'Skin heads' spark tension at schoo

By Diane Gale staff writer

Racial slurs made by "skin heads" to black students at Plymouth-Canton High School have turned the mostly white student body against the white power group, according to police and school officials.

The most recent racial incidents at the Centennial Education Park were reported last week to school officials by black students.

School officials and police said skin heads have passed out white power material on the campus that houses Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem high schools.

AFTER BLACK students reported the taunts, about a dozen skin heads sought protection from school officials, saying that they were being ridiculed and threatened by other students, according to police and

"There's half a dozen reports of incidents of blacks and some white students having confrontations with a group you've classified as skin heads," said Thomas Tattan, Plymouth-Canton High School principal. He added that he doesn't like to classify students with labels like skin

Skin heads are part of a white power movement whose members often shave their heads and wear black army boots, black leather, swastikas or other white power jewelry. Blacks, Jews and other eth-

"We met with a group of them who felt that their safety was in jeopardy, and they were asked to stay home for their safety," Tattan

ONLY ONE police report has been filed that had racial overtones involving students, Nemecek said. Three students, identified by police as skin heads, reportedly jumped other white students wearing varsity jackets at Joy and Sheldon roads, away from the school complex, Nemecek said.

Amoco denies responsibility for leaking oil

By M.B. Dillon staff writer

To the dismay of Ralph Lorenz and his attorney, Amoco Oil Co. is denying responsibility for the underground oil spill at the corner of Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street.

Lorenz filed suit in federal district court, seeking compensation for expenses incurred over the years in extracting petroleum products from under the Mayflower Meeting House where it has ruined sump pumps and Pollutants also have been detected in the air in offices inside the Mayflower Meeting House by Amoco consultants Neyer, Tiseo & Hindo Ltd. of Farmington Hills.

For years, fuel oil and gasoline have leaked from underground storage tanks at Amoco's service station. The area has been on a Michigan Department of Natural Resources list of contaminated sites since 1979.

"To my shock, Amoco denied responsibility," said Michael Souther-land, attorney for Lorenz Square. "They deny the allegations we make that the pollutant has seeped from Amoco's property onto ours. I don't know how to explain it.

"In light of engineering studies, I would have thought there was no question they were the cause of the gasoline and fuel oil underneath the property. I can't imagine Neyer Tiseo (Amoco's geology consultants) under oath saying that they are not the cause of the pollution on Lorenz Sqaure," he said.

With the state attorney general's office, the DNR launched an investigation of Amoco after realizing that no other company has as many contaminated sites in the state, said David Rymph, DNR environmental quality manager.

The township board agreed to seek the 0.5144-mill increase at a recent budget workshop meeting. Rosemary Harvey, township finance director, said final approval will likely come at the Tuesday, Oct. 10, public hearing on the 1990 budget. The hearing is scheduled to take

THERE ARE a few more men than women players in the club. They include dentists, doctors, real estate investors and more.

Most range in age from their 30s to their 60s, but players age 8 and in their 70s have played on Wednesdays, Flora said.

TODAY

WAS a picture-perfect homecoming for Plymouth Canton High School on Friday. The weather cooperated, and so did Plymouth Canton's opponent, Walled Lake Western.

The Warriors fell to'the Chiefs 21-0, giving Canton a 5-0 record for the season. It's the first winning season for the school

The win gave Michelle German, the homecoming queen, something to smile about, and the students something to celebrate.

The senior class took first place in the costume and float competition with a "Wizard of Oz" theme. Students dressed as Dorothy, the Tin Man and other Oz characters. The juniors, with a Frankenstein float, placed second in the float competition.

And by the end of the evening, the Walled Lake players just may have been clicking their heels together thinking they were in the land of Oz.

If you're over 35, ask your doctor about mammography.

State Sen. Doug Cruce is going public, loud and clear, with his oppo-sition to both state school tax pro-

"It's deplorable that they (fellow legislators) will-put them on the ballot and not come out in the sunlight and take a position," said Cruce, R.

lets her fingers do her shopping on her personal computer keyboard.

Computer program puts store at hand

By Leonard Poger staff writer.

Judie Walker provided a breakfast room-full of computer and super-market officials and reporters a taste of how she does her grocery shopping.

She picked out a recipe for baked pork chops, shopped for ingredients, checked her shopping list, and reviewed the prices.

The difference between Walker and thousands of other local shoppers is that she avoided having to drive to the store, push a cart through crowded aisles, and wait in long check-out lines.

She did it all by computer from her home in the Ford-Hix area of

For a $7.50 charge, she could even have the groceries delivered to her home the same day.

The shopping was done by her and her husband's personal computer, a new Prodigy software, a modem and On the other end of the computer connection is Great Scott! Supermarket, which teamed with Prodigy

During a sample electronic shopping trip, she taps a key on her computer keyboard to call up recipes, list ingredients, go up and down electronic aisles, check brands, sizes,

Hopefully, the numbers will grow, but admitted that he doesn't know how many are expected to do their shopping electronically.

Mrs. Walker said she was enthused about the computerized shopping service after using it just once.

Hein said the service is valuable and convenient for people who are "time poor."

Livonia, for instance, was almost named Elm.

'At one point there seems to have been some controversy over the name," Stewart said, since Livonia Center and Elm Station were the two major settlements at the time.

LIVONIA Center grew up in the Farmington Road-Five Mile area of the civic center, while the Elm Station settlement was around Plymouth Road and Middlebelt.

And Giltedge's history is cheesy. The village was named for the cheese factory there in the early 1900s, bought by then Gov. Fred Warner of Farmington who owned several cheese factories in the area. Pikes Peak, at the corner of Farmington and Joy Road, was begun in the 1850s by a prospector who'd been out to the Pikes Peak,

Colo., gold rush, Stewart said. Stewart has a picture of the man's general store, the Pikes Peak Variety Store, in the Wayne County Parks Department archives in the old Nankin Mills building on Edward Hines STEWARD, AN Allen Park resident who's working toward his master's degree in history at Wayne State University, said he likes to research so much he even does it in his spare time.

"When I get a free minute I like to go down to the Burton Historical Collection (at the Detroit Public Library) and look at old papers."

One of his first jobs as an archivist was organizing the photo archives of Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara.

Now he's doing the same for the county parks department archives. He's become a specialist in the history of Wayne County communities like Newburgh Village, near the old Nankin Mill.

Newburgh Village, at Ann Arbor Trail and Newburgh Road, was such a "hopping place" in years past that the old Detroit Courier newspaper devoted a special weekly column just to Newburgh gossip.

Steward said the old village blacksmith shop, meeting hall (where Civil War vets from the Grand Army of the Republic used to meet) and Newburgh Village industrial mill are still in the area.

The church, parsonage, school and village store have been moved to Greenmead Historical Village, said Sue Wisler of the Livonia Historical Commission.

STEWART IS working on a project that will mark several sites with special significance for Henry Ford and Wayne County.

Called the Ford Heritage Trail, 'It's going to feature Henry Ford historical sites in southeast Michigan, like the Bottsford Inn, and the Newburgh Village industrial mill.

Students opt for 'dry' dorms

By Pail Murphy

Given the option, a significant number of students living in college dormitories this fall chose alcoholfree housing according to officials at three universities that attract students from western Wayne County.

Roughly 45 percent of freshmen down residents at Oakland University, 20 percent of dorm residents at Eastern Michigan University and an estimated 10 percent of freshmen at the University of Michigan indicated they wanted alcohol-free rooms or recommates.

ALTHOUGH THOSE figures can be interpreted differently, a state lawmaker and federal judge, both from West Bloomfield Township, say they convey a clear message.

"It's obvious students want to make a choice" and should have the opportunity, said state Rep. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield.

Freshmen and, in some cases, upperclassmen got a chance to choose between roommates who use or tolerate alcohol and those who don't when they enrolled this fall at 12 state colleges and universities.

FOR MOST, it was the first time the schools offered students the opportunity to choose alcohol-free housing, although all schools previously asked incoming dorm residents if they wanted non-smoking roommates.

The schools offered dorm residents the choice after Honigman introduced legislation to require public and private colleges and universities to offer students a choice.

offer students a choice. Honigman's bill wasn't enacted. But it had an effe

"In our discussions, most public colleges agreed to consider the idea or to offer students the choice (on alcohol-free rooms)," he said. "Highligan State University (the state's largest) is the only one I know of that didn't.

"I PLAN to reintroduce the legislation this session."

Getting the law enacted is important, said U.S. District Judge Bernard Priedman, formerly of the 48th District Court serving Birmingham and the Bloomfields.

"Once you get the law on the books, people can't forget about it. They can't ignore it," said Friedman. Friedman has worked with a group of Oaklind County parents and substance abuse counselors on the lasse.

Friedman and others insist students should be given the choice of avoiding roommates who drink or use illegal drugs.

ALTHOUGH SOME believe the law is essential for students who might have a substance abuse problem — or a tendency toward one, Friedman says it's common sense.

"It's not necessarily a matter of being for or against alcohol (or drugs) on moral or ethical grounds. The absence of alcohol promotes an atmosphere of academic achievement."

Giving students the choice of an alcohol-free environment takes away peer pressure towards alcohol, said Lorna McEwen. McEwen is public relations director for the Maplegrove Centers, the West Bloomfield-based substance abuse treatment clinics affiliated with Henry Ford Herrital

"It promotes the idea that it's not bad to be a non-drinker," said McEwen When informed of the numbers of form residents selecting alcohol-

"I'd like to think we at the Maple-grove Centers are partly responsible."

AT OU, 201 of 462 incoming freshmen living in dorms expressed a preference for roommates who didn't drink, said Eleanor L. Reynolds, director of residence halls. OU previously offered students the option of alcohol-free dorm rooms, she said.

Since more that, half of OU's incoming freshmen live off campus and thus didn't express an opinion about residence halls — the statistics do not reflect a trend or attitude of the entire freshman class, she

But the figures do indicate that freshmen want to live in dorms without alcohol in their rooms, she said.

AT EASTERN Michigan University, where 4,200 dorm residents were given the choice, 879 signed up for alcohol-free rooms, said Colleen C. Tompkins, the school's manager of consumer services.

A much larger percentage of students said they didn't want roommates who smoke, she said. "It's much harder to place somebody who

"Many students say alcohol isn't important to them" and they will tolerate a roommate who drinks moderately, Tompkins said. "But they don't want roommates who smoke."

THE STATISTICS haven't been compiled at the University of Michigan. But preliminary figures indicate that more than 400 of about 4,000 freshmen have selected alcohol-free rooms.

At Oakwood, high-tech procedures combat heart problems.

Cardiac catheterization, angioplasty, and open heart surgery help diagnose and treat heart disease.

Has the treatment of heart disease changed significantly in the past few years?

There has been tremendous progress in both the diagnosis and treatment of heart problems. In the past 10 years, death and disability due to heart disease has dropped 30 percent in the United States. Among the most important advances are the use of catheterization for evaluating the health of the heart, angioplasty for treatment of many blockages, and open heart surgery for the more serious blockages.

G. What is heart catheterization?

It is a diagnostic test used to visualize the coronary arteries and the heart. It allows the cardiologist to see if there are blockages in the arteries. The doctor can also tell if the heart is normal size or enlarged. If the pumping action of the heart is normal, and if the valves between the chambers of the heart are working properly.

G. Who undergoes a heart catheterization?

It is usually recommended for a person who is expecipally recommended for a person who is expecation. It is also used if the person his had a heart attack or if the doctor suspects significant heart disease.

Q. Where is the procedure performed?

It is performed in Oakwood Hospital's Cardiac Cathetierization Urilt. The person remains awake during the catheterization, and only a local anesthesia is used. After the procedure, the person rests and then may go home the same day.

Q. How does the test work?

During the catheterization, the person lies on a special labe. A blood vessel in the grain is punctured with a needle by a bear appealant framed in this process. Though the presence of the process is a person to the heart. Do that is injusted through the cathete. The doctor is injusted to the few mores, through the heart.

Once the catheterization is done, what happens?

Q. You mention angioplasty. What is that?

lt is a procedure in which a catheter with a balloon on the tip is inserted into the artery. At the site of a blockage, the balloon is inflated and the pressure flattens the blockage against the wall and allows the blood to flow freely.

Q. What causes a blockage?

Most blockages in the arteries are caused by cholesterol. It builds up plaque deposits on artery walls that may interfere with the flow of blood. The most common symptom of a blockage is chest pain.

• Where is angioplasty performed?

A it is done in the Cardiac Catheterization Unit of Oakwood Hospital. There the person is monitored constantly by Oakwood's expert cardiac teams. The person usually stays in the hospital for only a couple of days.

G. What happens after angioplasty?

Most people return to their normal routines fairly quickly, and they are usually free of chest pain.

In cases where angioplasty is not recommended, what is the alternative?

By-pass surgery may be the preferred treatment if three arteries are blocked, or if there has been significant injury to the heart itself. Oakwood Hospital has renowned cardiac surgeons who have performed hundreds of open heart surgeries.

Skinheads

Students reject hate message

OR SEVERAL weeks we've heard talk about the activities of second heads at the two area high schools, and we were hoping it wasn't true.

But this week, we learned from Canton police that skinheads have been harassing black students at the high schools. Such harassment is always disturbing.

We wish it wasn't happening. But there's some encouraging news as well. Other white students at the schools are rejecting the message of the skinheads. That's good to see.

But it's happening in other places. Just this week, residents of Pulaski, Tenn., where the original Ku Klux Klan was organized, took action to show that they aren't in sympathy with a group of grownup skinheads called the Aryan Nations of Hayden Lake, Idaho.

The town has been the site of annual KKK marches since 1986. The parades draw fewer than 100 marchers, most from outside the community. Leaders in Pulaski say they can't stop the marches if the white supremacists obtain the correct permits.

However, to show they don't support the marchers, business owners and residents have been putting up orange banners that say "Brotherhood color" so nobody confuses them with the marchers.

In a way, that's what students at our local high schools are doing. They're rejecting the actions of hate-mongers, and that's probably more effective than a whole stack of civil rights laws.

Textbooks

System fails; students suffer

TN THE LATE 1960s and early 1970s there was an educational theory around called schools without walls. It was based on the idea that education should fuel children's natural curiosity by allowing them to go from one interest point to another without the barriers of classroom walls.

Well, the Plymouth Canton schools have a new twist on that old theory: It's schools without books.

A social studies textbook called "Latin Amerid Canada," to be used by the district's 1,100 sixth graders has not arrived yet.

Teachers have been put to the test, and some have come up with creative ways to handle the situation. It's just too bad that handling educational situations always falls to teachers.

The reason there are no texts is a classic case study in bureaucracy in action. The school district blames the publisher for not sending the books on time and the publisher blames the district for ordering the books too late.

Depending on your point of view, you could blame either. We just put it down to the way government works or in many cases doesn't work. We just wonder if the books were bumpers for an auto factory what would have happened. We'd bet that somebody would have come up with some bumpers.

It's just too bad that it's the teachers who have to bear the brunt of handling the situation. And as in the case in most mishandled educational situations, it's the kids who pay the price.

Dope raids

Police cooperation a good sign

TOW THAT'S more like it! Give us more crackdowns and forget those traffic checkpoints.

That was our thinking upon hearing the good news that more than 400 officers from 17 local, state and federal agencies in the metropolitan area conducted a coordinated narcotics crackdown late last month.

If published reports are to be believed, more than 100 were arrested and $150,000, 65 weapons and eight vehicles were confiscated, along with a goodly amount of crack cocaine, heroin, marijuana and other dangerous narcotics.

Most of the raids were in Detroit; but several took place in others parts of Wayne County and in Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw and Monroe

That's not too bad for an early dust-up on the Detroit front of the much-ballyhooed war on

Of course, the money and dope taken in this so-called Operation Crackdown is truly a tiny amount compared to what's really out there. Many of those arrested were out on bail in short order. Such is the nature of our revolving-door criminal justice system.

Unfortunately, it was business as usual once the police were gone in many of the raided areas.

OVERALL, the whole operation had tinges of a public relations ploy designed to let John and Jane Q. Public know (through friendly newspaper and TV reports) that the good guys aren't doing nothing about dope (and dopers) that plague their communities.

Still, there was something positive in those raids in a care spirt of cooperation, many dis-derest police agencies worked together and took the right to the dopers) where it belongs

How much better it is to fight the drug war that way than by Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano's silly traffic checkpoints, truly an unacceptable battle tactic.

REMEMBER the checkpoints . . . Ficano's plan to stop every vehicle at a certain point in an attempt to drive traffic away from suspected crack houses? The checkpoints have been suspended pending a court hearing later this month.

To our knowledge and as of this writing, only one checkpoint had been staged in metropolitan Detroit. It was held in Inkster in Wayne County almost three weeks ago and it netted very little dope, according to accounts.

Of dubious legality for starters, traffic checkpoints are a waste of police manpower and equipment. Local officers, who certainly would be required to man the checkpoints, have better things to do with their time.

College kids are turning away from booze, drugs waiting for the adults to give them the opportunity.

A total of about 1,500 students entering the University of Michigan, Oakland University and Eastern Michigan University opted this fall for alcohol-free rooms.

That breaks down to about 10 percent of the incoming students at U-M, 21 percent of all dormitory residents at Eastern Michigan and 45 percent at OU.

This is the first year that all public universities in Michigan - with the exception of Michigan State and Wayne State - offered students living in their residence halls the choice of a roommate who doesn't drink. Wayne State will implement the option next fall.

The numbers make it obvious that MSU is out of sync - as are Michigan Tech, Lake Superior State and Saginaw Valley State, all of which offer the option only to students 21 and over. And Ferris State, too, must revise its housing form, which now only offers it to students who acknowledge they are chemically dependent.

Those kinds of limitations are hogwash.

BECAUSE YOUNG people obviously are saying something different. A move that was begun on behalf of students recovering from chemical addictions who wanted to maintain their sobriety in a college atmosphere is turning out to be something that many others want,

They are smart enough to realize they don't want to contend with drunkenness or drugs in their own room, their home away from home, when they want to study or order out for pizza or talk. How does that hit you, you representatives of the Presidents Council of the State Colleges and Universities? A year's worth of meetings between the small Oakland County group pushing for the alcohol-free rooming and these representatives resulted in the council's collective refusal to do anything. But the truth is, the numbers alone confirm that's what students want. All along it has been a students' rights-issue - right up there with the right to request a non-smoking, roommate - in place for some time.

Luckily, universities still must compete for students. And students who care about having a roommate who doesn't drink know the schools that offer them that opportunity, now, don't they?

Sympathy for ticket receiver

To the editor:

I sympathize with Ray Konrad of Livonia for getting a random ticket from the local police. Boy, I don't see them giving tickets to the bands they have on Friday nights. I can hear them from my front lawn. Oh! P.S. Maybe, Ray, the music was a little loud. And to reporter Kevin Brown, be careful what you say. Mr. Paul Sincock may take you up on it. Mike Budnick

Cartoon lacks class

To the editor:

To the editor:
The Sept. 25 cartoon by Karlos Barney shows a little boy asking his dad if a woman's less were "faux marble." The artist has a grossly insensitive warped sense of humor. It is in fact sick and totally implausible since a 5 or 6 year old boy would not even know what faux marble is.

Barney apparently thinks birth marks, scars, obesity and other physical problems or disfigurements are also hilarious. Unfortunate overweight women plagued with varicose veins would not wear mini skirts and I doubt will have much respect for the mentality of those at your newspaper who would let that cartoon be printed.

Even the cartoons in the Enquirer have a lot more class than the Warp

To the editor:

I wish to commend the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers for its clear, tough stand regarding drunk driving (Sept. 7). Your observation is certainly correct that the problem of drinking and driving is no longer so-cially acceptable and now has a serious stigma attached to it.

Such a change in public perception is a necessary step in order to mobilize the community to deal with this terrible menace on our roads. Drunk terrible menace on our roads. Drunk driving is a deadly crime.

As you advocate, certainty of punishment, especially on a first offense as well as elimination of plea bargaining, would further establish the seriousness of this crime and hopefully provide a deterrent effect.

Slow class is a worry

Q: My son is a ninth grade student and has been placed in a slower paced math class. I know he is not the fest student in the school but I worry about him falling further behind in this class. My question is, "Does a slower paced math class serve a better purpose for my son than a regular math class?"

What you are referring to is typically called a remedial math class in what is called a "tracking system;" a system that divides students into high, average and low ability or low performance levels, each level with its own curriculum. Those in the remedial classes are young adults who may have ability but for many reasons are experiencing a problem mastering basic academic skills.

From my experience, students in these classes tend to be either underachievers, unmotivated or undisciplined toward studying at this time in life. Sometimes acting out or blurting out, sometimes very shy and withdrawn behaviors are by-products of a remedial class.

· You ask, "Does a remedial, homogeneous class (a class with students who have similar grades and test scores) serve a better purpose than a heterogeneous class (a class setting with students of mixed abilities and grades)?" Depends on who you talk to and what research you believe.

Recent research is quite interesting regarding the remedial, underachieving or sometimes called at-risk student class settings.

John Peterson, Ph.D, of Brigham Young University stated that a number of experts who studied the education of remedial students found that when given an opportunity in a more mixed, heterogeneous class, remedial students test scores improved. That there was a tendency to teach underachieving students at a slower pace that can put them even further behind their classmates. That when the low achievers were grouped with other low achieving students they knew they were the remedial and their modest work effort became a sort of self-fulfilling Tracking or putting low achieving students together also showed that student self-esteem, which was anticipated would improve by doing school work they could handle, did not improve.

Keep in mind, many of these students have low self-esteem to start with. Compounding the issue is the fact that teaching remedial classes can be very draining and frustrating on the teacher. In some cases, the newer less experienced teachers get the remedial classes to "pay their

My experience says that some low achievers can function in an average level class but most of these students would be lost in an accelerated or honors level class. A major factor, from my view, depends on how many low achievers are mixed into a regular class. In a class setting where the majority of students are disciplined to study, who are average or above average students, the below average student sometimes benefit from having positive peer role models with which to identify.

In a mixed abilities class the nature of instruction plays a key role. Allowing the better students to tutor the lower ability students in what is today called cooperative learning is a great asset.

The red brick school with grades K-12 in one room, where the brighter students tutored both the younger and slower students, used Cooperative Learning long before this latest educational term was coined. Frankly, I used the method during my teaching days simply because it worked.

Another major variable for the low achiever's success is the expectation of the teacher. High expectations, a belief system children can learn up to and beyond their capacity can have a major impact on many students remedial or otherwise.

As I look back on a remedial math class I taught, I had - probably 21 in the class - four became quite successful businessmen (one has a major trash pick-up business), one is a construction worker, another a truck driver, a couple of the girls are now homemakers, some are clerk

In your case, from what you have said, your son is the classic underachiever. Many factors enter into underachievement. Some who were underachievers in high school are leaders today; some are still not achieving. Don't give up hope, many grow out of this pattern after high

And they've been "invented" by college students and professional journalists. Maybe they just aren't ready to spell correctly.

And from the principal of a Catholie school in Detroit: "Talk about putting pressure on children and (making) them dislike school, making them hesitant to express their thoughts . . . that's not fair.'

Oh. come on. Life's not fair. But teaching first graders that cat isn't spelled with a "k" or that there's no "z" in juice isn't quite mental cruelthen there's no point to the writing.

And therein, I suspect, lies at least a part of the reason for this current trend toward "invented spelling." It is easier not to teach children proper spelling than it is to teach it.

And when you get notes from your children's teachers containing misspelled words - when you visit the classrooms and find signs on the walls with misspelled words - it does make you wonder.

Maybe they, too, are not yet ready to spell correctly.

Colleagues enjoy their time at tea

staff writer

There weren't any tests being given Monday afternoon during a gettogether at the Plymouth Historical

A tea, sponsored by the Beta Xi chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, was held to honor retired educators from the Plymouth-Canton Community

The honorees didn't have to worry about answering test questions, and didn't take any homework with them when they left. Instead, the emphasis was on socializing.

"We provide the place, we provide the food, we provide the hour," said Sharon Belobraidich of Plymouth, co-chairwoman for the tea.

Alpha Delta Kappa is an international honorary sorority for women educators. A few years ago, local members decided a tea would be a nice way to honor retired educators. Monday's event was the 10th such gathering.

About 60 people attended the tea. The organization sends out invitations to all retired teachers and administrators whose addresses can be

"Some of the teachers I had had were still there teaching." She found it difficult back then to call those teachers by their first names.

Granam Laible of Plymouth ran into one of his former teachers at the tea. Elizabeth Donnelly of Plymouth was his second grade teacher.

"I've seen her through the years." Laitle knew Donnelly's late husband, and had some of the couple's children in school during his own teaching days.

He taught in Detroit, and then at Pioneer Middle School. After teaching science and math there, Laible taught high school biology and physical science. He also taught photography at Centennial Educational Park.

Laible's been retired for a few vears now. His wife, Beatrice, continues to work as the homebound/ hospitalized teacher for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

"It's kind of fun," he said of Monday's get-together. "You see people you haven't seen in a long time."

NORTHVILLE RESIDENT Gloria Foust enjoyed her time at the tea. She's an Alpha Delta Kappa member, and taught for 20 years at Bird Elementary School, retiring in 1985.

"Oh, I love it," Foust said of the get-together. Some friends of hers who are retired educators make it a point to attend the tea. Even those who live up north make the trip to be at the gathering.

Foust taught kindergarten and first grade at Bird, and also taught mentary schools and graduated from in Dearborn, Pontiac, Traverse City time Monday afternoon visiting with Judi Krieman of Plymouth Township, a fifth grade teacher at Bird.

Foust has seen changes in her profession during the past few decades. When she started teaching, kids were more relaxed and less programmed. For many children today, schedules are full with lessons, Scouts, sports and other activities. There isn't always time left for playing or just relaxing.

She knows that regrouping time is important for students.

Sharon Belobraidich, a first and second grade teacher at Hoben Elementary School in Canton, started teaching locally in 1963.

"It was very different when I started teaching school." Belobraidich remembers having lunch room duty, along with bus duty before and after school.

In those days, teachers didn't climb up the ladder in terms of salary and seniority. Individual decisions largely dictated how much or how little teachers were paid.

'We have a lot of nice things today that we didn't have," she said. "So the union has done a lot. You need your lunch hour away from kids."

She's found today's students are more sophisticated. Just as was true years ago, however, parents make a big difference in how students do in

Hospice care can help families cope

By Julie Brown staff writer

Angela Hospice Home Care, established in 1985, is owned and operated by the Felician Sisters of Livonia. It's based at 36995 Five Mile in Livonia.

Volunteers and health care professionals provide physical, emo-tional and spiritual support for pa-tients and families.

"Our focus is on home care," she said. "That's our main objective." THAT'S PARTLY due to the fact that Medicare regulations have changed. Reimbursement for inpatient hospice care is limited, so the trend has been toward home-based care. "We're there to be a help, to make that patient comfortable, to give him control over his life," McAuliffe said. Patients are given support as they come to terms with their own mortality.

"In all of our lives, there are a lot of loose ends to tie up."

Hospice volunteers help in a variety of ways. Some patients need help with personal hygiene, while others need help with transportation, writing letters or other tasks. Some patients just need someone to talk to — and listen.

Hospice staffers and volunteers also help family members cope with the demands of caring for a dying loved one. Those needs vary

Some families need respite care for a few hours a week, giving them a cliance to get out of the house. Others need more extensive help. Bereavement follow-up care is available for survivors.

Angela Hospice Home Care, a non-profit organization, is state-licensed and Medicare certified. Services are provided at no cost to patients or families, and no one is turned away because of a lack of health insurance. The average patient load is 12 to 15 people per month, McAulittle said. Assistance is provided for people living in western Wayne County and the Parmington/Parm-Ington Hills / Nov. area.

They frequently cite the small percentage of rape and incest vic-tims who have abortions compared to the number of women who have them for other reasons.

Those speaking and in attendance would agree there are no easy answers in cases of rape and incest when a woman becomes pregnant.

Nonetheless, people let their feelings be known about one of the alternatives - abortion. Even the moderator for the discussion voiced

"My question to you is, a woman has been raped and her body has been entered in the cruelest way possible," said Paula Ervin of Plymouth. "If you abort her, you enter her body again in the cruelest way possi-ble. Will two cruel entries somehow compensate for the first?"

Carol Schlismann provided the medical aspects of the issue. She is a registered nurse, working six years in obstetrics/gynecology at a hospital in Jackson, Miss. She works as a nurse's consultant and has studied the effects of rape and incest.

"Promoters of abortion as a solution to the problem of rape pregnan-cy tell the woman to feel ashamed and to conceal the circumstances of the pregnancy by destroying the evi-dence," she said. "Another type of treatment is the answer."

Similar advice was given to those who have been victims of incest. Like rape, Schlismann said the incidence of pregnancy is less than 1 percent in reported incest cases.

She said abortion only hides the incest while having the baby - and later giving it up for adoption — forces the family to confront the

THE REV. Joe Plawecki of Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church, the Rev. Robert Schlismann of Ward Evangelical Presbyterian Church and Bishop Daniel Dunnigan of Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints shared similar views on the subject.

All three made the stances of their churches clear in opposition to abortion, at times reading Bible scriptures to drive the message home. But when it comes to rape and incest, there appears to be some grappling with the issue.

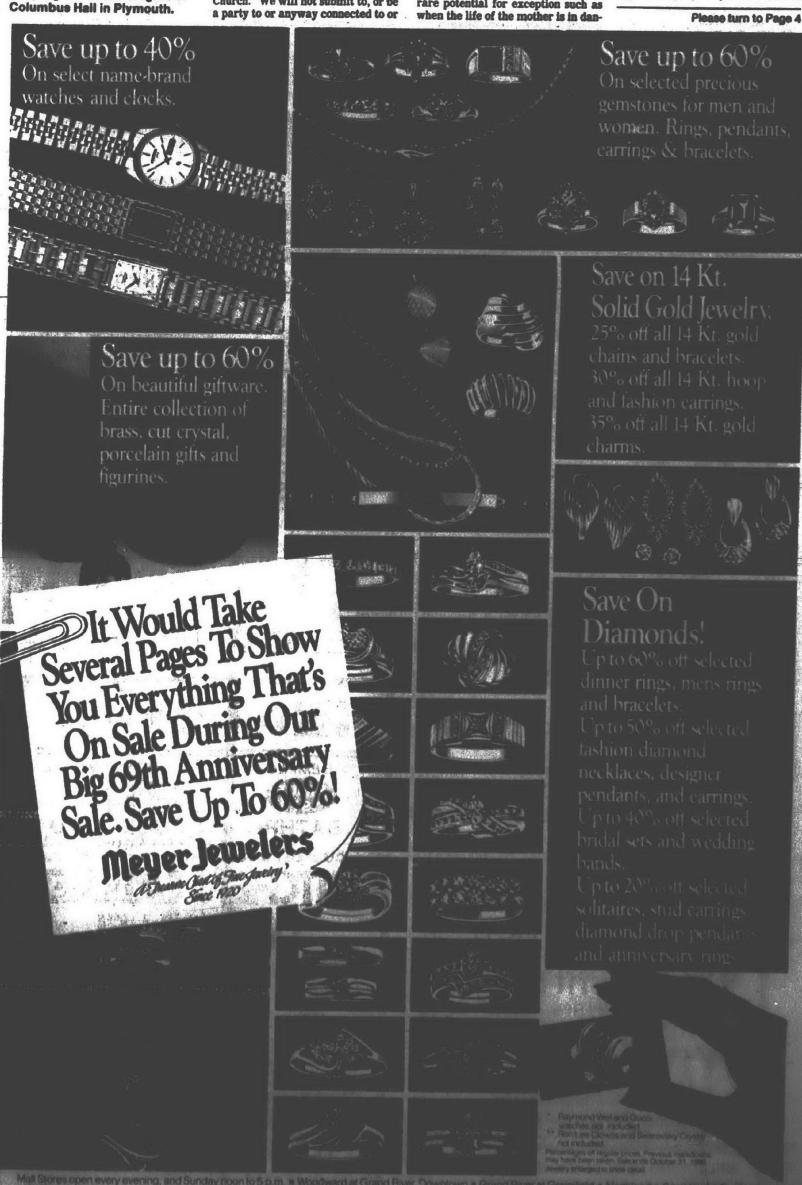

'Abortion is one of the most revolting, sinful practices of this day," said Dunnigan of Westland, who is a lay minister with the Mormon Church. "We will not submit to, or be

THE RELIGIOUS aspects of the issue vary, depending on the denomination. Church is a member of the United Methodist Church, which has a limited pro-choice opinion.

The Roman Catholic Church has always had a firm stance against abortion, no matter the circumstance. "I think they do have more pressures. They're different also," said David Breeden, director of Plymouth Family Service, a Plymouth Community United Way agency.

Many families experience the "sandwich effect," in which people are responsible for caring for their children and their aging parents.
"I think the networking for families is much less," Breeden said. Family members tend to be more scattered, and neighborhoods aren't as cohesive as they used to be. The church and other traditional institutions aren't as readily available as they once were.

In general, there's more pressure on families to take care of their own problems. "That's my sense of what's different," he said.

Plymouth Family Service is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. Agency staffers have seen changes in family life during that time, and the agency has responded to those changes.

PLYMOUTH FAMILY Service started as a counseling service.

"That's always been a part of the agency and remains a vital part," said Breeden, who has been director for six years and was a caseworker/therapist for five years before that.

More recently, the agency has expanded to offer services for the aged. In-home respite care is provided for people caring for a loved one. The agency, affiliated with Child and Family Service of Washtenaw, also operates an adult day center. That center is based at St. John's Episcopal Church in Plym-

Staffers at Plymouth Family Service will celebrate the agency's 25th anniversary 5-7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 27, at St. John's Episcopal Church, 574 S. Sheldon, Plymouth Township.

The gathering will include hors d'oeuvres and cake. The public may attend.

PHOTOS AND other materials on display that evening will tell the story of Plymouth Family Service and how the agency has changed with the times.

"I think we do a lot more family and group work," he said. That kind of work means more people can be helped at a lower cost.

These days, people aren't as re-luctant to seek professional help. "I think people feel more and more comfortable," Breeden said.

There just seems to be less of a stigma. Many people have come forward and said they've sought professional help. That's particularly common in cases involving substance abuse. Those examples and the in-help reduce the stigma, he said. (For more information on the 25th anniversary celebration or on agency services, call 453-0890.)

Faith has been a tremendous help as Christine Helewski of Plymouth has recovered from a devastating 1984 auto accident.

Her fife wasn't retrieved without reasons, she says. "I really believe God had a reason for letting me live." Her experiences compel her to become an inspirational speaker. She's written a book on her experi-ence, 'A Thread of Life. A Message

'My sense tells me that's the way to go. My work was in the ministry before. I was a school principal and I was on pastoral staffs. But now I'm in it on a different level," she said.

Before the auto accident which inured Helewski and her husband, Stanley, on Oct. 20, 1984, they worked at a Catholic parochial school in Detroit. She was the school

She remained in a coma for three months. That, too, was a blessing. She doesn't remember anything about most of the 11 operations she

Through it all, she credits her family's prayers and her husband's unswerving belief she'd make it. They'd met while playing on a church bowling league in 1949 on the east side of Detroit. Throughout her eight-month hospital stay he re-mained convinced she'd live even though doctors gave him little hope. While she remained in a coma, he had her wedding and engagement

When she was transfered to Southfield Rehabilitation Center four months after her accident, the staff at Saginaw General's intensive care unit threw her a going away celebration. It was a bittersweet moment, The staff had seen her through her initial recovery and adjustment. And it bolstered her spirits when she discovered her employer had retired her while she'd remained in a coma.

It took her a long time to attempt to drive a car again. "I made a har-gain with God. If I could drive. I would teach," she said. "One diff, would teach," she said. 'One-dig, while waiting for her husband to return to the car, she slid behind the steering wheel. She turned the ignition and drove the car for a short distance. "I started to cry. Keeping her bargain with God, she teaches cathecism at St. John Neumann Church. "I teach seventh grade. Those are my favorite kids. I didn't know how kids would accept me. I hadn't taught in the suburbs before," she said.

She used a cane when she started teaching the class. The day she walked into the class without the cane, her students applauded.

"I'm a messenger. With God, all things are possible," she said,

Alternatives to MET

Invest on your own

By Doug Funke staff writer

This is the week for parents to sign up children for the Michigan Education Trust, a state-sponsored financial program that purports to guarantee college tuition in the future for an investment now.

Look at money market, mutuals

Richard A. Ferri, a 31-year-old account executive with Kidder, Peabody & Co. in Troy, would set up a college fund in a child's name in a Uniform Gift to Minor Account.

That allows for parental control of the investments until the child reaches 18 years of age. But remember - the money legally belongs to the child.

Ferri likes the Massachusetts Finaticial Services family of mutual

"They have more experience than anyone in the country investing money in mutual funds," he said. "They are absolutely the oldest mutual fund company in the country."

Ferri would immediately place the entire $7,800 into the MFS Lifetime Money Market Fund.

Every month thereafter, a specific amount, $300 in this theoretical exercise, would be transferred from the money market to the MFS Capital Growth Fund, a growth-income fund, until all the money is there.

"Over the long run, you're going to get the best average market price,

Parents can "buy" four years of college for a lump-sum payment ranging from about $7,800 for a newborn to about $14,700 for a high

Last year, some 40,000 children were enrolled.

MET's big advantages, proponents say, are guaranteed tuition, a wideranging choice of which college to attend and state tax deductions now for parental purchasers.

But some financial advisers who recommend that parents save for their childrens' college education don't believe that the MET is the best investment vehicle.

Richard A. Ferri 'dollar-cost averaging'

Ferri said of the dollar-cost-averaging strategy.

. The Capital Growth Fund, in existence only 2½ years, is a mirror of the MFS Capital Development Fund, which has had an annual average return of 17.6 percent over the last 10 years, Ferri said.

Current major holdings of both funds are Ford Motor Co., ITT and Apple Computer, Ferri said. "We think the market is going to grow an average of 121/2 percent a year. If the market grows at 121/2 percent, a good, quality mutual fund also should grow at 121/2 percent,"

The initial $7,800 investment would grow to about $65,000 less

They point out that MET advertises that it will guarantee only tuition, and full tuition, at that, only at public universities and colleges in

PARENTS COULD come up short if their children chose a private college, an out-of-state university or elected not to pursue college at all.

Richard Ferri, a stockbroker, pointed out that four years of college at the University of Michigan would cost nearly $41,000 18 to 22 years from now based on current rates and annual inflation increases of 7 per-

He has developed a plan using mu-tual funds, which he believes offers a better financial return than MET. "Forget the MET," Ferri said. "I figured at best MET would give a 7 percent return.

Cynthia Boesler, a certified financial planner, doesn't like the idea that parents give up decision-making power and access to their money for.

a tuition guarantee. "Everything I've come up with (investment alternatives) keeps parents in control," she said.

"I think people would be wellserved not to put all their eggs into that one (MET) basket," said Gary Morrison, a bank trust officer.

"TO PUT everything you've got into that and say the state of Michigan will take care of my child's educational needs in 2020, I'm not comfortable with that," he said.

Peter Smith, a banker and certified financial planner, suggested that if parents go it alone, "they should go in as early as they can with as much as they can" to take advantage of compounding interest.

"People should keep it as simple as they can," Smith said, the better to track the investment.

Ferri, Boesler, Morrison and Smith all agreed to put together two sample college fund portfolios for parental investors.

One assumes a lump-sum investment of $7.800 - about what the parents of newborns this year would have to pay into MET to guarantee four years of college tuition beginning 18 years from now.

The other portfolio assumes a monthly investment of $25 over 18 years without any kind of lump-sum investment.

Women told: Help others tap potential

By Susan McCoy special writer

Women need to develop their own mentor network if they want to continue to move ahead in the business world.

That's the consensus of business owners Susan E. Funk and Irma B. Elder who addressed a Birmingham Community House audience for the benefit of the Michigan Women's Hall of Fame last week.

Promoting women has become one of Funk's priorities.

"Women are sometimes our own worst enemy," she said. "We are insecure when we do achieve success and don't reach out to help each other. We need to develop these helping networks."

Funk of Livonia has signed on as a mentor in a new program developed by the U.S. Small Business Association to help women starting out in business.

The president and principal stockholder of Detroit Bandag, a tire retread company, Funk has experience in a field traditionally run by men.

"Women tend to own service businesses. I think manufacturing offers more opportunities. Opportunities for profits are tremendous. Men have been capitalizing on manufacturing for years and women need to get into it.

"AT FIRST MY youth as well as the fact that I was a woman was a drawback, especially in the tire business. I learned that older men have to get to know you to accept you. I had typical problems dealing in a male-dominated field, but as my attitude mellowed and I gained more knowledge I became more assertive and confident."

Elder, a Bloomfield Hills resident, is president and owner of Troy Ford in Troy and a dealership in Owosso. But in 1983 she was a homemaker who faced the decision of running a business or selling it after the death of her

"I represent that it can be done," Elder said. "We have many more skills as women that we realize. Never underestimate yourself and your abilities. I've learned that tragedy does not keep you down. There is another chapter in life and another world to conquer if you let yourself be open to it. Most importantly, I learned that life does not stop at a certain age."

She said she stepped into the business quietly, showing respect for her employees and began to establish credibility.

"My employees had to know I was not going to be a figurehead. The hardest thing for me was to learn to be tough and promote myself. We have not been taught to fight and interact in the business world. Women mentors are not there. I'd like to see more help from women.

More control over the money it's available for other uses in the event of a family emergency compensates for extra taxes that will result from keeping such accounts in the names of mom and dad, Boesler said.

She has two options for investing the $7,800 lump sum.

For moderate to aggressive risk takers, Boesler would put the entire amount in a combination growth-income, no-load mutual fund like the Fidelity Fund.

It has returned about 17 percent annually over the last 10 years, she said, adding that major holdings as of the end of July were GTE, General Electric, ATT and Mobil.

The current guaranteed rate on savings bonds is 7.81 percent if held at least five years. Starting next year, the interest is tax free if used for education.

The U.S. government is talking to a lot of people about using methanols as an alternative fuel for automobile these days, including GM, the California Air Resources Board and the U.S. Environmental Agency.

But not to Baby Huey. Haby Huey could tell them about methanol.

Baby Huey was a kid in Iny old high school in Royal Oak who worked haird at becoming the kind of accial reject that just came natural-

HIS EFFORT to build an image always was a little strained, since he less blended in with the rest of us. But he tried hard.

First he bought a black leather jacket. Then tried growing his hair into the kind of slicked-down, patentleatherish look made popular by a couple of rock groups from New Jersey. Unfortunately, Baby Huey's hair was naturally curly, so the result was something like a greasy lump of black broccoli top on his head.

UNDAUNTED, HE bought a motorcycle. Well, not exactly a motor-cycle. Actually it was a motor scooter powered by a one-cylinder engine that looked sort of like a Har-ley if you squinted and it was about a block away.

It ran with a "pocketa-pocketa" was an average student who more or sound, and Huey would approach with one hand on his left leg, just like a real Harley, which gave him the beginnings of a high school tough guy image until some guy who was a real social reject pointed out that Huey looked a like a pear sitting on a roller skate (Huey was a little overweight) and started calling him Baby Huey. And that was the end of

I GAVE him credit. I figured anyone with a real motorized vehicle of any sort was one up on me, since there were only three guys in the whole school who managed to buy wheels without parental assistance and without dropping out to earn the money. Baby Huey was one of them.

So when Baby Huey pulled up, pocketa-pocketa, in front of the model airplane store where I worked af-ter school and come inside, I took no-

"Gimme some of that," he said, leaning over the counter and pointing to a gallon can of model airplane fuel. "I'm going to win something," he pronounced with the finality of a guy about to jump over a fountain at Caesar's Palace,

SOMEHOW HUEY had figured out that model airplane fuel, about 60 percent methanol and 40 percent nitromethane, was going to be his se-cret weapon for an all-out assault on the record for Cushman Eagle - top scooter at Detroit Dragway, thus ensuring him a permanent place in the social reject hall of fame.

Unfortunitely, I missed the trial itself, and in fact had marry forgotten about the attempt until he came back a couple of days later, walking, but holding a trophy for elapsed time that no doubt stands to this day.

JUST HOW this figures into the current interest in methanol as a way of preserving the environment is something I leave to an investigation by Congress. That may be necessary anyway, since just before he left the store, Baby Huey leaned over the counter and confided where his next technological leap was

"Nuclear," he whispered. Then he walked out of the store, and I never BOESLER RECOMMENDS U.S. Bonds for more conservative investors. If the current interest rates hold, the bond pot would grow to. about $12,000 regardless of parental tax bracket, she said.

If parents were able to examine their budget, scrimp and save an additional $300 per year, Boesler re-commends the purchase of a no-load (no commission) universal life insurance policy.

Banker urges 3-part strategy

Peter W. Smith, senior vice president at Midwest Guaranty Bank in Troy, likes to use a Uniform Gift to Minor Account when setting up a college fund.

He has a three-pronged strategy for investing the $7,800.

• $2,500 into certificates of deposit with staggered maturities. "Currently, you can get 8%, 9 percent and I would go out to that range to get those rates for three years," Smith said.

• $3,000 into a growth mutual fund like 20th Century Select, which has an average annual return of 19.4 percent over the last 10 years, or 20th Century Ultra, which has averaged 15.7 percent annually in the eight years of its existence, Smith Largest holdings of Select as of April 30 were Wal-Mart, May De-partment Stores and Philip Morris; of Ultra were Service Merchandise, RACAL Telecomm PLC and American Television' and Communications, a 20th Century spokesman said.

• $2,300 into a more conservative growth-income fund such as Fidelity Puritan, with an annual return of nearly 17.5 percent the past 10 years, or Vanguard Index 500 Fund, which has averaged about 16.5 percent annually over the same period while attempting to mirror the Standard & Poors stock index, Smith Largest holdings in Vanguard 500 are IBM, Exxon and GE, a Vanguard spokesman said. Puritan's largest holdings as of the end of July were U.S. Treasury Notes, Citicorp and Sears & Roebuck, a Fidelity spokeswoman said.

The 20th Century Select and Ultra funds and the Vanguard 500 are no loads. Fidelity Puritan has a 2-percent sales charge.

A lump sum investment of $7,800 with an annual return of 10 percent would rise to nearly $43,500 less taxes over 18 years, Smith said. For the periodic $25 investor, Smith advises monthly buys into the Select or Ultra fund depending on the parents' investment orientation. Select is a tad more conservative. Over time, Smith would transfer funds from the mutuals to a money market such as Fidelity Cash Reserves or a bank's money market for diversification.

"I wouldn't put money into one fund for 18 consecutive years," he said.

Smith projected that an 8-percent annual return on a $25 per month outlay over 18 years would produce about $12,000, less taxes.

Smith, 33, current president of the southeast Michigan chapter of the International Association of Financial Planners, said he makes periodic contributions to college funds for his two children.

OR DANIEL COONEY, who "on the road" with "Les Miz" is something he hasn't experienced yet, even though he is appearing in the ensemble of the show at the Fisher Theatre.

Cooney auditioned for the smashhit musical in New York, rehearsed in Chicago and joined the national company when it opened last month in Detroit. But since he is originally from Westland, the 21-year-old performer has rented a house, near his parents' home there, and is comfortably staying right around home dur-ing the run of "Les Miz" in Detroit.

Several children in the show also get to go home at night, to their permanent homes, since they auditioned in Detroit and were chosen just to appear in "Les Miz" during the show's local stay.

They are Joe Denawetz, 11, of West Bloomfield, and two nine-year-old girls — Laura Buono of Oakland Township and Dana Powers Acheson, who lives in Detroit and attends Roeper City and Country School in Bloomfield Hills.

Cooney had just returned from a fishing trip taken on his day off, OR DANIEL COONEY, who lives in New York, being sounded sleepy, as he talked about catching perch in Lake Erie, in Michigan waters.

In "Les Miz," he said, "the main character I play is Joly, one of the students. He does most of his work on the barricades - the revolution and fighting scene." Cooney said his character has a few spoken "lines" (actually all "lines" in the show are sung). "Joly is basically a happy guy. You can tell that by his name," he

"Besides that, I do close to 10 other characters. There are some pretty fast costumer changes." He appears variously as one of the factory workers, farmers, and people in the inn or har-room.

The tour started two years ago in Boston and is expected to run for another five to seven years, traveling throughout the United States. None of the original principals is still with the show. "Everyone in principal roles, now, started in the ensemble," he explained.

Cooney may get a chance to move up, but it's not likely he will progress the role of the main character, Jean Valjean. "The youngest Valjean is 33," he said. "In the near future, I'm right for Marius" (who falls in love with the grown-up Cosette).

COONEY WAS BORN in Westland, where he graduated from John Glenn High School. A few weeks ago, he visited an advanced drama class at the school, talking about his ca-reer and "Les Miz." After high school, he spent a semester at Henry Ford Community College in Dearborn, then decided college was not for him.

As a high school student, he had appeared in several musical productions at John Glenn. A community theater production for the Dearborn Players Guild eventually led him to Florida, where the guild's director went to do dinner theater.

"Before 'Les Miz' I spent two to three years doing dinner theater all over the U.S.," Cooney said. "I consider that my training. I didn't go to college." Joining the national com-pany of "Les Miz" is his first Equity production.

For the children from local communities who appear in "Les Miz," it's an experience on which they agree, "It's fun. I love it." Each of the youngsters, in separate phone interviews Monday, came up with the identical, enthusiastic comment in response to the question asking how they liked being in the show.

JOE DENAWETZ plays Gav-roche, the street urchin. Without hesitation, he describes his character as "a straight, spunky stud.". Joe de-clared, "I just love the role."

He has given several newspaper interviews and has appeared on ra-dio and television. Talking about Gavroche is something he has gotten used to. His favorite scene in which he appears in the show is the one where he gets to climb all over the barricades, and later dies.

Joe said he knows everybody in the show. "The actors are real nice. They're nicer than most shows." He had figured they were rich, and that they might be stuck-up or mean, he said.

A sixth grader at Abbott Middle School, he currently attends school Monday and Tuesday and has a tutor Wednesday through Friday. He alternates with another boy, who travels with the show, and gives four performances a week.

When Joe was rehearsing with the show in Chicago, a group of teenagers approached him for autographs outside the stage door. He pointed out that he wasn't playing Gavroche in Chicago. "They said, Who cares! You're Gavroche. We want your autograph," " he said.

Joe thinks he is well-suited to the part because he has been told that, in person, "You look and sound like Gavroche." He admits, however, he doesn't have the personality of the feisty character. "I wouldn't have any friends if I did," he declared.

LAURA BUONO and her family just moved to Oakland Township from Sterling Heights and she would attend Hugger Elementary School for the first time, the next day. She alternates with Dana Powers Acheson and another girl, who travels with the show, in the roles of Young Cosette and Young Epinone.

She likes playing Cosette, who is "an abused little girl. Her morn dies. Valjean comes to take care of her." Of the character Epinone, "She hardly does anything. She makes fun of Cosette. She's the innkeeper's daugh-

"I met a lot of new friends. We have fun. I get along with the kids very well. We sleep over at one and other's house," she said.

DANA POWERS ACHESON enjoys the role of Cosette because, "I get to sing more stuff." She also satd? "Usually when I'm in a play they say, 'Smile, Dana, smile." With 'Les Miz," "You usually can't smile very much. In this show you don't smile unless Jean Valjean picks you

Dana wants to continue her show-business career until she grows up. Then she would like to become an archeologist. However, the ento-tainment field may yet win out. When I grow up I want to try out for the part of Epinone," she said. "I like the songs she sings."

Galway's flute mastery remains uncontested

The second week of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall regular series featured a program of several dimensions. Mozart's music - the overture from the "Abduction from the Seraglio" and the Concerto for Flute and Orchestra in G Major, K 313/285b - constituted the established end of the musical spectrum. At the other end was seldom-performed Symphony No. 4 by Shosta-single notes.

The other side of Galway's colorful artistic personality emerged in the encore, in which he presented a popular Irish tune accompanied by the strings.

It took a quarter of a century for the Symphony No. 4 by Shostakovich to be performed, after its publication in 1936. Maestro Gunther Herbig, who also performed it here a few years ago, is one of the few pro-ponents of this long, complex work.

STYLISTICALLY, IT is much harsher and more dissonantic than most of Shostakovich's works. Flying in the face of the chilling effects of Stalin's ruthless repression of the composer (new Laring works. It is of geometric properties in his a significancy that meets its perform-ance on a store regular heat. Its appeal may not to universal— several listeners were new leaving between the movements, especially after the disproportionately long opening movement. If much of the audience felt in the dark about this symphony, this must have been the case with many of the musicians, who were themselves.

The effect of the work's infrequent performance was noticeable, especially in the opening movement. In several spots, the entrances were fuzzy and the overall sense of balance and purpose was missing. Each instrument seemed to concentrate on its own notes, with little communication with other instruments.

NOBODY CAN be expected to master everything that was ever written, and this applies even to the musicians of the DSOH, whose artistic competence is beyond question.

However, by the sound of Thursday's performance, it was evident that much more work and preparation are needed for this intricate work to sound truly overwhelming.

Even so, the intense musical state-

Boxing landscape looks fine to Lally

HE SIGN OUTSIDE Malar-key's Pub proclaims: "Congratulations, Brett Lally, Westland's champ." Known as the "Irish Hawk," the 26-year-old boxer, who now lives in Plymouth, is better known in Las Vegas and Atlantic City.

His family and friends greeted him Wednesday at Metro Airport when he arrived home from the gambling mecca after a unanimous 10-round decision over Cuban refugee Tomas Perez, the California state champ who was ranked No. 6 among junior middle weights by the World Boxing Council.

But there were no TV camera crews, no newspaper reporters waiting for him to step off the plane. Since contract and managerial problems put him out of boxing in 1985-86, Lally is 7-0 and ready to take on all omners.

With an overall record of 24-4 and 15 knockouts, Lally has become a celebrity of sorts among the professional boxing afficionados.

His brawling, muscling style made a big impression on ESPN, the national cable television network, which broadcast the fight live on Sept. 26. People around Showboat Casino, including some from undisputed heavyweight champion Mike Tyson's camp, took notice of his disciplined training regimen.

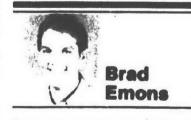

"HE'S A THROWBACK to the old fighters," said his brother Bradd, who has since taken over his training and managerial duties.

"Brett's no choir boy, he likes to have his fun like anybody else, but he's all business when he's training." Lally once was considered a choir boy type, When he graduated from John Glenn High School, he was a 119ound diver on the varsity swim

"He was considered too little for sotball," said 30-year-old Bradd, a semer boxer himself.

Todd step into the ring before he died in a 1979 car accident. Soon Brett launched his own amateur career under Paul Soucy at the Livonia Boxing Club. He later captured the Detroit Golden Gloves before turn-Lally, who once fought for a U.S. Boxing Association title at a lighter weight, got out of the sport for a while, coming home to develop his landscaping business (Lally Brothers) with Bradd.

"BRETT HAD TAKEN a lot of punishment (through 1984) and after he was out a couple of years, he came back a little older and wiser," said Bradd. "He was also a lot more bulked up."

Lally now weights a rock-solid 155 pounds and can bench press 275, considered high among boxers.

"There's nothing better to stay strong and keep in shape than doing landscaping 12 hours a day," Brett

Brett said his latest paycheck from the Perez fight was substantial. "I won't have to worry about paying the bills for the next couple of

His match maker from the east side, Lindy Lindell, is trying to get him another bout before the end of November.

"We'll go anywhere and take on all comers," Bradd said. "We were ready to taken on the Italian champion Rossi in Rome, but then things

Lally once took a fight in London on three hours' notice. He was scheduled to face British Commonwealth champion Chris Pyatt, who was ranked No. 5 by the WBA, only to have the fight canceled when promoters backed off because Lally had fought in South Africa.

"HE'S A COMPETITOR," Bradd said. "It takes guts to go to South Africa (because of apartheid), but the money is also good there. We went out there (to London) to get a rating, not because he likes to get hit."

When Brett took out unbeaten John Scully earlier this year in an East Coast match, promoters came calling again.

And as usual, Lally was a decided 2-1 underdog against Perez, who came in with a 21-3 record.

But as the fight drew near, the odds against Lally dropped to 8-5, and then 6-5 the day of the fight.

"After the weigh-ins, the line changed drastically," Brett said. "I heard somebody put $6,000 on me, so I went out and put a $100 bet on Lally got $110 back on his wager but, more important, a lot more re-

"We figure two more wins and Brett can get a title shot," Bradd said. "People like Brett because he shows a lot of heart and determination. He's also a humble kid.

"The (Perez) fight was hard, but right now Brett's excited. He's seeing the results because he's worked

SOME DAY Bradd would like to show Brett before the hometown

A local promoter, Bradd said, has proposed that Brett compete on an undercard to Ann Arbor's Booker T. Word later this month at Center Stage in Canton.

"It would be great to have him fight here," Bradd said. "But not for 400 bucks or even a $1,000." ng is worked ou

King-of-hill contest has Salem tumbling

staff writer

John Gentile never touched the ball Monday night when his No. 2-rated Livonia Churchill soccer teammates collided with top-ranked Plymouth Salem.

But the injured all-state forward probably deserves an assist for the role he played in helping to inspire the Chargers to a 1-0 victory at Centennial Educational

"It's a big win when one of your superstars doesn't even hit the field," Churchill coach John Neff said.

The Chargers, who undoubtedly should ascend to the No. 1 spot when the next poll is released Monday, rallied around Gentile's absence and made up for it with an outstanding defensive effort.

Sophomore goalkeeper Jeff Cassar, who held off a relentless second-half attack by the Rocks, was crucial to the Churchill success

"I WAS REALLY scared," he said. "That's the most pressure I've had on me - that and the (Livonia) Stevenson game.

"But I think this meant more to me and the team. because we really wanted the No. 1 spot. We were really pumped up, because we wanted to win this game for Senior forward Paul Kaliszewski was in the right place at the right time again Monday. As in Churchill's 1-0 win over defending Class A champ Stevenson, he scored the winning goal.

Kaliszewski popped the ball over the reach of Salem goalie Matt Tudor on a header at the 26:43 mark in the first half. Mike Gentile's direct kick from the left side went to Kaliszewski on the right of the Salem goal, and the latter knocked it into the net on that side.

"I tried to hit it near-post, because I figured (Tudor) would expect it to go far-post," Kaliszewski said. "He wasn't ready for it.

The loss snapped previously-unbeaten Salem's 10game winning streak and Tudor's streak of eight consec-

IT WAS A frustrating night for the Rocks, who saw a lot of shots sail wide of the net or carom off the posts as they tried desperately and failed to crack the Churchill

"I think they're mature enough to take (defeat)," Salem coach Ken Johnson said of his players. "It doesn't matter if we're 1 or 2. It didn't affect them being No. 1, and it won't affect them dropping from No. 1. They know they're good and can bounce back."

The Chargers remained undefeated, boosting their season record to 10-0, and their defense has been just as impressive as that played by Salem. They haven't been: scored on since playing in an early-season tournament

Churchill picked the right time to play what Neff call by far its best defensive game of the season.

Salem dominated the second half and had the ball in Churchill's end for most of the last 40 minutes. If the Rocks didn't have many solid shots at Cassar, they at least maintained the pressure.

BUT THE DEFENSE of Nasir Khan, Chris Muzo, Eric Shamberger and Scott Lamphear in conjunction with Cassar's goaltending held Salem at bay.

"We were a little bit on our heels at the end, but everyone held in there," said Neff, singling out Khan for a superior effort.

"We've been emphasizing defense all year. That's team defense (that Churchill played). You can't do that with one or two people."

With John Gentile on the sideline, there was a tendency to pull back and concentrate on shutting out Salem once the Chargers got the lead in what would obviously be a low-scoring contest.

"To a certain degree," Neff said, "but your best defense is still a good offense if you have it. But they were dominating the midfield in the second half.

'It's human nature to get a little lead and fall back into a shell," he added, "but they're an excellent team." .

JOHN GENTILE injured an ankle in the Livonia Franklin game last Friday and has it protected by an air cast. Neff said he didn't want to take a chance on playing him even in such a big game.

'He's too valuable," Neff said. "He was dying on the sideline, but there's too much of the season left.'

Salem's best'scoring opportunity came with 101/2 minutes left in the game when Andy Cosenza had a 1-on-1, breakaway with Khan shadowing him down the field. Cassar, however, came far out of the goal to snuff the play and, after the ball came back at him following his release, fell on it to stop the play completely. "I thought that was it, because (Cosenza) seemed to be going just right," Johnson said, "but he probably touched it one too many times."

With the Chargers expected to climb to No. 1, Neff was philosophical about the ranking. "It means everybody is shooting for you," he said, "but everybody shoots for Churchill, Stevenson and Salem because we always have good programs."

Like a cold drink on a hot day, the Plymouth Canton girls bishet-bail team is satisfying first-year coach Bob Blohm, most recently with a 76-30 blowout of Farmington at home Tuesday.

After taking a 39-13 lead at half-time, the Chiefs rolled over the Falcons in the third quarter, outscoring them 25-8.

"It was a good victory," Blohm said. "We played with good intensi-ty, and we shot well from the line." Canton, 14-of-16 shooting free throws, was led by senior center Susan Perko's 22 points. Stacey

Rocks must step aside but eye soccer rematch

LYMOUTH SALEM might have lost Round 1 in boys soccer, but how about a rematch with Livonia

The Rocks suffered their first loss and most assuredly will give up their No. 1 ranking after the No. 2 Chargers took a 1-0 victory Monday at Centennial Educational Park.

But it probably isn't the last Salem has seen of Churchill - and vice

The Rocks rate a favorable chance of beating Livonia Stevenson for the first time when they meet Monday, Oct. 9, at CEP, and that would undoubtedly pit Salem against the Chargers for the Western Lakes Activities Association title on Wednesday, Oct. 18, at CEP.

The irony of Monday's game, despite the emotionally charged at-mosphere, is that is meant absolutely nothing to the league race. It was strictly a game played for the benefit of the statewide poll, which is nothing to thumb your nose at, of course.

"If we have to lose a game, tonight was the least important," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "We have to beat Stevenson and if we win the division we'll get another shot at Churchill. I think that will motivate the boys.

"I think we can beat them," he added. "I think we dominated them more. I think we have more speed."

Churchill played without injured star John Gentile, but the Rocks did control the ball from the late first half on. Jeff Kaliszewski's header accounted for the game's only score, but Salem came up empty-handed despite its many chances.

When you play a good team, sometimes it's the breaks (that decide it)," Johnson said. "The header of theirs was the break we didn't have."

Though the Rocks saw their string of eight straight shutouts broken with the loss, Johnson was in a good mood afterward, having enjoyed seeing such a qualtiy game regardless of the outcome. For that reason, it was one he didn't mind losing, he said. Salem might also capitalize on the situation. Maybe it will bring a sense of relief for a former No. 1 team and help Salem in the long run.

It might also take some pressure and attention away Johnson's team and actually give Salem renewed in-centive for the second half of the PLYMOUTH CANTON'S football team deserves an Observer ovation after securing its first winning season in the school's 17-year history.

The Chiefs did that by beating Walled Lake Western a week ago, and now the team is 5-0. It can do no worse than 5-4, but I'm quite certain Canton will end up with a better record than that

As for the alums who were on hand last Friday night at CEP, it was the ideal game to schedule homecoming. The grads come back to see a game, and it also happens to be a historic event.

By the way, I saw a Canton alum from 1975 proudly wearing - I presume since he went to the effort of digging it out of the drawer - his old letter sweater.

That was the best example I saw to characterize the pride in what the 1989 Canton football team has accomplished, and it extends not only to the current players but former athletes as well.

SALEM'S FOOTBALL team might feel a little slighted by all the attention given the Chiefs here and in recent weeks, but we haven't forgotten or meant to ignore the fine season the Rocks are having.

I think everybody in the Plymouth-Canton community realizes, despite the rivalry that exists between the schools, the signifiance of what a Canton has done this season and what that means to a school too long saddled with a losing image in the

But the Rocks also are 5-0 and play the first of two back-to-back big games Friday when they entertain

Crunch time is here for Salem, which can either win the Lakes Division outright, force a three-way tie for first or finish third depending on what it does Friday and next week at Westland John Glenn.

As for this week, Salem and North have achieved fine defensive records to date. The Raiders play their usually aggressive brand of defense, but the North offense has struggled more than in other years.

While the Rocks aren't the offensive machine that a Farmington Hills Harrison is, they are methodical and successful on offense. While coaches say defense wins games, I believe Salem has better offensive potential, and that is why the Rocks will win Friday night.

Some teams win with rebounding, others with superior shooting, and many depend on solid defense. Walled Lake Western had all those elements in its favor - Tuesday against a less experienced Walled Lake Central team.

But most of all, Western had Holly

"Holly Miller was the whole difference in the ballgame," said Central coach Ken Butler after witnessing the 66-38 rout at Western. "She really took care of the ball for them. She's just too dominating."

Fact was, the Vikings had no one to match up with Miller. She led all scorers with 18 points, but that was a minor contribution when considering her passing, ballhandling and de-

"Everyone knows," said Warrior coach Bill St. John, whose team improved to 6-3 with the lopsided win. 'She makes us go. Tonight was a typical game for Holly. When she's clicking, she's unstoppable."

IT TOOK both Miller and her teammates a while to click against Central. The Warriors missed their first seven floor shots and were trailing 3-2 after four minutes.

Center April Blanton turned that around in a hurry, scoring twice in the low post in a 22-second span. Western finished the quarter with an ugly five-of-18 shooting, but still had an 11-6 lead.

Central's problems with Western were quickly evident. The Vikings

All those problems were compounded when Miller found her range. With 5:33 to play in the second quarter, she scored her first points of the game - a threepointer. Two-and-a-half minutes later, she hit another triple, increasing Vestern's lead to 19-6.

Miller added two more baskets before the half to keep the Warriors' ahead by-13, 25-12.

THE OUTCOME could not have been in doubt when the two teams opened the second half; certainly it wasn't by the end of the third quarter. Western riddled Central for 23 points in the period, hitting 11-of-15 shots. The Vikings made four of 11 and trailed 48-21.

"I thought we'd play better than we did." said Butler. "But we've got

It was a day where Plymouth Canton (boys) and Farmington (girls) ruled the trails of Cass Benton Park.

But not to be undone at the Redford Union cross country invitational were some outstanding individual efforts on a cool, crisp autumn Tuesday afternoon.

Both Schoolcraft College Invitational team champions were victorious in the RU meet.

On the boys side, Canton (63 points), placing five in the top 20, outlegged Salem (79), Dearborn (96) and Walled Lake Western (101).

On the girls side, Farmington avenged a loss last week to Dearborn Edsel Ford, taking the girls meet with 79 points. The Thunder-birds settled for second with 89, while Canton (120) and Redford Union (123) finished third and fourth, respectively.

One of the most intriguing races of the day occurred when Farmington junior Ben Goba, who has lost only one race all season, held off stiff challenges from Salem's Brendon Masterson and Canton's Brian Goba's time was an impressive 16:26.65 over the hilly 5,000-meter course. Masterson was clocked in 16:30.66, while Beach raced home in with me. "I felt pretty good. I've had a sore ankle, but I felt pretty good overall."

Masterson, who was sixth last month at Schoolcraft, beat his previous best time at the Cass Benton course by 20 seconds.

'The first race (at Schoolcraft) he (Goba) beat me pretty good," said the Salem senior, "But I feel I'm slowly catching up. One of these days I'll hopefully beat him, but he (Goba) keeps a rock-solid pace. He's good everywhere on the course."

Beach, a top 10 runner all season, shattered the Canton school record (at Cass Benton) by 27 seconds.

"I never thought I could run with him (Goba), because I've always been quite a bit behind," said the Canton senior. "I really tried, but he (Goba) had a faster kick. He's a hard guy to take.

Rocks take 2nd place at Pioneer

Plymouth Salem made another fine showing in weekend cross country competition.

The Rocks had their second straight second-place finish in a boys invitational Saturday at the 13-team Ann Arbor Pioneer meet.

Salem's Brendon Masterson was second overall in 16:26, and the next three runners were bunched together in the teens. John Thomas was 15th (17:05). Dave Hamway 16th (17:06) and Brian Uryga 18th (17:11).

Coach Geoff Baker credited Todd Cimo, who was 22nd at 17:24, for running a hard race. Mike Patterson placed 30th (17:55) and Samir Bhavsar 32nd (17:57).

"I was very happy," Baker said. "Our 2-3-4-5 runners were bunched together. The pack is getting tighter.

"We're kinda gaining on the frontrunners in the state. We hope to make a strong showing in the next few weeks."

Pioneer won the meet with 30 points. Dearborn Divine Child was third (98), Redford Union ninth (240).

Salem had two others in the top 20: John Thomas was ninth and Dave Hamway took 14th. "The whole team is getting better and better every meet," said Master-

Meanwhile, Farmington had only one thing on its mind in the girls race - beat Edsel Ford. Jennifer Kiel did her part again, finishing first in 19:20.87, while trying to shake a cold and North Farmington's Lisa Rives (19:22.42) and Walled Lake Western freshman Jennifer Kay (19:30.32). "Today I tried to get my mind off my cold and run the best I could," said Kiel, who was also the Schoolcraft champ. "The wind hit me hard the first mile-and-a-half. I didn't feel great, but it was good conditions for the team and I'm happy for them because Edsel beat us pretty good at the Shrine Invitational." ROUNDING OUT the Farmington contingent was Jennifer Derwinski (11th), Allison Davis (11th), Margaret Martin (16th) and Cheryl Casaroll

Rives, meanwhile, has been shadowing Kiel most of the season.

We fell into a pace, but we were battling all the way," said the North senior. "I think both of us were giving everything we had. I had one Jennifer (Kiel) in front of me and another Jennifer (Kay) behind me. Once in awhile I heard somebody call 'Lisa' in between the 'Jennifers."

Rives ran the race at a slight disadvantage when she brought two different pair of spikes (shoes).

"I ran in my 'flats' and there was no traction," the North runner explained. "I said to myself, "This is great sliding along the hills.' I'm a senior and you're supposed to 'remember what to bring,

"But it was great weather. Usually at Cass it's either rainy or muddy. Today I really got into fall (weath-

Canton's top finisher was Amy
Smith, who took fourth. The Chiefs' Adrienne Garrow took 20th.

That's what cheerbaders always shout, right? Well, there'll be a lot of that, which includes the real this weekend in two of the bigas involving Observerland

On Friday night, the second of the annual three-part series to deter-mine the Lakes Division champion in the Western Lakes Activities Association has once-beaten North Farmington at unbeaten Plymouth Salem, hich will celebrate homecoming.

North's only loss was to Westland John Glenn, which plays Salem next week either under winner-take-all circumstances or with the Rocks able to force a possible three-way

The Raiders and Salem are always noted for their defense. And this year. North has allowed two touchwas, the Rocks three. Each team is three shutouts.

But the epitome of defense is that played by Redford Catholic Central, which has yet to be scored upon in five games.

That record will be put to the test in the other big game Sunday when the No. 4-rated Shamrocks face topranked Birmingham Brother Rice in the annual Boys Bowl game at Pontiac Wisner Stadium.

CC, never the offensive marvel, is averaging just under 17 points a game. But, oh, that defense!

The Warriors have been beaten five straight times by CC, including a 21-7 victory by the underdog Shamrocks a year ago. But Rice has potent offense led by quarterback Bob Utter. Rice averages 26 points on offense and has the defense to match, giving up four a game.

In the on-going battle between friendly prognosticators, the up-todate tally has Brad Emons maintaining a one-game edge over Dan O'Meara. Both were 12-3 last week, putting Emons at 55-16 for the season, O'Meara 54-17.

Both misfired on the Thurston-Melvindale and Northville-Churchill games Clarenceville was O'Meara's downfall once again, while Emons called for an upset of Catholic Central that didn't happen.

Now then, let's see what the boys predict for Week No. 6:

FRIDAY'S GAMES (All games 7:30 p.m.)

Redford Union at Garden City: Observerland's two representatives to the Northwest Suburban League on head-to-head Friday, so aree pride will be at stake. A loss could mean a basement finish for either the visiting Panthers (0-2, 0-5) or the host Cougars (0-2, 0-5). They're the only NSL teams without a league win. Pick: Emons says Garden City actually won the coin toss, but O'Meara takes an aducated guess and RU over such random means.

Red. Thurston at Allen Fark: Conside this: Taylor Truman gave Allen Park (4-1), usually the best learn in the Tri-River League, its first loss last week, 21-20. And that came a week after the Engles (2-3) best Trumen 10-9. That's certainly food for thought as we ponder this game Thurston hean't been blown out in any game, and its last two defeats occurred in overtime. Pick: As much as we wish the Eagles well, they probably drew an angry Allen Park's number on the wrong week stland Glenn at Liv. Stevenson: The Rockets (5-0) will be waiting eagerly to learn the results of the North-Sa game. Regardless of how important next week's clash with Salem will be, Glenn must take care of business against the Spartans (2-3) . Pick: The Rockets will be 6-0 going into the showdown with Salem.

N. Farmington at Ply. Salem: It's usually a low-scoring game when these two defense-minded ball clubs go at it. That's been the case the last two years, and North (4-1) has won both games - 10-0 two years ago and 13-7 in overtime last fall. Defense will dominate again, but Salem's (5-0) skill and might on offense could mean a different winner. Pick: The unbreakable wishbone brings the Rocks good luck.

Ply. Canton at Northville: Canton (5-0) must avoid descending into an emotional valley Friday. The Chiefs reached a peak last week by beating Walled Lake Western and assuring themselves of their first winning season, and there's another peak coming next week when they meet Farmington Hills Harrison, the No. 1-rated team in Class B. If Canton hopes to play Harrison for the Western Division title, it will have to be sharp against upset-minded Northville (2-3). Pick: Canton's quickness is too much for the Mustangs.

W.L. Western vs. Farm. Harrison at Walled Lake Central: Franklin, came the closest anyone has to stopping the Hawks, and that was in a 31-0 victory for Harrison. The Hawks (5-0) are still averaging 44 points a game, and the defense has three shutouts and has given up an average of one TD per game. A young Western team (1-4) has its best days ahead of it, but Harrison is still king for now. Pick: The Hawks will have more hootin' and hollerin' to do after winning

SATURDAY'S GAMES (All games at 1 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Churchill at Liv. Franklin: The challenge for Franklin will be to stay up emotionally after playing with inspiration (on defense at least) in that 31-0 loss to Harrison. The Patriots (1-4) held the Hawks 16 points under their per-game average and the usually-elusive Harrison quarterback Mill Coleman to minus-18 yards rushing. Churchill (0-5) is mired in season-long losing streak. Pick: O'Meara says Franklin musters enough offense to win. Emons goes with Churchill.

aid he fighting to stay did of the celler in this game. The Vigings (1-4) traver't won street beating ballong in the Opener. Paymington got its first touchdown last week in a 42-7 loss to Westland John Glenn. Pick: Comparative accres tell us this one should be close, but Central, by virtue of its one victory, ratés the edge.

Liv. Clarenceville at B.H. Granbrook: The Trojans (4-1) had a storybook start, winning their first four games under new coach Vic Balaj, but Lutheran West cut short the honeymoon last Friday, winning 8-0. Clarenceville is no doubt eager to start another victory streak, but Cranbrook (2-3), which lost 16-13 to West, won't be an easy touch. Pick: Rule No. 194 in the prep prediction handbook says: Pick the Trojans to win if you think they might lose.

St. Hedwig at Lutheran Westland: The Warriors (3-2) did well against another Catholic League opponent, beating Mount Clemens Cardinal Mooney 8-8 in the opener. St. Hedwig, Mooney and St. Florian are tied for second place in D-Bracket with 3-1 records. St. Hedwig and Mooney also are 3-2 overall. Pick: The law of averages come into play. Lutheran Westland comes up short this time.

St. Agatha at Waterford Our Lady: The Aggles (4-1) have been so success ful coach John Goddard never gets a chance to dry out from all the victory dips. And guess what? This week the Aggles play Our Lady OF THE LAKES. This will be a tough game since the Lakers also are 4-1, but if St. Agatha is successful, Goddard will have his choice of water for the post-game ritual. Pick: In addition to Our Lady, Goddard better scout the takes, too.

Bishop Borgess vs. Bishop Gallagher at Garden City Junior High: No. 4ranked Catholic Central beat the Spartans 10-0 and Gallagher 24-0. Borgess (1-4), therefore, would appear to be the favorite here, right? Well, hold on. It's probably not that simple. Neither team is in a class with CC, but the Lancers (2-3) still have some pretty good talent. Pick; Gallagher takes a victory back to the East

Wayne Memorial at Dearborn Fordson, 1:30 p.m.: The Zebras (4-1) are having a fine year, but so are the Trac-tors, who lead the Wolverine A Conference at 4-0 and are 5-0 overall. Wayne will have its hands full trying to stop the Fordson rushing game, which features Youset Sareini, Pick: The Zebras suffer a temporary setback in what will be still a fine season in the end.

SUNDAY'S GAME

Redford CC vs. Birm. Brother Rice. 1:30 p.m. at Pontiac Wisner Stadium: Will CC's string of good luck in one of the state's biggest rivalries hold out? CC can tie the series (14-13-1) with a win. Can the Shamrocks hold the line against a quality Rice offense? The Warriors, with three shutouts, have a good defense, too. Notre Dame and DeLaSalle scored on Rice the last two weeks after the Warriors had begun to substitute. Pick: O'Meara thought Rice was due last year but it wasn't. The 13-0 win over Ann Arbor Ploneer is convincing proof CC can do it again. Emons counters with Rice.

North celebrates tie with Chiefs

Coach Henry Klimes told the boys on his North Farmington soccer team not to spare the Gatorade if and when the Raiders won a game.

There is no title to be won and no money to be

So what's the driving force that brings two world-ranked tennis players together to perform in an exhibition match? Pride and the opportuni-ty to defeat a each other without all the pressures that go along with tournament play.

Paul Smiley looks back and ahead

special writer

AUL SMILEY STILL keeps an eye on the future. Eighty years of changes in the music business have taught him that it is the alert businessman who finds the next craze in home entertainment before it catches the public's interest

"We are standing at the door of the new age," said the 89-year-old Birmingham businessman.

His latest gimmick is the Max Midium, a piano that does everything. "The market moves too fast. It is terrible when a new instrument is invented and 60 days later it is replaced by a new fad.

Surrounding him on the floor of his music store were acoustical pianos of all makes: a Smiley Brothers piano, a Bechstein, numerous Kimballs, Schimmels and a Korean make by the name Dae Wo.

"I BELIEVE that the acoustical guitar and the acoustical piano will never be replaced by electronic instruments. These are the source for the sound.'

Smiley recalled the craze over the Hammond Organ. Grinnell Brothers had 59 stores throughout the country and had to declare bankruptcy when that craze abruptly ended.

Smiley Brothers had five stores and had to close three of them, leaving his stores in Birmingham and at 5510 Woodward, Detroit open.

The finest piano made today? It is definitely the Bechstein," he said. Smiley Brothers provided St. Hugo Catholic Church of Bloomfield Hills with what pianist James Tocco referred to one of the finest pianos made, a nine-foot concert grand Bechstein, worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

PAUL SMILEY HAS BEEN in the music business since childhood. He has worked with the Steinways, the Baldwins, the Bechsteins and the Kimballs in the piano business and accommodated the great artists of

He reminisced about the changes in the music business since he went to work for his father in Columbus, Ky. When his family bought their store, pump organs were the popular form of home entertainment.

The Hecker House, 5510 Woodward, Detroit, now the home of Smiley Bros. Co., was built 1888-1891 for $47,000. It was built of Indiana limestone with a steep, gray slate roof. It had 49 rooms in the three-story main structure and service buildings and Smiley came to Detroit in 1927 as the manager of the Steinway division of Grinnell Brothers. He managed the Steinway store in Cincinnati and a Baldwin store in Denver before he opened his own business in 1937 with his brother. His brother died in 1943.

A pottery show and sale at the Townsend Hotel of Birmingham, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 12-14, will be like a large creative family gathering.

The 10 potters, all area women, became fast friends as they polished their skills at pottery making in the studio on the Royal Oak campus of Oakland Community College.

"This show is as much about our friendship as it is about our pottery," said Priscilla Eggen of Pleasant Ridge. "What started as a hobby has grown into a passion.'

"We're a support group for each other," said Mixie Hockman of Birmingham. Carole Berhorst of Bloomfield Township added, "We've found we can intertwine children with careers and it has grown into much more than we anticipated it would."

Berhorst said she thinks they all came to the college's program out of an interest in clay and Hockmann said that none of the 10 are "out-to-lunch people."

But, whatever the reason, these. otters, all married, ranging in age from about 40-60 and combined total of 25 children, found camaraderie, support, excitement and long lasting friendships from their involvement. Berhorst said, "A

Since her husband Geoffrey is one of the owners of the Townsend Hotel. the location wasn't ever a question. Their work is functional and decorative - much of it is made to be eaten from, cooked with and is oven and dishwasher proof - a fact that seems to surprise many buyers. Several also make and will be selling

The other members of the group of 10 are Lynn Gray, Lynne Howes, Dee Woods, Marsha Fischer, Cec Walters, Nancy Stockmann and Mary Ann Grauf.

There is a 7-9 p.m. champagne reception on Thursday. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m Friday and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday. The hotel is at 100 Townsend Street, Birmingham.

N CASE you inven't heard, let me tell you a little about Rob Eminer. The 36-year-old writer of detective fiction could be one of the best-kept secrets in Michigan. I have no clue as to why.

To date, Westland's writer-in-residence has written 26 short stories (most of which can be found in Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine) and six crime novels.

Five of his short stories and two of his novels,

"Dirty Work" and "The Back-Door Man," have been nominated for the Private Eye Writers of America Shamus Award. In 1986, his short story. "Fly Away Home," was named Best Short Story of the Year by PWA. That same year, Kantner's "The Back-Door Man" received the Shamus Award for Best Paperback Novel.
All of this has been accomplished in less than seven years, by the way. And while he's been racking up all these literary credits, there's also been the matter of holding down a full-time job as an advertising executive.

The robust, bespectacled Navy veteran, who looks something like an English professor moonlighting as a plainclothesman, seems, now and then, almost unaware of all his success

MAYBE THERE'S been no time to consider the matter. Presently, he's putting together another short story, just finishing up a new novel, and looking ahead to another.

His newly-published "Hell's Only Half Full" (Bantam, $3.50) is the fourth novel in a series featuring Kantner's maintenance man-detective, Ben Perkins, a cigar-smoking Detroit native with a weakness for cold Stroh's, black cof-fee, Calvin and Hobbes, and "the smoking guitar work of Mr. Robin Trower,"

The briskly-moving tale (not a whodunit) follows Perkins as he sets out to track down Kevin Witkowski, an errant 18-year-old who also happens to be the son of one of Perkins' old flames (another weakness). His search for the boy, who has disappeared as his father lies dying at Harper Hospital, takes Perkins on a long and convoluted search through Detroit and environs. and up against a gang of particularly repulsive neo-Nazi Skinheads. Before it's over, Perkins has uncovered some pretty ugly stuff creeping and crawling around in the underbelly of society, and he's also uncovered a thing or two about " himself that isn't too pretty, either.

If there is a continuing "theme" in his books, Kantner said it's simply that the solution and conclusion of the story is never a complete victory for Perkins.

"DETECTIVE FICTION is almost by definition not a realistic depiction of life," he said. "But I try to get as close as I can. I try to give (Perkins) very human characteristics. He's got money problems, woman problems, his car breaks down, people get mad at him — the things that happen to all of us.

"Almost always, the (fictional) detective has to prevail, has to solve the crime. But I never let Perkins prevail 100 percent. He always pays a price of some kind. In 'Hell's Only Half Full,' a lid gets shot, which absolutely scares the hell out of him. He feels very guilty because he's formation was a

(earlier) manipulated the kid, used him, and put him into the situation, which caused him to get shot."

Is Ben Perkins modeled after Rob Kantner? "In terms of his background and the details of his life, there's no resemblance," said Kantner, who has never worked as an investigator.

"He was born and grew up in Detroit, and I grew up in Georgia. That's where his hillbilly background comes from - his parents are from there. My parents came from Ohio. Also, I don't smoke cigars."

Kantner, speaking of Perkins' role as an apartment building maintenance man, said "fixing is a talent that I definitely don't have, ei-

"On the other hand, Ben Perkins is a 'fixer." He gets satisfaction out of correcting things. And, in a sense, it's the role he fills as a detective, although he knows things can never be put back exactly the way they were."

KANTNER LIKES to emphasize that there's no weighty "statement" or "message" in any of

"I always try to avoid (that)," he said. "In my teen-age years, I went through a period of writing incredible novels with incredible, sweeping statements, and I got that all out of my system

"To be very honest with you, I don't think anybody, in his or her heart, cares much about statements. I think some people say they care because they think they should — that they're somehow not intellectual if they don't.

"I just don't have any particular desire to preach to people, or to change people, or anything like that, though,

"I've had some people tell me that something I wrote moved them or made them think or whatever. And that's the most flattering thing you can hear as a writer. But it's not something that, when I sit down to write, is my main aim." What might that be?

'As I write, the thing I try to keep in mind is that I don't want the reader ever to put the book down. I'd rather they let the house burn as to put down my book, and that's how compelling I try

"That's the kind of thing I like, as a reader. I try to write for people for whom reading is a diversion, an entertainment, a form of escape a way to fill the time while you're waiting for the doctor to call you in, or for the plane to leave, or maybe for getting through an afternoon at your mother-in-law's house.

Developing a sense of patience in photography can not only offer a welcome break from the turbulent pace of every day life, but it will reward you with more impact-filled pictures.

How do you develop photo-related patience? For starters, slow down and study your subject carefully and thoroughly.

Let's use the approaching fall color change as an example You've just driven out to the country and discovered a clu of trees that are exploding with magnificent colors. Wait, don't snap that picture yet. Remember, we're nurturing a sense of patience. Start by really looking at those trees. Walk around them, get to know them and begin to get a feeling of the way there being life. they're being lit.

Ask yourself some questions. Would a different time of day improve the picture? Should I move in close or remain further back? Would a low or high vantage point make a difference? Is there an approaching cloud pattern that is worth waiting for? Is there a fence or road that would serve as an effective "lead-

Upholsterer requires trust

If you are considering reupholstering rather than buying new pieces, be sure to use an upholsterer in whom you have complete confidence.

The piece of furniture that is being recovered must be stripped down to the bare frame. There is very little saving in reupholstering, but if you have the comfort you need in a particular piece, "go for it."

A new color or a change in the skirt of a sofa or chair, gives a new feeling. A corner box pleat or dressmaker skirt that is shirred on or softly gathered at the corners will give a new look. Fringe tassels and braid are very "in" for cushions - seat, back or toss.

I have just completed a living room in which the old upholstered pieces were recovered. The loose cushionback, Lawson-style sofa now has a skirt that is softly gathered at the corners.

The sofa previously had a kick-pleat skirt. The seat and back cushions are trimmed in moss fringe, which has the colors of the floral print used on the sofa and two round tufted back pictures are simple, they are clever, colorful and appeal to a sense of fun.

Krentzin is a University of Michigan graduate who studied art at the undergraduate level and later earned a master's in library science. A frustrated toy designer, he recalls loving "Chutes and Ladders" and "Candyland" as a child. His inspiration for the games he has created comes from an blend of all the games he played in his younger days. Krentzin, a librarian in neighboring Berkley, knows that kids' games have to be faster and more visual than adult games and both features are built into his work.

FUTURE PLANS CALL for a library game where children learn that a library is for more than just checking out books, and perhaps some games focused on other holidays.

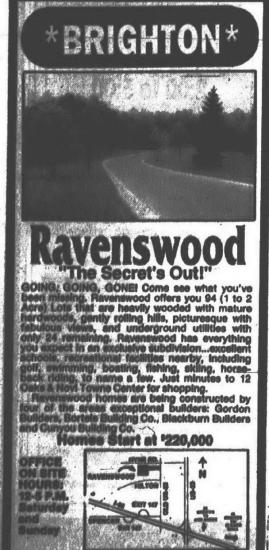

The games are available at the School Bell, a er store in Grosse Pointe, or by mailing $4.95 to: Alex's Fun and Learning Games, P.O. Box 810, Birmingham 48012.

The new Radisson Resort and Conference Center in Ypsilanti features $250,000 worth of landscaping.

Away from the asphalt jungle

By Doug Funke staff writer

Developers and builders have come a long way from days when landscaping seemed almost like an afterthought to a project.

Now, between complying with land use laws established by municipalities and trying to attract buyers or tenants into residential or commercial developments, hundreds of thousands of dollars get spent on trees, shrubs, berms, flowers and water at a single building site.

"I think there's a growing concern with the integration of an activity into the community as a whole," said William Allen, an associate professor in the college of architecture and design at Lawrence Technologial University.

"A good landscape development - site plan - will facilitate that."

PEOPLE APPARENTLY are iscilitating.

• Bernard Glieberman, president

Fifteen years ago, the landscape contractor 'was told to get it green, throw a few trees on and get out. Contractors now are getting into brick work, decks, ponds, gazebos.'

- Dennis Crimboli Crimboli Landscape Contractors of Crosswinds Communities, said he spent $1 million planting mature trees rather than saplings at Greenpointe Condominiums, a 112-acre site at 14 Mile and Halsted in West Rloomfield.

. Jim and Marilyn Funk, developers and builders of a 30-unit condominium community, The Legends, on Halsted just south of 14 Mile in Farmington Hills, said they spent upward of $300,000 landscaping that 10-acre parcel.

• Dennis Crimboli, president of Crimboli Landscape Contractors in Canton, said he did upward of $250,000 worth of work landscaping the new Radisson Resort and Conference Center in Ypsilanti.

"Landscaping is a requirement in most communities," Glieberman said. "In condominiums or any kind of housing . . . you want to put in materials that are mature. No one wants to wait eight to 10 years for things to grow.'

The Funks built three ponds and seeded a meadow with wildflowers not only to comply with state wetland requirements, but also because they liked the concept and figured buyers would, too.

"THE WHOLE point is we wanted people to feel it was a natural transition from rough-rough, to wildflower to fine planting," Jim said. "I think it's a different concept."

"Landscaping sets a mood for me," Marilyn said.

Crimboli, who built his company from a two-person operation in 1972 to 35 now, has seen a dramatic change in the business.

"What happened maybe 10 years ago, maybe 15 years ago, (was that) the landscaper generally last person in on a project," he said. "The budget was sometimes limited and he was told to get it green, throw a few trees on and get out.

"Contractors now are getting into

Selling or beautifying

By Doug Funke

It's like a variation of the the old chicken-egg

Do developers and builders landscape because its required by local ordinance or because it

Probably for both reasons in different proportions on a case-by-case basis.

"I don't know if it's out of the goodness of their heart or the necessity of getting approval," said William Allen, an associate professor in the college of architecture and design at Lawrence Technological University.

"Developers are being forced to be more sensive to the landscape as it exists and to regenerate Cafter development has taken place," Allen said. Landscaping beyond minimum requirements can be an effective marketing tool.

"YOU'RE GOING to do what sells papers. They're going to do what sells property," said Thomas Bird, senior planner for West Bloomfield Township.

Bernard Glieberman said he went way beyond what was required by West Bloomfield when he built Greenpointe Condominiums. He received a landscape award from the Great-

West Bloomfield Chamber of Commerce this mmer for his efforts. "There's not one factor that causes someone to bby, but landscaping is a factor, and I feel a very important one," Glieberman said. Pam and Jeff MicAllef, who own a two-bedroom, three-bath unit at Greenpointe, prove Glieberman's point.

"Specifically, it offered a beautiful setting,"
Jeff said of the attraction. "They left a lot of trees and they did a beautiful job of landscaping. They have a lot of flowers, water and in front, a bridge from bathhouses to the pool."

Study condo scene before making commitment

But condos aren't for everyone and the Farmington Hills-base Michigan Association of CPAs urgs prospective buyers to review the pros and cons before buying a condo.

In many ways, owning a condomi-nium isn't very different from owning a conventional, single-family ce. You secure a mortgage, pay real estate taxes and gain many of the same tax deductions as other homeowners. But don't be fooled into thinking that both types of ownership are the same.

IN A condominium, you own an individual unit was well as a share of the development's common property and facilities, such as a bwimming pool or tennis court. But you generally do not own the property surrounding your condo and may not even have final say on the look of your condo's exterior.

not the owner's concern, the fees for such services are. In some developments, monthly maintenance charges can run as high as several hundred dollars - in addition to mortgage payments.

Consider, too, that most condo owners not only have close neighbors but also have to abide by numerous community association rules on decorating exteriors, landscaping and using the development's common grounds and facilities.

FOR THE MOST part, condominium owners do get the same tax treatment as other homeowners. You are entitled to deduct mortgage interest, property taxes and any casualty losses you may incur. In addition, all the rules relating to the sale of a principal residence apply to condominiums, including the oncein-a-lifetime $125,000 exclusion of profits to anyone 55 or older who meets the ownership and use requirements.

Some special tax considerations exist solely for condo owners. In rare instances, part of the monthly on your federal income tax return.

Before buying a condo, you should try to investigate the type of reserve-fund offered by the development. Remember, not all condos are equal. Your actual financial liability for a condo can vary greatly depending on several factors, the reserve fund being just one.

Mortgage terms, for example, can be confusing. If the condo developers offer financing packages, be cau-tious. In some cases, a deep discount in loan rates masks steep increases in future payments. If you finance through a developer, note the term of the mortgage and the annual percentage rate. Figure out what your monthly payments will be not only this year, but what they may be five or 10 years from now.

WHEN CALCULATING the actual cost of a condo, you also need to determine the exact purpose of the monthly maintenance fees. How much money is targeted for future expenses? Are security or other services, such as garbage collection, included? Are any major repairs pending?

Bylaws can also place limitations on your ability to rant your condo to some e - a factor that can be of critical importance if the condn is a second home. The rules and bylaws may also place restrictions on your and home-entertainment activities, such as barbeques and parties.

MUNICIPALITIES RESPONDED to concerns about overbuilding in the 1970s by setting minimum landscaping requirements.

Livonia, for instance, now requires that 15 percent of the total area developed for commercial or office use be set aside for landscaping.

In multiple-family residential areas like condominiums or apart-ments, specific landscape plans in-cluding tree varieties and sizes are reviewed and approved.

Troy requires a 10-foot wide greenbelt from commercial lot lines plus landscaping of an additional 10 percent of a site area counted only from the front and side of buildings. At least one tree is required for every 30 feet of frontage.

Move toward making a list

By Robin Gaines appoint writer

Moving is considered one of the most stressful experiences befalling man or beast. According to mental health professionals, it rates right up there with changing jobs and having a baby.

baby.
Still, it is an experience most will go through at least once in their lives.

Whether you are moving from your parents' home into an apartment or dormitory 10 miles away or are moving your family of four plus a dog, cat and rooms of furniture across country, the key to surviving the experience is organization.

In the last year, I have had the unfortunate nightmare of moving twice. Once with a month-old baby; the second time pregnant.

In both cases, we moved about 35 miles. Not the other side of the world, but enough of a change to make you miss close neighbors, favorite restaurants and video stores.

But going through the second move wasn't as stressful as the first, and I'm convinced it was because I was so well organized. What made the experience bearable was keeping up-to-date lists and getting things done early.

Here are a few hints that helped me survive the ordeal.

ONCE YOU KNOW a move is inevitable and before you put your house up for sale, take inventory of what is in your home.

Now is the time to pitch old magazines, used cans of paint (call your solid waste disposal service for information on how to do this) and broken lamps you've been meaning to fix.

Hold a garage sale for items like used baby clothes and furniture, outgrown bikes, books and records you don't want.

Remember, one of the best things about moving is that it gives you the opportunity to start fresh without taking a lot of excess baggage with you to your new house.

An inventory of furniture and household items will also help moving companies give you a more accurate estimate on what it will cost to move you from one house to another.

Bibi Winfield, author of "Moving: Checklists, Planning Schedules, and Do-ahead Reminders for a Hassle-free Move," recommends taking inventory room by room and writing down exactly what items you intend to move.

Once the house is sold, contact several moving companies for free estimates on what it will cost to move your belongings. Request that representatives from the various companies survey your home prior to quoting you a price.

Keep a list of the companies, quotes and what services they provide. Will the company pack for you? Unpack? Supply boxes? How many movers will the company have loading and unloading the truck? What does the company's liability insurance cover in the event of loss or damage to your furnishings?

WITH MOVING costs running anywhere from $500 to $20,000 it's important to get your questions answered before you commit to one particular company.

For those moving for the first time who have not yet accumulated rooms of furniture and years of junk, there are weekend movers who provide nothing more than a pair of strong shoulders and a truck.

Usually cheaper, these operations sometimes carry no insurance. If something is lost or damaged, the company or individual is not held responsible.

There are also companies that specialize in moving such items antiques, paintings and pianos. Again, make sure you understand ahead of time what's covered by insurance.

Two months before the move, Winfield recommends photographing valuables like jewelry, painting, antiques and crystal in the event an item will have to be replaced.

One of the best things about moving is that it gives you the opportunity to start fresh without taking a lot of excess baggage with you to your new house.

Next, if you have contracted with a company that does not provide packing services, you'll want to start the arduous task yourself as soon as possible. Start collecting sturdy, clean boxes from local grocery and liquor stores. Begin room by room packing items you won't need for awhile: books, records, linens, knickknacks, crystal and china. Repeat this process until you are a few days from the move.

MAKE SURE each box packed is labeled with its contents and what room it will occupy in the new house ("bath towels, upstairs bathroom"). Winfield recommends not using big boxes since they are hard to lift when packed and are too bulky to fit in a truck or car.

Wrap all breakable items with newspaper and mark the box "Fragile."

Closer to moving day, set aside a box from the bedroom, bathroom and kitchen that contains essential items you will need the first few days in your new house. Make sure the boxes are marked differently then the others.

One month before the move, start sending change-of-address cards (which can be picked up free of charge at the post office) to credit card companies, banks, businesses, clubs, organizations and family and friends.

Most magazine subscriptions request that you notify them of your new address eight weeks in advance.

Arrange to have services such as gas, electricity, phone, cable TV, water and trash pickup canceled for a particular date and installed at your new address.

One week before the move, Winfield recommends closing out all bank accounts, finishing any last-minute housework (like cleaning the oven) and saying goodbye to neighbors.

FOR THOSE MOVING out of state, this is the time to pick up traveler's checks, secure all valuables you are taking with you, and assemble last-minute items you are taking on the trip, such as medications, maps, toys for the kids, clothes and toiletries.

On moving day, double check closets and cabinets for items the movers might have missed. Do this before you sign the delivery papers (or bill of lading).

Before the movers pull out of the driveway with all your worldly possessions, make sure they have directions to the new house and a contact phone number. Winfield suggests writing down the truck's license plate number. case.

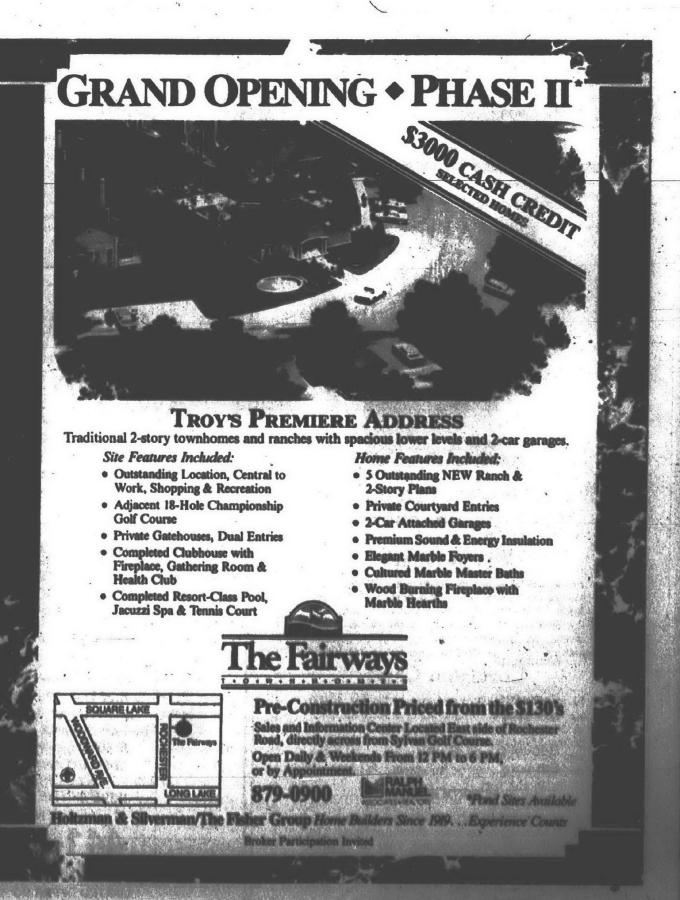

Make sure to drop the house keys off at your Realtor's office.

After the movers unload the truck, inspect all pieces (boxes as well as furniture) and list anything lost or damaged on the delivery papers before signing.

Once in your new home, the real job begins unpacking get.

Once in your new home, the real job begins: unpacking, getting used to unfamiliar surroundings and meeting new neighbors.

As Winfield writes: "Your new neighborhood won't always look so new. Enjoy the freshness."

Writing a classified ad that gets results—whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise— is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Give the reader specific Information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the Item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use explete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.
