated 1 billion Btu of heating power per day will be produced by the system. Area government officials are supportive of the project.

I'm pleased to see this kind of cooperation between an industry which generates waste materials and another company responsible for disposing of it," said Wayne County commissioner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, whose district includes Can-

"Siphoning the landfill gas not only conserves our natural fossil fuel resources as an energy source, but also eliminates a potential source of odor pollution at the landfill," said Mack, who is chairman of the Wayne County Solid Waste Planning Com-

THOMAS YACK, supervisor of Canton, described the project as an ideal situation.

"Converting the methane to energy is an economic, efficient method of utilizing a natural resource created by the landfill decomposition," Yack said. He said the location of the Ford boilerhouse to the Waste Management facility is another advantage. "The productive use of the methane is so much better than burning at the site and wasting all that energy. It's the ultimate in recycling." WASTE MANAGEMENT has 12 ties in Michigan.

To prevent methane from escaping, wells, usually from 40 to 120 feet deep, are drilled into the sanitary landfills. The wells are tied together with a system of horizontal pipes. Approximately 2 million cubic feet of methane is currently collected daily at Woodland Meadows. Until service to the Ford plant is begun, all methane collected is burned by a special writer

William Hughes has had a lot of ups and downs in his life.

The 29-year old Redford man is fascinated with roller coasters. He park hopping," riding the big coasters until his stomach cries, "No more, please."

Hughes, a 1977 graduate of Thurston High School, is a member of a 2,000-member organization called American Coasters Enthusiasts. The group, which has members worldwide, sponsors major get-togethers four times a year at various amusement parks.

The main attraction? Riding and screaming - to their heart's content. The next meeting is Aug. 18-20 at Valley Fair Park in Minnesota.

'We're drawn like bees to honey,' said Hughes, who is single. "During our get-togethers, the park will be open just for us. We'll just ride (the roller coaster) for hours, endlessly. That's always a big hit during con-

Hughes, a street vendor for Penguin Ice Cream Co., was just 7 years old when he stepped onto his first roller coaster. It was the Blue Streak at Cedar Point, near Sandusky, Ohio. He became hooked on the ride's thrilling dips, colls and plunges.

"I loved it from the start," Hughes recalled. Hughes, who calls himself "the world's biggest kid," remains dedicated to riding roller coasters whenever he gets the chance. He has gone as far as England and Denmark There are no two rides that are the same," Hughes said.

Roller coasters, introduced at Coney Island in New York some 100 years ago, are - pardon the pun on a roll in recent years with the popularity of large theme parks. That's good news for enthusiasts such as Hughes.

Big roller coasters carry flashy names such as The Beast and King

Cobra to inspire and entice riders.
"The hallmark of a good coaster is endless action," Hughes said. "Fast

The highest coaster Hughes has ridden was the Magnum XL-200 at Cedar Point. The ride reaches 200 feet in height and is 5000 feet long.

"It's the tallest coaster in the world, not the longest," Hughes said.
"The longest is at King's Island in Ohio, at 7400 feet long."

A roller coaster ride may last only two minutes but, to satisfy Hughes, it had better be full of speed and endless turns. The King's Island coaster is a full three and a half minutes of non-stop excitement. The Laser Loop, in Pennsylvania, lasts a scant 30 seconds, Hughes said.

Here's how Hughes gleefully describes his personal favorite, the Cyclone, at a park in Springfield, Mass-

"It's a rather wicked-looking ride," Hughes said. "It has turns and dips all over the place. It lifts you out of your seat. On the way down, it pins you down. It's non-stop action.

Hughes joined the Chicago-based American Coasters Enthusiasts around ten years ago. The organizacoasters and supports preserving old or unusual coasters. Hughes sub-scribes to Roller Coaster magazine, which has information about various amusement parks and rides.

Safety features and restraints make most roller coasters safe, Hughes said. The only time he can recall being nervous about a coast-er's safety was when he rode the coaster at the now-defunct Edgewater Park in northwest Detroit. Most accidents happen "when the rider was doing something he shouldn't have done, such as standing up or changing trains."

The only drawback, for Hughes, is if "I ride too much my stomach might get a little queasy.

Recently, Hughes has been expanding his interests. He has enjoyed working as a weekly volunteer at Children's Hospital in Detroit, where he plays games and helps the youthful patients with arts and crafts.

He's now considering enrolling in college with the goal of becoming a recreational therapist.

Although roller coasters are his favorites, Hughes also enjoys water rides, "the wetter the better." He likes to ride ferris wheels, which he puts in the "scenic ride" category, and unusual or historical amusement park rides. He avoids high-speed, spinning rides.

During the winter months, Hughes enjoys downhill skiing. As he sees it, skiing has the same elements as roller-coaster riding. It's a slow, uphill climb, followed by a swift downward rush.

County program costs skyrocket

Kim and Billy Miller, ages 3 and 5 respectively, have been in county protective custody since a recent rain storm, when neighbors reported the two youngsters were locked outside their home, a shabby apartment in a western Wayne suburb.

The children, neighbors said, often appeared hungry and dirty neglect. appeared hungry and dirty, neglected by their mother, Sharon, 22, a high school dropout who is known to abuse alcohol.

By Janice Brunson staff writer

Sharon also suffers from depression, ever since her boyfriend, Kim's father, left last year. She was divorced four years ago from Billy's father whom she married after discovering she was pregnant. Both men were abusive and neither pays child support. Sharon's life is a constant struggle to make ends meet.

Jason, 17, was having trouble both at home and in school last year when he attacked and seriously injured another youth. A ninth grader at the time, he was chronically truant from the suburban high school he attended. He lived with his mother and a stepfather he detested and with whom he regularly fought.

Convicted in juvenile court of assault and battery, Jason was confined to the Wayne County Youth Home for assessment.

The two incidents are not real. They are composites of actual cases, situations most common to social workers who work in suburban Wayne County.

In the past three years, county costs have skyrocketed from $21.8 million in 1986 to a projected $46 million next fiscal year. Combined expenditures by Wayne County and the state have increased from $10 million in 1986 for the abused and neglected to an expected $20 million next year, and from $12 million for delinquents in 1986 to a projected $22 million in 1990.

This year, the county has budgeted $36 million for child care expenses, a figure expected to fall $3 million short, according to Granholm, who said the single most expensive item is housing which has increased in cost by some 21 percent since 1986.

When we receive the monthly bills, we are constantly surprised at the increases," she said.

Orchards Children's Services, a private agency with facilities in Livonia and Southfield, provides group housing for 24 youngsters ages 8 to 17 years and individual foster home placement for another 300 children.

Orchards foster home residences, most of which are in the suburbs, is one of the least costly forms of alternative housing, according to the agency's financial officer Jennifer

Orchards operating budget this year is $6.5 million. Uphoep on the agency's three group homes, aimed at maintaining state standards, is one of the more contly line items in one of the more costly line items in the budget, according to Bagley, who said such costs have jumped 11 percent since 1986.

Since January 1966 through January of this year, the number of Wayne County children in protective services increased from 6,400 to 9,100. The number of delinquent youths in custody increased from 650 to 800.

Recycling

City, township move forward

OTH PLYMOUTH Township and Plymouth are ahead in the recycling game, and we hope they stay that way. Last week the city of Plymouth start-sed by handing out special bags that are to be used for grass and leaves. Residents are asked to mace the biodegradable bags 15 feet away from heir regular trash.

Those bags are then picked up and taken to a composting center. The bags look like clear plastic, but are really made from corn.

At the composting center, the leaves and grass return to the earth. By not putting them in a blandfill, more room is created to handle trash toand garbage in the landfill.

ies Efforts such as those made by Plymouth mean that our landfills will have a longer lifespan, Which translates into more room at the dump.

MEANWHILE, PLYMOUTH Township has embarked on a program of recycling newspapers. That also goes a long way toward making 9, more room at the dump.

Instead of ending up in a landfill, the newspapers are collected and taken to a recycling facil-

The newspapers are collected monthly from each home. Residents are asked to tie the papers in bundles weighing no more than 65 pounds and place them in front of their homes for collect. The schedule is: The first Friday of each month for those with trash collection on Mondays; the second Friday of the month for those with trash collection on Tuesdays; the third Friday of the month for those with Wednesday trash collection; and the fourth Friday, if your household trash is collected Thursday.

In the city of Plymouth, newspaper recycling will start Sept. 11 when the city will open a recycling center where residents will be able to drop off newspapers and clean glass.

The programs by the city and township are a good first step. However, we hope they go fur-

Landfills ar € getting more and more expensive to operate and there's an unwillingness on the part of people to live near them. There's also the question of land use: Are we going to turn the countryside into a dump?

The situation isn't going to get any better. But the best place to look for a solution is in our own trash cans. It's a start.

Chamber chief

Departure a loss for chamber

HEN MARY Roehr took the job as the executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce two years ago she said it wasn't a 9-10-5 job. She then went out and kept her word.

She was around town as much as possible, helping to promote the community. And there were good results, the number of businesses in the chamber increased.

Prior to coming to Plymouth, Roehr was a communications specialist with the Livonia Chamber of Commerce.

But now it's time for her to move on to a new job with Unisys. We wish her well, but we'll miss

She was a good communicator with our newspaper, and always was straight with us, even if the subject we were inquiring about showed a few of the warts on Plymouth.

We're sure that her habit of honesty will serve her well in her new position.

We understand that the chamber plans on quickly replacing Roehr. We hope that the new director possesses the same strong commitment to the community and communications skills as displayed by Roehr.

Suburbs, city Cooperation can improve region

UBURBANITES should take a great interest in Detroit's mayoral election - not because of who is or isn't running, but because of what strong, well-measured ' leadership means to southeastern Michigan.

We hope Detroit's residents get the mayor they want and we hope they persuade that person to widen the field of cooperation with suburban communities. When that happens, we trust those communities involved and Detroit's mayor can put aside one, maybe even two of their differences and get about the business of working together to improve this part of Michigan.

Some question why this newspaper occasionally mixes Detroit's issues with those of the communities we cover. It could be said that as Detroit goes, so goes this corner of the state, but that's a debatable point.

Suburbanites must be more concerned with

• Many people and businesses in the communities we cover have an interest in Detroit's good health. Convention visitors fill hotels and restaurants in the suburbs. Many businesses contribute to the mayoral candidates of their choice because that candidate's policies affect their ability to do business in Detroit.

• True regional mass transit, a benefit for all, will come into existence only when Detroit and the suburbs decide to find some way to cooperate with one another.

Eventually a major mass transit system has to be built for the good of both city and suburbs. The economic viability of the suburban innerpore as well as the city of Detroit depend on it.

• Erasing racism as a factor in the urban/ suburban relationship is imperative. Standing on either side of Eight Mile and yelling epithets at bach other accomplishes nothing; nor does pro-tlaiming the still-unfinished I-696 freeway the new barrier between Detroit and the northern communities, as some already are doing.

Integration as a cohesive and unified policy must be forged between city and suburb before we are ever to have economic stability and civil they're told there's no room for them in the Wayne County Jail. They say Detroit has a priority in housing criminals in that facility. True or false, the perception is there.

· A metropolitan area's reputation is imperative in either building or destroying its eco-

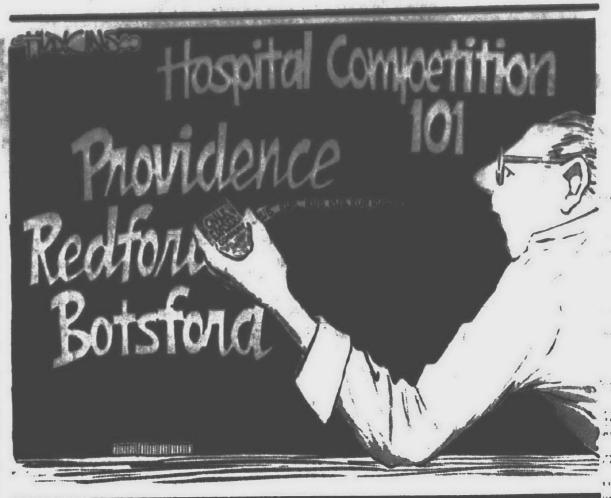

A bad reputation for Detroit transfers to all our communities. Those outside of Michigan don't separate Detroit's problems from the metropolitan area. We've found that when we're visiting another state and people ask where we're from, the answer West Bloomfield or Canton isn't specific enough for them. They want to know the location of those communities and their proximity to Detroit. When they find out how close we really are to Detroit, they either respond with a crummy joke or just wince. One person recited a litany of 15,000 empty homes, Devil's Night fires, franchised crack dealers and the curbside sale of weapons. No one needs that kind of local, national or international reputation.

· Many of us are linked via pipeline with Detroit - a large percentage of our communities use Detroit water.

• Any weekday morning, look at the eastbound Jeffries and I-94, or southbound I-75 and the Lodge. Those traffic jams mean that much as we might like to believe we don't need Detroit, the evidence speaks to the contrary. Even tattered, it still is an important center of commerce. The weekends aren't much different lines to the JLA, Brunch with Bach, ethnic festivals, concerts, special showings at the art institute, jazz festivals, the Grand Prix, boat races and Greektown. . . point made.

Detroit also gets a lot from our communities

- and the rest of Michigan - in the form of tax dollars, clout in Lansing, grants from Washington that might have gone elsewhere, and, perhaps most importantly, a chance to set the tone for the way this area is perceived by the rest of the

Consumers victimized by employee neglect

SUBURBAN malls are full of Suburban restaurants are too. And so are the much utilized fast food outlets.

And we all are victimized. I'm talking about incidents of employee neglect - especially when it comes to young employees. My favorite example of employee neglect revolves around a trip to a clothing store with my daughter. Standing at the counter was a girl, not much older than my 14 year-old daughter.

She was working the store alone. Not a supervisor, manager or owner in sight. Behind the counter was an out-of-place pay phone. Curiosity got the best of me.

"How come the pay phone?" I asked.

"Oh, they don't want us using the phone for personal calls. Nobody is ever here to watch us and they really don't trust us by ourselves. So they took out the regular one and installed this," she replied.

What a sad story. Whoever owns or manages this store cares little about the employees or the customers, for that matter. Instead of hiring a manager to work with the employees, the owners would rather save the salary, install the phone and leave some untrained kid alone to survive as best as her instincts would allow.

UNFORTUNATELY this kind of employee/customer neglect is becoming more and more common.

As a consumer you've been victimized by one or many similar inci-

For example:

• Waiters and waitresses who let customers wait for service as they talk among themselves.

• Far too many tables left uncleared so patrons have to wait to be seated and those seated are left to glare at others' garbage. · Food which is served cold and waiters and kitchen personnel who are unable to get it heated to an edible temperature. · Clerks in retail stores who spend their time waiting on you while complaining to a colleague about some personal problem. • Clerks who know little about the product they sell and who show little concern over your concern. • Fast food counter personnel who are unable to handle an unusual situation outside the programmed Asking to see the manager is of little help. Oftentimes the manager is as young and as unskilled as the employees.

It really doesn't have to be that way. Really it doesn't.

And you can't blame the kids. But those with the power, business owners and managers, are falling . down on the job.

Somewhere along the line, the business work ethic has been replaced by greed. Not by everybody,20 mind you, but by enough to give am bad name to business in general. Grabbing the biggest buck in the shortest time is too often the credo of business today.

This need for greed is reflected into the neglect of employees by managers and owners. With the laboring shortage increasing, the problem isonly going to get worse.

Far too often, young adults and teenagers, many of whom never. have worked before, are hired into a -job, given little training and, even it? trained, are rarely monitored in. their day-to-day job performance.

It's a problem which only will be_ stopped when consumers say enough. No mas, no mas.

Columnist too tough on business

To the editor:

Don't you think Jack Gladden was rather hard on the "business people" in his July 31 column? He took it much too personally.

I wish there was a way, merely by looking at people, to decide whether more ID is required for business, transactions. Wouldn't that make life easy. Yet, alas, then people would cry "Discrimination, you didn't ask him for ID."

So, truly, the only fair action for all is requiring it of everybody. I'm sure Mr. Gladden's MIL is very trustworthy, but there are those who aren't, who take a set of towels, linens, or anything they feel they Wouldn't it be asking a lot of the business people to take the time with each customer to decide. . . "Should I trust this customer. He or she looks honest-but you never know." I feel you'd be one to complain about how long it takes to check into a hotel, if this were the case.

One last point, Mr. Gladden. The reason you couldn't charge your dinner was because you hadn't estab-lished credit which involves leaving a signed charge card slip at the front desk. You paid cash for your room. Again; a policy for all customers was merely being followed, because that's the easiest, most efficient, time-saving, and fair way to operate I'm sure you wouldn't have left with out paying your bill (for the meal), but businesses cannot know all their customers personally . . . an impossibility!

These precautions need to apply to all . . . including Mr. Gladden.

Aggie Quirk,

Lawbreakers to pay price

To the editor:

My own personal opinion is that Livonia District Judges James McCann and Robert Brzezinski conducted themselves with proper decorum, (referring to a previous let-ter headlined "Truth Hidden from the Jury," and printed July 27).

The sentence meted out to that pious do-gooder who saw fit to break the law was much too lenient. It is just too bad that she wasn't prosecuted under the Racketeering Act or RICOH. Under our current laws and our Constitution, the writer could hardly be classified as a baby and mom rescuer when in fact she knowingly and willfully broke the

As of now, the religious right and the fundamentalists, in spite of their concerted efforts to do so, have been unable to rewrite our Constitution to force their particular ideologies on our citizens with regard to religious conviction, prayer in schools, passing litmus tests on being a good, fundamentalist Christian in order to obtain an appointment to a federal position a la Ronald Reagan's administration, and the matter of freedom of choice for a woman.

Picketing is one of the guarantees of the Constitution and the rules governing that activity are specific. One of the rules is that the demonstrators have to keep a certain distance from the clinics and cannot interfere with ! those individuals wishing access to any facility whether it be for an abortion or for counseling. These women obviously of their own volition have decided a course of action; they want to take in an unwanted pregnancy. They made the choice and that is as it should be in our democratic country. This is not Iran; or Nazi Germany.

When one violates the picketing. laws and blocks the entrances to; buildings or even occupies those! buildings and prevents the pregnant women from gaining access to the building or harasses them when attempting to enter that building, one;

is guilty of breaking the law.

If judges did indeed suppress the admission of religious dogma into the trial, they were mandated by law; to do so. The two judges were not conducting a religious forum - they were ruling in a court of civil law. A jury of her peers found her guilty as charged and she had to pay the penalty. It is that simple. If she chooses to persist in her illegal activities, she must be prepared to pay the penalty.'

Hospitals are in a fight to survive

And in the Great Hospital War, tiny Redford Community Hospital has succumbed.

Others could follow.

In addition, improved technology in the medical field has reduced the average in-patient stay at hospitals, while an increase in out-patient surgery has caused a decrease in occupancy rates at many hospitals.

In the area covered by the Observer & Eccentric, Redford Community Hospital, which had just 68 beds, was the first casualty.

Meanwhile, the giants — Henry Ford, Providence, Beaumont, Sinai fight to be the hospital of choice. The target: our suburbs. And others, such as Crittendon in Rochester Hills, Botsford in Farmington Hills St. Mary in Livonia, Garden City Osteopathic and the Westland Medical Center, stay in the running.

Their battle is waged on several

It is generally reported that the dollars spent are considerably high-er than the early '80s, but not as much as perhaps two or three years ago. But hospitals are still seen as aggressive marketers.

As far as insurers, health maintenance organizations are now operable in hospitals where the Blues once reigned all but supreme, and are another promotional device.

So where does all of that leave all of us, the people who use the hospitals? Paying more for health care though it may be closer to us.

• Those on Medicaid/Medicare may be treated as second-class citizens because most hospitals are reimbursed for about 75 cents of every dollar spent on Medicare/ Medicaid patients.

All A student stands out from the pack

Q: Your response to a recent question about studying talked about cramming and a photogenic mind. When I was a student, frankly I didn't study that much and did cram. but was still an A student in science and math. Although I did get a few A's in social studies and language arts; science and math always seemed to come easier. I suppose for some students, English, literature and social studies are easier than math and science and vice versa. Is this typical of students?

A: The answer is yes, that is why an all A student is truly an unusual breed.

Some students tend to favor math and the sciences while others tend to favor English, language arts, literature and social studies.

An easy answer would be that it depends on what the student is most interested in. And in many cases this is true. I believe it goes beyond that simplistic answer. Some students tend to be convergent thinkers and some students tend to be divergent Convergent thinkers tend to focus on what is the answer, the solution. They know that 10 squared = 100. A convergent thinker should be very comfortable being, as an example, a bookkeeper or accountant, an auto mechanic — anything with a definite solution, from balancing the books to making the car run . . . visualizing, seeing and having a clearly defined answer.

A divergent thinker tends to see or visualize several different reasons for an answer and seems to function better in literature, social studies or political science.

Let's take a simplistic example. Given a multiple choice question such as, "What was the cause of the Civil War," the convergent thinker tends to look for the answer; the divergent thinker tends to question the test writer's choices - especially if the response is not crystal clear.

A clear answer to the question for the convergent thinker would be Lincoln's desire to free the slaves. However, the broad-based divergent thinker may easily pick (d) for economic reasons - and support the selection by reasoning that the southern plantation owners did not want to loose free slave labor.

FRIEDMAN, DRUG and alcohol abuse counselors and students and parents banded together more than three years ago to pressure schools into providing the option, he said.

A major concern was that students recovering from a substance abuse problem would be tempted back into drug use when confronted with drug or alcohol use in their dormitory room. But Friedman said students should be given the choice of avoiding roommates who drink or use illegal drugs no matter the reason.

'All we're saying is that people should have a preference," he said. "We don't want to get into the legal or moral issues."

Lorna McEwen, public relations director for the Maplegrove Centers, substance abuse treatment clinics affiliated with Henry Ford Hospital, said the group will monitor how the non-drinking roommate option

She said she would also like to see more alcohol education programs at the colleges, including training for residence assistants in the dorms.

In the long run, she said, legislation may be needed.

ERIC WORLEY, an 18-year-old graduate of West Bloomfield High School, testified before a state legislative committee last fall about the need for the roommate option. The committee was studying a bill sponsored by Rep. David Honigman (R-West Bloomfield) that would have forced both private and public colleges to provide the option on housing application forms.

Ironically, Worley, who says he's a recovering cocaine user, plans to attend Michigan State in the fall. But "As long as (the option to choose a roommate who doesn't use alcohol) helps some people in some situa-tions, that's good," Worley said. "I'll have to be faced with it."

Worley said that he doesn't have a drinking problem, but fears that drinking could lead him back to drug abuse. But, he said, he wouldn't hesitate to confront a roommate if drinking in their room became a problem for him. "I wouldn't think twice about letting him know my feelings," he said.

AT MICHIGAN STATE, Moses Turner, vice president for student affairs, said that giving students the choice of a teetotaling roommate wouldn't address the real issue drinking by those under 21.

"We think we have long been implementing policies designed to minimize the consumption of alcohol in the halls," Turner said. "We are not a Johnny-come-lately to this prob-

School policy forbids on-campus drinking by students under 21. Stu-dents can be expelled for repeating offenses such as underage drinking or supplying minors with alcohol, Turner said. Students over 21 can drink in their dormitory rooms, but most students who live on campus are under 21, he said.

MSU also has a program of education about alcohol use and counseling for students with a drinking problem, Turner said.

Most of the 13 other state universities with dormitories ask students to indicate on housing forms if they want to room with someone who doesn't use alcohol.

In addition, the University of Michigan addressed the issue and how it will be enforced in a supplemental letter to incoming students. "Students who sign up for and then violate the substance free living arrangement will be expected to make a room change immediately," according to the letter, signed by Robert C. Hughes, director of housing.

But three schools — Michigan Technological University, Lake Superior State University and Saginaw Valley State University — suggest on the forms that the option is only available to students of legal drink-

And Ferris State University doesn't approach the issue directly, but asks on housing forms if physical conditions, including chemical dependency, should be considered in room assignments.

FOR HONIGMAN, who backed legislation that he says helped pressure public colleges that were not providing the option to do so, the fight is not over.

Honigman said he may introduce legislation in the fall that would force all of the state's colleges, public and private, to offer the option and better help monitor the policy.

Athletes go for the gold

By Julie Brown staff writer

HERE WAS no shortage of winners at the Michigan Special Olympics state softball tournament.

The event was held Friday and Saturday, Aug. 4-5, at the Canton Softball Center. It attracted some 826 athletes, chaperones and coaches, in addition to other volunteers, said Dick Clark of Wayne, tournament director.

"No rain, we're doing great," said Clark, a member of the Wayne Civitan Club, which hosted the event. He and others organizing the tournament had been concerned about the stormy weather, but Saturday's skies were clear and sunny.

"I got very little sleep last night." Clark said Saturday. "I sat in my living room watching it rain.'

Athletes played some gashes Friday night, with tournament play continuing on Saturday. A total of 38 teams competed, in addition to skills competition involving some 40 ath-

"It's going real well," said Susie Pidsosny of Canton, Wayne County area director for Special Olympics.

The tournament included opening ceremonies Friday evening, followed by a dance at the nearby UAW Local 735 on Michigan Avenue in Canton.

Following skills competition and tournament play, the awards presentation was held Saturday afternoon at the Canton Softball Center.

During the tournament, athletes stayed at two hotels near Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Having the athletes stay together makes coordinating the tournment easier, Pidsos-

All athletes returned home with a medal or ribbon. There were gold, silver and bronze medals, plus team trophies for first-, second- and thirdplace teams. Other athletes received ribbons.

"I guess my biggest concern is that they come and have a good time," Pidsosny said. Athletes learn the value of sportsmanship and team effort.

Brian Johnson scores a run for the Plymouth-Canton Thundercats during a game against the Northwest ARC Blasters. Many teams from western Wayne County participated in the Special Olympics softball tournament.

"It's a good example of what Special Olympics is all about," she said.

ATHLETES BENEFIT from the experience of competing, said Clark, the tournament director. They benefit from being away from home, from working together and from interacting with other people.

One action-packed game involved the Plymouth-Canton Thundercats and the Northwest ARC (Association for Retarded Citizens) Blasters. The Thundercats won that game.

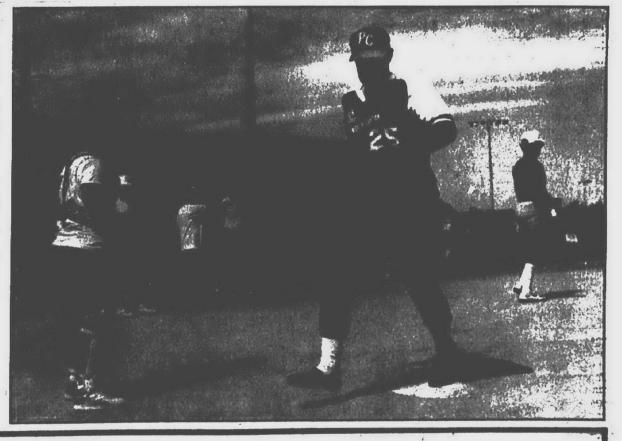

The Thundercats team included 16 players, with an additional five athletes participating in skills competi-tion. Skills competition includes such things as batting, ball toss, base running, fielding and throwing for distance.

Summertime readers seeking a pleasant diversion

By Julie Brown staff writer

UMMERTIME READING is a popular pastime in the Plymouth-Canton community. Librarians and bookstore staffers have a good idea of what those readers are interested

"The best sellers are all up there," said Darlene Ursel, a reference librarian at the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth.

Popular fiction titles include "While My Pretty One Sleeps" by Mary Higgins Clark and "The Russia House" by John le Carre. "The Joy Luck Club," a book by Amy Tan telling the story of a group of Chinese women, is popular at the library in Plymouth.

Other popular books include mysteries, paperback romances and general fiction, Some readers choose to read the classics again, Ursel said. Those renders look for books by Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck and other well-known

"We also have some non-fiction books that have been popular too," Ursel said. Biographies about Jackie Onassis and the late Gilda Radner are frequently requested. 'Peace, Love and Healing" by Bernie Siegel is popular. That book includes advice from a physician on self-healing.

TRAVEL BOOKS are popular with summertime visitors to the Dunning-Hough Library.

"We don't have as much of the academic activity in the summer-time," Ursel said. Some people take classes, but not as many as during the rest of the year.

Ursel's seen more use of the library by patrons throughout the day; during the rest of the year, the majority of visitors come in the evening. She's also noticed an increase in use of business materials, such as stock reports and corporation records. We're better equipped now to do that kind of thing, although we have a ways to go," Ursel said.

Books on tape are popular with Dunning-Hough Library visitors. Many patrons find those books helpful when they're traveling long distances by car. Videos - en tainment, travel, educational/instructional and children's - are Biographies of Jackie Onassis are selling at Metro News Center. Books about baseball aren't doing as well.

Sales of sports books seem to vary according to the fortunes of local teams, Fraser said: The Detroit Tigers are in a slump and baseball books aren't doing well. Books on basketball, on the other Fishing's one of many activities offered for kids participating in the summer day camp sponsored by the Plymouth Community Family YMCA. Camp sessions, for children ages 5-11, started in mid-June. The final session is scheduled for Monday through Friday, Aug. 21-25.

About 130 children will participate in the camp this summer, said and camp counselor. Most participants are from the Plymouth-Canton

"Each week, we have different themes," said Roman, 24, a substitute art teacher with the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. Last week's theme was "Fantasy."

DAYS AT camp include opening ceremonies, free time, arts and crafts projects, games and sports.

Cookouts are usually held each Friday, the final day of camp. Campers also work on a "memory book," including drawings related to camp themes and photos of activities. Tournaments help children learn to play checkers and other games.

Field trips to such places as the Ann Arbor Hands-On Museum, Domino's Farms and the Matthaei Botanical Gardens are included. Boat races - using boats made by the campers — and fishing are part of the fun. "They've been catching fish," Roman said. The youngsters use hot dog pieces as bait.

"It works out real well for them and it's fun," he said.

CONTESTS, SUCH as an ugly foot contest, are featured. Campers are honored for having the ugliest feet, the biggest toes or other unusual characteristics.

"Just seeing when the kids are happy and having fun" is rewarding for Rockwood, who'd like to be a counselor next summer. "They're real fun to have around."

Scott Hamerink, 12, of Plymouth is also getting some work experience this summer. He's a seventh grader at Our Lady of Good Counsel School in Plymouth and was working last week as a counselor-in-training.

"I heard it was a lot of fun," he said. He's participated in the program as a camper and is considering working as a counselor when he's older.

Scott enjoys "when we go do activities like fishing and looking for golf balls and playing games." Campers at Plymouth Township Park find golf balls from the neighboring Hilltop Golf Course.

When Scott goes back to school, he'll tell his friends "that I liked it and stuff. They have more fun than being bored at home."

As a college student, the Rev. William Myers Jr. used to commute from Inkster to Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti. He'd pass through Canton during those drives.

"When I commuted through Canton, it was entirely rural, entirely." Myers, who has seen the community grow and change, is in Canton to stay these days. He's paster at the Faith Community Moravian Church in Canton, a position he has held since December of 1986.

Myers, 43, grew up in Inkster, graduated from Cherry Hill High School, and attended Eastern Michigan University. He worked his way through college, earning a bachelor of business administration degree.

"I thought I was going to be an accountant." He didn't start out in the ministry. Myers spent some seven years working in the trucking industry, interspersed throughout his time at EMU.

HIS FINAL position in the trucking industry was as operations manager for the Yellow Freight System terminal in Ann Arbor.

"It was not that fulfilling. I realized I was more of a people per-

He entered the Moravian Theological Seminary in Bethlehem, Pa. That seminary's student body includes Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and those of other denominations.

Myers, a Canton resident, earned a master of divinity degree from the Moravian Theological Seminary in 1976. During his time there, he met his wife, Beth, then a senior at Moravian College.

Beth Myers, who has a degree in music, is involved in music programs and other activities at the Faith Community Moravian Church. They have two children, 13-year-old Robby/and 11-year-old Moravian church.

'Most of my ministry, I've been a hospital chaplain." Before coming to Canton, he worked for a couple of years as a chaplain at Children's Hospital of Wisconsin in Milwaukee.

Myers was present when some 70 to 75 children died at the hospital. That work was difficult but rewarding; he was able to comfort parents whose children had died.

"It hurt a lot. I used to feel guilty when I came home and had two healthy kids at home."

BEFORE THAT, Myers worked as the Protestant chaplain at a Catholic hospital, St. Elizabeth Hospital in Appleton, Wis.

He'd started his work as a pastor at a Moravian church in Wisconsin. That church shared a pastor with a nearby Methodist church. Sharing a pastor isn't an uncommon practice for small, rural churches, he said.

During that time, St. Elizabeth Hospital set up a volunteer chaplaincy program. Myers did that work as a volunteer for a time and was then asked to join the staff as a chaplain.

He continued to serve as pastor at the Moravian church in Wisconsin but gave up his duties at the nearby Methodist church. Myers' ministry also included some time pastoring a United Church of Christ congregation in Wisconsin. That was an interim position he held between his time at the two hospitals.

The Faith Community Moravian Church has about 150 members. The church began in 1978, with services held at Pioneer Middle School; members have been meeting in the church building on Warren in Canton since the early 1980s.

The Moravian church is one of the oldest Protestant denominations, Myers said. Its roots go back some 100 years before the time of religious reformer and theologian Martin Luther, leader of the Protestant Reformation in Germany.

A Roman Catholic priest, John Hus, was attempting at that time to reform the practices of his

HUS OPPOSED the practice of granting indulgences; he argued that forgiveness could not be granted by the church and that doing so was contrary to the Bible's teach ings. Hus was burned at the stake

Some say Vatican II, which in the 1960s altered worship practices and teachings of the Catholic church, vindicated Hus. He was in many ways a man some 550 years before his time, Myers said.

Historically, the Moravian church has emphasized the importance of missionary work. The majority of Moravians are non-white, with the largest provinces found in Africa.

Myers hasn't gone overseas to do missionary work, but does know about those efforts. He's a ham radio operator and has gotten to know many missionaries through that work.

There are three Moravian churches in Michigan, including the Grace Moravian Church in Westland and a church in Unionville, in the thumb area.

The job Myers has at the Canton church includes varied duties. He's the worship leader and the primary manager of day-to-day activities. His work includes planning, implementing programs, meeting new people in the community and counseling. Myers recently returned from a youth camp session in Ohio, an enjoyable but somewhat tiring activity.

Paperwork isn't his favorite task. Myers enjoys the one-on-one contact, "being able to enjoy peosame time to be with them in the not so happy times too."

It is not just the United States. You have to put Israel into the picture. The fundamentalists on both Jewish and Arab sides will not give an inch. They both are demanding what they believe is God's will. Neither side will forget or forgive. Our country is perceived as a sup-porter of Israel. I explained that the Black marriages face a higher risk of breaking up are deeply concerned about their ability to provide for their families are at greatest risk for separation or divorce, according to a University of Michigan study of the first four years of marriage.

"No matter what their income, young black men are subject to acute anxiety about their role as providers," the U-M researchers said. "This anxiety may lead them to be leery of marriage in the first place, and once married, it may continue to cloud their marital commit-

"White husbands in our study also worried about family finances, but that concern didn't seem to predict marriage problems."

The researchers were Shirley Hatchett, assistant research scientist at the U-M Institute for Social Research; Elizabeth Douvan, professor of psychology and research scientist; and Joseph Veroff, professor of psychology and faculty associate.

The four-year study is in its last year, with the data collected during annual interviews in 1986, '87 and '88 with 199 black and 174 white couples randomly selected in the Detroit metropolitan area. All the brides were under age 36 and all the couples were in their first marriages.

The separation and divorce rate for black couples is about 21/2 times greater than the rate for white couples. According to the study, black marriages are also more likely to be at risk if:

• The husband says he is not emotionally satisfied or fulfilled by the marriage.

• THE HUSBAND'S father is well educated.

• The wife has very strong kinship ties with her own family and feels her in-laws are intrusive.

• The husband and wife each have separate groups of friends.

• The wife is very young. "All of these factors can affect any marriage, but we found that they were much more likely to have

Sharing decision making power is a difficult for black men because for historical reasons, power in the home is particularly important to them, the researchers said.

"American black men and women traditionally have been out of sync with mainstream gender roles. In the past, blacks lived in a world where men were supposed to be powerful and women were supposed to be protected. In reality, however, black men were not powerful and black women could not be protected," they added.

black fathers were likely to have unstable marriages. But like the economic and power issues, the finding is less surprising when considering the educated black male in an historical and social context, they said. Educated black men always have faced unusual pressures which put stress on their marriages and their children, the researchers said. Many of the fathers of the men in the study entered adulthood before the civil rights movement, when well educated blacks were lucky to get jobs as railroad porters or postal workers. The lack of mobility and opportunity led to resentment and frustration.

THE PATHERS who became adults during and after the civil rights movement faced a different but equally stressful situation, for now they were getting jobs never held by blacks before, the research-

Credit card doctors can make you il

staff writer

A new scam is afoot, one involving "doctors" and "patients," but it has nothing to do with medical care.

In this case, "doctors" are con artists armed with computers, and "patients" are consumers in need of improved credit ratings.

"Doctors" steal good credit ratings from computer files maintained by local credit bureaus and then sell the information to "patients" willing to pay $500 to $1,500 for the service.

(See accompanying story.)
Relatively new on the consumer scene, the scam is thought to have originated in Houston, Texas, according to Deborah Nigbor of the Detroit Better Business Bureau. She said police there have uncovered goods amounting to approximately $15 million, bought by consumers using doctored credit ratings.

They're buying everything from small merchandise to automobiles to homes," she said, citing one instance in which an unsuspecting Houston auto dealer sold 93 vehicles to different consumers, each using doctored

BASED ON THE possibility of big profits and the relative ease in fraudently obtaining credit information, it is believed the scam is apt to spread quickly to other parts of the

There are many techniques for obtaining credit files, and I'm certain profits must be good" based on how fast the scam is growing, Nig-

In Texas operations, "doctors" obtain code numbers to local credit bureaus and access computer files with home computers and telephone

BUT ACCESS to credit bureau files is not easy, according to Darlene Taylor, operations manager of Trans Union Credit Information in Southfield. It is one of the larger credit bureaus in the nation.

"There are levels and levels and levels of security to keep (computer) hackers off the system. It's a must in our business." Taylor said.

Jennifer Neu of another major credit bureau, TRW Information

Services in Farmington Hills.

TRW maintains more than 143 million files in 75,000 locations throughout the country, accessible only through sophisticated codes. Even if codes are broken, stolen or otherwise obtained, requests for information are closely monitored by a security computer program.

"Any deviation from use by legitimate subscribers, time, volume, location, specifics, anything out of the ordinary, is instantly noted," Neu

All suspicious use is immediately investigated.

MOREOVER, FILES maintained by credit bureaus frequently do not contain detailed information normally required in establishing new credit or securing loans, such as driver license numbers or mother's maiden name and date of birth.

Chris Anderson of Credit Bureau Reports Inc. in Farmington Hills works as a middleman. She solicits credit information from Trans Union, TRW and other credit bureaus, passing the data along to her clients, banks and mortgage companies lending large sums of money for the purchase of new homes.

Anderson receives numerous calls from irate consumers attempting to obtain homes loans and claiming credit report information supplied to the bank or mortgage company is inaccurate.

"It happens all the time, people calling and saying information is incorrect." Anderson said.

SHE ASCERTAINS accuracy by contacting the lender in question.

"If Art Van says they owe money, I call Art Van directly.'

If the information proves inaccurate, she corrects the error, never learning the reason why mistaken information was originally included.

Queries by Anderson and others is often the first time "innocent consumers" learn they owe for goods they have never bought, merchandise bought by others using sense" as a center of credit fraud. their credit information, according to Nigbor.

"Negative information is contained in their ratings. Sometimes they are even asked to foot the bill," she said.

The best guard is periodic inspection of your own ratings maintained by firms like TRW or Trans Union.

NIGBOR ALSO advises lenders to verify employment history in addition to credit ratings, as an added precaution against fraud.

In computer credit fraud, both "doctor" and "patient" are liable for prosecution on charges of fraud, according to an agent in the FBI's Troy office - the "doctor" for supplying fraudulent information and the "patient" for using it.

If, for example, a home is bought and the lending institution requests a title search by mail, wire fraud has been committed, punishable by up to five years in prison. If the phone is used to transact business, wire fraud may be involved, also punishable by up to five years in prison.

Supplying fraudulent and false statements to secure new credit or a loan constitutes a felony punishable by a fine of $5,000 and up to two years in prison.

Computer fraud also violates such federal laws as the Fair Credit Rating Act and the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, each punishable by up to one year in prison and fines of up to $5,000.

Whenever the economic climate is poor, people tend to walk away from mortgages they can't pay,'

Rewriting credit history cures' deadbeat's woes

Credit "doctor" fraud normally follows a common routine.

Let's assume you're an average, hard-working, honest consumer who nearly always pays bills on time. Your credit rating is pretty good.

Then, out of the blue you receive a call from a collection agency, harassing you about an overdue bill. This is the first you've heard of the bill. No doubt a case of mistaken identity. But the collection agency seems to have detailed and correct information about you and your credit rating.

The collector, familiar with claims of mistaken identity, is persistent. The conversation becomes heated. Chances are, neither of you suspect credit fraud.

Here's how it works, according to Marvin Kaplan of Associated Credit Bureaus in Houston, Texas, where this particular form of fraud has found fertile ground. Millions of dollars in merchandise has been purchased by patients of credit doctors.

A poor credit risk needs an improved rating. He or she approaches a credit doctor who, for a hefty fee, sells him your good credit rating.

The credit "doctor" knows the code number and password that allows him entry to computer repords maintained by credit bureaus. He or she locates a history that best matches the client. The credit rating happens to be yours.

Once the information is purchased, the buyer changes your address and phone number. Both are usually ficticious. Then, he or she applies for credit, charging merchandise or obtaining a loan without ever making a payment.

The lender, unaware of the scam, sends past due notices to the ficticious address for several months, before turning the account over to a collection agency.

The collector contacts you. He or she has no way of knowing you are not the person who made the fradulent credit purchase. The collector is as innocent as you are and assumes you are trying to throw him off track in collecting what appears to be a legitimate overdue account.

Know thy credit rating

Stored in the computer of one of the nation's 2,000 credit bureaus is a detailed listing of how much you owe on personal loans and credit cards, how quickly you pay these bills and how many times your payments have been late.

Most of us have no idea what our credit reports say - until it's too late. Jane, for example, didn't know her credit report erroneously said that she had defaulted on a student loan until a bank rejected her mortgage application. By the time the mistake was corrected, the house she wanted to buy had been sold.

To prevent such last-minute credit problems, the Farmington Hillsbased Michigan Association of CPAs suggests you check your credit report periodically. In most cases, your record is probably filed with one of the country's five largest credit bureaus: Trans Union, TRW, Chilton, CBA or Associated Credit Services

As a general rule, credit bureaus usually will charge a fee ranging from $3 to $25 for a copy of your credit report. If you have been denied credit on the basis of information supplied by a credit bureau, the creditor must provide the name and address of a credit bureau issuing the report on which it based its decision. You then have 30 days to request a free copy of your report. You must supply the credit bureau with your full name, telephone number. Social Security number and the name of the party that denied your credit application. Expect to receive a copy of your report in two to three weeks. The average credit report can be bewildering to read. Nowhere in the report will you find a simple sentence explaining whether you are a good credit risk. A credit report does not issue any judgment on your credit reliability. Instead, it provides a practically speaking factual but selective account of your employment and credit history. For example, the credit report may list an inactive department store charge account but make no mention of how you handle your utility bills or your mortgage payments.

At the heart of the report is your credit history, translated into an elaborate system of number and letter codes to indicate how you have handled debt over the years. A key to the codes is found on the form.

Although the format of a credit report will vary between credit bu-reaus, the information contained is essentially the same. Generally, the report will detail the name, number, type and activity of credit cards issued in your name; the amount of your credit limits and the amount of your outstanding balances.

OTHER ITEMS that may be found in a credit file include the names of the companies that have requested copies of your report as well as notations indicating whether you have been involved in civil suits or bankruptcy proceedings. All of this information is provided to the credit bureau by your creditors or other par-

If you find an error on your credit report, you should write to the credit bureau immediately. When Jane informed the credit bureau she had paid off her student loan some seven years earlier, the credit bureau investigated her case and found that the issuer of the loan had somehow switched her records with those of another consumer.

When a credit bureau determines a mistake has been made or if it cannot verify the information in its files, the items in question must be defeted from your credit report. You may discover that a credit report presents certain correct but derogatory information out of context. In such instances, you should mail a concise explanation (approximately 100 words) to the credit bureau summarizing your side of the story.

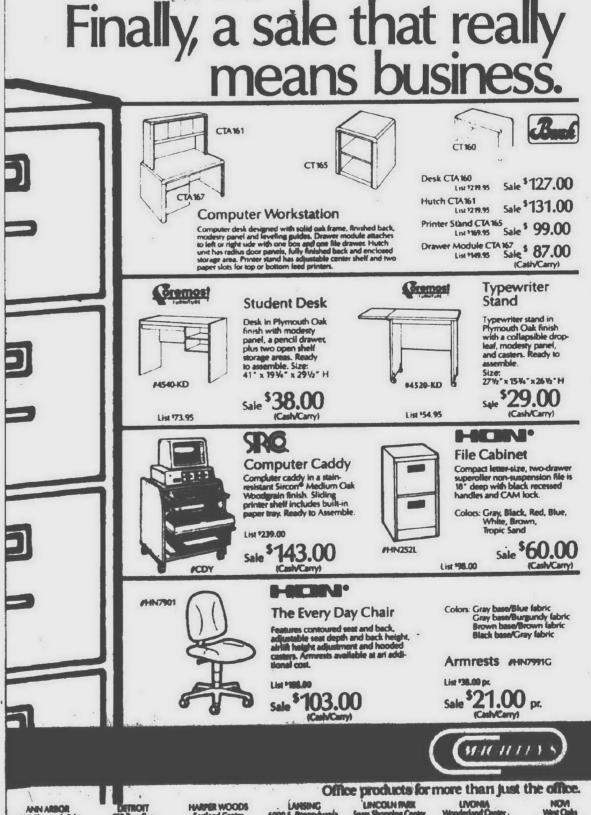

Consider this example. After being denied a credit card, Paul checked his credit record, which showed he had paid his car loan and credit card bills late for a period of four to five months. The information was correct, but during this time Paul's wife was undergoing treatment for cancer. The late payments were a result of the financial and personal stress he suffered at that time. At the recommendation of his financial adviser, Paul sent a letter to the credit bureau explaining the circumstances behind his uncharacteristic period of late payments.

Paul also asked the credit bureau to send this information to any creditors who had denied his applications in the past six months.

HOW LONG CAN a negative statement be kept on your record? If the statement relates to bankruptcy proceedings, it may stay on file for as long as 10 years.

The Michigan Association of CPAs suggests consumers write to the Federal Trade Commission Correspondence Branch, Washington, D.C. 20580 for a copy of the Fair Credit Reporting Act of 1971, which clearly explains their rights to credit infor-

Car brand identity isn't what it used to be

It's not until you're standing in the rain and tell the parking lot guy "get me my Goo Prisin" that you start to realize the importance of brand identity in the automobile business.

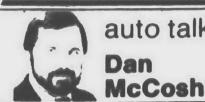

First you get this blank stare, so you mumble something like: "You know, the little yellow car. Looks like a Toyota. Actually, it is a Toyota, but it's sold by Chevy. But it doesn't actually say 'Chevy' anywifere, see. Or Toyota either.

Look, give me my keys and I'll fill it myself."

remember when a Chevy was a vy. This is the sort of statement that is guaranteed to get a few of my pregenies' eyeballs rolled to the ceilbut the fact is that "a Chevy" used to have a kind of solid, no-nongase ability to let someone know that kind of car you drove. Sort of like "a Coke" used to work in a restaurant without a followup question like: "Classic Coke or Diet Coke?" THE LAST real Chevy (pro-nounced Chivvy) that Chevrolet ever built was a straight-six Nova, preferably gunmetal blue with an automatic transmission. A nun's car, as a guy I worked with who had dropped out of a Jesuit seminary called it. Also once described as a "Heavy Chevy Blue-Bomber Special" by a young woman acquaintance who drove one, who also left me convinced that a $600 car bought with the earnings of a first job can look as good as a faded pair of jeans.

A proper Chevy improved with age, like wine, or at least aged with dignity, managing a certain aplomb even while propped on a couple of cinder blocks with the engine hanging from the limb of a tree. A proper Chevy engine came apart with a

What causes a salesperson to take on the role of snob as part of his or her daily dealings with cutomers?

"I think salespeople who act that way are very insecure, generally speaking," said Catherine Kasten, a Plymouth resident and self-employed computer specialist. "If these people are gossips by nature, then it isn't surprising to see them judging customers they know nothing about."

Business owners and managers who have received complaints about snooty sales personnel should always treat these types of incidents seriously. By Kevin Lawrence special writer

T'S AUGUST, 1550. The King and Queen have invited you to feast with them and you're getting ready.

Remember, it's not every day one is invited to dine with the King and Queen. Don't be late. But don't be the first nobility over the drawbridge,

And gentlemen, be careful you don't miss that last button on your doublet (vest). Make sure your skirt is straight (yes skirt), and that your jerkin (ancient suit coat) has been to the cleaners recently.

Ladies, allow yourself plenty of time to get ready. Remember, it takes more than three hours for a lady to be properly coiffured and dressed in a bum roll (big is better), corset (at the same time - smaller is better, too), petticoats, floor-length skirt with hoop, bodice with detachable sleeves, stomacher (outer bodice), collar and hat.

MOVING FORWARD from 1550 to 1989, there is still occasional debate on what one should wear and how long it should take to dress. But you can come as you are to the 10th annual Michigan Renaissance Festival and enjoy the general merrymaking and, of course, the authentic costumes worn by more than 400 craftspeople and entertainers.

Barbara Logan of Royal Oak, a former Farmington Hills resident, is marketing director for the festival group, which is housed in a small, downtown Birmingham office. "People really aren't sure what the Renaissance Festival is," she said. "But the brave go and have a great time. Our exit polls indicate 96 percent of our guests will return. And they tell their friends. Last year, over our seven weekends, 130,000 people attended the festival."

The Renaissance festival is an accurate re-creation of a 16th century European village during a harvest celebration. Continuous entertainment (merrymaking) fills the nineacre festival site on a wooded clearing in Holly.

The village is peopled by jesters, servers, wenches, dancers, mimes, magicians, jugglers, puppeteers, minstrels, knights, lords and all manner of townsfolk. Craftspeople from pickle sellers to glass blowers to clothesmakers offer their wares for sale. But to be truly accurate, the

"We want to be as authentic as possible. And since patterns really portrayed, because in Renaissance don't exist for this type of clothing, I times, as one's social station rose, research extensively," Danforth

Two costumes she worked on for the festival are for upper-class characters and have taken an average of 60 hours each to complete. "Working with clothing of this period is especially difficult because of the thickness involved for an accurate look. Textiles were crude back then and without the benefit of central heating, thicker clothes were a necessity," she said.

people of the time, Danforth explained, was that they didn't want to look as if they had to work. Thus, the more layers of clothing they wore, the more money it was thought they Costuming for the Renaissance Festival has to be extremely heavy duty in construction because it takes a lot of wear and tear. Danforth favors modern materials like cottons and polyesters.

"As with anything else, budget determines many priorities. In theater, upholstery fabrics are used for their thick look, but they're heavy and not all that comfortable to wear. And the festival people wanted the right look but the garments had to be washable. I went a bit overboard on these. They're some of my best work. I just wanted them right. I made undergarments like the burn roll (makes hips look larger) and a collar and hat on my own time because when the actress steps into this, I want her to feel the part. It's just great seeing an actor get so excited about his or her role when they get into an outfit." The jester wasn't kidding when he recommended costume designer Mary Musinski of Detroit to the Renaissance Festival management. "It's true, I'm on a referral from the jester," said Musinski. She runs her own clothing design and produc-tion studio in downtown Detroit where she manufactures a clothing line for women that is distributed locally. Her work has appeared in the movies "The Rosary Murders,"

Estey honored as top athlete in '89

All-America recognition in soccer and was an all-state selection in basketball. She was a major reason for Salem's success in Jill Estey, during her athletic career at Plymouth Salem, earned those sports the last three years. Estey will continue playing basketball as a scholarship athlete at the University of Illinois.

She was standout in classroom, too

staff writer

Throughout her high school experience, Jill Estey's name has been synony

She starred for three years on outstanding girls basketball teams at Plym-

During four seasons of playing soccer for the Rocks, she was the premier player in a program that reached the pinnacle of success. She also starred in numerous facets of interscholastic life that weren't a obvious, most notable among them the classroom. In recognition of her overall quest for excellence and achievement in those endeavors, Estey has been selected the 1989 Observer Athlete of the Year in the Plymouth-Canton community.

"I HAD A great four years," said Estey, who stayed active athletically in the winter by playing indoor soccer. Besides holding down a 3.8 grade-point average with a tough class load, she also found time to serve on the student council, including its executive forum, and participate in the National Honor

"Hey, I wouldn't have it any other way," she said. "You become so used to it, you can't imagine not doing all those things and being so involved.

There's always so much extra time in the day. The more busy I am the more I budget my time."

Estey, who graduated in the top 5 percent of her class, plans to use her academic gifts to study aeronautical engineering at the University of Illinois, which awarded her an athletic scholarship in return for her future contribution to the women's basketball team.

She plans to emphasize the spacecraft (as opposed to aircraft) side of the industry, and an eventual position with NASA would fit her career plans. Estey has the pioneering spirit that coincides with President Bush's renewed interest in the space program and goal of putting a man on Mars.

"That's where I think our future is - in space," Estey said. "We're going to run out of space on earth, and that's where we're going to be living in the next 100 years.

DESPITE THE added demands of playing a collegiate sport, Estey is committed to maintaining the same academic standards.

They're a bigger role than basketball," she said. "In basketball, my career is over in four years. It can't go on. Academics are your life, and whatever you do in college is going to get you your job, not what you do on the basketball floor."

It's safe to assume basketball, as it was the past four years, will remain a focal point in Estey's life.

She was the starting point guard at Salem for three years and will play that position for the Fighting Illini. But the 5-foot-4 Estey doesn't assume the

Bronco-buster LaRoche settles MSHL title issue

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

J.P. LaRoche will be a Bronco in several weeks, but Tuesday night he was a Bulldog.

And the Bronco-to-be was responsible for bringing down the Broncos in the Metro Summer Hockey League championship game at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

LaRoche, who will enter Western Michigan University on a hockey scholarship this fall, scored the winning goal 56 seconds into overtime to give the Bulldogs a 4-3, sudden-death victory over the Broncos, the MSHL's regular-season winners.

The 1989 graduate of Plymouth Salem High School flipped a backhanded shot past Bronco goaltender was a difficult feat since LaRoche practically had his back to the net and, with two defenders closing ranks, was about to be hauled down.

"After (teammate Mike) Jorgensen fed me from the side, I had nothing else to do but backhand it." LaRoche said.

"IT WAS EITHER that or try to do a spin move toward the boards, but that would've taken too much time. In overtime, you pretty much have to go for the shots.'

That was all part of the Bulldog strategy, according to coach Rick

"Most times (LaRoche) turns around and goes to his forehand," Mullen said. "We talked about just getting the puck to the not and

The Bulldogs became the second team in as many years to wear the Cinderella label to a successful conclusion in the MHSL playoffs. The Bulldogs finished third in the Bakes Conference, while the Broncos won the Eagle Conference with an 8-2-1 record and had a league-leading 17 points.

Ironically, Broncos coach Dave Cyplik, who was filling in for player/ coach Alan Carnes, was on the opposite side last year when the Wolverines came from nowhere to win the Bulldogs defensemen Frank Mariani and Doug Tucker had better luck, however. They played for Cyplik last year when the Wolverines beat the Wildcats 9-8 in overtime, and they were on the winning team again.

"DOUG TUCKER skated over to our bench just before they dropped the puck (to start the overtime) and said This seems former

"If you remember last year, we were 1-9-1 and ended up winning the playoffs. The playoffs are what count. It doesn't matter where you finished in the regular season."

Buff Whelan survives long day

Ray Pracass, the manager for Duffy's Plumbing, may have summed up heat the National Asso-tour Baschall Federation's College Division regional last weekend at Livenia's Ford Field.

This is the most screwed-up draw of any tournament that I've been as-sociated with," he said.

The eventual winner of the fiveteam tournament, Buff, Whelan Chevrolet, won in a peculiar way.

The Detrot Adray League repre-sentative played a triple-header on Sunday, capped off by a 3-7 victory, a game which inched past the stroke of midnight, against Livonia Collegiate Baseball League representative Hines Park Lincoln/Mercury.

Sunday started with three survivors - Whelan, Hines Park and Duffv's (the other LCBL representative).

After taking a 13-2 pounding Sat-urday afternoon from Whelan, Duffy's came back in Sunday's opener to hand the Detroit squad its first loss of the double-elimination tournament, 8-1.

Stuart Hirschman, a 17-year-old pickup by Fracassi, threw eight strong innings to earn the victory. Jason Hicks came on in the eighth to finish up as the Detroiters were held to just two hits.

Duffy's collected 12 hits, led by Ron Makowski's 3-for-3 effort. Mike Kaczmarek, Todd Fracassi and Lee Tappy, all from Observerland high schools, added two hits apiece. Shortstop Steve Michelz knocked in a Terry Woods, a sophomore pitcher from the University of Michigan, came on in relief of Skaisgir in the fifth to pick up the victory.

Skaisgir was sent to the showers when Canton High senior Mike Culver ripped a two-run homer over the right field fence in the fourth. (He later added a double.) Kevin Learned singled in a pair of runs in the ninth, but Woods held off Hines Park to preserve the victory.

"Woods threw 85 pitches on Friday and another 60 today, so these guys got a little tired, but our relievers did the job when they had to,' Arends said.

Whelan, noted as a hard-hitting team, finished fourth in the Detroit League with a 20-13 record.

"We were very respectable this year, but last year we took our lumps," Arends said. "We led the Adray League in home runs. Today the wind held up a few and this is a big park.

Steve Hirschman, the other half of the Howell brother combination, started and took the loss for Duffy's. Kacsmarek, Duffy's top hitter in the tourney, went 3-for-4.

And in Saturday's final game of the day, Hines Park ousted Sterling Heights, 12-6, as shortstop Steve Malgay and Culver each went 3-for-3. Niemiec and Sean Maloney each knocked in a pair of runs.

Bill Bannon, the Livonian from Dearborn Divine Child High, worked the first five innings before Files, the Salem High product, came on to pick up the win.

After that Hines Park caught a break, getting a bye while Duffy's and Whelan battled twice on Sunday.

But the wait for Hines Park turned out to be in vain as Whelan walked away with the first-place trophy and a trip to Dayton. Walter's Appliance, the Livonia

The Bulldogs jumped in front with a pair of late, first-period goals, but the Broncos owned the second and tied the score. The teams matched goals in the third period, with Jorgensen getting the tying goal with six minutes left in regulation time.

In the first period, Mark Beaufait scored off the rebound from Mark Johnson's shot, and Jorgensen made it 2-0 with only nine seconds left in the period when he lifted the puck over Moule's right shoulder.

John Potts' slapshot put the Broncos on the board in the second, and the Broncos, after having a goal disallowed because of a high-sticking penalty_later capitalized on a 5-on-3 situation to tie.

The Bulldogs had a man off for holding and then received a bench minor for being too vociferous about a disagreement with the officials. While holding the two-man advantage, Mike Stahley's wrist shot made "THOSE PENALTIES took us out of the flow, and we couldn't get any consistency going," Mullen said. "When you're killing penalties, it's hard to keep everyone in the flow of the game. Players have a tendency to sit too long.'

"I thought the tide had turned in our favor," said Cyplik of the situation before Jorgensen countered with his second goal on a Bulldog power play.

"I thought we had a good grip on the game, but they came back and turned it around - and that's what makes a winning team. They won it on a kinda fluke goal, but so did we last vear.'

LaRoche said the Bulldogs' lateseason surge was due in part to having a set roster with all of their key players. Jorgensen, for instance, had been at the Olympic Sports Festival recently and missed some games.

"We just got playoff fever," LaRoche said. "We wanted to win. We want to go to Chicago and see what we can do there."

"The best part was that my college coaches got to see me play. When they saw me up here (in December) my shot was off. I was in a major slump. I was glad they got to see 'Hey, this is the girl we recruited.'"

In three years of varsity ball at Salem, Estey played on teams that had a combined record of 68-9. In her sophomore and junior seasons, the Rocks were Western Lakes Activities Association champs and advanced to the Final Four in Class A each time.

"It would have been nice to get Miss Basketball," she said. "It was something in the back of my mind. but it's not something that brings me

There very plenty of nifty piness made Sunday in the Great Lakes Men's Secote League title game played between the Liveuis Maranders and Rid Light.

"I didn't think it was going in, that's for sure," Brennan said. "I was just trying to create something."
The bad hop wasn't the only misfortune suffered by Bud Light. Bud lost Carl Hopfinger late in the first half because of a red-card infraction, and that meant the team had to play short a man the rest of the match.

Light, which scored the game's first goal, was able to move the ball beyond midfield several times late in the game despite being shorthanded.
"The red card definitely hurts," Bud Light coach Kevin Fiebernitz said. "It was a hard-fought match. There's nothing we can do about it. We were a little unlucky

"I still felt we carried the play after the card. We had opportunities. These two teams are evenly matched."

THIS WAS THE first year the Marauders have won both a league regular-season title and the Clarke Cup, which signifies the playoff champion. The Marauders, who were the defending Clarke Cup champions, were 8-0-1 during the regular season.

Defender/midfielder Dan O'Shea is the team's elder statesman in terms of experience, although he's only 24. "This is without a doubt the best Marauders' team

I've played on," said O'Shea, who played at Oakland University and Livonia Franklin. "And Bud Light's the strongest (GLMSL) team I've ever played against. It was a really rough game.

"They played harder once they went down a man. We tended to push forward more thinking we should be shead but they'll catch you flat-footed with their good

Chris Larson, one of Light's most dangerous forwards, tied the score at 2-2 midway through the second half when he headed Chris Koppi's corner kick past Marauders' goalie Colin Jez.

THE TEAMS were tied 1-1 at halftime but former Livonia Stevenson standout Gary Mexicotte gave the Marauders a 2-1 lead early in the second half.

Bud Light took the game's first lead on a goal by Jay Ruby, but the Marauders' Steve Morell evened the count minutes later, converting a crossing pass from Bob Neumann

Although the Marauders finished the season undefeated, coach John Petterson said his team learned midway through that a team can go only so far on talent alone. "This team was the most talented I've had, but we learned a lesson midway through that talent alone doesn't win games," he said. "We were in a slump the last three or four games and said "This is it.' We decided we were going to shut our mouths and play hard."

TROY COBRAS UPSET: The Marauders received a scare last Thursday in the semifinal against the Troy Cobras, and were fortunate, perhaps, to advance to the finals. The Marauders and Cobras were locked in a scoreless tie Thursday after two overtime periods when the game was called because of darkness.

League rules state the game must be re-played the next day, said Dan Bowman, the neutral GLMSL representative for the semifinal game.

The Cobras had to forfeit Friday's re-scheduled game, however, because several players were attending the wedding of teammate Joe Moreau.

Cobra player Walt Kliza said his team told Petterson, who is the president and registrar of the league, that they could field a team Saturday. -

But Bowman had jurisdiction of the game because of Petterson's involvement in the playoffs. Bowman decided the rule book takes precedence.

"It's not a very fair way to determine who goes to the final," said Kliza, a 1981 Livonia Bentley graduate. "A semifinal game should be decided on the field, not around a table - you know, politics.

'We're all very upset. I wouldn't have had any regrets if we would have lost with the winner going to the finals. In this situation that wasn't the case. But I respect the Marauder players."

Art-oriented office design suits surgeons

By Corinne Abett staff writer

Hughto.

Art sends few stronger messages than those in the offices of three doctors specializing in cosmetic surgery in Bingham Farms. It is reassuring to find that all three have eye for color, design, line and aesthetic values of all kinds of art.

J. Colton recently added a partner, Michael F. Milan, and doubled their office space. With the help of Susan Monroe architect and Vicki Beekhuis, interior designer, the offices were rennovated and expanded from 2,600 to 5,200 square feet.

Architect and designer succeeded in balancing opposites - sophistication and warmth; and privacy (when necessary) with a feeling of openness and light.

The waiting room is luxurious and contemporary in style with polished marble floors and carpeting in a deep shade of raisin. The color theme throughout is black, white and raisin with touches of dark brown. "There is a lot of very dark and reception area in the elegant, softly lighted, waiting room has been greatly expanded. From the new counter, there is a wide open view of the inner offices with sunlight filtered through the new glass brick wall panels and colorful works of art on white walls in the hall and offices beyond. The whole area sends a welgood taste.

READILY VISIBLE from several vantage points are a framed Navaho piece which Colton smilingly referred to as a "physician's desk ref-erence for Navaho people" a Margie Hughto painting. Colton said the medicine man carries these paintings on cloth with him when he goes to visit a patient. He unrolls them on the ground to refresh his memory, each has symbols and instructions in sign language on what to do about a particular malady. Hughto's painting on handmade paper, a trademark of this nationally known artist, author and teacher, is light, refreshing and definitely uplifting.

From a large empty area (to expand the offices), Beekhuis and Monroe created a hall with examining rooms and an office along the outside wall. The hallway wall is staggered glass brick panels which give the area an artistic dimension that a flat straight wall never could while providing privacy and lots of pleasant light for the small rooms.

The wall design, Beekhuis said, "Allows the light to move in and out." At the end of the hall is a large striking, abstract painting by Ray Frost Fleming of Birmingham and along the straight sided hall wall is a long, rectangular, framed work of art in brilliantly colored and sculpted handmade paper by New Mexico artist, David McCarthy. Colors and design lead the viewer's eye in a most appealing way.

The lighting in the long hall is small, low voltage, incandescent track lighting, similar to that used in open and friendly.

many art galleries. Beekhuis said it lights the art well and provides dra-

Another Hughto work is around the corner in one of the smaller rooms. The art in the examining rooms is pleasant, undisturbing scenes - nothing about food, since many of the patients are there for liposuction.

EACH DOCTOR'S OFFICE, however, is highly individual and says a lot about the occupant. Dr. Beekhuis's office contains artifacts which he has brought back from his world travels. Colton's, done by interior designer Sheldon Scott a number of years ago and still holding up beautifully, has a wall display of maskS from Indonesia, Bali and Africa.

"I have an interest in masks," Colton said, "I'm interested in the features and the way different cultures see themselves." He pointed out the broken nose on one of the African Beekhuis said Milan's office is going to be done in an Amish style with plain, handsome pieces with a handcrafted look to them. Colton and Dr. Beekhuis share an interest in art. Colton admires paintings by an artist which his partner found in Australia that have colorful, almost childlike quality.

"Both of us seem to like similar kinds of things," said Colton.

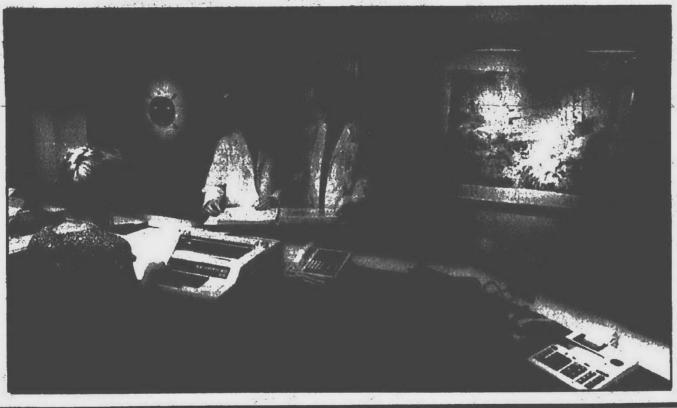

Architect and interior designer found the doctors receptive to their ideas to take out walls, create interesting spaces, heighten the drama, make the offices sophisticated and still keep the atmosphere pleasant,

Susan Monroe, architect, and Vicki Beekhuls, interior designer, pause by the new glass brick paneled wall which separates private offices from the reception area. The wall is both functional and aesthetically appealing. At the end of the hall is a painting by Ray Frost Fleming of Birmingham.

Staff photos by Jerry Zolynsky

Dr. Jeffrey Colton has a collection of masks on the wall of his office. Not only does he like them as an art form, he also appreciates what they show about the development of bone structure and features from one culture to another.

Auto art sets record

The art which was on display and for sale as part of the Concours d'Elegance at Meadow Brook last weeekend, set new records in interest as well as prices realized

Tom Hale, chairman of the invitational art exhibition, said he was delighted with the response from the public.

At the Saturday evening auction, the original painting by Pete Maier of Buck Hill Falls, Pa. for this year's poster brought a record $31,000. That's $6,000 more than was paid for the original painting for the 1986 Concours. Maier's finely, detailed, egg tempera' painting of the 1929 Packard convertible parked at the front entrance of Meadow Brook Hall is 48 by $4 inches. In the handsome frame which Maier made and painted, it weighs 75 pounds. The car pictured belongs to metro area car collector Dick Kuhn and, as of Saturday evening, the painting does too.

Works by the other artists participating in the invitational brought the evening's total to $88,500 in about 40 minutes of fast bidding. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Meadfor this year's poster brought a record $31,000 portion of the proceeds will be donated to Meadow Brook Hall.

Hale noted there were presidents of four major automotive companies present at the Saturday evening event as well as widely recognized art collectors. He said gross proceeds entire art show and sale were $130,000.

Hale said he was as happy about the recogni-tion which this kind of art is receiving as he was about the record prices, probably more so. Participating artists, considered among the best in this field, came from many parts of the United States and Canada as well as West Germany.

Benton—all-American as apple pie

staff writer

How could Thomas Hart Benton be labeled regional? He's so all-American - so in love with the cities, the rural landscape, the history, the customs - most of all the people, the kids, the old men, the gangsters and bootleggers, the movie crowd and the pretty young women. Yet that's the label he continues to have - he's a regionalist artist. He may have been born and raised in Neosha, Mo., but he studied in Paris and lived on the east coast a good part of his life.

The exhibition of his work at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Oct. 15 is a colorful, stimulating walk through Benton's development as an artist as well as through American history. He planned to do a series of 75 large paintings, "The Explorers and Adventurers of Early America," but grew tired of it after 18 paintings deciding he would rather paint real life scepes.

One large gallery in the exhibition is filled with these strong, aggressive works. Yet the paintings that seem most alive are those filled with colorful characters, busily engrossed in the tasks and pleasures that make up their daily lives. It wouldn't be a bit surprising to hear strains of "Ameri-

to worry about jet lag, lost luggage, missed con-nections, or anything like the daunting revenge of Montesuma. It was all highly enjoyable and, financially speaking, set me back less than 50 bucks. I made all the trips via what is really the next best thing to being there: marvelous travel books — some of which I purchased, most of which I found on the shelves at my local library.

Travel books do several things for me. From the snug harbor of my favorite at-home reading spot, they not only spirit me away to places I've visited often, but perhaps never "seen" so clearly as when I experienced them on the printed page. The books also, of course, have the potential to shape a part of my future, in a sense. Might I someday find myself strolling the exotic streets of Tangler, traversing faraway Patagonia, or haggling for bargains in the markets of Katmandu, all because I encountered some intriguing words written about them once upon a

ONE OF MY MOST delightful summertime jaunts was taken just recently, after I discovered Stephen W. Plumb's "The Streets Where may lived: A Walking Guide to the Residences of Famous New Yorkers" (Marlor Press, $12.95). "(This) is a record of the places in Manhattan Where the famous have lived in approximately the past 100 years," writes Plumb. "It aims to guide the reader, in a series of short walking tours, street-by-street, to the actual houses, apartments, and hotels where they have

The book, with a list of more than 400 addresses, including even a few bellonging to infamous gangsters, also contains a brief history of each celebrity's residency. If lifestyles of the famous are your thing, you'll want to keep this small paperback at hand the next time you hit the streets of Manhattan. For a more exotic journey, you may want to take a look a t "Worldwalk" (William Morrow & Co., $19.95), Steven M. Newman's recent account of his trip around the world - on foot. Newman, a 28-year-old journalist set out from his home in Bethal, Ohio in 1983, and returned there four years later, after having trekked to such farflung spots as Northern Ireland (where his dirty laundry was mistaken for a bomb), Morocco (where he was nearly done in by a mob of hustlers), Turkey (where he was jailed), Thailand (where he faced machete-wielding bandits on a long, lonely road one night), and beyond. Though Newman's prose is sometimes awkward, and his Pollyanna-like attitude grinds now and then,

"Worldwalk" is still a grand adventure.

CLOSER TO HOME, try Jim DuFresne's "Michigan: Off the Beaten Path" (Globe Pequot Press, $8.95) to discover relatively-unfamiliar nooks, crannies, and points of interest in the Great Lakes State.

Examples: The Horton Bay General Store, near Charlevoix, which was a frequent haunt of the youthful Ernest Hemingway when he spent his boyhood summers in northwest Michigan. The store (which appeared in his famed short story, "Up in Michigan") was built in 1876 and looks very much the same today as it did then, except that now, even though it still operates as a general store, it is very much a preserved shrine to Hemingway.

Other Hemingway memorabilia can be found at the Little Traversc Historical Museum in Petoskey, which also houses displays devoted to Michigan writer, Bruce Catton, who grew up in nearby Benzonia. Among the Catton artifacts at the museum is the original manuscript of "A Stillness at Appomattox," for which Catton won the Pulitizer Prize in 1953.

Look for harmonic contrast

Q. We are planning a formal Christmas wedding which will take place in the late afternoon. We both like the idea of the dramatic con-trast of black and white for the bridesmalds' gowns. But this combination would require I also wear white, which makes me look washed out. I'm open to other colors but do not want to look too unconventional. Any ideas?

A. Nothing can match the sharp, dramatic contrast of black and white. But there are other colors that can lend themselves to harmonic contrasts while flattering skin tones. Here's one color scheme to consider: Select a pale apricot for your gown and veil and have that color coordinated with a very deep, warm red in a two-tone combination for the matron of honor and the with the pale apricot of your gown. bridesmaids' gowns. The red I'm referring to relates to the apricot family and is not the harsh crimson.

Be careful to select a silhouette and fabrics for your gown that are subtle and flattering. The principle is basic: the more color you intro-duce into the traditional gown, the more careful you have to be with the design and materials. If you choose satin, for example, then soften the shiny quality with grosgrain ribbon and lace. Accessorize with pearls and not the hard-cut stone jewelry. The hardest accent should be your diamond. Your bouquet should be a blend of pale peach, rose and yellow

Whoever is giving you away can wear a standard black tuxedo, but the groom and the ushers have an option of wearing very dark gray tuxedos. If your mother and future mother-in-law want to contribute to the overall color scheme, have them choose colors for their dresses in the either very pale or dark blue-green

The bridesmaids' two-tone gowns and the groom's and ushers' dark gray will accent and frame your presence not only for the wedding itself, but for the photographs of the event. Pale apricot will flatter you more than stark white, and

Q. I have been attracted to a black, green and blue tridescent bedspread that I would like to use in my bedroom. I know it will help me achieve a sophisticated look but I'm not entirely sure how to harmonize other colors for the room. Can you

A. In order to achieve a sophisticated look with the shifting colors of iridescence, you have to work within a narrow and carefully disciplined range of color and design options. Don't try to match any one of the fleeting, lustrous blues or greens. Instead coordinate with the optical mix these colors produce.

For all the other elements in your bedroom, coordinate within the range of analogous or neighboring colors. These would include bluegreen, blue, blue-violet and a very selective use of magenta. So that the end result isn't too somber, use the colors in two distinct values: either very dark or intense, or very light and slightly grayed. The paler colors would be suitable for the walls and the carpet, or rug, while the intense colors would be best for the bed's decorative pillows. Anchor the entire scheme with a black border, perhaps accented with blue, for the rug.

Also keep the range of textures compatible with the lustre of the iridescent bedspread. Avoid anything heavily textured, or adding too many accessories that themselves are shiny and bright. Everything has to reinforce the iridescent effects and ne balance or contradict it

Q. We have recently redecorated our living and dining rooms, which are connected by a large arched open doorway. The furnishi traditional and conservative. The same broadloom carpeting is used throughout. But instead of our ch of low-keyed colors in white and pale golds conveying subtlety, they look monotonous. We were thinking of adding color to the walls for a little more excitement. What do you

A. By all means more colorful walls will add interest to a monotonous color scheme. In keeping with the present arrangement, I see three

THOUGH BENTON docume with a close to illustrator/narrator point of view, he's better than that. iis highly refined style developed as no searched for the most effective way to respond to what he saw on his travels around the country. The long, fluid lines and rolling curves, the careful composition and sense of design all were honed to a fine edge.

In the first part of the exhibition are Benton's paintings before he had found his strong, individual style. No doubt about his talent, but he still had to shake uff the influences of Boans such as Cezanne and Manet, options that will strengthen and coordinate the two rooms.

The most conservative of the three options would be to paint the living room walls in a soft gold, but more lively than the present golds. Introduce a soft rose through decorative pillows and an extravagant silk floral arrangement. Then use the same color in the connecting dining room. Reverse the strategy by adding brighter gold accents into the rose dining room. The second option. which uses the after-image princi-ple, would be to paint the living room walls in gold, and the dining room in soft blue.

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

vaste your time or a potential puyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond o your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys how that readers are more interested in those items and ervices they know are within heir price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

Meet Mr. Seth and Mrs. Lindsey. Two friends sharing a moment that ight he remembered for the rest of their lives. It's a scene that happens at a family community like Stonebridge, every day. On sidewalks where children play. At get-togethers where neighbors meet and talk. And in West Bloomfield schools where education is still a priority.

Stonebridge is much more than Just quality homes. It's large bedrooms and family rooms, luxurious bathrooms, seven different floorplans, vaulted ceilings and European kitchens. But most of all living at Stonebridge is the start of something beautiful.
