Cold spell coming to the rescue of ice fest

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

"I believe we are saved." That's what Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular Executive Director Pam Kosteva said Tuesday, as daytime temperatures were predicted to dip to the 30 degree-range for the first weekend of the festival, which opens today.

Because temperatures rose to the mid-40s last week and earlier this week, the first delivery of ice for the festival was delayed from Monday to Wednesday.

Deliveries — the second of several shipments is scheduled for Monday — will total 400,000 pounds.

Some ice sculptors will be attempting new, innovative designs at the festival, Kosteva said.

While the National Weather Service predicted highs in the mid-40s today, highs were to fall to the 30s on Friday and Saturday. "We should have excellent weather for the weekend," Kosteva said.

Kosteva described excellent weather as "anything below freezing and no rain, or a combination of freezing (temperatures) and a cloudy day."

Even if temperatures rise a bit above freezing, she said cloud-covered skies "protect the ice."

"Plymouth is throwing a party and 400,000 people have been invited," she said.

Beginning at 5 p.m. today, sculptures done on Wednesday were scheduled to be placed atop bunting-draped pedestals lining Main Street, Penman, Ann Arbor Trail, Forest and streets throughout Old Village.

Veteran sculptor takes it in stride

Over the weekend, Pam Kosteva, executive director of the Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular, was able to reach every Plymouth-bound ice carver to tell them the ice festival was delayed — everyone except Chris Koetke, that is.

Koetke, a saucier with Le Francis restaurant on Chicago's north side, flew to Detroit Sunday night.

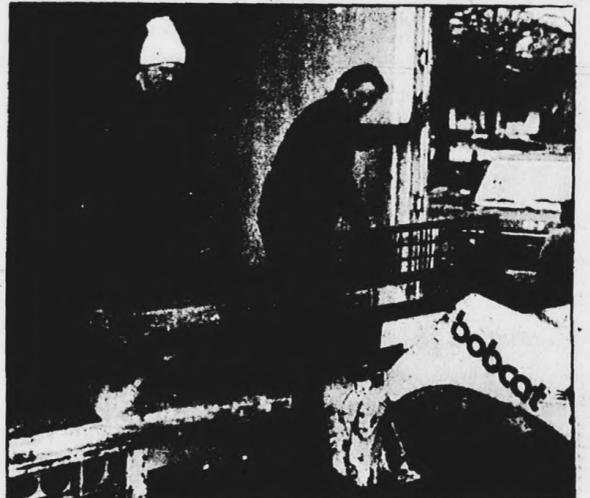

Monday and Tuesday, he was the lone ice carver in town.

Because of unseasonably warm temperatures, ice delivery was postponed for two days. So Koetke, a guest at the Mayflower Hotel, had neither carvers nor ice to keep him company.

Koetke, a carver with Nadeau's Ice Sculptures, Inc., of Chicago, took it all in stride.

Plymouth man killed in I-275 crash

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A 46-year-old Plymouth man died Monday on I-275 south of Ford Road in Canton after his car veered across the median and struck another car.

Robert Williams was dead at the accident scene, police said.

Williams, who was alone in the car, was traveling north on I-275 south of Ford when his car left the roadway, went across the median and across the expressway to the southbound lanes.

Williams' car was struck on the passenger side by a 1982 Buick driven by a 31-year-old woman who had her two-year-old son in the car.

Williams' car continued off the roadway down a slight embankment.

Meanwhile, the 1982 Buick was struck on the driver's side, spinning it clockwise, by a car traveling southbound on the expressway. The 57-year-old Canton man in that car refused medical treatment, police said.

The 31-year-old female driver is in guarded condition in Westland Medical Center and her son was treated and released shortly after he was taken to the center, a hospital spokesman said.

Although police are not sure what caused Williams to veer off the road, they speculated that he may have suffered a heart attack, seizure or other health problem before the accident.

The Wayne County Medical Examiners office listed the cause of death as multiple injuries. A medical examiner explained, however, that the report doesn't list health problems before the death.

Police found Williams lying upside down on the front seat with his feet near the pedals and his head near the passenger's door.

New station would cut response time

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The goal is to lower the response times for fire and medical emergencies in western Plymouth Township.

To meet it, a proposal for a third fire station at the northeast corner of Beck and North Territorial roads, will go before township planners Feb. 21.

"We're hopeful of having that third station to cut the response times to five minutes or less," said Fire Chief Larry Groth.

"Basically the new station will be serving the western area of the township; west of Sheldon, south of Five Mile, north of Joy and east of Napier," he said.

Groth said it's hoped the station will be ready to occupy in spring 1991.

In February, the planning commission will likely begin a final site plan review for the station.

"We don't have a contractor or builder at this point," said Rosemary Harvey, township finance director.

"It (a contract) hasn't been awarded so we really don't have a price at this point," she said.

When the township board of trustees agreed in May to hire an architect to design the station, Groth said, "We have looked at stations from $500,000 to $1.4 million. . . . What I am looking at is a three-bay, drive-through station."

An EMS unit costing around $65,000 will also be needed, Harvey said.

Supervisor Maurice Breen has said he doesn't intend to pursue additional millage to build and operate the fire station.

Canton Township to get new enforcer

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Canton Township will have a new officer to make sure residents stick to zoning ordinances instead of an officer to make sure the trucks that rumble through the community aren't too heavy.

The township had planned on hiring one person to do both jobs, but the township board scrapped the plan on Tuesday because the weighmaster would be required to be a peace officer.

THE WORKER would have spent 75 percent of his or her time enforcing township ordinances and 25 percent as a weighmaster.

The township wants a weighmaster because enforcing load limits helps township roads last longer with fewer repairs.

However, that won't happen for now because splitting the job wouldn't work, according to Aaron Machnik, Canton municipal services director.

He said such a worker would have to belong to two unions and that would cause too much confusion.

"And we can't hire a fraction of a person," Machnik said.

Wayne County is responsible for maintaining most roads in townships. However, there are only two weighmasters in the county, Machnik said. Cities, on the other hand, maintain their own roads and may hire weighmasters without requiring the peace officer certification.

Township officials say the different standards are unfair, especially since Canton, with 60,000 residents, is larger than most cities.

Schools' building plan doesn't suit city

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

No changes are planned for a proposed Plymouth-Canton schools office expansion downtown, even though planning commissioners have asked for changes.

That means the Plymouth Planning Commission could reject the proposal, scheduled to come before them Jan. 24.

"There were some concerns that the property on Ann Arbor Trail is zoned single-family residential, and they (the school board) want to use it for parking," said Douglas Miller, Plymouth planning commission chairman.

Miller said that if schools' representatives return to the planning

'We would like to see the school board stay there. But the residents have legitimate concerns about offices creeping into residential areas.'

— Douglas Miller
Plymouth planning commission commission with the same plan, it could be rejected. "My hope is they're going to present a modified plan," he said.

"We would like to see the school board stay there," Miller continued. "But the residents have legitimate concerns about offices creeping into residential areas."

Michael Pollard, an attorney representing the school board, said the plan to be presented Jan. 24 "is the same as the one presented at the original (planning) meeting."

SCHOOL OFFICIALS want to build a 7,500-square-foot addition on the west side of the administration building at 454 S. Harvey — 2,500 feet in a basement and on each of two floors — and 73 parking spaces. The building is south of Ann Arbor Trail.

To make room for parking, school officials want to raise two houses the district owns south of Robert Bake Realtors on Ann Arbor Trail.

To pay for the project, officials would use the $325,000 approved by voters in a 1986 bond issue.

Planning commissioners and residents have raised objections concerning parking, building height, landscaping and screening.

Pollard and other schools officials were to meet Wednesday at the board office with some nearby residents, to explain the expansion plan. "We want them to see the existing facility and compare it with the site plan of what is proposed," Pollard said on Tuesday.

Should the planning commission reject the project, the school board could choose to bring its plan to the zoning board of appeals "or to litigate," Pollard said. The school board got a variance from the zoning board of appeals to increase the building height from 25 feet — maximum under the zoning ordinance — to 31 feet.

Pam Kosteva, president of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce, wrote in a letter to Superintendent John Hoben that the chamber "fully supports the renovation and expansion of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools board office. "As a business association we clearly recognize the importance of maintaining this vital employer within the city boundaries," she continued.

AT MONDAY'S SCHOOL board meeting, Hoben said that placing driveways along Harvey instead of Ann Arbor Trail as suggested by residents won't be possible unless Robert Bake Realtors is willing to agree to a land transfer.

"We don't own the property. But there's some indication Bake may be willing to do that (trade land)," Hoben said. Some trustees favor leaving Plymouth if opposition to the renovation continues.

Trustee E.J. McClendon said it's important to make the building more attractive regardless of who occupies it in the future.

"I can't visualize people who insist this building not be refurbished. As I see it we have no choice but to leave Plymouth if we can't make it a viable building and make it look better," McClendon said.

If the school district were to build off-site, it would have to seek permission from the State Department of Education, as the bond money can be used only to renovate the existing building, according to an opinion issued by the state attorney general.

Trustee Roland Thomas said, "I can't fathom how we're as big a problem as what they've done with the McAuley health center."

"I agree with E.J. If they don't want to accommodate us, we should look at our other options. The other issue I have is what is the traffic issue going to be on Harvey?"

Trustee Dave Artley said, "As long as I've lived in the Plymouth-Canton community, schools have always been a good neighbor — helpful to business and residents."

"I appreciate residents' concerns about traffic concerns, but they should be concerned about the type of neighbor they might get if we left."

— M.B. Dillon contributed to this report.

Third fire station would cut down response time

Also, "We'll probably add 10 more volunteers and more staff," Groth said, adding that number is undetermined.

Currently, the department has 16 full-time staff and 20 volunteers.

The department headquarters is at Ann Arbor Road and Lilley, a second station is at Schoolcraft and Wilcox in the northeast end of the township.

"We began to look at this project way back in the late '70s," Groth said, adding the land for the third station was bought by the township in 1979.

While township officials then an-icipated growth in western Plymouth township, Groth said the need for a third station now is clear, "with the increase in industrial, commercial and residential growth."

In May, Groth reported to the township board, "Our response times to the western end of the township were lengthy."

"We had response times anywhere from eight minutes to 12 or 14 minutes — all determined by the time of day, weather conditions or the amount of traffic."

Groth added, "A fire allowed to burn for more than five minutes freely is more developed and much harder to knock down."

Ice artists put their talents on the block

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

You can have springtime in Paris. It's winter in Plymouth — time to soak up the Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular and keep the blahs at bay.

This morning, ice sculptures took their places atop bunting-draped pedestals lining Main Street, Ann Arbor, Trail, Forest and Penniman and in Old Village.

Yesterday, semi-tractor trailers, each carrying 99 blocks of ice, began arriving in Kellogg Park. Tipping the scales at 400 pounds, the blocks are five feet long, two feet wide and one foot thick.

Carvers from Macomb Community College, Oakland Community College and Nadeau's Ice Sculptures Inc., of Chicago went to work Wednesday, their chainsaws whirring, ice picks lifting and chisels chopping.

Matthew Kind and Scott Capute may look like loggers, but they're ice carvers from the Oakland Community College culinary program.

Jeff Wolf, chef instructor at Macomb, was overseeing the creation of a tent and one-ring circus, replete with ringmaster and circus animals.

Wolf said it'd be about a 30-block job tackled by 25 student carvers. "They asked us to keep it to 25 blocks, but we snatched a few," said Wolf.

"It's going to be elevated, with blue spotlights underneath it, a yellow light on top of the tent and white spotlights on the animals."

Wolf — whose company Finesse Cuisine of Utica carves ice sculptures for weddings, grand openings and company parties — said that rather than foster competition, the ice festival "seems to have brought all the colleges together. Everyone is out to help each other. There's a lot of camaraderie."

masterminding the creation of a 37-block locomotive and track with elephants, seals, dogs, tigers and lions in and around it.

Stawara estimates it will take OCC's 45 culinary arts students three 10-hour days to complete the job.

Wednesday afternoon, temperatures hovered in the mid-30s — warm enough to keep from getting cold "as long as you keep moving," said Stawara. "Just my hands are cold."

Weather conditions were "pretty nice" for carving, he added.

"If it's too cold, the ice gets brittle and you can't control how much you take off. As long as it doesn't rain and it doesn't get too far above freezing, we're all set."

Wednesday's overcast skies were welcomed by the ice artisans. "The sun is an enemy. It acts as a microwave, cracking the ice from the inside out," Stawara said.

New officer to enforce ordinances

Township officials vowed Tuesday to fight for legislation eliminating the peace officer certification in townships.

For more than three years Canton officials have talked about hiring a weighmaster. Trucks exceeding the weight limit would receive a ticket.

THIS YEAR Canton will have three ordinance officers compared to one last year.

"The one person who is working with us now is inundated with requests and the service is deteriorating," Machnik said.

Supervisor Tom Yack said residents mistakenly believe the ordinance officer has enough time to patrol the roads looking for violations. Actually he only has time to answer residents' complaints.

"We've had a number of complaints that we're not doing enough now," Machnik said.

Once residents are confronted with a violation, Machnik said, they're usually surprised to learn they were breaking the law.

Stolen car owner left holding bag

When a Plymouth Township man's stolen car was returned recently, he got a surprise. The car, stolen Dec. 28 in Taylor, was recovered two days later in Detroit, Plymouth Township Police said.

But when the car was returned, the owner, 43, found a woman's brown leather purse inside — complete with keys, credit cards and a checkbook.

The man turned the purse and its contents in to police last week, according to the report.

Schools to build storage building

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Plymouth-Canton school board members at their meeting Monday night authorized the spending of $179,740 for a storage building at Centennial Educational Park.

The board also approved the selection of architects Carne Associates Inc. of Plymouth.

Money for the metal structure, to be built behind the football field, will come from the $13 million bond issue approved by voters in 1986.

The building and the board office renovation are the last two remaining major bond projects.

The 3,650 square feet of storage space will house furniture, machinery and books, if the facility is heated. Initial plans call for lighting and floor drains, but no heating or rest rooms. The district has 44 existing buildings and portables.

"WE HAVE a small building there already," Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business, told trustees. "We're proposing this for right next to that one. It would service the school district well."

"We don't have adequate storage space anywhere in the district. Regardless of any potential long-range plans to develop a central maintenance building, which might include such things as a carpenter shop, electric shop, mechanical shop, central warehouse and offices, this building would be in an excellent location and would be very beneficial to the school district for storage, which is greatly lacking for the entire district," added Hoedel.

Plans call for bids to be received in March. Construction will begin in May and completed by August.

The cost of building the 50-by-73-foot building is estimated at $127,800. Asphalt paving and grading will cost another $9,870. The architect's fee is $10,570, and the construction manager's fee $4,000.

ALSO APPROVED WAS $3,660 for renovation of a restroom at Smith Elementary. The work, completed over the holidays, made the facility accessible to the handicapped.

The restroom was rebuilt in response to a request from Smith to accommodate a handicapped parent who occasionally visits the school. State law now requires restroom facilities for the handicapped in all public buildings.

Restrooms in existing school district buildings are converted as the budget allows and demand requires, said Hoedel.

The board also authorized the rebuilding of a 20-year-old boiler at Salem High School at a cost of $6,200. The improvement will be paid for out of the general fund.

From 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Saturday, 60 student carvers from Michigan, Illinois, Montana, Texas, Florida, Colorado, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York will compete in The Gathering in Kellogg Park.

Even more sculptures are scheduled to be carved Monday.

The 82nd Airborne Division All-American Chorus of Fort Bragg, N.C., will highlight Tuesday's festivities.

A 3 p.m. show is scheduled for the Penn Theater, and a 7:30 p.m. show is scheduled for the band shell at Kellogg Park. Both shows are free.

The 27 paratroopers appear in maroon berets, ascots, uniforms and spit-shined jump boots, and perform a repertoire of patriotic and contemporary songs.

Considering that the festival was nearly cancelled last summer, as the corporation that headed previous festivals folded, Kosteva said, "I am delighted," upon the opening of the festival.

The festival continues through Jan. 21.

restaurant, I've been really busy. I'm going to write my Christmas cards," said Koetke, 24, with a smile.

It was the calm before the storm. Thanks to Mother Nature, "we will get twice as much ice Wednesday. I have a feeling things are going to be kind of crazy by Thursday," he said.

Nadeau's Ice Sculptures created the street sculptures for Main Street, Penniman, Forest, Ann Arbor Trail and Old Village.

With fellow carvers Jim Nadeau and Maurie Pearson, Koetke plans to carve 400 blocks of ice.

"We tried to pick out ordinary things to make — an ice carver carving ice, salt and pepper shakers, a toaster, a slot machine, a stop sign, a stop light and mammals of all sorts."

"I did a businessman with a briefcase, a soldier and a knight," said Koetke.

Nadeau's is creating a massive train and railroad crossing using 80 blocks of ice that will front Main Street in Kellogg Park.

Koetke isn't saying what Nadeau's has dreamed up for the fountain area. "Let's just say it will be a surprise," he said.

A graduate of Indiana's Valparaiso

University, Koetke has been carving for nine years.

"I started on my own at 15, and I've been doing it ever since," he said. As a kid, Koetke used "ordinary chisels that weren't very sharp, and a really inexpensive chainsaw. I'm sure I burned the motor out the first few months," he said.

"Jim (Nadeau) has taught me a lot. I learned mostly from him."

Trial and error have taught Koetke a few things as well.

"After the first 500 (sculptures), it begins to make sense. Every time you break one you say, I know this isn't what to do."

Blanchard: Cap home taxes only

The ink wasn't dry on Gov. James Blanchard's State of the State message when sharp debate broke out over his proposal to cap homeowners' school property assessments.

"Any parcel — not just single-family houses — should be protected," said Sen. Doug Cruce, R-Troy. Cruce on Wednesday introduced a resolution to amend the Michigan Constitution to cap state equalized valuation increases at the rate of consumer price inflation.

"It would cost more money" to include commercial, industrial, agricultural and mining property, objected state treasurer Robert Bowman. Democrat Blanchard's economic guru told reporters the administration's proposal started with homeowners, who are feeling the tightest pinch and who haven't had pay increases to match inflation in property values.

Livingston, Oakland, Macomb and western Wayne counties have seen double-digit SEV increases on houses, leaders of both parties say.

BOWMAN HELD out hope that Blanchard would agree to cap business assessments, too, if there were "loophole closings" on business taxes. He didn't elaborate, but in the past he has called for taxes on banks, thrifts, insurers and computer software.

The treasurer said that if Blanchard's SEV cap had been in place for homeowners for the past four years, it would have cost the treasury $150 million.

Bowman said it hasn't been decided whether to 1) reimburse homeowners for excess taxes due to inflated assessments or 2) reduce local tax bills and reimburse school districts for the lost revenue.

Counties, cities, townships, villages and park agencies receiving property taxes apparently wouldn't be reimbursed for their revenue losses.

The 1978 Headlee tax limitation amendment has failed to protect the homeowner, Cruce and Bowman agreed. Reason: Headlee applies to the total SEV of a city or township, not to individual classes of property. Suburban housing has soared in value since the 1983 economic recovery, but farm property has actually fallen in value.

BLANCHARD WILL continue to tie state school funding to quality and cost-containment efforts, according to his eighth message as governor. Items:

- A college would get none of the new $500 million in bond money for construction unless it agreed to contain tuition rates. Blanchard has jawboned universities over their double-digit tuition increases during a period of 5 percent consumer price inflation, but this is his first effort to put monetary muscle behind it.

- He will seek another $5 million in "achievement incentives" for schools that improve test scores, but he wants to add to the list of reasons for giving such grants — improved attendance, reduced dropout rates and criteria set by schools themselves.

- Outstanding community college instructors would be eligible for the same kind of "teaching excellence" awards as university professors.

Schools mixed on gov's tax plan

By Wayne Post

Area school chiefs are reacting to Gov. Blanchard's new plan to cap property taxes the way museum goers react to modern art.

Some like it, some don't and some just don't know what to make of it.

The governor announced his plan — preventing property tax assessments from rising above the inflation rate — during Wednesday night's State of the State Address.

But local school superintendents, contacted before the speech, were uncertain whether the plan would help or harm their districts, or whether it was even necessary.

Redford Union's Kenneth Erickson, whose district relies heavily on state aid, said the new plan didn't appear to pose a problem.

"As I understand it, it won't be a problem for in-formula districts like ours," Erickson said. "We live or die by the state aid formula and enrollment."

Jan Jacobs, superintendent in the nearby South Redford district, which doesn't receive direct state aid, was more cautious in his assessment.

"I'M NOT sure what it would do, but it has the potential to impact us because we're so dependent upon property taxes," Jacobs said.

Livonia Superintendent Joseph Marinelli likened the plan to a shell game, with wealthier out-of-formula school districts ending up as losers.

"I don't believe for a moment the state would reimburse us for what we lost (through lower property tax assessments)," Marinelli said. "At the same time, we could also end up recapturing less for categorical aid, so, even if they did reimburse us on one hand, we'd be losing on the other."

While Garden City, South Redford and Wayne-Westland are in-formula, receiving direct state aid, all area districts receive categorical aid for special education and transportation.

Growing districts, like Livonia, would be hampered, Marinelli predicted.

"If you're growing, holding things to the inflation rate might not cover the cost of new teachers and new space for students," he said.

Even though final details were pending, early reports indicated the plan would affect home assessments only. It wasn't expected to cut business taxes or roll back millage rates — the approach taken by the state's 1978 Headlee Amendment.

At that, some school officials couldn't see where the governor's plan differed from that of his one-time rival.

"I DON'T see where it would accomplish anything that's not already being done with Headlee," said Garden City Superintendent Michael Wilmot. "The Headlee Amendment already ties property tax increases to the inflation rate."

Wayne-Westland Superintendent Dennis O'Neill and Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John Hoben were equally uncertain what, if anything, the governor's plan would accomplish.

"I don't know if this is coming out of the movement for equity or gubernatorial politics," O'Neill said. "But I'd like to get a good look at it, as well as what (GOP state Senate leader) John Engler is proposing."

Hoben said he planned to attend a forum on the governor's plan later in the week.

"I hope to know more about it later that," he said.

Some observers believe the Blanchard plan would enable school districts to retain their state aid. Because of rising assessments, some districts — even small districts without development — have lost direct, per-student state aid.

Even though it comes too late for his district, Clarencoville Superintendent Jerry Montecillo, said the governor's plan could have merit. "We believe it could help," Montecillo said. "You might not have to go to a Headlee override."

Overrides, allowing schools to continue levying the same millage despite rising assessments, require a vote of the people.

Even though superintendents disagreed on the Blanchard plan's effect, they generally agreed it would prove popular with taxpayers and it wouldn't be the last time the state considered either property taxes or school finance in the next few years.

"Something's bound to happen," O'Neill said. "But, at this point, we just don't know what."

Senators doubt dropout plan

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Suburban state senators doubt Gov. James Blanchard's plan to raise the minimum school dropout age to 18 will do any good.

And Republicans are cool to Democrat Blanchard's proposal to cap homeowners' property assessments — but not business.

"We need to have children in school who want to be in school," said Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills. "Attendance is no reward for success."

"Mandatory attendance is more bookkeeping rather than education-achievement."

"My experience is that some young people, when they drop out, have some hard knocks when they go into the adult world." But those people sometimes return to school later and do better because of "the simple process of maturation," said Faxon, a private school operator.

"AN INTERESTING concept," said Sen. Richard Fessler, R-Commerce, who then raised a long list of questions about how raising the current age 16 dropout law to 18 would work.

"Why are they dropping out of school, period? How are we going to retain them? What enforcement mechanism? It's a motivational issue."

A child psychologist, Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, said raising the dropout age is practical "only if we expand vocational training, remedial reading and remedial math at the high school level."

"To require them to sit around for two years, unless we have programs, would be a waste," Geake said.

Sen. William Faust, D-Westland, was out of the state and couldn't be reached for comment.

STATE DEMOCRATIC Party chair F. Thomas Lewand praised Blanchard for "renewing his emphasis on quality in education."

Lewand said raising the dropout age could be "helpful where it's a critical problem. Most people in Oakland County would welcome it. But not in too many communities is it an issue," said the Bloomfield Township lawyer.

Lewand said Blanchard's emphasis on recycling is of great importance in Oakland, where a $1 billion solid waste program is in the early building stage.

Lewand was alone in praising Blanchard's proposal to cap homeowners' property assessments at the consumer price index (CPI) rate of inflation.

"Homeowners feel the brunt the most. Many are on fixed incomes," said Lewand, citing retirees as one such group.

Republicans blistered the plan for ignoring business' assessments.

"IT'S THE OLD Democratic philosophy — tax business to win the favor of voters," said Geake, whose district includes Livonia, Redford, Plymouth and Canton. "All classes of property should be treated the same."

Fessler said Blanchard was stealing his idea of capping assessments.

"My staff and I have been in discussions for five weeks about a petition drive which I may spearhead against property tax assessments and onerous increases."

Fessler's western Oakland district has seen double-digit assessment hikes in the Oakland building boom. But he said his plan would (1) apply to all property, including business, and (2) set a flat limit of perhaps 3 percent instead of the CPI, currently at 5 percent.

"It's interesting this idea should emerge in the state of the state address," he said.

FAXON, WHOSE district includes Southfield, said he has "no problem" with the assessment cap plan, adding, "It should be made retroactive. It's not enough, but long over due."

Fessler says both sides are borrowing his ideas

Sen. Richard Fessler's safety idea has wound up in his leader's speech. Senate majority leader John Engler, in a Republican state of the state message, borrowed a plan Fessler had been working on.

Said Engler — "We propose the creation of an office of inspector general under the jurisdiction of the State Transportation Commission."

The inspector general's job would be "inspecting rail lines, bridges, airports and other transportation facilities to make them as safe as possible," Engler said Tuesday.

Fessler, R-Commerce, said he has been working on the idea as chair of the Senate Transportation Committee. Rail safety, in particular, became an issue after 1980's CEK train wrecks in Highland Township and rural Saginaw County.

Twice in one week Fessler said he found his ideas in others' speeches. Gov. James Blanchard is advocating capping property assessment increases at the rate of consumer inflation (see related story).

School board hikes staff travel costs

By M.B. Gillan
staff writer

School employees traveling on business will have more to spend, according to a resolution approved Monday night by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

Before it becomes policy, the change will be posted a second time.

Employees will be able to spend $30 per day on meals — $5 for breakfast; $10 for lunch; and $15 for dinner. Exceptions will be made if a $30 or $35 dinner banquet is involved.

The policy, last updated in 1978, allowed a per diem of $18 for employees traveling within Michigan, and $23 for people traveling out-of-state.

Employees will be able to spend up to $1,500 without hourly approval prior to travel. Right now the limit is $600.

"In 1978, your costs of any conference were certainly much less," said Dick Egli, administrative assistant for community relations. "In today's economy, it's difficult to pay registration for a conference or seminar, pay for transportation, pay for lodging while you're there and pay for meals and do it for $600. So this simply updates the figures in terms of today's economy."

Board members welcomed the revisions.

Plymouth-Canton employees will be able to spend $30 per day on meals — $5 for breakfast; $10 for lunch; and $15 for dinner.

"I find it incredulous that there was a place in Michigan where you could find a lunch for $5," said Trustee David Artley.

Trustee Roland Thomas asked whether "people are tied to rates according to meal time, or to the maximum per day. To eat dinner on $15 you're struggling," he said.

Egli said the resolution should be reworded to say $30 a day.

Employees who take business trips by car are reimbursed at 23 cents per mile.

School officials agreed to require traveling employees to furnish documentation including both receipts and programs.

To accommodate inflation, the board also increased the amounts school buildings may keep on hand in petty cash from $300 to $500.

Also increased was the maximum amount of purchases allowed using petty cash from $35 to $45.

Drug czar asks MSU to offer alcohol-free housing options

By Janice Brunson
Staff writer

Despite a crackdown on campus drinking, Michigan State University officials have yet to follow precedent set by many state colleges and provide housing options for students interested in a school living environment free of alcohol and other substance abuse.

The issue was the topic of a Dec. 13 letter by Michigan's drug czar Donald Reisig to MSU president John DiBiaggio.

"I have been working informally with a group very interested in drug-free college dormitory rooms," wrote Reisig, director of the state's Office of Drug Agencies.

"I note that according to their analysis, MSU had chosen not to implement a drug-free living environment program. I would urge your consideration of the adoption of such a policy."

An ad-hoc committee of concerned parents and others have worked for two years with U.S. District Judge Bernard Friedman of West Bloomfield and Rep. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, pushing for legislation that requires alcohol and drug-free housing options for students attending Michigan universities and colleges.

Many schools, including the University of Michigan and Oakland University, have voluntarily complied by including options on housing applications. MSU applications do not contain the option.

'Other schools are doing it and I'll keep up the pressure until MSU does.'

state drug chief

"WE ARE NOT ADVERSE to such a program, nor have we ruled it out," said MSU vice president Moses Turner.

"We believe all of our (residence) halls, not just one, not just one floor, should be drug free. We are trying to find creative ways to deal with the problem, working by and through the students for a free environment, a protective environment, for all."

"We are trying to approach the issue appropriately, assuring we can monitor it and implement it in a way that it has some chance of success, both initially and long term, which means student support," Turner said.

He also said Reisig's letter "is not a fair characterization of our position. We have stepped up enforcement of alcohol and other drug violations considerably this year. Our programs are significant. We're not sitting here dillying and dallying, with our hands behind our back. The state can be proud of what we are doing."

In addition to expanded on-campus counseling and treatment for substance abuse and new educational programs, Turner said campus police and residency staff have "aggressively" implemented MSU rules regarding the use of alcohol and drugs. All illegal substances are automatically banned from campus, as is drinking or possession of liquor by underage students.

Based on a Jan. 8 article in the school's newspaper, The State News, the number of arrests made on campus for driving under the influence nearly doubled from October 1988 to October 1989.

REISIG INTENDS TO PURSUE the matter.

"Other schools are doing it and I'll keep up the pressure until MSU does," he said, adding it is "facetious" to think school rules regarding liquor and drugs are not abused. "It was facetious in my day and it's more so today."

Honigman also intends to pursue the matter.

"If we don't have huge compliance (from both public and private schools) pretty soon, we'll have to do legislation," he said.

The ad hoc committee is currently focusing efforts on voluntary compliance by private colleges and universities in Michigan.

Holiday hiring trims unemployment rate

Christmas seasonal hiring in retail trade and services helped push down unemployment rates in nine of Michigan's 12 major labor markets in November, the Michigan Employment Security Commission reported.

The Detroit and Muskegon areas saw the biggest drops in joblessness — 1.6 percent. Metro Detroit's rate is 6.4 percent and Muskegon's 8.5 percent, according to Thomas Malek, MESC deputy director.

Layoffs in Detroit area automotive plants were offset by hiring gains in the retail and wholesale trades and in local education.

The Ann Arbor area had the lowest unemployment rate at 4.0 percent, down from 5.1 percent in October.

The Flint area had the highest November unemployment rate — 11.6 percent, a decline from October's 12.7 percent.

Unemployment rose in three areas — Battle Creek, Lansing/East Lansing and the Upper Peninsula.

The statewide November jobless rate was 6.9 percent, down from 7.7 percent in October. The number of jobless dropped by 41,000 to 327,000.

Right to Life — Lifespan plan rally

Right to Life — Lifespan of Metro Detroit is holding its annual Rally for the Unborn, 2 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 21, at Kennedy Square, Detroit.

Detroit City Councilmen Keith Butler and Jack Kelley and Marsha

Jones, youth director, Save Our Sons and Daughters (SOSAD) will be featured speakers.

Church bells at some area churches will also be tolled 25 times at noon that day and the next day in memory of the 25 million abortions performed in the United States since the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 ruling legalizing abortion.

Recycling wins a spot on SC class schedule

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

To education's traditional three R's, Schoolcraft College is adding another — recycling.

A recycling class will begin next month at the Livonia-based community college.

It is believed to be one of the first in the state, if not the Midwest, specifically designed to boost public awareness of trash disposal options.

Though not for degree credit, the class grew out of a project begun last year by Schoolcraft physical geography students.

"We started a campus-wide paper recycling project," said geography instructor Diane O'Connell, who is also teaching the new class. The goal was to start small, to do the doable.

While that class showed students what they could accomplish at Schoolcraft, the new class will focus on what they can do at home and in their communities.

"AT THE very least, we hope to raise public awareness," O'Connell said.

In addition to showing students how to recycle, the class will also provide information about the economics of recycling.

"People need to understand that if markets for recycled goods aren't there, then recycling can't succeed," O'Connell said.

O'Connell lives in Ann Arbor, where recycling has been a way of life since the mid-1980s. "We pretty much take it for granted now," she said.

While not a member of any of that city's recycling organizations, O'Connell nonetheless hopes to call on them, and other local experts, to serve as guest lecturers.

Wayne County cities and townships, including those in Schoolcraft's primary service area will be deciding on trash handling plans throughout the early months of this year, as required under the proposed county waste handling master plan.

"We're not just going to be limited to recycling," O'Connell said, we hope to provide an overview of the whole issue."

of public works, called the class, "very timely."

"One of the things we realized, in getting people together to talk about waste handling, was how much people did not know," said Beckley, who helps oversee the city's recycling center. "For a long time, people have just thrown out waste without thinking where it goes."

Several other communities including Canton and Plymouth Townships, have also begun recycling programs.

The eight-week class will meet 8-10 p.m. Wednesdays, beginning Feb. 7. Enrollment information is available by calling the Continuing Education Services office, 462-4400.

On target Schools have good agenda

WE LIKED WHAT Plymouth-Canton school officials had to say about education in the '90s in the Canton-Plymouth area.

We just hope that when the year 2000 comes, the schools district can look back and see that it has put its agenda in place.

However, that's not always an easy task. Education is a target for special interest groups who want to see it carry out their own agendas. Those groups range from conservative organizations that want to ban movies and books to ultra-liberal groups that want to use schools to enforce social changes.

School districts often are caught in the middle of these groups' political agendas. Their task is to educate children, and we hope the Plymouth-Canton district sticks to that task.

The school district faces the job of educating children to live in the next century and not in the past. Students are going to need to cope with change.

And from our interviews with school officials, it sounds like they have some good ideas.

Educators say they are realizing that attitude is as important as aptitude. That means making sure that kids succeed early in their school life. "Failure builds on failure just like success builds on success," one school official said.

THAT MAKES SENSE to us. Youngsters who feel better about themselves usually do better in school.

Another comment that rings clear to us is one made by Superintendent John Hoben, who said: "It's a proven adage that money is not going to solve the problem. I think quality has to improve to be competitive with the global aspects of education."

There has been much hand wringing over education and that has been covered by the media. But one story that we read echoed the comments made by Hoben. That story said there's no correlation between how much is spent on each pupil and how well they do in school.

To us that's not a reason to reject school millage requests, but it's a good starting point for school board members and the public when looking at new school programs that call for more money.

However, on the subject of cash, there's one expenditure that we see as very justified in the '90s — computers. Kids going into the job force will be expected by their prospective employers to understand computers and learn how the system works.

And Plymouth-Canton school officials understand that. Plymouth-Salem High School Principal Jerry Ostoin told us that "It is really incumbent upon us to stay on the forefront to get the best materials we can."

But that's just frosting on the educational cake. To us the ability to solve problems is the best thing a kid can learn. And again, the Plymouth-Canton schools are on target.

Hoben says that the challenge for schools through the first decade will be to teach not only content, but also critical thinking, problem solving skills and reference skills.

The schools also are taking aim at social skills that students will need to master in the '90s. School officials say the increase in the divorce rate and the large number of women in the job market are factors that call for different types of school training.

To deal with those factors, schools will offer courses in human relations, child care, nutrition, employment, consumer living, parenting and life values.

It sounds like the schools have a good handle on educational needs in the '90s. We just hope the district can stay on that course and ignore the folks who want to use the school system to further their political goals.

The bottom line in education is getting a student ready for the world. And that's a tough enough task.

Good work

Drivers heed MADD's message

THE MESSAGE, it seems, is finally getting through.

We're talking about drinking and driving. Tougher law enforcement and the Mothers Against Drunk Driving-sponsored media blitz have been credited with helping to reduce the number of fatal accidents in Michigan during the New Year's holiday weekend.

Three people died this year, down from 14 a year ago, according to the Michigan State Police. There were no traffic-related deaths in either Oakland or Wayne County.

Plymouth Police Chief Richard Myers last week said hazardous roads may have kept some people inside. But Myers also gave MADD and other organizations their due, saying they "raised the public's consciousness to some degree."

Also, stricter state laws now mean people convicted of driving under the influence can be sentenced to as much as 90 days in jail on a first offense; one year for a second offense; and 10 years thereafter. Judges are beginning to heed the call for stiffer sentences, police officials said.

WHILE WE CAN'T cite any comforting statistics, it does at least look like the driving population has become more aware of the problem and is beginning to do something about it.

We noticed, for instance, a large increase in the number of red ribbons tied to car antennas and door handles this year. At some intersections, nearly every car waiting for the signal to change was wearing the MADD ornament. The "Tie One On" campaign was introduced by MADD last year as a way for drivers to show solidarity.

In Garden City, police were disappointed that only four people took advantage of the department's offer of free rides home for intoxicated party-goers. Still, it wasn't too long ago that such a program would have been neglected altogether.

The MADD holiday campaign is a good start. But drunk drivers are a year-round problem. Continued efforts by civic groups, law enforcement agencies and the courts are needed in the battle to make our highways safer.

Hands off!

Leave our state aid alone

LIKE A bad penny, a tired old ploy to rob Peter's school district to pay Paul's has come around again.

And who is the proponent of this plan? Why it's Gov. James J. Blanchard, who's standing for re-election this year.

State support of schools is sure to be an important issue in the upcoming gubernatorial campaign, and our governor no doubt wants to look good by dishing out some dollars to districts that need them.

Blanchard said in a recent newspaper article that he will support taking part of the state aid that wealthier districts get for retirement payments and giving it to needy districts.

A similar proposal to shift aid from wealthy districts to poor ones was shouted down by educational lobbyists last year.

NOW, THIS mischievous move is not to be taken as an anti-Blanchard diatribe, but his (or anyone else's) hands should stay off the so-called "categorical" funding that out-of-formula (most of our districts in Oakland and western Wayne counties are OF) districts use for things like retirement payments.

What our governor should be looking at are methods to secure more funds for all public education. We should be using a greater part of the state budget for education.

In the guise of helping schools, Blanchard would be simply taking from one school and giving to another. That's no way to solve the education funding crisis. There's no net addition in such a plan; no new money for education.

What our governor should be looking at are methods to secure more funds for all public education. We should be using a greater part of the state budget for education.

Right now, education accounts for 36 percent of the budget, by Blanchard's admission. By our own reckoning, it was something like 52 percent in William Milliken's early years.

Family, friends cherish his strength, inspiration

HE LIVED to see the '90s — but he already was anticipating the year 2000.

He had two new grandchildren within the past year — but he was encouraging his engaged granddaughter to give him a great grandchild — "soon."

He built a successful Detroit, then national advertising agency, and then, in his 70s, was expanding the agency to another continent.

He stole the British Petroleum account away from the largest ad agency in the world — but he wanted to steal a car account away from companies he thought treated car advertising non-creatively.

"You should always have something to look forward to," he told me as a child.

And that's how he built his life. Many people have honored my father, W.B. Doner, over the past week. They have told stories of how he demanded and inspired; how he set a tone for ethics and excellence; how he tempered it all with generosity and wit. Many of these people work for W.B. Doner & Co., but many no longer do.

"HE WAS LIKE Johnny Appleseed," said one of his friends, Charlotte Rosenthal of Southfield, "dropping creative seeds all over town."

Lawrence Kasdan, creator of the film "The Big Chill," "Cathy" cartoonist Cathy Guisewite and comedian Thom Sharpe are three of the most prominent of these seeds.

But so is Jimmy August and Ron Stone of Stone August Baker Communications in Troy; Marcy Brogan of Brogan Kabot in Southfield; Bruce Broder, president of Bruce & Chato Inc. in Bloomfield Hills and creative people at advertising agencies throughout the country.

One woman who left the Southfield-based Doner for another agency said many of her coworkers sent her notes expressing their sympathy, when they learned of his death.

The day after he died about 20 former Doner employees, now at Ross Roy in Bloomfield Hills, gathered to exchange their "Doner stories."

Others didn't wait until his death. A year ago, former Doner employees now at Leo Burnett and J. Walter Thompson in Chicago held a reunion.

HIS STRENGTH, inspiration and wit were similarly felt by the seeds he created directly — his family.

He was never a fair-weather father, nor grandfather. He took on your problems as well as your joys. He helped you analyze a situation, offering possibilities but allowing you to find your own solutions.

He also was not above getting a word in edgewise where he thought he could have some influence:

Judith Doner Berne

Downtown Birmingham — where he lived — is wonderful, he would tell me. But he thought with innovative city planning, it could be even more charming. Couldn't I do something about it?

"I would get a call. 'You split an infinitive in your editorial. I thought I taught you better,'" he would say in his joking style.

I'm sad for him and for myself that he wasn't here even longer than 75 years. But all his "seeds" know that he would have hated living anything less than vigorously. He was one of the very few who got nearly everything he wanted from life because of what he put into it.

He died on the first birthday of a grandchild he never expected to have. Even in death, he had us looking forward.

Judith Doner Berne is assistant managing editor of the Oakland County editions of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

Pay raises are criticized

To the editor:
Fellow taxpaying voters: Have you had enough Congressional greed yet?

Our esteemed politicians love to refer to themselves as "leaders." But who are they leading when they cram a pay raise through in less than 24 hours, in the face of overwhelming voter opposition? Who are they representing, when Tom Foley, Speaker of the House, and Republican Minorities, "Leader" Robert Michel, agree that "... (Congressional members) votes are not an appropriate point of criticism in the coming (election) campaigns."

Translation: We've slipped it past them, now let's not talk about it during our campaigns so they'll forget it in the 1990 elections.

Had enough yet? No? Try this: Their reasons for approving the pay-grab are "it's a trade-off to get rid of that 'stinking system we now have..." (Rep. Sander Levin referring to "honoraria" (extra payments for speaking and writing, usually paid by lobbyists or, business men like Charles Keating (from Lincoln Savings and Loan) and many other groups).

Apparently, the honoraria ($26,000 per year, allowed on top of their $89,500 current annual salary), didn't "stink" enough to be removed until 1993. But their pay increases start immediately. Combined with their three (yes three) cost of living raises plus their automatic 25 percent raise in 1991, they grabbed over $120,000 in salary alone, not to mention retirement and other perks.

Our "esteemed leaders" refer to this assault on us taxpayers as "significant ethical reform" (Rep. Howard Wolpe). I leave to your imagination how they'll mangle "ethical reform" after it is dragged through the sludge of that kind of thinking. They'll probably "reform" their salaries to $200,000. So they can retire as millionaires at our expense.

Care to bet whether even a mangled "ethical reform" package gets passed in 24 hours?

Had enough yet? Let's recall the greedy scoundrels.

Column was slap at Bush

To the editor:
A recent editorial in The Eccentric began with an interesting story on the importance of educating students about the European holocaust. However, by the end of the article, editor Steve Barnaby concluded that, "If George Bush and his cronies have their way, the story of the next decade could be another Cambodian holocaust."

That was quite a leap in logic just to take a cheap shot at President Bush. It marked a disappointing departure from the coherently perceptive editorials and news stories usually found in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

When grades drop . . . it's underachievement

I have a son who did well in elementary and middle school. He was always an A/B student. Now, in high school, he is not doing as well. His grades are dropping to Bs and Cs. When I talked with his counselor, he told me that his test scores indicate he could be an A/B student. The counselor said he is underachieving.

Obviously the drop in grades is an indication that he is underachieving. How do you identify if he is an underachiever?

It sounds as if you have the classic underachiever.

The boy was very bright, very verbal with outstanding grades throughout elementary and middle school but now is suddenly losing momentum.

The number one indicator of underachievers is they are disorganized and they start playing games. They forget homework and make up excuses, they lose assignments, misplace their books.

Underachievers I had in class daydream. They pretend they are listening to you but really are looking right through the teacher like a window, thinking of other things.

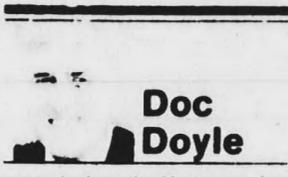

Some classic underachievers talk a good game but produce little. Their study skills begin to dissipate and when they do study they review materials very briefly and consider that sufficient. Oftentimes they are more concerned about being the first student done than with the quality of the work. As a result their papers contain many, careless errors.

In some cases they just become lazy — but maybe that would be too sweeping a generalization.

A second way to identify if your child is falling into the underachievement pattern is he/she will start saying school is boring in middle school and not relevant in high school.

Grades become less important because they have terrible teachers. Oftentimes sports, music, their social life, drama and other activities become more important than the school work. Besides that, their education is more a goal of the parents so let the parents worry about it. Why should they carry an emotional burden? These rationalizations ease their minds but underachievers are not happy with themselves.

Of course there is always the story of the super underachiever who comes back to the 20-year reunion and has done great things. This is called the "late bloomer." But from my experience for every one of these stories I can give you many others where the down cycle of not performing resulted in goals never obtained.

A neighbor of mine literally was emotionally sick because his son was and is bright but performing at a C/D level. The father lectured, grounded and did everything he could to make his son turn around. It was a Mexican standoff, with no winners in sight.

Indeed, this was a way for the son to strike back at the father for some real or unreal animosities that had grown at that tender age between 15 and 18 when the father became dumber every day while the son perceived himself as a Rhodes scholar.

'Publicizing' Christian faith

To the editor:

This is in response to the letter to the editor entitled: "Keep Public Schools Public." The writer goes to great length to equate holidays to Holy Days, to wit: those of the Christian and Catholic churches.

In Catholic schools, the emphasis is on the celebration of Holy Days and how they apply to the religious upbringing of the their students. However, in the public schools, which I attended in Livonia from 1955 to 1969, I never experienced religious instruction in connection with holiday celebrations.

For instance, St. Valentine's Day in the public schools was not a celebration of St. Valentine but rather a time for innocent attempts at romance, an exchange of cute cards and candies, shy smiles and meaningful looks. In other words, part of a well-rounded education, a day

The father, an executive at General Motors, asked me what to do. I suggested the following. The boy wanted to go to Arizona State University. He had been to the campus before and saw Tempe as his Mecca.

I suggested the father invest some money and fly to the campus with his son and have a meeting with the admission officer. The admission officer made it clear the high school sophomore the grades he would need to enter the university.

To make a long story short, the boy's grade point average moved to a 3.6 in his junior and senior years.

I am not saying this will work for everyone, but it is better you have your son view his own future from a real life experience. Let him carry his share of the emotional baggage that is presently pre-occupying much of your life.

which helps children learn how to express their heartfelt feelings, which assists them in getting over their embarrassment from dealing with the opposite sex.

Let us consider Halloween. In the Christian and Catholic schools, students are frightened by the "Satanic" qualities of such a holiday. I much prefer the manner in which this holiday is handled in the public schools where the holiday is treated as a celebration of harvest, and where "things that go bump in the night" help children exercise their imaginations.

What about Thanksgiving? Is this a Holy Day? There is no saint named in connection with this holiday to my knowledge. (I, who was raised a Catholic.) No, this is not a religious Holy Day, but rather a day in which all Americans may celebrate the very freedom which allows us all to give thanks for the fact that we live in a country that allows freedom of expression, freedom of religion, and freedom to choose which schools our children will attend public or private.

If Engler is elected, tax abatements out

LOOK FOR an end to property tax abatements for industrial moguls if Michigan elects John Engler governor.

Look for a de-emphasis of government-provided job training, replaced by a mandatory high school economics course heavy on business planning.

Under an Engler administration, look for repeal of the inheritance tax that's making capital and valuable consumers flee the state.

Expect repeal of the usury laws that forced Michigan's credit card business into South Dakota and Delaware.

As Gov. Jim Blanchard scurries to finish his "state of the state" address by Wednesday afternoon's deadline, Senate Majority Leader Engler beat him by six weeks, unveiling his economic plan for the 1990s last Nov. 30.

"Building Entrepreneurial Michigan," written by economic consultant Gene Heck, is certain to be Republican Engler's policy outline as he challenges Democrat Blanchard for the executive office.

LET'S GET it in context:

Blanchard's philosophy is similar to Alexander Hamilton's Washington's Treasury secretary used government as a tool to promote business and economic growth. Certain industries were targeted for help. Government provided credit.

Finally, Christmas. I learned from my children that their teachers do not discuss Christ and the religious impact of this holiday that the Christian and Catholic schools do, but rather that Christmas is a day that people exchange gifts to express appreciation for each other, a day which teaches the value of generosity as opposed to greed.

The public schools history books are filled not with religious instruction, but rather with the contributions of many ethnic groups. My children learn of Martin Luther King, Mahatma Gandhi, Christopher Columbus, and many, many other representatives of various ethnic groups. They learn not of their choice of religion, but of their contribution to history.

Tim Richard

Engler's philosophy is closer to Adam Smith's In "The Wealth of Nations," the Scottish philosopher said the free market was a better spur to production than "the folly and presumption" of a politician or governmental council.

A third philosophy holds that "corporation" is a dirty word. Industries are polluters and oppressors which the people, through government, must tax and regulate into social service.

(Happily, since Blanchard came on the scene, this business-bashing voice within the Democratic Party has been stifled — a mutter in a few union halls and the People's Republic of Ann Arbor.)

THE ENGLER blueprint, today's topic, is a 430-page tome, much of it intricate detail. But the philosophy is clear.

Author Heck says the Blanchard administration conned us into believing we have a robust economic recovery by comparing the current jobs picture to the bottom of the recession, December of 1982. But when we compare the peak of the current boom to 1979, the peak of the previous boom, Michigan ranks 42nd among the states in non-agricultural job growth.

Politics aside, Heck is right about Blanchard's jobs numbers. Many of the jobs, jobs, jobs are rehires, not growth, some of the unemployment reduction was due to people moving out, and the group known variously as the "chronically jobless" or the "underclass" has continued to swell in southeastern Michigan.

"THE NEW PHILOSOPHY of development," as Engler's writer phrases it, says

"Growth comes from within" — stimulating existing industries — not from the outside. Financial and tax incentives "to lure industries from other jurisdictions" are "irrelevant."

Successful states create an attractive economic climate for all businesses "rather than wasting limited resources on costly efforts to attract a favored few."

State government should be reduced in size and cost, thus holding down taxes and business costs.

THERE'S ROOM for lots and lots of debate about the details of the Engler plan, such as higher "service fees" in local government. I leave the details for the months ahead and endorse nothing at this point.

But I am impressed at the attention former farm boy Engler gives to inner cities.

There is a Kemp-style plan for minimal taxes in "urban enterprise zones." There's a deal for firms that hire people off the welfare rolls. And it's a widely reported fact that Engler has spent time visiting soup kitchens.

It's no rich man's plan. It's a vision, somewhat different from Blanchard's, of how to bring prosperity to all classes and corners of the state.

Exhibits tell of a life long ago

By Julie Brown

Kathy Miller and her kids were looking for something to do during Christmas vacation. They decided a trip to the Plymouth Historical Museum was in order.

Miller and her children — Lorie, 9, Christopher, 5, and Cindy, 3 — visited the museum one afternoon last week.

"Mostly because Lorie wanted to come," said Miller, a Canton resident. "She's been on school field trips and she wanted to show us what they had here."

Christopher Miller had been to the museum, at 155 S. Main in Plymouth, once before. The family members enjoyed their time at the museum.

"Oh, I like it," Kathy Miller said. "I think it's fun." Her children enjoyed seeing the exhibits and visiting the museum's hands-on area downstairs.

"And it's fun seeing what it was like in Plymouth a long time ago." Lorie Miller's not so sure she would have liked to live in the olden days.

"They didn't have all the neat toys," she said. The 19th century dentist's office in the museum's Main Street area looked scarier to Lorie than a modern-day dentist's office does.

SHE THINKS children of the past did more work.

Kathy Miller of Canton and her kids, Christopher, 5, Lorie, 9, and Cindy, 3, visit with a snowman at the Plymouth Historical Museum. The family members enjoyed looking through the store windows in the museum's Main Street area (below).

"They couldn't play with friends. They had too much work to do." Children from the 19th century couldn't watch TV and play Nintendo.

"No Nintendo would be hard on us," Lorie said. "It's the only thing we play nowadays."

Many area families visited the museum in Plymouth during Christmas vacation. Parents often are looking for things to do while their children are out of school, said Beth Stewart, museum director.

Many children who have been through the museum with school groups like to come back with their families.

"They take them through the whole place and show them everything," said Stewart, a Plymouth Township resident.

Many school groups go through the museum each year. The Kiwanis Foundation pays the admission price for Plymouth-Canton students who visit the museum for tours and educational programs.

The current main exhibit at the museum, "The Roaring '20s Christmas," will continue through Sunday, Jan. 21. Hours at the Plymouth Historical Museum are 1-4 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.

STEWART AND other Plymouth Historical Society members hope visitors to the Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular find time to visit the museum. Museum admission price is $1.50 for adults, 50 cents for students ages 5-18, and $4 for families.

The next exhibit, scheduled to open in early February, will celebrate the 150th birthday of the development of photography. Many larger museums, such as the Detroit Institute of Arts and the Smithsonian Institution, had 1989 exhibits on the history of photography, Stewart said. "So we thought that would be real timely." The Plymouth Historical Museum's collection includes quite a bit of photographic equipment.

The upcoming exhibit will highlight some work done by the late Romeo Wood, a longtime Plymouth photographer. The exhibit will also explore the current and future technology of photography, she said.

Addictive relationships take their toll

By Noreen Flack
staff writer

Just like drug or alcohol addiction, "kicking the habit" on a bad relationship seems impossible.

But with the onset of the new year, there is no better time to "dump the dud" than now, according to Barbara Lewis, a limited licensed psychologist from The Center for Contemporary Psychology in Birmingham.

More than 40 people attended an "Addictive Relationship Workshop" with Lewis, offered recently by The Jewish Community Center Singles group.

"For people not in the relationship, change often sounds simple, but it is never easy," Lewis said. "This is a time when people are open to the hope and possibility that life can be different and better in some way."

Victims in an addictive relationship always put the person they love first, Lewis said. The "all-take-no-give" type person they fall in love with supports the unstable, off-balance relationship.

AARDEN HILSEN of Bloomfield Hills said she was involved in an addictive relationship with an alcoholic. Her current relationship offers the balance of give-and-take that she did not have previously, she said.

"I was so into helping him that I had to learn how to focus more on myself. That makes him deal with himself instead of me always bailing him out," Hilsen said. "You have to detach yourself."

"The new year is good for detaching," she said. "I think 'out with the old and in with the new' is a way of finding more balance, more contentment in your life."

Addictive relationships follow the same stages as other compulsive disorders such as alcoholism, eating disorders, exercise, shopping, gambling and watching television, Lewis said.

Larry Rood of Huntington Woods, who continues to try to kick a smoking habit, agreed that addictive people use a substance or a relationship to fill a void inside themselves.

But being in an addictive relationship is better than not being in a relationship at all, he said.

"I believe in the saying, 'It's better to have loved and lost than to not have loved at all,'" he said.

"Many people are afraid of getting into a relationship because they are afraid they may have to deal with a loss."

LEWIS QUOTED from "Women Who Love Too Much" by Robin Norwood. The book should be read by both men and women struggling with addictive relationships, she said.

"When being in love means being in pain, then we are loving too much," Lewis quoted. "When we excuse his moodiness, bad temper, indifference or put downs as problems due to an unhappy childhood and we try to become his therapist, we are loving too much."

Lewis pinpointed five stages of addiction: pain, shame, perfection, acceptance and recovery.

The pain stage involves an emptiness inside that a person becomes desperate to fill. Some turn to drugs, food or alcohol to fill the void, others turn to a relationship. When people know they are addicted but have lost control, they have reached the shame stage.

"Shame is worse than guilt," Lewis said. "Because when you have guilt, no one else knows, but with shame, everyone knows. Others know and you begin to build a shell around yourself."

THE PERFECTION stage is when a person's self-esteem has reached an all-time low. Unable to meet self-expectations, a person chisels away self-esteem and is convinced that he or she is a failure.

Acceptance may be the hardest stage to overcome, Lewis said. People must accept themselves for who they are and stop blaming themselves for other people's failures.

"It is so easy for people to accept others' shortcomings, but it is so hard for them to accept their own," she said.

Once a person has passed the acceptance stage, he or she is on the way to recovery.

In the recovery stage, people realize the problem can be worked through and are less likely to stay in something that is harmful.

However, addictive relationships, although painful, offer a sense of security for some, Lewis said. Victims have to let go of what is familiar and take risks to break away.

"This is a time to 'recover' what is rightfully yours, your self-esteem, your integrity," Lewis said.

Lewis also conducts workshops in communication, single parenting, and rebuilding and recovering self-esteem.

Musical duo set to perform soon

Visitors to the Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular will have a chance to come in out of the cold for hot cider and musical entertainment.

Musical entertainment will be offered 1-5 p.m. both days by Skylark, a duo featuring Betsy Beckerman and Tom Wall. The musicians will provide entertainment by playing a variety of instruments, including a hammered dulcimer, banjo, tin whistle and ukulele.

An open house will be held noon to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 13-14, at the Arbor Health Building, 990 W. Ann Arbor Trail, at Harvey in downtown Plymouth. Refreshments will be served.

The Arbor Health Building is affiliated with Catherine McAuley Health Center in Ann Arbor.

Athletes look forward to winter games

A little wintertime weather can't keep determined athletes from competing. Special Olympics athletes are looking forward to participating in the area winter games Friday, Jan. 12. The competition, including athletes from throughout suburban Wayne County, will be at the Wayne Community Center, Howe and Ann Arbor roads, Wayne.

Opening ceremonies will be at 9:15 a.m., with games starting at 9:30 a.m. Approximately 365 athletes will participate, said Susie Pidosny, Wayne County Special Olympics area director. Competition will continue through the early afternoon, ending at 2 to 2:30 p.m.

Some of the athletes will advance to the state winter games, Feb. 5-8 at Sugar Loaf Resort in Cedar, Mich. A contingent of approximately 100 Wayne County athletes, coaches and chaperones usually goes to the state winter games, Pidosny said.

The Special Olympics program provides opportunities for athletic competition and achievement among people who are retarded. Athletes age 8 and older participate in a variety of events.

THE AREA winter games will include both team and individual competition. Events include snowshoeing, figure skating, speed skating, Alpine skiing, cross country skiing and tobogganing.

Broom ball is among the team sports. That game is similar to hockey but is played with brooms and a soccer-type ball. Snow sculpturing is another team event.

At the area winter games, medals for first, second and third place will be given, along with ribbons for fourth through sixth place.

"Everybody gets something," said Pidosny, a Canton resident.

Not as many Special Olympics athletes participate in winter games as in other events, she said. Athletes are more likely to participate in such sports as bowling and softball. The cost of equipment for winter sports and lack of access to facilities makes it more difficult for some athletes to compete.

THOSE WHO would like to attend the area winter games Friday are encouraged to do so.

"Visitors are welcome, anybody who wants to come and watch and cheer us on," Pidosny said.

Volunteers are always appreciated. Those who would like to volunteer may call Alice Tamkevic, 582-8125.

"We can always use the extra hands out there," Pidosny said.

Those planning to volunteer for the area winter games should wear warm clothing.

Council will offer classes for artists

The Plymouth Community Arts Council will offer arts classes for students age 5 and older. The winter schedule includes five eight-week classes.

Students ages 8-10 will render a still life in various styles — realistic, impressionistic, abstract — in "Paint Like the Masters." Students ages 8-12 enrolled in "Acrylic Painting on Canvas" will learn how to paint in that medium.

"Watercolor" will be offered for students ages 5-8. Students will explore the art of portraiture with pencil, pen and ink, and pastels in "Getting That Face on Paper." That class will be for students ages 10-15.

No art experience is required for "Right Brain Drawing," a class for students age 13 through adult. That class is designed to teach artists new ways of seeing.

CLASSES WILL begin the week of Jan. 15. Prices range from $40 to $50 per class. All classes will be at the arts council office, 332 S. Main, north of Ann Arbor Trail in Plymouth.

Plymouth Community Arts Council members receive a 10-percent discount on classes. Students may register by phone, mail or in person. (Registration fee is due two days after phone registration or the student's name will be taken off the list.)

For more information, call 455-5260 between 9 a.m. and noon Monday through Friday.

League plans antique show

The Plymouth Symphony League's annual winter "Antique Mart" will be Friday-Sunday, Jan. 19-21, at the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer.

The event will be in conjunction with the Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular. The show is co-sponsored by the league and by the city of Plymouth Cultural Center.

Show hours will be 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 3 p.m. Sunday. Donation is $3.

A total of 22 dealers will participate in this year's show. China, crystal, furniture, linens, tools and other antiques will be sold.

Local dealers participating include: Beth Kohmescher, antique lighting; Peggy Blaisdell, country furniture and accessories; and Cindy Brautigan, herbs.

Food will be served daily at the "Fire Side Deli" during the antique show.

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.

It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Competition honors outstanding artists

Since 1978, the Plymouth Community Arts Council has given monetary awards to students in sixth through ninth grade who demonstrate outstanding achievement in the arts.

In 1987, the awards were named the Damaris Student Fine Arts Awards, to honor local artist Damaris "Dee" Schulte for her many contributions to the arts council.

Students must apply by Thursday, Jan. 25, to be considered for this year's awards. Sixth through ninth grade students enrolled in Plymouth-Canton public and private schools may apply, as may other students who live in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district.

Students may apply in any artistic medium, including piano, all other instrumental music, voice, drama, dance, visual arts (painting, sculpture, photography) and creative writing.

Performing arts students must compete in person Tuesday or Wednesday, Feb. 6 or 7, after submitting an application by Jan. 25.

Applications are available from school principals and from the arts council.

For more information, call the PCAC office, 455-5260, between 9 a.m. and noon Monday through Friday. The arts council office is at 332 S. Main, north of Ann Arbor Trail in downtown Plymouth.

bers have helped a great deal in preparing for the exhibit's opening. John Gaffield, a Plymouth photographer, has helped to identify much of the older equipment, Stewart said. Graham Laible, who taught photography at Centennial Educational Park, also has helped with the exhibit.

IT'S INTERESTING to see how rapidly photography has progressed. Stewart said. Daguerreotypes and untypes from photography's early days will be included in the exhibit.

The turn of the century started an era of rapid change in photography, she said. Identifying all of the photographic equipment has been challenging for museum staffers and volunteers.

Preparing for the photography exhibit isn't all that Plymouth Historical Society members have been doing lately. They've also planned a Valentine's dinner program, Saturday, Feb. 3, at the Mayflower Meeting House in downtown Plymouth. The evening will feature romantic musical selections.

A cash bar is planned for 6:30 p.m., with dinner to be served at 7 p.m. The program is co-sponsored by the Plymouth Rotary.

Price is $30 per person. For ticket information, call the Plymouth Historical Museum, 455-8940.

Choir celebrates the spirit of giving

By Susan Steinsmueller
staff writer

CHRISTMAS IS over. The presents have been opened. But for a group of 30 Filipino doctors, the spirit of Christmas giving will be celebrated again in June.

The doctors, members of the Philippine Medical Association of Michigan choir, were scheduled to give a Christmas concert in the Philippines in December to benefit needy children there. But the attempted coup of Corazan Aquino's government occurred shortly before the scheduled departure date, forcing the trip to be postponed temporarily.

"Christmas is year round," said Enrique M. Ostrea Jr., association president and director of the choir, which includes 300 physicians from suburban Detroit communities. "We are very much disappointed that we couldn't do it this time, but these are circumstances beyond our control.

We still want to do it, and the spirit of giving is there. We are giving the concert in June instead."

Things settled down in the Philippines within a short time after the attempted coup, but Ostrea, a Farmington Hills resident and chief of pediatrics at Hutzel Hospital, Detroit, said they still felt the decision to postpone the concert was the right one.

"We felt it was a wise decision because while the rebellion was quickly resolved, there are still pockets of resistance."

THE FILIPINO CHOIR was formed five years ago. Since then, it has evolved into an outstanding singing group, and has been invited to several cities to perform.

A couple of years ago, the talented group sang at St. Peter's Basilica in Rome during the canonization of the first Filipino saint.

The concert is backed by corporate sponsors, and will raise about $15,000. Proceeds will benefit a center that houses homeless children.

The problem of children and prostitution is getting to be alarming in the Philippines," said Ostrea. The center not only houses homeless children but rehabilitates them, he said.

The problem is one brought about by poverty, which is still "rampant and widespread," he said.

The physicians, most of whom are specialists in their field, had also planned to go to poverty-stricken provinces and do medical work. In the Philippines, medical help and money to get it are scarce for most people. The doctors will instead do their medical missionary work in June, treating the needy free of charge. All the doctors are traveling at their own expense.

FOR ONE MEMBER of the choir, Rochester ophthalmologist Dr. Jaime Aragones of Rochester and his wife, Lourdes, medical missions to the Philippines are an annual event. This year, their mission was sponsored by the Rochester Rotary Club.

Many of the doctors, such as Aragones and Ostrea, grew up and attended medical school in the Philippines before coming to the U.S. While their home is now the U.S., they said, this is a chance to go back and do something for their native country.

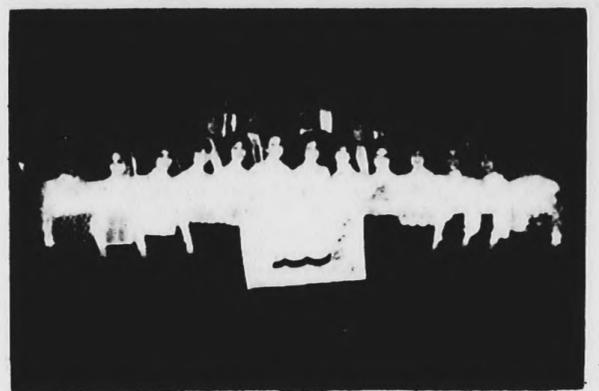

"It's impossible to forget your native country," Ostrea said.

Ostrea, who arranges programming for the choir, said that instead of Christmas music, for the June concert, a new program will be arranged.

"It's a blessing in many ways, because we can accumulate more drugs, more materials for the operating room," he said of the postponement.

Many of their supplies are donated by companies.

"We wrote the people over there, that we will not abandon the Philippines at the time they need us."

Members of the Choir of the Philippine Medical Association are pictured when they sang at St. Peter's Basilica. The choir director is Enrique M. Ostrea.

Report on decaf coffee is food for thought

A new study of coffee and heart disease risk factors offers some surprising food for thought.

California researchers have found that decaffeinated coffee, not regular coffee as some earlier studies have suggested, appears to raise levels of the so-called "bad" low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol.

Results of the study were presented at the American Heart Association's 62nd Scientific Sessions in November by Dr. H. Robert Superko, medical director of the Lipid Research Clinic and clinical assistant professor of medicine at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif.

Superko said previous studies that pointed to a link between coffee drinking and increased risk of heart disease had many problems.

Most were anecdotal, meaning they depended on patients' responses to surveys on which they were asked to estimate how much coffee they drank. Other studies, he said, did not distinguish between those who drank regular and decaffeinated coffee or report the way the coffee was prepared.

"We looked at the effects of coffee on blood cholesterol levels because there have been associations of coffee drinking and heart disease in previous studies," Superko said.

"However, this theory that coffee can lead to heart disease by changing blood cholesterol levels had not been tested in a large, well designed clinical trial."

The Stanford study followed 100 healthy, middle-aged male coffee drinkers who voluntarily changed their consumption patterns for four months so the researchers could carefully control the amount and kind of coffee they drank.

FOR THE FIRST two months they drank three, four, five or six cups per day of standard, commercially available regular caffeinated coffee, brewed in a specific manner and served without cream or sugar.

Their blood chemistry was then tested and they were randomly assigned to one of three groups — continued regular caffeinated coffee, decaffeinated or no coffee. Blood chemistry was again tested at the end of two months.

"So it was like a drug study," Superko said. "That's important. Many of these other studies that associated high blood cholesterol with coffee did not actually measure what they (the test subjects) drank. We knew what kind of coffee, how it was brewed and how much they drank."

Throughout the study, the researchers also monitored the men's diet, physical activity and amount of body fat — all factors that can affect cholesterol levels. There were no significant changes in those factors, he said.

The scientists found that those who changed to decaffeinated coffee showed a significant increase in LDL cholesterol and apolipoprotein-B (apo-B), a molecule attached to LDL that helps cells identify and use the cholesterol. Researchers measure apo-B to get a more exact reading of increases in LDL.

LDL and apo-B levels in the men who continued drinking regular coffee and those who stopped drinking coffee altogether were identical to one another and actually decreased slightly, the researcher said.

"What that indicates is that all the lipoprotein cholesterol or blood cholesterol changes appear to be linked to the decaffeinated coffee and not to the caffeinated coffee," he said.

THE STUDY ALSO indicates that some agent in decaffeinated coffee is the culprit, Superko said.

"Coffee consumption and blood caffeine levels did not correlate with the blood cholesterol change," he said. "Further research needs to be done to determine the exact agent in decaffeinated coffee that causes these changes."

A cup of coffee is a complex chemical entity containing about 500 different chemicals. For example, there are two major kinds of coffee beans: arabica and robusta.

Because arabica beans have a milder flavor, most regular coffee is made from arabica. Most decaffeinated coffee is made from the more strongly flavored robusta beans.

The decaffeination process involves soaking the beans in liquid, then extracting the caffeine from the liquid. The remaining liquid is sprinkled over the beans to restore some of the flavor lost in the soaking and caffeine extraction process.

"Not only is coffee very complex, but these two beans are very different chemically from one another," he said. "Once again you're back to the problem of what are you dealing with? What kind of drug do you have here?"

The brewing technique is also important. Dose-related studies in Scandinavia have found an association between regular boiled coffee and increased blood cholesterol levels.

About 85 percent of American coffee drinkers use the drip method, in which hot water passes through the coffee grounds. Scandinavians usually boil either whole or coarsely ground beans in water, producing a much different and stronger brew.

THE STANFORD study did not look at whether caffeinated or decaffeinated coffee was related to cardiac arrhythmias, coronary artery spasms or other factors that could have implications for heart disease, he said.

"This study demonstrated decaffeinated coffee causes an increase in LDL cholesterol and apo-B, but the relationship to heart disease remains unclear," he said.

Since this is the first study of its kind, it is too soon to make any definite choices about coffee drinking although the issue has wide ranging implications, he said.

"There are many more coffee drinkers in the United States than there are cigarette smokers," Superko said. "So if coffee affects blood cholesterol and heart disease, then it's a tremendously important public health issue."

Protecting environment means protecting ourselves

As we begin a new year and a new decade, it might be worth looking at the environment we live in from a different perspective. It's one that Concern has advocated for a number of years.

In a special report for "Newsweek" magazine a few months ago, Gregg Easterbrook summed up this environmental perspective very succinctly. The following is a condensed version of his thoughts:

"Every reference to the environment is prefaced with the adjective 'fragile.' Nothing could be further from the truth.

The environment is very nearly indestructible. It has survived ice ages, bombardments of cosmic radiation, fluctuations of the sun, reversals of the seasons caused by shifts in the planetary axis, collisions of comets and meteors bearing far more force than man's doomsday arsenals and the lightless "nuclear winters" that followed these impacts. Mischievous human assaults are pinpricks compared with forces of the magnitude nature is accustomed to resisting.

One aspect of the environment is genuinely delicate, namely, the set of environmental conditions favorable to human beings. Earth's ecosphere is ever so flux. Climates, configurations of the continents, dominant biological and chemical forces shift endlessly. A scant 20,000 years ago, the rivers and lakes we now fret about preserving did not exist. Turn back a few pages and none of the rain forests or wilderness tracts we fear "irrevocably" losing existed to lose, nor did any human forebear.

TO MOTHER Nature our contemporary infatuation with endangered species must seem callow sentimentality, for extinction is the environment's norm; 99 percent of the creatures ever to have come into existence have vanished. Nature doesn't care if the globe is populated by trilobites or thunder lizards or six-eyed telepathic slugs or people. What nature cares about is that the ecosystem live. Should man spur the environmental conditions now slanted in favor of his existence, creatures will rise up in our place that thrive on murky greenhouse air, or dine on compounds human metabolisms find toxic.

In the modern world even if a nation renders its own environment clean, no amount of wealth or military strength will enable it to escape the side effects of environmental abuses elsewhere. This suggests the coming century will hold either general environmental misfortune, the distress to be suffered everywhere, or increased international cooperation the benefits to be shared by rich and poor alike. Perhaps the environment, the place where we all must live, will become the bond that finally brings the nations of the world together."

We should not view our actions as protection of the environment — but protection of ourselves, the human race. Because without the necessary components of sustainable life, clean air, water and land, other creatures with different requirements will inhabit the earth we've thoughtlessly neglected.

The Consumer Mailbag and Concern hopes each of you has a happy, healthy and safe New Year.

The Consumer Mailbag answers your questions. Address mail to the Consumer Mailbag, Concern Detroit, One Kennedy Square, 4th Floor, Detroit, MI 48226.

NKF: Resolve to save a life

Do you always seem to make New Year's Resolutions that are easily broken because you run out of will power?

This year the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan can suggest a resolution that doesn't require any will power at all, but has the power to help save someone else's life someday.

"Sign an organ donor card and don't forget to tell your family, it's one New Year's resolution that's easy to keep."

That's the foundation's suggestion for starting the New Year on a positive note.

There are 667 people in Michigan waiting for kidney transplants, and another 465 are waiting for transplants and other vital organs and tissues.

Last year, while nearly 9,000

Americans received kidney transplants, another 12,000 were kept waiting because of a lack of vital organs. Thousands of others were kept waiting for transplants of other vital organs and tissues.

"During this holiday season, we are joining the National Kidney Foundation volunteers across the country, urging everyone to think about signing an organ donor card and discussing their feelings about organ donation with family," said executive director Dan Carney.

The critical shortage of organs available for transplantation is an unnecessary problem — one that we hope can be lessened by Americans making a personal commitment to easing the problem by realizing that they have the ability to help save someone else's life someday.

The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan is one of 50 affiliates of the National Kidney Foundation, which is celebrating 40 years of progress in the field of kidney and urinary tract diseases.

The foundation is the major voluntary health agency seeking the total answer to diseases of the kidney and urinary tract — prevention, treatment and cure.

The foundation was successful in bringing about the National Uniform Anatomical Gift Act of 1968. The act recognized the uniform donor card as a legal document throughout the United States.

For more information on organ donation, contact the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan at 3378 Washtenaw, Ann Arbor 48104, or call toll-free (800) 482-1455.

An open letter to newspaper advertisers.

How to evaluate your options in light of the Detroit JOA.

The JOA has pretty much turned media advertising on its ear. Shockingly higher rates. New contracts. Uncertain circulation. In the midst of this turmoil, it's more important than ever before to take a careful look at the Detroit market.

Here are some facts to consider:

SPRING, the network of 45 suburban daily and weekly papers is now delivering more key customers for less money than either the News or the Free Press.

Of all the newspaper alternatives, SPRING reaches the greatest number of people you want to reach. More than 1,000,000 readers in more than 500,000 suburban households surrounding Detroit. Men and women with the spending power, smarts, and savvy to buy what you have to sell.

What's more, SPRING is efficient.

One sales rep, one insertion order, one ad copy, and one invoice does it all.

The bottom line? If you are a newspaper advertiser, you have a legitimate choice. You can look at the JOA as a new problem — or you can look at SPRING as a new solution.

Naturally, we hope you'll choose SPRING.

Why not give us a call?

Happy birthday to you, Aldo Leopold

When I was a youngster I remember searching in vain for some noteworthy event that happened on my birthday. The only thing I found was an obscure naval battle that occurred during the War of 1812.

It was not until later, when I began reading "A Sand County Almanac," that I satisfied my quest for a memorable event on my birthday.

"A Sand County Almanac" was written by Aldo Leopold. He was born Jan. 11, 1886, and died fighting a fire in 1948, but his legacy remains in the pages on that book. Everyone who has an interest in the outdoors should read this book.

ALDO LEOPOLD was a man of action and founder of several groups and organizations that fostered his philosophy about the land. He was one to take matters into his own hands and not wait for someone else to do it.

Throughout his career as a forester and professor at the University of Wisconsin, he instilled a respect for the land and all its life forms. A credo by which he lived was "a thing is right when it tends to preserve the integrity, stability, and beauty of the biotic community."

nature
Timothy Nowicki

Leopold was a man that taught his students to learn from experience in the field, not strictly from textbooks. His concern for the growth of his students was paramount to anything at the time.

But not only did he train professional wildlife managers and foresters, he knew the power of the "amateur." Foremost among his precepts was perception — to take those observations and to digest them. Anyone with the initiative to observe could do that, one did not have to be a professional.

His love for the land and his insight into its significance to man is eloquently stated in the last part of "A Sand County Almanac." Here he develops his "land ethic," which was an entirely new way of thinking at the time, but is a philosophy that should be exercised today.

I felt honored that I was born on the same day as a man who is a legend in the field of conservation and natural history because of statements like this: "Conservation is a state of harmony between man and land. By land is meant all of the things on, over, or in the earth. Harmony with land is like harmony with a friend; you cannot cherish his right hand and chop off his left."

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

Pioneering environmentalist Aldo Leopold was born on this date.

Senior issues gain hearing

Area seniors and those who serve them are invited to a public hearing 9:30 a.m. Friday, at the Inkster Recreation Complex, sponsored by the Senior Alliance.

Issues to be discussed include:

- Service and spending priorities.
- Gaps in the current system.
- Suggestions for new services.

In addition, TSA seeks comment on its proposed Community Focal Points. Focal points serve as a community's primary source of information on senior programs and issues. Most will be established in multipurpose senior centers.

The meeting site is at 2025 Middlebelt, north of Michigan Ave.

TSA serves seniors in Canton, Garden City, Livonia, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Redford and Westland, as well as other communities.

Business woes generate good appliance buys

By Doug Funkestaff writer

Highland Superstores, a retailer of home entertainment equipment and appliances, is heading toward its first unprofitable year since offering its stock to the public in 1985.

But that might be good news for consumers.

Executives for the Plymouth-based corporation say they intend to remain the market leader in metropolitan Detroit.

Considering the local competition — Fretter, ABC Warehouse, Walter's Home Appliances, Adray Appliance and the major department stores — buyers can expect good prices for merchandise to hold.

"We're the market leader," said Yale Levin, chief financial officer for Highland. "We're going to have the lowest prices around to maintain market leadership. I think consumers are in for very low prices over the next year."

Things apparently have become so competitive recently that Ollie Fretter ("I'll give you five pounds of coffee if I can't beat your best deal") recently has reappeared on TV to tout products for his company.

"THE CONSUMERS are getting great prices. Competition is really kamikaze," said Steven DiMaggio, senior analyst for Roney & Co.

He termed the industry "dead" at this time.

"These guys (retailers) need a new, hot product. That's what drives the market," DiMaggio said.

Highland reported a net loss of $9.6 million on revenues of $608 million through the first three quarters of its budget year which ends Jan. 31.

The company reported a profit of $2.9 million on revenues of $595 million for the first nine months of its 1988-89 budget year.

November 1989 sales of $101.4 million were up 11 percent from the $91.4 million recorded in November of 1988. Holiday sales during December haven't yet been announced.

DESPITE THE rebound, Eugene Mondry, Highland president, anticipates a net loss for the year.

He attributed the loss through three quarters to "a combination of a very highly-competitive environment" and a marketplace "somewhat lacking an appetite for consumer electronics."

"I think it's going to be very, very competitive, but a good future," Mondry said. "Camcorders, compact disc players, TVs are still selling. Major appliance business could be down."

Robotics industry sales rising

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Twenty years ago, people thought robots would either improve the quality of life or put them out of a job. A few years ago, both possibilities were unthinkable.

After years of growth, the U.S. robotics industry was slumping. In 1985 and early 1986, robotics manufacturing was riding a crest of success with sales of almost $600 million a year. A year later sales had plunged to nearly $300 million.

For Michigan's newfound robotics industry — in the early 1980s state officials hoped robotics would help the state diversify its auto-dependent economy — the slump was bad news.

Today, although still below 1985 and 1986 levels, the robotics manufacturing industry is on a rebound, according to the Ann Arbor-based Robotic Industries Association (RIA).

Approximately 36,000 robots are in use throughout the United States, according to RIA figures. Recent sales have been heaviest in applications for welding, painting, coating, materials handling and assembly.

In the first three quarters of 1989, U.S. robotics manufacturers logged $369.1 million in orders — up 82 percent from the third quarter of 1988 when sales were $202.7 million.

Carmen Calabrese, vice president and general manager of Troy-based ABB Robotics Inc., said many people are unaware of the mid-decade decline — mainly because other areas of the economy were thriving.

"A couple of years ago, there was almost a moratorium on flexible automation purchases — and robotics is a major part of that," he said. "But all at once, about a year and half ago, it turned around."

GMF ROBOTICS, in Auburn Hills, one of the area's largest robotics manufacturers, wasn't immune from the slump, GMF Robotics communications manager Joanne Morino said. "Business is good today, but it wasn't a few years ago."

GMF sales reached a peak in 1985 with $187 million in sales and started 1986 on a good note before a slow fourth quarter. Still, the firm finished off the year with $186 million in sales.

But sales fell sharply in 1987, when GMF finished the year with $103 million in sales. The firm was forced to include greater emphasis on soliciting non-automotive markets and splitting the firm into two divisions: one to address the automotive industry and another to address other industrial needs.

Why the robot industry went sour, ABB Robotics' Calabrese said, is more difficult to guess than why the industry is bouncing back. "There have been many solutions (offered) on that, but we still don't have all the answers."

Calabrese speculated the enormous automobile inventories during the mid-1980s might have been a factor. Then, manufacturers built huge inventories of automobiles and sold from the inventory.

Today, manufacturers produce automobiles almost on an as-needed basis, he said, and with just-in-time manufacturing, speed and accuracy is more important than ever before, he said.

"You can't have on-time manufacturing without robots," Calabrese said. "They perform repetitive tasks flawlessly and efficiently."

GMF Robotics' Morino said it is doubtful the industry will see a return to 1986 levels soon because the attitude about robotics has changed.

"In the early 1980s, everybody had to have a robot even if they didn't need them," she said. Robots were "in" and all the industry's big players — and those firms that wanted to be big players — were lining up to buy them, she said.

"We're done with that fad stage," Westinghouse Automation Division sales and marketing manager Mal Leininger said. "That 'we'd-better-get-on-the-bandwagon-and-buy-a-robot' syndrome is gone. I think that's

If you made any resolutions for the new year, chances are they involved getting fit or finding a better job.

That's why these are very good times for weight loss clinics, health clubs, employment agencies and resume preparers.

"January and February traditionally are our best months," said Eve Nichol, director of the Weight Loss Clinic of Madison Heights. "It's a good time of year to start a weight program."

"There's a big gap between holidays. There's not a lot of other priority things going on. Summer's coming up and people start thinking about that right after Christmas," she said.

What specifically brings people in now? "Some say it was their New Year's resolution, some said they were buying clothes for the holiday for themselves and decided it was something they needed to do," Nichol said.

SEEING RELATIVES during the holidays normally not seen the rest of the year also can be a great motivating factor, Nichol added.

Florine Mark, president of Weight Watchers, isn't surprised that her classes are especially popular now.

"From Thanksgiving on it's holiday time," she said. "Everyone is kind of figuring, 'On Jan. 1, I'm going to go on a diet.'"

"They want to do something and rightfully so," Mark said. "In the 1990s, I think we're going to think about how we feel, what we eat and living longer."

"We're probably seeing now 60,000 to 70,000 people, half coming back or starting fresh," she said. "You don't have to be 50 pounds overweight. Half have less than 20 pounds to lose."

Both Weight Watchers and Weight Loss Clinics offer specials and discount memberships as added incentives for people to drop the excess baggage now.

January is a boom month for health clubs in terms of attracting new bodies and becoming reacquainted with inactive members, said Bill McDowell, a vice president for Vic Tanny.

"Attitude is directed in other ways in December. Even the best of us gain weight in November and December," he said. "Even people who work out all the time tend to do that."

People do take stock of their lives during the holidays whether they make formal resolutions or not, McDowell said.

"A lot of people don't smoke, don't drink. Everybody has to exercise," he said. "You think of yourself more after the holidays."

THEN THERE are those who are unhappy in their jobs.

Renee McClain, who operates Lifetime Resumes as part of an answering service in Southfield, finds that she really does get busy on Jan. 2.

Upward of 80 percent of her clients already have a job but want something better.

Most are professional people like doctors, lawyers, subcontractors and executives in the auto industry "who know where they're heading and what they want to do," McClain said.

"It's just something they've wanted to do but didn't because of busyness of the holidays and a belief that

Jan. 17 mixer helps businessmen

By Mary DiPaola
special writer

"The two most important things to remember about world economics are that yesterday is over and that we must now adjust to living in a world of interdependent communities."

When John Naisbitt made that statement several years ago, many found it difficult to accept this "megatrend" toward a global economy. But that was yesterday. Today, it doesn't take a genius to realize that businesses on both sides of the ocean benefit greatly by "thinking globally and acting locally."

For the organizers of this year's second shinnenkai mixer to be held Wednesday, Jan. 17, at the Livonia Marriott Hotel, the event is another device to help local businesses become more international, while being cognizant of another cultural system for meeting new people.

Shinnenkai is a major social event held throughout Japan during the first three weeks of each new year, said Izumi Suzuki, president of the Novi-based bilingual service and consulting center of Suzuki, Myers & Associates. The term translates to "new year gathering" and is typically sponsored by independent business firms, student groups and clubs. Japanese shinnenkai are focused on celebration and socialization in honor of the country's biggest holiday.

With 250 Japanese companies in metropolitan Detroit, Suzuki wanted to encourage the Japanese to become involved with the community on an individual level. The Japanese represent the state's largest foreign business community (followed by Canada with 50 Detroit-based firms)

It has become increasingly important to forge new relationships that break down the barriers between domestic and foreign firms capable of doing business with each other, Suzuki believes.

Suzuki was encouraged by the response to last year's first shinnenkai mixer. No other cluster of communities in the country has taken advantage of this opportunity to brush shoulders with Japanese business people, said Suzuki's husband and business partner, Steve Myers.

"Last year, the city of Novi hosted the mixer with 100 firms in attendance to include Hitachi, C. Itoh, Nissan, Ikeda and Usui," Myers said. "This year we expect 200 invited guest businesses to join us."

The favorable response among the Japanese communities is not surprising considering the mayors from each participating city, council members and executive directors from the sponsoring chambers attend and are actively involved in the event's planning.

"In Japan, the mayors, city officials and chambers of commerce are held in the highest esteem," Suzuki said. From the Japanese perspective, having so many local dignitaries in attendance is a real honor.

Six "social interpreters" will be on hand at the event. Japanese and American businesses were invited through the participating chambers from Canton, Farmington/Farmington Hills, Livonia, Northville, Novi and Plymouth.

Mary DiPaola is the owner of Market Trends, a Farmington Hills-based business consulting firm. She is also producer and host of the cable television series, "Chamber Perspectives."

Robot sales rising

probably why we had a substantial dip in sales in the first place."

Instead robot consumers are making only those purchases they can justify from a cost effectiveness standpoint, Leininger said. "It's a much more solid trend."

TO RECAPTURE the industry's former vitality, robotics manufacturers have looked to other buyers for their products — particularly European car makers and other manufacturers eager to modernize.

Diversification, according to Leininger, is probably the greatest factor in the robotics industry's comeback. Few robotics suppliers deal strictly in the automotive industry, he said, and most are concentrating on aerospace, pharmaceuticals, food packaging, metal fabricating and preparation, furniture applications and other industrial operations.

Still, ABB Robotics' Calabrese said, many robots are sold to automobile or automobile-related manufacturers as the recent automobile slump is a cause for concern for the robotics industry.

"You're always afraid (when the automobile industry slumps) — to say we're not would be ludicrous," Calabrese said.

Morino said despite its forays into other markets, 60 percent of GMP Robotics' business is still automotive-related so the firm can't dismiss the recent automobile sales slump.

"Our 1990 outlook is for flat sales in North America, but Europe should continue to be up," Morino said, adding the robotics industry continues seeking other markets.

And although the American automobile industry is experiencing fewer sales, they are not as hard pressed financially as they were in the early 1980s, she said.

Automobile company executives know they must compete so they are increasing efforts to offer new products rather than be conservative.

This is as foreign as our investments get.

These days, a lot of financial institutions think it's more profitable to invest in Third World countries than in their own communities.

But a credit union would never think that way. Because a credit union is actually a financial cooperative within a community—owned by the same people who use it to save and borrow. We're not profit-oriented or profit-driven. So we aren't about to go investing in coffee beans or cocoa beans to try and boost our bottom line.

We simply reinvest in our members. So as a member, you can expect to earn more when you save and pay less when you borrow. And that's a concept that shouldn't be foreign to anybody.

Weird ideas join the curves at Detroit's auto show

New that Detroit has placed itself firmly at the beginning of the season's domestic auto shows (much earlier and it would be a New Year's Eve party), it has become the launching pad for a lot of new cars and weird ideas. This year there are nearly two dozen so-called "concept cars" on the show floor, some of them strikingly close to cars that will be in the showrooms the next few years.

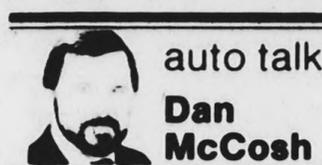

Chrysler's Tom Gale has struck again with a sleek package that is being touted as Chrysler's basic direction for the future. Likewise, GM has a few concept cars that demonstrate what a new generation of ultra-small power plants could do for the family bus.

But one concept was so zany a couple of marketing officials from Honda forged press credentials and sneaked into a press preview just to get an early look.

WHAT INTERESTED the Honda people was Chrysler's solution to congested urban areas. It's a James Bondish sort of idea that wed a three-seat minicar to a separately powered rear passenger compartment. When traffic gets too thick, the bulky rear section is dumped and the commuter surges ahead in his parkable scooter.

It's the kind of thing they do a lot at the Tokyo motor show, to demonstrate how imaginative their designers can be. The typical jaded U.S. designer takes one look at the concept and figures nobody in his right mind would leave half his car unattended while commuting distance of any auto talk

Dan McCosh

U.S. city if he really expected it to still be there when he returned.

BUT EVEN more intriguing than the concept cars, the show is attempting to demonstrate new ideas as well as new cars. A group from Buick's Lansing, Mich., assembly plant is actually building cars on the show floor. Displays from Detroit's Center for Creative Studies and even some major automotive suppliers explore trends in design. One of the major quirks is the timing of the show with the Society of Auto Analysts, which is a group of highly paid professional stock analysts that advised against buying Chrysler stock at five bucks a share and predicted that cars would sell like crazy in 1989. These worthies have the task of fielding questions about the dark clouds on the economic horizon in the midst of a couple of hundred hustling car salesmen.

IN FACT, questions about the slowdown in car sales dominated the 35 press conferences held just before the show opened last week. Best explanation is that long-term payment plans have reached the point where the average consumer will die before he sees the last page in his payment book, and we will have to wait for his kids to go shopping before sales will recover.

There are a few changes that add to the tone of internationalization, such as the British Auto Manufacturers Association buying a group display for Jaguar, Lotus, Range Rover, Rolls-Royce and Sterling, all low-volume makes that nonetheless add a flavor of exotica. In the interest of economy, one British-looking model opens the doors of all 23 cars.

THE CONSENSUS is that the new Detroit show is rapidly becoming the most entertaining show in the country. All this is a big change from the days when you could pretty much call it The Auto Show and most folks around town would know what you were talking about.

Now that it's the North American International Auto Show, which makes for an acronym that sounds like a subdivision of the State Department, it's getting a little class. Even the girls.

"Exhibit managers now are opting for intelligent, informative promotions over cleavage and long legs," says a press release. Yeah, sure.

Trade shows can improve your business

Trade shows provide a great opportunity for exposure to large numbers of prospects in a short span of time.

They also offer huge savings as compared to the cost of doing the same job in the field. But before committing your company to a trade show, there are some things that need to be considered.

First, you need to define your objectives and set your goals. Try to put the objectives in a form that can be stated numerically.

FOR INSTANCE, the number of prospects or new orders you would like to obtain. After the show, you can look over the results to determine your success and make any necessary corrections before the next show.

Once your objectives are set, put together a plan to accomplish them.

business resources

Lee Douglas

Your plan should include how much space you need for your display.

Research has shown that approximately 35 square feet of space is best for two people holding a conversation. If you plan to have two sales representatives in the booth at the same time, you would need approximately 70 square feet of display area.

IN DESIGNING your display, keep in mind that it is of utmost importance to attract the attention of the right people in the short period it takes to walk past your booth. Because your display is a visual image of your company, great care should be taken to make it look professional.

Encourage your sales staff to play an active role in the selling process. This means they should never be sitting, smoking or eating while manning a booth.

An eye-catching display will make it easier for them to begin a conversation with passersby. Setting quotas with the promise of a reward for those who meet them can help to increase sales.

MANY PARTICIPATING companies give free gift items at trades shows. This may bring many people to your booth, but they might not qualify as prospects. If you decide to hand out gift items, try to make them especially appealing to your specific target market.

Next month, we will discuss how to bring qualified prospects to your trade show.

Canton knocks off starless Raiders

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The record will show Plymouth Canton defeated North Farmington 51-42 in boys basketball Tuesday night.

It won't reveal the fact North played without its best player, senior Matt Hoffman. The all-area guard was serving a one-game disciplinary suspension imposed by the school administration.

But the visiting Chiefs, who went into the game as underdogs, will take a victory regardless of the circumstances. Both teams are 3-2 overall.

"Basketball is a team game, and one player shouldn't affect the outcome of the game," Canton coach Dave Van Wagoner said.

"We're a real young team, and we're starting to improve every game. This gives my young kids confidence going into the division race."

CANTON'S GEOFF Allen, who scored 13 of his 19 points in the second half, said the Chiefs would have liked to play North with Hoffman in the lineup.

"I don't know how they feel about it, but I'd like to beat them with their best team on the floor," he said, "so they can't say we beat them when they were handicapped."

"We had a guy designated for him. It didn't matter. We were going to play hard any way. We won the game, so."

Nonetheless, Allen agreed with Van Wagoner, believing the victory will serve as a confidence builder for the Chiefs, whose stock is on the rise.

"It kinda makes us feel we can beat anybody in the basketball league," he said, "because North was supposed to be one of the top teams. After the Dearborn loss, we wanted to play hard and we've won two in a row."

Junior guard Karl Wukie came off the bench to score a game-high 21 points — including three triples — and combine with Allen for all but 11 of Canton's points.

THE RAIDERS, who had no one in double figures, got eight points apiece from center Eric Carlson and guards Jon Sturtz and John Low. Carlson also had 12 rebounds and Bill Chwalik eight.

Without Hoffman running the offense at point guard, however, North seemed totally out of sync. The Raiders, playing their first game since Dec. 22, had a poor start with early turnovers, fouls and lack of movement on offense setting the pattern.

On top of that, Canton hit the defensive boards. Six-foot-8 Tony Coshatt grabbed 10 rebounds, 6-6 Rob Wilson eight and 6-4 Kevin Holmes six.

Furthermore, North's second-leading scorer, forward Brian Temple, left the game in the first half with an ankle injury.

"Above and beyond all that, you have to give Plymouth Canton credit," North coach Tom Negoshian said.

"You can always find reasons why something didn't

CEP teams unsuccessful

For both Plymouth Salem's and Plymouth Canton's swim teams, the outcomes of Tuesday's dual meets very easily could have — and maybe should have — been different.

Both teams lost, although the caliber of competition was far different. Salem was edged by No. 2-ranked Ann Arbor Huron 89-83 at Huron; Canton was beaten by Belleville 48-35 at Belleville.

"I'm not real happy," said Salem coach Chuck Olson after his team slipped to 1-2 in dual-meet competition. "We had spots where guys swam well, but there were others where we missed opportunities."

The Rocks won five events but lost both relays. Indeed, Huron finished 1-2 in the 200-yard medley relay, which hurt Salem badly. Ron Orris was a bright spot, capturing two firsts: the 200 freestyle (1:44.92) and the 100 butterfly (52.47). Other Salem winners were Chris Caloia in the 50 free (24.15) — he was also second in the 100 free (53.03); Pat McManaman in the diving (198.85 points); and Albert Sneath in the 100 backstroke (1:04.28).

The Rocks' final hopes for victory were lost in the last event, the 400 free relay, which Huron won in 3:25.88. Salem was second in 3:28.45.

Huron was paced by Clinton Wyatt, who won both the 200 individual medley (2:13.05) and the 500 free (8:11.81).

FOR CANTON, the problem was not enough stuff at the top. "I thought it would be closer than that," coach Hooker Wellman said of the final score. "We swam well, it was just that they swam real well.

"We didn't get enough firsts to win in a five-lane pool."

The Chiefs, who fell to 0-2, won only three events. Bryce Anderson collected a first in the 100-yard butterfly (56.83), Kevin Beach won the 100 breaststroke (1:08.86), and David Nevi, Beach, Mark Ealovega and Josh Blunt captured the 200 medley relay (1:50.22).

Canton did get seven seconds, and Steve Geddes got two of those on his own, in the 200 (1:58.20) and the 500 (8:27.60) freestyle. Other seconds went to Anderson in the 200 individual medley (2:12.32); Blunt in the 50 free (24.80); Nevi in the 100 fly (1:01.78); Drew Lang in the 100 free (53.96); and Anderson, Jeff Brandenburg, Lang and Geddes in the 400 free relay (3:38.88).

Salem hosts Northville at 7 p.m. tonight, then Canton and Salem collide in Salem's pool next Thursday (Jan. 18) at 7 p.m.

Rocks won't take victory for granted

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Salem shouldn't have much to worry about, judging from the results of its wrestling tournament Saturday.

But the Rocks, who were runaway winners in the Salem Invitational, are looking over their shoulder in anticipation of what lies ahead for them.

Salem finished with a 74 1/2-point advantage over runner-up Belleville in the 18-team tournament. Novi (117 1/2) and Westland John Glenn (108 1/2) had substantial point totals but still wound up far behind in third and fourth places, respectively.

Five other area teams found themselves in the second division. North Farmington was 12th, Garden City 14th, Farmington 16th, Wayne Memorial 17th and Livonia Stevenson 18th.

Despite its impressive victory, Salem can't take future events for granted. The Rocks will meet Belleville in the team tournaments in February and tangle with Glenn in the Western Lakes Activities Association meet later this month.

"WE WANTED to do well against Belleville, because we're going to face off with them in the first round of the team district," Salem coach Ron Krueger said. "Belleville is going to be a tough team to get by."

"The same with John Glenn in the league. That's going to be a real tough dual meet, so we'll have our hands full there."

"Both are good teams, and both are going to be in our future," he added. "They could be nemesises, and we have to work hard to make sure they're not."

Glenn coach Tom Buckalew, whose team was runner-up to Salem in the WLAA last year, said Krueger is taking the logical and responsible approach in keeping the Rocks focused.

"There's some merit to what he's saying," Buckalew said. "They beat us by almost 90 points in the tournament, but a lot can happen in a 1-0-1 match. If we win one we shouldn't, it's a 12-point swing.

"If you were putting any money on it, they're the odds-on favorite. He has some kids we shouldn't be able to catch. But they have to be ready, and he understands that."

SALEM HAD three individual champions (Julian Sell, Steve Burlison and Brian Burlison) and one runner-up (Dan Bonnett) in its tournament. Glenn had one champion (Kraig Kuban) and two runners-up (Karl Pace and Garnett Woody). Plymouth Canton had one winner (Liam Rentz) and North Farmington one runner-up (Adam Cook).

Sell was the No. 1 seed at 130 pounds and defeated Riverview rival Tim Phillips 11-0 in the final. The two met last year in the finals of the Riverview tournament, with Sell winning by pin.

"He wrestled what we call the four-period match," Krueger said. "I told Julian to get out there and get tough. He pinned him in the fourth period."

Sell is 13-3, with all three losses to Temperance-Bedford's Mick Buchanan, who was third in the Class A tournament.

"Sell doesn't get his just desserts, because he's lost three times," Krueger said. "But he lost to a kid who placed in the state. None of our kids have beaten anybody who finished that high. Hopefully, we're going to overcome that loss, too."

Steve Burlison (13-0) had three pins — the first in 41 seconds and the next two in just over a minute — before defeating Novi's Jeff O'Neil 3-1 in the 160 final.

"STEVE DIDN'T make any mistakes," Krueger said. "He wrestled tough; he wrestled hard."

Brian Burlison (15-0) won the 199 title, defeating Glenn's Woody on an 11-5 decision, but the anticipated match-up between Portage Northern's Derrick Green, the winner at that weight the last two years, and Burlison, who wrestled 171 last year, didn't materialize.

Green was disqualified for using an illegal hold on Ann Arbor Pioneer's Steve Fodale in the quarterfinals and injuring the opponent. Fodale couldn't continue and that sent Woody into the final by way of an injury default.

"But our boy was there to wrestle in the final, so I'm not going to blame my boy," Krueger said. "It was a little controversial, because everybody wanted to see that match. It wasn't Burlison's fault the kid didn't get there."

Kuban defeated two-time state qualifier Mike Braswell of Belleville in the 171 final, taking a 5-4 decision. The victory improved Kuban's record to 18-1, with 16 of the wins coming by pin. He has one technical fall and one decision.

In the semifinals, Kuban whipped highly-regarded Dino Papadopolous of Ypsilanti, needing only two minutes, 15 seconds to score a technical fall.

Salem cagers on winning roll

Junior center Jake Baker scored 20 points and snared 11 rebounds, leading Plymouth Salem's 76-43 victory over Walked Lake Western in a Western Lakes Activities Association crossover basketball game Tuesday.

The Rocks are 4-1 overall, the Warriors 1-5.

K.C. Kirkpatrick and Ryan Johnson added 11 and 10 points, respectively, for the Rocks, who jumped to a 24-11 first-quarter lead and never looked back.

"We got out of the gates quick and did a good job against their zone (defense)," Salem coach Bob Brodie said.

Junior John Hoffmeyer came off the bench to contribute seven points and 10 rebounds for Salem.

Chris Sobolek notched a game-high 21 points for the Warriors.

STEVENSON 71, HARRISON 68: Senior guard Ron Baran scored a game-high 27 to lead Livonia Stevenson (3-3) to victory Tuesday over the Hawks (4-3) in a Western Lakes Activities Association crossover.

The Spartans carried a 16-point lead, 61-46, into the final quarter before Harrison rallied to within three before missing an off-balance shot in the final seconds.

Rick Laven and Steve Leonard, both seniors, contributed 16 and 11, respectively, for the winners.

Mill Coleman and Andy Smith tallied 19 and 17, respectively, for Harrison.

The Hawks hit 14 of 24 free throws, while Stevenson made 10 of 15.

GLENN 65, FRANKLIN 63: Eric Spencer poured in a game-high 31 points Tuesday as Westland John Glenn (4-1) held off visiting Livonia Franklin (2-3) in a WLA Association crossover.

Bobby Lawrence, who added 15 points, broke a 61-41 tie on a three-pointer with 1:21 remaining. Andrew Dobbins then made a late free throw to give Glenn a three-point cushion.

Four Franklin players scored in double figures, led by Keith Roberts, who tallied 14 points. He also added four assists and three steals.

Making his first start since being called up from the JV squad, the sophomore guard missed a three-pointer at the buzzer.

Craig Overaitis contributed 13, while Steve McCool and Mike Finneran chipped in with 12 and 10, respectively. John Santilli added eight rebounds and five assists.

NORTHVILLE 64, FARMINGTON 53: Free throws spelled the difference Tuesday as the host Falcons (3-3) were corralled by the Mustangs (3-3).

Four Northville players scored in double figures led by Joe Kaley and Mike Lang with 14 each. Paul McCreadie and Paul Grant contributed 13 each as the Mustangs made 21 of 25 from the charity stripe.

Farmington, just 9-of-20 from the line, was led by P.J. Green's game-high 13. Others in double figures for the Falcons, who were outscored 23-17 in the final period, included Brian Browne (14), Greg Bjedov (10) and Chris Schmidt (10).

REDFORD CC 51, GALLAGHER 45: The Shamrocks snapped a four-game losing streak Tuesday with a Central Division victory over visiting Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher.

Senior guard Mark Clary came off the bench to make four straight free throws to seal the CC win. The Shamrocks are now 2-4 overall and 1-1 in the division.

Junior guard Steve Whitlow and sophomore center Bob Kummer led the victors with 15 and 14 points, respectively. Kummer had eight in the decisive fourth quarter as CC outscored the Lancers 15-11.

Gallagher (5-3, 1-1), ranked among the top 10 teams in Class B, was led Wayne Thomas, who scored a game-high 21. He netted three 3-pointers.

BORGESS 69, NOTRE DAME 51: On Tuesday, Redford Bishop Borgess out-gunned host Harper Woods Notre Dame in a Catholic League (Central Division) encounter thanks to senior guard Artie Brown's 21 points.

Borgess, now 6-1 overall and 2-0 in division play, also got 16 each from Shawn Respert and Randy White. Junior center Red Shawn Sumler chipped in with 10 rebounds and six points.

Michael Balow paced the Irish, 3-4 and 1-1, with 21 points.

THURSTON 88, CRESTWOOD 48: Redford Thurston came back from holiday break with a vengeance Tuesday, ripping Tri-River League foe Dearborn Heights Crestwood.

All 11 players scored for the host Eagles, 4-3 overall and 3-2 in league play.

Junior guard Khari Spence poured in 27 points for Thurston. Teammate Jason Muller, a senior guard added 20.

After an 11-11, first-quarter deadlock, Thurston went to town, outscoring the Chargers 31-15 in the second period followed by outbursts of 18-12 and 28-10 in the final two quarters.

"We stressed defense over the holidays," Thurston coach Mike Schuette said. "Off our full-court press, we were able to get steals (15) and a lot of transition baskets."

Chris Williams netted 22 points for the winless Chargers, who have lost seven straight.

EDSEL FORD 64, REDFORD UNION 55: Poor free throw shooting (8-of-16) led to the Panthers' undoing Tuesday, as Dearborn Edsel Ford came away with the Northwest Suburban League triumph.

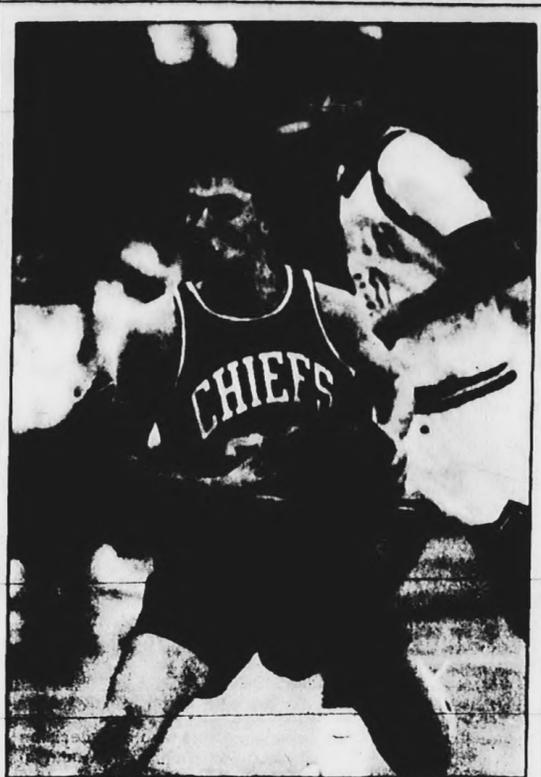

Forward Derek Lowe notched a game-high 20 points for the Thunderbirds, 4-3 overall and 1-1 in the NSL. Center Matt Heiner added 16 for Edsel, which connected on 15 of 21 free throws.

Dan Lezotte and Steve Nowak paced RU with 18 apiece. Sophomore Bill Malecki contributed 11 for the Panthers, 5-3 and 1-1.

Edsel, which led by only two at the intermission, outscored RU 15-6 in the third period to take a 46-35 advantage.

"They (Edsel) came out and played good defense against us (2-3 matchup zone)," RU coach Tip Smathers said. "And their three-quarter-court press bothered us some."

WAYNE 69, LINCOLN PARK 34: It was no contest Tuesday as Wayne Memorial ran its league-leading Wolverine A Conference mark to 4-0 against the visiting Railsplitters.

Geoff Allen had a big night for the Chiefs, scoring 19 points in his team's 51-42 victory. Canton moved above .500 with a 3-2 record.

happen and forget to give credit to the team that executed its game plan. Dave had a super game plan, and they played well."

CANTON DIDN'T run away with the victory, but it was consistent and in control throughout the game. The Chiefs ran off 10 straight points after North scored the first two, and they held the lead for the duration.

"We played defense well, we broke their press and we were patient and got good shots," Van Wagener said.

"I told the kids 'If we keep this game in the 50s, we're going to win.' I also told them 'If the game is going to be in the 80s or 90s, they're going to win.'"

Canton led 24-17 at halftime, but the Raiders made a run in the third period, shooting 7-of-12 from the floor and cutting Canton's lead to 36-35.

"I told the kids to settle down, get good shots and continue to play good man-to-man defense," Van Wagener said. "The kids had a lot of poise."

The Chiefs reasserted themselves in the fourth.

2nd-half letdown leads to SC loss

A depleted Schoolcraft College men's basketball team couldn't sustain two good halves of play Saturday, losing to host Macomb Community College, 82-61.

The Ocelots, who lost four players prior to the game due to academic ineligibilities at the mid-semester break, trailed by only two at halftime (38-36) before the host Monarchs pulled away for the victory in the second half.

"They (Macomb) stuck us in the second half," said SC coach Dave Bogataj. "They beat us on second shots and we did not shoot well."

Dave Rich paced Macomb, now 10-3 overall and 4-1 in the Eastern Conference, with a game-high 20 points.

Randy Watters paced Schoolcraft with 17. Ed Hudson contributed 13, while Al Hudson scored nine points and added 14 rebounds.

The Ocelots are 7-13 overall and 0-3 in the conference.

Declared academically ineligible for the remainder of the season, according to Bogataj, is Plymouth Salem product Jeff Elliott, along with Chris Heber of Wayne Memorial, Floyd Layow of Whitmore Lake and Sean Hansen of Berkley.

Redford Bishop Borgess product Rob Harmon, who played against Macomb, won't be eligible until he makes up required academic work.

Also missing against Macomb was starting point-guard Ken Fuster, who sat out the game with a sprained ankle.

Earlier this season, two second-year players, John Moran and Mike Mercer, quit the squad for unspecified reasons.

OCC cagers whip Mott

This was a game between front-runners. Consequently, it was expected to be one of those down-to-the-buzzer, last-shot heartstoppers.

So what happened? What happened was Oakland Community College's men's basketball team stopped Mott CC a little earlier than the final buzzer. How much earlier?

"We took control about two minutes into the game," said OCC assistant coach Chris Peponis.

The final result bears him out: OCC 127, Mott 83, Saturday at OCC.

This wasn't just a fast finish by the Raiders, either. They led 64-36 at the half, completely dominating a team they had been tied with for first place in the Eastern Conference. Before the game, both had been 4-1.

THERE WERE reasons for the rout. For one, Mott's starting point guard was missing. For another, Mott had recently returned from a 16-team tournament in Phoenix, in which it had placed fourth and had defeated Kankakee (Ill.) CC, the fourth-ranked team in the National Junior College Athletic Association. So fatigue may have been a factor.

But neither fatigue nor the absence of one starter played as big a role in the lopsided loss as another reason given by Peponis: "Our kids were ready to play. Not just one guy, either. Everyone."

Seven Raiders reached double-figures in scoring, led by Ed Pasque's 22. Michael Bailey had 18, Bobby Dinges and Jerry Prieskorn netted 16 each, Tom Roberson got 14, Toine Murphy totaled 12 and Ed Whitaker had 10.

There's more, however. Pasque had six assists and four steals; Bailey had 13 rebounds; Roberson had 10 boards; Murphy collected seven rebounds, four assists and four steals; Whitaker got 10 assists and eight steals; Prieskorn nabbed seven rebounds; and Starlin Stevens came off the bench to get six points, 10 assists and six steals.

Mott was paced by Paul Newman's 16 points. William Paige added 12. The loss dropped Mott to 11-4 overall, 4-2 in the conference.

Shamrocks meet objective with tie

By Ray Setlock
staff writer

It wasn't Panama, but the Redford Catholic Central hockey team successfully completed their mission Tuesday in Southgate. Despite numerous injuries, the Shamrocks managed to salvage a 4-4 tie against defending Class A state champ and No. 1-ranked Southgate Anderson.

With 7:13 left and the Shamrocks trailing 4-3, Jesse Hubenschmidt slid the puck past Southgate goalie Richard Nagy to give CC the tie.

Goalie Matt Fennelly, forward Keith Bozyk and defenseman Andy Plemmons each suffered injuries during the course of the game. Fennelly left midway through the second period with a knee injury, he was replaced by Plymouth Canton transfer Ron Springer.

Bozyk broke a little finger on his first shift but continued to play, figuring in all four CC goals. And Plemmons missed just one shift after spraining his hand late in the third period.

"Springer did a heck of a job coming in cold off the bench in the second period," CC coach Jack Gumbleton said. "He looked nervous at first, but really settled down and gave us a steady performance."

SPRINGER TRANSFERRED to CC last fall, but under Michigan High School Athletic Association rules didn't become eligible until Monday after sitting out the required one semester.

"I was really nervous going into the game," Springer said. "This was my first game for CC. I practiced with them, but never got into game situations. I was rusty at first, but settled down after the second intermission."

When Springer entered the game, the score was deadlocked at 2-2. In the last two periods he steered away 25 of 27 Southgate shots.

"The team played well in front of me," Springer said. "But I watched that puck and every move it made. I didn't want them scoring a cheap one."

Despite his broken finger, Bozyk played a key role for the Shamrocks, scoring two goals and assisting on two others. He now has 27 goals and 31 assists in CC's 11 games this season.

'(Canton transfer Ron) Springer did a heck of a job coming in cold off the bench in the second period. He looked nervous at first, but really settled down and gave us a steady performance.'

— Jack Gumbleton
CC hockey coach

"The finger hindered my shooting a little bit," Bozyk said. "But it didn't affect me that much."

"IT WAS the type of game I expected," Southgate coach Frank DiCristofaro said. "CC skated real well, but I thought we could have hit them a little more."

Joe Cyrek scored the Shamrocks' other goal, drawing assists from Bozyk and Matt Keenan. Paul Pirronello added three assists for CC.

Southgate recorded 37 shots in the game, while CC managed just 21. Most of the Titans' shots came in the third period, when they fired 19 at Springer.

"I think a lot of the reason that they had so many shots in the third period was because our guys were tired," Gumbleton said. "The hitting really took its toll."

The Titans got two goals from senior center Ron Patterson, including one of their two short-handed scores. Jason Hayes and Eric Zimmerman also scored, with Hayes providing the second short-handed goal.

"Those short-handed goals were a result of mistakes in our own zone," Gumbleton said. "You can't let them control the puck in our zone when we are on the power play."

The Titans keep alive their 37-game streak without a loss. Their season mark stands at 8-0-1. CC is 8-1-2.

ter in winning. In fact, he beat two very good wrestlers," Buckalew said. "(Papadopolous) was the No. 2 seed and supposedly a pretty outstanding wrestler, and he couldn't stay with Kraig. It didn't last very long."

In addition to Woody, Pace was second at 125. He reached the final by beating Ken Stopa 8-7 for his first win over the Salem rival. Pace (17-3) lost a 13-8 decision to Mount Clemens' Clarence Weaver in the final. It was his second loss to Weaver but an improvement over the first, which ended with a pin.

"I was very pleased with my kids," Buckalew said. "We hadn't wrestled in two weeks and had only four mandatory practices (during the holidays).

"We have some people who are starting to come along. I'm pleased with the work ethic our kids have. And, if the season is long enough, we should be a pretty good team."

Woody's record is 17-5 and 140-pound Cory Buckalew 13-5. Salem's Stopa is 15-3 and 171-pound Pete Israel 12-7.

Rentz captured the 140 championship with a third-period pin (4:45) against Portage Central's Alan Kaufman. It was the Canton wrestler's third pin in four matches Saturday. North's Cook won three straight decisions before losing 2-0 to Darren Donathan of Riverview in the 152 final.

Brodhun's goal wins for Stevenson

Livonia Stevenson added a game to its regular season hockey schedule, edging non-league foe Milford Saturday at the Lakeland Arena, 2-1.

John Brodhun scored what proved to be the game-winner for the Spartans at 6:44 of the second period, a power-play goal from John Fenech and Matt Cichy.

All the scoring took place in the second period as Bill Cook staked the Redskins to a 1-0 lead at 3:07, but Stevenson's Matt Cichy tied it only 41 seconds later on a goal from Fenech and Kevin Bush.

"We couldn't cash in on our opportunities," said Stevenson coach Paul Ferguson, whose team is 4-4-1 overall. "We didn't seem to be clicking, but we kept working hard."

Stevenson goalie Dave Labadie stopped 14 of 15 shots.

The Spartans registered 25 shots on goal. Stevenson picked up the game to fill out its schedule after Southfield High dropped its hockey program.

REDFORD CC 10, MASSEY 0: In a non-league game played Saturday at the Redford Ice Arena, the host Shamrocks exploded for eight goals in the final period to trounce Massey Secondary School of Windsor, Ontario.

Keith Bozyk and Paul Pirronello each tallied three goals and two assists for the Shamrocks, who improved their record to 8-1-1 overall.

Goalie Matt Fennelly posted for the shutout for CC.

Crusaders' main priority: survival

By C.J. Meek staff writer

There is one basic ingredient missing from the Madonna College women's basketball program: a goal. Just what is it that the Fighting Crusaders hope to accomplish? The most obvious answer is survival. But it isn't much of a goal; it's like playing four-against-five with every game on the road — a can't-win situation.

The problem with Madonna College's basketball program is the foundation, which is closer in consistency to jello than cement. "We aren't going to win any national titles here," said a realistic Bob Belf, the second-year head coach. "We just don't get the support. I'm not sure they know what they want to do with their program."

HISTORY SUPPORTS Belf's contentions. Solid support for athletics has long been lacking at Madonna. The volleyball program, under the guidance of Jerry Abraham, enjoyed a superb season and appears to be flourishing. Baseball, too, could do well this spring.

But the men's basketball team folded after last season when coach Bob Whitlow, after a promising first season, resigned, citing a lack of administrative support. It will be restarted, according to athletic director Ray Summers, next season.

The women's program remained in limbo as well, Belf said, until Aug. 10 when the administration "decided they wanted to put a program together and they gave me some money to do it."

That did not give Belf much time, however, to recruit a team. The schedule was lacking, too; Madonna did not start its season until Dec. 29, when it played at the Albion College Tournament.

THE CRUSADERS were 1-3 going into Tuesday's game at Concordia, losing 61-56 to Albion; beating Spring Arbor 76-51; and losing twice on their trip to Kentucky last weekend, 80-64 to Lindsay Wilson and 72-49 to Cumberland.

"One of the teams we played in Kentucky had played 14 games before ours," said Belf. "We're in November shape right now, and we'll have to get into January shape real fast."

Belf has nothing but good things to say about his team, which increased in number to nine Tuesday with the addition of Michelle Dykanski, a 5-foot-10 junior forward from Schoolcraft College and Harper Woods Regina, and Megan Armstrong, a 5-2 sophomore guard from Waterford Kettering. Both became eligible for winter semester.

The Crusaders numbered just six for the opener against Albion; there were seven for the next two games.

"They're good kids," said Belf, a 1980 graduate of Albion who played at Bloomfield Hills Laker through 1976. "And they're working their butts off. But they're all perimeter players. There is no real post-up (threat). I need a kid who can be a defender in the middle."

HE'S HOPING Dykanski, a strong rebounder at SC, will help the inside game. Leading the team's offense is 5-5 senior guard Becky Posywak, a former Livonia Ladywood and SC player, with 15 points-per-game average. Lisa Kline, a 5-9 junior forward from Waterford Kettering and Oakland CC, is scoring 12.5 per game and Karen Boluch, a 5-11 sophomore forward from Plymouth Canton, is averaging 12 points.

Other team members are Theresa Ternes, a 5-8 junior forward from Westland John Glenn; Jill Burt, a 5-7 freshman guard from East Jordan; Lyndel Ingalls, a 5-7 sophomore guard from Gladstone; and Holly Murphy, a 6-0 sophomore forward from Marquette.

All but Burt attended another college. Boluch and Ternes both played at University of Michigan-Dearborn and transferred; Armstrong and Ingalls were at Northern Michigan; and Murphy was at Lake Superior State.

"THEY'RE ALL coming from situations they didn't like," said Belf. "Either they didn't like the school, or they didn't like the coach, or they didn't like something."

"I've tried to make this fun for them. If they look forward to playing and to practice, they're going to play harder."

So Belf has used an up-tempo style and tried to "play to their strengths." He also refuses to be what he termed "a babysitter." He does not have a confining program, with every athlete's move on and off the court pre-planned.

"I don't want to tell you we're a great team, but we do have some talent," he said in summation. "We do have some ability."

He then added, when asked what kind of program Madonna's could become: "We could be a middle of the road GLIAC (Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference) team."

Mediocrity is hardly a lofty goal, but with a program mired in uncertainty, what else can be expected?

Cold water yields bigger fish

SERIOUS ICE ANGLERS should keep in mind throughout the winter that the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources have special programs which recognize record fish caught through the ice.

Bill Parker outdoors

In a program initiated in 1980, the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame recognizes fish for ice records in two categories: fishing with a rod/line (with or without a reel) and the tip-up or tilt method.

"It was always assumed that ice fishing produces larger fish specimens on the average compared to open water summer angling," said Bob Kutz, records secretary of the Fishing Hall of Fame. "The size of catches in ice fishing applications uphold that assumption. Warm water species such as bass and bottom-runners like catfish, bowfin and carp bite readily when ice covers the lake. Panfish, whitefish, pike, walleye and trout are also very willing winter biters."

The flesh of fish caught in cold water is also much firmer and tastier than that of fish caught in the summer when the water is considerably warmer.

EVEN THOUGH YOUR catch may not quite be big enough for a world line-class record, the Hall has introduced a new awards program to recognize those almost world-record fish.

The program is designed to honor all trophy fish catches and to recognize such outstanding angling achievements. The anglers' name and catch will be added to the record book and the angler will receive a frameable certificate and a patch.

To submit a trophy fish for recognition by the National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame, an angler must request and fill out an application form and return it to the Hall. The fish must be weighed on an inspected and tested scale which is authorized legal for trade.

An inspected and tested scale will usually bear a seal and number, plus the inspector's signature and the date of the latest inspection. These scales are usually found at a grocery store, meat market, meat locker or post office. Common spring-type scales, often found in a hardware or department store used to estimate weight for customer convenience, are not reliable for accurate weight.

The Fishing Hall of Fame, located in Hayward, Wis., updates all records every three months and publishes a non-profit 60 page record book annually. The World Records Book lists over 100 species records, by all-tackle (heaviest) and all-line classes as well as all state's records. The book is available for $3 shipping and handling and $1 postage.

To order the book, or send for a free application to submit an entry to the Hall, call or write to National Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame, Box 33, Hall of Fame Drive, Hayward, Wis. 54843.

THE MICHIGAN Department of Natural Resources awards Master Angler Certificates and patches to those anglers who catch state record fish or one of the top five fish of each species.

To apply for Master Angler certification, the angler must fill out an application (available at all DNR district and regional offices), weigh the fish on an inspected and tested scale, obtain the signature of two witnesses of the weight of the fish, submit a picture (close-up, clear, sideview) of the fish with the application.

It's best to keep the fish frozen for two weeks after submitting the application in case further identification is needed. Also, if the fish exceeds the current state record, the angler must contact a DNR fisheries biologist for positive identification and verification. The fish must be checked by the biologist when fresh or fresh frozen. Mounted fish will not be considered for a record.

For information or an application from the Master Angler Awards program write to DNR Fisheries Division, Box 30028, Lansing, 48909.

Ocelots overwhelm Adrian

Everything was meshing for the Schoolcraft College women's basketball team Saturday against Adrian College's junior varsity. The shots were falling and the defense was stingy, making the Lady Ocelots easy winners, 83-48 at SC.

"We just shot well and hustled on 'D,'" said SC coach Jack Grenan, whose team improved to 8-3 overall with the win.

SC hit 20-of-32 floor shots (62.5 percent) and all five of its free throws in rolling to a 48-21 lead at the half. For the game, the Lady Ocelots made 32-of-58 shots (55.2 percent) and all 10 free throws.

Barb Krug's 19 points was high for SC. Krug also had five rebounds. Tricia Lucas netted 17 points and eight boards, Tracy Osborne finished with 10 points and seven steals, and Mo Merritt collected eight points and seven rebounds.

Lisa Taylor's 12 points topped Adrian, which slipped to 2-6 with the defeat.

Ron Richardson: everything's OK

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

Ron Richardson, star of the Gershwin musical "Oh, Kay!" at the Birmingham Theatre, is clearly a man who is happy with himself. And no wonder.

Everything has been going his way careerwise, including a recent trip to Japan, where he performed — in Japanese yet — his Tony-award-winning role of Jim, the runaway slave in "Big River." After Broadway and a national tour in that musical (based upon "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn"), Richardson was invited by Japanese producers to perform in their country.

"I secluded myself in Sag Harbor, Long Island for three months," he said. He had already taken Japanese classes before he and his coach settled down to intensive work for him to learn the language.

Arriving for his interview at the Birmingham Theatre, the tall actor cut quite a figure dressed all in black, including his Russian-style fur hat. He had visited Leningrad, Riga and Moscow on a concert tour in 1986 and recently did a tour of the Baltic States, presenting "Concerts for the Earth."

The self-assured performer laughed heartily and regularly, as he spoke in his deep voice about trips behind the Iron Curtain and other high points of his renewed career. Richardson explained that he was successful, appearing in Broadway shows and nightclub acts until he hit age 30. Then, "I hit a dry spell."

When his luck turned, it was phenomenal. "I went from unemployed to a Tony award in 90 days," he said. "Big River" opened to rave reviews: "Thirty-five days later I got the Drama Desk Award as best actor in a musical," and the Tony award as best featured actor followed.

Including Broadway, the national tour and Japan, Richardson has done approximately 500 performances of "Big River."

Last May, he produced his own show, "Songs in the Key of Stevie,"

'We start rehearsals in August for 'Oh, Kay!' in Toronto, to kick off the national tour for Broadway. We hope to open on Broadway in the spring of '91.'

— Ron Richardson

doing songs of Stevie Wonder at the Village Gate in New York. This July, he will take the musical revue to Tokyo for three weeks.

Television viewers also may recognize Richardson who played two special parts — one on the comedy series "22.7," as a minister in a recurring role, and the other a 12-week stint on the soap opera "One Life to Live." Of the latter role, he said, "I played a good guy."

He enjoyed appearing on the daytime soap but said, "It was very difficult." Parts have been learned so fast. You only get the script the night before.

Richardson was anxious to talk about his current role in "Oh, Kay!" The scene of the musical comedy classic has been re-set in Harlem, and he plays a wealthy Harlem playboy named Jimmy Winter. (He can't seem to get away from Jim, Jimmy, and his next role will probably be a character named James, he predicts.)

For "Oh, Kay!" Richardson's name is above the title on the marquee for the first time. His name also was above the title when he did the play "Paul Robeson" at the Kennedy Center, but he doesn't count that because it was a one-man show.

"It's wonderful to have your name above the title, but I'm also humbled by it," he said.

This is the actor's fourth trip to metropolitan Detroit. Theatergoers saw him at the Fisher Theatre as Sportin' Life in "Porgy and Bess" and with Eartha Kitt and Melba Moore in "Timbuktu," as well as at the Masonic Temple in "Big River."

Before coming to the Birmingham Theatre, the current revival of "Oh, Kay!" was presented at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, Conn. Richardson said, "We start rehearsals in August for 'Oh, Kay!' in Toronto, to kick off the national tour for Broadway. We hope to open on Broadway in the spring of '91."

Originally written for a white cast, the musical set in the 1920s bootleggers' era has been reinvigorated by moving the scene to Harlem and a black cast. "It does show the many social strata in Harlem during Prohibition," Richardson said, pointing out there were two cultures in New York. "The transition was very simple. This show is not just dipped in chocolate. It takes on a real ambience."

He continued, "It's a look at black culture that we as Americans don't often get a chance to see."

Richardson said this is his first time on a professional stage to dance and to do comedy. "I love firsts. I love a challenge." He is thrilled by the opportunity to sing the Gershwin songs. "The reprise I sing of 'Someone to Watch Over Me' is one of the most difficult pieces of music to do." It's tough, in part, because it's "a quite, simple melody" rather than a boisterous one.

He praised his fellow cast members. "It's such a brilliant company," Richardson said. He also said, "The star of this show is the ensemble. It has some of the most exciting and exhilarating dancing I have seen on stage for a long time. The casting is perfect."

Prince of a fellow in doing pratfalls

By Larry O'Conner
staff writer

Comedy may not be pretty, but it can get physical.

Not in the Olivia Newton John/aerobics sense of the word, but in the Dick Van Dyke falling-over-the-ha-sock definition. Just ask Peter Pitofsky.

At 9, the Manhattan-raised comedian used to practice the classic opening of the "Dick Van Dyke Show" tripping act to perfection. Today, Pitofsky has become the prince of pratfalls.

Pitofsky, 31, performs his schtick in comedy clubs, which catches most audiences by surprise. But it shouldn't really.

After all the routines of vaudeville, Red Skelton and the Three Stooges are part of the rich comedic tradition in this country. Pitofsky doesn't claim to own the patent on a new idea. He's a revivalist.

"Comedy, I think, was the same roughhouse slap stick type of thing up until the '70s," said Pitofsky, who performs this week at Joey's Comedy Club in Livonia. "Then the whole consciousness changed. It wasn't hip or funny to be doing that jump around thing anymore. It's really gotten away from the characters."

"Nowadays, it's the comic with the pushed up sleeves and who talks about 7-Eleven. This is cool; this is my point of view type of thing. If you turn down the volume on TV, these guys are not funny."

If you turn down the sound knob with Pitofsky on the set, you'll still see him inflate his face like a puffer fish or fall down like a sack of coal. His body is the punchline.

HIS BODY has paid its dues. For four years, he was a clown in the Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus. He lived a life of trains, breathing dust from the showtop and dodging elephant dung.

"When they swing around, those things can come at you like a rocket. I almost got killed by one of those 50-pound nuggets," he said.

But the experience gave him stamina. He would perform two shows (three on Saturdays) six days a week before thousands of people.

Then there were other eventful entries on his comedic resumes. One included performing as a beer tent entertainer at the US Festival in 1983.

"It was a frightening experience," said Pitofsky, describing the week-long music festival held in California. "There was 9 million alcoholics there. Each day there was a different audience. Heavy metal was a dangerous day. The country and western day there was a bunch of John Waynes that wanted to punch out your face."

His style of physical humor has led to several television and film appearances, including a lead role in the recently completed independent movie "Hollywood Chaos." Comedy clubs, though, provide the live feedback.

Pitofsky only started performing his zany routine in stand-up comedy clubs across the country. After an appearance, he's more tired than a comedian who just reads one-liners.

HE DOESN'T mind, though. His style of stand-up humor is an alternative to comedy which he believes has become self-indulgent and over-glutted.

Pitofsky remembers a day when a simple facial expression from Red Skelton brought more laughs than any punchline.

Peter Pitofsky will appear Wednesday through Saturday, Jan. 10-13, at Joey's Comedy Club, Plymouth Road, east of Levon, Livonia. For information, call 261-0555.

IMAGINE DYING FROM A DISEASE YOU NEVER KNEW YOU HAD.

Eleven million people in the U.S. have diabetes. But almost half of them don't know it. Untreated, diabetes can lead to heart disease, kidney disease, blindness and gangrene. And for 150,000 people each year, it leads to death.

That's why you should be aware of the symptoms of diabetes: blurred vision, excessive thirst and frequent urination are just some of the warning signs. Because the sooner you find out if you have diabetes, the more likely you are to get it under control, before complications set in.

Finding out you have diabetes can be scary. But not finding out can be fatal.

FIGHT SOME OF THE WORST DISEASES OF OUR TIME. Support the American Diabetes Association.

County of Wayne, 728 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Michigan 48226

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS

On or about 29 January 1990, the above named County will request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release federal funds under title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) for the following project(s) accordingly:

- PROJECT: Sidewalk construction.
LOCATION: South side Joy Road, Canton Center to Sheldon, Sheldon to elementary school; east side Haggerty Road, Palmer to Cherry Hill PURPOSE: Pedestrian access from subsidized housing to schools and shopping
COST: $110,000.00

- It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the County of Wayne has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190). The reasons for such decision not to prepare such a Statement are as follows:
No significant impact was found as a result of the environmental assessment.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the above project has been made by the County of Wayne which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at the Department of Resource Development, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, MI 48188, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. 3. CERTIFICATION. The County of Wayne will undertake the project described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) under Title I of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1974. The County of Wayne is certifying to HUD that the County of Wayne and Executive Edward McNamara, in his capacity as County Executive, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making, and action, and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the County of Wayne may use the Block Grant funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. HUD will accept and objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases:

- That the certification was not in fact executed by the Chief Executive Officer of the applicant; or
- That the applicant's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision, finding or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process.

Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58), and may be addressed to HUD at: 17th Floor, McNamara Building, 477 Michigan Avenue, Detroit, Michigan 48226. Glen Michaels, sculptor, said he was pleased with the way the glass wall catches the reflections of his fused glass art, now partially installed (15 feet below). He is shown in open Center Courtyard of the new Michigan Library and Historical Center in Lansing. At left, in the Ainsworth Glass Works studio, Michaels makes sure that the fired piece fits the pattern perfectly.

THE SCULPTURE POOL that Glen Michaels designed for the new Michigan Library and Historical Center in Lansing is one-fourth installed and already dazzling.

The Kresge Foundation gave $500,000 for this work of art. Michaels, a Troy resident and nationally recognized sculptor, has been working on the project for approximately five years. It has undergone revisions, modifications and delays.

When the last section is installed sometime next spring, it will "be the largest piece of fused glass in the world," Michaels said.

Dan Ainsworth and Richard Novak of Ainsworth Glass of Detroit, who are doing all of the fabricating, will vouch for that.

MORE THAN 4,000 pieces (most about the size of a slice of pizza) will be in the completed work and each of those is fused from many smaller pieces of glass, Novak said.

"This will be the largest piece of fused glass in the world with no other materials. We know because it's the most glass ever ordered," he said.

Seven kilns in the Ainsworth studio have been going night and day for many months on the project.

"This is the largest of its kind since the Egyptians did it on the walls of the tombs," said Ainsworth, a teacher and student of glass history.

And Ainsworth is prepared to show that the ancient Egyptians were no slouches when it came to fused glass. He has slides of Egyptian fused glass from the collection of the Smithsonian Institute. Some of the techniques these ancients used are still not understood.

THE 12 FOOT WIDE POOL circles a 50 foot tall Michigan white pine in the open, center-rotunda of the new building, which is several blocks west of the Capitol in downtown Lansing.

As soon as Michaels completed the painting of what the pool would look like (his third complete design), the arduous planning began for what he smilingly described as "the largest paint-by-number project in the world." The glass mosaic basin of the pool is a reproduction of that painting.

The theme is Michigan waterways. To reproduce the colors and patterns in the painting in glass mosaic on such a scale presented no end of challenges and problems.

As much as any artist around today, Michaels is accustomed to incorporating a massive number of elements into a magnificent entity. That's what he does in his commissions for huge wall sculptures made of tiles, cast bronze, glass and other objects.

HOWEVER, BEFORE this could be put together, Ainsworth blew the painting up to actual scale on a computer and made a full-size paper pattern of the design.

He determined 93 colors were in the painting, not counting the shadings. He and Michaels laid the full-size pattern sections out on a gymnasium floor to make sure they were true to scale.

"I had nightmares it would turn out to be an oval or a square," Michaels said.

With the shape ascertained, the design was drawn on the pattern sections. The individual pieces were determined and numbered, the colors of the design of each piece marked by number and the individual pattern pieces cut.

IT IS indeed not only the largest paint-by-number project, as Michaels jokingly described it, but it may be the largest jigsaw puzzles on record as well.

"It's a pretty involved process," Ainsworth said. "There's a lot more to it than first appeared. And we drew every one of the (pattern) pieces twice."

Another consideration, he said, is that all of the glass used, the clear, all 93 colors and the iridescents, must be compatible — heat in precisely the same way — or the pieces would shatter in the kiln.

Undulations are in the surface of the pool, so, Ainsworth made the pattern pieces smaller and sometimes thicker at those places to compensate for the changes.

Richard Novak opens the lid of the kiln to check the progress of pieces inside. The temperature must reach 1,500 degrees before firing is completed.

all about color
Helen Diane Vincent

Neutrality provides more options in dress

Q. I have a physical appearance that isn't outstanding in any way. I call it bland, although my friends say I'm quite attractive. My skin tones are balanced, neither cool nor warm; my hair is ash blonde going slightly gray; my eyes are hazel; and my height and weight are average. However, as a successful businesswoman working in a competitive environment, I also feel a need for a change in keeping with fashion trends. What do you suggest?

A. You didn't mention some of the most important things to take into consideration: What type of image do you need to project in your business environment? And to what extent is your business life caught up in your personal life?

It will come as no surprise to you that studies confirm a decidedly positive response to conservative dressing: the higher one goes up the corporate ladder.

Since you are already successful, I wouldn't go for a drastic change. If your favorite colors aren't suitable for business, I would express them in your private life.

IN ANY event, don't let your natural appearance deter you from any color and style you may want. Your very neutrality provides more, not less, options.

In pulling together your new look recognize that there are four things you can do: You can use color, apparel, hair style and cosmetic techniques to either blend, disguise or exaggerate your features, or divert from them.

It would seem most appropriate that you carefully exaggerate your best features.

Heightened colorfulness and contrast will then permit you to wear somewhat more dramatic clothing, such as the 1950s retro look that gives off a look of confidence and flatters most figures.

Just keep in mind it isn't so much the particular color of your skin, hair or eyes by itself that matters, as much as how your overall appearance comes across and gives you your particular look.

Everyone's appearance falls somewhere in the spectrum of colorful to less colorful, strong contrast to less contrast, delicate features to coarse, and so forth.

Since you fall right in the middle your color range includes almost all but the brightest or more extreme contrasts that might overwhelm you.

Q. My friends and I have been debating what causes color trends. We're particularly interested in fashion. My friends, who are studying marketing, say color trends are determined by what the consumer buys; I say designers initiate them and consumers can only buy what is offered them. Which point of view is closest to the truth?

A. Fashion color trends are part of the overall consumer and business environment, which, in turn, is influenced by the general social situation. With a subject so complex, I can only hit the highlights to help settle the debate.

So many people get involved in bringing fashion to the consumer. No one person has the power to dominate — not even the designer.

This wasn't always so. As recently as the early 1960s, a celebrity designer and certain editors could dictate not only color, but what styles women would wear.

But all of that has changed, as designers — both European and American — have become big business through alliances with mega-corporations and profitable licensing.

ALL OF this relies on heavy advertising and promotion. Not denying the better designer's creativity, the judgment on what colors to introduce each season is as calculated as any financial strategy.

The marketing of color, along with fashion, involves phalanxes of retail buyers, coordinators, advertisers, suppliers and key fashion editors.

Many of them further arrive at a consensus on consumer preferences through membership in various trade organizations and surveying the same trend reports available to the industry.

With retailers selling to a society itself so diverse in economic power, taste and buying patterns, they have segmented fashion into categories and different price levels.

Each category has its own coordinated look that also shifts with seasons.

Miniseries opens on 'danceable' note

With "Music for Dancing" as its theme, the Livonia Symphony Orchestra will present its first miniseries of the new year in a series of three at 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 19 in Civic Center Library auditorium. This marks the second season of the orchestra's popular new series.

Featured trumpet soloist will be Francesco DiBlasi, the orchestra's musical conductor and music director. He will perform Goedicke's "Concert Etude for Trumpet and Strings."

Tickets are $9 and $5 for seniors and students. Other concerts in the series will be on Fridays, Feb. 9 and March 9. Tickets for the entire series are priced at $24 general admission and $12 for students and seniors and will be available at the Jan. 19 concert.

Maestro DiBlasi will begin the first program with Weber's "Invitation to the Dance" and will go to the American west with Aaron Copland's "Hoedown" from "Rodeo."

Other selections to be performed will be the Johann Strauss waltz, "The Blue Danube," "Malaguena" by Lecueona and "El Relicario" by Padiella. Two Leroy Anderson favorites, "Serenata" and "Blue Tango" will conclude the program.

Advance tickets information can be obtained from Ida Krandle at 851-4524.

Civic Center Library is on Five Mile Road, between Hubbard and Farmington road in Livonia.

What has been described as an excellent display of automotive water colors is the focus of an exhibit now on display in the new Atrium Gallery, 113 N. Center Street in Northville. Featured is the work of Livonia artist Barbara Demigen, shown here with one of her renderings. The show will run until Sunday, Jan. 14. She will be in the gallery 5-7:30 p.m. Friday.

Glass sculpture pool takes shape

Individual pieces often required up to three firings if many colors were used and the pattern was complicated. Only a few can be fired at one time in each kiln. The complete process takes approximately 24 hours.

MICHAELS CHOSE the 93 colors from hundreds of samples. "I had all 93 colors memorized," he said. "I'd look at people and I'd see all numbers."

The range of colors matches that of Michigan waters — blues, greens, mauves, purples, grays, off-whites, yellows and touches of red and gold.

Michaels will certainly receive accolades for the intricate and beautiful patterns he created for this work. Like the fabrication, it wasn't a simple "ready, start, paint," process.

NOT ONLY did he study Michigan waters, but he intensified his already strong interest in American Indian and ancient civilizations.

"One thing common to the Indians was their fascination with water," he said.

"The whirlpool was of great fascination — and the underwater panther. Anytime they reproduced that the tail was longer than the panther. . . . This project forced me to look at water — and tendrils and the way they grow. . . . Everything is based on water — and for somebody who doesn't like to fly, there are a lot of spacy views."

THESE VIEWS BECOME all the more dramatic because the pool can be viewed looking down from 15 feet up on the open Central Courtyard as well as at ground level.

It is from above, especially, that what Michaels calls the "Flemish trompe l'oeil" comes into play.

The colors and patterns are reflected on the circular glass walls surrounding the pool and white pine, so it's difficult to decide at first glance if the walls are painted to match the mosaic floor or where one starts and the other stops. It's an exciting, surrealistic effect.

Michaels stood in the open courtyard looking down into the partially completed pool one bitter cold day last month, savoring the surrealistic effect.

"I had hoped this would happen, but I was afraid to look."

NOT EVERYTHING has gone as planned. The architect's original plans for the called for 12 fountains to spout water into it on the hour like a waterclock.

The number has been reduced to three and building architect William Kessler had the slate rim around the edge shaped at the north edge to resemble the Straits of Mackinac with some of the islands stuck on poles in the pool.

These recent additions weren't in Michaels' painting. The jury on them is still out. But, there's no denying the immense impact of the building and what it stands for.

James Bonadeo sees housing affordability as an issue confronting the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan in the '90s.

Bonadeo marks 2nd BASM term

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Affordability of new housing and sensible growth are shaping up as key issues facing builders in the early 1990s.

That's the assessment of James S. Bonadeo, who this year embarks on an unprecedented second term as president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

Builders often talk about affordable housing — generally defined as a new home for $100,000 or less — but little seems to get done.

"Affordable housing is a tough, tough deal," said Bonadeo, 73, president of Bonadeo Builders in Plymouth. "No one person or agency can be blamed."

"To start off with, land cost $4,000 an acre 15 years ago. Now, it's $15,000 an acre. The cost of water and sewers has all doubled in the last 15 years."

"SOME COMMUNITIES now put in tremendous impact taxes. They call them fees. I call them taxes. I got four permits recently and they were $800 each. They were $100 not too many years ago."

"State law says fees should be used to make inspections. Communities use these as revenue, fund-raisers," he said.

And the buyer pays in the end. "We pass it on. There's no magic to this business."

A selfish attitude on the part of many buyers today affects not only affordable housing but growth in general, Bonadeo said.

"This is really sad. What some communities are saying, 'I got mine — the hell with you.' Young professionals say, 'I've got mine. I don't want anything else here,'" he said.

SO LOCAL government officials are pressured — sometimes even threatened with recall — to pass tough codes with large lot sizes and landscaping requirements that raise the price of houses, Bonadeo said.

Greed also drives up prices. "Too many people look on a house as an ego thing," he said. "What you want is something you can afford to give you what you need — shelter."

A new house can be built now for $100,000 or less, provided that land costs are right, Bonadeo said.

That $100,000 single-story house would contain about 1,100 square feet, three bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths, a combination living room/kitchen/breakfast nook, a two-car garage, a built-in range and a garbage disposal, he said.

Subdivisions with those kinds of houses most likely will arise Downriver where land costs haven't skyrocketed as they have in the northern and western suburbs, he said.

But Bonadeo, like other builders, said municipalities must actively promote such developments.

THAT SPECIFICALLY means minimum lot sizes smaller than an acre or half an acre, and a willingness to lower tap and benefit fees in exchange for a new tract of 300-400 affordable houses added to the tax base.

Bonadeo projected that the federal government will respond to lobbying efforts of the national builders association and establish some kind of house ownership subsidy for buyers within the next few months.

Participation would be limited by income and the price of a house, he predicted, declining to be more specific.

"We've got to have (new) housing for low-income people," Bonadeo said. "Some countries like Denmark have 60-year mortgages — anything that will help low-income people."

Builders don't enjoy that good a reputation among buyers and should do a better job monitoring their own performance, Bonadeo said.

"THEY (BUYERS) look at builders and developers as greedy," he said. "Builders will drive up and instead of driving a pick-up truck, they will drive a Cadillac. Then they tell you how tough it is."

"We want to build good housing. We want to save the environment. We want to save wetlands. We want to save trees," Bonadeo said.

"Sensible growth means not to have one house on top of the other, but it also means we have to get a certain number of homes to an acre."

He pegged that number at four. "We think some communities are getting ridiculous," Bonadeo said. "They're using ordinances to stop building in their communities. We want to show these communities like Rochester, West Bloomfield and Novi that we're not rapists (who) remove all trees and fill in wetlands."

"WE WANT to be good neighbors," he said. Remodeling of existing houses may be the immediate answer for some buyers shut out by new construction costs, Bonadeo said.

"You can take a house 35-40 years old, go in and replace windows, re-do the kitchen, maybe flooring. The shell is solid."

Americans spent $105 billion on remodeling homes in 1988, he said, adding that the southeastern Michigan association has an active remodelers council.

Builders see housing growth

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A panel from the executive board of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan reiterated a commitment to sensible growth Tuesday during a news conference on issues facing the housing industry in 1990.

One speaker projected that housing starts in southeastern Michigan, initially expected to remain flat, would increase by 5 percent with the recent drop in the prime interest rate.

The association also believes that the state Department of Natural Resources has jurisdiction over all wetlands regardless of size so that further restrictive wetland standards contemplated by some local communities like Rochester Hills aren't needed, said BASM's lawyer.

"We are forming a coalition with everyone affected by development and construction such as bankers, real estate brokers, unions, real estate companies — anyone affected by construction — to look at feasible solutions to growth," said James Bonadeo, BASM president.

"Obviously, the builder's association is becoming more active in community affairs than in the past."

BUT SENSIBLE GROWTH apparently is difficult to define in specific circumstances. The panel couldn't or wouldn't cite a single recent project that wasn't sensible.

Yet, there have been plenty of concerns raised about the environment, traffic flow, and overbuilding by opponents to growth in recent years.

"Sensible growth is an outgrowth of planning so we don't have hodge-podge," said Robert Halperin, a BASM vice president.

"We are aware of the need to protect the environment, to protect the balance between nature and civilization," said Bernard Gliberman, BASM secretary. "Builders are prepared to work with reasonable restrictions."

Regional planning agencies have called for directing growth toward existing road/water/sewer infrastructure. That would seem contrary to the trend to building further out in the northern and western suburbs.

"I THINK the future home buyer should have a choice to where he wants to live," Gliberman said. Efforts to curb migration would be unfair given that gas tax funds are used for highway development, he added. "One reason you have development into farmland is due to (housing) density requirements some communities are enforcing," said Irvin H. Yackness, lawyer for the BASM.

The recent decline in the prime rate could mean a 5-percent increase in housing starts over the estimated 12,000 starts in southeastern Michigan last year, Halperin said.

The growth will continue "where it has been" along major corridors like I-275, I-96 and I-94, he said.

Halperin expects things to pick up in Canton, Northville and Plymouth townships now that the sanitary sewage situation has stabilized there. "You should even see some growth in Downriver communities," he added.

Yackness reiterated the association's belief that municipalities should leave regulation of wetlands to the DNR.

Berke joins Morris Real Estate

Steven L. Morris didn't wait long to find a new partner — co-pilot, as he termed it — for his commercial real estate business in Birmingham after amicably splitting with Robert Moon in September.

Jack T. Berke has merged his one-man realty company in Farmington Hills with the Morris Real Estate Group.

"Berke has been a longtime friend and someone I've done business with on a cooperative basis over the years," Morris said. "Jack has a long history of property management. He has strong people skills."

"In every commercial plane at least two pilots are up there," said Morris said. "I think it's good to have someone else's judgment in making decisions today."

Berke acquired a major share of stock in Morris' company as part of the merger. Morris, who bought out Moon's interest, said the company earned commissions of just under $2 million last year.

The Morris Group will employ about a dozen with Berke's arrival. Morris, 41, lives in Bloomfield Hills.

BERKE, 42, a Huntington Woods resident, had been in business for himself since 1986.

Prior to that, he said he managed the Fisher Building and First National Building for Trizec Corp. and managed the RenCen Towers 500-600 for Berger, Lewiston and Smith Realty.

Berke said he's looking forward to joining forces with Morris.

"I find him to be highly professional, energetic, persistent," Berke said. "I'm certainly optimistic with our combined talents we'll present a professional approach, our business will help people and we'll be successful."

Morris recently received a renewal to represent the Ford Fairlane Plaza in Dearborn and received exclusive listing for the Country Club Corporate Park in Farmington Hills.

Morris and Moon established their company seven years ago.

Moon has returned to commercial brokerage duties with Cushman & Wakefield of Michigan since leaving Morris.

Bowman answers think tank criticism of HOST

By Gerald Frenley
staff writer

HOST, the state savings investment program designed for first-time home buyers, is possibly illegal, financially impractical and philosophically unsound, according to a mid-Michigan public policy think tank.

But state treasurer Robert Bowman said the Mackinac Center report released Jan. 4 makes accusations based on a lack of understanding about the program. HOST is a guaranteed investment program in which investors purchase state bonds that offer a variable interest return equivalent to the housing inflation rate. The savings trust created by the deposits will be tax exempt.

The bonds are part of $800 million in quality of life bonds approved by voters in 1988 for environmental and recreational improvements. Forty million dollars has been earmarked for the HOST program.

Those interested in obtaining applications for the program can call the HOST hot line at 1-800-642-4178.

According to Mackinac Center senior policy analyst Gary Wolfram, the program is difficult to assess because the state has been deliberately vague about some of HOST's aspects.

"If the state's intent is for HOST to be a housing program, it is illegal because the state Legislature never gave the administration the authority to set up a housing program," Wolfram said. If HOST is an investment program, the state cannot limit the sale to first-time buyers as much of the program promotion has suggested.

RESTRICTING THE SALE of bonds to first-time home buyers would discriminate against others and limits the bonds' marketability — neither of which is allowed by the bond implementation acts.

Bowman said HOST is an investment program, and although the bond sale is not limited to first-time home buyers, it has been tailored for them.

"It's designed that way, but if someone else wants to purchase the bonds we won't stop them."

It is unlikely that other investors will be interested in the bonds, he said. Current homeowners are already building equity in their homes, and people with money to invest are less likely to purchase the bonds because of the way the program is set up.

Monthly purchases by participants is cumbersome for the average investor, but it will make saving easier for those that have difficulty saving, Bowman said.

"This isn't for everyone," Bowman said. "We're offering a guaranteed rate of return equal to the housing inflation — that may be good for some but not for others."

MACKINAC CENTER'S Wolfram said the program could also be dangerous because the HOST program variable rate bonds are guaranteed to match the state housing inflation rate.

Historically, statewide housing inflation rates have hovered near 8 percent, but a sharp increase in housing inflation could boost those rates considerably, and taxes would need to be diverted to pay the higher interest rates, Wolfram said.

"Should we be put in this position?" Wolfram asked. People should be aware that the state is putting the general fund at risk, he said.

Bowman said the Mackinac Center's hypothetical situation is trying to foment fears. "We've done an empirical analysis of the relation between tax-exempt securities and housing inflation — they've been right on top of each other for 20 years."

Wolfram also called the state's decision to sell the quality of life bonds allocated to HOST program to residents instead of Wall Street questionable. Wolfram said the state could have sold bonds at a lower interest rate on Wall Street and the state's interest indebtedness would have been less.

BOWMAN DISAGREED. Institutional bonds are sold by bond brokers on Wall Street for commission. "We're saving money by cutting out the middle man."

Bowman also said institutional bonds pay the same or a higher interest rate than the state expects to pay HOST participants. "So if we're going to pay the interest, why not let the people of Michigan benefit from it?"

Greg Kaza, Mackinac Center's vice president for policy research, said the basic underpinnings his group's argument is state government has no business guaranteeing home ownership loans.

"What's next? Is the state going to help you finance a new car or swimming pool?" Kaza asked. "Part of our argument is based on a philosophical objection to the program."

In this, Bowman agreed, saying it comes down to differing philosophies. "We believe there is nothing wrong with the government helping people to buy a home; they believe that government should be involved in people's lives as little as possible."

Bowman said much of the Mackinac Center's argument bandied about in the media last week — that only buyers in upscale areas will benefit from the program — is based on incorrect information.

"THEIR FUNDAMENTAL premise is that different people will get different returns," Bowman said. "Everyone gets the same rate of return."

In the program's earlier stages, the state considered tying the interest return to local housing inflation rates, but the program was changed to make it more workable, Bowman said.

Those interested in purchasing a home in an area with a higher rate of inflation will make larger principal payments, but will receive the same interest return as a person who intends to purchase in an area with lower housing inflation.

Those buying in areas with more costly homes will purchase more bonds and get the same rate of interest. They will get a larger return, but they will also make a larger investment.

"The state will still pay the same amount of dollars on the same amount of bonds regardless of who holds them."

The only exception — and this is still subject to change — is if a person does not purchase a home or withdraws from the program early. Under the current program the state will only guarantee an investment return equal to one-year tax exempt securities.

But Bowman added the return on one-year tax exempt securities and the housing inflation rate have historically been the same.

When the bonds are sold, Bowman said investors will know what they're paying for and what the rules will be. The HOST program has been gradually refined from its earlier incarnations and will continue to be refined.

The program's concept was deliberately written with some gray areas so the state could refine the program over time, Bowman said, adding there was some fear that HOST could be abused.

As the program gets closer to implementation, Bowman said these gray areas will be further clarified.

ELEGANT LIVING IN A NATURAL WOODED SETTING

Kitchens will serve as social hub

By Kate Ennis
special writer

The old saying, "No matter where I serve my guests, they seem to like my kitchen the best," is being taken to heart by architects, interior designers and appliance manufacturers as they look ahead to the coming decade.

Recent trends in kitchen design, such as built-in eating areas and adjoining living rooms, indicate that kitchens will increasingly serve as the social hub of the household, according to Ann Patterson, editor of Kitchens & Bathrooms magazine.

As a result, kitchens will be designed to accommodate more than one chef. Patterson points to the rise of kitchen islands and peninsulas that increase the surface area for food preparation and additional sinks and cooktops.

"If you're entertaining and your spouse wants to help, that island will have a second sink," she says.

Working couples seeking time with their children will demand designs that don't cut them off from the family. Joy Schrage, a home economist with Whirlpool, suggests that the ideal home will have laundry appliances in the kitchen rather than the basement "so you can toss in a load while you're cooking."

Architect Barry Sugarman, who has his own firm in Miami, predicts that the kitchen increasingly will become a communications center for the household where messages, stored electronically, will be left and received by members of the family as they pursue their work and leisure schedules. The kitchen he envisions will have a computer that contains data on kitchen inventory and accounts.

"EVERY FOOD item will have a bar chart you run past your computer that will order it for you directly from the store. The store will then deliver it to your home," Sugarman predicts.

"Microwave ovens can be made to read bar codes on food packages so that the cooking time and temperature are automatically entered. Microwaves can also be equipped with sensors that detect moisture levels in food and shut off when the food is cooked, thus saving energy.

Assuming that water conservation may be a major issue in the '90s, Whirlpool has developed technology to recycle wastewater from clothes washers and dishwasher for reuse.

This kitchen contains many of the design features predicted for the 1990s, including an island for eating and food preparation. To maximize space and reduce clutter, appliances are concealed by an appliance garage (center). The rounded counter (right) pulls out onto a spice rack. Designers are predicting that kitchens will combine the functions of food preparation and family and social gathering and will be used as information centers.

Plymouth streets lined with sculpture

From the early hours of Thursday, Jan. 11, through Sunday, Jan. 21, downtown Plymouth will be transformed into an ice kingdom during the annual Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Ice carvings fashioned by artists from throughout the United States and Canada are expected to draw nearly half a million visitors to Plymouth.

The carvers will use about 400,000 pounds of ice as they ply their trade in Kellogg Park.

The carvers use chisels and chain-saws to sculpt the ice that will be put on display at 5 a.m. Thursday. Street sculptures will be placed atop bunting-draped pedestals lining Main Street, Penniman, Ann Arbor Trail, Forest and streets throughout Old Village.

From 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. Saturday, 60 student carvers from Michigan, Illinois, Montana, Texas, Florida, Colorado, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York will compete in The Gathering in Kellogg Park, said Pam Kosteva, executive director of the festival.

Saturday's competition has been closed. "There's a waiting list to participate," Kosteva said.

On Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 13-14, radio station WOMC will broadcast live from Fred Hill's Haberdashers on Main Street.

On Monday, Jan. 15, more ice will be delivered, and more sculptures carved.

THE 82ND AIRBORNE DIVISION All-American Chorus of Fort Bragg, N.C. will highlight Tuesday's festivities. Performance times and locations weren't final at press time, but coordinators were trying to schedule two shows at the Penn Theatre, as well as an evening performance in the bandshell in Kellogg Park.

Appearing in their maroon berets, ascots, uniforms and spit-shined jump boots, the 27 paratroopers often sing their repertoire of patriotic and contemporary songs at pre-game or half-time shows at professional and college football and baseball games.

The non-profit group has performed for the governors of more than 20 states, senators and Congressmen, civilian and military dignitaries.

On Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 17-18, still more ice sculptures will be built, and on Friday, more street sculptures will go up.

PROFESSIONAL CARVERS will compete in the Ice Carving Classic Qualifier beginning at 6:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 19, at a place to be determined.

Professional carving competition gets under way beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 20 at The Gathering.

Spectators delight

The weather can sometimes be troublesome, but even when things get a bit soggy instead of icy, there's plenty to see at the festival. At right, crowds pass by an ice castle that carvers put together for Kellogg Park.

Judging will begin at noon.

Festival activities will wrap up Sunday. WSDS and WAAM radio stations will broadcast live from downtown Plymouth throughout the day.

So bundle up and shuffle over to the eighth annual Sculpture Spectacular. Weather permitting, you'll see the results of efforts put forth by 45 Plymouth folks, 40 or 50 corporations, and sponsors who donated $135,000 to stage the event. The city of Plymouth is kicking in $20,000 in services for the ice fest, the theme of which is "Local-Motion: Laying the Tracks for the Future."

Oh yeah, don't worry about getting hungry or thirsty out there. Plenty of hot chocolate and hot dogs will be on hand.

Ice sculpture helps teach the art form

One of the best know carvers on the ice festival circuit has changed jobs. Richard Teeple of Livonia, who formerly directed the culinary arts program at Franklin High School in Livonia, is now hospitality and culinary arts instructor at Henry Ford Community College. He started the job in September.

Well-known in the metropolitan area for his ice-carving talent, Teeple, who has 15 years experience as an ice sculptor, carves ice for a variety of charity events including fund-raisers for Children's Hospital and the American Cancer Society as well as for private parties.

For the past seven years, Teeple has been involved with the Plymouth Community Ice Sculpture Spectacular as an artist, judge and organizer.

He also brings his ice carving and festival planning expertise each year to Birmingham's Winterfest and Dearborn's Christmas Sing-Along.

Teeple believes that ice carving, which originated in Japan, is becoming a lost art and so he is anxious to teach it to his students. He also spends some of his spare time teaching ice carving to fellow chefs in the area.

To help preserve this form of art, Teeple is in the process of forming a student ice carving club at HFCC.

This fall, the hospitality program sponsored a student pumpkin carving contest, initiated Friday ethnic theme buffets including a lavish Oktoberfest luncheon, and converted the HFCC kitchen into a test site for a cookie baking contest.

Teeple has added new items to the college's Gate Room restaurant menu, including low calorie, heart smart dishes, a daily specialty of the college, market stand and sandwich board selections.

Teeple earned a bachelor's degree in food management from Madonna College and an associate degree in culinary arts from Schoolcraft College. He is working on a master's degree in educational leadership at Eastern Michigan University where he is attending on a scholarship sponsored by the National Restaurant Association.

Teeple is a certified culinary educator by the American Culinary Chef's Association and has studied under some of the Detroit area's master chefs, including Mjos Cihelka of the Golden Mushroom and Leopold Schall of the Machus Red Fox.

He also has trained at the Detroit Athletic Club and has worked for the Chuck Muer Corporation.

BEFORE COMING to Henry Ford Community College in Dearborn, Teeple was culinary arts director for Livonia Public Schools for 11 years.

As director, he was responsible for coordinating the high school culinary art programs.
