Commission to name new manager Monday

By Kevin Brown staff writer

A new city manager should be named Monday by Plymouth's seven city commis-

The city commission is scheduled to choose one of four finalists for the post, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday in a special commission meeting at city hall, 201 S.

To help them make that choice, the finalists are scheduled to face questions from commissioners in separate 14-hour sessions beginning at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

Those sessions, also scheduled at city hall, are open to public viewing but not to questions from residents.

The list of finalists is William Graham, acting city manager, John Strutner, community service representative for the Virginia Department of Economic Development; Jerome Kisscorni, city manager of Tecumseh, Mich.; and Randy Byrne, city manager of Grand Blanc.

After the interviews, interview consultant Rod Bartell will meet with a selection committee which includes three city commissioners, to review the interviews, said committee member Mayor Dennis Bila.

'At that point, we'll probably see if we could make a recommendation," Bila said. 'Try to choose one candidate to recommend to the full commission on Monday.

He added that the selection committee possibly won't agree on one candidate to recommend to the full commission.

Graham's interview is scheduled for 8:30-10 a.m. Byrne is scheduled for 10-11:30 a.m.; Kisscorni for noon to 1:30 p.m. and Strutner for 1:30-3 p.m.

During the first half of each interview session, Bartell will question the candidate. During the second half, commissioners will question candidates.

Several commissioners have said they're looking for a progressive thinker and a doer, with a good financial background.

The city manager is responsible for dayto-day municipal operations, implementing policy set by the commission and recommending an annual city budget.

Several city employee unions, including those representing police, firefighters and public works, have expressed support for

Trash taxing finances

Higher dump fees could force city to trim budget

By Kevin Brown staff writer

To keep the city of Plymouth from going roughly $250,000-$275,000 in debt, city department heads are planning budget cuts. The action, directed by Acting City Manager William Graham, was sparked mainly by a 50 percent increase in trash dumping fees announced in October by the dump where the city takes residehts' trash.

And come summer, residents for the first time could be assessed user o pay for continuing incre in dump fees passed on to the city.

Those increases would likely increase what average residents pay now for trash dumping - $8.43 per month - to $12 per month, Graham said.

While city officials planned to spend $475,000 on trash dumping fees, the increase - from $6 to $9 per cubic yard - will force the city to spend $675,000, Graham said. The deficit was projected by city auditors and administration for the fiscal year ending June 30.

Adding that the the city's levy of 2.3 mills for garbage collection does not raise enough money to keep up with dump fee increases, Graham suggested "perhaps eliminating the millage for refuse disposal and going to a user fee."

The acting city manager said that today he would begin reviewing budget cuts in each department.

'New equipment purchases could be put off," he said, adding attendance at meetings and conferences would also be reduced.

Ken Vogress, public works superintendent, said tree trimming and repairs of street joints would be delayed, saving $71,000 from his budg-

Graham said another dumping rate increase, at the Arbor Hills Landfill in Salem Township used by the city, is likely in late spring or early summer.

Graham said a user fee seems the best way to meet the increases, "until somebody decides to regulate these guys (dump owners).'

Overcrowding could change boundaries

By C.L. Rugenstein staff writer

The attendance boundaries of schools could be changed Monday when the Plymouth-Canton school board looks at a plan proposed by school administrators.

The proposed plan would affect about 250 students - 18 kindergarten students at Canton's Hoben Elementary, 46 ninth graders districtwide, and 160 students at West and Pioneer Middle Schools.

The board said in its Housing Task Force report that the changes are necessary to ease crowding in the two middle schools, which house four grades - sixth through ninth - instead of the usual sixth through eighth.

According to the report, student capacity at West is 750-850. Current enrollment is 904. Pioneer capacity is 825, with an enrollment of 918.

If the proposals are approved, students from those two schools and new Pioneer-West sixth graders would be shifted to Central and Lowell Middle Schools. Central has room for 900 students, but only 581 are enrolled.

Egli said one Task Force solution is to send all ninth graders to Plymouth-Salem and Canton high schools, and build a new classroom building. That could be as much as three years

Another proposal was to put portable classrooms at the high schools temporarily.

But while the board could approve the plan, which received stiff opposition from parents at two public hearings. Dean Swartzwelter, board president, said the board could opt to delay taking action until looking at the plan in more detail. He said the board could conduct a workshop on the proposed changes.

School administrators say the plan is necessary to relieve what they say is overcrowding at the two middle

The school district held two public hearings on the plan, the most recent on Monday at Hoben Elementary School, which was attended by more than 100 persons.

Swartzwelter said the final plan doesn't have to be the same as the one put together by a group of school administrators and parents called the Housing Task Force.

The proposed plan would affect about 250 students — 18 kindergarten students at Canton's Hoben Elementary, 46 ninth graders district-wide, and 160 students at West and Ploness Middle Schools.

He said the Task Force recommendations did not necessarily reflect the board's position.

students who'd be affected by the changes - didn't like the proposals.

A group of seven students from Pioneer Middle School brought a petition with several hundred signatures, asking the board not to move them. And one parent team presented an alternative to the Task Force's boundary changes. (See related sto-

Richard Parrish, of the Embassy Square subdivision, called the board's plan "gerrymandering."

Parrish's children would be reassigned from Pioneer Middle School to Lowell.

'I'm adding my son's signature to the petition," he told the board. "We are newcomers to Canton and my son's been in three schools in three years. The children do have the right to maintain their school spirit instead of being shuffled around like old socks. Redistricting just doesn't seem fair."

Most parents expressed concern that another move would be stressful to the children, a point made in the petition drafted by Damey Slavens, 12, which he read at the meeting.

The petition said in part: "I come here today with a voice from many others, who might be going to Lowell the next school year. We hope our word will help you understand our reasoning. We wish not to leave Pioneer Middle School because we do not want to leave our friends, the teachers we have learned to know and trust, and other people who care for us, and we care for them too."

Fire destroys police car; no injuries

Plymouth Township police car burned Monday, after the engine caught fire.

The fire occurred at about 3 p.m., as Officer Tom Thompson was driv-ing his patrol car north on Sheldon near the Ford Motor Co. plant, Police Chief Carl Berry said.

After noticing flames coming out of the dashboard, Thompson pulled the patrol car into a plant parking area, where firefighters were called to put out the fire, police said.

Berry said the car was destroyed.

DRUNE DRIVENG: A police offi-cer told a Plymouth man it would be per to take a cab home rather than risk arrest for drusk driving, but the man elected to drive anyway. And after spending Saturday night in jail, the man, 25, now faces drusk driving charges.

The incident started just after 2 a.m. Saturday, when a Plymouth Township police office was called to a bar on Plymouth Road. There, two men were trying to convince a third not to drive, as he had been

The man decided not to drive, and went back inside the har, the police report stated. The officer parked across the street, and several minutes later the man got into his car, and began driving east on Plymouth Road "at a high rate of speed," the report stated.

The man continued to weave as he drove and almost struck a car westbound on Plymouth Road, then he was stopped and arrested for drunk driving, police said.

MICHIGAN changed its reading test this year, putting less stress on individual skills such as identifying root words, prefixes and suffixes. Instead, greater emphasis is placed on how well students comprehend passages they read.

"Questions are more detailed and they cover a longer passage of the material," state schools spokeswoman Lynne Estell said.

Some elements of the old test remain and are now considered to define "basic" reading skills. Stu-dents did well on basic skills questions, but not as well on the newer questions, defining "essential" reading skills, Bernis said.

Some 88.8 percent of all high school sophomores met or exceeded basic reading skills on last fall's Michigan Educational Assessment Program tests - almost a 7.5 percent increase from one year ago.

Fourth graders, at 89.4 percent and seventh graders, at 89.4 percent, showed similar increases.

A MUCH LOWER percentage of each grade level met minimum standards on the new, tougher essential skills reading test: 35.8 percent of fourth graders, 33.1 percent of seventh graders and 28.6 percent of 10th graders.

While disappointed, Bemis said the lower scores on technical reading material were no cause for panic, provided schools increasingly incorporate technical material in their classrooms. Local school officials also expressed concern over reading scores. Local scores for mathematics, the essential skills reading test and the new science test are con-

Court wins kudos for new efficiency

By Tom Henderson staff writer

The Wayne County Circuit Court, once known for its backlogs, twoyear delays in trying civil cases and a casual work ethic by some of its judges, has received praise in a national publication for its dramatic turnaround in the last four years.

"Something important is happening in the Wayne County Circuit Court . . . something that deserves attention from everyone interested in the reduction of litigation cost and delay," the Judges Journal, a publication of the American Bar Association, said in its fall issue.

What has happened, said court administrator K. Kent Batty, is that the pending civil caseload has dropped by 33 percent since 1985, the median time to dispose of cases has dropped from 21 months to 13 months and the number of civil cases pending for more than two years as dropped from 17,000 to fewer than 3,000.

BATTY CREDITED much of the improvement to a new method of assigning cases to judges, the individual-calendar method, where a particular judge handles all aspects of a case from start to finish and is assigned a certain docket of cases.

The court began phasing in the system in July 1986; the last seven of the 35 judges in the court will go on the system on Oct. 1 of this year.

Formerly, the court operated on a master calendar. Judges in that system aren't assigned a specific docket and different judges handle each case. Different motions in the same case, for example, were assigned to whatever judges were available the day the particular motion was made.

"In theory, the master calendar makes better use of the judges' time," Batty said.

sponsible or slow judges did less than their share. Efficient judges carried an excessive burden.

"For, the master calendar to be successful, you have to have a successful group psychology. The whole bench has to be enthusiastic about processing cases as a whole," Batty

No individual judge had an incentive to work hard. Some judges in the court acquired reputations for coming to work late, taking long lunches and leaving early, Batty said.

Now, "judges know a case isn't going to go away unless they make it go away" by working on it, Batty said. "The judges have responded in a marvelous way and knuckled down," he said.

THE JOURNAL praised Batty and Chief Judge Richard C. Kauf-

"Wayne County circuit court judges and staff can rightly feel that they have given something back to the justice system and to the people of Wayne County," it said.

Blanchard, McNamara stress solvency

By Wayne Peel staff writer

ville use,

nary, lore. Democrats touting fiscal responsibility? Believe it — at least in Wayne County.

The event was an announcement Wednesday regarding a bond upgrade for the county, but both Gov. James Blanchard and Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara used the occasion to stress state and local debt-busting.

Sounding a theme that could become common to his as-yet unannounced re-election hid, the gover nor compared Michigan's balance budget with the federal govern

"The federal budget is awash in red ink," Blanchard said. "The good news is we are solvent."

IF THE federal budget were balanced, the governor said, Michigan would stand to receive a "solvency dividend" of $7 billion — roughly equal general operating budget though he didn't specify how the money would be derived.

McNamara, perhaps sounding a theme for his own re-election campaign, praised Blachard for his help in the county's 1987 financial bailout, but stressed the county was now solid financially.

Recent upgrade of county jail bonds to investment level was proof, McNamara said.

Blanchard used his Detroit appearance to promote his new budget — scheduled for unveiling today in Lansing.

"We'll debate, and that's healthy,"

Blanchard said. "But let no one play politics with Michigan's financial strength."

The irony of both men talking solvency in a city grappling with a massive budget deficit wasn't lost on reporters, but Blanchard said state government "stands ready to work with Detroit" to help the city balance its own budget.

At the same time, he predicted a recent court ruling invalidating a city utilities tax would be overturn-heavy road traffic produced the undesired result: pot holes.

No figures were available for how many of the gaps were filled by the county. Hogan, however, said he expected this year's figure to at least equal last year when the county filled an estimated 133,000 pot holes.

A special quick-sealing asphalt mix, designed to accommodate cold winter temperatures, is used to patch county roadways. Last winter, the county used more than 4,000 tons of the stuff.

The county is restricting truck trafic on some roads to prevent pot holes from piling up.

It's been a busy two months for county road workers because January was as mild as December was bitter. County road crews said goodbye to the 1980s by spreading a record 65 million tons of salt to keep roads passable.

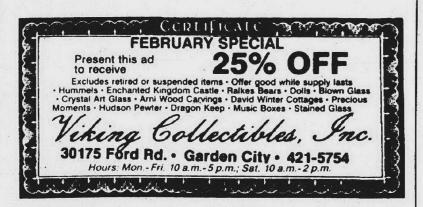

Now, all they have to do is wait until spring - when pot hole season begins all over again.

Senate to vote on consent bill

By Tim Richard staff writer

The Michigan Senate next pequiring parental consent for a misor girl to obtain an abortion.

The Senate Human Resources Committee Tuesday reported out the bill on a 4-1 vote after removing a so-called "suicide amendment."

"I moved to delete the loophole for alleged suicide risks," said vice chair R. Robert Geake, R-Northville. That House-passed amendment would have allowed a girl to obtain an abortion without the consent of a parent or a probate court if a psychologist or psychiatrist certified she might commit suicide rather than approach a parent or a judge. "No responsible person would suggest that parents should not be informed when their children are in trouble due to drug abuse. Why should pregnancy be any different?" Geake said.

THE MEASURE, House Bill 5013, is likely to be passed overwhelmingly. The Senate adopted a similar measure last fall.

The bill then would go back to the House for concurrence in removal of nor refuse to give their consent to the suicide clause. "I hope we'll have a consensus bill on the way to the governor in a week," said Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville, committee chair.

He expects a veto by Gov. James Blanchard but said, "Every attempt will be made to override it (with a two-thirds vote of both chambers)."

Dillingham doubted four other abortion-regulation bills would be taken up this year - for example, to prohibit abortions in state-owned hospitals.

'My feeling is that, given the current makeup of the Legislature especially the House - the parental consent bill is by far the issue most passable and overrideable," said Dillingham, a longtime foe of abor-

Grant reduction forces cuts in abuse prevention

David C. Mills, executive director of the Children's Trust Fund for the Prevention of Child Abuse, has aced across-the-board cuts in more than 100 child-abuse-prevention programs throughout Michi-

The cuts were made necessary by a reduction in federal money received through the Department of Health and Human Services.

This action is taken most reluctantly. We have explored many other options and tried to deal with the cut without reducing grants. Unfortunately, we are left with no viable alternative," said Mills.

First word of the possible cuts came in October when CTF received notification of a 62 percent reduction in a challenge grant which had in past years been awarded by federal legislation to all states with Children's Trust Funds for child-abuse-prevention

Michigan's grant in past years has been $496,000. This year it was cut to $190,000

Included in the groups that will receive cuts are local child-abuseprevention councils in 67 Michigan counties as well as these programs which are providing child-abuseprevention services: Association for Retarded Citizens/Oakland County, Common Ground, Oakland Community Human Services, Inc., Mercy Hospital & Health Services of Detroit, Wayne County Interme-diate School District, YMCA of North Oakland County-Pontiac Branch, YMCA of Western Wayne County YMCA-Sexual Assault Program, Lula Belle Stewart Center Inc. in Wayne, Family Service of Detroit and Wayne

"These cuts will definitely hurt our ability to provide critical childabuse-prevention programs in Michigan. And, in addition, this puts a great deal more pressure on our need to increase the amount of money we raise through the CTF checkoff. To date, we have never had more than 7 percent of eligible taxpayers donate," said Mills.

CTF is an independent, non-profit agency established in 1982 as a permanent source of funding for local programs throughout the state that work to prevent child abuse and neglect. The majority of support for CTF comes from check-off donations from the Michigan income tax return

Boundaries

Board should reject the plan

MONDAY THE Plymouth-Canton School Board will take a look at making changes to school boundaries which would affect where elementary and middle school students attend classes.

Making such changes is always controversial because it means that the daily routines of hundreds of children and parents are changed.

Working parents often arrange their days around getting their kids to school, so when they trave to put their kids on a school bus a half hour earlier, or later, their day changes.

Because of that, we hope the school board doesn't take action on the boundary change proposal on Monday.

There are still too many objections to the plan. And a vote to adopt the plan would mean forcing it on parents who haven't yet accepted it.

Parents need more time to digest the information and school officials need to do a better job of explaining themselves. School officials are too caught up in their own bureaucratic language and are unable to communicate well with par-

School officials rarely do a good job of giving people the straight facts, especially when it comes to what they call "housing," which really means what school your kid will be going to.

HOWEVER, WE DO understand the problem faced by the district. Kids don't come in neat packages. And that's what the school district needs to communicate.

But they need to do it with understanding and not just charts and graphs. They need to assuage the concerns of parents who are worried about the uprooting of their children when they are moved from one school to another.

Part of that uprooting means kids will be crossing streets they haven't crossed before and dealing with a new cast of teachers.

Those are big changes for kids to deal with. On the other hand, school officials can't control where people with school-age children are going to live. Neighborhoods change in character and subdivisions pop up in fields. The school buildings are located in the older, more established neighborhoods, and school officials can't move those buildings.

Parents should acknowledge the dilemma faced by school officials: Either send some kids packing for other schools or face overcrowding.

Either way, school district officials are going to incur the wrath of parents.

BUT THAT COULD be muted by the board, if it were to delay approval of the boundary changes and incorporate some of the public's ideas into the final plan:

To us that means there's a compromise plan that the school board should strive to find.

There are some good ideas in the community that could be incorporated. Annette Remsburg, of Plymouth, suggested at a recent public hearing on the issue that a class size review board be appointed to deal with boundary changes. The creation of such a board could help educate the public about the problems faced by the district and be a vehicle to carry ideas back to the school

Also, Richard Moyer, a member of the Plymouth Planning Commission and a professor of science education, has a school boundary plan of his own that should be looked at the school board. Moyer proposed that plan at a public hearing held this week.

The school board should work with people like Moyer and Remsburg to come up with a compromise plan that works for the district and parents. If the board ignores ideas that surfaced at the public hearing, it isn't doing its job. It becomes just a rubber stamp for the school administra-

SUDDATE BACK!!

No one protests this holiday

SHHHH! DON'T tell anybody, but one of the biggest religious holidays of the year is almost here and the schools are celebrating it like crazy.

So far as I can tell, no one is objecting. I haven't heard about any protests, any angry parents attending school board meetings or running letter-writing campaigns.

No one, from what I have read, has demanded that the decorations come down or that gift exchanges be banned. And if no one else is going to say anything, I'm certainly not going to make an issue of it.

The holiday, of course, is Valentine's Day . . . no, let's be precise it's SAINT Valentine's Day. And it's one of the year's major celebra-

Not to the church, of course. It's not exactly a major feast day. But if you think it's not a big deal, just ask the candy makers and the greeting card peddlers.

Check out the schools where, in some cases, exchanging valentines has been turned into a class project.

BUT THIS day for lovers is of purely Christian origin and came about in much the same way that the Christmas celebrations started.

At least as early as the Fourth Century B.C., the Romans celebrated a fertility ritual dedicated to the pagan god Lupercus.

After the early Christian church was established, the Lupercian festival was still going strong and the church fathers wanted to find some way to usurp it with a Christian cer-

Looking around for a saint that had some connection with lovers, they zeroed in on Valentine. He had had the misfortune - or bad judgment - to enrage the mad emperor Claudius II and, in February of the year 270, he was beaten, stoned and But before he was executed, according to legend, he fell in love with the blind daughter of his jailer, miraculously cured her blindness and left her a farewell message which he signed "From Your Valen-So, in the 5th Century, Pope Gelasius outlawed the Lupercian festival and substituted a similar celebration whose patron saint was Valentine. The exchange of cards on this day apparently grew out of the Lupercian practice of holding a lottery in which young men drew the names of young women who were "assigned" to them for a year. In the early Valentine celebrations the names of saints were substituted for the women and somewhere along the line the drawing of names evolved into the exchange of cards.

OF COURSE the modern day popularity of the celebration owes much to the later saints. Hallmark and Russell Stover, but the fact remains that all of those valentines being passed around in the classroom symbolically represent the good saint's farewell note to his lover

Maybe no one is complaining about all of this because enough of the pagan trappings remain to cloud the religious nature of the holiday. Or maybe since the churches don't really celebrate it, the schools figure it's fair game. I don't know.

But I do know that next month we're going to be celebrating another saint's day, and if you send your kid off to school wearing green you'll be paying homage to good old Saint Patrick, who, incidentally, was

My wife - my significant Polish other - always refused to wear any thing green to school on this festige occasion because she was Polish, and Irish, and boy, did she get in trouble with the nuns over that.

But except for an occasional trable-maker like her, I've heard to protests over the public celebration of this Christian holiday, either.

It's all mighty confusing to me But if nobody else is protesting. In not going to say anything.

Cupid's target

Valentine's Day picks, pans

7 ALENTINE'S DAY is on its way, that means it's time to send out a big, red heart to those who did the right thing in 1989 — and plenty of people did just that, climbing on the bandwagon for child care, recycling and other pressing social issues.

But why stop there, we figured. Why not send a few pointed barbs the way of those who didn't do right by themselves or their communities last year. After all, Cupid's arrow can sting, too. First, the good stuff.

Our Valentines go to:

Wayne County Government. The county started an on-site child care facility at the county's downtown' Detroit office building. The facility provides both play and educational opportunities for children of county workers.

Livonia, Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton. All these communities either developed or expanded recycling efforts, taking a small step toward meeting one of the nation's biggest problems - trash disposal - at the turn of the decade. A big heart also goes to the Conference of Western Wayne, a multi-community group considering regional recycling.

Rouge River rescuers. Though time has dulled some of the event's luster - or at least its publicity - hundreds of area residents continued to roll up their sleeves last June, doing their part to help clean Michigan's most polluted river.

Wayne-Westland Schools. The board named the district's first-ever black board member, Leonard Posey, to fill a board vacancy.

The Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular, Inc. The group pulled the money together to keep the ice festival going after it appeared the festival was going down the drain.

Police officers helping youths fight drug abuse. While everyone involved can take a bow, this heart is hand-delivered to those involved in the Drug Abuse Resistance Education Program in the Livonia Public Schools and Clarenceville

It's time to send out a big, red heart to those who did the right thing in 1989 . . . and a few pointed barbs the way of those who didn't do right by themselves or their communities last year.

Darts go to:

The Central Wayne Sanitation Authority. Despite cleaning up its act with regard to air pollution, the incinerator group - including Westland and Garden City - continues to send its ash to an unlined landfill, with no guarantee the toxic ash isn't contaminating local ground water.

Livonia City Treasurer Elaine Tuttle - Whose tardy transactions cost the city an estimated $458,000 in lost interest since 1986.

Livonia City Hall's hair-splitters. While we're on the subject, we also send a dart to those who would deny sit-down facilities for take-out pizza parlors, but allow them for ice cream and yogurt Detroit Edison. Edison unmercifully scalps trees to provide clearance for over-head wires, instead of burying the wires and saving the trees.

Westland Center. The giant shopping mall canceled a planned used book sale after discovering it was sponsored by a pro-life organization, setting a bad precedent no matter which side of the abortion issue you take.

CSX railroad. The railroad keeps traffic tied up at their crossings. Plymouth Police have repeatedly cited the railroad for keeping traffic tied up longer than allowed.

Teacher perpetuates King's dream

I am writing in response to Judith Doner Berne's Jan. 18 article "Children must know about King's Dream." The article states that four years ago not much was done in our communities to perpetuate the memory of Martin Luther King and "his dream." It was noted that "no school districts other than Southfield paid much tribute to King," and that happily this was now changing, four

I personally would like to applaud the efforts of Mrs. Py Wolfe, a first grade teacher at Eastover Elementary school in Bloomfield Hills. When my 6-year-old daughter came home Monday after school she was brimming with enthusiasm, telling me that she learned about a "great man, Martin Luther King Jr."

Hillary drew one picture depicting a family sitting in church with King on a pulpit preaching, while Martin Luther King Jr. sat listening to his daddy preach. "I'll talk like that he said, and use those big words too. I'll make folks feel good inside." Little Martin's words came true.

She also had a mimeo leaflet that the children were given to color, informing them about his working in non-violent ways, that he was the second black to win the Nobel Peace prise, about Coretta S. King, about equality and much more.

Mrs. Wolfe did an excellent job in teaching the children and filling them with enthusiasm for this great American in a way that they won't

Teachers pay is too high

According to the papers, an early settlement on the teachers pact is

If I were a teacher, I would be delighted.

The last contract called for an annual raise of seven percent a year. A teacher making $30,000 two years ago will now be making $36,750.00 in the last year of the contract.

Add another 22 % percent over the next three years and they will make $45,018.75 in the final year of the contract. A teacher at the top of the scale now making $46,403.00 will be making $56,843.75 in the final year of the contract.

Since teacher salaries are about 85 percent of the budget, I hope the taxpayers are prepared to keep voting for millage increases.

I'm old enough to have witnessed a couple of real estate downturns and I wonder if the assessor will lower the values to where they real-

I can't see the teachers coming down, so by the year 2000 I expect the U.S. economy will be like Mexico and Brazil. We'll have play money with lots of zeros on the money. Think about it.

Just a pinch

A master at budget leverage

GOV. JIM Blanchard doesn't try to make drastic changes in Michigan government. His style is to look for a few loose dollars and leverage them into showcase efforts at improving public services.

Not everyone agrees with Blanchard's cautious approach, as I learned at a recent conference of community college trustees.

The governor's 1990 state of the state message proposed a plan of "teaching excellence" awards to community college instructors. There already is a system of such grants to faculty at four-year uni-

If you know our 29 community colleges, you know that teaching is the name of their game. These faculty aren't researchers or presidential advisers. They teach. Their students, frequently people with gray locks and bifocals, have knocked around a bit and are trying to re-enter the economic world at a higher skill

BLANCHARD PROPOSES awards of $2,500 each to 40 faculty. That's one per college, with 11 colleges getting two grants or more.

Added up, it's $100,000, or one-73,000th of his anticipated $7.3 billion state budget.

Wouldn't it be smarter just to plunk that pot into the overall community college aid bill? I asked Jim Verdier, the new deputy budget director who was pinch-hitting as speaker for director Shelby Solomon.

"No. You get a lot of leverage" with a system of prize grants, replied Verdier, a former faculty member at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.

Leverage? "Yes, for every person selected, many others are nominated. And it would be a continuing thing, year after year," he said. In sum, Blanchard intends to use a pinch of the budget to focus a lot of attention on quality teaching.

No doubt he'll want to call it a "Governor's Teaching Incentive" program rather than let the State Board of Education distribute the funds. His style is to put his office's seal on new and popular programs for the middle class. Blanchard would croak if anyone suggested naming (say) a prison or a social services office after him.

AS FOR overall community college funding, Verdier said, "The budget is a tight one . . . something on the order of a 5 percent growth in

He gave no details. He said several departments this year wound up 'underfunded" - social services, mental health, prisons. "The governor is inclined to have education not bear a share of that underfunding,"

In other words, community colleges will be raised very little beyond the rate of inflation, and probably no more percentagewise than the 15 universities.

That irritated Oakland Community College trustee David Hackett of Rochester Hills. "Who provides most

A 25-YEAR veteran trustee from a southwestern Michigan college complained that for seven years the state has had a formula to fund community colleges, but it has never fully funded the formula.

And as for Verdier's prediction of a "tight" budget, the trustee said, "I never remember a year when they said 'it's a great year,'

Replied Verdier: "I don't believe we have the resources," estimating full funding at $25 million more.

That, by my calculation, is $24.9 million more than Blanchard's proposed gubernatorial grants to outstanding faculty.

But that is Blanchard's style. Don't try to wring gallons from the budget, despite our seven consecutive years of economic growth and 700,000 new jobs. Administer a few drops, carefully, to 40 faculty a year. And do it with a maximum of gubernatorial publicity.

Fur flying to precede teacher certification sounds similar to what Certified Public Accountants and lawyers go through to enter their profession. As a teacher, I've heard talk of national certification many times over the year. Is this present movement for real? It sound good but do you think it will become a reality?

A: Yes. For several reasons First, enough has been written regarding other countries ability to out perform our students in many subjects areas i.e. science and math. Whether it is the teachers fault, the parents' fault, administration or an over-all societal problem is open to debate. The lack of our students being able to compete with other countries, at least on standardized test, is a continuing national con-

Second, the Carnegie Foundation along with the Du Pont and the Xerox corps. have funished $50 million in "seed money" for the National Teachers Certification Committee to develop specific criteria, primarily a comprehensive teacher literacy and knowledge of their subject test. Another $25 million for the certification program is working its way through Congress. Also a plan to charge each teacher $35-$50 to take the certification test is built in to keep the program alive. So the national teacher certification committee has money . . . and it takes money to pull off any major change in education.

Third, American Federation of Teachers president Albert Shanker was the leading force and indeed proposed the national teacher certification program in 1985. Both Shanker and counterpart Keith Geiger. president of the National Education Association, have stated their support for a National Board for Teacher Certification. To say the least, it should be noted that Shanker's AFT and the NEA have not always agreed on issues over the years, but they do

Finally, the National Teacher Certification Board is composed prima-rily of teachers with some administrators, university professors, citizens and business leaders included. So we have money, AFT and NEA support and a working committee dominated by teachers setting the

However, nothing is simple. There will be fur flying before the program is put in place by its target date of

What are the problems? A future teacher would not have to graduate from a college of education under this plan. A liberal arts college graduate with a major in math would be eligible to teach without going through the college of education. After three years of successful teaching the new téacher would be eligible for certification.

This is a slap in the face to every college of education in the United States that believes there is more to teaching children than having a major in a particular subject. For instance, the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education met last fall and its board of directors voted unanimously to reject the plan for national certification. Obviously, the professors are concerned about new teachers not learning proper teaching strategies but must also be concerned that their classroom enrollments could drop and result in many professor pink-slips. Fewer students equates to fewer professors.

In my view, knowledge of the content of one's major subject area is essential but teaching consists of any new nationally certified tes best master before facing these lea-soned adolescences who are leafing mor — especially new teachers. How many times have I heard, "Mr. XYZ really knows his subject; too bad he can't teach. Obviously; the best case scenario is the teach has an indepth knowledge of his subject area and also knows how to Basically, the new certification criteria is the same as what teachers currently go through to earn tenure a commitment to students and learning, proper classroom management techniques, classroom control etc. The major and only difference I see in the new certification plan is the passing of a standardized multiple choice test in the teachers' major subject areas and general literacy test. This criteria wouldn't worry most teachers with whom I've been associated.

This movement, however, is a clear indication that sufficient evidence is available that shows some teachers from some college in some states are graduating without basic literacy skills and without an in-depth knowledge of their subject.

All this withstanding, I still que tion someone entering teaching without a sound foundation in appropriate teaching strategies. It would be like teaching a tennis star every fundamental stroke in the book to near perfection but not teaching him or her any strategy for winning a

But the veto held when the Senate (below) failed to muster the two-third majority it needed to join the House in defeating it.

Congress passed the bill last year following the Tiananmen Square massacre of pro-democracy demonstrators. The president countered with an executive order to achieve the same goals. Congressional critics said a law, not an order that can be instantly lifted, is needed to protect the students against being returned home to face possible persecution.

James Traficant, D-Ohio, said: "Maybe our president is going to kowtow to a repressive Chinese government, but this Congress should not. It's time to put your vote where your rhetoric is.'

Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said: "President Bush knows China as well if not better than any member of this House . . . (and) must be given the room to make the foreign policy moves he feels are in the long-range best interests of our Henrietta Beedell and her husband, Dale, have two grown daughters and four grandchildren. Their daughters took organ lessons in their younger days.

The Beedells have had an organ in their Canton home for more than 20 years, but the instrument was silent for a long time.

"After they left, it just stood there," Henrietta Beedell said. She about 12 years. He had a business and her husband decided it was time

They were a bit apprehensive about signing up for lessons.

"At 73, you feel you can't retain very much," Henrietta Beedell said. She and her husband are glad they've learned to play.

'We enjoy it," she said. "We play a lot, every night. We just like music.' Dale Beedell has been retired for

'We'll never be professionals," he said. "We just play for our own amusement and amazement. I would recommend it to anybody, especially when they're getting to retirement

GROUP LESSONS for adults who want to learn to play the organ are offered at Evola Music Center. The basic "Play for Fun" class lasts six weeks, meets for an hour once a week, and costs $19.95.

Many adults realize it's never too late to learn to play a musical instrument.

"It's pretty much for people who know nothing about music," said store manager Russ Tkac, aWaterford resident. "We have an awful lot of adults who get involved. I think they just really have a lot of fun with Several more advanced levels of group classes are offered at the store, and most of the adult students do continue, Tkac said. Some eventually move into private lessons.

Piano classes are also offered. Younger students typically take those classes, Tkac said, and he's found piano students tend to move into private lessons fairly quickly.

Private instruction is really a much better way to go for piano.' said Tkac, who plays the guitar, piano and organ. Private lessons in piano are offered at the store.

Livonia resident George Marvay had been taking organ lessons elsewhere when he heard about the program at Evola from a friend.

"When I saw what she did, I said 'Oh, my God.' " Marvay was impressed with his friend's progress, and decided to come to Evola to take

Adults take lessons for a variety of reasons, said Moore-Viculin, a Livonia resident who has been teaching since 1969

"The main reason is they realize somewhere along in their life that they really like music." For many, playing the piano is a way to relax after work.

Most of Moore-Viculin's voice students are adults, and many are thinking about pursuing a career in that field. Most adult students taking piano or organ lessons do so primarily for enjoyment.

Awards dinner includes that element of surprise

By Julie Brown staff writer

THE SUSPENSE at the Growth Works Inc. recognition/awards dinner wasn't quite on a level with that found at the Academy Awards presentation.

Even so, there were certain similaritles. Names of honorees weren't announced in advance, meaning recipients were surprised when the time came for them to take to the

"I was really surprised because this is only the second time they've awarded this," said Clarence Du-Charme, who received The Eugene Stermer Memorial Award for Community Service.

Growth Works serves adolescents and their families, providing chemical dependency treatment, counseling, employment assistance and other services. The agency, at 271 S. Main in Plymouth, has a youth assistance program for juvenile offenders. Young people are referred to that intervention program through the court system.

THE AGENCY'S board of directors and staff held a recognition/ awards dinner the evening of Thursday, Feb. 1, at The Plymouth Manor in downtown Plymouth. This is the second year such a dinner has been held.

"It's to really acknowledge the people who have supported our efforts," said Dale Yagiela, executive director of Growth Works. Yagiela was among those who received awards.

The agency will serve about 900 to 1,000 clients this year. A daytime treatment program for substance abusers was recently estab-

DuCharme and his wife. Louise. have lived in Plymouth for 26 years. He bought the auto dealership in Plymouth in 1958.

Plymouth High School 1959 graduate's a leader in his field

It's not all that surprising to learn that Dr. Glyn P. Norton took French at Plymouth High School.

"I've been studying French since I lived in England, since I was a small boy," said Norton, a 1959 Plymouth High School graduate.

He was born in England and came to the U.S. in the early 1950s. His family came to Plymouth in the mid-

Norton, 48, is a professor and chairman of the Department of Romance Languages at Williams College in Williamstown, Mass. He was also recently named director of the Weston Center for Foreign Languages, Literatures and Cultures at Williams.

He earned his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in French from the University of Michigan. Norton. who received his Ph.D. in 1968, has served on the faculty of Dartmouth College and of The Pennsylvania State University, and came to Williams College in 1988.

HIS TRAVELS periodically bring him to the Plymouth area. Norton's parents, Trevor and Betty Norton, are retired and now live in Tennes-

Norton, who lives in Williamstown, returned to Plymouth last summer for the Plymouth High School class of 1959's 30-year reunion. He hadn't attended earlier reunions, and enjoyed seeing former classmates.

"In many respects, Plymouth still had the old charm that it always had. The center area of the town, of course, had not changed very much." Norton noticed more change in the surrounding township area.

"It really seems like an extension of metropolitan Detroit, almost." Many of the families Norton had known in his student days had moved "So it's a different town. There's no question about that."

Norton found it fascinating and somewhat intimidating to see former classmates he hadn't seen in many years. Members of the class of 1959 enjoyed reconstructing old memories.

"I was astounded to see how many still live in the Plymouth area. I think it was an interesting experience all around."

HE'S STAYED in touch with former teachers from Plymouth, including Margaret Dunning and Irene Walldorf. He didn't have Margaret Dunning as a teacher, but remembers her fondly. Irene Walldorf, who retired from teaching English and public speaking in 1968, remembers Norton from his student days.

"He was an excellent student, an 'A" student, nothing less," Walldorf said. "And, of course, he has a warm personality.

Norton remembers Walldorf's standards for the English language and self-expression.

"Her expectations for her students were very, very high. She's a very special lady.'

Norton's undergraduate days at U-M included about a year of study at the university in Aix-en-Provence in

In graduate school a few years later, Norton studied at the Universite de Lausanne in Switzerland. He met his wife, Victoria, there. She was working for the United Nations as a member of the Philippine delegation to the International Labor OrganizaThe Nortons have three grown daughters. him to Ann Arbor. "I visit my former professors from time to time." In 1988, he was among those honored by the U-M Rackham School of Graduate Studies as outstanding Ph.D. recipients for

His work also takes him overseas. In recent years, Norton has been to France about every two years. He lectures at the Sorbonne in Paris and the past 50 years.

"So I get back fairly regularly." He travels to Germany to lecture at universities, and also visits Europe just for pleasure.

Norton's duties at Williams College include administrative work and some teaching. He's impressed with the caliber of undergraduate students at Williams. The college is primarily an undergraduate institution, although master's degrees are offered in art history and economics.

His responsibilities include work at the Weston Center for Foreign Languages, Literatures and Cul-tures. That center has been funded by the Mellon Foundation, the Pew Charitable Trusts and the college. Its purpose is to promote the study of foreign languages and cultures.

NORTON SPEAKS and reads French and Italian. He has a reading knowledge of German and also reads Latin and a little Greek.

He had an excellent professor of philosophy and literature while studying in France as an undergraduate. Norton had considered returning to U-M to study law or business, but decided to follow a different Norton advocates having students take foreign language courses.

"America I think has probably suffered in the last two or three decades." There's been a certain cultural self-centeredness. Some Americans go abroad and expect people there to speak English and to behave in certain preconceived ways.

Norton's seen a growing interest at universities in European studies and in other cultures, including those of the Third World. American students are more aware of other cultures. Some of that has filtered down to the high school level

"So we're getting students now that are extremely well-prepared in foreign languages." Foreign language study has experienced a resurgence as the U.S. becomes more aware of other cultures.

He's found that the stereotype of the French as aloof and cold doesn't apply these days. Most Americans who travel to France come back surprised at the welcome they've received Norton said

"I don't think that's necessarily true at all." Children generally don't have the other obligations that adults do; their schedules provide more free time than is true for

Occasionally, an adult student of hers will admit to making a mistake in class simply because his or her mind has wandered, focusing on a problem or situation elsewhere.

"I really think it depends on how much natural ability the person has," Moore-Viculin said. "Ability and practice."

CANTON RESIDENT Laverne Bahel teaches group organ lessons at Evola Music Center in Plymouth. She plays the piano and organ. Bahel teaches only adults now, but taught private lessons for kids years ago.

One of the primary differences is children learn at a much faster rate," Bahel said. Children aren't more intelligent, but have fewer distractions in their lives.

"The adults get a lot more satis-faction out of it," Bahel said. Some children are forced to take classes, and don't practice much.

"I think their quality of practice is better," she said of the adult students. "A kid will be practicing, but thinking about going out to play

Some wanted to play as youngsters but didn't have access to a piano or organ.

"Now that they're an adult, they can afford their own," Bahel said. Her beginning students start with

She doesn't choose heavy rock music for older students, and Bahel wouldn't have teenage students play When the Saints Go Marching In."

Bahel's beginning students get a graduation certificate when they complete the six-week course, and many move on to more advanced instruction. Students are required to play a piece they've learned in class to get that certificate.

Some are a bit nervous about playing, she's found.

MANY OF Moore-Viculin's students perform in recitals at the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth. She asks more advanced students to play at recitals.

Moore-Viculin mixes adult students in with the teens and children. The adults aren't required to perform in public if they're uncomfortable about doing so.

"Nothing is mandatory for me." She may suggest that a student come to a recital first as an observer, to get used to the idea of playing in front of an audience.

Minister's guiding a growing church

BILL BRESLER/staff photographe

The Rev. William Moore is pastor of Trinity Presbyterian Church in Superior Township. Moore, a Livonia resident, used to be on the staff of Ward Presbyterian Church in Livonia.

A look at the Rev. William loore's office reveals the likely presence of an avid gardener.

Moore, paster of Trinity Presbyterian Church, does indeed enjoy growing vegetables and flowers. His office shelves are full of plants.

Jogging's also among Moore's free-time activities, and he's inherit-ed some of his father's woodworking interest. Moore and his son are working on building a desk.

"I love to read in general." Moore has a special interest in issues of substance abuse and co-dependency, and does quite a bit of reading in

Moore has been with Trinity Presbyterian Church since its beginnings in the late 1970s.

AT THAT time, Moore, 46, was on the staff of Ward Presbyterian Church in Livonia, serving as minister of evangelism. Ward officials began to think about starting a "daughter" church near Plymouth.

"So I was part of that process." Worshipers at Trinity met for a couple of years at Isbister Elementary School in Plymouth Township before moving to their new church building on Ann Arbor Road in 1981.

The church has a Plymouth mailing address but is actually in Superior Township. When Trinity first was established, about 40 families came from Ward Presbyterian Church. Most of those families came from Plymouth or Canton and a few from Ann Arbor.

Trinity became independent of Ward fairly quickly and now has about 600 members, about 350 fami-

Moore and his wife, Cindy, a homemaker, have four children, ages 13, 15, 17 and 19.

"I've always placed a high priority on the family." He and his wife make time to be with their children. Moore enjoys working with his kids

MOORE GREW up in Virginia and attended the College of William and Mary, where he earned a bachelor of science degree. The couple's daughter is now a sophomore at that

Moore had planned to teach biology and math at the secondary level. He did teach algebra the summer between college and graduate school at an Episcopal prep school.

Moore had been raised as an Eniscopalian, but in his younger days didn't feel personally challenged to commit his life to Christ

"It was more of a tradition than a personal experience." Moore's father went on to become an Episcopal priest after retiring from education. Moore's twin brother also became an Episcopal priest.

During his first year at college, Moore was challenged by other stu-dents to commit his life to Christ.

He earned a master's degree in theology from the Dallas Theologi-cal Seminary in Texas and a doctor of ministry degree from Trinity Evangelical Divinity School in Deer-field, Ill.

HE SPENT five years on staff at a parish in northern Minnesota, the First Presbyterian Church of Brain-erd. He then was invited to come to Ward Presbyterian Church.

"We like Michigan," he said. "We've grown to love Michigan people, the country."

Moore's duties at Trinity are varied. He preaches, directs the staff, does counseling, conducts funerals and weddings. Working on strategic planning for the future of the church is also among his duties.

"I do a lot of teaching as well as preaching." He visits people in the hospital and those who are home-

"It makes for a pretty busy week." In the future, the church building may need to be expanded. Church leaders are also considering "planting" or establishing another church in southern Ann Arbor.

"We've seen continued growth." In 1977, when church leaders did demographic research, they were optimistic about the growth expected in the Plymouth-Ann Arbor corridor.

That rate of growth slowed during the recession of the early 1980s, although it has been consistent in reLIKE MOST people, Moore enjoys some parts of his job more than oth-

"I particularly enjoy weddings." Funerals also provide opportunities to help people hear God's word.

"Weddings are obviously more cheerful." Funerals give Moore an opportunity to comfort people in time of sorrow

Moore and others at the church have faced a number of challenge areas, including giving leadership to the church at large and balancing various demands. They've worked on developing a vision for the church.

Moore wants to minister to his own congregation and to those beyond the congregation who may not have God in their lives.

He's encouraged that 65 to 75 percent of the adults at Trinity are involved in small group ministries. Group members meet to talk about God's word and to share concerns.

He's also encouraged to see a growing awareness of social issues, such as divorce, substance abuse and child abuse, in the church.

'I see the church taking a greater and greater stand." Rather than remaining silent, worshipers are taking a stand for justice and righteous-

Factories can't build everything we need

I recently read an essay describing the awesome challenge of the bionic man. Companies that replace parts of the human body (for a price, of course) are being recognized as a growth industry.

Indeed, substitutive medicine replacing real human parts with artificial ones - has spurred the development of a community of manufacturers that endeavor to replace the irreplaceable.

It is reported that more than a million people have artificial parts implanted inside them every year. They include artificial hips, knees,

I GREET this prediction with mixed feelings. I recognize how grateful are the recipients of these parts that can grant sight to the blind movement to the disabled relief to those stricken by unremitting pain. It is reassuring to know that should I be granted an extended lifespan, I am likely to need one or more of these factory parts since my origi-nal equipment is likely to wear out. For all this, I offer thanks.

I am, however, left with a feeling of uneasiness. Can we still share in the Psalmist's hymn of praise to the Almighty for the glory of the human body that is His handiwork? The Psalmist exclaimed "For You have sown this flesh: You knitted these bones in my mother's womb, I offer

I am left with an added source of disquietude. Man not only has a body, he has a spirit. There is in him a spark of a Divine flame which thinks, creates, dreams, sobs, prays - something that can soar and sing and celebrate the wonder of life.

IS THERE a company that can provide "spirit" where it is deficient? Can a factory provide such an implant to those who should aspire to love, yearn for justice, hunger for beauty, and long for truth?

Can we ask the researchers to look into the widespread condition of shriveled souls and withered spirits, and provide their replacements? Is the price too high, or the technology too complex? Perhaps we should try to use and renew the spirit we are granted. Replacement seems diffi-

Although some men are diagnosed as borderline, the majority are women, since young girls are more likely to be sexually abused than boys, ac-cording to the U-M report, published this month in the Journal of Orthopsychiatry

LUDOLPH WORKED with Drew Weston, assistant professor of psychology, graduate students M. Judith Block, F. Charles Wiss, Anne Jack-son and Barbara Misle, postdoctoral student Stephen Ruffins and psychologist Jean Wixom on the study.

The researchers compared 27 borderline adolescent girls with 23 adolescent girls in a control group who had other psychiatric disorders like Anorexia Nervosa and depression.

The researchers found that more than half of the girls with borderline persono'ities had been sexually abused (29.6 percent by their fathers, 7.4 percent by their mothers and 15 percent exclusively by neighbors, friends and sibling).

Seventy percent of the borderlines who had been abused by their fahers also had been abused by someone else. And just 19 percent of the control group suffered sexual abuse of any kind.

"We also found that physical abuse went hand in hand with sexual abuse," Ludolph said. Sixty-six percent of those who had been sexually abused had suffered physical abuse, including repeated beatings or coporal pinishment resulting in cuts and bruises she said

"Neglect by the primary caretak-er, who, given the way our society is organized, was usually the mother, was another significant factor," Lu-dolph said. "Eighty percent of the girls who had been neglected by the mother also had been sexually

Neglect meant being abandoned by the mother for a series of indifferent caretakers, being kicked out of the house or being made a ward of the court. Most of the neglect and abuse occurred between five and 10 years of age.

"THESE ARE some of the years when the ego or self undergoes considerable development, so disruption at that critical time is very serious," Ludolph said. "Sexual abuse during that period is likely to have a permanent effect on self-esteem, sense of identity, ability to regulate feelings, capacity to trust others and ability to test reality.

'It also will affect the strategies children develop to achieve goals. That is, children who are abused and feel compelled to hide it - who are forced into a form of duplicity and complicity - may never achieve a goal. In an atmosphere of fear and confusion, they will learn only to manipulate others."

The researchers stressed that not all victims incest or sexual abuse become borderline personalities. In addition, sexual abuse alone is not likely to lead to a borderline personality.

Borderline behavior is an expression of confusion over closeness and distance," Ludolph said. "Sexual abuse, particularly by fathers, is tremedously confusing.

Infertility Research and Treatment

How much help will you need to fill these shoes?

A couple trying to overcome a serious fertility problem has basically two options. Seek help from a small fertility clinic associated with a general hospital (a few of these actually attempt fairly advanced procedures like in vitro fertilization). Or choose the Hutzel Fertility Center. The difference is dramatic. Hutzel's program is medical center- and university-based; encompassing both treatment and research. Unlike general hospitals that mostly apply established technology, a comprehensive clinical and research center like Hutzel actually ploneers and develops new techniques.

Hutzel's century-long leadership in the reproductive sciences includes Michigan's first in vitro fertilization bables, the newest techniques of egg retrieval, and, to date, Michigan's first and only embryo freezing capabilities (which contribute significantly to reducing the risk of multiple births). Hutzel has also ploneered the concept of treating couples rather than individuals. This helps avoid unnecessary delays, expenses and frustration.

Hutzel's extra research and clinical dimension means more hope, every day, for patients with the most complex problems. And, because Hutzel's care costs no more, even couples with less serious problems can afford the extra peace of mind that comes with the Hutzel program.

Infertility programs often require considerable economic and emotional investment by couples. To make the most of that investment, call the Hutzel Fertility Center for more information.

In a 35-mph test, a belted dummy receives protection from a driver's side air bag.

Local companies eye air bag business

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Air bag manufacturers and suppliers expect the 1990s to be a busy decade now that automotive companies worldwide have announced plans to use air bags more extensive-Chrysler announced it would install driver-side air bags in all of its vehicles in the early 1990s; Ford will install driver and passenger-side air bags as standard equipment by 1994. Only General Motors has yet to announce when air bags will be standard equipment on all models. GM now offers driver side air bags as standard equipment on almost half of its automobiles with plans to add them to more models throughout the 1990s

Charles L. Miller, executive vice president and general manager of TRW Occupant Restraints group, said air bags will become as popular as seat belts. "If the 1980s can be described as the decade of the safety belt, then the 1990s will surely be the decade of the air bag."

TRW, with facilities in Rochester Hills, is the world's largest supplier of automotive safety restraint products. It is the sole supplier of air bags to Ford and also supplies air bags to Chrysler and General Motors

In 1989, the North American air bag market was worth $360 million in sales. TRW estimates the market will have a compound annual growth of 85 percent through 1994 when it will reach $3 billion in annual sales, Miller said.

"WE ARE ACTUALLY even more optimistic than that," TRW communications director Claude Gianino said. "Those are conservative (estimates).'

By 1994, Gianino said analysts predict 65 percent of new cars sold in North America will be equipped with air bags.

The main impediment to air bag technology is cost, but he believes a $300 inflatable restraint system is a likely possibility. Current prices for air bags range from $500 to $1,500 depending on the automobile and equipment configuration, but costs have continued to fall, according to

"In the last two years, we've already brought the price down by half thanks to advances in technology," Gianino said. He believes production increases mandated by federal law will enable suppliers to bring costs down further.

This will help ensure product compatibility, price stability and successful research and development, he added.

Air bags will require a greater partnership between suppliers and automotive manufacturers because they will need to be designed into automobiles years before production,

Federal law requires that all automobiles be equipped with drivers side passive restraint systems by 1994. "Air bags are not the only type of passive passenger restraint, but they are becoming the restraint system of choice," he said.

TIP ENGINEERING Group of Farmington Hills is an example of a small local company poised to take advantage of the coming air bag market explosion. Vice president of sales and marketing Dick Marchese said the firm holds 40 patents dealing exclusively with air bag technol-

With almost 40 million vehicles built worldwide each year, the market for air bag equipment is immense, he said. TIP is a dedicated interior trim occupant safety company, working solely in safety improvements to the inside of automobiles, Marchese said.

"We're the only people in the world doing what we're doing. We're the only people in the world capable of doing what we're doing."

TIP Engineering designs a patented seamless air bag deployment door that will improve the interior aesthetics of air bag-equipped automobiles, Marchese said. (See related

TIP's emphasis on the instrument panel allows them to work more quickly, less expensively and with more innovation than the automakers and its competitors, vice president of marketing Richard Marchese

"We don't design air bag systems the air bags, the electronics, the sensors - we're trim people.

When people think air bags, they don't always think of what goes into designing an air bag system," Marchese said. Years before an automobile ever reaches the showroom, interior trim panels are designed to accommodate the vehicle's climate controls, electronics, mechanics and air bags.

Entrepreneurs find success marketing used computers

By R.J. King special writer

Six years ago, Mike Dolik of Birmingham faced a difficult decision. Should he leave a comfortable job with Burroughs Corp. and invest $2,000 along with a friend to start a business in the highly competitive computer market?

At the time, Dolik admits he was reluctant, especially with his basement doubling as the company's first office, but with $12 million in sales last year, the entrepreneur now tinkers inside a 35,000-square-foot facility in Rochester Hills.

Employing 65 people, the Virtual Group, owned by Dolik and D. Mark Ratliff, both 35, is four companies located in the Rochester Hills Corporate Center.

While working together at Burroughs (now Unisys), Dolik and Ratliff learned the computer manufacturer wasn't always willing to accept old equipment as trade-in on new systems. By purchasing the equipment used, they believed they could profit by refurbishing and upgrading the systems and reselling them as "almost new" products.

"That first year was pretty rough," Dolik recalled from his office. "Mark and I purchased a customer list from Unisys and set out to buy the equipment, arrange to have it transported and would either rebuild the equipment ourselves or sub-contract it out.

"In fact, there were times when we used to put the equipment in the back of our cars and deliver it ourselves. It also helped that our strength was in marketing. Neither of us were engineers, but we knew enough about computers to upgrade them, and then turn our efforts to selling them."

Last year Michigan Business magazine selected the Virtual Group as the 18th fastest growing privately held company in the state. Last December, Inc. magazine named the company as one of the top 500 fastest growing companies in the nation.

OF THE COMPANY'S 4,500 customers in 28 countries, Dolik said 85 percent of sales today are derived from repeat customers.

"Our customers like an alternative other than purchasing their equipment directly from the manufacturer," Ratliff said. "They like the freedom and flexibility we can Marchese said when engineers design safety into an automobile, they design the automobile to protect the average person in an accident.

"What we're trying to do is design cars to protect what is called the 'fifth female.' Not everyone is 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs the national average. There are hard points that a small woman might be injured on, but an average sized woman would not. You also have to take into account little kids - they are passengers in cars as well."

TIP'S MAJOR achievement has been the development of seamless air bag deployment door technology, Marchese said.

Current air bag deployment doors are seamed; when the bag inflates, the door opens along the seam. In addition to the difficulty of designing attractive instrument panels with the seamed doors, the doors typically cost between $40 and $50 to replace after air bag inflation.

With seamless doors, Marchese said manufacturers can design styleconscious, yet cost effective instrument panels. The seamless air bag deployment doors typically cost about $12 each.

Seamless deployment doors can be made with vinyl, wood laminates and even leather, Marchese said, which gives engineers more room to work when designing attractive, safe interiors.

Marchese said the firm holds 40 patents dealing exclusively with air bag technology.

Right now we're working on 1994 model cars — that's how far ahead you have to work when it comes to instrument panels," Marchese said. The instrument panel is affected by every engineering discipline, he addplanning stage. "This is especially true of the air

How will it fit in the steering wheel? Where will it be on the passenger side? How will the air bag be deployed? "It's far more complicated than people think."

CHIEF EXECUTIVE officer and founder Dave Bauer said he started TIP Engineering — short for Technical Instrument Panel - in 1986 after working for 15 years in Ford Motor Co.'s instrument panel safety division where he worked on air bag development and test programs, instrument and interior trim panels and knee bolsters.

Working with his own company has allowed him to place more emphasis on instrument panel safety.

"You can do a lot more when you're not dealing in a bureaucracy. Here we can get a design to the public in half the time and it's cost effective and it looks good," Bauer Marketing vice president Marchese said TIP Engineering is "at least 10 years ahead of everybody else.'

TIP Engineering has completed air bag related projects for Chrysler, Ford, General Motors, Mitsubishi, Toyota and Jaguar. It is currently involved in projects for these and other companies.

In addition to seamless air bag deployment doors, TIP Engineering is also setting its sights on related applications.

Bauer said other laws will follow those governing passive passenger restraints; he has developed a 10year plan anticipating other interior trim safety programs.

Air bags for light trucks and vans, knee bolsters, instrument panels improvements, door trim, seat cushion bolsters, seat frames, back seat bolsters and greater emphasis on foreign markets are all part of TIP Engineering's long-term plan, he said.

SIEMENS-AUTOMOTIVE, as isternational electronics automotive electronics firm with headquarters in Germany, is also ready to capital-ize on the exploding air bag market, according to director of communica-tions Paul Klapproth.

Siemens has sales offices in Troy, research and development facilities in Sterling Heights and is constructing a new facility in Auburn Hills, he said. "The push toward air bags as standard equipment could not come at a better time."

Siemens manufactures electromechanical sensors for air bag systerns. The sensors, which are placed behind the front bumpers, inflate air bags only in accidents in which ds exceed 10 miles per hour, Klapproth said

"The market for crash detection sensors alone is expected to be $350 million next year," Klapproth said.
Siemens also manufacturers diagnostic equipment that monitors air hag systems for problems.
Siemens' largest customer is GM, but the firm also supplies crash sensors for BMW, Porsche, Volkswagen, AM, Romeo and Sash. Alfa Romeo and Saab.

Klapproth said the 1990s air bag market is different from the 1970s when the market suffered a major shakeup after a lack of consumer interest and political opposition from automotive companies stalled widespread air bag use

"The market just never matured," Klapproth said. The collapse of companies that anticipated the early boom left only a select few — com-panies like TRW, Morton Thiokol Inc., Allied Bendix Corp. and Siemens - healthy enough to benefit from the current air bag demand.

Because of the high volume of Unisys products sold, Dolik said Virtual absorbs the cost of having an engineer on-site to inspect, test and certify each component before it reaches the customers.

Dolik, a Seaholm High and Eastern Michigan University graduate, is looking to Europe for future growth.

With much of its engineering cribbed from Volkskwagen, it was the first modern front-wheel-drive car introduced by domestic manufacturer, albeit with a VW engine and transmission.

It also was one of the first cars with a body welded by robots, and it set some records for efficient manufacturing. Another quirk was Chrysler's shortage of paint priming auto talk Dan McCosh

Risks are part of investing. There is no choice but to assume these risks if you wish to earn more than bank savings return.

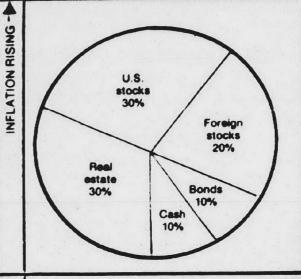

Fortunately, while there is risk. there is also diversification. By dividing your assets among complementary investments, you can significantly cut your risk while (frequently) increasing your rate of return.

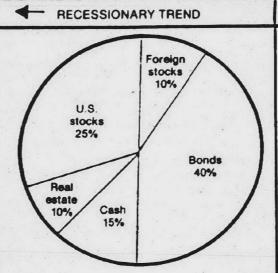

Examples of complementary investments include U.S. stocks, long-term bonds, foreign stocks, real estate and cash. Other investments, such as annuities, can be added to the list.

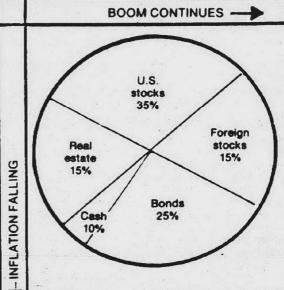

The accompanying chart indi-cates how mixes might be altered to increase return as economic conditions change. However, a word of caution is in order.

Portfolio management is difficult and not for everyone. It is wise to seek the expert help. A competent financial planner, a portfolio manager, a bank trust department or professional financial management team should be able to help you achieve your investment goals.

F SKILL, TALENT and enthusiasm are genetic, then recently retired WJBK-TV, Channel 2, news camerman Sid Siegel inherited zeal for things photographic from his grandfather, Jacob. Grandfather's 1917 Baltimore motion picture projectionist license is framed and prominently featured on the wall of the study in Siegel's Birmingham home.

"It was in the genes because my father's father was interested in film and the story was, as told to me," Siegel recalled, "that my grandfather was the projectionist, my father played the piano for the silents, my aunt took the tickets — this was out in the backwoods around Odessa."

Grandpa Jacob was an itinerant projectionist in the rural areas around Odessa, Russia, prior to World War I. When he raised enough money from showing motion pictures, he would sell his film and projectors and take one of his children to America where he would buy another projector, some new films and go back to Odessa to repeat the process. Thus Sid's father and three sisters came to America.

Prior to World War II Siegel's interst in photography developed. In 1940 he built his own drum processor for black-and-white reversal motion picture film which he developed at home, an exceptional and difficult task for amateurs even today.

A CASS TECHNICAL High School student, Siegel studied aeronautics. Despite that, no doubt because of the mysterious ways in which the military operates, his World War II service (1943-1946) was as an infantryman in France, Italy and Germany, including six months in combat.

"It was in the final days of the war," Siegel remembered. "I dropped out of a long march from exhaustion, and a day or so later when I rejoined my company, there was a whole German army in front of us."

But the Germans surrendered, and the spoils of war included lots of German Luger pistols, then quite a novelty as souvenirs. Siegel said, "I had Lugers coming out of every pocket and I traded them off for the granddaddy of what turned out to be the Hasselblad, I think it was called the Primaflex. In turn, I traded that for my first Bolex movie camera, and when I got home, I was in business."

That business — filmmaking of all kinds, weddings, bar mitzvahs, industrials, documentaries, but most of all news film — has occupied Siegel and his wife, Naomi, for more than four decades.

In the late '40s and early '50s, "Television had no local newsfilm and I was very anxious to get into television," Siegel said. With his wife's help and support, he began a free-lance firm, Telespot News, which furnished newsfilm to the local stations. But in those days stations were reluctant to spend $100 or so on newsfilm when they could rent a movie for $5.

TWO STORIES, in particular, launched his career as one of the leading newsfilm producer-camermen nationwide as well as in the Detroit market.

Late in 1951, some American soldiers in Japan chartered a plane to come home for Christmas. But they couldn't afford the fuel. The story circulated, and local merchants started a campaign to raise funds for the GIs' trip home. When they landed at Willow Run, Siegel was there with his camera. He processed the film and took it to Channel 2.

The next day there was a blizzard, and every day that week he took newsfilm of the blizzard into the station. At the end of the week he was given a 13-week contract as a freelance producer. He contracted for a local news story every day. At the end of the 13 weeks the station hired someone else — lower rates — to produce their newsfilm.

To add insult to injury, Siegel recalls that the next Monday, "I had gone out to my car and somebody had cut into the glove box and stolen a camera. While the policeman was filling out the report, I'm listening to his radio which was telling about the Jackson Prison riot."

"Well, I didn't bother filling out the rest of the report. I said, 'Never mind,' and I got in my car with another camera and went to Jackson. That night was my first CBS network piece on the air."

FOR THE FOLLOWING 12 years, Siegel worked as a stringer for CBS, NBC, ABC and the BBC. During his free-lance period Siegel produced industrial films for Chrysler, American Motors, W.B. Doner, Hygrade, Faygo, Vlasic and the United Foundation, among others In 1964 he became a regular staff member at the same Channel 2 from which he has just retired.

Throughout his career he has filmed just about everything imaginable in every locale including East Africa with Bwana Don, plus work in Vietnam, London, Paris, Rome and Athens.

"The most memorable story I ever covered," Siegel said, "was the story of Naomi and me during the '67 riots. Not only did she support me in what I was doing, but she came down and cooked for the troops. She came down to the station (Channel 2) through gunfire and worked at the station on Second Boulevard. I was filming from the ground and from a helicopter and I remember the pilot one night saying, 'Hey, they're shooting at us. Let's get out of here.'"

The 66-year-old Siegel and his wife of 45 years had three children, one of whom died of leukemia. In her memory they have established an award for writing at Wayne State University.

Not content to sit quietly in retirement, Siegel plans to seek free-lance assignments and devote time to working with his hobby, antiques.

To young people eager to make it in show- business, Siegel advised, "Read everything you can, see ev-

That practical advice has distinguished Siegel's approach to getting the job done throughout a long, fruitful career. The pragmatism which characterized his grandfather's struggle to bring land of opportungenetic, but it certain tographic career.

By Mark Cartoy special writer

Meadow Brook Theatre's production of "A Walk in the Woods" pro-vides that experience for which playgoers yearn, but so rarely get a fast-paced, well-acted drama offering not only entertainment, but substance.

On its surface, Lee Blessing's Pulitzer-Prize-nominated play is a simple dialogue between two arms control negotiators - hardly stimulating stuff for non-political science majors. But under the direction of Stephen Kanee, actors Arthur J. Beer and Michael James Laird infuse their discourse with enough passion, humor and charm to keep the audience transfixed throughout the performance.

Andrey Botvinnik, played by Beer, is a seasoned veteran of the Soviet diplomatic corps. John Honeyman (Laird) is a young American hotshot leading his first negotiating team.

In order to escape the pressures and attentions of the bargaining table, the two take regular walks through the picturesque woods sur-rounding Geneva, Switzerland.

Botvinnik is amiable, glib and utterly charming. He is known in diplomatic circles for having 100 different, equally pleasant ways of saying "no." Beer's portrayal of the grandfatherly Russian is magnificent. He exudes warmth, humor and compassion for both his own character and for the American.

Conversely, Honeyman, the unpleasant zealot, is truly sincere in his belief that a lasting peace can be found. His frustration with obstructions, both from the Soviets and from his own government, drive him to the brink of collapse. His rage climaxes in an excrutiatingly funny description of his near-arrest by a local

THROUGH THE COURSE of the play, Laird does a masterful job of swinging audience empathy his way. He does this with a courageously honest portrayal of the frustrations of an idealist who never learned to have fun. This inability to laugh at the world is Honeyman's tragic flaw.

An even sadder case is that of Botvinnik, the charmer who seems to take nothing scriously. His flaw is the inability to see true hope in the world. Perhaps the two men are metaphors for their respective cultures. As usual, Meadow Brook has done a fine job with the technical aspects of the play. The set is a simple but beautiful knoll in the woods. For once it does not overwhelm the ac-

Many playgoers will miss "A Walk in the Woods," thinking either, "talky two-person plays are a bore," or, "what could be duller than a play about arms control?" These people will make a big mistake.

5 women in strong drama about waiting in wartime

Performances of the Farmington Players' production of "Waiting for the Parade" continue through Saturday, Feb. 24, at the Farmington Players Barn. For ticket information, call the box office at 538-1670.

Viewing World War II through the eyes of those "who also serve" by waiting at home, "Waiting for the Parade" at the Farmington Players is bittersweet, presented with poignancy and humor by a fine five-

Set in Calgary, Canada, between 1939 and 1945, the drama follows the lives of five women who meet regularly to do their bit for the war effort - rolling bandages and entertaining at the soliders' canteen. The format of the show is a series of vignettes separated by blackouts.

Catherine, played convincingly by Irene Hengstebeck, has a gregarious nature and keeps trying to make the best of her difficult situation. She badly misses her absent husband, suffering through the long lapses between letters when he is first reported missing, then a prisoner-of-war.

criticized for being too social.

Paula Myers is excellent as the abrasive Janet, who commands her group of women like a tough staff sergeant. Jane maintains a frantic schedule of volunteer activities to cover her embarrassment at her broadcaster husband's non-participation in the conflict.

MARGARET, CREDIBLY portrayed by Pat Dorrian-Sandothe, is a born pessimist. Already widowed be-fore the war, she frets about the fate of her two sons because, "Death runs in our family." The war's end deals cruel ironies to both Janet and Mar-

Mary Lou Ryzenga's Eva is a high school teacher who despises the war for luring her students to enlist before they graduate. Her husband, too old for military service, constantly irritates her with his bloodthirsty relish for the fighting.

As Marta, a loyal Canadian citizen of German origin, Helen Morgan maintains a believable accent and has a pleasantly understated delivery. A victim of the town's rampant Barbara Michals anti-German sentiments, Marta is shunned by some and maliciously attacked by others because her senile father has been interned for suspicious pro-German leanings.

Director Sharlan Douglas has elicited quality work from her performers. The only flaw at Sunday night's performance was lighting cues that were not as crisp as they should be. These seemed especially sluggish, since there are virtually no set or costume changes. Costumes look pretty authentic, right down to some 1940s-style shoes.

Barbara Michals teaches high school English in Southfield. Atheater critic for the last 15 years, she is an inveterate playgoer who regularly catches up on all the New York productions.

Pete Israel of Salem positions himself for a pin in his match with Stevenson's Chris Lehti at 171 pounds Saturday in the WLAA wrestling tournament. Israel was runner-up at his weight, helping the Rocks to repeat as league champions. Salem had five individual winners.

Rocks retain league crown

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

When the curtain rose on one of the wrestling season's biggest shows Saturday, the Plymouth Salem Rocks performed like real troupers.

Salem was heavily favored to repeat as Western Lakes Activities Association champion, and there was little suspense to the meet at Westland John Glenn. The Rocks won their eighth league championship in nine years.

"When you get to the league meet, that's when showtime starts," Salem senior and defending champion Steve Burlison said. "There's no more

We were pretty confident but not so confident to lay back. We knew what we had to do."

The host Rockets were runners-up once again. and the first division included Glenn (147), Northville (142), Livonia Churchill (104), Walled Lake Western (991/2) and Plymouth Canton (94).

wrestling

THE SECOND tier consisted of Livonia Stevenson, North Farmington, Walled Lake Central, Livonia Franklin, Farmington Hills Harrison and Farmington.

Burlison was one of five Salem champions. The Rocks also had three runners-up and three others place among the top six.

Salem had its share of wrestlers favored to win individual titles, but there were some surprises.

Julian Sell (130), Burlison (160) and Brian Burlison (189) were seeded No. 1 at their weights, and each lived up to his pre-meet billing. The Rocks did what was expected of them at five weights and better than expected at four others.

Scott Martin (103) and heavyweight Scott

Breithaupt were No. 2 seeds but staged mild upsets to capture championships, too.

Teammates Dan Bonnett (112) and Pete Israel (171) finished as seeded in second place, and Ken Stopa (125), Jeff Shumate (135) and Ron Miller (145) finished higher than they were seeded.

"SOME OF them overachieved," Salem coach Ron Krueger said. "We had more kids who did better than they were supposed to do than didn't and that helps. Only one underachieved.

"I was real surprised and happy with Breithaupt and Martin. Three guys were seeded first and supposed to do that - and I'm pleased they did - but (Martin and Breithaupt) were not supposed to do that well and did."

Three wrestlers - the Burlison brothers and Central's Soren Murphy - repeated as league champions. Murphy (112), a three-time winner, was the 103 champ last year. Steve Burlison defended his 160 crown, and Brian Burlison also stepped up a weight after winning at 171 a year

Being a college basketball freshman next season, Susan Ferko knows she won't be the chief player on the

She'll be, well, just one of the redskins

Ferko, the driving force behind Plymouth Canton's successful girls basketball season last fall, gave Miami (Ohio) University a verbal commitment Sunday night.

They didn't promise me anything," Ferko said, "but I'm sure, if I work hard, I'll get some playing time.

The 5-foot-11 center was sought by Mid-American Conference and Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference schools after leading the Chiefs to a 22-4 record and Class A semifinal berth.

FERKO, WHO made first-team, all-state squads following her senior season, chose between Miami and Ball State. She had eliminated Western Michigan, Ferris State, Grand Valley and Oakland University earli-

She decided on Miami because of its smaller enrollment, the school's academic reputation and the Oxfordbased institution's quaint, attractive

"I think I'll feel more comfortable at a smaller school," Ferko said. "I like the smaller atmosphere, and the campus is very pretty. I got along with the team well and I like the coaching staff."

Basketball recruits can't make their college choices official until Wednesday, April 11, the first day of a month-long period when high school players can sign letters of in-

But Miami coach Linda Wunder pparently was eager to get a commitment from Ferko, who averaged 21 points, 11 rebounds and three blocks last season.

'They've been calling once every other day," Ferko said.

CANTON COACH Bob Blohm hates to see Ferko go away to school Miami is situated in southwest Ohio, north of Cincinnati - but admits his reasons are a little selfish.

'I would have liked her to stay local from the standpoint of being able to see her play," he said. "But (the Redskins) will come in to play Eastern, Western and Central and, from that standpoint, we'll get plenty of opportunities to see her play. "And, educationally, it's a good situation. I think she'll be able to compete at that level and fit in well academically. There are a lot of great schools out there, Miami being one of them."

If you believe statistics tell a story, here's one for you:

Plymouth Salem had as many field goals (19) as Plymouth Canton did shot attempts in the first half of Tuesday's basketball game.

The fast-starting Rocks dominated the first half and coasted through the second en route to a 73-49 victory over their hosts.

Salem, which made its first appearance in the statewide rankings this week at No. 10, is 12-1 overall and the Chiefs, who have lost six in a row, 5-8.

We came out and set the tempo," Salem coach Bob Brodie said. "We did a nice job scoring points and denying them at the defensive end."

THE ROCKS jumped ahead 16-0 to start the game and, capitalizing on Canton turnovers and high-percentage shooting, had a commanding, 45-14 lead by halftime.

Salem shot 50 percent in the first quarter (7-of-14) and did even better

Dow edges Chiefs in big

By Dan O'Mears staff writer

Plymouth Canton coach John Cunningham didn't mind being the best of the rest in the Plymouth Invitational. Midland Dow, the state's No. 1-rated gymnastics team, won the meet as expected Saturday, but finishing second in competition that featured eight of the topranked squads was an accomplishment in itself. "To be honest, it was an eight-way battle for second place," Cunningham said. "I don't think any of the top six teams could be displeased. Everybody did an excep-Dow didn't run away with the championship, either.

The Chargers edged Canton by just six tenths of a point. Dow scored 139.40, the Chiefs a school record 138.80.

North Farmington's third-place total of 137.80 also was a school record, and Plymouth Salem captured fourth with an impressive 137.45.

FREELAND WAS fifth (136.95), and sixth-place Troy Athens (135.90) undoubtedly would have finished higher if standout Melissa Miller hadn't been forced out of competition with pneumonia.

Among other area schools in the 17-team meet, Wayne Memorial ended up ninth, Westland John Glenn 11th, Farmington 12th, Livonia Clarenceville 13th and Birmingham Seaholm 15th. Dow was considered a prohibitive favorite, but Canton actually had a chance to win the meet. The Chiefs were leading until the final rotation when the Chargers went on beam and Canton the uneven parallel bars

In addition to Murphy on beam, Canton's top performances included freshman Kim Rennolds, the team's lone all-arounder who finished seventh in that category. Jenny Tedesco took sixth on bars, and Johanna Anderson and Danielle Mirto placed sixth and seventh on floor.

"I was extremely pleased with Heather's and Danielle's beam (sixth with 9.0)." Cunningham said. Murphy set a school record on beam, breaking Mary Jo Charron's 1988 mark of 8.95. "Those are performances we haven't seen. Tedesco's bars were

North coach Jeff Dwyer was pleased by his team's third-place finish and high score, especially after the Raiders had scored 129 and lost to Troy last week

THE TEAM had a serious discussion about motivation after that, and Dwyer said the meeting provided a spark Saturday. North then set another school record of 142.2 Monday in a dual meet with Salem.

We needed a meet to turn us around," Dwyer said. "That's where experience helped. (Kym) Heller and (Heather) Kahn had good meets and so did (Jameelah) Gater, too."

MARTIN PINNED No. 1-seeded Matt Allison in the 103 final, avenging a 12-6 loss, and Sell defeated rival Casey Krause of Churchill 6-2 to win the 130 title.

Krause was runner-up at 125 last year and Sell the consolation winner. Sell has won both meetings this year, but remembers losing to Krause

"He killed me - 7-0 - two times in a row," Sell said. "I worked hard over the summer in freestyle practice, and I think that really did it. "Last year I always worried about who I was wrestling. This year I just go out and wrestle. I look at it as 'I'm here, he's there, this is the mat, let's wrestle. Steve Burlison pinned his way through, too, stopping Northville's Bob Townsend in the final, and Brian Burlison extended his mastery over Glenn's Garnett Woody at 189.

The Burlisons are probably the only undefeated brother combination in the state, too. Steve boasts a 31-0 record, Brian 34-0.

"At the beginning of the season, I didn't start off the way I should have," Steve said. "I was concentrating too much on the state meet instead of what was ahead each day. The last couple weeks I've been taking things a day at a time instead of thinking two months ahead."

BREITHAUPT pinned Churchill's Andy Sapienza in 45 seconds after Sapienza had beaten No. 1-seeded Bob Johnson of Franklin in the semifinals. Krueger credited that to having scouted Sapienza.

"I told Scott 'He's going to come right in and give you the biggest bear hug you've ever seen, and you'd better hit the best head lock you ever have." Krueger said. "Once he got him down, he wasn't going to let him

Krueger also was impressed by Glenn's Kuban, who pinned No. 2seeded Pete Israel of Salem in the first period to run his record to 35-1.

"I don't think anyone scored a point on him," Glenn coach Tom Buckalew said. "Nobody went to the second period with him. He's one of the best we've ever had. He's the leader in team points, takedowns and wins.

"I was pleased with Garnett, too. Brian (Burlison) is an outstanding wrestler, but Garnett is 31-7 with three losses to Brian."

Buckalew, who knew it would have taken a number of teams working together to upset Salem, added there is no shame in losing to the Rocks.

DURING TWO second-quarter spurts, Salem's first unit of Baker, Gold, Noonan, Johnson and K.C. Kirkpatrick extended a 14-point lead to 36-11, and the second team scored the last nine points of the half.

But nobody anticipated the Rocks dominating like they did and holding a 31-point lead.

The Rocks, who are unbeaten in 1990 and have won 10 straight, appear to be getting stronger as the season progresses.

"WE KNOW we've got a good team, and we're capable of playing like that every game," Brodie said. 'We've been rotating a lot of players, and everybody on the team is improving. And that's what you look for in a team."

White, who also finished with 11 points, had the final shot for North, before Calcaterra's block.

"It was a good win, I'm very happy," said Churchill coach Fred Price. "It was our best effort of the year. We're improving."

North rolled out to a 15-10 lead after the first quarter

Churchill battled back with a 23-11 advantage in the third to take a 48-39 lead. Kevin Hannigan led the charge, scoring seven of his 10 points in the third.

Steve McCool led Franklin with 18 points and six rebounds, David Barina slammed in 10 points including one dunk, sophomore Keith Roberts scored eight points and Chris Overaitis dished off five assists.

Brian Browne led Farmington with nine points.

Wayne wins showdown with Braves

By Ray Setlock

Wayne Memorial coach Chuck Henry raised his fist in the air as senior forward Larry Ryles hit the game-winning layup with just 1:33 remaining in Tuesday's game at Ypsilanti.

Wayne's 47-43 triumph over the Braves was Henry's 200th career victory, but more importantly, it was the Zebras' 14th win of the season in 15 games.

What the game lacked in offensive flavor, it made up with in tenacious

"Ypsilanti played hard defensively," Henry said. "It really caused us to struggle offensively. We had a tough time getting off the shots we would have liked.'

Despite scoring 14 points for the Zebras, senior forward Pierre Hixon

admits it was tough getting off good shots.

"That was a tough 14 points, it didn't come easy," he said. "Ypsilan-ti played good defense and made it

HIXON, ALTHOUGH in foul trouble much of the game, gave a good defensive effort, recording four steals and a blocked shot. Offensively, he dished off for three assists.

When Pierre got into foul trouble, that hurt us," Henry said. "We need him on the floor. When you start bringing in the second string and a younger inexperienced group, you're not going to get the same results."

The Zebras dominated the first quarter, leading 12-5. But it was Ypsilanti's surge in the second quarter which would give the game a whole

The Braves, with 4:03 remaining in the first half, earned a 14-14 tie, thanks two free throws by Ivan Davis. The game would stay close the rest of the way. Neither team could muster more than a four-point ad-

The Braves had a chance to tie the game with eight seconds left, but Charles Coleman missed a free throw, giving Wayne a 44-43 edge. Senior guard Reggie Brandon then converted three charity tosses to seal the win for the Zebras.

"THIS WAS a good win," Henry said. "Not pretty, but good."

Ypsilanti coach Bob Rowley, whose team slipped to 10-4 overall, saw the game as an offensive struggle, dominated by strong defense.

"Obviously, we are not a great offensive team right now," he said. Wayne's defense had something to do with that. They took us out of our offensive mold and we didn't get the ball inside. Our team has to get the ball inside to win."

Brandon contributed 12 points for the Zebras, but it was his solid ball control which allowed Wayne to get through a tough Ypsilanti full-court

The Zebras connected on 15 of 24 free throws, something Henry is not pleased to see

"We didn't hit a lot of free throws early in the second half," said the Wayne coach. "Those things hurt you. We could have taken a solid

Wayne missed five of its first six free throw oppurtunities in the second half.

SENIOR FORWARD Charles Coleman sparked the Braves offensively, scoring 13 points.

"I'm happy with Coleman's output," Rowley said. "But I'll tell you it has been a confusing season. The people I thought wouldn't score are scoring and those I was counting on to score aren't doing so hot."

Steelhead venture learning experience

GLERS are a unique group of individuals, indeed related rival even the most ardest meters in loyalty to their sport. Ity do stoelheaders spend ops on the river throu iver, either wading or drifting in heir specially rigged boats, through-ut the coldest months of winter. I becovered this information last reshend on a drift boat trip down to Ausable River.

The Michigan Outdoor Writers Asciation held its winter conference or the weekend in West Branch. Praditionally, Saturday of the weekd conference is spent by particiants enjoying any of a number of atdoor activities in the surrounding Tom Schneider, a research fisherman and lecturer from Sterling Heights, agreed to take myself, and the Woods-N-Water News duo of Tom Campbell and Randy Jorgensen on a steelheading expedition down the AuSable on his drift boat. We met early Saturday morning below Poote Dam at the Rea Road Bridge.

ARMED WITH AN abundance of fatfish and Willy's Worms we entered the river and headed upstream Upon nearing the hole, however, we discovered it was already occupied fishing from shore. one of Schneider's favorite holes. by another party fishing from shore. ving the advantage of a boat, we could have easily intruded and fished the hole from the river side. But as I found out, that's not the style of a true steelheader.

"Whoever gets there first has the hole," explained Schneider, who, over the course of the day went as far as to ask wading anglers if we would disrupt their fishing if we ssed through their area with our boat: A classy act by a true sports-

The secret to catching steelies in the winter is to anger them into hitting your bait, according to Schneid-

TO REZONE TO:

During the winter months, steel-head are not actively feeding. Most are caught when they strike in anger rather than hunger.

Our plan was to drift three lures into a hole from the upstream side Each of our lures was out 50 feet. With the lures entering the hole at the same time, if a steelhead tried to avoid one lure by moving to the side it would immediately run into another lure, forcing it to either retreat or

"If the fish is backed up to the end of the hole, it will usually strike rather than leave the hole," Schneid-

WE WORKED diligently (actually Schneider worked diligently since he did all the rowing) throughout the day hitting most of the unoccupied holes between the bridge and the Whirlpool Launch.

Schneider fishes the river "as often as my wife will let me," he said, which translates into about every three out of four weekends from September to May. He knows the river like the back of his hand and called the holes by name. We fished the Meat Hole, the Meadows, the Refrigerator Hole and the Christmass Tree Hole to name a few

We tried everything Schneider could think of, but the bottom line was zero. Zilch. Nothing. Not one hit.

"In colder weather the steelhead tend to favor the deeper holes," explained Schneider. "What has been happening is that the river has had a very low water level and because of that some of the deeper holes are beginning to fill up. On top of that, with the water level so low at the mouth of the river the fish aren't coming in to the river like they usually do."

IN ALL HONESTY, Schneider gave us advanced warning that the fishing had been slow before we even stepped into the boat.

So why fish so often if the fish aren't always hitting?

"Once I figure out how to catch fish every time out I'll probably quit fishing." Schneider said. "Then it won't be a challenge anymore. That's the lure of the sport.

"If you take 10 steelheaders and put them on a river for a tournament, one of them will catch two fish, a couple of them will catch one and the rest will not catch any. The next day will be the same, except different people will catch the fish. That's what's so great about it."

If the odds are against you before you leave the house, many anglers will pass up a fishing trip for something a little more productive.

But that desire to go fishing anyway is what makes steelheaders such a unique bread of anglers.

In addition to fluffing their feathers so that a thicker layer of warmed air insulates the body, birds grow more feathers in winter. More feathers enable birds to trap their warmed air more efficiently.

White-tailed deer grow long, hollow hairs in winter. Summer coats of white-tailed deer are reddish in color and have hairs that are only about an inch in length. By winter, their coat is a brown-gray in color with hairs that are about 21/2 inches long.

Longer hairs allow a thicker layer of warm air to be trapped. Not only can deer trap air between their hairs, but since their hairs are hollow, they can trap air within their hairs. This is a double insulation adaption.

Collaborators found road to success

staff writer

Literary collaborators Hugh Culik and Ray Buck have created a third person, Charles H. Buck, who they readily agree "writes better than either of us.

Their first paperback, a medical thriller called "The Master Cure," Berkley Publishing Group, came out last fall. They are about to sign a contract with Berkley for their second medical thriller, and their third is in the plotting stage.

Culik and Buck, both East Siders, will share the secrets of their successful collaboration at 8 p.m. Monday in Cranbrook House Library, 350 Lone Pine, Bloomfield Hills. The program, "The Two-Headed Author," is sponsored by Cranbrook Writers' Guild.

THEIR WIVES were friends and co-workers before the two ever met. When the men were at a party and discovered they were both writing a book, each was a bit wary at first. After all, their backgrounds were vastly different.

Culik is a professor of English at the University of Detroit. He has published scholarly material on literature, particularly focused on Samuel Beckett. He is also an avid deer hunter, and has run a lumbering operation and taught high school.

Buck, on the other hand, is a medical doctor and psychiatrist. He is medical director of the Psychiatric Center of Michigan Hospital in New Baltimore.

"WE FIGURED it might be interesting (to collaborate)," Buck said. "Hugh writes images that are beautiful. I write dialogue and plot. I write for a concise book." "I write for a schizophrenic audi-

. . Each of us could write something the other couldn't and what emerged is that third voice that writes better than either of us," Culik said.

It doesn't take long to grasp that these two dynamic men, who both have demanding careers aside from writing books, are extremely well organized and committed to writing together. How they plot, write, rewrite

"As an ardent rationalist, it amazes me to see how we tune in on the same wave length," Buck, the collaborator, said.

They alternate writing and editing chapters. Buck said he is amazed when he reads what Culik wrote and finds the character acting the same way and doing the same thing as if he had written the chapter.

When they found an agent, he wanted no part of a book written by collaboration, so they didn't tell him until after "The Master Cure" was accepted for publication.

"We told him later and he refused to believe it, he said he would be able to tell if two people wrote it," Buck said.

The agent didn't admit Buck had any great part in the book until he read the detailed, terror-filled operating room scene in the next book, Buck said.

"I DRAW on my psychiatric ex-perience in dealing with drug addicts," Buck said. "I put all characters through a thorough Freudian analysis, psychologically and psychodynamically to make sure they are accurate."

We have all the data on them you're ever want to know, even to what's written on their tombstone," Culik said. "We don't use all of it, but we know everything about these people."

In addition to their goal of putting together a "page turner," Buck and Culik are intent upon dealing with current issues such as AIDS, gays and racial prejudice, as well as philosophical and ethical ones without being preachy.

Calman Shemi's art reveals the wonder of color

staff writer

Israeli artist Calman Shemi has refined his soft paintings to such an extent that it's difficult to tell 10 to 15 feet away whether they are done with fibers, paint on paper or paint on canvas.

He has all three kinds, plus sculpture and several lithographs, in his show at Danielle Peleg Gallery of West Bloomfield through February.

The fiber paintings, which he designs and has fabricated through processes he perfected himself, have layers, veils of color, incredibly soft edges of color and a look of resilience and permanence that is quite amazing. They are made color strand by color strand in a complicated process that takes place at Kibbutz Carmia in Israel.

SHEMI IS masterful with color. He has an easygoing manner and an infectious love of life, and his paintings, in whatever medium, convey those qualities. They are all joyous statements of the beauty of color and life. His painted aluminum pedestal-size sculptures are closely related to his paintings and convey the same feelings.

"Basic to my work is the natural, organic world," he said. "My work relates to nature rather than technology."

Look at his works in the gallery for a while, and images will begin to work their way out of many that at first appeared to be colorful abstracts - a landscape, a sailboat on a lake, a grove of trees, distant hills. While he and his wife and their two children now live in Jerusalem, he spent 20 years on a kibbutz and liked SHEMI WAS born in Argentina in 1939. He made up his mind very early in life to be an artist.

When he was 12, he found out that he could take the bus and enroll in a school for sculptors, he said. When he asked his father for bus fare and told him what it was for, "My father told me Jews aren't sculptors, you can't make a living as a sculptor, a doctor, be a lawyer . . .

Calman Shemi's acrylic on canvas, "Bodies in Formation," illustrates an approach he has used with great success several times in the exhibition.

But the young boy was determined and when he emigrated to Israel, he studied with German/Israeli sculptor Rudi Lehman.

As he was developing his style as an artist, he also developed as a philosopher, not in the formal sense, but as a way of life. He doesn't believe, for instance, that a bad person can be a wonderful artist.

"MY COLORATION, perhaps, is from the light in Israel," he said, hesitantly.

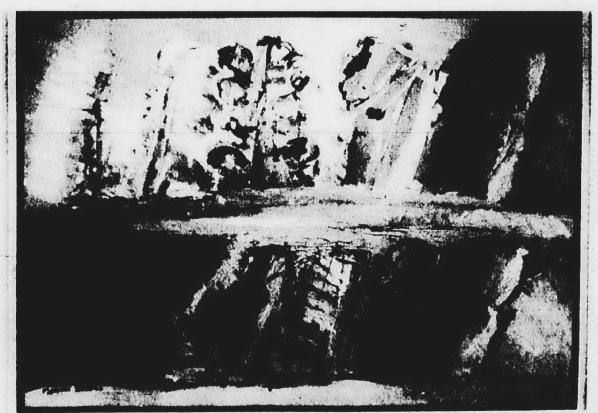

But "I don't believe in environment," he said. "I am going to New York (Soho district) for two months this summer. I want to try to work in the United States. Jerusalem is far away from the center of activity

"It's very important not to stay in the same place all the time. If you love today like you loved yesterday, it would be very boring. It's the same with art if you stay in the same place."

He liked Van Gogh's paintings and the "intensity of coloration," he said. He compared the red he uses to that of German-born, American artist Hans Hofmann.

"MY RED is Latin red - my red is from Spain. Hofmann's red is much more disciplined, it's European. My red is from blood, Hofmann's red is from the carpets of a room. He painted from inside, I paint from outside the house - open - sponta-

Books-on-tape can ease travel woes

ESTERDAY, when you were trapped (again) is bump-er-to-bumper, rush-hour traffic, wouldn't it have been nice to have spent the hour with a good book? Or last week, when you were out running, wouldn't it have been a little less tedious if you could have lost yourself in one of your favorite novels as you went along?

And think about how it would have shortened that long trip you recently took, had someone like John Lithgow, Lynn Redgrave or James Earl Jones read you an exciting story along

All these things are possible, you know, with an audio book cassette

As you're probably aware, an audio book is a recorded version of an original written work, usually contained in a package of two, 90-minute cassettes. Available at book stores (and soon, at video centers), prices average about $15 each. They're also available on loan at your local library.

Keep in mind that these books-on-tape are not the same as Talking Books for the blind. The audio packages are usually abridged versions of the book itself. A great many books lose much of their essential effectiveness, of course, when this happens, and nobody is suggesting that audio books will ever replace the pleasures of the complete, "real thing." But their fast-growing popularity does indicate that audio books have a certain appeal in our fast-moving, I-wish-I-had-more-time-toread society.

HEREIN, SOME hot-selling current titles:

• "Clear and Present Danger" by Tom Clancy. Read by David Ogden Stiers. (Simon and Schuster, $15.95) Clancy's adventure tale is still on the New York Times best-seller list after 21 weeks. But, while it's now in fourth place, this audio book remains the No. 1 audio best seller.

It's hard to imagine a more successful reading of "Clear and Present Danger" than this one by Stiers. You'll be deliciously enthralled by his dramatic, incisive interpretation of Clancy's gripping story, which focuses this time around on the CIA, the FBI, and villainous honchos in Colombia's powerful drug cartels. Much of the fun here is Stiers' reading of Clancy's dia-

• "The Vampire Lestat" by Anne Rice. Read by Michael York. (Random House, $14.95) If you're among the faint-ofheart, listen to York's absolutely masterful reading of Rice's sensuous and saddening horror tale only during the daylight

• "Straight" by Dick Francis. Read by Simon MacCorkindale. (Caedmon/Harper, $15.95) Francis fans will delight in this fast-moving story about injured steeplechase jockey Derek Franklin and the troubles he encounters when he inherits his brother's gem business. Actor MacCorkindale seems to be enjoying himself as he takes on the different voices of Francis' extensive dramatic personae, and his enthusiasm is contagious.

 "Cat Chaser" by Elmore Leonard. Read by Ken Howard. (Listen For Pleasure, $14.95) Leonard's remarkable gift for dialogue makes any of his works especially well-suited for audio entertainment, and "Cat Chaser" is no exception.

This is the tale of a freelance adventure seeker and a secondrate detective, who get involved with an exceedingly sleazy band of low-lifes in and around Florida and Latin America. Ken Howard's reading will pull you into Leonrd's suspense thriller from the very start.

- · "Shelley II: The Middle of My Century" by Shelley Winters. Read by Shelley Winters. (Simon and Schuster, $14.95) Sit back, relax and let Shelley tell you more than you thought you ever wanted to know about her life. Somehow, in the tell-
- "The Good Times" by Russell Baker. Read by Arte Johnson. (Dove, $14.95) Comic Arte Johnson may seem an odd choice to narrate Baker's look back at a career in journalism that began in Baltimore when he was a police reporter, and culminated in his position as a columnist with the New York Times.
- "As Far as You Can Go Without a Passport" by Tom Bodett. Read by Tom Bodett. (Bantam, $14.95) From the 1985 book by Tom ("Motel 6") Bodett, this collection of personal observations will charm the reader/listener who is charmed by that other folksy observer, Garrison Keillor. Bodett, who grew up on a Michigan farm, has a background in radio which is evident here as he relates his thoughts on such matters as doing the laundry and building a home. Commentary is complemented by the piano artistry of Johnny B.

- and the men, in particular, never openly admit to romantic sentiments. What are your suggestions for a party that isn't too commercial, and in beeping with the valen-

A. What has come down to us as a St. Valentine's Day celebration has a long history to draw upon ever since the Roman Emperor Claudius II beheaded one of the several martyrs named Valentine in A.D. 269.

The observance of this early momentous event gradually shifted to a romantic theme because Valentine was supposed to have fallen in love with his jailer's daughter before his beheading - and had sent her a note signed, "from your Valentine."

By the 1890s, when the holiday had become thoroughly commercialized, a typical valentine card pictured women dressed in scarlet with blue and green shawis. The men would be dressed in lavender trousers, yellow vests, blue overcoats, and green or crimson cravats

You can have a lot of fun picking up on this — 19th century valentine card colors by incorporating them into your decorations. If your friends cared to go along with the idea, have them dress up in contemporary versions of 19th century attire. The results will be a lot more festive than adhering exclusively to the conventional red and white colors sold for valentine parties.

You could also incorporate another ancient tradition of pulling names from a box for partners to whom one pledges loyalty for the year. Translate this into drawing names for dance partners or for couples who will be expected to entertain the rest of the guests. Incidentally, the valentine box we see today filled with can-dy was originally intended to hold names of young men and women intent on romance.

An alternate idea is to work with the conventional bright red and white Valentine party decor, but add deeper reds and silver to the color scheme to make it more sophisticated and interesting

Q. I want to give my new boyfriend a gift for St. Valentine's Day, but I'm having difficulty figuring out what he might like. His apartment looks like a typical bachelor's pad with no special color or design theme; and his clothing is also not well-the has part and demands one them. Where do I start?

A You can look for cluss to your new hourseasts new boyfriend's personality by analyzing how he relates to possessions. But as recent sociology research re-minds us, possessions are not always things, they can also be people and memories — especially childhood memories

It appears from what you've described, that your friend gravitates, not to the significance of physical things, but to people as posses In order to give him a meaningful gift he will remember, you have to translate his predisposition into things, or events that relate to his relationship with people.

The King Fahd International Airport, in Dammam, Saudi Arabia, designed by Minoru Yamasaki Associates of Troy, is seen as a gateway into Saudi Arabia and the Middle East.

Yamasaki designs airport

By Dale Northup special writer

The Saudi Arabian peninsula and its neighboring states in past centuries went relatively unnoticed because of geographic isolation — surrounded by water on three sides and rugged terrain on the fourth.

But now it is gaining considerable economic and political attention throughout the world.

With a sense of manifest destiny, the Saudis are embarking on a massive modernization campaign.

DURING THE late 1970s, the Riyadh Development Authority launched a billion dollar project now called the Riyadh Diplomatic Quarter. The city of Riyadh itself has undergone such a dramatic transformation and modernization that it is often referred to as the "largest building site in the world."

New highways cross the Arabian peninsula. The Saudis are aware that their gas and oil resources are depletable. They are exchanging them for others: technology, industry and education for all their citizens.

Projecting into the 21st century, the Saudis are completing the King Fahd International Airport in Dammam. The terminal buildings were designed by the Troy-based architectural firm of Minoru Yamasaki Associates.

WITH A total 4 million square feet, the complex will consist of passenger terminals for national and international carriers. A central area houses a mosque and parking structure in front of the terminal. A control tower and other support buildings are adjacent.

The terminal, now nearing completion, is characterized by a monumental portico on both sides containing the arrival and departure levels with monumental arches in the Islamic tradition. Vast expanses of glass, supported by stanchions and stainless steel clips, lend an airborne weightlessness as well as a dramatic entry much in keeping with Yamasaki's sense of delicacy.

The control tower is a free-standing, 87-meter high structure adjacent to the terminal, providing a vertical accent with ribs that flare out at the top.

THE CENTRAL feature, functioning much like a jewel, is the mosque that symbolizes the influence of Islam on the lives of the people of Saudi Arabia.

It is a cylindrical building, which is a derivative of centrally organized Byzantine structures. Capped by a dome, it is patterned after the Blue Mosque in Jerusalem, spanning more than 1,000 years as a tantamount role in Islamic architecture.

Beneath the dome is a shallow drum containing perforated bronze with abstract elements based on Arabic design or the "geometry of the spirit." Overlaid with colored glass, the inside is permeated with dramatically colored light during the day and is noticeable on the outside when lit from within at night.

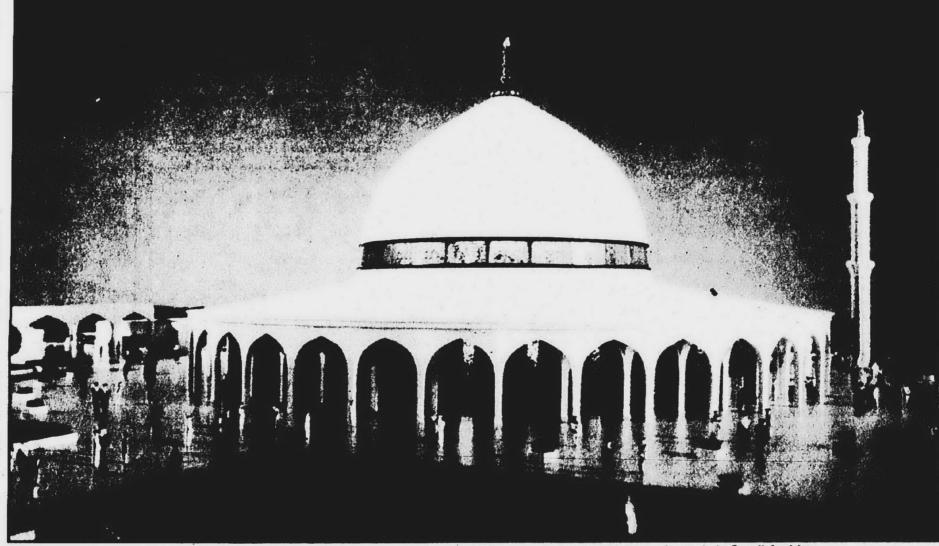

Adjacent to the mosque is a minaret, a tall tower from which the muezzin traditionally calls the worshipers to prayer five times a day.

REMOTE FROM the terminal complex is another terminal — the Royal Pavilion — for the use of the king, his entourage and foreign dignitaries. It is the second one designed by MYA, the other at the King Abdulaziz International Airport.

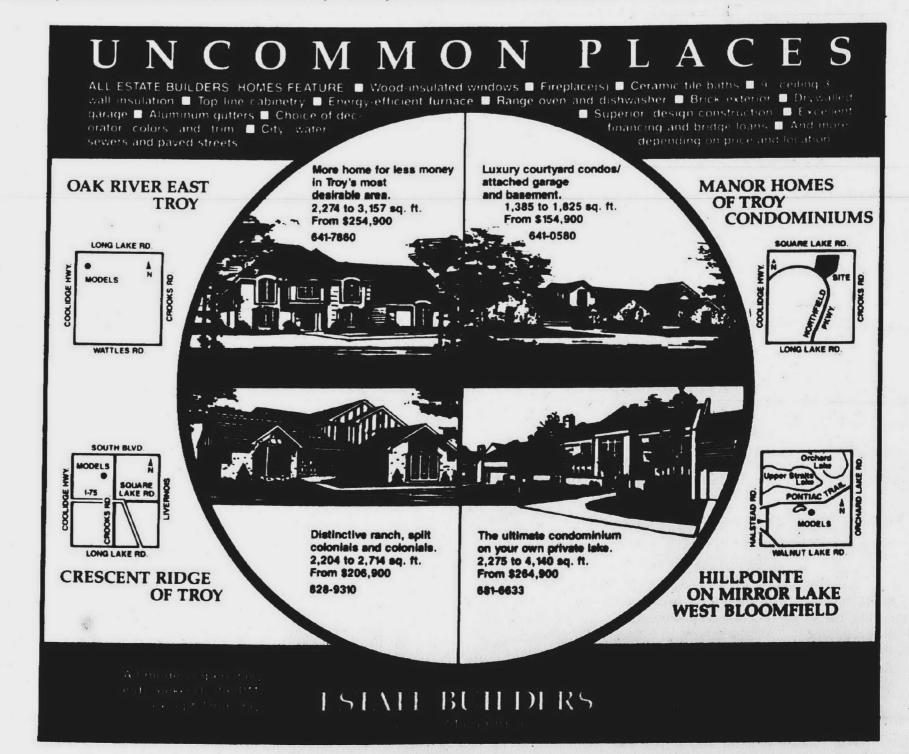

The terminal consists of three architectural elements that contain five separate zones of activity. The dominant, central pavilion houses the formal reception hall. Like the mosque, it is centrally planned, from which radiate splayed arches. Underneath the arches are vast sheets of glass similarly supported as those in the terminal.

Its architectural orientation serves to overscore the importance of the king in elegant surroundings. On either side are smaller structures housing separate facilities for men and women as guests or members of the royal family, and separate facilities for the king and press corps.

Dale Northup is a college professor and architectural historian.

The mosque is the central feature of the terminal complex and symbolizes the influence of Islam on the lives of people in Saudi Arabia.

Area builders, developers and suppliers gave this assessment of what they see as trends for the '90s after touring the National Association of Home Builders' annual show:

Where would you look for the most-innovative building products? If you're one of the nation's 60,000 home build-ers, you'd look to the National Association of Home Build-er's Show held in Atlanta last month.

Exhibitors from around the world filled more than 400,000 square feet with products created to dazzle the eye and ease everyday life.

Traditionally elegant design and decor are rapidly replacing the minimalism and country Victorian looks of the 80s. Products for every area of the house, from entry doors to cabinets, faucets to fixtures, seem to reflect a respect for consumer needs and tastes.

Delta Faucets is a case in point. New kitchen and bath faucets have a European look, with sleek, high spouts and a variety of bright colors. "We're offering an enhancement of style with Delta's traditional mechanisms," said R.C. Walker, director of product planning.

Delta is featuring pressure-balanced valves in its shower faucets, which have two controls, one for volume of water, the other for temperature. With a diverter in the spout, these faucets also are water savers. Pressure-balanced valves, also offered by Moen and Grohe America, allow a bather to select the water temperature accurately to within one degree Fahrenheit, to turn off the shower and to turn it back on at the exact temperature and volume.

In addition to the thermostatic control, the valves prevent temperature shocks that often result from sudden changes in hot or cold water pressure. Grohe's model can

Kitchen were also home to innovations at the show. Induction cooktops are the newest development in stovetop cooking and are featured by GE, Whirlpool and Jenn-Aire. It is a glass ceramic heating surface that works on magnetic energy. There is no heat from the surface because it uses metal, cast iron or stainless steel cookware as a heating Cooking is quick and so is cleanup. Pot boil over? Glass cleaner and a cloth will take care of it.

"When it cools, you can use it as an extra counter space," points out Debbie Earle of Whirlpool. Other new appliance features include refrigerator takeout counters, which are small doors that provide easy access to cold beverages and snacks without opening the re-frigerator's main door. These are offered by GE and Hotpointe. GE has also developed small refrigerator bins that can go directly from the refrigerator to the microwave and then to the dishwasher Grohe America, a maker of premium faucets, has introduced the Ladylux, which makes cleanup if not a breeze, then less of a hassle. The Ladylux's spout is interchangeable with several tools. The water flow can be changed to a push-locked spray; the spout can be removed and a food scraper, spray brush for delicate china and crystal, or a filter can be added.

'It actually becomes an appliance, just like a dishwasher or stove," said Al DeGenova at Grobe. KOHLER, THE maker of bothroom products, displayed five sinks featuring artists' original designs. They range from a cobalt blue on white Delft floral pattern to a bright Haitian-inspired design to a 19th century European botanical to a stark 20th century black/gray/white design Matching ceramic tiles and accessories are available

The company also is promoting a new Overture whirlpool that is intended as an affordable step up from a bathtub in new construction. Constructed of a composite material that is lightweight and easy to install, it comes in several colors and can accommodate two persons.

We're now saying, 'Here, look, this has Kohler styling at a moderate price," said Nancy Deptolla, Kohler manager

Kohler is also building a line of barrier-free showers and baths that come with a seat, grip and rail bars, and handheld shower sprays. The units are set lower into the floor for easier access.

Latchkey children were in mind when Schlage Lock Co. developed a keyless lock system.

"A lot of the people we are selling it to are parents who both work, and the kids keep losing their keys," said Jerry

The lock is both a deadbolt and a latch connected with infrared sensors. The code is set inside and the door is unlocked from the outside by turning the doorknob to the code as you would a combination lock.

In place of down cushions - once the mark of top quality - a polyurethane or spring core wrapped with polyester or down is less expensive, yet long-lasting and comfortable.

A less costly alternative to top-ofthe-line, eight-way hand-tied springs is a one-piece spring unit. The wire springs that stretch across the frame were developed originally for car in-teriors, according to Norwalk Furniture Corp., a manufacturer in Norwalk, Ohio. Elastic webbing, a less expensive choice, is also acceptable, says the company.

For some sofas, springs under the front seat edge, which reduce stress on the front of the cushions and prevent the legs from resting against a hard frame, are a desirable feature, says Norwalk. The option is not available on sleep sofas because of their construction.

and if properly made they should not delaminate, or peel. If chips or dents are likely — as in children's furnisolid wood is a sturdier choice, says Ethan Allen Furniture, a manufacturer and retailer headquartered in Danbury, Conn.

Examine cabinet drawers carefully. Interiors should be sanded smooth, and each drawer should have center guides that make opening and closing easy. Open a drawer eight to 10 inches, then close it with one finger at any corner. It should work easily and line up neatly with the cabinet front. Each drawer should have a dust panel to prevent dust and foreign objects from enter-ing from above or below, says Ethan

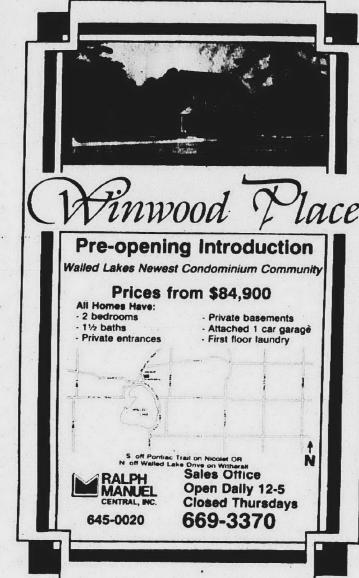

For the dining room, a tarnish-inhibiting felt-covered silverware tray in a buffet is a convenience if you plan to store sterling flatware.

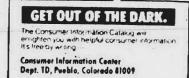

Dining chair legs should be slightly rounded at the bottom and sanded smooth to prevent snags to carpet or scratches to wood floors, says the Workbench furniture chain, headquartered in New York.

Since there is a variety of shapes and sizes for chair backs and seats, it's ideal for all family members to try dining chairs before buying. As a rule, cushioned or upholstered chairs are most comfortable. A cane or woven seat is cooler. Shaped wooden seats, called saddle seats, help support the lower back. Flat wooden slats are the least comfortable.

If the dining table and chairs are not a set, be sure the chair arms will fit easily under the table apron. Before buying, arrange the chairs around the table if possible. If not, carefully measure table and chairs to be sure they fit. There should be at least 10 inches from the chair seat to the table apron.

Bridal service makes going to the chapel less worrisome

By Cathleen Collins Lee special writer

Then Pat Kent's daughter Nannette got married two years ago. Pat thought they had taken care of every detail

"But there was so much turmoil right before the wedding," she remembers. "We had a reputable florist, but he had gone out of town and given the job to his assistant. The flower girls' baskets had so much moss in them they could barely carry them. There were roses that looked like trees and had to be cut down. The altar flowers never made it to the altar. My daughter and I were saying curt things to each other. I thought, This is supposed to be the happiest day of her life, and I'm making her miserable."

That distressing experience made Pat realize how helpful it would be to have an extra person on hand the day of a wedding to handle all the last-minute details and snags. So she and her friend Marge Winchell formed a wedding planning service called Going to the Chapel which not only makes the wedding arrangements but comes to the church and the reception to make sure they're carried out.

"IT'S A VERY difficult time for people because it's such an important day and you're putting yourself in so many other people's hands," Kent points out. "You're depending on the florist, the photographer, the caterer, the bartenders. You need someone there who isn't emotionally involved and doesn't have a role to play. I would have loved to have someone like me at my daughter's wedding," she sighs.

Long before the wedding, Kent and Winchell sit down with those who are planning it and offer all kinds of information about photographers, dressmakers, florists, halls and other services. Kent makes recommendations but doesn't try to impose her own ideas.

"We're not here to make their choices for them" she insists. "Every girl dreams of the type of wedding she wants. We're just here to help ner get to that point."

Once the major choices have been made, Going to the Chapel takes over all the phone calls and legwork, communicating with the bride by phone as things develop or other. choices need to be made.

"If the bride has a question, she just has to make one phone call," Kent notes. "And we take a much more personal interest than the caterer or photographer is going to."

The day of the wedding, Kent and Winchell arrive at the church at least an hour early. They check on the flowers and church decorations, confer with the person who runs the chapel. and stand by while the bride and bridesmaids are dressing. They also bring along a basket of emergency supplies - thread and needles, makeup, nylons, hair clips, tissues, aspirin, stain remover and even smelling salts.

If the facilities aren't air-conditioned, they bring along small fans for the dressing rooms. They stay through the service, coordinate things at the hall, and stay until the reception is in full swing.

IN KENT'S EXPERIENCE, one of the most difficult parts of planning a wedding is dealing with the photographer. "Many of them really like to run the show," she notes. "Either they keep the couple forever and delay the reception, or they expect the couple to hurry through things like cutting the cake so they can go home." Kent tries to work with photographers beforehand so they don't dominate the wedding.

Another area where she can be helpful, Kent şays, is in defusing family tensions. "Weddings can cause all sorts of problems," she notes. "Famlies can disagree about the size of the wedding and the cost and whom to invite. The brides' and grooms families may not get along. Because we're not emotionally involved, we can help them sort those things out."

Going to the Chapel charges a flat fee of $400 for its services, from planning the major aspects of the wedding to assisting the day of the ceremony. They charge additional fees for addressing invitations, or helping with the rehearsal dinner or showers. For Kent, it is an enjoyable and worthwhile occupation.

"When I was growing up in Ohio, my family had a business making custom bridal dresses, so dealing with brides has been part of my life," she says. "There's nothing more special than seeing a bride come down the aisle - and knowing you've been part of it is really something."

Erical registries at local stores are wood. Black & Decker's bridal procrain manager. "Listed here are gifts from this list," she says. "Make sure to purchase it at the store where the registry is, so that it will be crossed off and no one will duplicate the gift."

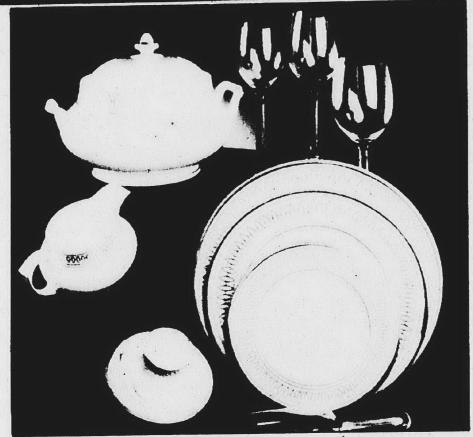

But if getting a gift idea from the re- . gistry seems too impersonal and routine, go ahead and make a creative, personal choice, she says. And giving a personal gift to the bride, instead of a household item, is appropriate if you're a friend of the bride. "Roommates in college? Get a college memento - per-

> She cautions that the giver should think small, choosing compact versions of kitchen appliances, since the couple's first home likely will be compact.

Why not rent a dress? After all most wedding gowns are worn only once it makes sense to avoid spendng an astronomical sum on something destined to become a bulky souvenir of the event. ernernber the old gangster movies, where shotgun toting, impeccably dressed men escort the happy couple in an early

Phil Nicholas and Jake Jacobs, coowners of Forget Me Not Limousines in Westland, saw that scenario re-enacted in one of their antique cars last summer. giving the bride and groom some unique wedding photo opportunities, to say the

The pair of former skilled tradesmen merged their limousine-rental companies about three years ago, and be cause of customer requests, began restoring and renting antique and classic cars last spring.

'We're the only people in Michigan who rent antique cars." said Nicholas. speaking of an asortment of old-time favorites like their turniloise and white '57 Chevy which rents for $125 per day or $35 per hour if chauffeur driven.)

The car most requested for weddings is a 1938 Rolls Royce. It has been modified to include air-conditioning and other modern conveniences inside. while maintaining the authentic look on the vehicle's exterior

Another popular choice is their "oneof-a-kind" creme-colored stretch mousine, dubbed "The Gangster,

"It's made to look like a Duesenbury from the '20s or '30s," said Jacobs, "Its got stainless-steel pipes coming out of the hood going into the fender, a wide running board and a spare tire on the front fender," he said.

Since offering antique and classic cars, business has been great. "There's a certain romance to these cars." Jacobs said. The men have lots of stories to tell of weddings they've helped make special by providing couples a taste of days-gone by

ONE OF THE REASONS limousines are popular for weddings, says Jacobs. is that many of todays bridal gowns can not fit into a normal car without crushing. However, some of the older rental cars have as much room as today's limousines in their back seats, he said.

In addition to providing out-of-the-ordinary transportation, the partners offer many ideas to help the couple have a wonderful wedding experience.

"They only get married once," said Nicholas. "But we do about 500 weddings a year." Because of this, they know things like where to go for memorable pictures, and how long the couple should plan on renting the vehicle.

Jacobs suggests an itinerary that includes limousine rides for the groomsmen and bridesmaids before the ceremony. "It's a nice way to say 'Thankyou." he suggests.

There is a sense of lightness and fun as they recounted experiences they've had with couples because of the nove travel arrangements.

"SOMETIMES WE HAVE a little fun with people," said Jacobs. For instance, once we had chauffeurs climb in on the wrong side of the rolls." (The steering wheel is on the right side of this European-made car)

People also have a hard time finding the gas tanks in some models. The 1933 Buick, for example, is a puzzle to most of their customers. "You turn the key to the "on" position, push the gas pedal, and it automatically starts," said Nicholas.

We've even seen wedding parties coordinate their bridesmaids dresses with the cars," said Jacobs.

A word of caution: Couples planning to use an antique or classic vehicle should make reservations as soon as possible. Jacobs recommends reserving at least three months in advance.
