Prison escape triggers security probe

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The recent escape of two inmates has sparked an investigation of security at Plymouth Township's Western Wayne Correctional Facility.

While minimum security inmates have been known to walk away from work details near the prison, the escapes on Christmas Eve were from the part of the prison thought to be the most secure.

The escapes were the first from that secure area in four years, said warden Luela Burke.

"We are examining our security systems and tightening them up," said Ralph Morgan, administrative assistant to Burke.

Yet, Morgan said, the investigation won't be finished until the two prisoners — Frank Schanault and Bruce White — are interviewed by the Michigan State Police, who are conducting the investigation of prison security.

"The process probably won't be complete until we get a chance to get at these prisoners," Morgan said.

CURRENTLY, the inmates are being held at the Bristol, Va., city jail. It was in nearby Wytheville, Va., that local police caught the pair Dec. 29 after they boarded a bus.

Because they now face federal charges stemming from the escape, and from the kidnapping of a Dearborn Heights woman, it's unclear when or if the inmates will be returned, said Morgan and FBI special agent Hank Glaspie.

But Wayne Beaman, U.S. marshal for western Virginia, said that later this week, "We're sending them your way. They'll be heading toward Detroit."

Meanwhile, state police are reviewing prison security. Morgan said the investigation includes a review of electronics, guard assignments, a prison tracking system that charts the whereabouts of prisoners at all times, a pass system, and prisoner assignments.

"ALL THESE systems working together should keep track of all prisoners at all times," Morgan said. "We have to evaluate all systems to see what failed and what didn't fail."

He declined to be more specific about the investigation or prison safeguards to keep prisoners in, citing security reasons.

After the inmates fled the prison yard Dec. 24 — investigators have said they aren't sure how — tracks in the snow suggested the men headed a short distance southwest to the Metro West industrial park.

There, a vehicle was waiting for them, investigators speculate.

John Schofer, a student at Livonia Franklin High, carefully details his ice sculpture that will be on display in Plymouth.

Magical kingdom of ice awaits festival visitors

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

If one of your New Year's resolutions is to chill out, the Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular is the place for you.

From the wee hours of Thursday, Jan. 11, through Sunday, Jan. 21, downtown Plymouth will be transformed into an ice kingdom of koala bears in trees, reindeer, penguins, dragons, seahorses, cars, ships — you name it.

Ice carvings fashioned by well-known artists from throughout the United States and Canada are expected to draw nearly half a million visitors to Plymouth.

As of this morning, shipments of 400,000 pounds of ice began arriving in Kellogg Park; and professional and student sculptors went to work, chisels and chainsaws in hand. Artists will continue carving Tuesday and Wednesday.

Beginning at 5 a.m. Thursday, street sculptures will be placed atop bunting-draped pedestals lining Main Street, Penniman, Ann Arbor Trail, Forest and streets throughout Old Village.

From 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Saturday, 60 student carvers from Michigan, Illinois, Montana, Texas, Florida, Colorado, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York will compete in The Gathering in Kellogg Park, said Pam Kosteva, executive director of the festival.

Saturday's competition has been closed. "There's a waiting list to participate," Kosteva said.

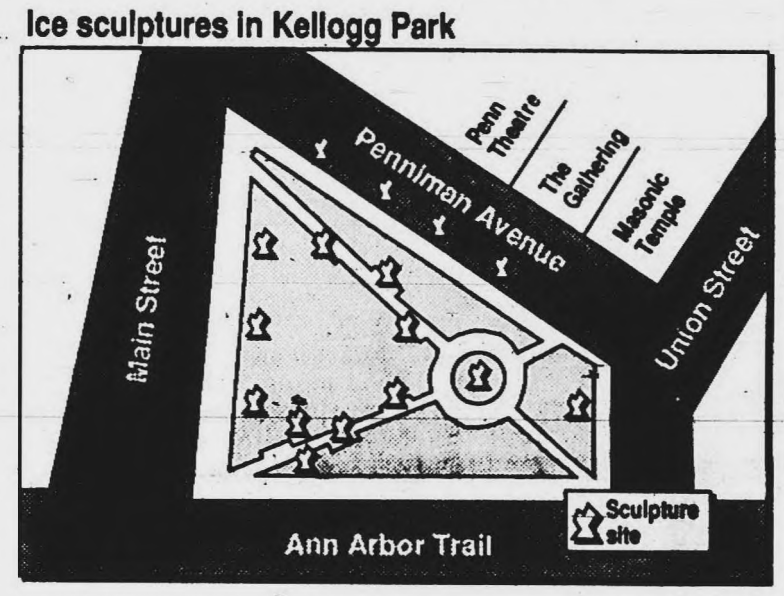

On Saturday and Sunday Jan. 13-14, radio station WOMC will broadcast live from Fred Hill's Haberdashers on Main Street.

On Monday, Jan. 15, more ice will be delivered, and more sculptures carved.

THE 82ND AIRBORNE DIVISION All-American Chorus of Fort Bragg, N.C., will highlight Tuesday's festivities. Performance times and locations weren't final at press time, but coordinators were trying to schedule two shows at the Penn Theatre, as well as an evening performance in the bandshell in Kellogg Park.

Appearing in their maroon berets, ascots, uniforms and spit-shined jump boots, the 27 paratroopers often sing their repertoire of patriotic and contemporary songs at pre-game or halftime shows at professional and college football and baseball games.

DNR rejects Amoco Oil Co. cleanup plan

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

The underground oil spill at Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street won't be cleaned up any time soon.

A cleanup plan submitted in October by Amoco Oil Co. was rejected last week by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. It's also been rejected by affected property owners.

The proposal is the second such plan submitted by the oil company. The first one was rejected because it addressed just 75 percent of the contamination.

"The proposal does not completely or satisfactorily address the contamination as a result of the loss at the Amoco gas station," said David Rymph, environmental quality manager with the DNR's environmental response division.

"The company has failed to date to complete their own work plan to determine the full vertical and horizontal extent of the contamination.

A staffing problem in the DNR's Northville district office has prohibited the DNR's timely review of the work plans with Amoco, added Rymph.

"We're hopeful we will have a formal comment on their proposed plans by the 15th of January."

For years, thousands of gallons of fuel oil and gasoline have leaked from underground tanks at the Amoco service station at Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street.

The area has been on a DNR list of contaminated sites since 1979.

The DNR and the state attorney general's office recently launched a joint investigation of Amoco after learning that no other company operating in Michigan has more contaminated sites.

As of Dec. 15, there were 68 polluted sites, according to the DNR's Leaking Underground Storate Tank office.

AMOCO SPOKESMAN Walt Brown said he couldn't comment because the company hasn't been informed of the rejection.

"We have not been officially notified that the plan has not been approved. Therefore it would be inappropriate for us to comment on specific things that were in the plan since we don't know for sure this is the case," said Brown.

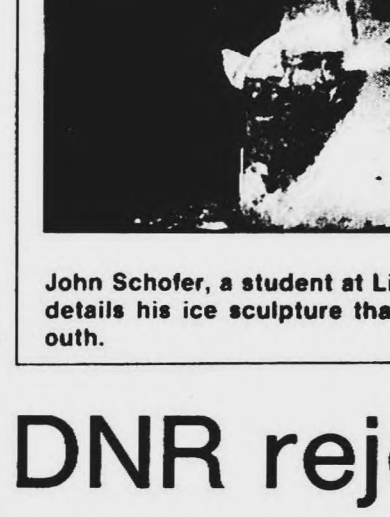

"In general we believe our plan we submitted was a technically valid proposal that protects human health and the environment. And when and if we see the state's objections we will be happy to address them."

The DNR has said it won't approve any plan unless it's accepted by the affected property owners —

City manager candidate list gets smaller

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The list of candidates to fill the job of Plymouth city manager has narrowed to "seven or eight," according to former commissioner Robert Jones, a member of the search committee.

That list includes acting City Manager William Graham, who is getting public support from some city employee union officials.

"We feel he possesses the attributes necessary to achieve and maintain a positive stance for this community and its welfare," said a letter signed by the union representatives.

THE CONSULTANT hired by the city commission to conduct the city manager search interviewed 75 applicants, Jones said.

"Most of them were from Michigan, of course, but some were from all around the country," Jones said.

The consultant, Bartell and Bartell Ltd., narrowed the field of 75 by analyzing applications, sending questionnaires to applicants "and some background checking and telephone interviewing," Jones said.

Full commission interviews with finalists — who could range in number from two to eight, Jones said — will be scheduled "in the latter part of the month."

Following Henry Graper's resignation in July, some city commissioners said the kind of person they'd most want for the job would be someone who is a progressive thinker and a doer, and who has a good financial background.

The city manager is responsible for day-to-day municipal operations, implementing policy set by the commission and recommending an annual city budget.

The salary for the post has yet to be determined. Graper's base salary was $51,500.

SIGNING THE letter in support of Graham were Mel Meek, president of the Plymouth Police Officers Association; Judi Van Houten, president of the union representing police dispatchers; Bill Warren, president of the Plymouth Firefighters Association; and Bill Ash, president of the union representing public works employees.

"We believe his integrity will carry forth in dealing fairly with all people and situations, and that he will be an asset to this city and its people," the letter said.

In dealing with city employees, Graham "will sit and listen and try to search out and seek solutions," Warren said.

"I think with Mr. Graper, he would let the lawyers handle it and take everything to litigation.

"He's been around, he's aware of what's happening in the city," Warren said.

IN OCTOBER, the commission voted 6-1 to spend $15,000 to hire the consulting firm.

The non-profit group has performed for the governors of more than 20 states, senators and congressmen, civilian and military dignitaries.

On Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 17-18, still more ice sculptures will be built, and on Friday, more street sculptures will go up.

PROFESSIONAL CARVERS will compete in the Ice Carving Classic Qualifier beginning at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 19, at a place to be determined.

Professional carving competition gets under way beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 20, at The Gathering. Judging will begin at noon.

Festival activities will wrap up Sunday. WSDS and WAAM radio stations will broadcast live from downtown Plymouth throughout the day.

So bundle up and shuffle over to the eighth annual Sculpture Spectacular. Weather permitting, you'll see the results of efforts put forth by 45 Plymouth folks, 40 or 50 corporations, and sponsors who donated $135,000 to stage the event. The city of Plymouth is kicking in $20,000 in services for the ice fest, the theme of which is "Local-Motion: Laying the Tracks for the Future."

Oh yeah, don't worry about getting hungry or thirsty out there. Plenty of hot chocolate and hot dogs will be on hand.

Dealership employee faces larceny charges

A 19-year-old employee of a Plymouth Township car dealership faces larceny charges for stealing eight Red Wings tickets from the glove box of a car brought in to the dealership for repairs.

The car owner discovered the tickets were missing Dec. 26, he told police.

The man said that even though the tickets were stolen, he still went to the Red Wings game. He approached the section for which he'd bought the original tickets, noticed people sitting in the seats, and asked a man sitting in one of the seats where he got the tickets, the report continued.

The man named a friend who works at the dealership, and the tickets owner filed larceny charges with police.

CAR SWIPED: A 1990 Camaro valued at $19,000 was discovered missing Wednesday from a fenced lot at a Plymouth Township car dealer on Plymouth Road, the lot manager told police.

The theft could have occurred in the past two weeks, the manager said.

SHOP TALK: A jackhammer and other shop equipment valued at more than $3,000 was reported missing Tuesday from a fenced-in area on Eckles in Plymouth Township.

The theft occurred between Christmas Day and Dec. 29, the owner told police. Missing were the jackhammer, a saber saw, circular saw, hammer drill, welder, bolt cutters, a shop vacuum and a rachet drill, the police report stated.

The owner told police the fence gate could have been left unlocked.

PUNCH THROWN: A 17-year-old Canton youth is seeking assault charges against an Inkster man, 21, claiming the man hit him in the mouth with his fist Thursday.

The youth told Plymouth Township police he was walking out of his former place of employment on Ann Arbor Road, after picking up his last pay check.

Upon getting into a car, he saw the man, who asked for $25 that he owed him, the report continued.

The youth told the man he'd give him the money as soon as he cashed the check, and the man struck him, he told police.

The man told police that the youth tried to hit him with the car door, and he struck the youth in self-defense. Police are investigating.

CSX CITED: Three times in as many days, CSX Transportation was cited for obstructing traffic in Plymouth for more than the allotted five minutes.

Using a stopwatch, a Plymouth officer said he clocked a delay shortly after 9 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 3 at seven minutes. The blocked crossing was at N. Main and Theodore.

At 9:18 Friday, Jan. 5, a CSX train delayed traffic for seven minutes at the Farmer, Main, Ann Arbor Trail and S. Mill crossings.

At 11:50, a westbound train obstructed traffic for nine minutes, blocking crossings at York-Holbrook, Starkweather and N. Mill.

DRUNKEN DRIVING: A 24-year-old Garden City man was arrested at about 3 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 3 for driving drunk.

Plymouth officers spotted a southbound 1987 Ford stopped at the light at Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail.

When the light turned green, the driver didn't proceed until just before the light turned yellow, police said.

The driver crossed the intersection, then "went far left of center, accelerating steadily and crossing the center line two more times," said officers.

Police clocked the motorist at 55 mph. The speed limit on Main Street is 25.

The man was pulled over at Ann Arbor Road.

The man blew .20 percent on the Breathalyzer, police said. A level of .10 is considered legally drunk.

The man was booked, processed and jailed. The man later was released on bond and given a court date.

DNR, property owners reject second Amoco cleanup plan the city of Plymouth, Ralph Lorenz of Lorenz Square and the Mayflower Meeting House, and Chip Falcusan of the Box Bar.

On Lorenz' behalf, Plymouth attorney Michael Southerland is suing Amoco in United States District Court. He's seeking damages in excess of $300,000 in compensation for expenses Lorenz has incurred replacing sump pumps and drain tiles ruined by thousands of gallons of fuel oil over the years at the Meeting House.

Federal District Judge Patrick Duggan has set Feb. 28 as the closing date for discovery in the case. He denied Amoco's motion that sought to strike Lorenz' claim for damages.

With the exception of Speedy Printing, all Lorenz' tenants, including the Observer, have vacated offices in the Meeting House because of fuel oil fumes permeating the building.

Benzene, ethylbenzene, xylene and toluene are components of fuel oil.

Benzene and ethylbenzene have been known since the 1930s to cause cancer in humans and animals, according to Dr. Donald Lawrenchuck, of the Wayne County Health Department.

Xylene has been shown to cause liver function abnormalities. Tolene can cause irritation of the eyes, throat, respiratory tract and skin. Chronic exposure can cause liver and kidney toxicity.

PLYMOUTH ACTING CITY MANAGER William Graham said "a couple of issues are at play. One issue is dealing with the contamination of soil involving the hotel and its properties, and the area under the Box Bar.

"But we also have the issue of contamination of soil underneath the public right of way and what affect that could have on sewer lines and water lines.

"Obviously there has to be some sort of correction made to the area in terms of a remediation plan that Amoco might provide to the DNR for clean up of the site. That has not been done," he said.

"What I'm interested in as a city administrator is that the plan be implemented and the site be cleaned up according to DNR or Environmental Protection Agency specifications or standards so we don't have to worry about petroleum infiltration in water or sewer lines. I would not want anyone to suffer any harm as a result of contamination.

"It would have been nice if it could have been done yesterday, but I know that's not realistic based on the ongoing activity," Graham said.

CITY ENGINEER KEN WEST said, "A spill like this is a rather serious thing. Our concern as a city is that it doesn't affect any of our citizens or the public that utilizes our streets and facilities in the city.

"I don't see how it would affect drinking water unless someone is using a well I'm not aware of. Public health laws require everyone to hook into our system.

"But if a flammable liquid got into our sewer and was ignited, it could be like shooting off a cannon, and the outlet would be in the street. It could blow a manhole lid off. That could injure someone, cause a vehicle to be damaged, or a person or a building. Ignition would cause an explosion."

Lorenz has spent $75,000 refurbishing the Meeting House banquet room, and carpeting and wallpapering first-floor offices over the last several months. The banquet room is booked through 1990.

"I'm going on the basis that I want to save the building," said Lorenz.

"We don't want it to start looking like Washington Boulevard. That's been empty for years.

"We're fighting to stay alive.

any favors by handing him this job on a silver platter," Mayor Dennis Bila said upon hiring the firm.

Commissioner Mary Childs voted against hiring the consultant.

Commissioner Jerry Vorva has also questioned spending money to hire a consultant. Graham is qualified to do the job, Vorva said.

Industrial park to open

Improvements will be made to a 40-acre light industrial park in Plymouth Townships and the lots will be put up for sale in 1991, according to CMS Land Co. and Damone/Andrew of Troy.

The land adjoins and will be incorporated into the Damone/Andrew-owned Plymouth Corporate Park, according to Michael G. Damone, president of Damone/Andrew real estate development company.

The park is on Beck Road, north of M-14 in Plymouth.

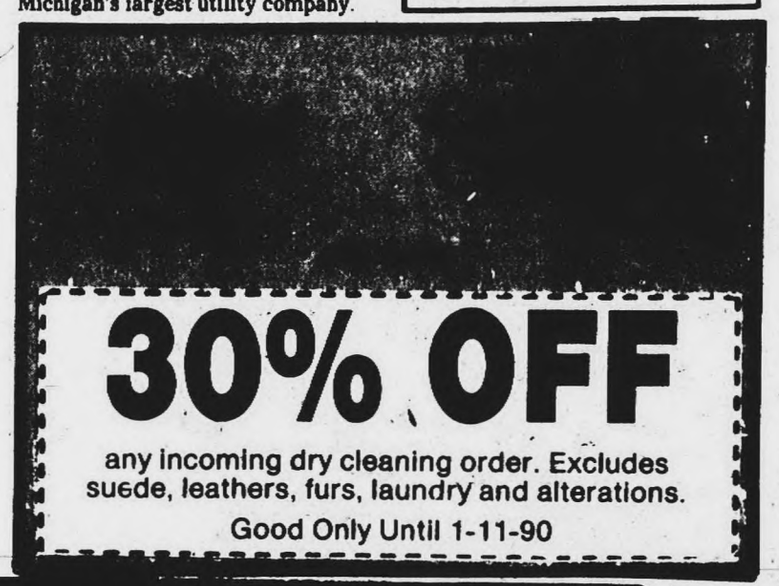

Damone said he expects there will be demand for the lots because of the land's ideal location and Plymouth Township's positive attitude toward this development.

Assistant coach revels in campaign tales

By Diane Gale
staff writer

When Bill Sharpe of Canton was 11 he worked on his first political campaign. By the time he hit his late teens he was batting for Hubert Humphrey.

Today he's interested in acting and the arts. Politics and acting are blood brothers, Sharpe said. The big difference is that actors are "more up front about what we're doing," he said.

Sharpe, 40, pokes fun at politics as much as he lauds them. He harps on the importance of public service as much as a government teacher.

AND YOU can almost hear echoes of past campaigns when Sharpe describes his idol.

"Hubert Humphrey was one of the truly great men of our time," Sharpe said.

Humphrey lost to Richard Nixon in the 1968 presidential race. He also sought the presidency in 1960 and 1972.

Sharpe wrote a couple of Humphrey's speeches, which were rewritten by other more seasoned workers, but his main responsibility was promoting Humphrey in communities he was about to appear.

"He's the man in 1948 who said it's time to get out of the shadow of state's rights and get into human rights," Sharpe said.

"Humphrey was a left wing, liberal, moderate. And today he'd probably be considered a conservative Democrat."

Humphrey's philosophy stayed the same, but the issues changed.

"He was probably one of the last great gladiators and he was one of the last honest men in politics," Sharpe said of the man who served as Lyndon Johnson's vice president, U.S. Senator and mayor of Minneapolis.

IN A quick-witted, long-winded dissertation — that is characteristic of a good Irishman, he said — Sharpe tells of his own political life.

It started when he was 11 and began working on a campaign for a Missouri congressional contender.

When he was 15, Sharpe said, he ran the campaign headquarters for a local Missouri representative race. He worked on other campaigns as a teen.

And while he was in college he gained the grand title of chairman of the college Democratic Party in Missouri. In reality, he had the same duties of licking stamps and passing out brochures that he did when he was 11, Sharpe said.

THE MOST notable political milestone was when Humphrey personally asked him to work on his campaign. At that time Sharpe was 21, weighed approximately 140 pounds and had an ego that was 200 pounds, he said.

But by the time Sharpe hit his mid-20s, he was disillusioned by a campaign he ran for a Missouri candidate for the governor's seat. To his surprise, his candidate allegedly violated the campaign spending law, Sharpe said.

"A reporter asked if I knew about it and I said: 'No.' "

He then got out of politics.

SHARPE OFTEN talks about working for men who fought the good battle and most of whom had high standards.

And although he promises that he has no interest in politics today, "There's a great seduction in politics," Sharpe said.

"I think it's the ink on bumper stickers. It's fun if you like to meet people and I love to meet people."

AFTER ENGAGING in other endeavors, he's now doing all the things he enjoys, Sharpe said.

He serves as executive director of the Detroit Chamber Winds, started a production company of Detroit actors called Celtic Pride Production, manages mystery theaters often seen in hotels, dabbles in real estate and works as assistant coach for the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

A "good battle" he's fighting today is to get the UM-D basketball team accepted in the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

And in his spare time he volunteers on the recently formed Canton Community Arts Council, which is working to promote the arts in the township.

AND HE wants to work with people on boosting motivation and honing creative skills in children.

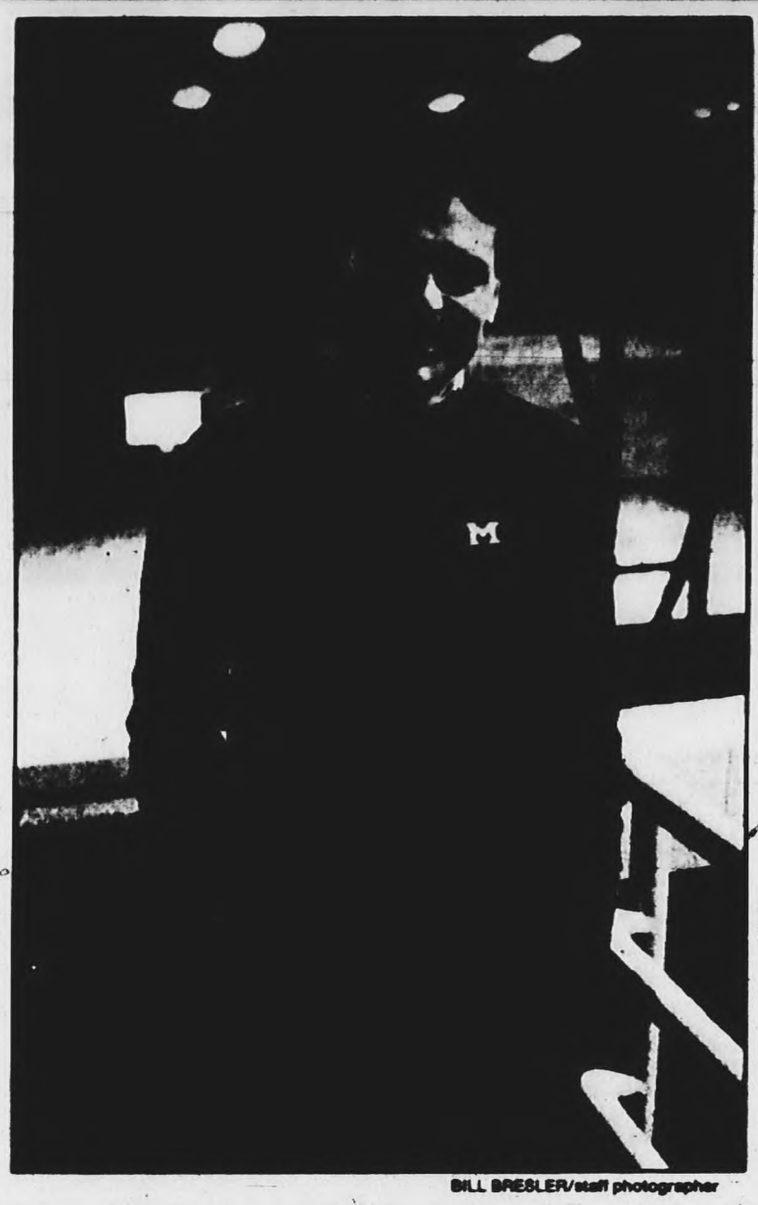

"Technology has destroyed kids' imagination skills," Sharpe said.

Recently he was at a movie theater and started watching and listening to teenagers playing video games.

"I realized that the generation that's going to be in charge of my Social Security won't be able to articulate well, but they'll have great reflexes," he said.

ALTHOUGH HE swears that politics isn't on the agenda, you have to wonder if the bumper sticker ink is still in his blood.

Especially when he constantly comes up with such remarks as: "If you have high enough expectations about society you'll have a society that meets them."

Bill Sharpe of Canton worked on his first political campaign at 11 years of age and later wrote speeches for Hubert Humphrey.

City to examine minutes over suit decision

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

To determine whose idea it was to challenge the Talbot suit against the city of Plymouth, the city commission plans to review minutes from its 1986 meetings.

The decision to pursue the suit cost each Plymouth resident an average of $40, because the city lost its court case and an appeal.

Ed Talbot, former chief building inspector for the city, charged that he was wrongly fired. While he agreed to settle the suit in 1986 at a cost of $11,000 to the city, then city manager Henry Graper — possibly on the advice of the city commission — decided to pursue the suit.

The end result was a $145,921 judgment against the city. To pay it, residents were assessed an extra 0.8 mill on their December tax bills.

Plymouth City Commissioner John Vos III, citing citizen complaints about the Talbot judgment, asked the city administration in December to try to determine whose idea it was to forego the cheaper settlement.

Challenge proved costly

In trying to determine whose advice resulted in the larger judgment, Vos in December asked the city administration to question the outside attorney who handled the case for the city.

The attorney, Ronald Acho, wrote a response to the city administration on Dec. 20. He said that Talbot accepted the $11,000 mediation award, while the city rejected it.

"I made no specific recommendation with regard to the settlement of this case," Acho wrote. "I indicated that the mediation amount was rather nominal, and thus the case could be settled cheaply. . .The decision was left in the hands of the city manager."

Acho added, "We do not know what the city manager recommended to the city commission."

At the pre-commission meeting last week, Mayor Dennis Bila said Graper, who is now city manager of Sault Ste. Marie, had an important role in the decision.

"One of the key players in this whole case (Graper) is no longer with us," Bila said.

Vos told other commissioners he wanted to find out if the decision to pursue the case was made solely by Graper, or if the former city manager asked for commission advice.

"I feel that the voters who elected me to the city commission want some answers and they are very upset over the fact that they have to pay off this judgment on their tax bills," Vos said last month.

"We can talk to Hank (Graper) and we can look at the minutes and we're going to do both of those those," Bila said.

The city treasurer's office has reported "a lot of inquiries" over the Talbot judgment, he said.

The case came to trial in 1986 in Wayne County Circuit Court. The state Court of Appeals last year upheld the cash award to Talbot.

Talbot is now a building inspector with the city of Livonia.

Man sentenced in robbery

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Jeffrey Bushbacher, 31, of Westland was sentenced to three to 10 years in prison after he pleaded guilty to robbing a Canton store Sept. 10.

Bushbacher was shot twice by Canton Police before he was arrested for the armed robbery of the Dairy Mart store on Warren Road.

He was charged with assaulting an officer, but those charges were dropped by the Wayne County prosecutor's office in exchange for pleading guilty to the armed robbery charge.

HE WAS SENTENCED by Recorder's Court Judge John Shamo. Bushbacher has served three months.

Canton Police are critical of the plea bargain agreement that allowed Bushbacher to plead guilty to the armed robbery charge and have the assault charge dropped.

Police want to know why the felonious assault charge was dropped and wonder why the prosecutor's office failed to contact the Canton public safety department before making the agreement, said Pat Nemecek, Canton public information officer.

"The sentence on the armed robbery, the department feels, was fair," Nemecek said. "Our only question is why the felonious assault was dropped, and we're trying to find out about that now.

"Once they make an agreement and they already have a sentence that's the end of it."

ARMED ROBBERY carries a sentence of up to life in prison and felonious assault carries a maximum sentence of four years in jail.

"The FA (felonious assault) was dismissed because he agreed to do more time than he could have gotten for the FA," said Keith Wright, Wayne County assistant prosecuting attorney.

"We had a guaranteed conviction," Wright said. "Going to trial there's no guarantee he would have been convicted."

The prosecutor's office recommended a five-year minimum sentence.

POLICE ARRESTED Bushbacher after receiving tips from two youths at the robbery scene. Bushbacher was stopped by officers as he was driving east on Joy Road.

Police charge that Bushbacher was brandishing a knife when he got out of his car and rushed Canton officer Joseph Bippus. They said he ignored orders to stop.

Bushbacher was shot twice by Canton officer David Boljesic, a four-year township police veteran. He was later credited by the Canton public safety department with saving Bippus' life.

Bippus, a veteran of two years on the force, also fired one shot. A state police investigation determined the shooting was in self-defense.

Bushbacher received bullet wounds to the left elbow, left thigh and stomach. He was hospitalized and released.

Bushbacher was previously convicted in 16th District Court of assault and battery, credit card misuse and disorderly conduct. The Livonia manufacturing firm employee is married to a police officer.

Noted puppeteer to perform

Area residents can benefit from the solution of a dilemma facing local puppeteers.

The members of the Detroit Puppeteers Guild wanted to see the unusual work employing special lighting effects of noted North Carolina puppeteer Hobey Ford.

Unfortunately, few were able to travel to theaters in the southeast to see him perform.

BY WORKING with the Livonia Public Library and using DPG funds to partially underwrite costs of bringing a production to Michigan, Ford will travel to Livonia to perform his adaptation of the Russian folktale, "Baba Yaga."

The performance will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 13, in the Livonia Civic Center Library, Five Mile east of Farmington Road.

Baba Yaga is a witch who lives in a dark forest in a hut that stands on chicken legs. A young peasant girl, Gerda, must overcome the challenges presented by the witch.

Tickets at $2.50 each are available to the public as well as DPG members. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the civic center library.

THE SHOW utilizes the black theater puppetry technique.

The puppeteer is clad in black garb and operates within a five-foot circular opening in the stage.

Using special lighting techniques, Ford is barely seen as he manipulates the characters directly in front of him.

Some of the puppets are actually harnessed to Ford's body. In this way, his movements are reduced and transferred to the puppet.

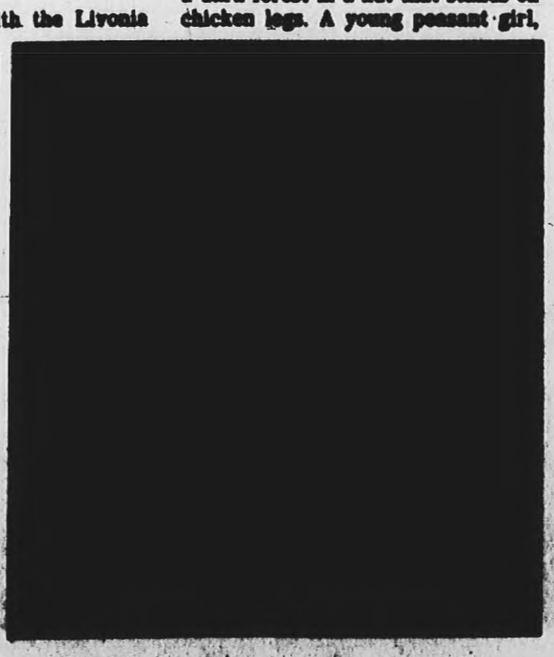

The total effect is a magical circle of illusion.

The show is followed by a variety show featuring storytelling puppets and "Chester the Dog." The show lasts 45 minutes. Study guides are available.

FORD IS the creator of The Golden Rod Puppets.

Working solo, he designs, builds, books and performs the productions calling up many diverse skills and talents.

Born in coastal Connecticut into a heritage of boat design, music and the arts, Hobey started building toy [illegible] in 1970 at [illegible] of New York at Potsdam.

Hobey Ford and friends will perform Saturday in the auditorium of the Livonia Civic Center Library.

Repairs considered for autistic center

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

An architectural consultant for the Burger Center, home for Wayne County programs for autistic children, could be selected Wednesday.

Keeping a promise made to Burger Center parents, Wayne County Intermediate School Board members are expected to commission an architectural firm to evaluate the former Garden City junior high school — now targeted for closing due to its asbestos content, leaky roof and general need of repairs.

"The ISD has made a commitment to assess the building," said Thomas Beltramo, director of management, production and environmental services.

Parents have expressed concern that autistic children could be moved from Burger Center and divided among several alternative sites.

Representatives of "eight or nine" firms toured the building Thursday, Beltramo said. Twenty firms were invited to submit bids by the Jan. 9 deadline.

The study is no guarantee the building will remain open.

"WHO KNOWS what they're going to recommend," Beltramo said.

A parent who also toured the building said considerable repairs could be needed.

"They had buckets in the hallway collecting water off the roof," said Kenneth Howse of Livonia. "It's a shame the building was allowed to deteriorate the way it did."

Though not an architect by trade, Howse said he would also submit a bid on the study.

"I thought someone should represent the parents' point of view," he said.

Though county school officials estimated the study would be completed within three months, they said efforts would be made to have it done sooner.

Classes for 217 autistic students, between age 3-26, are held in the building, which is owned and staffed by Garden City Schools.

Energy use up in December

Consumers Power anounced it has sent out more natural gas this December than at any time since 1976-77, the coldest winter this century.

The company estimated its customers used 20-30 percent more natural gas this December than for a similar period one year ago.

Consumers Power's metro region serves more than 700,000 customers in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Livingston and Washtenaw counties.

Consent becomes election issue

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Gov. James Blanchard, a pro-choice Democrat, is expected to veto the bill, and the pro-life majority in the Legislature is likely to attempt an override.

The parental consent abortion bill will become a 1990 legislative issue, though politicos dislike it in an election year.

"I don't like to get involved in abortion from a political standpoint," said Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville. "We had no choice but to send it back to committee."

"It" is House Bill 5103, which the House passed Dec. 7 after attaching a so-called "suicide amendment."

Senate Democrats wanted to take up the bill immediately on Dec. 11. But the Republican majority, joined by two outstate Democrats, sent it to Dillingham's Human Resources Committee.

He expects to hold a hearing early in February and report it out to the Senate floor by mid-February.

RIGHT TO LIFE of Michigan supports the bill, which would require girls 17 and under to obtain either parental or probate court consent before obtaining an abortion.

But RTL dislikes the suicide amendment, which was added on the House floor, RTL lobbyist Ed Rivet explained.

"It would allow a minor to have an abortion without parental consent if she presented a note to the abortionist from a certified psychologist or psychiatrist saying she was suicidal.

"We've seen it in other states. When Colorado and Oregon were liberalizing their abortion laws (in the 1960s), they allowed abortion in four cases — rape, incest, physical health and mental health of the mother.

"A woman would be referred to a sympathetic psychiatrist. It can all be said and done in 15 minutes. The potential for abuse is there.

"If a child is suicidal, then there's a serious dysfunction that parents should know about. Letting her have a secret abortion is not going to solve it."

SENATE MAJORITY leader John Engler, R-Mount Pleasant, and Dillingham agreed to hold up the bill.

"I have a problem with the amendment. It circumvents the intent of the bill," said Dillingham. "The House made a major change in that bill, and did it in the last hours of the session."

The Senate passed its own parental consent bill in October. But for political reasons, the House took up its own bill, sponsored by Rep. Michael Griffin, D-Jackson.

"There was a strong feeling Mike Griffin was a better person to be sponsor because he's a Democrat," said Dillingham.

Gov. James Blanchard, a pro-choice Democrat, is expected to veto the bill, and the pro-life majority in the Legislature is likely to attempt an override.

"The override would start in the House," Dillingham said. "If we can get the votes to override in the House, we can easily override in the Senate."

The Senate bill passed with a two-thirds majority, but the House vote was eight votes short of two-thirds.

BLANCHARD and the Democrats were said to want to avoid voting on an abortion bill during an election year. Senate Democrats made three separate attempts to get a vote Dec. 11, before the Legislature recessed for 1989.

"What you picked up is a very strong political feeling in Lansing," Dillingham agreed.

His committee usually meets at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesdays in Lansing.

Jack Gladden

LOOKING BACK on the 1980s.

Don't ask me how I got here. Probably some kind of out-of-body experience induced by reading too many retrospectives on the '80s and projections of what the '90s will be like.

But here I am, crouched in a corner of the basement, late in the afternoon of Dec. 31, 1999 — a few hours away from the 21st Century.

Upstairs in the family room, the two-way smellevision is blaring loudly. You can't turn it off. It's controlled at the transmission point, the headquarters of NFTV — Nice Family Television Viewing.

The only person who can turn the smelleviewers on and off is Terri Revolta, the Secretary of Decency, who long ago issued an administrative order that all sets remain on 24 hours a day so that the Office of Decency can monitor what goes on in the home.

Here in the basement, with the environmentally certified furnace humming in concert with the radon converter, I feel fairly safe.

IN THE CORNER, covered with a tarpaulin and sprayed thoroughly with black-market Odor Eliminator, is a small, artificial evergreen tree hung with colored balls and tinsel. It used to emit a fragrance similar to pine that could be detected by the smelleviewers, but I think the washing and spraying over the years have made it safe.

We salvaged it in mid-decade, after Christmas was abolished and all other holiday celebrations were declared illegal. This is the first year I've dared to take it out of hiding, but, as a new century is about to begin, it's a reminder of the way things used to be.

My wife's upstairs, spraying the family room with a cheap perfume that she picked up at the local drug store. It's supposed to smell like marijuana smoke and, if it works, it will mask the odor of the Kools that I bought from a pusher down in the corridor last week. If it doesn't — well, the Tobacco Enforcement Agents will be kicking down the door soon.

I don't know why I'm taking this chance. I've gotten used to the Health Patrols and the Environmental Police. The fireplace has been sealed off for years and the last of the cholesterol-laden bacon grease was taken to the hazardous waste dump in '94.

I hid a bag of potato chips in the air purifier for a couple of years, but my wife found them and made me turn them in to the Health Enforcement Agency, along with the can of coffee that I found in a dumpster just after it was outlawed.

BUT SHE never found the pint of scotch that I stuck in a furnace vent when we were raided by the Booze Busters a couple of years ago — the day after the New Prohibition took effect. I don't care what happens — I'm going to break it out at midnight, just as soon as Surgeon General Kook finishes his annual State of the Nation's Health address.

He just announced that, as part of the battle against AIDS, condom dispensers will be made mandatory in every home effective next week. And he has outlawed the sale of sugar, salt and oat bran, substances, he says, that are bad for you.

We are told to stand by for a report from Tobacco Czar William Bennett, who will discuss the latest progress in the War on Smoking. Last year Bennett succeeded in getting Congress to increase the penalty for smoking in the home from a high misdemeanor to a felony. Rumor has it that tonight he will announce an invasion of Colombia to attack the Colombian coca farmers, who have been growing illegal tobacco plants in their coca fields.

After that, Drug Secretary Manuel Noriega will give his annual report on the success of the program legalizing drugs in America. The broadcast will end with a grim-faced President Quayle standing in front of a banner that says "Remember: Celebrations Are Insensitive," while the band of Guy Lombardo IV plays "It's a Grand Old Flag and It's Unconstitutional to Burn It."

Me, I'm geting ready to crawl under the tarpaulin with the Christmas Tree, puff on a Kool, sip my scotch out of the bottle and reflect on the progress that has been made during the last decade of the 20th Century, wondering whether the Smoke Police, the Booze Busters or the Holiday Patrol will be the first to kick in the door.

from our readers

Many need help all year

To the editor:

During the holiday season, it was a pleasure to pick up a paper and read about warm hearted, charitable people reaching out to help those less fortunate. Church groups, unions, schools, business, neighbors, and our staff here at the Social Security office, were all busy helping to make Christmas just a little merrier for those in need.

However, it seems that once the holidays are over, we often forget that the disadvantaged still need our help.

The homeless, the mentally ill, battered women and children, the unemployed, the disabled, the elderly, may have special needs for assistance all year. I hope the Observer & Eccentric readers now will think about how we can help the needy year 'round.

Social Security may be able to help. Nationwide each year there are estimated thousands of people who are unaware they may be eligible for Social Security benefits. Supplemental Security Income pays cash benefits to people of all ages who are in need. SSI is paid to individuals who are aged; blind or disabled at any age (even children) with low income and resources. In some cases, people who are unable to work due to depression, alcoholism, drug addiction, and learning disabilities can qualify for monthly SSI disability benefits.

Social Security benefits are paid on the work records of wage earners who are retired, disabled, or deceased. The family of the worker can also be entitled to monthly cash benefits. The dependents include (but are not limited to) spouses, children under age 18, disabled "children" over age 18, divorced spouses, and even disabled survivors.

In the spirit of giving this season, let us extend a hand up, rather than merely a hand out. Be aware of possible sources of assistance. Refer someone who may be eligible for benefits to Social Security. Call toll-free, 24 hours a day, seven days a week for additional information about Social Security benefit programs. The phone number is: 1-800-234-5772.

Help us meet our goal, that everyone who is eligible for benefits is receiving them. We look forward to receiving those referrals. Thank you for your cooperation.

Tax bills are higher

To the editor:

When you receive your tax bill, you will see that it is higher than last year. My bill has an extra $76.89 called a judgement.

This is because our famous prior city manager, Henry Graper, could have settled a lawsuit for $11,000. He chose to fight it and now it cost $156,000 to settle.

We are paying Graper and his replacement each over $50,000 per year since July 1989. This was done because Graper had a contract for 10 years so he can qualify for a pension.

We will have Graper until "Death do us part."

The school board received their millage increase and proceeded to lease a new Cadillac for the superintendent for $6,900 per year. I didn't know that I own property in such an affluent community.

This town sounds like it is run by Mayor Coleman Young. No idea where the money comes from or how it is spent. They just know that they need more money each year.

Plymouth city hall is closed down between Dec. 25 and Jan. 2. I thought the purpose of government was to serve the needs of its citizens. I guess they do at their own discretion and the taxpayers just pay more and more each year.

When you go to the polls next time, elect new faces and not the recycled "Good Old Boys" who know the ropes.

Graham is supported for mayor

To the editor:

City manager: "An administrator appointed by a city council to manage the affairs of the municipality."

A simple definition for a responsible and complicated position. One which requires a candidate who possesses an acute awareness of the needs of the people, is able to maintain a responsible attitude toward city employees, has the ability to look for reasonable and realistic solutions to problems and who is able to maintain a quality of service which the citizens deserve.

In support of William Graham as city manager, we feel he possesses the attributes necessary to achieve and maintain a positive stance for this community and its welfare.

We believe his integrity will carry forth in dealing fairly with all people and situations, and that he will be an asset to this city and its people.

The City of Plymouth needs Bill Graham!

Rip lawmaker on abortion

To the editor:

At the risk of offending a lot of people, I have to say that Livonia voters have to be the dumbest voters in the state, or the least enlightened.

So far I got your attention, but I doubt if the Observer will publish my observations, because I am against state Rep. Lynne Bankes, who they support because she is pro-abortion and has always supported abortion.

LIVONIA WAS once described as a mecca for churches because it had more churches per mile than any other area. In fact it was creating a problem, and local officials have stopped, or at least slowed down the building of churches.

This does indicate, though, that it is basically a Christian community, whose members are supposesd to believe in the viewpoint that a fetus is a human being and it is sinful to abort the baby, except to save the mother's life. Specifically it is a violation of the Fifth Commandment "Thou shall not kill."

There are various forms of religious chastising that address this, such as excommunication etc., for consenting mothers and necessary physical and/or moral cooperators.

THERE ARE always going to be malcontents in any church, who support abortion, but in my experience anti-abortion and the stance of the churches, is overwhelmingly supported.

It is unbelievable to me that this Christian community would support Lynne Bankes, who is pro-abortion, and further a Republican that goes against her party which opposes abortion. Where are your marbles?

BANKES HAS discreetly avoided revealing her position on abortion. She floods you with superfluous mail, paid for by you the taxpayer, with never a word about her position on abortion in an attempt to make you believe she is a doer.

In reality she has accomplished little, except to ensure herself a nice pension when she is finally voted out of office.

My question to you, voters who fit in the above mold, why do you continue to vote for Lynne Bankes, who supported abortion from the day she entered office and continues to support abortion? Her record speaks for itself.

Are you dumb, or not enlightened?

Give her a call or write and tell her maybe you made a mistake in re-electing her.

Roy Licata,
Livonia

Possible new access road for airport

DAVID FRANK/graphics coordinator

The federal government has authorized money for Wayne County to begin engineering and design work for a south access road for Metro Airport. The route is part of the airport's overall expansion project, also including a new control tower, runways and terminal building.

New airport route to be studied

A southern entrance to Metro Airport moved a step closer late last year as a $5 million federal transportation grant was authorized to allow Wayne County to begin design and engineering work on the project.

Airport officials said they were pleased with the grant, but noted the new route could still be years away.

"We'd still need environmental approval before building could begin," airport spokesman Michael Conway said.

The new route would connect Eureka Road in southern Romulus with Rogell Drive, the airport's main route for motor vehicle traffic. A half-cloverleaf off Eureka would also be added.

The south access road is part of an overall expansion expected to also produce a new terminal and additional runways, south of existing terminal buildings.

An I-94 exit is currently the airport's main access route.

"We've long looked at easing congestion off I-94," Conway said.

Expansion projects would enable Metro to handle rising passenger traffic, Conway said. Passenger traffic more than doubled in the 1980s and is expected to continue growing, reaching nearly 15 million by the mid-1990s.

In the past year, the airport has expanded its international terminal and broken ground for a new control tower.

Prayer, action is called upon for needy

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

America needs both prayer and action at a time when the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer, said the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, keynote speaker at Saturday's Wayne County Prayer Breakfast.

Americans should be thankful for their blessings, the long-time civil rights activist said. But he challenged county leaders to harness their energy to help the needy and overcome racial discrimination.

Walker, pastor of the Canaan Baptist Church in New York City, said America's urban areas bear witness to a widening gap between wealth and poverty.

"(IN NEW York) we've got 86,000 people sleeping in the street in a city where you can't even find a place to park your yacht unless it's 100 feet long," said Walker, a one-time chief of staff for the Rev. Martin Luther King and special adviser to the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

At several points, Walker's speech was interrupted by shouts of "Amen." The 60-year-old activist received a standing ovation from the near-2,000 people in attendance at the conclusion of his remarks.

'(In New York) we've got 86,000 people sleeping in the street in a city where you can't even find a place to park your yacht unless it's 100 feet long.'

Wayne County Prayer Breakfast

"I thought it was most inspirational," said Schoolcraft College President Richard McDowell, one of the metropolitan area civic, business and religious leaders in attendance.

"WHAT HE'S saying is, in spite of our problems, we should try to recognize the good things we have in our county," said Arthur Blackwell, chairman of the Wayne County Commission.

Although generally avoiding reference to specific political topics, Walker referred to the recent U.S. invasion of Panama as a "debacle."

"Their army is not as big as the police force of New York City, yet we had the biggest military air lift since Vietnam," he said.

SPONSORED BY Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara and a coalition of Detroit and suburban religious leaders, the event was at Cobo Hall. Afterward, attendees mixed with the crowd gathered for opening day of the Detroit Auto Show.

The prayer breakfast also featured U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, Gov. James Blanchard and Lt. Gov. Martha Griffiths.

It also featured elected officials from numerous communities — including freshman Garden City Councilman David Keith, who passed the coffee to another city council newcomer — Detroit's Gil Hill.

DRY EYES AND DRY MOUTH IN ARTHRITIS

Dryness in the eyes occurs when the lacrimal gland, located in the outer corner of the eye, fails to secret tears. You note a gritty feeling every time you blink your eyes. Also, you often have a red, painful eye, as irritants such as dust and cinder particles, usually washed away, remain and fester.

Dryness of the mouth results from a failure of the salivary glands to produce a flow of saliva. These glands, located in the floor of the mouth, allow you to eat dry substances such as crackers. Saliva also cleanses the mouth, protecting the gums from infection and the teeth from cavities.

Disordered lymphocytes provide the common path from swollen joints to dry eyes. In individuals with rheumatoid arthritis, lymphocytes invade and disrupt joint lining tissue. In some persons, lymphocytes do the same to the lacrimal and salivary glands.

Treatment is not completely satisfactory. Artifical tears are useful for dry eyes, but you must administer the tears frequently. For a dry mouth, physicians at present have no better recommendations then frequent sips of water, and use of hard candy balls to stimulate whatever salivary capacity remains.

He's tired 'carrying' the weight

Just about this time of year, I begin getting envious of folks like Oprah Winfrey and Tommy LaSorda blabbing on the airwaves about how successful they were with their diets.

One would almost be led to believe that this "miracle" of weight loss could be just as successful for millions of us, and like Oral Roberts, all we would have to do is send these diet doctors a monthly paycheck and, yes, we too can look and feel just like them.

Personally, I doubt very much that Oprah gets a chance to eat potato skins enveloped in sour cream presently featured on the menu of her Chicago restaurant, Eccentrics, or, for that matter, does Tommy LaSorda really get to eat a plate full of spaghetti and meatballs, not to mention the salad and garlic bread.

It's a fact that on the average day there are 101,280,321 adults on diets. (Source: "On the Average Day" compiled by Tom Heymann, Faucett/Columbine books.) That's over 100 million folks just like you and me who are searching for miracle cures to help them lose weight. I wouldn't be surprised if that number is far greater right after the holidays, either.

Now you name it and I've tried it as far as diets are concerned. Thank goodness I'm 6-foot-6 because I frequently hear the old adage, "You carry it well." Well, I'm tired of "carrying it well."

DON'T YOU THINK it's about time folks like you and me stopped blaming our big bones and finally fessed up to the real reason why we need to watch our caloric intake? We love to eat. Period. No ifs, ands or buts . I can't imagine life with Coke, without chips, meatloaf without potatoes and pie without ice cream.

Sure, I could blame my avoirdupois on the fact that I try each recipe before printing. My problem, I try the whole recipe. There's no doubt that in my next life, I want to return as a wine taster who has the willpower to spit out each and every taste.

Speaking of taste, why do dieters like you and me have to put up with plain salads at most of the Detroit area restaurants? Why does broiled fish taste better when it's garnished with a calorie-ladened lobster cream sauce? Why does Goo-Goo Crunch ice cream taste so much better than "lite" artificially flavored ice milk?

Because, dear folks, we have the gift of taste. Granted, there are times we taste too much of one thing and the bottom line works out that instead of tasting, we end up eating the whole kit and kaboodle.

If you can't tell by the fire in my writing style — yes, I'm on my diet again. With a little luck, I'll be able to change my thought pocesses and be able to switch from going on a diet to maintaining a healthy eating regimen, continuously. I have this problem of falling off whatever I get "on."

SO, INSTEAD OF relinquishing my weekly food budget to Lean Cuisine, I'm taking on a new outlook and will begin tasting less. I hereby pass along the bowl of carrots and celery firmly implanted on the shelf of my fridge for a new outlook on life.

I'm like an alcoholic around booze, an addict around cocaine, since the food will be there to tempt me at every interval, I'm going to skip this diet train and re-educate my eating habits. From now on, just a taste should suffice. If it's that good, there will be even better stuff to tast tomorrow.

Yes, ladies and gentlemen, you too can join the ranks of "tasters anonymous." All it takes is one heck of a lot of willpower. Send no money but remember, "The Shadow knows" how many times you've tasted.

Morris Goodman, owner of Sara's Glatt Kosher Deli in Southfield, displays a tray of cold cuts from his eatery. The menu is truly kosher, which differs from kosher style.

Deli's dishes healthy delights

By Anne R. Lehmann
special writer

GROW UP IN a Jewish home and chances are you will become well acquainted with foods that are home-cooked, plentiful and, at times, even inspiring.

That's what happened to Morris Goodman, owner and proprietor of Sara's Glatt Kosher Deli, a restaurant he named to honor his late mother.

Since its humble beginnings on 10 Mile and Coolidge roads three years ago, this Southfield eatery, now in the New Orleans Mall, has grown into a bustling establishment catering to everyone fromn Hasidic Jews to sharply clad businessmen. For orthodox Jews who observe the strict religious dietary laws of kashruth, and for whom McDonald's is not an option, Sara's offers an opportunity to grab a quick burger or enjoy full-service dining. Many people also are turning to kosher foods and meats because of health concerns, recognizing that the close supervision of these products generally results in superior quality.

The fact is that Goodman, who is at work by 7:30 a.m. and rarely leaves before 10:30 p.m., has always been ready, willing and able to feed the masses. "I love to cook, feed and eat," he says. Goodman spent his six years with the National Guard as a cook.

THE BEARDED, aproned father of three began his career in the kitchen when he was 14 years old, working as a busboy at Lou's Deli. Over the next 21 years he learned the ropes alongside his older brother Marty, who now owns the Detroit chain of Lou's Delis. "Food was a focal point in our family, and although my mom never taught us formally, we gleaned a lot by being around her," he recalls.

The food business has remained a family affair. Goodman's four younger sisters, wife and teenage son all help out. Consequently he has named many of his 40 combination sandwiches for them, as well as for longstanding and loyal employees.

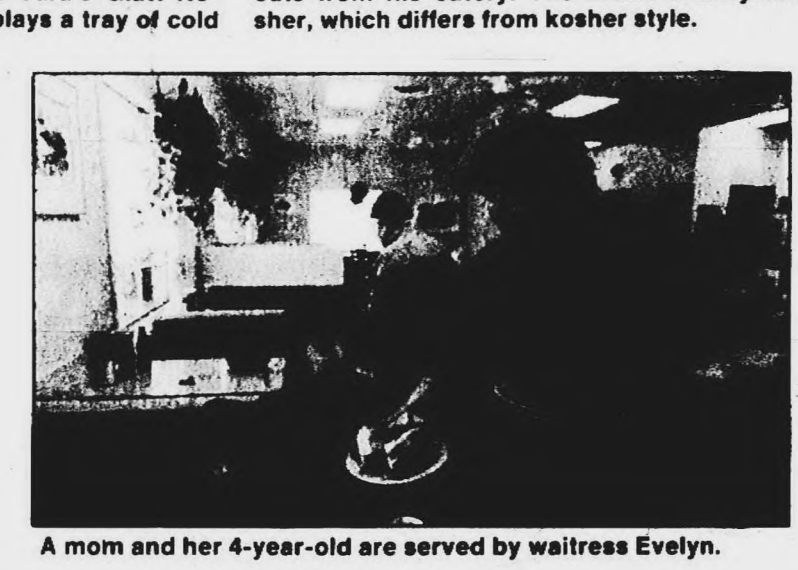

What makes Goodman's work particularly challenging is that his restaurant is glatt kosher. The term "glatt" applies to beef. What it means, according to Rabbi Elimeilech Silberberg of West Bloomfield's Bais Chabad Torah Center, is that the meat is unquestionably kosher because there are no lung adhesions in the animal. He says, "If there is an adhesion it can still be deemed kosher based on the judgment of the specially designated general examiner."

Only two out of 10 cows are glatt, Silberberg says. "The theory is that it's a healthier animal."

But the real challenges of running a truly kosher restaurant are keeping the menu interesting despite dietary laws, and assuring financial viablity despite the many hours it must be closed for holiday and Sabbath observances.

Marco's — It's fine dining, Italian too

With the opening of Marco's, Farmington finally has a fine-dining restaurant.

Though this little city has a charm not unlike Plymouth or Rochester and has valiantly redeveloped its downtown, it had been overlooked as a site for a good restaurant. Until now.

Just six months ago, Marco Conte and his family opened the restaurant in the Village Commons building on Grand River east of Farmington Road. They soon found out how right their choice of location was. Business has been so good that they already anticipate expanding the 80-seat dining room.

Conte's parents, Ann and Enzo, are no strangers to restaurateuring. For more than 30 years, they operated Rina's restaurant in Detroit. At Marco's, Enzo does most of the cooking. Two other children, Roberto and Tina, help out where needed. Marco himself started working at Cafe Cortina 10 years ago at the age of 15 — and was general manager by the time he left this summer.

Though Italian cooking is its specialty, Marco's atmosphere is a far cry from the red-checked tablecloths you might expect. It is modern, with deep lavender walls, glass block dividing the entrance from the dining room, black accents and beautiful Venetian masks hanging on the walls.

MARCO CONTE designed the interior of his restaurant with an art deco flavor to defy the stereotype, but sprinkled Italian touches — such as the masks — throughout.

While the menu is more traditionally Italian, it offers a few surprises too, including a delicious sirloin dish in which thinly sliced sirloin is wrapped around mozzarella cheese, flavored with parmesan cheese, garlic, salt, pepper and parsley, and simmered in tomato sauce. Another interesting entree was a broiled whitefish with seasoned peppers — an Italian touch to an otherwise common dish.

Among three veal dishes is a veal piccante which was OK, though not exceptional. The sauce of white wine, garlic and lemon was good, but the veal was a little on the tough side. A grilled shrimp with artichoke hearts was excellent.

The 16 pasta dishes include an excellent linguine with calamari (squid), clams, mussels and shrimp. Clams seem to be a popular addition to Marco's pastas. There are three other entrees featuring pasta and clams as well as another with shrimp in the sauce. Still, there are meat sauces on a ravioli and a spaghetti. Seasonings in the sauces seem to be on the light side. They aren't overpowering, though they are evident.

Details:
Marco's, 32758 Grand River, Farmington, 477-7777.

Hours: Lunch: 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday-Friday; Dinner 3:30-10 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 3:30-11 p.m. Friday, 4:30-11 p.m. Saturday and 4:30-9 p.m. Sunday. The restaurant is available for private parties on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Prices: $7.95-$14.95. All major credit cards accepted.

Value: Good traditional Italian dishes with a few unusual entrees.

SHARON LE MIEUX/staff photographer

Marco Conte says this dish, linguine pescatore, is one of the biggest sellers at his restaurant in Farmington.

Kosher dell's dishes are healthy delights

THE DIFFERENCE between kosher style and truly kosher is dramatic. A kosher-style deli can serve food seven days a week and will feature thick meat sandwiches, cheese blintzes, Reubens, things that are not permissible in a truly kosher establishment because of the orthodox prohibition against mixing meat and dairy products.

Goodman's kitchen features only meat and non-dairy products, although some tofu-based products have made it possible for him to offer such unique items as "cheesecake" and "ranch dressing." "The kosher food industry is undergoing a revolution," Goodman says.

For example, tofu-based cheeses have recently been developed which have the taste and melting quality of the real McCoy. Although many of these "mock" products have been around for a long time, the quality left a lot to be desired.

"That's all changing now," he says, and observant Jews soon will be able to eat excellent-tasting veal parmigian, something he is currently test marketing in his restaurant.

Additionally, Jewish law requires that kosher restaurants be closed during the Sabbath and observant holidays. These are considered days of rest and prayer when work is forbidden. Hence the doors at Sara's are closed before sundown every Friday and don't reopen until after nightfall Saturday.

FROM A BUSINESS standpoint, giving up this time each week might seem like a big financial sacrifice, but for Goodman it's a time for "sanity, getting back to basics and spending time with my family," he says. The topic of closing for holidays prompts Goodman to say jokingly, "I guess you can say that our vacation time is predetermined by a higher power."

Though the ancient dietary laws of kashruth reign supreme for Goodman at home and work, he is excited and inspired by all the possibilities the burgeoning kosher food industry is creating. "It's really amazing when you think of observant Jews sitting down with a piece of non-dairy cheesecake that puts the best New York cheesecake to the test," he says. "The possibilities are becoming endless and, for that reason, being kosher is more exciting than ever before."

STUFFED CABBAGE

Filling

Combine all ingredients and set aside:

2 pounds hamburger
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
2 tablespoon rice (raw and washed) dash of worcestershire sauce

Cabbage

Take the core out of a large cabbage by making a circular cut. Boil the cabbage in salt water. When pliable separate the leaves.

Place 2 tablespoons of the meat filling in each leaf. Roll up, tuck ends in and under so roll holds together (optional, use a toothpick). Place cabbage rolls in a roaster pan.

Sauce
1 14-ounce bottle catsup
1 large bottle ginger ale
1 28-ounce-can tomatoes

Mix catsup with ginger ale and pour over rolls. Add tomatoes and cover. Baste frequently. Bake at 325 degrees for 3-4 hours. Yields 16-20 rolls.

POTATO KNISHES

3 eggs
¾ cup oil
½ cup hot water
3 cups flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder
3 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
3 cups mashed potatoes
1 teaspoon yellow food color
2 small onions, diced and cooked

Beat eggs slightly. Add oil and water and food color. Beat together until well blended. Mix flour, salt and baking powder. Add to egg mixture. Cover with towel and put in a warm place for about 1 hour. Roll ¼ of dough at a time, very thin. Put a thin row of mashed potatoes along long edge of dough. (Roll 1½ times in jelly-roll fashion.) Cut and seal. (Divide dough into slices by using the side of your hand.) Press down to seal. Place each knish sealed side down on a greased cookie sheet. Bake at 450 degrees for 12-15 minutes until brown. Yields 50.

Potato Filling: potatoes, cooked onions, salt and pepper.

ISRAELI GARDEN SALAD
1 package radishes, finely sliced
1 head lettuce, shredded
2 cucumbers, cubed
2 green peppers, cubed
3 tomatoes, cubed
1 large carrot, shredded
½ cup vinegar
¼ cup oil
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper

Toss vegetables with dressing ingredients. Chill. Serves 6-8.

DIET SALAD DRESSING

Bring a big Tupperware container of this when you go to one of Detroit's finest restaurants and offer to pass to other members of tasters anonymous.

1 cup plain yogurt
1 cup buttermilk
1 large clove garlic, smashed
¼ cup parsley, chopped fine
½ teaspoon sweet Hungarian paprika
salt and pepper to taste

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Allow flavors to mellow in the fridge for several hours before using.

CABBAGE SOUP

Heck, why not ask the waiter or waitress to heat this up in the microwave → tell 'em it's to ward off the evil spirits of gastroenteritis.

2 cups cabbage, shredded
1 cup beef bouillon or broth
1 clove garlic, minced fine
2 cups canned tomatoes, blended
1 small onion, diced fine
salt and pepper to taste

Saute cabbage and onion in ¼ cup beef broth till tender. Combine remaining ingredients and cook over medium heat, uncovered stirring frequently for 20 minutes to thicken slightly.

Make Spaghetti Pie, then clean the house

Betsy Brethen

It is finally here, one of my favorite months of the year.

After the hustle-bustle of December, I always look forward to January as I finally have a chance to stay home and tackle some projects that have been put off for months.

Closets, drawers and even the dreaded basement (A.K.A. the "wreck" room) will soon come under my careful scrubbing and scrutiny.

On those days when I turn into a human Dust Buster, the last thing on my mind is fixing dinner. But it still is something that must be done as growing children and husbands never seem to lose their appetites.

This week's Winner Dinner, Spaghetti Pie, offers an easy solution to the dinner dilemma. Submitted by Shirley Wold of Plymouth, the dinner can be made quickly in the morning and refrigerated until the dinner hour.

With a little bit of preplanning, your time and energy can be maximized so that when five o'clock rolls around, you can relax in the knowledge that your family's dinner already is prepared.

WOLD'S LIFE has been a busy one and she knows all about making the most of her time. When her children were young, she conducted cooking classes and a small catering service out of her home.

As the children got older and she had more time, she worked as a consultant for an art publishing company. This eventually led her into the contract interior design business.

For the past two years, Wold has worked as a manufacturer's representative, supplying interior designers with contract seating to be used in hotels, offices and restaurants.

Through the years, Wold has had certain dinners that she can always rely on, and Spaghetti Pie is still a big hit with her two sons and husband. She likes to serve it with a mixed green salad and slices of fresh, crusty French or Italian bread.

Instant chocolate pudding, made in the blender as soon as the pie goes into the oven, offers a sweet conclusion to a filling dinner.

THANK YOU, Shirley Wold, for sharing one of your favorite menus with us and congratulations on being our Winner Dinner Winner of the week.

Until next time, I am off to conduct a major cleaning campaign. Hopefully, you will be doing something a lot more fun and interesting. In any event, here's hoping this week's Winner Dinner will entice your family to clean their plates, if not their rooms!

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Shirley Wold of Plymouth offers this do-ahead dinner, with Spaghetti Pie, one of her most reliable family recipes.

Each week's winner receives an apron with the words Winner Dinner Winner on it. Submit your recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher.

Each week's recipes are printed the same size, so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clippings in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

SPAGHETTI PIE
MIXED GREEN SALAD
VINAIGRETTE DRESSING
SLICED FRENCH OR ITALIAN BREAD
INSTANT CHOCOLATE PUDDING

Recipes

SPAGHETTI PIE

This dish takes about 20 minutes to assemble, can be made in advance and amply feeds 4-6 people.

8 ounces spaghetti or fusilli (squiggly spaghetti)
2 tablespoons margarine
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 eggs
1 pound sweet Italian bulk sausage or 1 pound hamburger
1 32-ounce jar Ragu chunky-style tomato sauce with mushrooms and green peppers
1 cup cottage or ricotta cheese
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese

Cook spaghetti according to package directions, drain in colander, return to warm pan and toss with margarine.

Beat Parmesan and eggs together, mix with buttered spaghetti in pan. Form mixture into a "crust" in a 10-inch or 12-inch buttered pie plate. Set aside.

Cook the sausage in a skillet or microwave, breaking up the big chunks as it cooks; drain the fat. Starting with half the jar of Ragu sauce, blend with meat. Add more sauce to make a thick meat sauce but do not make it soupy.

Spread the cottage or ricotta cheese over the spaghetti "crust;" fill "pie" with meat mixture. Bake, uncovered, in a 350-degree oven for 25 minutes.

Sprinkle mozzarella on top, bake 10 minutes longer or until the cheese melts and is bubbly.

A time-saving hint: Double this recipe and make two pies, putting one in the freezer for those times when life is unusually hectic. Or you can make this early in the day or even the night before and pop it in the oven, adding about 10 minutes to the baking time.

MIXED GREEN SALAD

Wash and mix red or green leaf lettuce, and bibb lettuce. Add any other vegetables you may have on hand and toss with some of the dressing, which is quick and easy to make.

VINAIGRETTE DRESSING

This recipe makes a large amount of dressing, which should not be refrigerated. Make it in an old salad dressing bottle and be sure to shake it vigorously each time before using.

1¼ cup oil
⅓ cup white wine vinegar
1 clove garlic, mashed 1 teaspoon dijon mustard pinch of oregano
pinch of thyme dried parsley (do not use fresh) sprinkle of paprika

INSTANT CHOCOLATE PUDDING

Make this in the blender according to the directions on the package. Spoon into some favorite custard cups and top with a little whipped cream.

Shopping List

8 ounces spaghetti or fusili
1 pound sweet Italian bulk sausage or 1 pound hamburger
1 jar Ragu chunky-style tomato sauce with mushrooms and green peppers (32 ounce) cottage or ricotta cheese mozzarella cheese
Parmesan cheese
2 eggs
margarine
1 head bibb lettuce
1 head red leaf lettuce
1 head romaine lettuce your choice of veggies for the salad oil
white wine vinegar
garlic
Dijon mustard oregano
thyme dried parsley paprika
instant chocolate pudding
whipped cream
French or Italian bread

Pasta, fixed so many different ways, is No. 1 choice

AP — Pasta has made it to the top of America's list of favorite foods. The options have expanded from macaroni and cheese and spaghetti and meatballs to an endless array of side dishes, salads, main courses and desserts in a variety of shapes, sizes and flavors.

Pasta can be baked, boiled, fried, spiced, steamed, stuffed, smothered with sauce, mixed with meatballs, or dipped in chocolate and covered with whipped cream.

Pasta comes in more than 600 shapes; in colors of red, orange, yellow, or green; and in shrimp, nut and herb flavors.

Pasta is found on athletes' tables as they load up on carbohydrates before a competition — and in countless kitchens where even the busiest or most inexperienced home chef can create a meal in minutes — and feel like a gourmet.

The National Pasta Association in Arlington, Va., is spreading the good news about pasta.

- Pasta is an excellent source of complex carbohydrates.
- Two ounces of dry pasta contain 210 calories.
- Pasta is a good source of protein, vitamins and minerals, and is naturally low in sodium, fat and cholesterol.

Fresh pasta, packaged soft and sold refrigerated, is growing in popularity in the United States.

Justin Arecchi, president of Frescala Foods in San Antonio, Texas, makers of fresh pasta products, says: "One of the best things about fresh pasta is that it has more texture, or 'bite' in your mouth, and it has a taste of its own. It's not just a vehicle for the sauce."

Fresh pasta is quick and easy to prepare. The cooking time is short — about one or two minutes. (Most people have a tendency to overcook pasta, resulting in a mushy, bland-tasting product.)

"Test the fresh pasta after about 45 seconds," Arecchi recommends. "If it has a white center, it's not done. If it's springy and has resistance to the bite, it's ready."

Arecchi offers another tip: "Fish pasta out with a net when you think it's done. Don't pour the water and pasta into a strainer because you may need the boiling water to cook the pasta for a few more seconds."

When the pasta is cooked just right, toss with a sauce or other ingredients in a heated bowl.

"Fresh pasta has such good texture and taste that it makes a satisfying meal when served with just a small amount of butter, cheese or seasonings for added flavor," Arecchi says.

Grab some sunshine, give a Florida party

Gundella

It's January. The holidays are over. Three cold winter months lie ahead before spring. If you are able do, I suggest that you all come on down here to Florida and bask in the sunshine.

But if that's not possible, do the next best next thing — bring Florida to you!

Have a Sunshine Brunch, an Afternoon Beach Party, or a Dinner 'Neath the Palms.

This party can be a romantic party for two, or a real beach blast for 20, or 200, if you have the room.

IF YOU DECIDE to do it, do it right. Enter into the spirit of it all the way.

If you plan a daytime party, you need lots of light, and even a sunlamp or two, properly placed. And turn up the thermostat.

Remove all the pictures and ornaments from the walls of the room you are using, and tape up white paper. (You can buy large rolls, six feet wide.) Cover the walls completely, and using tempura, paint beach scenes with palm trees, sand, sail boats, pelicans, dolphins, herons, and sea gulls.

Pencil them in first. You do not have to be a great artist. Then paint them in like a child with a coloring book.

Use shells, fish nets, lobster floats, sponges and beachballs for decorations. I once covered my living room floor with painter's drop cloth to protect the carpet, and set up a sand box right in the middle of it, with pails and shovels, so my guests could build sand castles.

SET ASIDE a place for your friends to change into their bathing suits or shorts, and make sure they take their shoes and socks off, and go barefoot, or wear sandals or thongs.

Provide them with coconut scented suntan oil to rub on their skin and tell them all to bring along a big beach towel to sit or lie on.

Get a mood tape which is just the sound of waves rolling in on the beach, and use it for background — even if you play Key Largo, Magaritaville, Songs in a Sea Shell, or Down in the Florida Keys on another cassette player at the same time.

Serve lots of orange juice and lemonade and citrus coolers. Your menu can be simple or elaborate.

If you plan an evening party, your lighting should be very different. Little-twinkling lights on the ceiling can give the illusion of stars. Strobe candles stuck in your potted plant dishes are nice. Use citronella candles on your table as you would on your picnic table outside.

TO GET IN the right mood for a night at the beach, your guests should still wear bathing suits, even if they wear a robe or beach cover-up over them.

Let your imagination run wild, and you would be surprised how quickly you can forget the Michigan weather outdoors.

If your party is small, no more than 10 people, try starting out with a Yumba-Yumba, Gumba-Gumba.

You will need long straws, like they use in some Chinese restaurants where they serve drinks to be shared. Or, you can go to a hardware store and get clear plastic tubing, and cut it to the desired length.

THOSE OF YOU who have never experienced Yumba-Yumba, Gumba-Gumba, it is best described as just that — a real experience.

A watermelon is hollowed out and filled with tropical punch of your choice. Everyone lies flat on their stomachs around a melon bowl, like spokes in a wheel, and — using the long straws — they drink from the melon at the same time.

Even if you do not put rum in the punch, people get giddy just from the silliness of it all.

Taking part in a Yumba-Yumba, Gumba-Gumba on a beach in Florida can make a Scrooge giggle, and even on the floor in Michigan it is still a great ice-breaker.

Suggested Recipes

If you feel like splurging, you can, of course, serve lobster in any form, and everyone will be happy.

In the Florida Keys, where you can catch your own, we have often had left-over lobster which we fixed into salads, bisques or crepe fillings. But in Michigan, lobster is very expensive, and left-over lobster is nonexistent.

So, I have chose the following recipes to share with you. All are tasty, authentically Floridian, and not too expensive to prepare.

WELCOME HOME PORK CHOPS
(I stole this recipe from Jim Tucci, editor of the Key West Citizen.)

6 thick lean pork chops
a fistful of brown sugar lots of barbecue sauce (hot or mild)
3 limes
2 onions, sliced into 6 pieces pinch of salt
dash of pepper
a sprinkle of paprika!

Place pork chops in a good sized baking pan. Smother with barbecue sauce, and sprinkle with brown sugar. Place a slice of onion on top of each pork chop. Place one slice of lime on top of each onion. Squeeze lime juice from the remaining limes over all, and bake for about one hour at 350 degrees.

Serve with baked, boiled or mashed potatoes and grilled slices of pineapple.

FLORIDA FRUIT DIP
Mix together:
2 eggs
¼ cup orange juice
¼ cup honey
½ cup plus one tablespoon Kaluha

Heat, stirring constantly, until it thickens. Cool, and fold in ½ pint whipped cream.

Serve with bite-sized pieces of fruit: bananas, strawberries or melon.

EASY PICADELLO
2 pounds ground beef
½ cup olive oil
4 medium onions, chopped
3 cloves garlic, crushed or finely chopped
1 6 ounce can tomato paste
½ cup stuffed green olives (chopped)
salt and pepper to taste
3 ½ ounce bottle capers, drained
½ cup raisins
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 green peppers, seeded and diced
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon oregano (more if you like)

Brown the meat in olive oil, in a heavy skillet. Drain. Add remaining ingredients. Mix well. Cook over low heat, stirring, for 30-30 minutes.

Serve on rice, with fried plantains on the side.

FRIED PLANTAINS

Choose ripe plantains.

Cut in half, across the center, and cut each half in two, lengthwise. Boil until just tender. (Don't overcook).

Drain and brown in butter, until golden brown in color. Serve with meat as you would sweet potatoes.

I have had a terrible time trying to decide which recipes to include here. Florida fruits, vegetables, seafoods and meats make one want to cook (and eat) forever.

I left out all avocado and papaya recipes, and even my favorite orange meringue pie. But if you want these recipes, and more, I will be glad to share them with you when I return home at the end of this month. Just call or write me at: Box 434, Garden City , Michigan 48135 427-1072.

In fact, if I have time, I just may prepare a cookbook made up of nothing but Florida foods. Until then, "think Sunshine."

● Church cookbook

"Our Third Collection" is off the presses and available to the public. This cookbook recently was published by the First Presbyterian Church Presbyterian Women's Association in Birmingham.

The first two collections of the book were in 1926 and 1952. Taste section columnist Lois Thieleke, certified home economist, Michigan State University, cooperative extention service, Oakland County, was the cookbook's nutritionist and wrote much of the special diet information given in a special section of the book.

All of the book is handwritten by members of the church in several styles of calligraphy and handwriting. The cookbook is $12.95, including postage and handling, and may be ordered from Presbyterian Women's Association, First Presbyterian Church 1669 W. Maple Road, Birmingham 48009.

All proceeds from the book will be used to help feed the hungry in Haiti, as well as Detroit and other local areas.

clarification

The second paragraph of instructions was missing from a recipe for Microwave Cauliflower and Tomatoes that ran Jan. 1 in the Taste section. The complete recipe follows:

MICROWAVE CAULIFLOWER AND TOMATOES
2 cups cauliflower flowerets
2 green onions, sliced
2 tablespoons water
1 medium tomato, seeded and chopped
1 slice bacon, cooked, drained and crumbled
½ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
⅛ teaspoon salt

In a 1-quart, microwave-safe casserole combine cauliflower, onions and water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 5 to 7 minutes or until cauliflower is crisp-tender. Drain well.

Meanwhile, in a mixing bowl stir together tomato, bacon, basil and salt. Toss tomato mixture with cauliflower mixture. Makes 4 servings.

January skies feature 5 easily seen planets

Raymond E. Bullock

The highlights for January will include: a meteor shower, the earth will be closest to the sun, and an eclipse of the sun will occur but it will not be visible from our area.

All five of the naked eye planets will be visible this month. Mars and Saturn will be in the pre-dawn sky, Jupiter will be in the evening sky. Mercury and Venus begin the month in the evening sky but both move rapidly into the pre-dawn sky by month's end.

The amount of sunlight we receive will increase by only 49 minutes in January. On Jan. 1 the sun rose at 8:01 a.m. and set at 5:10 p.m., allowing for a possible nine hours and nine minutes of sunlight. On the 31st these times are 7:47 a.m. and 5:45 p.m. for a possible nine hours and 58 minutes of sunlight.

For many people, January is the beginning of a new year. But in primitive Rome the new year started with the first day of spring. Ancient Persians began their year with the first day of autumn. Many other skywatchers divided their year into two parts — at the end of summer's heat and the end of winter's cold.

The custom of celebrating Jan. 1 as New Year's Day goes back to the Roman Julian calendar. The month was named in honor of their god Janus, the keeper of the gates. He had two faces; one looking back to the past, the other forward to the future.

IT WAS ALSO the Julian calendar that introduced the leap year. Since the earth takes 365¼ days to orbit the sun, the calendar is off by one day after every four years. Julius Ceasar decreed that every fourth year would have 366 days to keep the calendar in line with the seasons.

While the Julian calendar was a vast improvement over other calendars, it too was off by 11 minutes and four seconds each year, which adds up to one day every 128 years.

By the year 1582 the calendar was off by 10 days, so Pope Gregory revised the calendar by dropping those 10 days and introducing another correction. The Gregorian calendar was not adopted by everyone at once. It wasn't until another 170 years had passed that England accepted it in 1752. By then it was necessary to drop 11 days from the calendar, much to the objection of a large number of people who started a riot, demanding the return of their 11 days. (Monthly rent and bill payments were suddenly due 11 days earlier.)

Even the Gregorian calendar is off by 28 seconds a year. At that rate the discrepancy will add up to another full day — but not for 1,500 years.

VENUS WILL present a most impressive view through a telescope for the next week. It is close to the earth and will appear as a backlighted crescent.

The moon was at First Quarter phase at 7:40 a.m. on Jan. 4. The moon is one-quarter of its way around the earth.

Earth is at perihelion (closest point to the sun) at noon on Jan. 4. We will be 147,099,880 km (91,403,627.81 miles) from the sun. Obviously our proximity to the sun is NOT responsible for our seasons. We are dealing with some of the coldest temperatures of the year in January when we are closest to the sun. Our seasons, and corresponding changes of the temperature, are due to the tilt of our planet's orbit around the sun, rather than our distance from it. When are we farthest from the sun? In July, of course, when our temperatures approach their highest.

Venus was 20 degrees from the sun on the 5th and still will be an easy object to spot in the west southwest after sunset.

Saturn was in conjunction with the sun on the 6th. The planet is located behind the sun, as seen from the earth, and is not visible. By the end of the month it will be possible to glimpse Saturn in the morning sky.

THE MOON formed a triangle with the star Aldebaran (Al-DEB-a-ran), the "eye' of Taurus the bull, and the Pleiades (PLEE-a-dees) star cluster, the bull's "shoulder," on Jan. 7.

On Jan. 8 the moon will form a broad triangle with Aldebaran and Jupiter, the bright "star" below and to the north (left) of the moon. The moon will be just four degrees from Jupiter on the 9th.

Full Moon will be at 11:57 p.m. on Jan. 10. The moon will be fully lighted by the sun and will form a triangle with Castor and Pollux in Gemini. Castor is the star above Pollux.

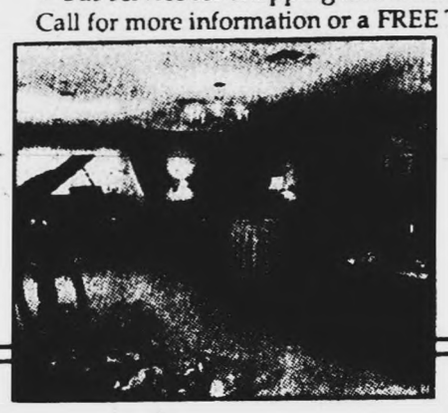

Venus will be only 11 degrees from the sun on the 12th and will be difficult to see unless you have an unobstructed view of the horizon. In only two weeks Venus will be visible in the morning sky, rising before the sun.

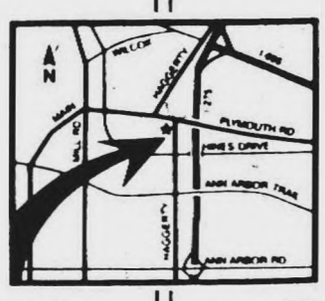

The bright star only two degrees above the moon around 9:15 p.m. on the 13th is Regulus (REG-u-lus), the "heart" of Leo the lion.

Regulus is about 85 light years away. The light we see tonight left Regulus in 1905.

Rocks break Ypsi's unbeaten streak

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Ryan Johnson and Jeff Gold were sophomores playing on the varsity basketball team when visiting Plymouth Salem got blown out by Ypsilanti two years ago.

They were back on the same court Friday night, but it was a much different result this time.

The Rocks were the underdogs once again, but nobody had that impression of them after Salem trounced the Braves 78-58 and removed Ypsilanti from the ranks of the unbeaten.

"This is the first time in Salem history that we've beaten them on this floor," coach Bob Brodie said.

"It's a tremendous feeling to come in here and do that — and that's a good basketball team."

Not only did Salem, 3-1, have the memory of its last visit to Ypsilanti as motivation but also a December loss to Southfield in its last game before the holiday break. The Braves are 5-1.

"WE WANTED to come out and play our game," said Johnson, who scored 14 points and hauled in six rebounds. "The intensity was there, too.

"I wouldn't say we were at our peak, but I'd say we played four quarters of basketball. We played Salem basketball and came out with the W."

Salem's game was the same as Ypsilanti's — run and gun — but the Rocks were better at it this night.

Junior forward Jake Baker had the big night for Salem with game-high totals of 22 points and 17 rebounds.

The 6-foot-5 Baker headed an impressive rebounding effort, which allowed the Rocks to run the break. He had 12 defensive rebounds, and juniors K.C. Kirkpatrick and John Hoffmeyer had six apiece at that end of the floor.

"We're a good breaking team," Baker said. "I think we surprised them last year, too. We beat them by 20, but I think they figured they just didn't play well.

"WE WERE hungry for a win. We came out intense and were scrapping for every loose ball. Nobody was holding back."

The first of two triples by Baker put the Rocks in front for good at 10-9, and then Salem took off, racing to a 20-11 lead at the end of the first quarter as the Rocks heated up the break.

Baker's jumper midway in the second quarter gave Salem its biggest lead, 31-15, before the Braves, with triples by Wendell Rodgers and Ivan Davis, closed to 35-28 at halftime.

"They're a real fast team, and we were beating them at their own game," Gold said. "I was worried at first if we could stay with them.

"But we wanted it more; we wanted it a lot more. We had slow first quarters in other games, and we wanted to turn that around. In this one, we just exploded."

Gold chipped in eight points and also had seven steals. In addition to Baker and Johnson, Kirkpatrick and Hoffmeyer also played well around the basket.

The 6-5 Kirkpatrick scored 11 of his 13 points in the second half, and the 6-4 Hoffmeyer came off

Chiefs OT winners

Rob Wilson drained a pair of key shots in overtime, enabling Plymouth Canton to square its record at 2-2 with a 62-60 win at South Lyon Friday.

The Chiefs earned their victory because they "played a solid defensive game," said coach Dave Van Wagoner. Canton also benefited from some poor South Lyon free-throw shooting. The Lions converted just 14 of 28 from the stripe; Canton made eight of 10.

Brett Howell's 14 points was high for the Chiefs. Tony Coshatt had 12 (and 12 rebounds), Kevin Holmes chipped in with 10 and Daryl Magreta totaled eight.

Dave Reutter notched 15 points for South Lyon to lead all scorers.

RU 77, CLARENCEVILLE 57: It looked to be a pretty even match, Friday night's basketball game pitting Redford Union against Livonia Clarenceville.

"They're a good team," said RU coach Tip Smathers of his opponents. "They beat us in a pre-season scrimmage."

That might come as a shock to anyone examining the results of the latest encounter — a one-sided affair that RU dominated from the opening tip, strolling to a 77-37 non-league triumph at Clarenceville.

Coaches can usually find all sorts of complicated reasons for a defeat, but this one was rather elementary.

Doug Nevi, competing here in the 200-yard freestyle, was on the freestyle relay team that netted Canton a second place. The Chiefs were second in too many events, however, as Brighton edged in front for an 87-85 victory in Canton's first dual meet of the season. It was the fourth meet for the Bulldogs, who won nine of the 11 events.

Bulldogs nip Chiefs

Plymouth Canton's first dual meet in boys swimming was an eye opener.

The Chiefs realized they have some work to do, coach Hooker Wellman said, after being edged by visiting Brighton 87-85.

"That's not bad; we had some good times," Wellman said. "But some kids see the handwriting on the wall — they have to put out a little more. We tried fighting back, but it just wasn't there.

"That's what the first meet does. It opens your eyes, and they're open wide now."

Canton won only two events as the Bulldogs seemed to win all the close races. Bryce Anderson was first in the butterfly (56.72), and Ron Trosin won the breaststroke (1:07.74).

"We lost every close chance we had, and we had about six of them," Wellman said. "But it was our first dual meet and their fourth. So they had a little more experience behind them."

The Chiefs, 0-1, were put at an early disadvantage when Brighton, 2-2, finished first and second in the 200 freestyle and individual medley. Canton swimmers were third in each event, getting nosed out for second place.

"We had a hard time recovering from that," Wellman said. "Had we taken second in one of them, we would have tied and, if we had done it in both, would have won the meet."

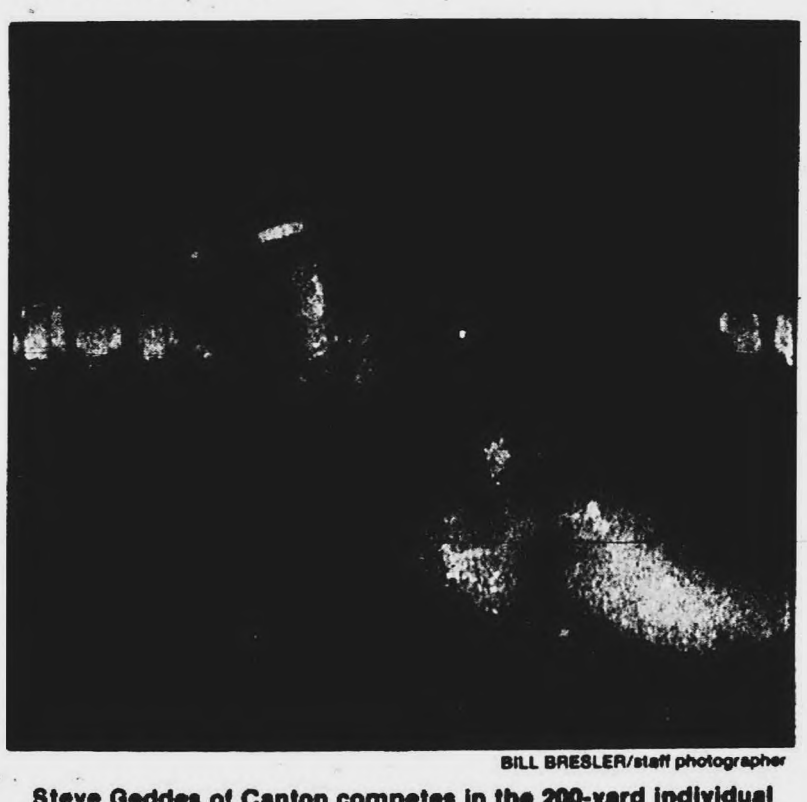

Including both relays, Canton was second in seven events.

In freestyle races, Chris Bird went 25.06 in the 50, Drew Lang 54.09 in the 100 and Steve Geddes 5:22.35 in the 500.

Nick Atwell was runner-up in diving with 165.90 points, and Anderson's time of 1:02.14 netted second place in the backstroke.

Anderson also joined with Kevin Beach, Mark Ealovega and Josh Blunt for a 1:48.32 showing in the medley relay. The freestyle relay team consisted of Lang, Doug Nevi, Matt Tertel and Geddes and finished in 3:45.73.

The Chiefs travel to Belleville for a non-league meet Tuesday and visit Plymouth Salem on Thursday, Jan. 18.

Steve Geddes of Canton competes in the 200-yard individual medley. He also participated in the 500 freestyle and freestyle relay.

Ex-S'craft star takes his game to Philippines

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Carlos Briggs loved his stay so much in the Philippines that he forgot to come home for Christmas.

But the 6-foot guard, who once led the nation in scoring at Schoolcraft Community College, was back in time to ring in the new year.

"I stayed a couple of more weeks after our season ended because I was having such a good time," said Briggs, who was voted "Best Import" after averaging nearly 63 points per game for Anejo Rum 65, one of six teams in the Reinforced Conference of the Philippines Professional Basketball League.

The 25-year-old Briggs spent three months overseas and was an instant hit with the basketball-crazed country.

He led his underdog Anejo Rum 65 team to the finals of the Reinforced Championship Series before losing (four games to two) to the favorite, San Miguel Beer, which was led by former Alabama star and NBA player Ennis Whatley.

Briggs, who also played collegiately at Baylor, became the darling of fans who regularly jammed into the 12,000-seat University of Life Arena in Manila for the championship series.

TO SAY BRIGGS didn't enjoy all the attention would be a gross understatement. His crowd-pleasing antics won the people over.

"I'm the type of player who has a lot of different parts to my game," said Briggs, who was nicknamed "Goldfish" and "Red."

"I'm not a dunker. I think that kind of surprised them."

Briggs was constantly written about in the nine different newspapers and magazines which cover the sport. Briggs also appeared on numerous TV and radio shows, and on one occasion was mobbed by adoring fans in a McDonald's.

Carlos Briggs
Philippines pro player

"Once people heard I was in there, they started coming in from everywhere off the street," Briggs said. "They had to close the restaurant because I was causing a disturbance.

"The imports (one American per team) are just as important as actresses and senators. Basketball players are the most popular over there."

Briggs made nearly $27,000 (tax free) during his three-month stint. He was also given a free two-room condo in Greenhills (20 minutes outside Manila), maid service, a car and a driver, an errand boy and a gym shoe contract.

He is hoping he will be invited back for the second league season, which begins Feb. 11.

Salem matmen whip opponents

Plymouth Salem had three triple winners Thursday in a triple dual meet at Garden City.

Ken Stopa, Steve Burlison and Brian Burlison were 3-0 as the Rocks won two of three dual meets.

Salem whipped Garden City 54-24 and Northville 39-16, but defending state champion Temperance Bedford defeated the Rocks 50-13.

The 125-pound Stopa pinned his Garden City and Bedford opponents in 1:30 and 2:31, respectively, and won by decision (4-2) against Northville.

Steve Burlison, wrestling at 160, had a 33-second pin in the Garden City match and added a pair of decisions in the next two, 6-2 and 3-1.

In the 189 division, Brian Burlison started with back-to-back pins in 2:00 and 27 seconds and won by 8-0 decision in the Bedford dual.

Salem's Julian Sell (130), Jeff Coleman (140) and Pete Israel (171) won two matches each, defeating Garden City and Northville wrestlers.

Sell had two pins, in 14 seconds and 1:41. Coleman won by void and 2-1 decision, and Israel also had two pins, in 1:12 and 5:15.

In the Garden City match, Dan Bonnett (112), Charlie Apigian (152) and heavyweight Ken Coker registered pins, which took them 2:45, 1:12 and 0:37, respectively, to achieve.

Salem's other winners against Northville were Chad Wilson (119) and heavyweight Scott Breithaupt. Wilson recorded a pin in 3:00, and Breithaupt needed just 19 seconds to pin his opponent.

The Rocks will be host for a tri-meet Tuesday against Plymouth Canton, Ann Arbor Pioneer and Ann Arbor Huron. Salem visits North Farmington for a dual meet Thursday.

Salem, Orris avenge swim defeat

'We're still not swimming as well as we should be . . . But a win is a win," he added. "I was wondering if we were going to get one before the middle of the season.'

— Chuck Olson
Salem swim coach

Plymouth Salem chalked up a sweet victory in boys swimming Thursday night, and senior Ron Orris enjoyed sweet revenge in a roundabout way.

The Rocks, who lost the dual meet with Novi last year, handed the Wildcats their first loss of the season, 89-82, in the loser's pool. Salem is 1-1, Novi 3-1.

In the 500-yard freestyle, Orris broke former Novi swimmer Jon Cohen's pool record of 4:39.0 by winning that race in 4:37.95.

"Ron took a little pride in breaking one of Cohen's records," Salem coach Chuck Olson said.

When they went head-to-head in the dual meet last year at Salem, Cohen, one of the top swimmers in the state along with Orris, edged his Salem rival in the IM and 500.

ORRIS ALSO won the 200 freestyle Thursday with a 1:49.32 time, and Pat McManaman recorded a career-high 240.05 diving points to capture first place in that event.

The Rocks finished with victories in the last two events, taking the lead and victory away from Novi.

Salem's Mark Erickson won the breaststroke in 1:09.16, and teammate Brian Keppen supplied a key second place finish in 1:09.35, enabling the Rocks to pull in front for the first time, 79-78.

WITH ONLY the 400 freestyle relay remaining, Salem needed only to win that event to earn the team victory, and the Rocks did just that. Chris Caiola, Eric Bunch, Joe Pawluszka and Orris touched at 3:28.42.

"We're still not swimming as well as we should be," Olson said. "We did a little better in spots, but we worked out this morning and maybe they were a little tired.

"I keep telling them to watch Ron — just do as he does," Olson said, tongue-in-cheek. "He is something to watch in the water.

"But a win is a win," he said. "I was wondering if we were going to get one before the middle of the season."

Salem has dual meets this week with Ann Arbor Huron (Tuesday) and Northville (Thursday), and the Rocks meet Plymouth Canton and Livonia Stevenson on successive Thursdays the next two weeks.

Briggs hit with foreign pros

and it was hard to communicate," Briggs said. "If you win, they like you. If you lose, they tell you about it. Our team was predicted to finish last because we were the oldest group, but they liked us because we had a 'never-say-die' attitude."

BRIGGS may have found his niche as a basketball player in the Philippines.

Once a fourth-round draft pick of the San Antonio Spurs, Briggs has been a gypsy of sorts. He had brief stints in both Dallas Mavericks' and Detroit Pistons' training camps. He also had a cup of coffee with the Rockford Thrillers (Ill.) of the Continental Basketball Association.

Briggs hooked up with Anejo Rum 65 after 43-year-old player-coach Robert Jaworski, a legend in Philippine basketball, was given Briggs' name by former University of Detroit and NBA players Earl Cureton and Terry Duerod.

"My agent got me a tryout so I went to Philadelphia to meet him (Jaworski)," recalls Briggs. "They weren't sure about my game, but they looked at some of my videotapes I brought from Baylor and the CBA."

Briggs quickly adjusted to the climate ("95 and humid"), the traffic ("the worst") and the style of play ("It's physical.")

"A couple players didn't think I'd last," Briggs said. "If you don't play well, they'll send you home. I know a couple of Americans who were gone after three weeks."

BRIGGS COMPETED against imports Keith Smart (formerly of Indiana), Dexter Shouse (South Alabama), Terence Bailey (Wagner), Steve Burtt (Iona) and Whatley.

He (Briggs) led the league in scoring, while averaging 11 rebounds. Briggs was also among the league leaders in steals and assists.

He also recorded the second highest point total ever in the Philippine Professional game, scoring 89 points, second only to former NBA gunner Billy Ray Bates, who once topped the 100-mark.

The American import is expected to score and carry the load, and Briggs, as he did when he led Schoolcraft to the Eastern Conference title in 1983-84, was up to the task.

In Game No. 3 of the championship series, he poured in 71 points (to Whatley's 41) in a 138-134 victory. In another game he hit 30 of 32 free throws. In another game he connected on 12 three-pointers.

"The American is supposed to do everything, score and rebound," he said. "It's a lot of fast-breaking. You don't set up down low."

No import can stand over 6 feet 5 inches tall. Most Philippine players are under 6-4.

"The Americans are a lot more talented, but a couple of the (native) players there could play in the CBA but not the NBA," Briggs said.

PLAYING PROFESSIONALLY in the Philippines also has its drawbacks.

"They play NBA rules, but you can get hurt," said the Detroiter who prepped at Benedictine High. "The referees are terrible. You get a lot of cheap shots. They try to get you off your game. Once I got punched in the stomach taking a jump shot."

Briggs also stayed clear of the ill-fated attempted military coup by pro-Marcos forces (Nov. 29 through Dec. 8).

"The whole thing (coup) started right behind where I live," Briggs said. "They moved us (the team) to an international hotel where we stayed for 10 days. Two games were delayed. I saw some shooting, but nobody killed. When I got back some windows my condo were shot out.

"My mother (Betty) called the American Embassy and she finally got through to me at 5 in the morning. She was all worried. I told her I was just fine. It wasn't anymore dangerous than being in Detroit."

But because he was a celebrity, Briggs was able to pass freely through military blockades in and around Manila.

"I NEVER had to wait in line for anything," he said. "It was always, 'Mr. Briggs, come right this way.' People were real nice. I got invited into peoples' homes. I had no problems or worries. It's a country where you are either rich or poor."

With a break of more than a month, Briggs is waiting for the next call.

"My agent is talking to some CBA teams," he said. "I should know by Jan. 8 if I'll be going back (for the Open Season). Right now they're trying to get two imports per team. I wouldn't mind going back. I think the fans liked me."

S'craft women trounce HFCC

The Schoolcraft Community College women's basketball team took to the road Wednesday and picked up a 66-55 victory at Henry Ford Community College.

The win improves the Lady Ocelots' record to 7-3 overall and to 3-1 in the Eastern Conference.

Freshman forward Tricia Lukas and sophomore guard Ann Hardy led the Schoolcraft attack. Each had 15 points. Lukas also contributed 15 rebounds, 10 of which came in the first half.

Sophomore center Barb Krug (Plymouth Salem) added 10 points and 10 rebounds.

The Schoolcraft men's basketball team also broke into the win column Wednesday, defeating visiting Southwestern Community College, 92-84.

Randy Watters paced the Ocelots (7-11) with 21 points and nine rebounds. Al Hudson added 20 points.

Eagles fall in tourney

A strong defensive effort in the second half brought St. Mary's College to the brink of victory in the opening round of the National Catholic Basketball Tournament in Dubuque, Iowa Thursday, but it wasn't enough.

The Eagles rallied from a 33-24 halftime deficit, limiting Loras College, the host team, to 20 second-half points. Still, Loras prevailed by a 53-51 margin.

Freshman Joachim Jerichow led St. Mary's with 11 points. Loras got 19 points from Rich Creger.

● RED WING OLTIMERS

The Detroit Red Wing Oldtimers will take on the best of the Livonia Over 30 Hockey Association in a benefit hockey game, beginning at 7 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 14, at Eddie Edgar Ice Arena in Livonia.

Among those who may participate in the game include former Wings players and coaches Mickey Redmond, Alex Delvecchio, Dennis Hextall, Nick Libbet, Billy Dea, Gerry Abel, Jim Peters, Bobby Kromm, Eddie Mio and Johnny Wilson.

Tickets are $3 each and are available at Carmack Appliance in Garden City (425-1790), the Looney Baker in Livonia and Colonial Card and Camera (Plymouth and Livonia locations).

All proceeds will benefit a former Livonia Hockey Association member who suffers from a brain tumor.

● PISTON SCHOLARSHIPS

For the 10th consecutive year, the Detroit Pistons Basketball club will award a pair of $1,000 college scholarships to local high school seniors.

To apply for the scholarship, a senior must submit an official application form, his or her high school transcript, SAT scores, a letter of recommendation from a faculty member and an essay, 500 words or less, "The Importance of a College Education."

Applications must be received by March 2, 1990, with the winners announced April 6.

Applications will be judged on the basis of academic and extracurricular achievements, along with the contents of the essay.

For more information, call the Pistons at 377-0100.

Rocks start '90s with upset victory the bench to add seven points. Kirkpatrick also grabbed eight rebounds and Hoffmeyer nine.

"THE BIG kids are young, so it takes some time for them to realize they can play," Brodie said.

"Over Christmas, we worked a lot on our inside game. Early on they look to Jake, but I tell them all five can score and tonight we seemed to grow with confidence."

Rodgers, a 6-3 forward, scored 21 points for the Braves, and Davis, a 6-1 forward, finished with 11. Guard Wayne Miner added nine. Ypsilanti didn't have a good shooting night, while the Rocks were 29-of-55 from the floor.

"When you press, you take chances," Ypsilanti coach Bob Rowley said. "They beat us down the floor and did something with it.

"I'm not necessarily surprised by it. I knew they could play basketball. They'll win at least 15 games, maybe more.

"The ones who hurt us were the center and two forwards," he said. "They beat us inside, and we didn't get much out of our people."

The battle to control the boards was guaranteed to be physical, with the Braves starting the 215-pound Davis, Rodgers (190) and 6-5 Charles Coleman (205) in the post. Plus, they brought Dyson Slater (6-2, 210) and Juqurry Armstrong (6-8, 280) off the bench.

That's where Johnson, a 6-3, 216-pound linebacker was of particular help.

"I ALWAYS take that as a challenge," he said. "I knew we were going to have to stand our ground in the trenches. Bake is a big guy, so are K.C. and Hoff — and we stood our ground."

Ypsilanti got within three points (39-36) midway in the third quarter, and it was still a three-point difference in the last minute when Kirkpatrick and Johnson scored the last four points to give Salem a 53-46 lead.

Kirkpatrick had the big play of the final quarter, too. He drove from the wing and scored the basket despite being upended. He converted the three-point play for a 63-50 lead with 4:15 remaining. Baker hit another trey to make it 67-52, and the Rocks turned the game into a blowout after that.

"I told (the players) we could be one of the best teams in the area, maybe the state, if we come focused for every game," Brodie said.

"'We're strong, we shoot the ball and we have decent quickness. If we come in focused, people are going to know we're in the gym.'"

Zebras post win

As Trojan coach Rob White described it, "We just couldn't hit the broad side of a barn. We were six of 25 (from the floor, 25 percent) in the first half, and those (baskets) were all layups. We did not hit a jump shot."

"The second half was pretty much the same," added White, whose team slipped to 3-2. RU is 5-2.

Steve Nowak had 12 points for the Panthers (with nine rebounds), and Dan Lezotte contributed 11.

Kendrick Harrington did score 18 points for Clarenceville. Frank Juncaj and Dan Nunnery both came off the bench to net 14 and 10 points, respectively.

WAYNE 56, MONROE 50: A lot can be said of the will to win, how it often propels teams far beyond the limits of their talents.

Thursday's Wolverine A League contest between Wayne Memorial and Monroe was a glittering example of winning despite a lack of effort. The Zebras prevailed, but it was due more to Monroe's ineptitude than Wayne's determination.

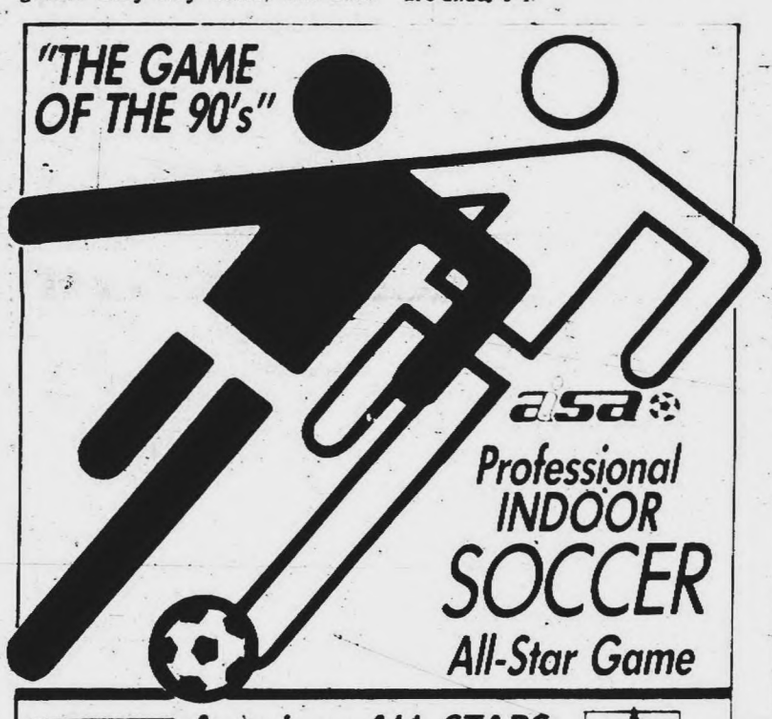

Wayne had a 15-point lead early in the second half, but let the non-pressing Trojans catch up and take a lead in the fourth quarter. The Zebras won it down the stretch because Larry Johnson, who scored 14 points, converted a three-point play with :20 left to push a one-point lead to four.

They also won it because of their free-throw shooting. Mind you, Wayne made just 11 of 21 in the game, and was a woeful four of seven in the fourth quarter. But Monroe was pitiful, connecting on just nine of 24 from the stripe in the game and missing all seven chances in the final period, including three one-and-ones in the last two minutes.

"We did not play a very good second half at all," said Wayne coach Chuck Henry. "We didn't play that well in the first half, either. In all honesty, (Monroe) should have won the game. They really should have."

Kevin Hankerson led Wayne with 19 points. Reggie Brandon chipped in with 10. Monroe was paced by Levi Phillips' 20 points and Curt Eighmey added 12.

Wayne is 5-1 overall, 3-0 in the WAL. Monroe dipped to 2-4 overall, 1-2 in the league.

Will bowling play a part in European revolution?

Al Harrison

A few random thoughts about our favorite pastime. Bowling is a sport for everybody, young and old, male or female, fat or slim, tall or short, all compete equally.

Cost-wise, bowling is far less expensive than most other sports, especially where basic equipment is concerned.

About eight nights of league bowling cost the same as one round of golf. Bowlers can enjoy bowling for about the same price as one meal at "McFast Foods."

Golfer's gear can cost 10 times as much as bowling equipment and in golf there aren't any ball returns, as they have to go chase the ball!

Now that recent world events have changed the face of Eastern Europe, when will bowling centers open in countries like Poland, Hungary and Romania? There have been established bowling centers in foreign countries, usually where United States Troops are stationed or longtime independent nations like Sweden.

How about Russia? Now that the "Cold War" is over will Brunswick open Moscow Lanes?

If anyone is not aware of it, there is an excellent publication, "Bowlers Digest," available at the counter of your local bowling house. This is a quality tabloid loaded with information concerning the sport of bowling and happenings in and around the local bowling community.

It is published every other Tuesday by the Greater Detroit Bowling Association.

Bowlers Digest was originated by the late Steve Cruchon in 1976. The publisher is Dee Cruchon and the editor is Rick Strobl.

The current issue has a fine article on spare shooting. Every bowler should read this.

The Bowling Charities annual tournament is scheduled for January 22 through February 4. It will take place at all BCA bowling centers in the Metropolitan area.

This is a worthwhile event and provides a lot of help to the various local charities.

League bowlers pay one dollar to participate in the qualifying series during regular league play. Finalists can win some pretty good prizes too.

I had the opportunity to test a new ball which will be introduced soon. It is the Thunderbolt "Dual Block" by Ebonite. This is a very hard-hitting ball with plenty of finishing hook.

I tried it on a regular factory sanded finish and found it to have terrific hooking action, too much for dry conditions.

I then used the Luster King polishing machine to cut down the big hook and found this ball to hold a nice line with still plenty of action on the pins.

This ball seems to carry extremely well, especially on the off-pocket hits that you don't normally expect to carry.

I think this ball will do well in competition.

● Bel Aire Lanes in Farmington had some pretty good action as usual in the Senior House League, as Ted Kress led the way with 255-206-232 for a 693 series. Paul Koenig shot 244/668, Bill Pietrzyk 648, Tom Johnson 643 and Bill Dryer a 252 game.

● At Country Lanes in Farmington Hills, the Greenfield Mixed League saw Carl Hansen roll 234/620, Jan Elliott 223/582, Ken Smith 224/600, Phil Saonye 257-202-209/668, Dan Christiansen 223/601, Jim Jimmerson 220/652, Gayle Prieskorn 216-214/605 with a free dinner at Rams Horn and Bill Pietrzyk a 641.

A week earlier, Barb Turner rolled an all-spare 185 game.

In the Country Lanes Noon Classic, Betty Harris rolled a 637 series with a block of 195-207-235, Linda Harris 223/594, Rainy Peters 216/571, Gloria 192/562, Linda Turman a 234 game and Gail Fehrenbach 212/588.

The results from the past week have Lori Craig posting a 695 series, including a 264 game (she also shot 279/694 Wednesday in the Majors), Chris Chism with a 603 series (she also had a 277½32 at Novi Bowl on Thursday), Mandy Carlson 214/579, Gloria Mertz 209/562, Connie Perozik 213/576, Rose Kukowski 205/575 and Joelle Wax 192/568.

As for the younger bowlers at Country Lanes in the past two weeks, the "Preps" saw Chris Brugman roll 97 pins over average for 180/490, John Gornall 152/400, Ray Turnbull with a 203 game, Scott Berger 178/480, Justin Snow 184, Rob Ashton 180 and Joe Loringer 179.

In the "Juniors," Brett Kotrba rolled a 170/454, Jason Holowecki 194/467, Tiffanie West a 203, Suzanne Carlson a 517 series, Melissa Ansama a 190 and Darnell Priemes a 168/483.

In the "High School" division, Marcy Eastman 201, Cecelia Buffa 197, Candi Schlacht 204/567, Mike Layman 208-214/576 and Craig Chalmers 206.

The "Beginners" had Chad Hines 137/337, Dustin Harriman 90/246, Shaun Saylor 135, Ryan Hayes 117 and Steven Olsen 82/223.

The Thursday Mixed League can use two more couples for the second half. The incentive is a $1,400 first prize. The league starts bowling at 9:10 p.m. on Thursday.

● Drakeshire Lanes in Farmington Hills featured Al Young's 748 series in the Tuesday Elks League. He had a block of 257-201-290.

● Westland Bowl on Wayne Road in Westland hosted the Tuesday Night Men's League and featured a sensational 803 series by Larry Vojtkowski. He had a block of 280-265-258. Dennis Celmer fired a 288/707, Bob Ashcraft 256/702, Mark McCusker a 276 game and Ken Gergel a 269.

● In the West Side Lutheran League at Redford Lanes, Bill Bryant hit a 680 series on games of 224-255-201. Kevin Cahmbers had a 669 set, Ken Ingram a 631 and Don Stark a 610.

Congratulations to the Evergreen Church team for winning the first half. Its sponsor is the Right Approach Pro Shop and the team consisted of: Captain "Babe" Radtke, Ken Ingram, Mark Raitz, Tony Karowich and Gene Rogers.

● At Mayflower Lanes in Redford, Debbie Gazdik shot a 255 in the Ladies Junior House League.

The Redford Keglers saw Dean Tremonti with 268/700.

The "Ladies Night Out" featured Irene Olander with a 638 set and Janet Yaske with a 618 series.

In the Gay 90's League, Ellen Jansen shot a 231 game and 605 series.

● Wonderland Lanes in Livonia hosted the Wonderland Classic League in which the Farmington Big Boy team fired a 3289 total (1129-1040-1120). Bob Forsythe led the way with a 254 game and 701 series.

K & S Bowling and Trophy racked up a 3257 total with John Chattaway rolling 234/665.

When he was a child, Peter Pitofsky used to practice the classic opening of the "Dick Van Dyke Show" tripping act to perfection. Today, Pitofsky has become the prince of pratfalls, performing his schtick in comedy clubs, which catches most audiences by surprise. Find out more about the comedian on Page 5D.

Leah Marlana Murray is a veteran of the Detroit auto show. She enjoys the work because of the "most interesting people" she gets to meet.

Auto show: 'Model not included'

By Greg Kowalski
staff writer

"Do you come with the car?"
(How clever.)
"Do you get dizzy up there?"
(So witty.)
"Are you wearing underwear?"
(Yes, but you'll never see it.)

Those are some of the questions (and unspoken answers) that routinely bombard models at auto shows like the North American International Auto Show being held through Sunday, Jan. 14, at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

For most of us, the models stand on pedestals, symbols of glamour and untouchable beauty.

Gorgeous women all, they sing the praises of Pontiacs, the fineries of Fords, the beauties of Buicks and all the other vehicles at the Detroit Auto Show.

They are also hard working young professionals bound together by a common thread of ambition, determination and good looks.

People often tend to view the models as window dressing and — even they admit — air heads.

"People think we have no brains," Sonna Johns said flatly. Johns has brains, so much so that she will shortly have her own cable TV show syndicated to several local communities.

Elizabeth Puelo doesn't fit the model stereotype either. She graduated from the University of Michigan with a bachelor of arts degree in communications.

Leah Marlana Murray is a student at Eastern Michigan University. Jamie Lynne Kolodziej attends Henry Ford Community College and has a cable TV show in Westland.

All are graduates of the John Roberts Power modeling school in Southfield and are working at the Detroit Auto Show. And all are veteran auto show models.

AT THIS point, it would be dramatic to say they have the battle scars to prove their experience. In reality, the scars are limited to their feet, from standing all day on three-inch heels.

And in reality, modeling IS glamorous.

"You get to meet the most interesting people," Murray said. For her, that includes late night TV talk show host David Letterman.

John's brush with a celebrity came in a different fashion.

"At one show, this guy kept coming up to me," she said. "I though 'Is he trying to put the make on me?' "

She politely brushed him off, but later noticed that people flocked around the man asking for his autograph. The man was Chicago Bears football star Walter Payton.

Have look, will model

By Greg Kowalski
staff writer

How do you become an auto show model?

First, of course, you have to be model material. That doesn't necessarily mean you have to be a "beanpole" fashion model type, but you have to have looks, charm and sophistication.

You're born with looks, but the other qualities are refined at modeling schools.

Several are in the metropolitan Detroit area. These include the John Roberts Power modeling school in Southfield, which is supplying several models for the North American International Auto Show now through Sunday at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

The schools, which often also serve as modeling agencies, charge in the area of $50 a week for a course that runs four to seven months. Once a model graduates, he (there are plenty of male models) or she becomes part of the agency's roster.

APPROXIMATELY 30 auto shows take place nationally each year. Generally, the automakers call the schools/agencies to acquire models.

The models go to auditions — or "cattle calls" as they unflatteringly say — which Aging didn't creep up on me; it jumped me from behind.

One night unbeknownst to me — while I slept — they invaded. First the mouth, then the eyes, and they worked their way up to my forehead. All the while I'm in sweet slumber, wrinkles were robbing me of my youth.

I can name the day — Oct. 12, 1989. I'll never forget it. I sat down to put my makeup on as I've done every morning for roughly 20 years. I don't mean I abuse my makeup, I mean . . . oh, you know what I mean . . .

I looked into my mirror and screamed in horror. Not only had wrinkles taken up permanent residency like some early squatters refusing to leave their land, the skin under my eyes had changed. Little bumps appeared on that ever so tender, darkening (even as I write) tissue.

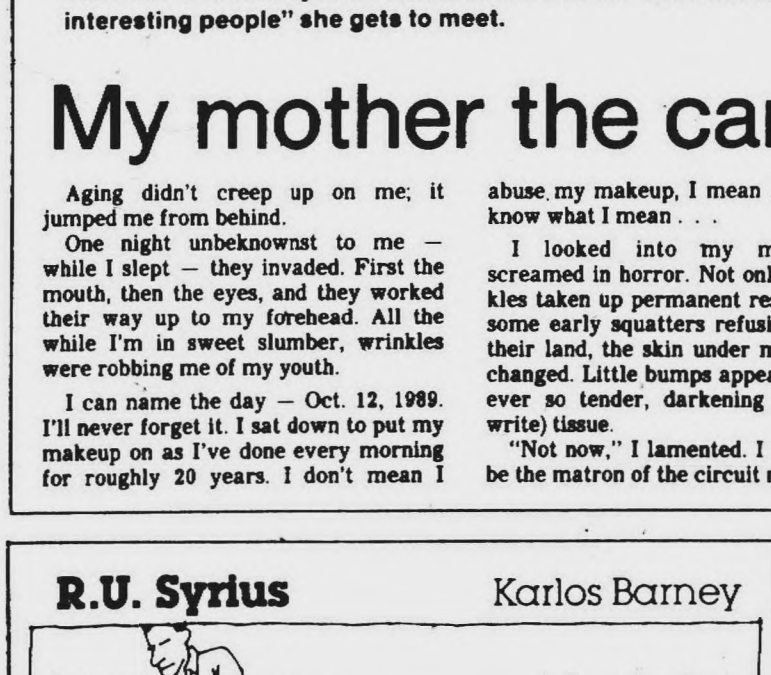

"Not now," I lamented. I would truly be the matron of the circuit now.

The circuit I speak of is the auto show. Yes, this year, 15 years after it had been my biggest dream, I was going to be an auto show girl. (Can you be one of the girls when your daughter is as old as some of these babes?) I have to say that timing has never been one of my strong points.

My goals had changed over the years, but mother love stepped in and con-

One Man's Budget Guide to London

First of two parts

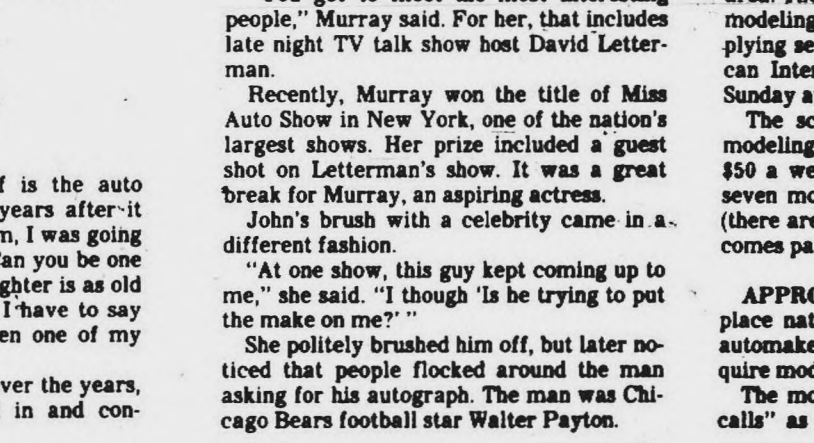

By Micky Jones
special writer

Are you ready for a winter vacation, one that doesn't include sandy beaches or snowy hills? Have you been avoiding a trip to Europe because of all those stories you hear about sky-high prices?

How about a low-cost winter vacation in London, typically considered one of the world's high-priced travel destinations? You don't need warm sunny days to enjoy most of London's attractions.

From now until early April, you can do London for half the cost of a similar trip in June or July, and you won't be standing in long lines of summer tourists from all over the world.

I recently spent several days in London at a cost of less than $70 a day for accommodations, meals, city transportation and entertainment. Including air fare from Detroit, it is possible to have a week in the Royal City for between $800-$900, or two weeks for $1,200-$1,300. A one-week vacation includes only six full days and nights in London because one night and most of a day is spent in the air.

MICKY JONES

There's plenty of night life to sample in London and on place to start is Picadilly Circus.

Here is a step-by-step guide to the kind of advance planning that saves money:

(1) Buy budget air fare. Six airlines are currently quoting $378 round-trip weekday fares, plus $36 tax, between Detroit and London. There is a surcharge, if you must travel weekends.

Tickets must be purchased at least 30 days prior to departure and no later than Feb. 1. Travel must be completed by late March or early April, depending on the airline. Tickets are non-refundable.

THE MOST convenient flights are on Pan American and British Airways which don't require a change of planes. British Airways quotes a fare $20 higher than the others, but says it makes up the difference with free movies, free drinks and lower taxes.

American Airlines requires a plane change in Dallas, Continental in Newark. On TWA, you change planes, and sometimes terminals, in New York. Northwest flies into London's less-convenient Gatwick Airport instead of Heathrow.

(2) Apply for a passport during the 30-day wait between ticket purchase and flight time. If you

Tom Cruise plays Ron Kovic and Kyra Sedgwick is Donna in Oliver Stone's "Born on the Fourth of July."

Despite structural flaws, 'Fourth' is worth seeing the movies

Dan Greenberg

"Born on the Fourth of July" is both excellent and disturbing, a film that defies conventional grading systems. Nonetheless, this long (144 minutes), shocking film — it's as R-rated as they come — deserves top grades in every category except structure.

"Born on the Fourth" unpleasantly depicts the transformation of Ron Kovic (Tom Cruise) from a nice young, all-American kid, growing up on Long Island, to a paraplegic, Vietnam veteran protesting the war and the U.S. Marines he had once worshipped.

That radical change was chronicled in an autobiographical book of the same title by the real Ron Kovic. The screenplay was co-authored by Kovic and director Oliver Stone, best known for his Oscar-winning "Platoon."

Stone, himself twice wounded in Vietnam, again demonstrates his comprehension and sensitivity toward the numerous issues involved in that complex U.S. tragedy known as the Vietnam War.

After an "all-American" childhood — one only the '50s and early '60s could provide — Ron Kovic enlisted in the U.S. Marines. He was as gung-ho as anyone about saving our way of life from Communism. His story serves as a metaphoric outline of America after World War II.

His childhood had girls, homeruns, family and all the good stuff — stuff that never prepared Kovic for the slaughter of innocent women and children in Vietnam, for the tragedy of combat, nor for the aftermath of his paralyzing wound.

MANY MONTHS in a Bronx veterans hospital, then returning home at a time when the "greening of America" was underway, a time when veterans were regarded suspiciously and when anti-war protests were mounting — all these late '60s-early '70s social factors led to despondency and Kovic's drunken degeneracy.

But Kovic emerged from those depths as an active Vietnam veteran against the war.

Reminding everyone of the appalling treatment of Vietnam veterans, as "Born on the Fourth" does so graphically, makes this film an important one. But it has other values as well.

Kovic's story tells much about our Vietnam tragedy and the lack of leadership America suffered in that period. Nonetheless, the film has significant structural problems.

One of its major points is the degeneration of American family structure in the past several decades. Despite the strength and tightness of the Kovic family — depicted at great length early on — it's hard to accept that they never visited their wounded son in the Bronx VA hospital. Long Island isn't that far.

According the Universal Studio materials furnished to the press, Kovic grew up in Wisconsin. Why then this structurally devisive change to Long Island which leaves viewers wondering what happened to the Kovic family.

As well, the film ends erratically with major gaps in the regeneration of Kovic's character. The last of these is a quick cut from the Republican Convention in 1972 to the Democratic one in '76.

EARLIER ON, Kovic is depicted unchanged until well into his second tour in 'Nam. These two glaring flaws clash with the careful fashioning of the youthful Kovic character.

There's no excuse for an accomplished filmmaker like Stone allowing such structural defects nor did he exhibit restraint in his camera work. The extensive use of facial close-ups works well in establishing the irritating realism that is so important to the film's intent. But that tends to annoy more than it should after a while.

Much worse, rapid panning of the camera as images swing wildly to project the terror of combat and the disruption of a soul sinking into hell is greatly overdone. It works, but only up to a point. Then, unlike facial closeups, it's not disturbing intensity, it's just distracting.

Despite these complaints, "Born on the Fourth of July" ought to be required viewing. We can learn from our mistakes. It may not be conventional entertainment, but it certainly is an important social document.

A great deal of disgusting detail has been offered by the distributors on behalf of "Leatherface: Texas Chainsaw Massacre III." They seem to think that violence, pain and suffering is clever, even great filmmaking.

However much money these films may make, the producers are wrong.

WE LIVE in very brutal, turbulent times and such films reflect the culture that produces them. But the media tends to exaggerate to attract attention, thereby escalating the savagery that characterizes our century.

Anything for a buck is the real motivation for all this drivel promoting "Chainsaw III." The film originally was scheduled for release last fall but its X rating caused a delay while it was recut to gain an R.

That ought to tell you something. When it opens on Jan. 12 don't support corruption and violence; vote "no" at the box office.

STILL PLAYING:

"The Bear" (B) (PG) 93 minutes.

Excellent nature photography but film often lacks continuity and gets pretty sappy at times.

"Dad" (B) (PG) 119 minutes.

Excellent acting by Jack Lemmon, Ted Danson, Zakes Mokae and Olympia Dukakis marred by clichés.

Clever idea and good performances shot down by weak script about father, son and grandson in robbery business.

Premiers dot DFT schedule

By John Monaghan
special writer

Like most movie fans, I await the new Detroit Film Theatre schedule with more than a little anticipation. It hangs on my refrigerator — must-see titles marked with yellow highlighter — and serves as my weekend social calendar for the next four months.

This Friday, "My Left Foot" officially kicks off the season with two weekends of screenings. "Roger and Me," the controversial new film about Flint, Mich., appears in a special preview this Thursday, a day before opening in theaters statewide.

"Roger and Me" almost didn't make it to the DFT. According to Michael Moore, the film's director, General Motors executives close to the Detroit Institute of Arts tried to squelch the screening at the museum's popular film series.

The film was finally scheduled after Moore firmly committed to a personal appearance where he will answer audience questions. The most common questions lately have concerned the film's scattered chronology in telling how 30,000 GM layoffs affected Moore's hometown of Flint.

"My Left Foot" (Jan 12-14 and 19-21) stars Daniel Day-Lewis in the true story of an Irish writer and painter Christy Brown. Stricken with multiple sclerosis and only able to use his left leg, he learns to overcome his disability.

"YOU ARE probably thinking like I did — that this is going to be an 'affliction of the week' movie," said DFT coordinator Elliot Wilhelm. "But it's nothing of the kind. It's about anyone who has something to say but can't find a means to express it."

Also playing for two weekends is "Story of Women" (Feb. 16-18 and 23-25), Claude Chabrol's focus on a female abortionist convicted of murder in 1943. Isabelle Huppert stars.

"Henry V," Kenneth Branagh's exciting new Shakespeare adaptation, plays Jan. 26-28.

"Mystery Train" (March 2-4) is the new film from Jim Jarmusch, the director of "Stranger than Paradise" and "Down by Law." Its three separate stories focus on transients in a fleabag Memphis hotel. Wilhelm hopes to get Screamin' Jay Hawkins (who plays a night clerk) to perform before the film.

Made in just 15 days by New York student filmmaker Charles Lane, "Sidewalk Stories" pays tribute to silent comedians in what Wilhelm describes as "a cross between Chaplin's 'City Lights' and 'The Kid.'" It screens Feb. 2-4.

Replacing the popular "Tournee of Animation" is the "New Animation Celebration" (Feb. 9-11), including the computer-animated "Tin Toy," Bill Plympton's "25 Ways to Quit Smoking," along with TV's "The Simpsons."

"SWEETIE," AN Australian film about the rivalry between a pair of very different sisters, screens April 6-8. It's the first feature by Jane Campion, called by some "the Australian David Lynch."

Fans of vintage film — in ecstacy during the wide screen tribute this past fall — will be disappointed to learn that only a small handful of older titles appear on the winter schedule.

"The Dybbuk" (March 24) is a 1937 Yiddish language film about a spirit that invades a woman on her wedding day. And 1962's "Carnival of Souls" (March 18) is a low-budget horror film shot in Kansas. Both films have already played on area screens.

Last season, DFT paid tribute to dancer Josephine Baker with a double feature of the French films, "Princess Tam Tam" (1935) and "Zou Zou" (1934). It was an amazing sell-out, prompting Wilhelm to bring them back to close the season on May 13.

SCREEN SCENE

DETROIT FILM SOCIETY, Detroit Public Library, 5201 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Call 833-4048 for information. ($25 membership, seniors and students $23)

"Call Her Savage" (USA — 1932), 7 p.m. Jan. 12 only. Society president Jim Limbacher introduces the film during a lecture about the steamy content of pre-Hays Code films. In this campy example, Clara Bow plays a feisty half-breed who takes Chicago by storm. A bit hard to take, but full of great moments, including what may be the movies' first scene in a transvestite club. Clips from Laurel and Hardy, W.C. Fields and Lillian Gish movies will also be screened.

DETROIT FILM THEATRE, Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Call 833-2323 for information. ($4)

"Roger and me" (USA — 1989), 7 p.m. only Jan. 11. Michael Moore's controversial documentary about his hometown of Flint, Mich., makes its Detroit premiere at the DFT before opening statewide the next day. The director will answer audience questions after the screening.

"My Left Foot" (Ireland — 1989), Jan. 12-21 (call for show times). Daniel Day-Lewis stars as a crippled man who doesn't let an affliction get in the way of his writing career. Moving without getting overly schmaltzy or sentimental. Based on a true story.

HENRY FORD CENTENNIAL LIBRARY, 13671 Michigan Ave., Dearborn. Call 943-2330 for information. (Free)

"The Flying Deuces" (USA — 1939), 7 p.m. Jan. 8. Above average Laurel and Hardy vehicle finds the boys joining the French Foreign Legion.

LIVONIA MALL CINEMA, 29415 Seven Mile, Livonia. Call 476-1166 for information. (Free)

"The Train" (USA - 1965), 10 a.m. Jan. 9. John Frankenheimer directed this action packed account of WWII French Resistance troops trying to sabotage a trainload of French art treasures en route to Germany. As part of the mall's month-long tribute to Burt Lancaster.

MICHIGAN THEATRE, 603 E. Liberty, Ann Arbor. Call 668-8397 for information. ($4 general, $3.25 students and seniors)

"The Rainbow" (Britain — 1989), 9:45 p.m. Jan. 8-11. Ken Russell directed this emotional tale about a young woman (Sammi Davis) who opens up sexually and intellectually in Victorian England. Based on a D.H. Lawrence novel — a prequel to 1970s' "Women in Love."

"West Side Story" (USA — 1961), 7 p.m. Jan. 9-13. The musical version of "Romeo and Juliet," the hit Broadway musical by Leonard Bernstein made a decent transition to film. Natalie Wood is beautiful but thoroughly unconvincing as Maria. Richard Beymer too clean cut as Tony. The direction (by Robert Wise) is taut, however, and you can't help but be taken in by the still-relevant story. Part of a month-long introduction to the theater's new 70mm projection and sound equipment.

"sex, lies and videotape" (USA — 1989), 10 p.m. Jan. 12 and 9:45 p.m. Jan. 13. Last year's surprise hit at Cannes is a well-written (though perhaps overrated) look at late '80s romantic confusion.

REDFORD THEATRE, 17360 Lasher, Detroit. Call 537-2560 for information. ($2)

"Gone with the Wind" (USA — 1939), 7 p.m. Jan. 12-13. Scarlett's dress never looked redder, Tara's grounds never greener than in this enhanced color print.

A major video presentation, "The Women of Brewster Place" (1988, color, 180 minutes), arrives on the video racks Thursday, Jan. 11. It's available in VHS and Beta with a suggested retail of $80, so look for this "special two video pack" on the rental counters.

As a teleplay it's unrated, but I'd give it a soft R. By today's standards, however, it's probably PG-13.

Oprah Winfrey — before the diet — stars as Mattie Michael, a proud woman whose courage, spirit and will to live continually buoy her above the many misfortunes which befall her. As such, she's intended as a metaphor for black experience in America and as a testimonial to the human spirit.

Despite cruel and unnatural obstacles, black people in America continue to strive and to succeed. Despite the odds, at least some blacks get their share of the American dream. In every time and in all places, there are people who rise above grief and adversity. No matter what their status, those who endure and survive are the heroes.

Or, in this case, the heroines, six "Women of Brewster Place" — a dead-end slum section of town — whose lives revolve around Mattie Michaels.

The first third of this teleplay by Karen Hall is based on Gloria Naylor's novel and details how middle-aged Mattie came to live on Brewster Place. She had grown up on her father's southern farm. He was a pretty rigid guy who thought he was protecting his daughter when, in reality, he was repressing her.

MATTIE LEAVES home when she becomes pregnant and spends many years living with her son, Basil, and a kindly lady, Mrs. Turner, whose granddaughter, Ceil (Lynn Whitfield), later turns up living in the same building on Brewster Place.

The credits are incomplete, so it's not possible to indentify all the actors and actresses. One of those characters, although not central to Mattie's life, is Brewster Place's busy-body, Miss Sophie, and figures significantly in the action.

The cast of "The Women of Brewster Place" includes Oprah Winfrey, Lynn Whitfield, Lonette McKee, Robin Givens, Paula Kelley, Phyllis Yvonne Stickney and Jackee.

Lorraine (Lonette McKee) lives across the way with her girlfriend, played by Paula Kelly. Their unnatural relationship is, of course, upsetting and disruptive, particularly to Miss Sophie. Although her hairpiece looks abnormal, her caricature of an odd, bothersome gossip is not.

The other "Women of Brewster Place" include Phyllis Yvonne Stickney, playing the woman down the hall with all the children with whom she is unable to cope.

The actress Jackee is Etta May Johnson, Mattie's friend from down home who turns up in a Caddy she "borrowed" from her philandering boyfriend.

Finally, there's Melanie Browne (Robin Givens), a nice girl from a well-to-do middle-class family who has taken the name Caswana and moved to the slums of Brewster Place to be "black" and do good for her people.

WHILE SHE has some small success in organizing a tenants' union, as Spike Lee will tell you, it takes more than good intentions to reverse the course of urban decay.

Cicely Tyson is excellent in a cameo as Melanie/Caswana's mother from the suburbs. For her, the real issue is being a mother that provides for her children.

Many elements of modern American black communities are represented in this teleplay although some much more so than others. Conspicuous by its absence is the radical element and it points of view.

In many ways "The Women of Brewster Place" resembles the socio-economic moraltity plays of the '30s, media intent on a message of love and social equality for all. Although outdated and hollow, that's appropriate since only lately have black people benefited fully from the social concerns which developed fully in the '30s.

The teleplay is episodic and while those units fit together well, they don't always flow smoothly. Eventually, all the relationships are clear, but viewers need to work at it from time to time.

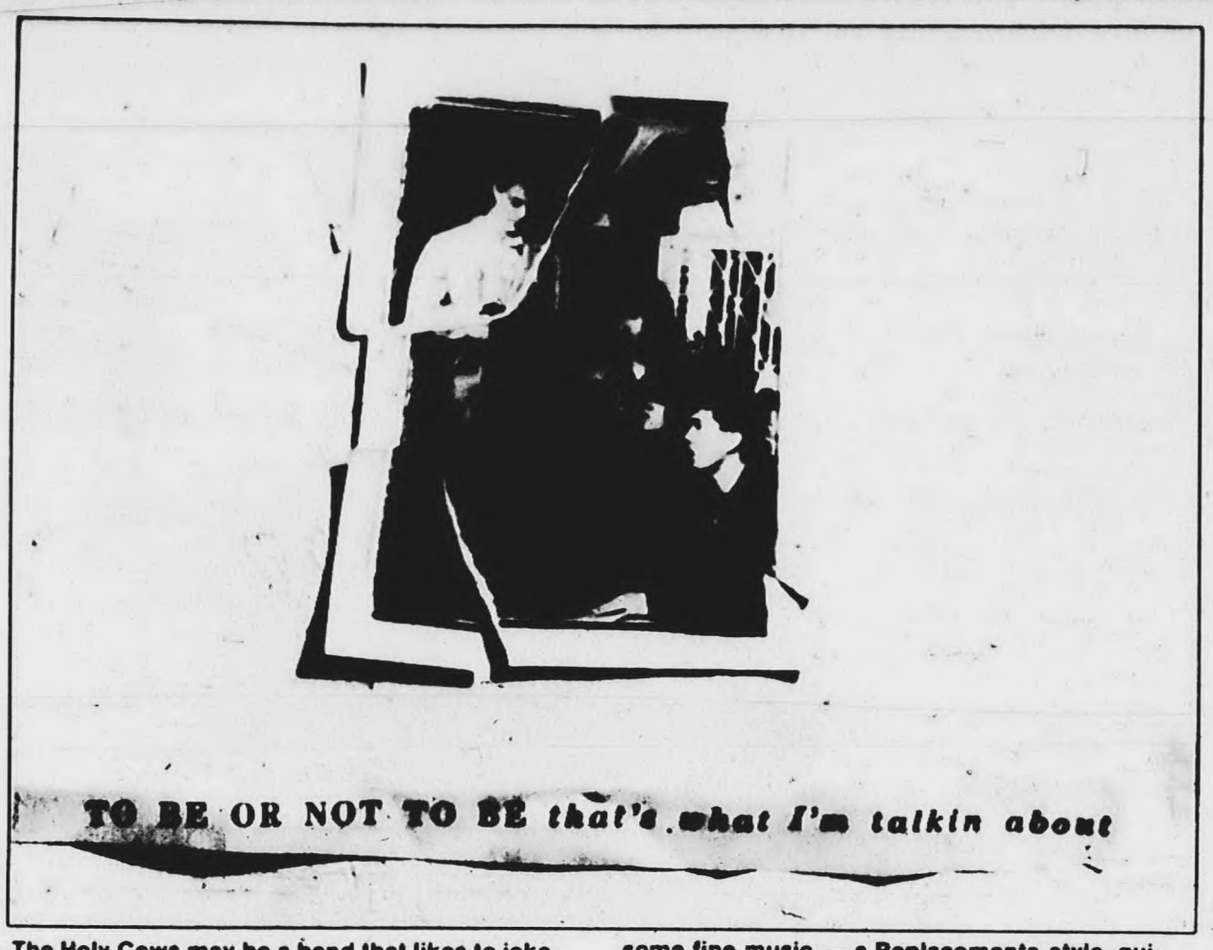

ANOTHER negative, on the visual side, the production lacks the gritty realism its subject demands.

Despite these problems and the lack of radical black viewpoints, this is a touching and moving story about people worth caring for.

Mattie's voice-over statement synthesizes the most important viewpoint. "We learned that when we women came together there was a power inside us we never felt before."

That's not so much a feminist statement as a humanistic one. People have the ability to work together to create social units that are greater than the sum of their parts — now that's something — and that something combined with excellent performces make "The Women of Brewster Street" well worth your three hours.

The Holy Cows may be a band that likes to joke around, but it also is one that can produce some fine music — a Replacements-style, guitar-driven type of garage rock

Band finds success with its garage rock sounds

By Jill Hamilton
special writer

The Holy Cows are a band of jokesters who also happen to kick out some mighty fine tunes. They got started about three years ago in the archetypical garage setting and have been pumping out their cow tunes ever since.

Their music is Replacements-style, guitar-driven, jump-out-of-your-seat-and-dance garage rock. Michael Feeney says he is influence in his songwriting by Dinosaur Jr. and country/bluegrass bands. Although it seems like a strange combination, the band's music does sound like a successful mixture of these disparate styles.

The Holy Cows' jesting side comes out in their concerts. They are fond of misrepresenting themselves under fictitious band names. At one concert, they say they were "The Good Ole Boys Blues n' County Band from Chicago."

During another performance, they deemed it "Wheel of Fortune Night" and put large labels on all of their band equipment. Throughout the night at another show, John Popovich would play the opening chords of various over-played shlock-rock tunes, then stop in mid-chord, saying to the audience, "We're not playing any of that junk tonight," before ripping into a powerful Holy Cows tune.

THE FOUR guys grew up together in Chelsea, and still consider themselves a Chelsea band ("We're not an Ann Arbor band," they admonish firmly.) These Chelsea boys are: Scott Salyer on guitar, Mike Popovich on drums, John Popovich on guitar and Michael Feeney on bass. They had all been members of other bands including Frank Allison and the Odd Sox and a band called Outcrowd.

About a year and a half ago, the Holy Cows put out their first cassette called "Greener Sidewalks." The album enjoyed fairly good sales, especially in Ann Arbor, and this encouraged the band to keep playing together.

In June of 1989, they released an album called "To Be Or Not To Be; that's what I'm talking about" containing favorites like "Grace My Presence," "Melvis," and "Oh, My Clothes." The album has exposed the band to a larger audience and college radio has given it a lot of airplay. One week, the album was the No. 1 song at Duke University's college station.

Plans for a new album are in the works. Several new songs are already written, including the catchy "Wait a Minute" and "Keyhole," but the band members seem to have differing opinions on when it will be released. Salyer say that he "wants to take time to do it right" but Feeney says he would rather "get the album out as soon as possible."

BUT ALL is not just popular albums and enthusiastic crowds in Holy Cow land. As Feeney puts it, "We're a band with a complex." They feel the local music scene is not all that it could be.

"Most of our fans come to every show and become our friends," Salveer said, "We can't keep playing to the same crowd, we need new people to show up." Mike Popovich echoed these sentiments and added, "Local music needs a big push from the bars around here."

But the Holy Cows are not just sitting around waiting for fame and fortune to find them. Instead, they have decided to create their own success. They started their own record label, Picnic Horn Records and six months ago joined forces with agent Rodney Robeson. Picnic Horn Records now has on its roster such local luminaries as Anne B. Davis and the Opossums. And perhaps the Holy Cow's proudest achievement, they now have T-shirts bearing the name of the band.

The Holy Cows are bursting with plans for the future. They hope to keep expanding Picnic Horn Records so that, eventually, they can help produce other local bands' records. The Cows also plan to do more out-of-state gigs to widen their audiepce.

The band also hopes to attract the attention of a major record label. With a history of putting on great shows and churning out excellent albums, they probably won't have to wait very long.

The Holy Cows will perform with Anne B. Davis and the Opossums on Friday, Jan. 12, at The Blind Pig, 208 S. First St., Ann Arbor. For information, call 996-8555.

LIVE PHINEAS GAGE — Saint Andrews Hall, Detroit

Not everyone stays at home, sipping egg nog and sharing quality time with far-flung relatives during the holidays. At least not those who need their daily dosage of live rock-and-roll.

Some of these less traditional folks opted to spend a little of the Christmas season watching Phineas Gage give a very spirited performance at Saint Andrews Hall.

The place was pretty darn full and especially impressive, considering the time of year and the fact that Phineas Gage is a local act. There were seats left in the hall, but only because the audience was more interested in standing around the stage than in sitting back in their chairs and watching.

A majority of the audience was probably there to catch the headlining act — Crossed Wire — but Phineas Gage quickly won them over when the carrot-topped lead singer stepped out and shyly announced that it was their first gig at Saint Andrews Hall.

Phineas Gage played a bouncy set of songs, chock full of killer hooks. They have a talent for turning out eminently likable pop songs along the same lines as tunes by Elvis Costello or Squeeze.

Actually, Chuck Farnum's singing does sound a bit like the nasal tones of Elvis Costello. Alex Lumeosky's guitar playing was piercing and direct, echoing a trace of the Cure or U2.

The crowd responded enthusiastically to the set, albeit some a little too enthusiastically. A small group of people were slam dancing at various times throughout the show and one guy insisted on repeatedly hopping into the stage then jumping into the crowd.

The highlights of the show were two showcased songs, "Scattered" and "Turn It Upside Down." Chris Farnum ran around the stage, shaking his tambourine violently and tossing his curly tuft of red hair as he goaded on the other band members. Phineas Gage finished off the set with a Christmas tune interwoven with various bits of John Lennon's "So This Is Christmas."

These guys put on a great show and proved themselves to be a very talented quintet. In 1990, we can probably expect Phineas Gage to return to Saint Andrews Hall. Maybe next time as the headliners.

REVIEWS

CANDLELAND — Ian McCulloch

When Echo and the Bunnymen split from singer Ian McCulloch a couple of years ago, the band name stayed with the majority, amidst claims that they would be back with a new singer.

Anyone familiar with McCulloch's distinctive vocals may find this hard to imagine and we still await for those results. Of course, the death of their brilliant drummer Pete De Fritas in a car accident has not helped their cause.

Well, for those of you who mourned the passing of the original Echo, grieve no more. For no matter who it is credited to, this LP sounds like the latest Echo and the Bunnymen record.

It's a curious thing that happens when a dominant singer leaves a band. Their first recordings sound like a continuation of the old band. Morrissey, former lead singer of the Smiths, is another example.

Are they trying to prove that they were the reason for the original band's sound or are they trying to offer a quick substitute to garner their old band's following?

While song sounds and structures on "Candleland" are Bunnymen-ish, as a whole it is infinitely more subdued. It still features McCulloch's eclectic word paintings. Take, for example, from the strong lead off the track, "The Flickering Wall":

"I heard the footsteps in the street, I saw the lights on the flickering wall. I moved my lips but I couldn't speak, choked on the wonder of it all." Or from "Horses Head" are these lines: "A single rose, the curtains closed, a strangers clothes, were all I found, the great unknown, the tightrope show, a world below, don't look down."

Musically, it's a mish-mash of Echo and the Bunnymen and, at times, New Order.

Outstanding moments are "Flickering Wall," "Proud to Fall" and the single "Candleland," which features some beautiful backing vocals by Liz Fraser of the Cocteau Twins.

The second side of the recording (or, for you CD people . . . from "Horse's Head" onward!!!) is pretty lame. The song tempos are similar and tend to plod.

. . .And you can't quite dance to them, Dick!!!

EARTHQUAKE WEATHER — Joe Strummer

"Let's rock again," Joe Strummer growls as this, his first solo album, begins. The power chords of "Gangsterville," the first track, follow.

So, it's safe to assume that Joe Strummer has left the movies to resume recording. He has a role in Jim Jarmusch's film "Mystery Train," for those who prefer his acting.

"Earthquake Weather," released late last year, is uneven. It flashes with the brilliance Strummer's former band The Clash showed through the late 1970s and early 1980s. But at times, "Earthquake" only flickers. There are three or four duds on this 14-song recording, songs going nowhere.

Strummer's lyrics can be a blur of image and symbol, a mixture of angry urgency and resignation. He even includes a brief glossary. Autos and auto parts (DeSoto, slant six, "carburetor bible") and blazing guns predominate here.

There is a a Prince-like slice of funk, and a reggae tune, but most songs sound the guitar army call of Strummer and bandmates Zander Schloss and Lonnie Marshall.

But on "Island Hopping," Strummer sings against soft guitar runs: "It's been the same since I don't know when/So I'm going island hopping again."

In the haunting "Sleepwalk," Strummer asks: "What would it be/ If you could change every heartache/That ran through your life and mine?"

"Passport to Detroit," despite the title, tells little of our favorite town. It tells instead of a "keeper": "He said I'm telling you the truth/I wouldn't be on this roof/If I hadn't seen some kissing in the park/Or known how to mend a broken heart."

The Clash fans have probably already picked up this recording. It is a pleasure to hear Strummer singing on record again. As evinced on "Earthquake Weather" in, it's great to hear Strummer rocking again.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY, CHARLIE BROWN — various artists

The song is called "Linus & Lucy" but, if you've spent any time as a child in the last quarter century or so, it's instantly recognizable as the main theme from the Peanuts TV specials.

That song, and others from the long-running cartoon series, are contained in this jazzy tribute (GRP).

Now four decades old, Peanuts has long been a child's comic strip with a decidedly adult point of view. Likewise, this soundtrack collection is not just for the the little ones.

Most of the songs here were written by the late jazzman Vince Guaraldi. His works — free-spirited, though with reflective undertones — perfectly captured the spirit of Charlie Brown and friends, while remaining capable of standing on their own.

While the numerous jazz all-stars who appear here add their own personal touch, they don't stray too far from Guaraldi's originals. (And the all-digital sound is a treat.)

Chick Corea's version of the [illegible] Walk" is [illegible]

But the [illegible] B.B. King [illegible] nearly stole the show with "Joe Cool," a witty tribute to one of cartoon canine Snoopy's many alter-egos.

Label owner Dave Grusin's "Nutcracker Sweet" proves that a worthy successor to Guaraldi would be a group of child actors skilled in all the swinging track — a reprise of "Linus and Lucy."

However Arnold A.S. Harris, barely a teenager himself, has done a timely rendition of "Linus and Lucy."

Karl Nilsson

Today's column is brought to you by the Freudian Slip & Girdle Company and its distributors in your area.

I'm sorry, but I had to say that. It's part of my new sponsorship deal. Honestly, I hardly ever wear lingerie, but every conceivable human activity MUST have an advertising sponsor.

From pee-wee hockey to Pee-Wee Herman, everybody has a Madison Avenue connection. Even the Bill of Rights is being sponsored by a cigarette company. And now, advertisers are intruding deeper yet into our personal lives.

Let me explain.

For 10 years, a group of my close friends have gotten together to celebrate New Year's Eve. A rowdy night for us usually meant Scrabble, bean dip and a smoker movie on mutual funds.

But this time, I sensed things were going to be different — my invitation included a script, a contract and an application to the Screen Actors Guild. Puzzled, I asked the host why I had to report to "makeup and wardrobe" before the party.

Somewhat offended by my question, he huffed, "You're lucky you were allowed to skip the audition."

"Audition for what?" I asked.

"Listen, pal, my New Year's party is being sponsored by a beer company. Their ad agency heard I'd invited about 35 guests in their key demographic and they bought into the action.

"At first it was just the usual house party sponsorship — they'd set up a 15-foot inflatable beer can in the front yard, give us little beer aprons to wear, and throw in a few kegs . . .

"BUT THAT was before I called my agent. Now, they'll not only pick up the tab, they'll film us for a TV commercial."

"Of course," he continued, "that meant I had to dump my original guest list. We went to central casting to pick up a nice mix of ordinary, everyday, run-of-the-mill beer drinkers — you know, stunningly beautiful cover girls in revealing outfits and young men built like Greek gods dressed up as construction workers and cowboys.

"Fortunately, the director says I can squeeze you in as an 'extra.' And, I might add, you're lucky to make the cut."

I got another shock when this month when I tried to enroll my daughter in nursery school:

"Sorry, but she doesn't have an advertising sponsor," snipped the principal.

"A sponsor?" I asked. "We can afford the tuition; what's the problem?"

"Students without sponsors," he replied, "tend to lack aggression and marketing savvy. Without that 'killer instinct,' she'll never claw her way to the top.

"I suggest you approach some of the children's clothing manufacturers about an ad campaign featuring your daughter — and don't waste time."

"Marketing savvy in preschool?" I mumbled. "Whatever happened to milk and cookies?"

"SNACK FOOD don't pay enough," he fired back. "Maybe if she agrees to endorse Little Creeps toys, they'll sponsor her. Of course, she could never be seen in public playing with other toys.

"She'd have to pitch Little Creeps to her playmates and wear their logo on all her clothing. The school would set up the press conference and photo opportunities."

"But what about education?" I stammered. "Shouldn't she learn something besides being greedy?"

"By all means," he said, licking his lips. "If she learns to read a teleprompter, Little Creeps may use her as a TV spokesperson and the school will get national exposure."

Being a parent of high ideals, I stormed out of his office, hired a drama coach and bought the kiddy edition of "Winning through Intimidation."

And to pay for her screen test, I'm leasing ad space on the soles of my shoes. When I put my feet up on the desk, your advertising message will be seen by hundreds of potential customers.

Just think of the opportunity to use a classic slogan like "I'd walk a mile for a . . ."

Barbara Schiff

Dear Barbara,

I love the holidays. For me, it is a time of decorating, buying presents, cooking, entertaining and family togetherness. My parents, who are from another state, come to visit and my in-laws who live close by, are also part of the festivities. I wonder if you can hear my excitement as I talk about it.

My children, who are ages five to 17, have always enjoyed and taken part in the festivities in whatever ways were appropriate to their ages.

However, my husband never has and I have always accepted this about him. He is often described as a workaholic and that description is apt. He is more comfortable at work than at home. The plus to this situation is that he has been very successful financially and so I have always felt that that was his contribution to our holiday.

The problem is that my middle son is starting to show those tendencies. He is only 11, but he is doing little things that are `up-offs. He might go to his room to read a book immediately after a family dinner, or if we are at a relative's house, he might go off alone to watch TV. Of course, I encourage him to stay with the rest of us, but he is not pliable.

I wonder if I should be doing something more to change him or accept him as he is, as I have done with his father.

Happy But Feeling Irresponsible

Dear Happy But Feeling Irresponsible,

For most Americans, the holidays are the way you describe yours — a joyful time centering around family and rituals. A recent news article reported that 94 percent of Americans celebrate Christmas and of those, 77 percent enjoy the preparation and the celebration.

History shows us that there have always been festivals. There is probably a genetically transmitted need in us for the fire, warmth and group closeness that these rites provide. Ancients recognized that man cannot work 365 days a year.

So, are all the other ones, the 23 percent or so that don't enjoy the holidays or who attempt to avoid them Scrooges? Not necessarily. For those people who are very wrapped up in themselves, a time of togetherness with others would drive home their inadequacy.

Others might be depressed because they indicate fierce independence and thus an unwillingness to overlook the problems that every family has.

So, then, what about your son and his father? You have resolved the situation with your husband in a most admirable way. I compliment you. You have not told me much about your son, but my "gut" reaction is that his lack of family togetherness spirit is not pathological.

You are not irresponsible in accepting him as he is. Happiness and contentment can come in lots of shapes and sizes.

"I didn't know who he was," she said sheepishly.

The models usually do from five to 12 shows a year in places ranging from Los Angeles to New York. But working schedules are so arranged that models have about 24 hours between shifts. That means enough time for sightseeing and shopping, plus plenty of invitations to parties.

And the fun doesn't necessarily stop when the shift begins.

FOR THE MOST part, working a show is routine, the models said. They usually stand on a raised platform (hence the often heard comment about being dizzy) and recite a prepared script about the basics of the car being promoted.

Sounds boring, but most of the people who come by are polite and often ask to have their picture taken with the model. They duly oblige.

"You get to meet some nice people," Johns said.

"People like to ask you questions about the cars and you can give them basic information (without the pressure of a salesroom)," Kolodziej added.

The models are versed well enough to answer the basics and there is always a company person nearby to go into more detail.

"The shows are the social part of modeling," Kolodziej said.

But sometimes sociability can go too far.

Murray recounted an incident at a Chicago auto show where a man came up and asked to have his picture taken with her. She agreed. Then the man asked what hotel she was staying at. Murray told the man it was private and ditto to his question about her phone number.

In a moment he was screaming obscenities at her, she said. And just as quickly, security was there.

The man remained in the hall and Murray said she saw him "moving from car to car" in her area "and I just knew he had a gun," she said. She was escorted to her car at the end of her shift by State Police officers.

OTHER MODELS recount similar experiences, ranging from being grabbed by patrons to receiving death threats. In response, at least one auto company employs special security people to be on hand. One sideways glance from the model and you're out of there, they said.

"Models are public figures," Murray said. "People get jealous and celebrities often become targets." Witness the deaths of John Lennon and Rebecca Schaeffer of the TV show "My Sister Sam."

My mother the model

vinced me to stand on a turnstile, rotating my cellulite under hot lights, wearing a dress that, I felt, made me look like a worn Michellin tire.

Talking about car parts, "parts is parts" unless you're narrating in front of throngs of people, then they take on all sorts of glorious meaning and are revered and adulated like the icons of old.

Besides that, I'm extremely susceptible to motion sickness.

I did it for the love of my family because I knew the money, I'd make would be our only ticket to a nice family vacation. I represented a very prestigious car — one that more established (i.e. older) people could afford, thus, my being hired.

But I'm the novice here and what help could I give? My breasts had nursed three babies, and I'd always felt Joe Cocker singing "God lift them up where they belong" was expressly meant for me.

But I felt it would all be worth it because my kids would thank me one day. They'd appreciate it. Won't they? They will, please tell me they will!

range from full-day sessions to two or three call backs.

At each session, auto company representatives review the models to determine if they have the style to fit the image the companies are trying to project. Let's face it — a flashy blonde does better at selling a Corvette than a Honda Civic.

At auditions, models read scripts they would present at the shows. The scripts are generally straightforward presentations of vehicle features, although some throw in a few zingers, such as concluding the script with the line, "Drive me."

"If my father heard me say what they wrote, he'd pull me out of there," one model said about a suggestive script.

(3) Write to the British Tourist Authority (BTA), Suite 3320, John Hancock Center, 875 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611 or telephone (312) 787-0490. Ask for the London Planner, Quick Guide to London, London Restaurant Guide, London Transport Guide, Map of London, London Budget Hotels and their Bed and Breakfast brochures.

If you have special interests or plan to travel outside of London, ask for train or bus schedules, car rental information and literature about other areas of Britain. BTA says you should get the data in about 10 days.

(4) PLAN A WARM lightweight wardrobe. Winter in London is warmer outside and cooler inside than Detroit. Take warm indoor clothing, plus a folding umbrella, rain hat and raincoat.

(5) Buy a Visitor Travelcard voucher from AAA Worldtravel or any travel agency. It entitles you to unlimited use of the London subway and bus systems for three, four or seven days at a cost of $13, $17 or $29 respectively.

This pass is a great value and you can't buy it in England. It includes trips to and from Heathrow Airport, which would otherwise cost $5.50. Unfortunately, the service does not extend to Gatwick Airport, which is an $8 train ride from London.

I used my Travelcard for numerous long and short trips, even for two or three blocks, especially if it was raining or I was in a hurry. No standing in long ticket lines. The underground is safe and easy to understand.

The pass is good on those famous red double-decker buses, too, but the bus routes are more complicated, so I didn't use them often.

(6) Choose your accommodation style, with the BTA literature as a guide. You can reserve before leaving home, but there are plenty of rooms in winter.

Next week: See and experience London on a budget.

Comedian Bill Thomas has been doing stand-up since the days when the Comedy Castle was the only comedy club around and feels creativity is sorely lacking among today's comedians

Thomas: He turns layoff into a career in comedy

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Herrrrrrose's Johnny. Wait till they get a load of me. If Maxie's so . . . oh never mind.

"Do you do a Jack Nicholson impression?," asked comedian Bill Thomas. "Every one is doing them. Dogs are doing them. Three-year-old babies are doing them."

Everyone, that is, except Bill Thomas.

And perhaps one of the most difficult aspects in stand-up comedy today is not melting to the demands of club owners, who seek to put butts in the seats and drinks down their patrons' throats.

At least those are the views of Thomas, who has been doing stand-up since the days when the Comedy Castle was the only comedy club around. Upstart comedians starved then, he said.

Yet, their material was rich with creativity, something Thomas feels is sorely lacking today.

"The guys I started with like Tony Hayes and Van Gunter would try and do different material because there was no money involved," said Thomas, a transplanted New Yorker who lives in Southfield. "Now everyone is doing what the club owners say will bring them back six months later — fart jokes, (genital) jokes, racial material."

And, of course, Jack Nicholson impersonations.

THOMAS HAS avoided such material like a canary steers clear of the cat's litter box. His style of comedy is observational, thoughtful and timely.

He's the kind of guy who scours the newspaper for man bites dog stories, who probably looks out his car window for road signs with double meanings (like the line from comedian Jim Samuels on the sign that said "Fine for littering." So he pulled over and emptied out his car).

This crime thing has got Thomas perplexed. He mentions his brother who has a baseball bat by his bed at night along with other people dealing with the problem in different ways.

"We had a big argument about buying a gun," Thomas said. "So we compromised on a B.B. gun."

Thomas had his eye on comedy since his days as a drummer in rock bands. Between numbers, he would crack a few jokes to fill the void.

His arrival in Detroit 10 years ago coincided with his first crack at stand-up comedy. A temporary layoff from a computer firm led him to pursue the chuckle trail.

"I realized I couldn't get up in the morning so I brought my own temporary layoff," he said.

THE LAYOFF soon became a permanent one. His comedic career has taken a steady rise, performing locally and nationally. Television appearances have included "Showtime Comedy Network" and "CBS Morning Show."

He's branched off on different avenues of creative expression. Thomas is busy writing two screen plays — one humorous and one serious — which he plans to pitch on an upcoming trip to Los Angeles. Also, there is talk of pursuing some acting roles.

"I've been told I have a face," he said.

In his pursuit, Thomas has a partner — his wife, Charree. She clips the newspaper articles and sometimes comes up with a premise for his material. She is also a writer.

A double-team approach doesn't hurt, especially with the recent proliferation of comedy clubs and comedians.

Dorothy Lehmkuhl

The beginning of a decade is a particularly appropriate time to re-evaluate what is happening in your life. Are you happy now? What would you rather be doing? The next 10 years will seem to roll by even faster than the '80s. Will you look back on them with pride or regret?

Remember that your present environment is only a result of your past decisions. You have decided whether to enter into and/or remain in relationships; to take a job and keep it or not; to clean up after yourself as you go, etc.

While there are always circumstances in life which are beyond control, you still control how you react to those situations. You may not have asked for all the work you get on your job, but you can decide whether to let it get you down or to take it in stride and just do the best you can. If someone in your family is ill, you can help to the best of your ability, without ignoring the problem nor by being a martyr. There are always choices.

If you don't like the way your life is now, start making decisions which will lead you in the direction you want to go in the future. I'm not suggesting walking away from responsibilities already incurred — you still need to honor them. Neither am I recommending a "me first" attitude. However, there are always options within your environment which will give more meaning to your life.

A 45-year-old former student of mine captured the essence of my philosphy. Here are excepts of a letter she wrote me: "I think the biggest change I experienced was a change of attitude. I began to see myself as an intelligent person with interests that went beyond scrubbing and polishing. I stayed home for six years because I was always going to clean the basement. (Never did.) I solved the problem by calling it one large storage area and went off to work.

"I finally developed a clear sense of direction. I constantly work at refining my goals to be as realistic as possible and still shoot for the stars. I've found time to do things I love. I finished a triathlon, swam on a Master's swim team and rode my bike across the state three times. I bought a new grand piano (my lifetime dream) and I've gone back to college to study music. After watching the slow painful death of my mother over the last six years, I find myself seeking pleasure in each precious moment. Life is short, I don't want to die with the discovery of having not lived."

All too many people suppress their own talents in favor of being responsible. While certainly we must be reliable, there is room in most people's lives for self-expression as well. My grandfather used to put it very simply: "Take the time to do what you want." I agree.

Warhol exhibit teamed with films

By Jill Hamilton
special writer

If anyone tells you that there is no culture in the Midwest, send them to Ann Arbor — the sooner the better.

Big Art Productions will kick off the new year with a tribute to one of the most controversial artists of this century: Andy Warhol. The production, called "Warhol: The Factory Years — a night of films and music," will attempt to recreate what happened at Warhol's infamous factory.

The show will start at 9:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 26, at the Halfway Inn in Ann Arbor with a screening of Warhol's "Vinyl." The film has been described as "a black-humored take-off on Anthony Burgess's novel "A Clockwork Orange" and features Gerard Malanga and the debut performance of Edie Sedgwick. "Vinyl" is the film which made Sedgwick an underground cult figure in New York.

Following the screening of "Vinyl," Big Art will present two silent short films of their own. The show will continue with the Warhol film "Empire." "Empire" gained instant notoriety when it was first shown in the 1960s because the original film ran for seven hours and consisted solely of footage of the empire State Building as viewed from a window in the Time-Life building, 40 floors high and 16 blocks north. The "Village Voice" claimed that "Empire" will become "The Birth of a Nation" of the New Bag Cinema. Somewhat luckily for the audience, this restored print of "Empire" will run only 48 minutes.

"EMPIRE" IS A silent film and will be accompanied by a live performance of The Plastic Oniki Band. Oniki's band is promoting their recent excellent debut album, "Shonen Blue." The Plastic Oniki Band includes Yuji Oniki, formerly of Dreaming In Color, and Matt Smith of the Volebeats and will feature a percussionist instead of a drummer. The band's sound is evocative and atmospheric, similar to the quieter moments of the Velvet Underground.

The hour-long live set will continue with various other films superimposed over one another in the same manner in which Warhol presented films during his years at the factory.

Big Arts's timing could not have been better. Though Warhol's death was almost two years ago, people remain fascinated by the controversial artist. Books written about Warhol, his art, the factory years and the Warhol entourage continue to infiltrate the best seller list. His autobiography and his private diaries remain top sellers.

John Cole and Lou Reed, two founding members of The Velvet Underground, recently opened their tribute performance piece called, "Songs for Drella."

The show has been selling out in New York and has enjoyed good reviews in publications like "Rolling Stone."

THE MUSEUM OF Metropolitan Art has been presenting a retrospective of Andy Warhol and continues the process of the restoration of his films. The Detroit Institute of Art will begin a Warhol exhibition in March. Oniki calls the Big Art presentation, "sort of a preview" of that event.

Big Art has scored quite a coup by getting their hands on "Vinyl" and "Empire." The films have only recently become available for national distribution and demand for them has been especially fierce.

Big Art Productions was formed several years ago by a group of friends, then students in college, who also happened to be artists, film makers, and musicians. They began experimenting with various combinations of sound and visuals and became known for presenting multimedia events that combined the elements of each of their various art forms.

Perhaps the most successful Big Art effort was a production that they staged a few years ago at the Alley Door. The "happening" included films, murals and sculpture by Big Art members and featured the music of Yuji's former band, Dreaming in Color. The event drew a crowd of several hundred people and received favorable media coverage.

Future plans for Big Art include a production combining theater and music on Feb. 7 at the Heidelberg. This show will feature a performance by Lou Sharboneau in the one-man Beckett play, "Krapp's." Following the play, The Plastic Oniki Band will play a live set.

"I DON'T WANT TO sound too 'arty,' but, we're looking for an audience that wants to pay attention," Oniki says, "instead of one only interested in guzzling beer."

For those who like their movies simple and action-packed, preferably starring Sylvester Stallone vs. various small countries and think that a good band is one that plays a lot of songs that include the phrase, "yeah, babe," and tops off the evening with an extented sing-along oversion of "Louis, Louis," perhaps Big Art won't be your cup of tea.

Those, however, who like a little challenge with their evening's entertainment will be delighted with Big Art's latest projects. Their cutting edge creativity is helping to redefine the boundaries of art and music.

So forget what you've heard. New York and Los Angeles don't have a monoply on culture; culture lives in the suburbs of Detroit.

Warhol: The Factory Years will start at 9:30 p.m. Jan. 26 at The Halfway Inn on the campus of the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Admission is $4. Big Art will present the Beckett play, "Krapp's" with The Plastic Oniki Band Feb. 7 at the Heidelberg in Ann Arbor.

Building Scene

Marilyn Fitchett editor/591-2300

Monday, January 8, 1990 O&E ★★1F

Developed by Redico of Troy and designed by Rossetti and Associates of Detroit, Raleigh Officentre represents a long-standing relationship between the two.

Office design in tune with tenant needs

By Dale Northup
special writer

Every once in a while a building comes on the scene that transcends the stereotypical glass boxes that line our business corridors.

The Raleigh Officentre by Rossetti and Associates of Detroit is a case in point. Set back from Telegraph at at 10 Mile Road in Southfield, it commands the attention of motorists with its crisp horizontal lines.

The windows appear to be stretched between the support columns. Corner windows on the top three floors at the north end of the building contribute to the visual continuity. The spandrels are clad in glass and separated from the windows by a sill creating the illusion that the building is taller than its six stories.

The vertical and horizontal members of the facade are covered with eight-inch square clay tiles that lend the appearance of brick when seen from a distance. The south end of the building, which is the first phase of the 300,000-square-foot project, steps up and out on the upper four floors and rests on prominently visual columns.

Phase two, according to Marsha Fisher of Farbman/Stein and Co., rental agents for the building, will be identical in the reverse. The two buildings will then be connected with a semi-circular pedimental cap. An open pedestrian plaza below will provide a visual link with the parking lot behind the buildings. As part of the same link, a concave glass facade above provides a pleasing entry. Two convex glass entries add to a subtle play in spatial gymnastics.

Tenants are occupying the first phase; phase two will be begun in the spring.

RALEIGH IS being developed by Redico of Troy. Other projects include the Ameritech building, Top of Troy and the Volkswagen building, all in Troy. Rossetti and Associates designed these buildings also, and they represent a longstanding relationship between the architect and client.

Every commercial client is interested in the leasibilty of functional office space, but Redico also has a sensitivity to design, both of which satisfy the needs fo the tenants. Jason Horton, vice president for development of Redico, says it is important for the developer to create a building that is pleasing to the prospective client. This is accomplished by a sense of identlity that Raleigh has.

The old credo, "form follows function," continues to play an important role in commercial architecture. Algis Bublys, project manager for the building, says there is considerable competition in the office market, so it is important for the developer to create a quality product. Some of these features include desired square footage per floor, accessiblity of elevators, lobby features, and exterior landscaping.

The elevator cores of each building are directly behind circular lobbies sheathed in glass that provide a visual connecting link on the first three floors each side of the plaza. The buildings are totally connected above the lobbies on floors four through six.

The function of the building does indeed dictate form. Raleigh satisfies the function with a simple form complemented by good elements of design and further augmented by a productive collaboration between architect and client to mark a building that will continue to grow with time.

Dale Northup is a college professor and architectural historian.

Designer smooths path for buyer

By R.J. King
special writer

Anyone who has built their own home knows that the anguish sometimes can outweigh the celebrity.

After all, who knows going in the difference between three- and six-penny nails, or why 220 wiring is preferred over 221? Then there's cabinetry to consider and skylights, plumbing, pipes, flooring, appliances, electricity, insulation . . . .

With literally thousands of decisions to make during the course of construction, it is not uncommon for the new home buyer to become intimidated and anxious about making the right selections to complete the project.

With changes and upgrades expensive and time consuming, new home buyers may want to consider hiring an interior designer at the blueprint stage to help alleviate the potential for mistakes and assist in pulling the initial components of the house together.

"For most people building their first home, it can be the most traumatic experience of their life," said Barbara Goodman-Krass, owner of the Colorworks Studio of Interior Design in Farmington Hills. "In some cases, it's worse than getting a divorce.

"If the home buyer and builder are not communicating correctly, there can be tremendous problems, almost to the point of a Mexican standoff. We can cut down on the miscommunication and help people make the right choices."

PRIOR TO ground breaking, the new home buyer must decide the location and size of everything from fireplaces to shingles. Is there room for a whirlpool? And if so, how large? A furniture layout must be confirmed.

The builder must also know the location of all sinks, tubs, showers, toilets, faucets and shower heads. Flooring choices need to be specified with regard to type, material, size, shape and color.

"There's just so much to consider that people are oftentimes overwhelmed," said Goodman-Krass, who has been in the business since 1976. "People are getting it from all sides. If they make a mistake, it may cost them twice as much to correct when the house is finally complete."

RECOGNIZING THE problems a new home buyer can come up against, Goodman-Krass is offering a "builder-designer package" as an option for buyers.

The package gives the new home buyer professional design assistance from the start of the project, and the builder works with a liaison who guides what the buyer wants and what the builder is willing to provide.

The package can be mortgaged or paid for as an extra in much the same way a buyer selects a custom trim package.

THE ASSISTANCE of an interior designer would help save time and money for all parties concerned, said Terry Nosan, vice president of Nosan/Cohen Associations, a residential builder in West Bloomfield.

Nosan/Cohen recently agreed to offer the package in conjunction with Colorworks.

"The job of building a house requires a lot of coordination, and to us, time is money," Nosan said. "Sometimes a job can be held up because the buyer can't get with their interior decorator until next week, and we need to know their decision today.

"This is the first time we've had a program like this, and we believe it will help tremendously in educating the buyer as well as making sure there is enough lead time to get all the materials before they're ready to be installed."

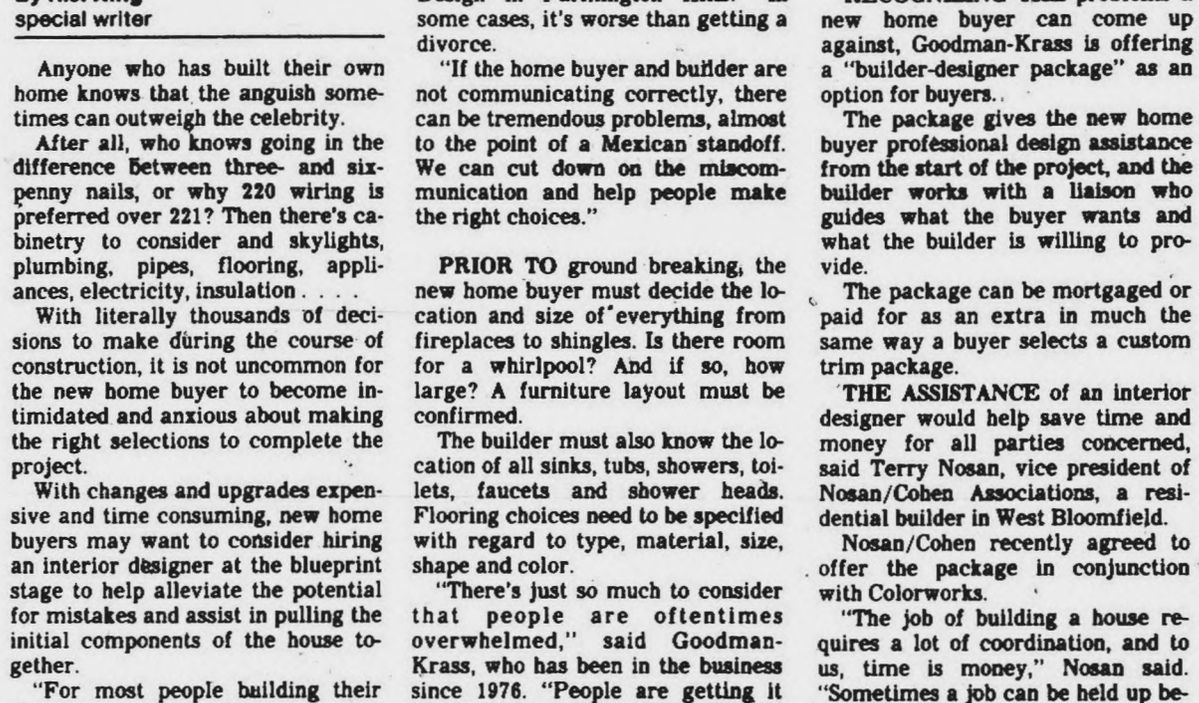

A Nosan/Cohen house usually falls into the $200,000 to $400,000 range.

ALTHOUGH COLORWORKS may be one of the first to offer a formal plan, area builders and designers, particularly in the high end of the market, have worked together in a similar fashion for a number of years.

"That's how we've worked most of our homes since we started," said Gerry Brody, vice president of the Brody Group, Bloomfield Hills.

"If you have a builder and an architect, that's only two parts of the puzzle. You need an interior decorator to make sure the flow of the home and furniture relate to the whole.

"By using both an architect and designer at the outset, or working with the builders themselves, a new home buyer tends to get the best product available."

Making the most from a compact design

An exact rectangle provides the greatest economy in home construction. There are no inside corners to turn, stock lumber lengths may be utilized, and a straight gable roof can be built.

The house can be constructed on either a crawl space foundation or a slab foundation. The bath is compartment style, virtually providing the accessibility of two full baths with only one tub to purchase, and the tub area is totally separated.

The living room is adequate for family living. The kitchen is a good size and includes an eating area that is suitably sized. Laundry facilities are tucked away behind bifold doors near the kitchen area.

The house has three bedrooms; the master bedroom includes a walk-in closet and direct access to the compartment bath.

All W.D. Farmer plans include construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For more information, write to W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, Ga. 30345.

Competing interests in mixed-use condos

condo queries
Robert M. Meisner

Would you tell me what is meant by the concept of a mixed-use condo, and whether there is any conflict in developing such a condo project based on your experiences?

A mixture of uses — residential and retail — in a condominium concept creates competing interests that should be addressed by attorneys who prepare condominium documents.

A mixed-use condominium is one that usually combines residential units with units of a commercial nature.

In a high-rise project, there may be retail stores on the ground level with residential units in the rest of the building.

An example of potential conflicts center around use of signage for the commercial store, which may be precluded by the residential part of the condo.

The answer is simply to have a set of documents drafted that foresee and overcome these special problems before they arise.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney specializing in condominiums, real estate and corporate law. You are invited to submit questions for this column by writing Robert M. Meisner, 30200 Telegraph Road, Suite 467, Birmingham 48010. This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

THE NORTH AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL AUTO SHOW in DETROIT

JANUARY 6-14, 1990

Tradition reigns for 90 years

"We in the transportation industry are the most envied businessmen on earth. No other activity of an industrial nature is as much discussed or so frequently in the public consciousness. Somehow, it is a fundamental human trait to be excessively proud of a handsome, worthy conveyance and to communicate that pride to the neighbors."
— C.W. Matheson, general sales manager, Dodge Brothers (1930)

OBVIOUSLY, Matheson came from an era preceding the Environmental Protection Agency, intense international competition and the ever changing stresses which envelop the global automotive marketplace of the 1990s.

Yet, if you ask Roger Smith, Donald Petersen and Lee Iacocca if they can relate to the enthusiasm and pride exhibited by this early industry executive, we would guess that they would agree.

After all, more than 1,000 automotive executives who will descend upon Detroit's Cobo Hall for the 1990 North American International Show now in progress, realize the technological scope of the automotive industry has been driven by the forceful can-do attitudes which transcend mere public personas.

For every John Dodge and Henry Ford on the automotive horizon, there was a C.W. Matheson who translated the research, design, preparation and quality of the final product into sales for a hungry motoring public.

The 2nd North American International Auto Show, sponsored by the Detroit Auto Dealers Association (DADA), shares many common traits with pre-"Motor City" automotive shows of the early 1900s.

THE GOAL THEN, as now, was to create interest in an ever-changing industry, to inspire the curious spirit of potential automotive customers, and ultimately, sell them a car.

The pioneer and founding fathers of Detroit's automotive shows was a bicycle salesman, William E. Metzger.

Show and go

Cadillac's newest concept car, Solitaire, combines sleek aerodynamics and advanced engineering concepts, including a V-12 engine, for the ultimate personal luxury automobile. Among its many advanced features are doors equipped with hinges that electronically slide the door forward and out for easier access. A single sheet of glass that darkens automatically in sunlight stretches from the cowl to lock panel.

Gearing up

TIM AND Ann Barrett, in need of a minivan for their expanding family, took a little different approach to shopping for a new vehicle.

"This was our first time entering the family-car market," said Tim, a 29-year-old print production coordinator. "Neither Ann nor myself knew what to look for, so we figured the auto show in Detroit was the best place to start. It contained all the information we needed under one roof."

Actually, the Barretts' shopping method is rather common. More than 70 percent of the surveyed attendees of the Detroit Auto Show, (now officially known as the North American International Auto Show in Detroit) buy vehicles within the following year, according to a 1988 survey by John Gilmore & Associates Ltd. For the Barretts, however, it only took one month to buy that minivan.

This year the Barretts plan on taking part in another trend — going back to the auto show for its entertainment value.

ALTHOUGH WE ALREADY own a new van, we had such a good time last year we'll be back for the 1990 show," said Ann Barrett, 29, a contract administrator.

And the Barrett family's latest addition, 10-month-old Hannah, won't need a sitter when her parents head down to Cobo Hall. The 1990 show will attract even the littlest Barrett.

In fact, the 1990 auto show is continuing the family-event tradition established by the Detroit Auto Show, appealing to little folk, teenagers and adults alike, according to David Fischer, co-chairman of the 1990 show.

"The auto show in 1990 is the best entertainment $5 can buy," said Bob Thibodeau, the other co-chairman. "There will be dance acts, magicians, computer-simulated rides and more.

OH YES THERE WILL be cars galore — enough to satisfy the discriminating tastes in the family. The entertainment is the added bonus that puts the auto show over the top in terms of family amusement.

Singers, dancers and magicians are among the many ways auto displays draw crowds. Chevrolet displays will feature the Rhythm Brothers, a male tap-dancing duo; the Marauding Minors, a unique act of three male singers and dancers, according to Gale & Rice's Sue Auten; Mark Sweet, a comedian and magician; and a contemporary all-female dance group known as the GEO Dancers.

The Toyota display will include the Team Toyota dancers who perform on two turntables in the MR2 and Celica display. The Celica will also be the focus of Toyota's 16-foot-high, three-level walk-up display with a nine-foot high turntable highlighting the Celica's appeal to sports-oriented and fun-loving lifestyles.

Among the celebrities attending the auto show will be Debbye Turner, who may be seen Jan. 6 packing her 1990 Miss America crown toward the Chevrolet Corvette display. Auto racing enthusiasts will have the opportunity to meet their heroes in the flesh — from the good ol' boys of the NASCAR Winston Cup series to the cosmopolitan stars of the Formula One circuit.

Familiar names include NASCAR's Bill Elliott and Geoff Bodine, NHRA 1989 Pro Stock champion Bob Glidden, SCCA competitors Tommy Kendall and Dorsey Schroeder, and Formula One's Alessandro Nannini. As an additional bonus, some of the cars that compete on the world's most challenging courses will be on hand.

Burgeoning technology nuts will be impressed by the high-tech Sico Robot in the Lincoln-Mercury display. This wonder of modern technology actually interacts with members of the audience, functioning as conversationalist, stand-up comic and dancer.

The challenge for most auto display personnel, according to Fischer, is successfully mingling family entertainment and automotive marketing needs.

A MT. RUSHMORE replica, for example, served as a curtain for an unusual unveiling — the 1989 introduction of the Dodge Dakota pickup, said Tom Kowaleski, Chrysler's manager of product public relations.

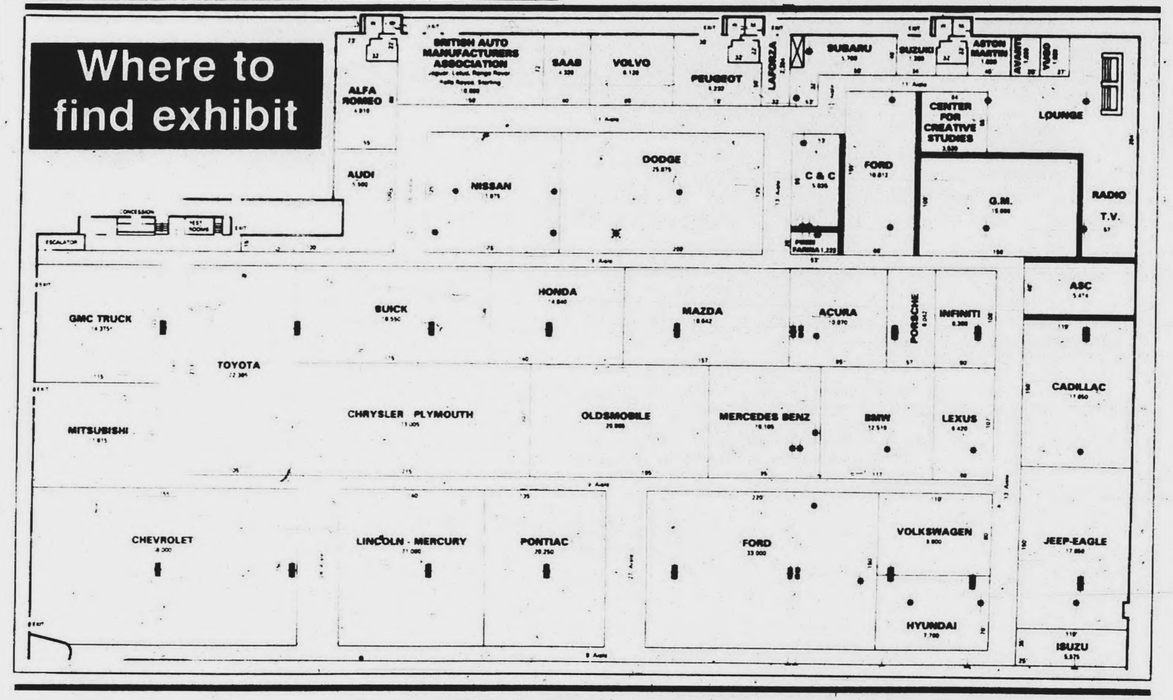

The facade of Mt. Rushmore split in the middle between the faces of Lincoln and Washington, allowing a laser-light and fog-enveloped Dodge Dakota truck to emerge.

Another concept getting attention these days is interactive displays — exhibits that encourage participation or that expand on product imagery.

At the 1989 Jeep Wrangler display, show goers were encouraged to hunker down behind a simulated steering console. Looking through the windshield, the "driver" would "see" the road and "steer" the vehicle over, around and above hazardous terrain. When the vehicle hit a rock or dip in the road, the driver would feel the impact. Potential consumers would walk away with that imagery fresh in their mind, Kowaleski said.

At the 1990 Jeep Wrangler display in Detroit, "drivers" can compete against six other drivers in a race across open desert. The scene will change depending on how the driver brakes, steers and accelerates.

The 1989 General Motors Design Center was the forerunner of this year's much ballyhooed Concept Center. The Design Center featured GM artists and engineers in the actual act of creating new designs and clay models of new cars, while the Concept Center features recent advancements in electronics and safety features combined with imaginative body styling, creating ingenuous — and fun — vehicles for the future. Children and adults alike will marvel at the Concept Center's exposition of today's designs for tomorrow's vehicles.

Air bag simulator drives home message

In an effort to spread the message that air bags are a safe and reliable form of supplemental occupant protection, the American Coalition for Traffic Safety Inc. (ACTS) and TRW Occupant Restraint Systems will display an air-bag simulator at the North American International Auto show now in progress at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

The simulator, which will be in the Ford Motor Co. exhibit area, will deploy a driver's-side air bag at regular intervals throughout the auto show.

"We hope the simulator will help dispel common misconceptions about air bags and increase public awareness of their effectiveness and value in frontal collisions," ACTS Executive Director Phil Haseltine said.

One of the most important messages Haseltine hopes the exhibit will convey is that air bags are a supplement to safety belts, not a replacement.

Tie rods to tail pipes — it's all covered

By Doug Funke
staff writer

THE NORTH American Auto Show, now under way at the Cobo Conference and Exhibition Center, offers something for everyone, organizers say.

Aficionados can ogle more than 750 cars including 1990 domestic models, North American introductions of foreign vehicles, and concept cars not yet in production.

"More new cars are being shown here than any place in the world," said Bob Thibodeau, co-chairman of the show and the owner of a Ford dealership in Center Line.

That includes both street cars and concept cars, he added.

Nearly 50 introductions, including 20 concept vehicles, are expected to make their worldwide or North American debut here after the first of the year.

"IF YOU'RE a car lover, there's so much to see it's unbelievable," said David Fischer, co-chairman of the auto show and owner of an Oldsmobile/Volvo dealership in Troy.

"There's so much to look at for a car-buyer or anybody interested in cars," Fischer added. "You can literally come and compare the world's automobiles at our show." A new twist this year is a design and concept center within Cobo. General Motors intends to recreate the manufacturing process and actually assemble a Buick Reatta on the premises.

People who don't know a tie rod from a tail pipe can people watch — more than 600,000 attended last year — meet celebrities like Debbye Turner, Miss America, or gander at local personalities at one of 25 remote radio broadcast sites in the cavernous hall.

BUT THAT'S not all.

The Lincoln Mercury exhibit will feature a high-tech Sico robot that will dance, tell jokes and interact with the audience.

Chrysler's Jeep Wrangler display will offer a simulated computerized desert crossing race for several players at a time.

Singers, dancers and comedians will perform at many other exhibits.

The cars, however, are the big attraction.

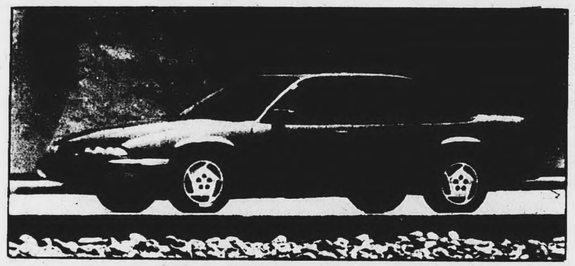

"I think we're showing the tremendous talents available in an industry," Fischer said of people who make cars happen. "We have the greatest resources in the world in our area."

Surveys indicate that most visitors to the auto show will be in the market for a new car this year or within a couple of years, Thibodeau said. "They can sit in cars, touch them, feel them. That's great motivation (to buy)."

Fischer agreed.

"There's a lot of incentives that are going to run around the show," he said. "Companies will be giving out a lot of things to bring people into the showroom."

The auto show will be open 10 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, 2-10:30 p.m. weekdays. Admission is $5. Children 12 and under accompanied by a parent are free. Visitors 65 and older also are free.

New addition

For 1990, The Grand Prix lineup has three new members — including the four-door sedan. Other changes include a new, redesigned analog gauge cluster, with redesigned pod switches; and a 2.3 liter 16-valve engine.

Today's auto show has a colorful past

sailed across the Atlantic Ocean in 1895 to witness the world's first automotive show held in London.

While in Europe, Metzger learned first hand about the pioneering work of Gottlieb Daimler (co-inventor of Mercedes-Benz), who had developed an internal combustive engine in 1887. Fascinated by the potential of this new technology, Metzger sold his bicycle shop and pursued the "horseless carriage" concept full-time.

In 1899, Metzger formed a partnership with Seneca G. Lewis of the Fletcher Hardware Company. Together, they organized The Tri-State Sportsman's and Automobile Association for the exhibition of sporting goods and automobiles. Securing the Light Guard Armory, the humble beginnings for today's billion dollar extravaganza, Detroit's first auto show was under way.

Without the benefit of tradition, building attendance demanded creativity. Apparently, Metzger had a little P.T. Barnum in him. African game trophies were lent to the show, while Lewis' company provided the cutting edge in fishing tackle and hunting bows.

And, to keep the cynics happy, Metzger's old cycling colleagues provided bicycles while local farmers displayed handcrafted "engineless" carriages to round out the show. Metzger received complaints concerning the "lack of horses and livestock."

The automobile industry was represented by two steam Mobiles and two Waverly electric vehicles. Using metal rollers, Metzger displayed the power and efficiency of his products. Common to today's consumer public, the national audience was not easily impressed.

BUT, METZGER WAS elated. Like all visionaries, he realized the horseless carriage was an evolving science. The former bicycle salesman and future father of the Cadillac Motor Co. knew that the seed had been planted in Detroit.

To realize how large the automotive tree has become, in 1900 there were only 8,000 vehicles in the United States, the same number vying for highway space during today's Detroit rush-hour commute.

The DADA formed in 1907, pooling the resources of enterpreneurs who would become synonymous with the automotive industry. Names like Ford, Oldsmobile, Buick and Cadillac were all represented at Beller's Beer Garden, the 1907 version of Cobo Hall.

The early DADA Auto Show programs featured more advertisements for wooden wheels, livestock, bicycles, land parcels and clothing than it did automotive lineage. But, as the shows evolved, so did the industry.

Leading up to the World War I years, the automotive aftermarket made its presence felt in the advertising pages. Firestone, Cameron and Compound sold tires, engines and accessories. Show attendees also were offered a full-line of motoring garments to protect them from the motoring hazards of open cabs.

The evolving technology of the combustion engine lent itself to the entrepreneurial whims of the Wright Brothers as they explored air travel at Kitty Hawk. Military planners injected the power of this technology into World War I in the form of tanks, planes, jeeps and transport vehicles.

Spoken wooden wheels gave way to rubber tires and steel rims. Candle burning lamps gave way to headlights. The horseless carriage design gave way to independent frames accompanied by spring suspension. Advances in sheet metal and pain technology were displayed as manufacturers attached components independently from the vehicle frames.

Two-cylinder engines evolved to four, six and ultimately eight-cylinder engines. And, with the impact of Henry Ford's assembly line, care manufacturers could produce 4,000 vehicles in a week instead of a year.

And, the launching pad for all of these innovations took place at the Detroit Auto Shows. In fact, the competitive fires of the world's automotive companies spurred great secrecy as the shows evolved through the 1920s leading up to World War II. Listen to Walter J. Bemb, an Honorary Life Member of the Detroit Auto Show Committee.

"We would move our display cars into the show auditorium under wraps and those wraps would stay on until the opening gun sounded," Bemb recalled. "You risked your neck if you tired to lift the covering off of a competitors' vehicle."

The automotive industry slumped during the depression and dedicated itself to the effort of helping win two World Wars. Due to these interruptions, there were 17 years where no Auto Shows took place.

But, with the renewed vigor, confidence and prosperity of the post-World War II era, young families purchased vehicles as fast as the manufacturers could produce them. During the 1950's, engineers created bolder designs, as vehicles were emblazoned with brighter two-tone paints, tail fins, and more powerful engines.

At that time, the DADA competed with New York and Chicago for event recognition and prestige. The Detroit Auto Show's home during the 1950's was at the State Fairgrounds, at Woodward and Grand River. Due to its lack of display space, the National Auto Show was held in New York.

There's a bright future for auto paint

HENRY FORD'S adage — any color you want as long as it's black" — has been laid to rest.

Since the all-black Tin Lizzies of the automotive industry's infancy, a rainbow of colors has exploded upon the scene making the highways, byways and auto shows of the world a Technicolor affair.

"Cars are what people are or what they want to be," said Robert S. Daily, color marketing manager at Du Pont Automotive Products Finishes Division. "As a result, we are seeing a wider range of colors that range from somber tones to more flamboyant shades."

Those who attended the 1989 North American International Auto Show in Detroit witnessed the flowering of these new shades, a trend that will be continued into the 1990s. The Quasar Blue of Ford's Splash and the Bright Lime of Pontiac's Stinger concept vehicles appeal to the sport-minded baby boomer while Honda's palette for its Acura boasts a bright teal, a honey blend color or a distinct canyon "blaze red."

ALTHOUGH THE RANGE of colors available on new cars is greater than before, cost cutting in the mid-80s has actually reduced the number of paint options for consumers. Subtle changes in color have been replaced by a broad representation of the spectrum.

Whereas automotive companies once offered as many as 18 color choices per car, according to Daily, most carmakers today offer between eight to 12 colors. The narrowing of choices better enables carmakers to coordinate car interiors and exteriors, Daily said.

"What we are saying is a common car platform with several different nameplates is usually offered in eight common colors," he said. "Each different nameplate may have one or two extra colors that are exclusive to that particular car."

New technologies, environmental concerns, automotive cost consciousness and aerodynamic automotive designs are stimulating the rapid changes in automotive finishes. Vivid paint jobs came about partly because of the increasing use of plastic body parts and the environmental hazards of paint by-products such as volatile organic compounds (VOCs) solvent emissions.

VOCS ARE REQUIRING the paint industry to change paint application methods to reduce hazardous waste. The need for paints that can be cured at a lower temperature is necessitated by the expanded choice of plastic, composite and other metal-substitute material.

The industry is responding with several alternatives, the most prevalent being water-based paint systems. Waterborne basecoats reduce pain solvent emissions from assembly plants while resulting in more durable, long-lasting and true-to-color finishes when used with state-of-the-art clearcoats. Waterborne basecoats also cure at lower temperatures required by metal-alternate body parts.

"Waterborne technologies are opening up a new realm of color options and effects for auto designers and colorists," Daily said. As an example, Du Pont's waterborne finish technology produces metallic finishes that are brighter, more reflective and more flattering to aerodynamically styled automobiles than traditional high-solid paints.

"Waterborne paints combine durability and aesthetics with cost effectiveness and environmental and energy conservation," Daily said.

"New coatings chemistries and latest state-of-the-art technology will be setting the color pace for the '90s," said Brian Stewart, assistant manager, PPG Industries Troy-based Advanced Color Styling Center for Automotive and Industrial Coatsings.

"It is our responsibility as color designers to create new and exciting aesthetic effects through the use of new technology and accurate color forecasting." According to Stewart, this is accomplished by studying color trend information from the fashion industry on a global basis.

STEWART ADDED THAT color stylists in workshop sessions in such associations as the Color Marketing Group and the International Color Authority also are used in establishing color directions. These associations consist of many stylists from a wide variety of industries that deal specifically with color for their products. At these workshops, they discuss and share color trend information and work out a published color palette that serves various industries with a bases for future color direction.

Car colors usually are decided three to four years in advance. Because of this enormous lead time, industry specialists like Stewart and Daily are forced to predict public tastes.

"Generally, I look to the world of high fashion," said Daily. "That's where new ideas and new trends seem to start. We also have an experimental factor, relying on staff creativity to produce new colors that might spark future trends."

What will be fashionable in the 1990s?

"The evolution of green coming back to the automotive color palette," Stewart said. "True greens absent from the marketplace for almost 20 years, riding in on the crest of greener blues. There also will be a continued popularity for redder blues pushing their way right through violet."

Daily forsees a continuation of the '50s retro look: turquoise, pinks and aquas.

"We'll be seeing a lot more European and Japanese imports with colors appealing to North American niches," he said. "The Japanese market will continue their obsession with all things American, and carmakers will respond by offering cars with more pronounced colors rather than the traditional white. European colors, for the most part, will be somewhat livelier than the somber tones of the past. Increasing use of waterborne paints will give added glamor to traditional hues."

Lighting the way
