Amoco fuel oil discovered in sewer system

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Readings taken by Amoco Oil Co. last month from sanitary sewers in Plymouth show evidence of petroleum-based pollutants, contaminants that are being carried through the sewer system to the county interceptor into the city of Detroit's water treatment plant.

"It is an indication that they (Amoco) are polluting our waste water," said city engineer Ken West. "We outlet into the county interceptor, which outlets into the City of Detroit.

"It's something we shouldn't be putting into the sewer. I don't know that there's any immediate hazards, except that it might upset the treatment process because the hydrocarbons aren't expected in a sewage treatment plant," he said. "If they're not treated, they would overflow and go out into the Detroit River and Lake Erie."

The corner of Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street has been on a state Department of Natural Resources list of contaminated sites since 1979. For years, gallons of fuel oil and gasoline have seeped into groundwater and soil from leaking underground storage tanks at the Amoco service station there.

Wells drilled last summer by an Amoco consultant show contamination extends from Doug's Plymouth Standard to the area south of the Mayflower Meeting House, west of Main Street and east of the Box Bar and Grill.

The DNR is ordering further testing to determine the full vertical and horizontal extent of the contamination, said David Rymph, environmental quality manager with the DNR's environmental response division.

THE CITY hasn't yet notified Detroit Water and Sewerage Department of the situation.

"Until we know what the problem is and we're satisfied we have a handle on the problem, we can't make a decision as to who we should be telling," said Plymouth city attorney Ron Lowe. "It is very possible we would be within permissible levels."

An engineer with Detroit's Water and Sewerage Department said petroleum pollutants, or hydrocarbons, "are prohibited in any amount, because they're flammable.

"How large a concern they are of course depends on how much there is. If it's entering the system in significant amounts, we'd be concerned. Just like anything else, there is a limit on how much cleansing that can be done.

"Hydrocarbons are a potential fire hazard, and a hazard to waste treatment plant workers. Gasoline gives off fumes, so there is that problem, also," said the engineer, who said he planned to contact Plymuth officials about the problem. The engineer declined to give his name, citing a gag order placed on city employees by Mayor Coleman Young.

There's no evidence drinking water is affected, said West. "Ninety percent of it is coming from Lake Huron. They do have some intakes on the Detroit River near Belle Isle, way upstream from where the sewage treatment plant is."

That's not to say a potential problem doesn't exist, West added.

"Our water mains distribute water to all the residents in the city and they're pressurized. There really would be no danger as long as they remain pressurized. However, if there was a fire or a water main break where the area that's polluted would come into play, it's possible for there to be negative pressure such that the groundwater pollution would enter our water mains."

CITY OFFICIALS are less than pleased with the manner in which Amoco performed the testing.

"Amoco was supposed to forward to me a written proposal that would outline the sampling methods and so forth and I or my designee was supposed to observe

Dog sought

A Plymouth Township couple is still seeking information on the dog that bit their son Feb. 20, as the boy is getting rabies shots.

Michael and Cynthia Shaft, who operate a Canton chiropractic office, said the incident occurred in the Joy Road-Canton Center area. The dog, which bit their son Jeremy, 12, is described as a black short-hair with patches of white on its chest and stomach, pointed ears and no tail or a short stub. It is possibly a pit-bull, Shaft said.

The Shafts can be called at 459-7281 or 455-3933.

Job workshop

A jobs program, "Preparing to Live and Work in the 21st Century," will be 7-9 p.m. Wednesday at Plymouth-Canton High School.

The event is open to juniors at Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton High Schools. It will deal with: What employers will look for in the future; the changing job market between now and the 21st century; and questions to ask when selecting a college or other types of advanced training.

The workshop is being sponsored by high school counselors in cooperation with Eastern Michigan University and Michigan State University.

For more information, call John Seidelman at 451-6600, ex. 338.

Central Middle School students didn't like one of Michael J. Foxx's music selections.

Michael J. Foxx, WHYT's disc jockey, and Ryan Young, ambassador for muscular dystrophy, motivate students at Central Middle School in Plymouth to participate in the fund-raiser to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Teens mix fun and fund-raising

Students at Central Middle School in Plymouth had fun recently while kicking off a fund-raiser for muscular dystrophy that will culminate with a dance Friday, March 9.

Putting this together is Charlie Jones. Among other things, Jones is media specialist and director of student activities and the student council.

"Teenagers at this age are so much into themselves that we thought it would be nice for them to do something for others," Jones said.

MICHAEL J. FOXX, WHYT popular disc jockey, was present at the kickoff event with muscular dystrophy's ambassador, Ryan Young.

They got the students enthused about the dance and about getting their friends, neighbors and relatives to pledge for the muscular dystrophy association. Foxx and Young will try to come to the dance, they said.

Sonni Joe Harris, also a WHYT disc jockey, will be at the dance. Open only to Central students, it will last 3-9 p.m.

ALTHOUGH THIS is midwinter break, Jones and some students have been busy going to area businesses and getting them to pledge. The response has been good, and the students got a feel for what it is like going to the store managers and getting donations for other people, Jones said.

Anyone who wishes to donate to the Muscular Dystrophy Association can contact Central or send a check, Jones said.

Plymouth delays hiring manager

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

The next episode in the search for a Plymouth city manager is scheduled for March 12.

Saturday, the Plymouth City Commission scheduled a meeting for Monday, March 12.

"Hopefully we'll have a recommendation" from Rod Bartell of Bartell & Bartell Ltd., Mayor Dennis Bila said. Bartell & Bartell was hired by the city to search for a city manager.

The mayor said he talked to Bartell last week, after Randy Byrne turned down the job. Byrne, city manager of Grand Blanc, was chosen from among three outside finalists.

After delaying a decision on whether he'd accept, Byrne told the mayor Feb. 26 that he wouldn't take the job. Byrne mentioned the city's $250,000 budget deficit in deciding not to take the Plymouth job.

'I think we should offer the job to Bill Graham.'
— Jerry Vorva, city commissioner

BILA SAID he told Bartell, "I had various concerns about the results of the city manager search."

Bartell "owed us an explanation of what went wrong, and he owes us a recommendation of what to do next," Bila said.

"As far as we're concerned, the contract hasn't been settled," Commissioner John Vos said.

The city spent $20,000 searching for candidates. The search took three months.

Commissioners Mary Childs and Jerry Vorva say they favor giving the job, at least for a year, to acting city manager William Graham. Graham is also the city's finance director.

OTHER COMMISSIONERS said that's a possibility. Another possibility would be to go back to those who applied for the job.

The other outside finalists were Jerome Kisscorni, Tecumseh city manager, and John Strutner, an official with the Virginia Department of

While one city commissioner said he was satisfied that Bartell & Bartell Ltd. did a good job in running the failed city manager search, others aren't as satisfied.

The city paid the consulting firm $20,000 to head a search for city manager candidates, but the three outside finalists turned down the job.

"I've got a call into (Rod) Bartell, I'm very concerned with him and the money we spent," said Mayor Dennis Bila last week.

"It seems to me the candidates should have been screened. They should have been able to determine the price of housing and he should have let them know the potential problems," Bila continued.

FINALISTS JEROME Kisscorni and John Strutner cited Plymouth's housing costs as a main reason for not taking the job. Randy Byrne, named by the commission as their choice for city manager, turned down the job, after expressing concern about the city's budget deficit.

Asked if the commission could consider withholding payment to Bartell & Bartell, Bila said, "I definitely have thoughts on that, whether he delivered the service he contracted for." The mayor said he would

Study cites problem areas in police department

City to hire one police officer, 3A

By Kevin Brown

The downtown cruising problem helped spark discontent in the Plymouth Police Department, according to a consultant's study.

The Bartell & Bartell Ltd. study, based on interviews mainly conducted 10 months ago, was released last week.

Police Chief Richard Myers said he has been moving to improve problem areas cited by the consultants. One such area was communication between police managers and subordinates, which the study said was weak.

"I recognize it and agree with it," he said, adding there have been meetings with officers performing dispatch operations to hear their concerns.

"I look forward to continuing that and increasing that type of thing," Myers said.

Ironically, Police Chief Richard Myers said department efforts to establish a set chain of command — which the study said helped spark discontent — were recommended by Bartell & Bartell in a police study performed five years ago.

Bartell & Bartell was commissioned to do the police study by then city manager Henry Graper, for almost $9,800. The firm also performed the recent city manager search for $20,000.

The study recommends less emphasis on output statistics, a shortened chain of command 'and a general reverting back to more traditional small city policing programs.'

"It cannot be established that there was any clear intent by the management to set up a regressive, retributive style of management," according to the study.

Still, "The introduction of a performance-based personnel evaluation system furthered the perception that the management staff was indeed exacting its retributions," the study continued.

Yet, Bartell & Bartell reported "significant evidence" that police management has tried to reverse discontent in the department.

The performance-based system cited by the consultant evaluates officers in several areas. Those areas include evaluating officers on the number of traffic and parking tickets they write in one month compared to previous months.

The study recommends less emphasis on output statistics, a shortened chain of command "and a general reverting back to more traditional small city policing programs."

Myers has said the performance standards were used to boost officers' effectiveness. Some officers — and city Commissioner Jerry Vorva, a former officer — have accused the department of having ticket quotas.

A police committee has been reviewing performance standards, which the department seeks to change, Myers said.

"Chief Myers, with the assistance of his commander and supervisory staff, has developed a solid core policy and procedures manual," the consultants continued.

Steamed up tenant damages property crime watch

A tenant ticked off at his Plymouth landlord decided he'd get even after he was evicted. He glued his refrigerator door shut.

The tenant, a 37-year-old Dearborn Heights man, was evicted March 1 because of numerous problems regarding rent and other things, said police.

The tenant also damaged items besides the refrigerator. Police advised the landlord, a 54-year-old Livonia man, to take the refrigerator in to get a written report of the damage and an estimate.

The landlord, who was issued a victim's rights card, plans to pursue the matter with his lawyer.

BUM LUCK: Thursday wasn't a good day for a 28-year-old Dearborn man. Not only did he have to spend the morning in 35th District Court, but when he went to leave, he found the windshield of his 1984 Oldsmobile cracked. Damage to passenger-side window of the Cutlass was estimated at more than $100. Police said there was no indication the windshield had been hit with any sort of projectile.

CAR VANDALIZED: A car owner on Hackberry learned Wednesday that someone smashed his left rear window, after a Plymouth Township patrol officer discovered the vandalism.

The damage, estimated at $150, was spotted at 1:20 a.m., the police report said. There are no suspects.

BUD MAN: An employee of a Plymouth Township party store took down the license number of a truck driven by a man who took a 12-pack of Budwiser beer without paying Tuesday.

The man, of Wayne, was phoned by Plymouth Township police. He told them the truck "may have been borrowed by a friend." Police said they plan to charge the man with larceny in the 4:50 p.m. theft.

PUMP HOUSE VISITED: More than $100 in damage was done to the city pump house at 1154 N. Mill recently. Police on patrol found the pump station door wide open.

It appeared someone forced open the door, separating the screws from the hasp. Control boxes had been opened and gone through, police said. The DPW was being notified. It's unknown whether the damage is recent.

the sampling," said West. "Then they'd provide us with all the results of the testing."

"What they did was come in here and get a copy of my sewer and water maps. Unbeknownst to me they contacted our DPW who went with them, lifted the manhole covers, and did a certain amount of testing. Then I received a report on what they did.

"I wrote them a letter a week ago apprising them they weren't following the procedure. I asked them to back up a little bit. I said let's go back and start like we had previously agreed on."

Lowe said he was "a little surprised and disappointed that Amoco had represented that they would make arrangements and it would all be coordinated with Ken West's office, and then in their exuberance to get the job done they kind of overlooked that step." Lowe said he's forwarding a copy of West's letter to Amoco's attorneys.

"I'm aware that how they did it is not going to satisfy my city engineer," said Lowe. "We didn't have to be here in this position. We could be so much further."

ATTORNEY MICHAEL Southerland is suing Amoco in U.S. District Court on behalf of Lorenz Square. Owner Ralph Lorenz is seeking damages in excess of $300,000 for expenses he has incurred in lost rent and in replacing sump pumps and drain tiles ruined by fuel oil at the Mayflower Meeting House.

With the exception of Speedy Printing, all Lorenz' tenants, including the Observer, have left the Meeting House because of fuel oil fumes in the building.

Southerland said he's still waiting for Amoco's lawyers to say whether they're going to contest liability.

Recently, Southerland took the deposition of Dave LeClerc, a geologist with Neyer, Tiseo & Hindo, Ltd. of Farmington Hills, who performed the drilling last summer for Amoco. LeClerc testified that Amoco is the source of the pollutant, said Southerland.

Neyer, Tiseo has since been fired by Amoco. Another consultant has been hired.

Southerland also is waiting for Amoco to submit an acceptable cleanup plan, as ordered by the DNR.

Fuel oil contains benzene, ethylbenzene, xylene and toluene. Benzene and ethylbenzene have been known since the 1930s to cause cancer in humans and animals, according to the Wayne County Health Department. Xylene has been shown to cause liver function abnormalities. Toluene can cause irritation of the eyes, throat respiratory tract and skin. Chronic exposure can cause liver and kidney toxicity.

AMOCO SPOKESMAN Chuck Mason said a decision has been made "to place some more monitoring wells to further verify what the situation is.

"It could be there is some amount of hydrocarbon products or fumes in the storm sewer lines beginning right from there, right around the service station and out from there in all directions — wherever the sewer ran from there.

"We can't at this time do anything with the property that's involved in the suit. That is going to have to be worked out by the court."

Mason said he can't speculate as to when the site will be cleaned up.

"Trying to know what you'll find and what it will take — it's impractical to even guess that. You have a complicated underground situation. Certainly those aren't quickly cleaned up. It's a long-term process."

Township golf course fee increase approved

It'll cost you more this year to tee it up at Plymouth Township's Hilltop Golf Course.

Rates for 18 holes will rise $1 on weekdays, weekends and holidays. And nine-hole rates will go up 50 cents on weekdays and $1 on weekends and holidays.

The township board of trustees approved the increases, requested by the golf course manager, at their Tuesday meeting.

James Anulewicz, township municipal services director, said the rate increases bring Hilltop's fees in line with other area courses.

The new fees are $9 for nine holes and $11 for 18 holes on weekdays. Weekend and holiday rates are $15 for nine holes and $17 for 18 holes.

Trustee Smith Horton said the $15 weekend nine-hole rate "is kind of high compared to the average" — $11 at nearby Fellows Creek, Salem Hills, Mission Hills and Fox Hills.

Anulewicz said that while several courses list weekend nine-hole rates, nine-hole play usually isn't allowed until late afternoon on weekends at several area courses.

Plymouth Township residents get a 50-cent discount on all rates if identification is shown. New rates for senior and junior golfers have not been set yet.

The rate increase keeps Hilltop rates generally lower than those at area courses. Rates for 18 holes at nearby courses range from $13.50 to $17 on weekdays and $18 to $28 for 18 holes on weekends.

In 1989, Hilltop fees totaled just under $220,000, said Rosemary Harvey, township finance director.

Part of that total pays for maintenance of the course.

Youngsters enjoy skating holiday

By A. Giralt Bedford
staff writer

It's midwinter break at the Plymouth Canton Schools. Thursday, children enjoyed it by running, tripping and tumbling on the Skatin Station's polished wooden floor.

Brian Lake, 9, a fourth grader at Isbister Elementary, still preferred skating than going to school, and for a clear-cut reason.

"It's funner," he said.

Brian was there with sister Krissy, 4, and brother Jeff, 2, all in skates.

THE PARENT-TEACHER group at Isbister Elementary was hosting a skating party to benefit the school. Thrusday's party was the fifth and last of the year.

It was also the kickoff for the ISNT (Isbister Says No Team) program, a drug awareness program, said Jaya Wilson, the group's vice president.

"The school has benefited a lot from these parties," said Pat Holman, treasurer.

Money collected is used to buy computer equipment and to finance ISNT, she said.

The group is planning speakers and an April walk-a-thon. The parent group also plans to get the Blue Pigs, the Detroit Police signing group, to come to the school.

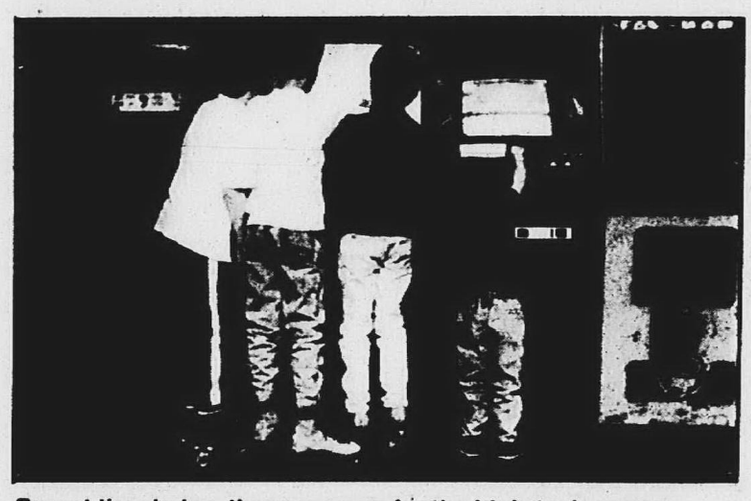

The purpose of these activities is to inform the children about drugs, in a way that "it isn't just preaching, but it is fun," Wilson said.

STILL, WHEN it came to skating, some children were not sure about the fun part.

"In school it's more fun, because all your friends are there and you can play with them," said Maria Rudher, 8, a second grader at Isbister.

"I'd rather be in a movie theater watching a movie," said Rupe Amin, 10, a fourth grader at Canton's Gallimore Elementary.

But she came so she wouldn't "get bored at home," she said.

Forget the skates, these guys go for the high-tech games.

38 men, 2 women vie for position on police force

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Thirty-eight men and two women applying for a single opening in the Plymouth Police Department took written tests recently.

The 40 candidates were selected from more than 100 applications, some of them from out of state.

Finalists will undergo a comprehensive background investigation; psychological, oral and drug testing; and a physical exam, said Plymouth Commander Mike Gardner.

The 18-member department has been one officer short since October when a probationary patrolman was fired.

The department hopes to fill the position by April, Gardner said.

Depending upon how much money is available, temporary officers will be hired to help handle weekend cruising in the city.

"Obviously with the city's fiscal situation, we're trying to be as conservative as we can on the situation. With the busiest time of the year coming up, we couldn't delay filling that open slot any longer," said Gardner.

The city currently has a deficit of $250,000.

"As for any temporaries we might hire, it's something we'll have to nail down with the city manager and take a look at."

The department operates on a total budget of about $1.05 million, "which doesn't include the cruise budget," said Gardner. The city has spent anywhere from $50,000 to $90,000 a year for police and DPW cruising-related expenses.

The city is forecasting a cruise budget of about $40,000 this year, said Paul Sincock, assistant to the city manager.

"It's all dictated on activity," he said. "If there's more activity, it's going to require more police time, DPW time and police overtime."

Study cites discontent in police department

The consultants cited cruising, in which area teens flock downtown in warm weather, for helping to spark discontent.

"The police management became more clear in their demands and more clear in documenting negative behaviors that could be the basis for disciplinary action," the study said.

"Policies and procedures were brought into place at an increasing rate. This was minimally misread as trying to tighten the reigns on police officers," the study continued.

"It was also during this time that promotions were made of additional sergeants to the department. This again was perceived as increased controls being placed upon the department," the study continued.

"The result was a police department with clear policies and procedures, more supervision, and more . . . disciplinary action being taken," the study said, adding some officers challenged the increased control.

"The chief, in an effort to show his support of his new command staff and the commander, isolated himself by adhering to a strict chain of command," the study said. While the consultants called this technically and procedurally correct, "This caused an increased communications gap and also . blocked feedback from coming back to the officers."

This situation, the consultants said, "started to break down communications between the chief who had a strong, solid philosophy of management and the officers who needed to hear this philosophy."

further discuss the situation with commissioners.

"Yes, I'm disappointed to spend that much," said commissioner Mary Childs, considering the three outside finalists turned down the job.

She suggested that the finalists should have investigated Plymouth more thoroughly. "I would have contacted the chamber of commerce and asked what is your housing market," she said.

Commissioner Jerry Vorva said, "We didn't receive what we wanted, what we needed."

"I don't think the candidates he brought us were bad candidates," said commissioner Ron Loiselle, adding the seven outside semifinalist candidate group "was a good mix of people."

"Bartell's certainly a reputable company," said commissioner James Jabara. "I think they'll want to fulfill their obligation in some form," adding he was against withholding the consultant's fee "at this point."

Economic Development.

After traveling to Plymouth for interviews, both men told commissioners they were surprised at high housing costs here — and said they wouldn't come to Plymouth if offered the job.

"I think we should offer the job to Bill Graham," Vorva said last week.

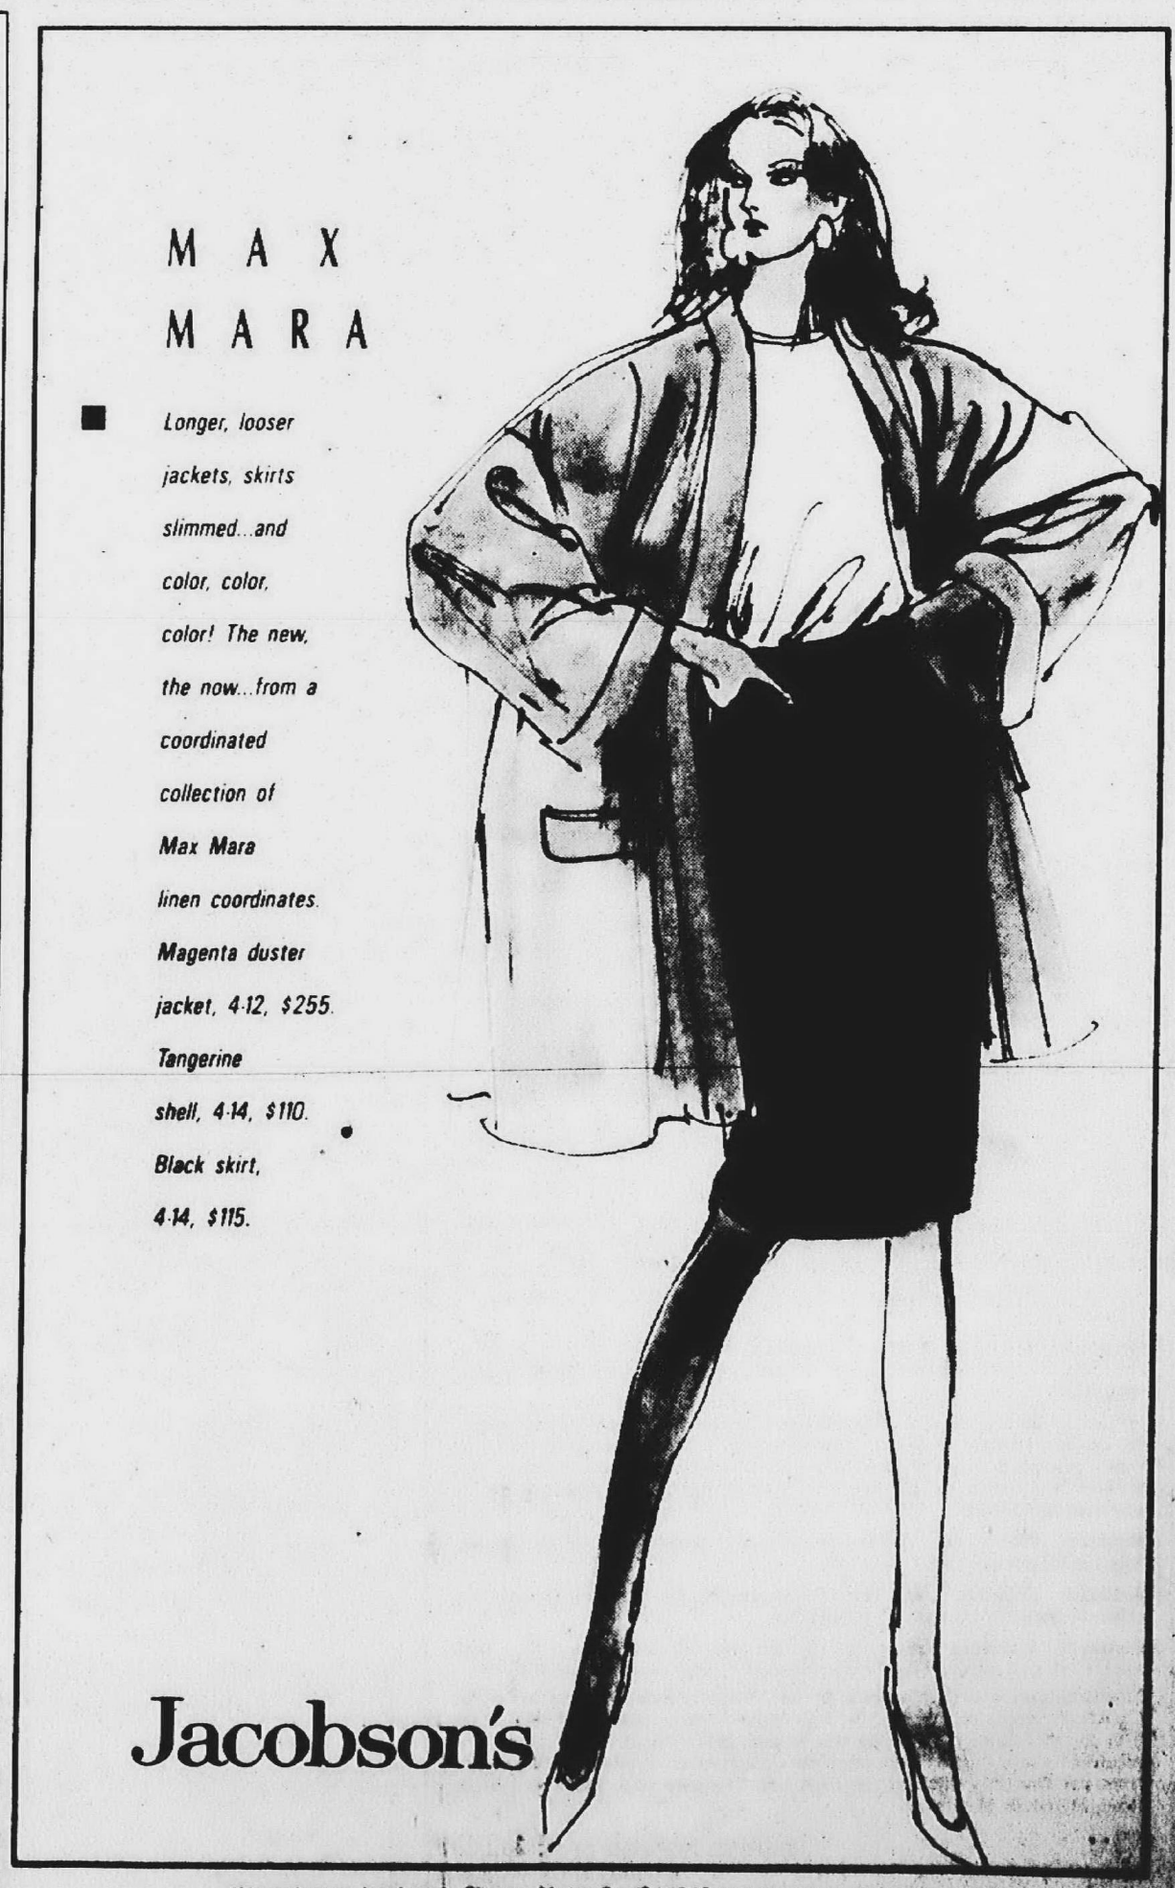

Commissioner Ralph (Jack) Kenyon said Graham "is still a strong contender" for the job.

WOULD GRAHAM still take the job? "I would say yes," Graham said last week.

At the commission meeting Saturday, Childs said she was concerned that she hadn't been informed that the city offered Byrne a $59,500 salary.

Former city manager Henry Graper earned a base salary of $51,000 a year.

The commission had authorized a commission subcommittee to negotiate a salary with the top candidate for the job, said Bila, a member of a subcommittee of commissioners working with the consultant on the city manager search.

Township renovation OK'd

A $34,600 Plymouth Township hall renovation will likely be completed in the spring, officials say.

Township trustees approved the project at their Tuesday meeting.

The main purpose of the project is to convert the planning department, in the township hall east wing, to a community development department better geared to serving township residents.

Plans call for moving some inside walls and installing a counter window which residents can approach for questions and service.

Ceiling, electrical and heat duct work is also planned in the renovation of the east wing, said Rosemary Harvey, township financial director.

Carpet replacement is also planned, Harvey said.

Money to pay for the project will come out of the township's general fund, Harvey said. Bids to contractors will likely go out in the next three weeks, she added.

REDUCE YOUR CHANCES OF GETTING HEART DISEASE, KIDNEY DISEASE OR GOING BLIND.

Obesity can start a chain reaction to poor health that can be devastating.

To begin with, most physicians and researchers consider obesity to be the major cause of diabetes in adults. Up to 90% of adults diagnosed as having diabetes, in fact, are overweight.

Of course, once you have diabetes your chances of developing heart disease, kidney disease, or going blind increase dramatically.

As a person with diabetes you'll be twice as prone to heart disease. 17 times as prone to kidney disease. And 25 times as prone to blindness, if you are insulin-dependent.

Diabetes, in fact, can shorten your life expectancy by one-third.

Fortunately, diabetes in adults, in most cases, can be prevented with careful weight control, healthy eating habits, and regular exercise.

So if you're overweight, doesn't it make sense to take off the extra weight?

Instead of years off your life?

Insurance cap sparks debate

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Two attorneys sharply disagreed last week on how far state law should go in capping auto insurer payouts for personal injury accidents.

"We'd like to get a handle on costs," said James Borin of Troy, whose Detroit firm defends auto insurers in catastrophic cases such as brain injuries.

Borin told the Senate Commerce Committee that a Republican-sponsored bill allowing insurers to offer caps of $250,000 to $2 million would limit expenses.

But a plaintiffs' lawyer, George Sinas of Lansing, said capping expenses would destroy the promise made to Michigan drivers under the no-fault insurance law.

"The current no-fault law says insurers must pay all medical and rehabilitation expenses. That was the main selling point in 1973. This bill suggests change," Sinas charged.

THE BILL before the Senate panel is SB 712, offered by chairman Richard Posthumus, R-Alto.

It aims to order auto liability rates cut by 25 percent in return for tighter definitions of bodily injury and optional limits on payouts.

In contrast, a House Democratic bill was drafted to order a 20 percent rate cut with no word on costs. House Republicans made a mockery of it by raising the cut to 30 percent and gleefully helped pass it 105-0 last December.

Posthumus is ignoring the House bill. He is taking his time in the commerce panel, stretching out Tuesday afternoon hearings over a month and scheduling expert witnesses.

BORIN AND Sinas appeared side by side, like Lincoln and Douglas, veterans at debating each other and highly respectful of the other's skills.

They agreed the state shouldn't try to cap doctors' fees.

"When government pegs prices," said Sinas, "doctors at the cutting edge may relegate these cases to second-class status.

"Surgeons will select patients who can pay their regular fees. Accident victims will be pushed down the line."

Added Borin: "I can't see artificial limits on fees."

The bill before the Senate panel is SB 712, offered by chairman Richard Posthumus, R-Alto. It aims to order auto liability rates cut by 25 percent in return for tighter definitions of bodily injury and optional limits on payouts.

SINAS SAID a 1983 court decision called "Cassidy" required that an injury, to be compensated, must impair a body function and be "objective" — that is, verifiable by a medical doctor.

But a later decision, called "DiFranco," overruled Cassidy because too few plaintiffs were recovering damages, the plaintiffs' lawyer said.

"This bill (Posthumus') returns us to the darkest days of Michigan no-fault law — to the Cassidy days," Sinas said.

Replied Borin: "I'm not saying go back to the common law days (when a person 1 percent at fault could collect nothing." But he said the Cassidy case at least set standards for recovery, while DiFranco had none.

A SPOKESMAN for the the NAACP said rates for Detroiters are so high that an estimated 30 percent of drivers don't even buy insurance, and others have to travel to the suburbs to find a company to insure them.

"The issue is affordability," said Melvin Hollowell, pointing to the difference in costs in two city-suburban corridors:

- Plymouth Road — Detroiters, mainly blacks, pay $1,410; Livonians, mainly white and only 2½ miles away, pay an average of $894.
- Michigan Avenue — Detroit average, $1,734; Dearborn, $980; Inkster, $1,400; and Wayne, $928.

"There is not a great difference in the auto theft rate," said Hollowell, calling the Detroit rates "excessive and discriminatory."

As Detroit's auto theft rate fell 30 percent recently, premiums rose 50 to 150 percent, he charged. "That is no way to reward Detroit."

HOLLOWELL, who was particularly critical of AAA's rates, was asked by senators why other companies didn't compete for Detroiters' business and undercut AAA's rates.

House says no to school choice

AP — Allowing parents to chose their children's schools may hurt some students and schools, say lawmakers who voted down an open-enrollment bill.

The House on Tuesday voted 61-36 against the proposal, which its backers said would have encouraged administrators to improve their schools for fear of losing top-notch teachers and students to other facilities within the district.

Currently, public-school students generally must attend a school designated for their neighborhood.

The bill would require that all districts decide whether to convert to a system where students could attend any school within district boundaries. If the district decided to implement the new setup, it would form a committee of parents, educators and administrators to further study the transition, said its sponsor, Rep. Claude Trim, R-Waterford.

"The status quo, the way things are right now, is not working," said Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City and chairman of the House Education Committee.

"This bill does not mandate choice, it mandates that districts look at choice," Keith said. "It gives choice a chance in Michigan."

Keith and James Kosteva, D-Canton, were the only western Wayne County state representative who supported the bill.

Those voting against the bill included: Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, Justine Barnes, D-Westland, John Bennett, D-Redford and Gerald Law, R-Plymouth.

Keith said President Bush, Democratic Gov. James Blanchard and Senate Majority Leader John Engler, R-Mount Pleasant, all support schools of choice, but said influential education lobbyists were holding the bill back.

Opponents, however, said the plan would hurt students who have uninformed parents and may have families picking schools for the wrong reasons — such as the winning record of sports teams.

Education groups say the bill isn't needed because individual districts can vote for schools of choice now and some already have implemented the concept.

"I have not seen any research that shows that schools of choice will help any student. In fact just the opposite is true," said Rep. Nate Jonker, D-Clio.

WRAPPING & STRAPPING

Treatment of arthritic joints can include more than medication, injection or heat. When the damage involves ligament strain, wrapping becomes appropriate therapy. The joint that responds best to this approach is the ankle.

To wrap the ankle properly, you should use a 2 inch wide ace wrap. Anklelettes or a narrower wrap will not suffice. You should start wrapping at the foot, just above the toes. Cover all the foot and ankle with overlapping loops, and end the wrap at the lower third of the leg. Be sure to cover the heel. The wrap should be pressing firmly over the areas covered, almost to the point of feeling tight.

Undertake this treatment for 4-5 days; then begin to use the wrap for only half a day. If the ankle remains sound, discontinue the wrap completely.

Wrapping the knee is rarely successful because the constant bending motion of walking inevitably loosens the wrap. Wrapping the wrists without concommitant splinting usually fails because repetitive motion prevents maintenance of even compression over the wrapped area.

Recycling supported in Canton

To the editor:

The problem of recycling affects Canton, as well as any other city or town. Citizens of Canton must realise that this is the attitude to take when it comes to proposed landfills.

Some people think that "it's not my problem" or "we should let somebody else deal with it." This makes me mad because these people are just destroying their own environment or even their own world, without any consideration for those people who care about the environment and who try to preserve it.

Recycling is my answer. For example, when the trash is collected each week, people should put glass, plastic, and paper articles in certain designated trash bags, and biodegradable and articles that can't be recycled in another. That way, less trash would exist, therefore saving the environment from a lot of stress.

Even if Canton is the only local city that might be doing this, it still makes a difference. By doing our part in conserving the environment, others might follow, which would make a difference.

Thanks for the coverage

To the editor:

Thank you so much for the wonderful pictures and coverage of the "LaBoheme" performance for 4th graders at the Power Center in Ann Arbor.

It was a special experience for all, adults included. However, it is important to point out that sponsorship of the performance was also borne by the newly organized Canton Arts Council who gave a generous donation to this project.

They will be planning arts programs to benefit the Canton community and the University Musical Society is grateful for their support.

Teens should take stand

To the editor:

It infuriates me, at a time when young people are turning to drugs and dropping out of school in ever increasing numbers, that someone would say about students who are willing to take a stand on what they see as a moral issue that they are "making asses of themselves."

Shame on you for calling young people who are willing to stand up for what they believe in asses.

I agree with them; donkeys don't belong in a basketball game.

The view that everything on this planet was put here just for man's enjoyment and use is precisely why so many species are now extinct and more added to the list every year. The rain forests are being cut down to graze cattle, our dumps are overflowing, our ozone layer is being destroyed along with our lakes and rivers and our air is being polluted.

It is that very idea that is sadly leading to our present environmental crisis. As humans with a superior intellect and capability, we need to change our thinking and regard ourselves as caretakers of this fragile planet and its resources or we may not have anything to pass on to the next generations. Hopefully, the younger generation is becoming aware of this fact.

I am proud of our young people who care about the other creatures who share this planet with us! I guess you think the Humane Society is a group of asses, too.

School group not opposed to game

To the editor:

We, as the group Students Organized for Action, are writing this letter out of concern with the article in the Feb. 19 issue entitled "Student Group Brays About Donkey Game, Plan to Picket."

First, we would like to make it clear that SOFA supports the goals of the I CARE committee. The group of SOFA is not connected with the proposed protest of the I CARE committee's donkey basketball fund-raiser.

The girl who was interviewed, Laura Messina, is a co-leader of the animal rights group of SOFA and she was also going to attend the protest against the game set up by a group of community members.

When the article was written the author failed to separate Laura's individual actions from the group to which she belonged. In fact, SOFA, as a group, has not taken a position on this issue. We are aware that many of the students who were planning on attending the protest are members of SOFA, but it was made clear to them that their protest was to be in no way affiliated with the group of SOFA, and that it would be an independent application of their constitutional rights.

SOFA regrets this misunderstanding. We would like to make it clear to the community that the group is not associated with the protest and that we support the ideals of the I CARE committee.

Spending on search for city manager outrageous

To the editor:

What is going on in Plymouth? Is it misfeasance, malfeasance or plain old incompetence for the city administration to waltz around on the hiring of a city manager?

It is outrageous to spend $15,000 for a search, upwards of $51,000 for a salary and then $10,000 for an outside auditor to check the books — this last at the insistence of a candidate who presents himself as a financial expert and can't even make up his mind whether or not he even wants the job.

A city the size of Plymouth with a sizable deficit does not really need a manager, but the local person, William Graham, seemed to be doing a satisfactory job. If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

I resent paying taxes to contribute to the financing of this city manager nonsense.

Schools were open in past

To the editor:

I have two comments to make on both front page articles in your Monday, Feb. 19, paper.

First, I have lived and gone to the Plymouth schools for 36 years and I know first hand Plymouth schools never close until the last minute. I have seen surrounding districts close, but not Plymouth, they stayed open.

Their famous old saying was "Buses on main roads only," which was a real joke. Your best advice is if it looks bad and the news reports say it's bad and anyone of the surrounding distsricts are closed, keep the kids home. Our district can't make snap decisions.

On Friday, Hoben and Goby were probably driving behind a salt truck which was following a plow truck to make his judgment that the roads were passable.

My second comment goes to Jack Farrow of the group I CARE. If you were around in the late '60s and early '70s in the Plymouth community there used to be Donkey Basketball Games and they even had a Chicken Flying Contest.

The Michigan Humane Society asked Plymouth to stop having these events because in the Humane Society's eyes this was cruel and inhumane treatment to the donkeys and chickens and these activities were stopped. Now I CARE thinks they are above the Humane Society, so now they think they can bring these games back.

Who do they think they are? I think that if they want to raise money, I Care should sponsor a pie throwing contest or a dunk tank. I am sure there would be a great turnout, now that everybody has received their tax statements (some $200 increase, I CARE) mine was over $550, and let us not forget the 9.6 percent increase slated for next year. Plus all the promises that were made but never materialized.

Time to do our homework

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to comment on your editorial, "History Lesson — Schools: Keep Pace with Change." After reading your article it was apparent to me that you are confused with our students' study of "history" in which they study "past events" and current events.

You raised a lot of questions which would suggest that our children know nothing about current events (although you refer to it as history), and that our educators and parents are not doing their jobs to keep the young aware of the world around them. I believe students of Rochester Community Schools are very well versed in history and current events. Allow me to enlighten you!

On the elementary level, beginning in third grade, each student is required to bring in news articles for open discussion on a weekly basis. This continues throughout middle school as a part of their social studies program. And many times, our English/reading teachers have the students write on current events or history as a part of their skills building.

Our high school students not only discuss "current events" in their government, history, economics, and social studies classes, but in their "International Relations" classes as well. Even the German class in our elementary school (that's right, you heard me — our little ones take German) is talking about the "wall" coming down and the impact it will have on all of us. I have talked to parents in neighboring school districts and these types of discussions are taking place in their schools as well.

You also asked if there is dialogue at home on current events? Of course there is. We are responsible parents. As editor, you should also be responsible and check your facts. Perhaps before you do another article on our school system, you should take an inventory of our curriculum. In other words, it's time you do your homework!

Pompon girls deserve more respect

To the editor

After being involved with the Plymouth-Canton Chiefettes for four years, I can no longer be silent about the lack of respect as athletes this group of young women get from the Plymouth-Canton Observer.

On Saturday, Feb. 24, Canton High School hosted the State PomPon Competition. The Observer did not feel this event was significant enough to even send a photographer. The excuse given was "bad weather." Somehow, all 44 schools represented in the competition managed to get there, from as far as Saginaw, Grand Rapids and Alpena.

The Chiefettes won the Class A division. This means they are the best in the state of Michigan. No, this is not basketball, football or soccer. This is POMPONS — a sport which takes hours and hours of practice 11 months out of the year and earns each girl a Varsity Letter.

Winning a state championship is the highest award every athletic team strives for. Our girls achieved that and wanted to share their accomplishment with their community. They can only do that with the help of their local newspaper. Help they did not get.

Earth Day data on tap

To the editor:

On April 22, residents of Michigan, other states and nations around the globe will observe the 20th anniversary of Earth Day. This historic occasion provides an important opportunity for assessment of our progress in improving the environment and protecting human health and for the rallying of citizens to the work that remains.

In Michigan, Governor Blanchard has asked the Council on Environmental Quality to provide an information clearinghouse on local and statewide Earth Day observances to enable citizens to participate more readily in these events. Additionally, CEQ will release a State of the Environment report that will analyze Michigan's effort to improve environmental quality since the first Earth Day and make recommendations on how to provide the cleanest, healthiest environment among the 50 states by the year 2000.

CEQ encourages your readers to write us at the Michigan Council on Environmental Quality, Department of Public Health, P.O. Box 30195, Lansing, MI 48909 to obtain information about local or statewide Earth Day events.

Introducing the Access CD℠ from First of America. The CD that doesn't penalize you for getting at your money if you need to.

ACCESS CD℠

The Access CD is offered for a two-year term with a minimum opening deposit of only $1,000. Penalty-free withdrawals are allowable just 30 days later. And they may be made once every 30 days thereafter. It's the Certificate of Deposit we know you've wanted. But it hasn't been available until now.

Of course, none of this matters if we can't offer you a competitive rate. We can. The base rate is six percent annually with a two percent bonus per year on funds left on deposit until maturity. Which boils down to an effective annual yield of eight percent. And since your bank deposits are FDIC insured up to $100,000, it's hard to find a safer investment.

Controversy over exec's successor sent to panel

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Wayne County's latest controversy — a proposed change in the county executive's line of succession — is in the hands of a three-member panel.

A panel of three county commissioners is expected to schedule a public hearing, perhaps as early as this week, to determine whether voters will be asked to change the county charter. The proposed change would make the county commission chairman next in line for the executive's job, rather than the deputy county executive as is now spelled out in the charter.

At the same time, one local commissioner said he was considering submitting an alternative proposal that would make the deputy commissioner's job an elected, rather than an appointed post.

THE ISSUE is heavy with political ramifications.

County Executive Edward McNamara raised eyebrows with a recent announcement he was considering running for governor in 1994. In some commissioners' minds that apparently meant McNamara — considered a near-certainty in this year's executive's race — would leave office early, allowing deputy Michael Duggan to advance to the executive's post. Such a move would enable Duggan to run as an incumbent in the 1994 executive's race.

But if the proposed change in succession were made at this time, commission chairman Arthur Blackwell, D-Detroit, or another commission member chosen by commissioners would become the executive for 120 days until a special election is held.

Blackwell, who proposed the change, is one of the three commissioners on the panel. He is joined by Kay Beard, D-Inkster, whose district includes Westland and Garden City, and Bernard Kilpatrick, D-Detroit.

It was Blackwell who also proposed the panel at Thursday's commission meeting, rather than calling for a direct commission vote on putting the issue before voters.

"There was some uncertainty on the commission's part," Blackwell said afterward. "This will provide more of an opportunity for discussion."

Despite the overtones, Blackwell said the proposal wasn't politically motivated. Instead, he said, the change would assure that the first successor would be an elected official, rather than an appointed one.

"We don't want anyone to think this is something that's being done for personal reasons," he said. "But it is something I feel strongly about."

If there weren't sufficient commission votes to put the issue on the ballot, Blackwell said, he would consider starting a petition drive.

Duggan could not be reached for comment.

Commissoner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, said he was considering proposing an alternative resolution that would make the deputy executive's post an elective office and allow voters to choose both officials at the same election.

"If we held a special election (on the Blackwell proposal) that would cost the county an estimated $2 million," Mack said. "That's money we don't have."

Support growing for mobile home tax

Mobile homes in licensed mobile home parks would be taxed just like houses under three legislative bills that are getting increasing local government support.

Since 1959, mobile homes in parks have been taxed $36 a year, although local officials say some are worth as much as $60,000.

The Southeast Michigan Council of Governments last week joined the Michigan Municipal League and Michigan Townships Association in supporting three bills in the House of Representatives to tax mobile homes the same as site houses.

"THE CURRENT form of taxation of mobile homes within licensed mobile home parks is discriminatory and antiquated," said the SEMCOG resolution, offered by Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally.

"Taxpayers in the community are paying higher taxes to offset cost of schools, police and fire protection and recreation services provided to residents of mobile home parks."

It passed without opposition.

Mobile homes on private property — as distinct from those in mobile home parks — pay property taxes just like site houses.

MOBILE HOME owners do pay the state 4 percent sales tax when they buy their units. Their rent also covers the park owner's share of property tax and single business tax, along with special assessments for water and sewer.

And mobile park owners say they provide many municipal services at no cost to the city or township — internal street maintenance, lighting, sidewalks, trash collection and snow removal.

But local government officials say mobile home parks fail to pay for their share of schools and other costly services.

SEMCOG's executive committee endorsed the concept of House Bills 4943-45. They would repeal the current $3 a month tax, provide for the taxation of mobile homes in parks as personal property and exempt used mobile homes from the 4 percent use tax.

Cast iron is worth its weight

How could I resist?

With the onslaught of winter "home" sales, just about every color glossy stuffed into my Sunday paper proclaimed a sale on heavy, cast-iron cookware.

Most of the sales mentioned only cast-iron frypans but one sale in particular caught my eye with a four-piece cookware set including two frypans and a covered dutch oven. I toted the 20-pound-plus equipment throughout the store after becoming the proud owner of a brand-new set of cast iron cookware.

Momma frequently cooked in cast iron, and to this day still hauls out a frypan and cauldron from the fruit cellar for impromptu Sunday morning egg fests and tummy-warming pots of chili.

Those of you who remember a story that ran last year in Taste called for preparing the "ultimate brownie," in a large cast-iron frypan. I'll admit that when I tested the recipe for that brownie, I had to venture on down to Wyandotte to borrow Momma's frypan. Unfortunately, the diet I'm now on will forbid me making the brownie recipe in my new-found cookware but, nevertheless, I look forward to testing new recipes in these toys.

WHY ALL THE hoopla on cast-iron cookware? Cast-iron cookware is heavy. It absorbs heat slowly and evenly, retains it like no other and is a good conductor of heat as well — all excellent qualities for a cooking vessel to possess.

Unfortunately, there is a negative side, too. Cast iron is rather brittle. It rusts, stains and becomes pitted on exposure to air, dampness and some foods, and it tends to become distorted when heat is applied.

Food purists will either applaud cast iron for its ability to impart certain minerals into the food while cooking or crucify it for its inability to withstand the pitting that occurs from cooking foods high in acidity.

From a professional standpoint, you just can't beat cast iron's ability to slowly cook a stew or chili, seldom burning it. Sunny-side eggs take on a distinctive crust that I still remember from the days when Momma cooked up a pound of bacon and then plopped in a half-dozen or so eggs into the molten, bacon grease.

She would use the special steel spatula, that doubled as a dreaded disciplinary tool, to splash the grease onto the tops of the eggs to just barely cook the tops. It wouldn't take an expert to see and taste the difference from an egg made in a plastic-handled non-stick frypan compared to one made in a cast-iron frypan.

THERE ARE, of course, a few pointers that all owners of cast-iron cookware should heed. First off, cast-iron cookware is particularly likely to become warped if subjected to high heat or sudden extremes in temperature. Therefore, never place cast-iron cookware directly on a high-heated burner or in a hot oven. Place the cookware on a cold burner or in a cold oven and allow the heat to raise gradually.

Common sense should prevail when cooking with cast iron because of its hearty, heat conduction. You can cook and get the same results over a medium-low heat compared to high heat.

After using the cookware, it should be washed, dried and seasoned immediately. Never place the cookware filled with food in the refrigerator, freezer or dishwasher. If the food has burned or stuck on the bottom or sides, scouring will remove some of the seasoned coating but a light scrubbing with table salt and dry paper towel will remove any leftover food residue with minimal efforts.

If you have a gas or an electric stove, you will notice a difference when cooking with cast iron. If nothing else, you will benefit from the lifting. Bon Appetit!

Southfield nutritionist Gail Posner conducts group tours, pointing out healthy food choices to make in the supermarket. Here she escorts the Birmingham-Bloomfield Newcomers Club around the Shopping Center Market in Farmington Hills.

Getting smart about groceries

THESE DAYS, it seems like you need to be a registered dietician to make intelligent choices at the grocery store.

But if you can't become a dietician, maybe you can at least bring one along. That's what a group of women from the Birmingham-Bloomfield Newcomers Club did on a recent weekday morning.

The 10 women took a guided tour of the Shopping Center Market at Orchard Mall in Farmington Hills. They were accompanied by nutrition counselor Gail Posner, who has a master's degree in nutrition and 10 years experience in the field. Posner offers the tours as part of her private nutrition counseling practice.

Providing free samples along the way, she walked the group past the butters, the chips, the breads, the cheeses and the yogurts, pointing out what were really healthy choices and what merely seemed to be.

Posner started out with a basic primer on fats in food, since that is the main concern when it comes to lowering cholesterol and reducing the chance of cancer and other diseases. She explained there are three types of fats: saturated fats, polyunsaturated fats and monosaturated fats. The saturated fats, found in animal fat, lard, whole milk and tropical oils such as coconut oil, are high in cholesterol and should be minimized.

POLYUNSATURATES — in corn oil, sunflower oil, mayonnaise and walnuts — have been considered a good choice until recently. But it has been discovered, Posner said, that polyunsaturates not only lower the unwanted low-density lipoproteins (LDLs) in the blood but also lower the high-density lipoproteins (HDLs), thought to help combat cholesterol. So the best choice when it comes to fats, she said, are the monosaturates: canola oil, rapeseed oil, peanut oil, olive oil and hi-oleic safflower oil.

"When we compare the monosaturates with saturated fats, we're not talking about moderately worse," Posner said. "We're talking a major dietary disaster."

First stop on Posner's tour were the dairy products. Pointing out that regular cheddar cheese has 110 calories an ounce, she offered several cheeses that are very low in fat and calories — two to three grams per slice and 35 calories. She also had them try some reduced-calorie cheeses — such as Kraft Lite Line — which have five to six grams of fat, but which the group seemed to agree taste better.

Next stop on the tour was the snack foods. Here the issue is not cholesterol but fat.

"Don't go and find some bag of potato chips labeled 'no cholesterol' and then say, "Aren't you proud of me?" Posner said with a laugh. "All potato chips are made with vegetable oil and are cholesterol-free. But you need to look at what kind of oil is used. And no matter what you buy, it's still a lot of fat."

FOR LOW-FAT snacks, Posner recommends pretzels (you can have 30 or so small stick pretzels for a serving), popcorn popped without oil and sprayed with a vegetable spray, and rice or popcorn cakes. Watch out for microwave popcorns though. Many are loaded with fat. Posner particularly recommends the flavored rice cakes and the popcorn cakes, which have more flavor than plain rice cakes.

Next, Posner stopped in front of the breads. The key to choosing breads, she said, is making sure whole wheat flour is listed as the first — and therefore the major — ingredient. If it says wheat flour, that means it's just white flour and doesn't offer enough fiber.

The group also sampled a new line of Entenmann's baked goods, which have no fat and fewer calories than the company's other products. They tried cakes, coffeecakes and cookies, and seemed universally pleased. Posner approves of

Italian restaurant has homey quality

On the edge of the Rosedale Garden section of Livonia, there's a neighborhood Italian restaurant that embodies all the warmth and homeyness you might expect to find in a village restaurant in Italy.

At DePalma's, strangers greet you as if you are old friends. The hostess seats you in a cozy booth in a dim, unpretentious room. A woman with a lovely soprano voice plays the baby grand and sings "Santa Lucia" as you read through the extensive menu. Then a young waiter wearing a white shirt and black vest chats a moment before taking your order for wine and hors d'oeuvres.

Even Scrooge would have to enjoy an evening that starts like that.

DePalma's is about to mark its second anniversary, but its chef and owner, Vito N. DePalma, has been cooking around Detroit for several years.

The restaurant is clearly more than a business to DePalma. One of his two managers is Syd Harris, a former restaurateur himself, who works the room like a politician and makes sure the service is "perfecto." And on Wednesday nights, the restaurant becomes a theater of sorts as the members of the Verdi Opera Society pay homage to Enrico Caruso.

Guests are coddled and entertained — and served hearty, Italian cooking. The meals range from pastas and fresh fish to a wide range of veal dishes. A surefire winner is the veal zingara, a delicious and salty combination of black olives, prosciutto, sun-dried tomatoes and thin slices of veal sauteed in butter and sherry. It is excellent.

A DISH OF fettucini with fresh mussels was good, though a tremendous portion. The mussels, served in their shells and cooked exactingly, were tossed with the fresh noodles and tomato sauce. Though we found the sauce a little oily, it was seasoned gently and deliciously. The pasta was freshly made.

With most entrees comes a choice of soup or salad, a side dish of pasta or a potato and a fresh vegetable. Few guests ever get to the desserts — and many leave carrying the portions they couldn't finish and couldn't part with.

The restaurant serves a very good minestrone, which almost resembles a bean soup. It doesn't have a heavy tomato taste to it. The breads are wonderful, from the Italian bread with a very heavy crust to the La-Vache, a sweet matzo-like bread.

Even the fresh green beans served with our dinners were crisp and good. Alas, we were disappointed in the lemon shrimp appetizer, in which the shrimp and artichoke hearts were overcooked.

The wine list is as comfortable and unpretentious as the restaurant. It provides ample selections but isn't outrageously expensive or exclusive.

Overall, DePalma's is a special place where you will find good meals, friendly and attentive service and reasonable prices. The lunch menu features your expected selection of pastas, sandwiches and salads — with several interesting variations — like a meatball submarine or a chicken parmesan sandwich or the pineapple royale in which a pineapple is stuffed with chicken salad, topped with toasted almonds and served with fresh fruit.

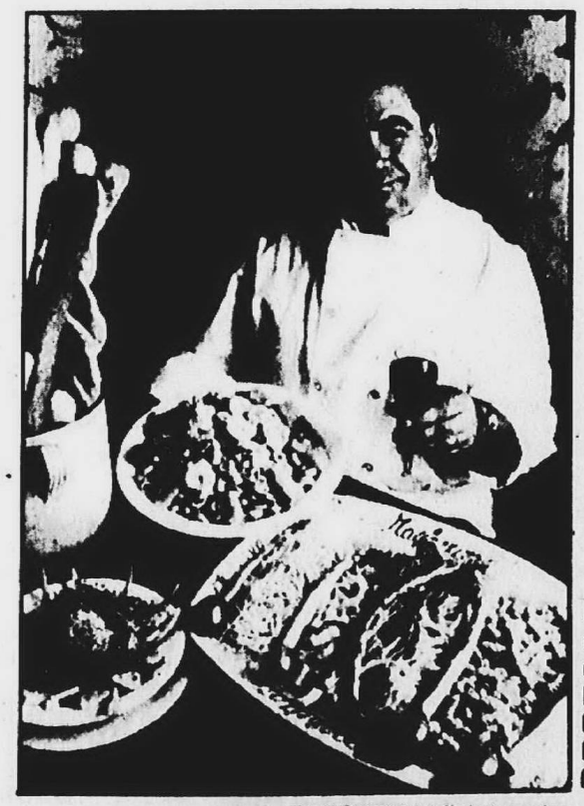

All dinner and lunch entrees are available for take out, and the restaurant offers a fax service where you can gather lunch (or even dinner party) orders and be assured they will be ready when you are. It is a business after all.

the new products, but also issued a warning.

"Don't think that just because something like this is lower calorie, you can eat all you want," she said. "You still need to watch the portion size. Sometimes it's better to divide it into portions as soon as you buy it so you don't get carried away."

A FEW MEMBERS of the group were getting carried away, and had to be called on to the margarines. "Pick a diet margarine," was Posner's advice. "Even if your weight is okay, you'll be getting half the fat."

For salad dressings, another potential source of fat and calories, Posner offered samples of several reduced-calorie dressings, including a Richard Simmons line that you squirt on rather than pour. For restaurant meals, she recommended some reduced-calorie dressings that come in individual servings and can be brought along.

When the tour ended, all the women seemed to think that their morning had been well spent.

"I learn so much from her," said Linda Hernandez, a client of Posner's and the one who organized the tour for her friends. "There's so much information and so many misconceptions out there about different products. Gail cuts through it all and tells you what you need to know."

Although Posner offered many tips on how to eat more nutritiously, she does not recommend people try to change their eating habits overnight. Instead she encourages people to make gradual changes they can stick with.

Posner has two tours coming up which cost $15 and are open to anyone who is interested. Tours will take place at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 14, and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 21. For reservations, call 354-4450.

Chef Larry gives beef stew recipe

MOMMA'S BEEF STEW WITH RED WINE

4-5 pounds top rump of beef
4 tablespoons oil
3 carrots, pared and cut into chunks
2 medium onions, cut into chunks
2 cloves garlic, smashed
2 cups dry red wine bouquet garni (peppercorns, bay leaf, thyme and parsley wrapped and tied in cheesecloth)
1 pound salt pork

Have the beef rolled and tied by the butcher. Heat the oil and add the salt pork, beef roast, carrots, onions and garlic. Cook over low heat for 15 minutes, and when the fat begins to run from the salt pork and the onions begin to caramelize, pour in the red wine. Toss in the bouquet garni and cover with a tight-fitting lid. Place in a cold oven and turn the heat to 250 degrees. Allow to slow-roast for 8 hours.

BAKED, CARAMELIZED BROWN ONIONS

6 medium onions, peeled
3 tablespoons oil
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons sugar
salt and fresh ground pepper to taste

Peel onions, set aside. In the bottom of a heavy, cast-iron frypan, heat the oil and the butter over low heat. Add the whole onions. Sprinkle with sugar, salt and pepper and cook onions over medium-low heat until lightly browned and beginning to caramelize. Cover and place cast-iron skillet in a cold oven. Set oven temperature to 350 degrees and bake onions, covered for 45 minutes, turning once to ensure caramelization on all parts of the onion.

Dressing mixes up in bottle

Call this elegant salad amazing. The dressing is amazingly easy. It mixes right in the bottle, and it tastes amazingly like homemade. The simple arrangement of fruit and greens look amazingly impressive.

To choose a prime papaya for this salad, look for one with smooth, undamaged skin. Allow a firm papaya to ripen at room temperature for 3 to 5 days or until it yields to gentle hand pressure. Once ripe it will keep for several days in the refrigerator.

GREENS AND PAPAYA SALAD

¼ teaspoons poppy seed
one 8-ounce bottle coleslaw salad dressing
1 papaya
2 heads bibb or Boston lettuce
1 head Belgian endive
one 8-ounce can grapefruit sections (water pack), drained
⅓ cup sliced almonds

Add poppy seed to salad dressing bottle. Cover, shake well. Chill until serving.

Peel, seed and slice papaya. Line a large platter with lettuce leaves. Fan papaya to one side, endive to the other. Spoon grapefruit in the center. Sprinkle with nuts. Cover and chill until serving time.

Before serving, shake dressing; drizzle over salad. Makes 8 servings.

Nutritious meals help active family stay trim family-tested winner dinner

Betsy Brethen

I could have jumped for joy when I read in the paper that researchers have finally come up with a pill that reduces fat in a person's body without special exercise or diet.

It's about time, don't you agree? Having played "Lost and Found" with my weight the last few weeks, I'm hoping that the FDA will step on it and get that pill into production . . . fast! After all, summer and swimsuit weather is only four months away!

Until this appetite-reducing pill becomes commercially available, we need to continue to eat sensibly and exercise regularly in order to keep our bodies fit and trim. This week's Winner Dinner, submitted by Adriane De Windt of Bloomfield Hills, will help us to work toward that end, in that it is a tasty and well-balanced meal.

De Windt's life revolves around her two active children and husband. Nary a couch potato among them, her husband, Del, has qualified three times for the National Amateur Golf Tournament, and they ski, golf and play tennis together as a family. Her children are involved in organized team sports as well. She jokingly admits that her eyes are in great shape, thanks to watching her children participate in soccer, hockey, volleyball, baseball, tennis and golf.

BECAUSE THE dinner hour is one time of the day when they are together as a family, De Windt makes a special effort to put together meals that are visually appealing and nutritious but aren't too time-consuming to make. Always a family favorite, her recipe for veal served with Parmesan potatoes, a tossed salad and blueberry dessert will surely be a hit with your family as well.

Thank you, Adriane De Windt, for sending in your recipes and congratulations on being our Winner Dinner Winner of the week. As March is National Nutrition Month, your menu will launch us off to a tasty and healthy start. And, until that wonder pill hits the stores, back to sit-ups we go.

SUBMIT YOUR recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher. Each week's winner receives an apron with the words Winner Dinner Winner on it.

Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clippings in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

Winner Dinner

VEAL WITH TOMATOES AND MUSHROOMS

This quick and easy dish takes only 20 minutes to prepare. It can be made just before serving or it can easily be made in the morning, covered and refrigerated and then reheated. Turkey scaloppine or boneless chicken breasts can be used in place of the veal, if desired.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
Italian bread crumbs thin veal scaloppine (because they are so small, allow two pieces of meat for each adult, one for each child)
1 can chicken broth, 14½-ounce size
1 or 2 tomatoes, sliced
1 box of fresh mushrooms, 8-ounce size
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Italian herb seasoning, to taste

Melt butter in large frying pan. Add the olive oil and stir to mix the two. Coat the veal with Italian bread crumbs and cook until lightly browned on both sides. While the meat is cooking, slice the mushrooms and the tomatoes. Add the can of chicken broth, the tomatoes and the mushrooms. Simmer until the mushrooms are tender, about 5 minutes. Sprinkle the flour over the pan and gently mix it into the sauce. Add the chopped parsley and the Italian herb seasoning to taste. Cook for a few more minutes and then serve with buttered noodles or Parmesan potatoes.

POTATOES PARMESAN

A tasty variation, these potatoes are easy to make.

4-6 Idaho or redskin potatoes
¼ cup melted butter or margarine
½ cup Parmesan cheese
Lawry's Seasoning Salt, to taste

Quarter washed, scrubbed potatoes. Roll in melted butter or margarine, Parmesan cheese and Lawry's Seasoning Salt. Bake on a baking sheet for 40 minutes at 400 degrees.

TOSSED SALAD

While the veal is simmering, put a simple salad together and toss with your choice of dressing.

BLUEBERRY DESSERT

Although especially good with blueberries, this recipe works with fresh peaches and apples as well. Because it is winter, berries are still expensive. However, this recipe can be cut in half, using fewer berries, and it still makes enough for 6 servings. It is especially good served with vanilla ice cream or vanilla yogurt.

1 quart of fresh blueberries cinnamon, to taste nutmeg, to taste — use less than cinnamon, though 2 cups flour
1½ cups sugar
1 stick butter

Wash fresh berries and place in a deep over-proof dish. Sprinkle with cinnamon and nutmeg.

The topping is made as follows: Mix the flour, sugar and butter until the butter is completely cut in with the flour and sugar. Place on top of the berries. (Because this recipe makes a lot of topping, you may not want to use all of it.) Sprinkle more cinnamon on top and bake at 350 degrees until very lightly browned and bubbly, about 30 minutes.

Autumn Bunch of league champion Salem tied for seventh place in floor exercise Thursday and finished the same in the all-around.

Rocks halt North's reign

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

North Farmington coach Jeff Dwyer was prepared to stomach defeat if it meant succumbing to another team's superior gymnastics performance.

With that in mind, he had no nagging regrets Thursday when Plymouth Salem won its first Western Lakes Activities Association championship and ended North's string of five consecutive titles.

"We went out swinging," Dwyer said. "That's all we wanted to do. Salem had a great meet.

"We knew it would be a close meet, and we didn't want to blow it ourselves. We wanted somebody to beat us, and that's exactly what they did."

The Raiders, with a 140.25 team score, had their second-best total of the season, but Salem, led by freshman standout Kim Miller, produced a school record 141.65 to unseat North at Plymouth Canton. The host Chiefs were third at 138.75.

SALEM'S VICTORY ended one of the area's longest-standing dynasties. North had won 13 consecutive league championships — most of them in the old Northwest Suburban League but the last five in the WLAA.

"It's been all year since everybody hit," Salem coach Kathi Kinsella said. "Today we had our best meet, so we definitely worked hard for the trophy, and we definitely earned the trophy.

"I've been nasty, and I've been mean to these girls. I've coached them like I would men. I made them cry, and I made the hurt. But it was all worth it; it all came out in the wash."

Third place was little consolation for Canton, which had beaten Salem and North in dual meets and invitationals. All three teams are state ranked, and this year's meet was considered a toss-up between those three.

"I feel we're a better team than where we placed," Canton coach John Cunningham said. "We always say 'May the best team win.' Today it was Salem. I'm still convinced we're the better team, but I'll have to prove it another day."

Miller was league champion on the uneven bars (9.3) and balance beam (9.4) and compiled a first-place total of 37.05 in the all-around. She was second on vault (9.05) to North's Heather Kahn and runner-up (9.30) to teammate Courtney Gonyea in floor exercise.

"IT WASN'T her best meet," Kinsella said, "but, fortunately, she was the best here today in the eyes of the judges."

The Rocks enjoyed a comfortable lead through three events with 106.45 to North's 104.85 and Canton's 103.15.

Salem, however, was heading to beam — always an uncertain event — on its last rotation. The Rocks scored a meet-best 35.20 on beam as Gonyea and Jenny Skylakos added top-ten performances, too.

"We wobbled and bobbled on beam," Kinsella said, "but the real key was mental. We got our highest scores in every event. Physically, there's nothing more you can do; it's all mental."

Miller was the last one up on beam and was well aware of what a good performance meant.

"It was really up to me. If I stayed on, we'd win," said Miller, adding the Rocks wanted the championship as a present for Kinsella. "She said her birthday is coming up, and all she wanted for her birthday was to win."

SALEM GAVE the competition an idea of what was to come when it started with a meet-high 36.05 on floor. They followed with second-place scores of 35.40 on vault and 35.00 on bars.

"The scores usually start low and come up," Kinsella said. "I'd have to say there were no gifts today. Beam was a little scary, because that used to be our worst event — used to be! Our beam people really came through."

Dwyer cited the beam scores as being the difference for his team. Canton was second with 34.85 in that event and North third at 33.95.

"(Salem) had a couple 9s and a couple mid 8s, and we were average on beam," he said. "They had a great meet, and I want to give all the credit in the world to Kathi Kinsella and her team.

"We've got the regional coming up, and I'm glad we got a score like this in a pressure meet," he added. "You can be down if you didn't do well, but we did well. You can't knock the effort. The girls put forth their best."

The Raiders were led by Kahn, who was second in the all-around at 36.90. She was the league champion on vault (9.2) and also placed second on beam and bars and was third on floor. Kym Heller was fourth in the all-around.

"SHE'S JUST had a great year," Dwyer said of Kahn. "She's been steady all year — Miss Consistent. She hasn't let me down in two years. I don't know if she knows how good she is. My top four girls have done a heckuva job this year."

The Chiefs were led by Dawn Clifford and Johanna Anderson, who were fifth and sixth among all-arounders. Clifford had Canton's best scores on beam and bars, Anderson on vault and floor.

Cunningham was disappointed in the scores Canton received on vault, however. He thought the judges were low in their assessments, which added up to a 34.15 team total.

"We had our best vaulting day of the year and didn't score well," he said. "I was not happy with our scores, but that wasn't the difference of three points.

"We had some good scores. I was pleased with our floor. Dawn Clifford had a good score (8.5), considering it was the first time she's been able to pound the floor" since recovering from a broken ankle.

Salem swimmers still tops in WLAA

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

What happened to Plymouth Salem's swim team last week was one of the best reasons a coach becomes a coach.

It wasn't because the Rocks won. It was because they won when they weren't expected to.

The Rocks surprised a lot of people, including their coach, by capturing a third-consecutive Western Lakes Activities Association championship Friday. Salem scored 467.5 points to outdistance Livonia Stevenson, which edged favored Northville by a point for second, 411-410.

North Farmington was fourth (368.5), followed by Plymouth Canton (297), Farmington (182), Farmington Harrison (173), Westland John Glenn (144), Walled Lake Western (46), Livonia Churchill (45), Livonia Franklin (40) and Walled Lake Central (33).

Asked what he expected of his swimmers going into the meet, Salem coach Chuck Olson answered, "Us finishing fourth or fifth. That's where we ended up in the dual-meet season."

THE ROCKS were 6-4 overall and 2-2 in Lakes Division duals. Northville was unbeaten in WLAA meets swimming and captured the league's preseason relays meet.

"We didn't go into the season thinking we were going to lose (four) dual meets," said Olson. "But we had one thing in mind: get ready for Wednesday (the preliminaries) and then do as well as we could tonight."

Simple formula, or so it seems, and successful, too.

The key to victory for Salem was not a multitude of overpowering performances, although they got a pair from senior Ron Orris, an easy double-winner in the 100-yard butterfly (51.70) and 200 freestyle (1:42.38).

Both were new WLAA records; the nearest competition was 2.3 seconds behind in the fly and 5.15 seconds behind in the 200. Orris set another league record in the preliminaries, leading off the 400 free relay in 47.41.

Depth, though, turned the tide in the Rocks' favor. Salem had four swimmers score in all but one event, the 50 free; they had three in the 50, including two in the final six.

"EVERYBODY DID their job," said Olson, who guided the team to its fifth WLAA title in eight years. "You get four guys scoring in each event, with a certain number in the finals, and you'll be real tough to beat.

"We've had some real nice wins, but to have to pass three teams like Northville, Stevenson and North Farmington makes this special."

At least one coach wasn't surprised by Salem's finish. "Not me," said Doug Buckler, the Stevenson coach. "I knew it a month-and-a-half ago."

How?

"Depth," Buckler answered. "(Olson) had four kids (score) in every event except one, and he had three in that one.

"And he's a great coach, the best in the area. Salem deserved it, they're a good team."

Stevenson may have been providing a glimpse of the future with its strong showing. The Spartans were another surprise, placing second in spite of their youth. They had just two seniors who scored points.

"It was the best we ever swam," said Buckler. "We wanted it real bad. This is the best young team I've ever had. I can't wait to get on the bus to congratulate them."

3rd time is charm for Spartans

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The despairing look on the faces of his Livonia Stevenson basketball players Saturday night concerned coach Jim McIntyre.

The Spartans were trailing Plymouth Salem by nine points following a strong finish by the Rocks at the end of the third quarter.

After a quick lecture by McIntyre, his Stevenson charges did an about-face in the last period, survived some tense moments late and upset the No. 8-rated Rocks 61-60 in the Western Lakes Activities Association championship game at Salem.

"I told 'em 'You come in as winners; don't come over to the bench looking like losers,'" McIntyre said. "I think the kids picked up on that.

"I wasn't chewing on them, just reminding them they're not quitters. 'Don't come over here acting like you're going to lose.'"

SALEM, WHICH beat the Spartans twice in the regular season and slips to 18-2, turned a 36-33 lead into a 44-35 bulge at the end of the third quarter.

Stevenson, 14-6 overall, was quick to reverse that trend, scoring the first 10 of the fourth period to lead 45-44 and creating a nail-biting situation that carried through to the final seconds.

The comeback included triples by shooting specialists Rick Laven, who scored a career-high 26 points, and Ron Baran, who finished with 19 after an excellent second half.

Laven's total included five three-pointers, three coming in the first half when his nine points helped keep the Spartans in the game and offset a cold-shooting half by Baran.

"Before the game, I could tell everybody was loose," he said. "We were ready to play, because we didn't want to get blown out again. We wanted to show we're still a good team, that we're still good enough to beat teams that are ranked."

Laven was being modest, however, about his major contribution, saying he can help if he plays within himself and directing credit to the team's defensive effort.

McINTYRE DIDN'T feel as inhibited in his praise of Laven.

"He has a natural, quick-draw McGraw release," McIntyre said. "He gets the shot off before people know where the ball is. There's probably not a better outside shooter around from certain spots."

Glenn Szeman, Stevenson's 6-foot-9 center, tossed in 11 points and made an equally important contribution by essentially staying out of foul trouble, though he did foul out in the last minute.

Salem's big men, juniors Jake Baker and K.C. Kirkpatrick, paced the Rocks, scoring 20 and 17 points, respectively. Tom Noonan added nine.

"If they're going to shoot as well as they did from that (three-point) spot, they can expect to win the game," said Salem coach Bob Brodie of the Spartans. "They're shooting threes and also getting it to their big guys. That's tough to defense.

"They played hard. They were getting a lot of loose balls, and they made free throws in critical situations. They deserve to be conference champs."

FOLLOWING THE Spartans' recovery at the beginning of the fourth quarter, the lead changed hands a couple times and was tied twice until Baran's basket with 1:36 remaining gave Stevenson a 56-54 lead.

The Rocks missed several crucial free-throw opportunities while Szeman (2), Laven (2) and Phil Woods (1) put Stevenson up 61-57 with 21 seconds left.

Mike Mulder kept Salem's hopes alive when he sank a triple with :07 on the clock. Steve Leonard of Stevenson missed a one-and-one with four seconds left, and Baker grabbed the rebound. Kirkpatrick lofted a shot from just inside the half-court line that fell short as time expired.

"We worked on our press and defensive intensity," Laven said. "In the second game, it wasn't there. This time we backed up our press, so they wouldn't get so many open-court points."

A first-quarter spurt helped Stevenson to a 14-9 lead as the Rocks shot four of 16 in the period. That turned around in the second with Salem shooting the better percentage and the Spartans two of 16. The Rocks started going baseline to Baker (13 points) and Kirkpatrick (nine points) and took a 25-20 lead into halftime.

Not only did the Spartans win the school's first WLAA basketball championship but the first by a Livonia school.

"IT'S BEEN A while since we've taken something back to the other three schools," McIntyre said. "More than that, I feel good for the kids."

Salem and Stevenson could meet Friday for the district championship at Northville. That also would be a rematch of last year's tournament final won by the Spartans.

"I told the kids 'We've been sitting on a bubble so long with the win streak (16 games), undefeated conference record and state ranking,'" Brodie said. "There was no release."

Hawks take consolation title

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Farmington Harrison picked up some steam heading tonight's state tournament with a 72-54 victory Saturday over rival North Farmington in the third-place game of the Western Lakes Activities Association basketball playoffs at Plymouth Salem.

The Hawks (15-5), who bounced back from Tuesday's 82-71 WLAA semifinal loss to Livonia Stevenson, will take on Redford Thurston (14-6) in first-round district action tonight at Redford Bishop Borgess High. (See tournament pairings.)

Andy Smith once again led Harrison, which beat North (10-10) for the second time this season, with a game-high 21 points. Sophomore Paul Gilvydis came off the bench to score 14, while senior point guard Mill Coleman contributed 10.

"Smith is a very smart player, always in the right place at the right time," said North coach Tom Negoshian."And for his size, he shoots the ball very well."

The Hawks simply had too much inside strength for North.

"We had a real nice ballgame with all sorts of quality minutes from our people off the bench," said Harrison coach Mike Teachman. "We accomplished many of our goals this year. We got 15 wins and won our (Western) Division. And along the way there have been a lot of different heroes."

HARRISON TRAILED during the early stages, but went ahead for keeps, 12-10, on a basket by Brian Ellison with 2:15 remaining in the opening quarter.

Gilvydis, a 6-6 sophomore, then scored 10 of his 14 in the second period as the Hawks opened up a 37-26 lead at intermission.

The Hawks took a 48-32 advantage with 4:08 left in the third quarter on a breakaway dunk by Rob Karbowski, but North fought back to within seven after three quarters, 50-43, on a pair of free throws by Matt Hoffman with 11 seconds remaining.

Harrison then pulled away in the final quarter, outscoring North 24-11. The Hawks hit 13 of 16 free throws to keep North at bay.

Poor shooting plagued the Raiders, who made only 19 of 53 from the floor (35 percent) and 12 of 28 from the free throw line (42 percent).

"We're 15-0 when we hold our opponent to 62 points or less," Teachman said.

It was a frustrating night for North, which seemed to have a lid on the basket.

Junior Chris White scored 18, while Hoffman, the senior point guard, added 14.

"They (Harrison) played a triangle-and-two defense," said Negoshian. "We had open shots and didn't make them. We just haven't been scoring lately."

FRANKLIN 65, GLENN 61: In the battle for fifth place Saturday in the WLAA playoffs, senior guard Craig Overaitis pumped in 26 points to lead Livonia Franklin (10-10) past Westland John Glenn (10-10).

Franklin overcame a 12-2 deficit at the outset by outscoring the Rockets 21-16, 15-13 and 19-16 over the final three periods.

Dave Barina chipped in with 17 points for the Patriots. Dave Roman added nine.

Bobby Lawrence led Glenn, minus two starters because of disciplinary reasons, with 15 points. Tony Dobbins and Gamal Ahmed added 11 each, while Carl Lowe had 10.

NORTHVILLE 65, CHURCHILL 59: The Western Division co-champion Mustangs (14-6), behind Joe Kaley's 21 points, took seventh place with a win over Livonia Churchill (10-9).

Three other Northville players scored in double figures: Scott Meredith (15), Paul Grant (12) and Bill Kelly (10).

Mike Thomas paced the Chargers with 16 points, while Kevin Hannigan and Randy Calcaterra added 14 and 13, respectively.

W.L. WESTERN 67, CANTON 55: Five players scored in double figures Saturday as Walled Lake Western (5-15) pulled off a mild surprise in the WLAA loser's bracket, snapping Plymouth Canton's three-game winning streak.

Five Warriors netted double figures, led by Chris Johnson's game-high 20 points.

Others scoring in double figures for Western included Jeremy Farkas (12), Jeff Kubik (11), Chris Sobiech (10) and Todd Biron (10).

Western connected on 22 of 39 free throws, while Canton (9-11) hit just seven of 11.

Western trailed 31-23 at the half, but roared back in the third quarter, outscoring the Chiefs 24-10.

Three Canton players scored in double figures: Karl Wukie (14), Mike Stafford (10) and Brett Howell (10).

FARMINGTON 61, W.L. CENTRAL 51: Chris Schmid led a balanced Falcons attack in a loser's bracket victory over Walled Lake Central (1-19).

Farmington, 6-14 entering state district play, also got eight points apiece from Brian Browne and Eric Miller.

Joe Sharpe led Cental with 20 points. Teammate Jason Olson contributed 10.

Farmington went 23 of 32 from the free throw line, while Central was 19 of 31.

Nandani scores 27 in defeat

Manish Nandani's game-high 27 points was wasted Friday by Plymouth Christian as Westland Huron Valley Lutheran rolled to a 94-78 win at home.

Matt Henzi led four Huron Valley players in double figures with 25 points and five steals. Senior forward Paul Knichelbein had 19 points, Melton Stoudemire scored 18 and Bill Kowske 11 for Huron Valley, now 10-7 overall.

Huron Valley led 45-44 at halftime before outscoring Plymouth 25-14 in the third quarter.

TEMPLE 76, TAYLOR BAPTIST 70: Redford Temple Christian's basketball team ended all the suspense Friday night.

Temple, playing its final regular-season game, clinched first place in the Greater Metro Independent Conference with a 76-70 win over visiting Taylor Baptist Park.

The win moved Temple to 13-7 overall. Baptist Park fell to 9-10.

Marlon Reed led three Temple players in double figures with 27 points. Dave Schalte scored 11 and John Millard contributed 10 for Temple, which hosts Redford St. Mary at 6 tonight in the first round of the Class C district.

Temple led 11-9 after one quarter and enjoyed a 30-19 halftime lead after outscoring Baptist Park 19-10 in the second quarter. Temple opened up a commanding 51-36 lead after three quarters.

"We had two goals," Temple coach Dave Gilliam said. "One was to win our homecoming game (over Allen Park Inter-City Baptist) and the other was the league title — we've accomplished both. We've progressively gotten better. We were 1-3 in December, 5-3 in January and 7-1 in February. We've had a good year, but have a tough draw in the district (tonight against St. Mary).

BORGESS 81, LAKES 49: All 15 players scored Thursday, as Redford Bishop Borgess — playing without injured star Shawn Respert — routed visiting Waterford Our Lady of the Lakes, 81-49.

Respert is out indefinitely with a twisted knee. It didn't matter Thursday as the Spartans, 17-3 overall, raced to a 23-4 lead after one quarter and led 41-19 at halftime.

Senior guard Artie Brown and sophomore Darwin Cegers, playing in his first varsity game, led Borgess with 10 points each. Junior guard Kevin Riser and sophomore guard Jermaine Parker contributed nine points apiece.

The game was a learning experience for Borgess, which was able to use three players recently called up from the junior varsity, along with a pair of freshmen.

Junior center Pete Ugolini led Lakes, 13-5 overall, with eight points.

CLARENCEVILLE 58, HARPER WOODS 54 (OT): After suffering through a nightmarish fourth quarter, Livonia Clarenceville outscored Harper Woods 7-3 in overtime Thursday to win the Metro Conference game.

Clarenceville, 7-12 overall, led 48-32 after three quarters but Harper Woods outscored the Trojans 19-3 in the fourth quarter to send the game into overtime tied at 51.

Derrick Herr led host Clarenceville with 17 points and Chris Foss added 10. Kendrick Herrington had nine points, including three in overtime, and seven assists for the Trojans.

Mike VanBrienen led Harper Woods with 11 points.

basketball

OSBORN 64, REDFORD CC 62 (OT): Steve Whitlow led Redford Catholic Central Wednesday with 25 points, but Detroit Osborn came away victorious in overtime.

CC, which fell to 4-16 overall, sent the game into overtime tied at 60 when Whitlow sank an 18-foot jump shot at the end of regulation.

CC led 29-26 at halftime.

ST. CLEMENT 79, ST. AGATHA 50: Redford St. Agatha struggled from the free throw line Wednesday and St. Clement outscored the Aggies 42-29 in the second half.

It all added up to another loss for St. Agatha, which fell to 6-14 overall.

The Aggies were only 14 of 33 from the free throw line. Senior center Pat Wagner led Agatha with 14 points.

Guard John Cronin led three St. Clement players in double figures with 17 points.

St. Clement led 19-12 after one quarter and outscored St. Agatha 18-9 in the second quarter to open up a commanding 37-21 halftime lead.

TRUMAN 64, THURSTON 56: Redford Thurston showed balanced scoring Thursday, but it wasn't enough as host Taylor Truman won the Tri-River League game, 64-56.

Donnell Williams, who made all of his six free throws in the final quarter, led Truman with 24 points.

The win improved Truman to 16-4 overall and 12-2 in the Tri-River. Thurston slumped to 14-6 overall and 10-4 in Tri-River play.

Four players scored in double figures for Thurston, led by Jason Muller's 14 points. Dan Perttula, Colin Shanahan and D.J. Kellogg added 11 points apiece.

Thurston trailed by one, 29-28, at halftime, but Truman outscored the Eagles 16-10 in the third quarter to open up a 45-38 lead.

GARDEN CITY 78, DEARBORN 70: Garden City recovered from a slow start Friday and won the Northwest Suburban League game behind the 18-point effort of senior forward Rich Morton.

Four players scored in double figures for Garden City, which improved to 8-12 overall and 3-5 in the Northwest Suburban League. The Cougars trailed 22-8 after the first quarter and 40-27 at halftime.

Dearborn led 57-49 after three quarters but Garden City outscored the home team 29-13 in the decisive fourth quarter. Garden City was 26-35 at the free throw line and Dearborn converted 28 of its 38 tries.

Senior guard Dan Emerson had 17 points for Garden City and senior teammates Jim Marszalek and Paul Donaldson contributed 14 points apiece.

WOODHAVEN 65, REDFORD UNION 58: Woodhaven, the regular-season Northwest Suburban League champion, had to rally Friday at home to beat a pesky Redford Union team, 65-58.

Woodhaven, 19-1 overall and 8-0 in the NSL, outscored RU 19-7 in the fourth quarter. RU, which fell to 7-11 overall and 2-6 in the NSL, still led with about 2¼ minutes left before Woodhaven made a final comeback.

"We were halfway decent on defense but we didn't get into our offense," RU coach Tip Smathers said. "We tried to do it individually instead of running our offense. We didn't execute well down the stretch."

Steve Nowak led RU with 17 points and Bill Malecki and Dan Lezotte contributed 13 and 12, respectively.

Jason Gagnon had only four points but grabbed eight rebounds for RU, which was outrebounded 46-31.

Vernon Crump's 13 points and 10 rebounds led Woodhaven.

OAKLAND CHRIST. 76, LUTH. WESTLAND 70: Craig Martin, one of Oakland County's most explosive players, scored 39 points Thursday to lead host Oakland Christian to a narrow win over Lutheran Westland.

Spartans stun CC skaters

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

hockey

The puck came to Nick Sata's stick like a dog to its master Thursday.

Except Sata didn't pet the piece of rubber. He unleashed a wicked slap shot from top of the circle past Redford Catholic Central netminder Matt Fennelly.

And because of it, Livonia Stevenson finally had its day, taming CC, 4-3, in double overtime in a Class A regional semifinal hockey game at Oak Park Compuware Arena.

Sata's goal, on an assist from Nick Mariani with 3:28 left in the second sudden-death, eight-minute overtime session, capped off an entertaining game. After each period, both teams were deadlocked.

Stevenson's Chris Rennie sent the game into OT, knocking in a pass from linemate John Fenech with 2:29 left in regulation. Sata drew the other assist on the crucial goal.

MATT CICHY and Brian Eglinton accounted for Stevenson's other two goals.

"It was our turn," said Stevenson coach Paul Ferguson. "Catholic Central won the first (regular season) game and we tied the second. The kids had confidence they could do it and they stuck to the game plan real well."

That strategy included an attempt to shut down the Shamrocks' "Value Line" of Paul Pirronello, Jesse Hubenschmidt and Keith Bozyk.

Nice try.

Pirronello scored two goals while Hubenschmidt added another. Of those three goals, though, only Hubenschmidt's — a minute into the third period — came when both teams were at full strength.

Pirronello's first tally with 5:04 left in the second period came on a power play. His second, with 46 seconds left in the period, was a shorthanded effort.

IN THE OVERTIME session, Stevenson (16-5-3) played like a team in a perpetual man-advantage situation. The Spartans outshot the Shamrocks, 9-5, in extra time.

Only the stand-up netminding of Fennelly kept Stevenson from revving up the team bus earlier. He made several key saves, facing a total of 25 shots.

The Spartans' John Labadie had a goal called back just seconds into the first overtime session. The referee ruled the puck was kicked into the net. Undaunted, Stevenson continued to run the show.

"Once they started dominating we lost control of it," said Catholic Central coach John Gumbleton. "We were outworked. They (Stevenson) deserved it. They worked hard. Both teams played well, really."

Though it was of little solace to the CC coach, who's not used to such early exits from state playoff festivities. The Shamrocks (12-7-3) sagged toward the end of the regular season, closing out with losses to Southgate Anderson (4-0) and Trenton (5-1).

CC appeared to have shaken out of its doldrums. The team bounced back from a one-goal deficits twice in the second period. Pirronello did the honors.

HIS FIRST goal on a quick wrist shot tied the score, 1-1. Joe Cyrek and Hubenschmidt drew assists. Cichy opened the scoring for Stevenson, wristing a shot past Fennelly with 8:23 left in the period. Fenech assisted.

Eglinton slap shot from the point was redirected, giving the Spartans' a 2-1 lead with 2:54 left in the period. John Brodhun and Cichy were credited with assists.

With teammate Matt Surowiec off for holding, Pirronello deposited his second goal into the left-hand corner of the net with 46 seconds left. Bozyk and Cyrek assisted.

Pirronello, along with Bozyk, helped set up Hubenschmidt's goal 58 seconds into the third period.

Salem scores hat trick

STEVENSON HAD four first-place finishes, with junior Aaron Reider leading the way with two individual wins and a first on the 200 medley relay.

Reider's titles came in the 200 individual medley (1:58.98) and 100 backstroke (57.05). He combined with Scott DeWolf, Taki Caranicolas and Alex Goecke in winning the medley relay (1:40.62).

Goecke, only a freshman, also had a fine meet for Stevenson, winning the 100 breaststroke in a WLAA-record 1:01.18.

North boasted a triple-winner in senior sprinter Chuck Chuba. Chuba's individual firsts came in the 50 free (22.75) and 100 free (49.89), and he teamed with Dan Knipper, Jerry Jehle and Chris Knoche for a win in the 400 free relay (3:19.55).

Northville had the other two champions. Eric Newton edged Stevenson's DeWolf in the 500 free (4:58.48 to 4:58.52) and Larry Osiecki captured the diving (447.00 points).

Salem's surprising win and Stevenson's strong showing made it seem as if Northville choked. Olson disputed that, however.

"They swam well," he said of the Mustangs, "just not as well."

After Wednesday's preliminaries, Olson knew what it would take to collect another championship: good, not necessarily spectacular, swimming and an elimination of mistakes. He got both.

And Salem got its title.

Scholarship is tourney prize

10-pin alley

Al Harrison

THE NATIONAL championships are coming to town.

The finest youth bowlers in the United States and Canada, in addition to Europe and Asia will shoot for $45,000 in scholarship money. It is the "National Junior Bowling Championship," held Aug. 16-20 at Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park.

Coca-Cola, a long-time youth bowling supporter, sponsors the event.

The local organizers and officials are in need of volunteers now to help make this a successful and memorable event for competitors and everyone else involved. Volunteers are needed to chaperone both during the day and night.

They all will stay at the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn. If interested in chaperoning, call Betty Heider at 542-5600. This will be the first time the Youth National Championship will be held in Michigan.

Four bowlers from each state and four from each of the six Canadian providences, in addition to the U.S. military commands in Europe, the Far East, Caribbean and Puerto Rico will be there.

THE FOUR bowlers are the top scorers and winners of overall competition in local and state competition in four divisions — the boys handicap, girls handicap, boys scratch and girls scratch. The finalists from Michigan will be in competition in Grand Rapids, May 5 and 6 to determine the Final Four out of a field of approximately 500 youth bowlers who have qualified in their youth leagues.

The scholarship prize money is set aside for college, and each division will have equal awards of $5,000 (first prize), $3,000 (second), $2,000 (third) and $1,000 (fourth). There also is a need for volunteers to act as "greeters."

Interested parties should call Ed Wright at 477-5047.

Anyone who would like to be "scoremonitors," should contact Bob Simon, the tournament director, at 583-7330. This is a great opportunity to give these kids a wonderful memory of their visit to the Detroit area.

Good people are needed to help make this national championship the best ever.

• Randy Pierce, director of the NABI Tournament, announced a change in locale for the March 10 and 11 meet. It originally was set for Taylor Lanes, but has been re-set for Oak Lanes in Westland.

Saturday qualifying times are at 1 p.m., 2:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. with qualifying rounds on Sunday at 10 and 11:30 a.m., followed by the semifinals at 1:30 p.m. and finals at 3 p.m.

Oak Lanes is the recently remodeled and expanded house with 16 new lanes and lowered ceilings. Pierce also announced that the March 31 and April 1 tourney will have a guaranteed first prize of $1,000.

That event will take place at Century Bowl near Pontiac. For information on the NABI Bowling Tournament series, call Randy Pierce at 459-4811 in Canton.

Hostility a threat to long life

Did you know that

• Scientists now believe that of the various qualities that characterize the Type A person, being angry or hostile is the most significant when it comes to heart disease risk. According to one widely quoted study, almost 20 percent of 25-year-old doctors and lawyers who scored high on hostility tests were dead by age 50. The message is simply this: If you want to live to a ripe old age — cool it.

• This month, the American Heart Association rolls out its widely publicized, yet much debated, Heart Guide program. Heart Guide is an unprecedented effort in consumer education aimed at helping you to choose foods that meet the AHA's guidelines for total fat, saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium. In the supermarket, you'll begin seeing products that contain a heart-and-check seal (Figure) that identifies them as having been tested and approved. Food companies can apply for their products to be tested; however, considerable costs may be involved. For more information on Heart Guide simply call 1-800-223-2323.

• There is no good scientific evidence that eating chocolate or any other foods can promote the development of acne.

• To estimate how many calories you can eat and still lose an average of one pound per week, simply multiply your current weight in pounds by 10. You can use this calorie level as your daily target. (Note: The 10-calorie rule is accurate only if you want to lose 25 pounds or less.)

• Parents and kids can now check out a 22-minute videotape about the hazards of drug and alcohol abuse. The free tape, called "Time to Think," is available at any one of the Blockbuster video stores.

• A recent review from the Mayo Clinic concluded that drinking alcohol is not an effective method to prevent heart disease. Alcohol seems to raise the HDL-3 form of cholesterol, which has no proven role in safeguarding your heart. It is the HDL-2 form (which is increased by regular exercise) that has been shown to be protective.

Barry A. Franklin, Ph.D., is director of Cardiac Rehabilitation and Exercise Laboratories, William Beaumont Hospital, Royal Oak, and associate professor of physiology, Wayne State University.

Armenian Genocide issue blocked

Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Senators voted in the week ending Feb. 23. The House had no contested roll calls during the recess-shortened week.

"ARMENIAN GENOCIDE" ISSUE: By a tie vote of 49-49, the Senate failed to end a filibuster against a resolution dealing with events in the Ottoman Empire, the forerunner of the Republic of Turkey.

Sponsors of SJ Res 212 needed a three-fifths majority to clear the procedural hurdle.

The measure sets April 24, 1990, for remembering "the Armenian Genocide of 1915-23."

By passing it, Congress would acknowledge the disputed historical point that genocide by the Ottoman Empire government was behind the deaths of up to 1.5 million Armenians during the period.

The State Department and many senators expressed concern that passage of the resolution would disrupt relations with Turkey, an ally and NATO member.

"I cannot believe the Senate would paper over the Armenian genocide because of the flimsy excuse that it insults Turkey," said Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who voted to end the filibuster.

"I am deeply sympathetic to the suffering endured by the Armenians during this time period," said Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. "But I do not know whether what happened to the Armenians constitutes a genocide."

Senators voting yes wanted to move toward approval of the resolution.

Both Michigan Sens. Carl Levin, D, and Donald Riegle, D, voted yes.

SC offers finance class

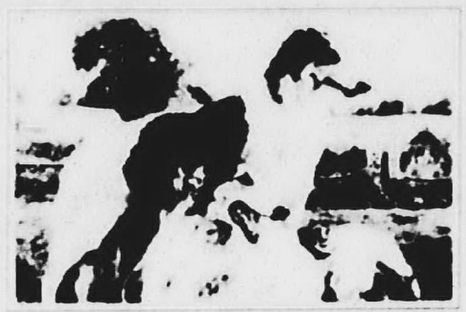

Finance and accounting principles for non-financial managers will be taught by Schoolcraft College's continuing education services division beginning Wednesday, March 14.

The class is designed to provide an understanding of finance, including reading and interpreting financial statements, understanding how they affect departments, using financial reports and analyses, developing a management plan and making financial decisions.

It is offered in cooperation with the American Management Association. Those who complete six AMA classes are issued a certificate of management by the organization.

Additional information is available by calling 462-4448. Schoolcraft is at 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

A lady in waiting?

Transplanted Southfield resident Sheila Kay is looking for the limelight in L.A., not to mention a part in a situation comedy or even a husband. As Sheila sees it, she's just wants to be another "domestic goddess" like Roseanne Barr. For more on this very funny lady, see Page 5D.

Janet Zabik got off to a good start in the first day of dog sled races at Kalkaska, but ended up being disqualified when she needed help from a track marshal.

There's no mistaking the enthusiasm sled dogs have for their sport. Hook them to a harness and they're howling, yelping and barking to get started.

'Paw power' keeps 'em mushing along

By Bill Parker
staff writer

The howwwwwwl of the huskies shattered the crisp morning air as the sun crept over the horizon with welcomed warmth.

Despite the frigid early morning temperatures, the mood was electric as the huskies warmed up in anticipation of events to come.

This was Kalkaska in mid-February, home of the Kalkaska Sled Dog Races.

Better than 125 sled dog teams from as far away as New York, Missouri and West Virginia had entered the race, an annual event for the past 16 years in this northern Michigan community.

Hundreds of eager dogs — Siberian, Alaskan and American huskies and every cross-breed in between — were howling, yelping, yipping and barking in frenzied anticipation of the start of the races.

Southfield's Jane Zabik was one of the mushers (sled drivers) tending her dogs prior to the start of competition.

Races are held in several classes including 10-, six-, four- and three-dog teams and unlimited (up to 25 dogs). Anyone over 14 can participate in the races that are sponsored by the Great Lakes Sled Dog Association and sanctioned by the International Sled Dog Racing Association.

Competition is held over groomed, marked trails in distances from four to 36 miles. There is also a weight-pull competition.

ZABIK WAS competing in the four-mile sprint race with her three-dog team of Josie, Rambo and Tiger.

Leonberger: The 'Whopper' of mountain dogs

By Sue Mason
staff writer

Bismark von Weinstock can trace his roots back to the small town of Leonberg in the southern part of what is now West Germany near the city of Stutgart. Nearby is the famous Black Forest and the even more famous Swiss Alps.

In fact, Bismark can trace his roots back to the 1840s. Hmmmm . . . pretty good for a guy who really isn't into genealogy.

Bismark's forte is snow-capped mountains and he has a penchant for a brisk three-mile walk in the morning and some good workouts in the backyard. As for weather, a cool crisp winter morning with a dash of snowfall is preferable.

An eligible Bloomfield Hills bachelor, Bismark could melt a snow cap with just one look from his soulful brown eyes. And when he kisses you, you know you've been kissed.

"He's a baby . . . a spoiled baby," said Annaleise Tippery, giving him a playful pat on the back. "Sometimes, he's so responsive, I think he's human."

Oops, did we forget to mention that this dashing young "man" about town is a dog? Yes, he is. You see, young Bismark — he's a mere two years old — is a Leonberger, a rare German mountain dog. (There are only 53 Leonbergers in the United States, with a large contingent based in the Southwest around Phoenix, Ariz.)

Bismark will be among 20 rare breeds of dogs being showcased at the 72nd annual Detroit Kennel Club Dog Show at Cobo Center Sunday, March 11.

The Leonberger has many of the features of its ancestors — the small floppy ears of the St. Bernard and the broad face and thick coat of the Great Pyrennes and Newfoundlander. But, according to Tippery, when it comes to mountain work, the Leonberger has it all over its famous distant relative, the St. Bernard.

"ABOUT THE best you can expect of the St. Bernard is for it to sit there and look pretty with a barrel around its neck," said Tippery. "The true mountain dog is the Leonberger."

The Leonberger is a very guarded breed in Europe, prized for its high intelligence and powerful build. It was breed to work the mountains and during wartime, was used to ferry supplies and medicine to soldiers fighting in the mountains.

Tippery, born in Cologne, Germany, discovered the breed three years ago, when a friend introduced her to a breeder during a visit to her homeland. Tippery was looking for a dog after losing her 13½-year-old bearded collie. She had thought about getting a small dog, but her children convinced that she should stick with a large one.

Bismark von Weinstock may weigh close to 150 pounds, but according to his owner, Annaleise Tippery of Bloomfield Hills, the rare German mountain dog is "a baby."

Dogs strut stuff at DKC show

If you love dogs, then the 1990 Detroit Kennel Club dog show is the place to be Sunday, March 11, at Cobo Center in Detroit.

From 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., 3,200 pedigree dogs of all shapes and sizes will be vying for honors in best of breed and best of show as well as obedience trials.

The show is the largest one-day, all-breed benched dog show in North America. Under the show format, dogs entered in the competition are stationed on benches except while being judged and groomed, providing plenty of viewing by spectators.

Dogs of each breed will be judged in six different classifications — puppies, novice, American breed, bred-by-exhibitor, open class and best of breed.

Best of breed competitors will be determined in the categories of sporting, hound, working, terrier, non-sporting, toy and herding, with the seven group winners competing for the coveted best of show prize.

In addition to the competition, there will be 20 rare breeds of dogs on display at the show.

The show again will have the Grand Prix-style steeplechase event, in which dogs of all sizes will race against the clock in individual time trials. The scissor-shaped course has seven barriers, including a wall and 10-foot long tunnel.

Officers from the Detroit and other area police departments will be on hand to explain how police dogs are trained to sniff out bombs and drugs and to locate missing persons.

Tickets for the show cost $6 for adults and $4 for children under 12 and senior citizens. A $15 family ticket will admit two adults and three children. Tickets are available at all Hudson and TicketMaster outlets.

MOVING PICTURES

'Red October' misses mark as a 'thriller'

the movies

Dan Greenberg

Films set against the backdrop of international politics and conflict lose their impact when those tensions are defused. Then they become historical dramas — but they still need to discover excitement and drama in the material.

None of which exists in "The Hunt for Red October" (C-, PG, 135 minutes). There's just endless, confusing underwater shots, control panel shots and storm-at-sea shots. Seldom are those shots immediately or clearly identified.

Soviet Naval Officer Marko Ramius (Sean Connery) captains the "Red October," the Soviet's latest and most threatening submarine. Together with a few of his trusted officers he plans to defect to the United States.

Naturally, Jack is quiet but heroic. Is Captain Ramius defecting? Is he going to bomb the East Coast? Who knows? National Security Advisor Jeffrey Pelt (Richard Jordan) doesn't and he isn't getting much help from Soviet Ambassador Andrei Lysenko (Joss Ackland). Let Jack figure it out.

SEAN CONNERY, James Earl Jones and the rest of the cast are far too accomplished for this cliched screenplay by Larry Ferguson and Donald Stewart and the murky direction by John McTiernan ("Die Hard" and "Predator").

The cast walks through their lines, looking faintly embarrassed, but striving as professionals to do the job they were paid for. But now that Comrade Glasnost has come to roost in the Soviet Embassy, there's just no story here — and it's told very poorly.

Can you believe Sonorman Jonesy aboard the U.S. Submarine Dallas? He wears Petty Officer Second Class insignia but he's listed as a plain seaman. He sits there with his sonor, earphones and $40 million computer figuring out major technical secrets.

Does he have trouble convincing the Chief Boatswain (Larry Ferguson) or his Captain (Scott Glenn)? Of course not, they are eager to make major decisions based on an enlisted man's theory. That's not the Navy I remember.

By the way, did Ramius defect? In the end he discusses the issue at length with Jack Ryan but never explains his position. It may have been because both Ramius and Ryan were taught to fish by their grandfathers. That makes as much sense as the rest of "The Hunt for Red October."

Sean Connery stars as Marko Alexandrovich Ramius, a Russian nuclear submarine captain, and Sam Neill is Captain Second Rank Vasily Borodin in "The Hunt for Red October."

ALTERNATIVE VIEWING

'Speaking Parts:' Video rules

By John Monaghan
special writer

Atom Egoyan's "Speaking Parts" is about the lack of communication in a world of muted emotions. Intentionally slow and often maddening, it proves somewhat why respected directors like Wim Wenders take the young Canadian so seriously.

Screening this weekend at the Tele-Arts Theatre, "Speaking Parts" spends its first 10 minutes without a single word of dialogue. Dissonant electronic music fills the soundtrack while the film focuses on a pair of women obsessed with video-taped images.

Alone in her apartment, Lisa (Arsinee Khanijian) zooms in slowly on a man in the background of a scene — a handsome extra named Lance (Michael McManus). The second woman, Clara (Gabrielle Rose), seated in a new age mausoleum, watches her deceased brother walk toward her across a field.

In Egoyan's world of the very near future, people thrive on empty compliments and never really get to the heart of a conversation. Lisa, who works with Lance in the housekeeping department of a small hotel, tries to confront Lance with real feelings, but he literally runs from her.

THE FILM brings home Lance's vacuousness when he finally lands an audition for a speaking part. He talks in monotone during an emotional hospital scene.

"Do you think he's real enough?" asks the God-like movie producer, presiding over script meetings on an imposing video screen. Of course, he is, because everyone acts in a similarly detached way.

Clara, the screenwriter, also falls in love with Lance, mostly because he so resembles her dead brother. But all emotions with them — even lovemaking — are prompted by the video image. The scary part is how readily they accept it.

Bleakness, sterility and claustrophobia permeate the film, from the gray laundry and hotel rooms where Lance and Lisa work to the artificially lit mausoleum. None of the scenes take place outside, except in Clara's dead brother's video image.

"Speaking Parts" is hard to watch because Egoyan gives us no one to relate to. Lisa, the apparent heroine of the film, longs for an emotional breakthrough, but also relies heavily on video to accomplish it. We can't tell what's going on behind actress Khahijian's intentionally lifeless performance.

In many ways, "Speaking Parts" is a more intense, though less mature, companion piece to "sex, lies and videotape." It's the ambition and obvious thought behind the project that allow us to see beyond Egoyan's student art-film pretensions.

Soul Station plays a guitar-driven rock that sounds like the unlikely combination of "classic rock" and Stan Ridgeway that works.

Station: Not so soulful sounds

By Jill Hamilton
special writer

First, let's get this out of the way. Soul Station doesn't play soul music. What they do play is an unusual sort of guitar-driven rock that sounds like an unlikely combination of "classic rock" and Stan Ridgeway. This mixture actually works. Honest.

Soul Station is a band you could bring home to mother. During an early afternoon interview at the glamorous setting of a Denny's Restaurant, Joe Angotti (lead guitar), John Linardos (vocals, rhythm guitar) and Scott Burks (drums) proved themselves to be articulate, personable, nice guys.

Nice guys? Yes, nice. Although we don't know for sure since bassist Steve Rousee couldn't come to the Denny's summit, he's probably a nice guy, too.

Some bands seem more enamored with the trappings of success and the idea of being in a band than in the music itself. The four guys in Soul Station play in a band just because they really like playing music.

"We're always going to play," Linardos said. "Of course, it would be nice to be able to make a living at it."

Sure, but is it probable? Actually, the answer is yes.

Soul Station got off to quite a good start. For their first gig, they played at St. Andrew's Hall, opening for the Orange Roughies.

"It happened kind of fast," said Burks. Linardos was a friend of the Orange Roughies and asked if his band could open for them at the St. Andrew's gig. What Linardos neglected to mention was that he didn't exactly have a band together yet. He quickly recruited Angotti, a neighbor from his building and his friends Rousee and Burks.

THE SHOW was a success. They had to use a practice amp since they didn't have any equipment but, as Burks puts it, "We jammed."

After that fateful first gig, Soul Station decided that maybe it was time to buy some equipment. It was a good investment. After only 1½ years of playing together, Soul Station racked up an impressive array of successful performances.

In January, they headlined with several of Detroit's most popular bands at the FUN magazine party at St. Andrew's Hall. They also played at the popular Tremor Records show at Paycheck's.

In February, they performed at the Majestic Theatre with such illustrious local talent as Crossed Wire, Phineas Gage, the Sun Messengers and Ash Can VanGogh at a benefit for WDET and the American Heart Association.

Their new five-song cassette, simply titled "Soul Station" has been getting air play on WDET's "Dimensions" show and on WDTR's "Detroit Music Scene."

The band has started playing the out-of-state club circuit.

"We've played in Toledo and Milwaukee . . . the Midwestern tour," said Angotti.

The band hopes to eventually expand their next Midwestern tour to include more than two cities, but for the present, they are happy with what they are doing.

"When we first started out, half the shows were good and half were not good," said Angotti. "Lately, we've been playing well and getting good responses."

"WE'RE GETTING more consistent," Linardos said.

Lindaros handles writing the songs for the group because, as Angotti puts it, "We're lazy, so we let him do it."

"I try to write all the time. Every night I write something — songs, poetry or something on the guitar," said Linardos.

When asked about musical influences, Linardos named songwriters "like James Taylor, Paul Simon, Lou Reed."

Listening to Soul Station's rough-edged songs, it's hard to imagine that they were somehow inspired by mellow rockers like James Taylor and Paul Simon. But, take a look at the lyric sheet and the influence is obvious. Linardos has quite a talent for writing honest, emotional songs.

WHEN ASKED about other local bands, Soul Station is quick to compliment the competition. Some favorites include Anti-Fashion, Inside Out, Viv Akauldren, Static Alphabet and Crossed Wire. They repeat the familiar refrain that Detroit has a lot of great local bands but that there is little radio support. However, Soul Station has a solution to the dilemma.

"Everybody has to get together," Linardos said. "Local bands need to work with each other instead of competing with each other," added Jim Stone, who manages the band.

"More like a collective," echoed Burks. "I would be great if there were more local compilation albums." He cites Tremor Records and commends them for their support of local music.

"Their review was really fun and it was packed," he said. "We could use a lot more things like that."

MUSIC NOTES

alive signs with 4AD

Livonia-based musician Warren Defever and his group his name is alive recently was signed to a one-record deal by British major independent 4AD/Elektra Entertainment Group, according to New York-based label publicist Vicky Wheeler.

The yet-to-be titled LP will be released in August.

The record deal is a remarkable feat considering Defever performed only a couple of times live with the group.

"I have a theory," said Defever, who is currently touring with Elvis Hitler. "It seems to me (bands) try to be really popular local bands. That's great for your social life, but it doesn't work."

Defever sent in a tape recorded on a four-track in his basement to 4AD representative Ivo Watts-Russell. He was "impressed" and told Defever to keep in contact.

After a few visits to Garageland Studios in New Boston, Defever resubmitted the tape and Watts-Russell approved.

The Livonia Stevenson graduate has performed with a number of local groups, most notably Snake Out and Elvis Hitler. Several musicians helped out on the project, including vocalists Karen Oliver, and Angie Carozzo along with Damien Lang and Jim Auge.

Defever describes his music as "basically rock music" blended with folk and classical stylings. He's putting together a band to tour in the fall. Members include Melissa Elliot and his younger brother Matthew Defever.

We have a new idea for a compilation album. Title it "Bass Player Blues" and ask Frank Allison & the Odd Sox, Orange Roughies and Jugglers and Thieves to appear. All three have, or will be, waving bye-bye to their bassists.

John Boyle recently performed his last show with Frank Allison & the Odd Sox at the Blind Pig. Tim Doss of the Orange Roughies served notice he wouldn't be able to tour in support of the long-awaited release of "Knuckle Sandwich."

Jill Zimba of Jugglers and Thieves will be leaving the band to marry Daryl Dybka, who is keyboardist and co-producer of the Chet Atkins Band, later this year.

The band also announced it has signed a management/representation contract with Star-Direction agency of Los Angeles, Calif., and has such clients as the O'Jays and the Temptations. The agency will present Jugglers and Thieves to major record labels.

Orange Roughies found a solution to their bass player shortage, enlisting the services of Idiots' drummer Glynn Scanlon. The group is set to shove off on a massive tour of the Midwest, Southwest and southern California. The tour kicks off March 31 in St. Louis, Mo. Also Dave Katz looks to be the likely replacement for Frank Allison & the Odd Sox, who will play Friday and Saturday at Lili's.

Of course, no romp through the local music is complete without a note from the Sensitive Big Guys. Apparently, the Livonia group has a tape ready to go, "our (sic) Flaws Make Us Perfect" Price tag for the 20-minute tape? A mere $149.95.

But, wait. Act now, according to the Big Guys, and receive a 97 percent mark down. That's right, folks. A tape that normally retails for $149.95 is available for $4. The offer only lasts until Dec. 1, 1999 (Sorry, no mention of any Ginsu knives).

Shheesh! And we thought the only bargains were at K mart.

INSHA-ALLAH! — Nasa

Nasa's debut, Insha-Allah!, is the latest entry in the recent spate of Middle Eastern recordings hitting U.S. shores. With Insha-Allah!, Momo (guitar) and Cash (vocals) have no less lofty a goal than "to bring together East and West into a startling new synthesis of sound."

They succeed. The group, named after the American space program and Gamal Abdel Nasser (the Egyptian president who spearheaded the movement for Arab unity), spices up Western guitar-based rock with mysterious Eastern melodies, chants and sounds. The mixture makes for quite an odd concoction.

Although Western musicians, most notably George Harrison, have incorporated elements of Middle-Eastern music into their music for years, Nasa is the first band to go beyond the occasional use of a sitar and give Eastern and Western sounds equal time.

The result is an odd hybrid that is powerful, majestic and sensual, but it also rocks. Nasa moves easily between screeching guitar feedback and oasis of gentle, atmospheric Eastern sounds. Cash's echoed vocals can be anthemic and sweeping, as on "Woman" or harsh and metallic, as in "Magic Jeweled Limousine." He has that same sort of passionate wail as U2's Bono or INXS' Michael Hutchence.

Two songs — "Shah Shah" and "Serophia" were previously released on a four-song EP, "Boy King and the Lizard Girl." "Shah Shah" is savage and exotic layering of sounds. "Serophia" is a dizzying dance tune, complete with a new age philosophy in lyrics like, " A love mission, children given sight/a psychic vision, beauty born of decay/a new religion, pary for your love to stay."

Nasa brought out the big guns for this major-label debut on Sire Records, including legendary Indian tabla player Pandit Dinesh and Israeli vocalist and label mate Ofra Haza. Not making a musical appearance on the album but thanked, nonetheless, in the liner notes are other "big guns" — Shiva, Buddha, Krishna and Allah.

Insha-Allah, by the way, can be loosely translated as "God willing." No use taking any chances.

BLOOD BROTHERS — Rob Tyner

In 1969, three bands released major-label debuts that forever redefined "the Detroit sound." The Stooges, Alice Cooper and the MC5 played raspy, industrial strength rock-and-roll. Of the three, the MC5 was the most political, inventive and eclectic.

Twenty years later, the raw power, muscle and sonic boom of these bands is still being imitated. And while the bands themselves have all disintegrated, the lead singers, Iggy Pop, Alice Cooper and Rob Tyner, remain the most active and recognized alumni of their respective bands. Unfortunately, none of the three has retained the distinctiveness or originality that characterized their early work.

Rather, they are all imitating their imitators. Iggy Pop's songs crop up on soundtracks, where they blend depressingly with the current wave of L.A. metal. Alice Cooper has copped more than his fair share of Bon Jovi harmonies of late. And Rob Tyner, well, his is the saddest story of all.

"Blood Brothers" is a startlingly bad record. Tyner claims to have penned most of the MC5's lyrics, and has been the band's key songwriting member. If this is true, Tyner's skills have evaporated over the past two decades.

The record has traces of the MC5's politicism, but the ideas are even more fuzzy and muddled. On several tracks, Tyner strives for anthemic pop-metal. The results end up sounding like bargain-basement KISS.

Tyner's vocals are a pale, wobbly echo of his former full-tilt assault, and his band is not able to prop him up. Joey Gaydos has a stableful of Van Halen-inspired snorts and whinnies, but his efforts are shoehorned into the songs. And the drumming is simply inept, with beats stumbling about like soused deckhands.

The opening cut, a cover of the Stone's "It's Only Rock'n'Roll," is so tepid that the title becomes a lie.

Because the record contains blatant attempts to cop the Los Angeles pop-metal sound, it might be possible to write this record off as a desperate and ill-advised stab at Top 40. If, however, this record represents Tyner's idea of "Detroit hard rock," he would do well to head for the palm trees and leave "Motor City Music" to people who can still smell something burning in the Motor City.

SHAKE YOUR MONEYMAKER — Black Crowes

Ah yes, sometimes life is surprising.

The Black Crowes are a new band from Atlanta, Ga., who recently received quite a career boost when they were signed by Def American, a division of Geffen Records. With "Shake Your Moneymaker," the Crowes are making their first stab at the big time.

Unfortunately, the Crowes also became acquainted with publicists. Here, verbatim, is what one eager young PR type at Geffen had to say about the Crowes:

"If rock'n'roll is down'n'dirty, boozin', bloozin', and flozzin" if rock'n'roll is letting loose all your emotions, if rock'n'roll is reacting to signing a record deal with the word 'cool,' if rock'n'roll is crashing a car, so you can put the real thing instead of a sound effect in a song, then the Black Crowes is rock'n'roll."

Maybe this description would thrill and excite some eager, young listeners, but others of us might be prompted to think, "Gosh, these Black Crowe guys sound like a bunch of jerks."

So, it was with great trepidation that we placed this particular disc on the old turntable. Guess what? The album is pretty good.

Brothers Chris (vocals) and Rich

Robinson (guitar) might be jerks, but they are not talentless jerks. They are adept at writing powerful tunes that rock hard and actually have some semblance of a melody. Drummer Steve Gorman bangs the skins with originality and finesse.

And, perhaps the biggest bonus, on "Shake Your Moneymaker," the songs don't all sound alike. These Crowe fellows have written some mighty fine tunes incorporating roots rock, head bangers and sweet, sorrowful blues. Their "power ballads" are actually powerful and their rockers rock.

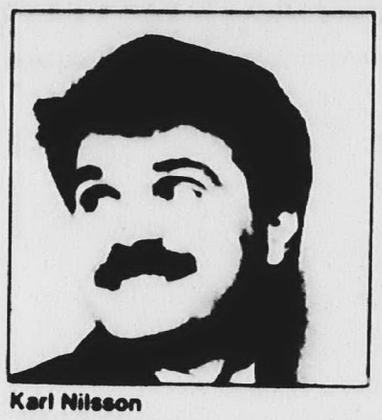

Songs range from a funky cover of Otis Redding's "Hard to Handle" to the bluesy "Seeing Things" to the melancholic "She Talks to Angels," a song about addiction.

"Shake Your Moneymaker" is a fine debut and shows [illegible] band some attitude. The [illegible] PR person says on it.

FEAR & LOAFING

Getting a job

Karl Nilsson

By Karl Nilsson
special writer

People change careers for a variety of reasons. Some desire personal growth. Others seek greater opportunity.

Occasionally the move is not voluntary. Sometimes a slight personality quirk like hiding tripe around the office can rub the boss the wrong way. Sometimes a minor incident like impaling the owner's Mercedes on a forklight can signal a departure.

But whatever the reason for being in the job market, everyone agrees the worst part of looking for work is the Job Interview. And no wonder! Patterned after the Spanish Inquisition, it's designed to turn your most innocent remarks into evidence that can be used against you.

For instance, suppose you're applying for head chef at a posh restaurant. Asked to describe your recent job experience you reply, "Fewer people died of food poisoning than at my first two jobs."

Excellent answer, except for one tiny mistake — you inadvertently revealed you worked at three establishments. That could brand you as a "job-hopper."

Or let's say you're applying for chief mechanic at a new car dealership. Asked about your specialty you reply, "I installed brakes for 10 years and never had a single customer come back and complain. I guess the accidents were always fatal. Eventually I got depressed with all the lawsuits and burned the place down."

Not a bad answer, but don't use the word "depressed." Car dealers want people who can smile and project confidence.

Whatever your situation, you can breeze through your next interview with helpful tips compiled by personnel directors across the country:

1.) Never phone your analyst during a job interview. It's far better etiquette to bring him along in person. If you feel more comfortable answering questions lying down, remember to ask the interviewer to clear off his desk before you spread out on it.

2.) Companies value loyalty from their prospective employees. Before your interview, have the company logo tatooed across your chest. During the dialogue, look for an excuse to casually open your shirt to the waist.

3.) Personal appearance is critical. Trouble is, you can't anticipate the interviewer's taste. If you're lucky enought to wear a hairpiece, bring a spare. If things seem to be going badly for you as a young brunette, switch to your gray toupee.

4.) Gone are the days of sheep mentality. Today, companies want employees who are bold and assertive. Even if you're a non-smoker, light up a 10-inch cigar. If the interviewer points to a no-smoking sign, rip it down and laugh contemptuously. When the air is completely fouled, grind your stogey out on the mahogany desk top. Having proved your rugged individualism, put the cigar back in your purse and reapply your lipstick.

5.) By state law, licensed interviewers must be able to pass for comatose, so breaking the ice isn't easy. To liven things up start off with a hand-buzzer, juggle a rubber chicken, and squirt him with silly-string. Next, fill out your application with disappearing ink, toss a smoke bomb into the wastebasket, and make a Xerox copy of your bare butt. That's the kind of spunk that can't be ignored!

Occasionally, a second interview is conducted in a most relaxed atmosphere, usually over lunch. Special rules of business courtesy apply here:

1.) Except for minestrone, it's best not to eat soup with your fingers. It could be hot enough to cause a nasty burn.

2.) If dexterity and coordination are called for in your new position, a demonstration could be helpful. Place a toothpick between your front teeth and spear your meatballs.

3.) When the check comes, make a grand gesture and grab it from the waiter. Then try to pay it with food stamps. This will subtlty underscore how badly you need the job.

Finally, with employee pilferage at an all time high, questions will inevitably turn to your personal integrity. To convey your feelings about white collar crime, pull out a giant chrome revolver and shove it up the interviewer's nose. In your best Dirty Harry snarl, say you'll personally terminate any co-worker that swipes so much as a pencil.

STREET SENSE

Where to meet people

If you have a question or a comment for Barbara Schiff, a trained therapist and experienced counselor, send it to Street Sense, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Dear Barbara:

A few months ago, someone wrote to you inquiring about why there are not any groups forming for individuals to meet new people. With all of the self-help and other support groups in the metro area, it does not seem right that women and men who need to meet new people don't have a place to congregate.

I am a 23-year-old female recently moved back to this area. After being away for school, coming back has proven difficult, especially in the acquiring of new friends. I would like to know if any such group has since been formed, and if not, how to contact anyone interested in forming some kind of new one.

In Search of New Acquaintances

Dear In Search of:

A few months ago there was a lot of correspondence in this column from singles. Many bemoaned the lack of situations for single people. Others wrote to say that they had found many possibilities for meeting new people in the Observer & Eccentric, the News and the Free Press. They cited church and temple groups, community gatherings, dating services and even bars as possible sites for meeting other singles.

However, even the singles who find others who are unattached seem to have trouble finding the "right" ones. That is, cohorts with similar values and interests.

When singles were high school and college age, there was a school environment that allowed for a lot of discourse and familiarity before romantic attachments were decided. Without that environment and the possibility for familiarity that it imparts, many singles find that they are in a crapshoot, as one of my readers called it.

The suggestions that successful singles give are the following. They say to be open to new people and experiences, wherever you are. Friendships with married people can add dimension to your life and may lead to an eventual fix-up as well.

Singles who have been successful in meeting others say that being fixed up by friends has the best chances for success. Friends know you and thus can screen the possibilities. Friends often have values and interests similar to yours — and so will their choices.

Of course, if you have interests — political, athletic, intellectual or artistic, you will have more chances for finding friends who are compatible. Don't expect others to come after you. You have to be aggressive.

My readers and I always love to hear more on this subject, so let us know what happens to you.

VIDEO VIEWING

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

Three more Oscar-nominated films have been added to the video list. There are now 15 motion pictures in contention for Academy Awards which are or shortly will be available on video cassette for home viewing.

Leading the latest list is "Dead Poets Society" with four nods from the academy — best picture, best actor, best director and best original screenplay.

Apparently, producers and distributors now feel there's more money to be made from video than from milking Oscar nominations at the box office. Touchstone has just announced that "Dead Poets Society" will "be available on video cassette just two days after the Academy Awards telecast in March."

Earlier CBS ox announced March 29 as the street date for "The Abyss" which received Oscar nominations for art direction, cinematography, sound and visual effects. Finally, Orion has announced Woody Allen's "Crimes and Misdemeanors" will be on the video racks May 24.

Not in contention for an Oscar, but still playing at the local theaters, "Look Who's Talking" will be released on cassette April 11. As with other top-grossing films from 1989 — "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," "Dead Poets Society" and "Batman" — this may be a case where not too much more is expected at the box-office, so it's time too milk the video market.

Another film still in theatrical release which is now (March 1) available on video is "Apartment Zero" (color, 1989, R, 114 minutes). It's been playing aroung the country at 15 to 20 theaters for the past five months, but for the life of me, I can't understand why.

"APARTMENT ZERO" won best picture at the Fort Lauderdale Film Festival and that honor plus best director at the Seattle Film Festival, neither of which are the big leagues, so there may be a clue there.

The story and production values are appropriate to the title. Set in Buenos Aires, a repressed manager of an art film house, Adrian Leduc (Colin Firth), takes in a border, Jack Carney (Hart Bochner).

Their relationship develops against the background of Argentinian society cleansing itself from the legacy of death squads, a serial killer on the loose, homosexual overtones and a touch of necrophilia for good measure.

That may sound like a lot going on, but actually, the film is etremely slow and boring and an excellent demonstration of the difference between artistic and pretentious filmmaking techniques. "Apartment Zero," of course, is the latter.

With such offerings, it's no wonder that distributors are releasing Oscar winners of former years. Twenty-five MGM titles are now available on cassette. Add to those five Columbia classics which will be available just prior to this year's Oscar ceremonies.

"Picnic," "The More the Merrier," "On the Waterfront," "From Here to Eternity" and "All the King's Men" will be out March 21. The first two are making their debut on the video racks, while the last three have been arpund for some time. All are listed at $19.95, which means that eager collectors will find some real bargains.

"All the King's Men" (1949, black and white, 109 minutes, not rated) is of particular interest featuring Broderick Crawford in the portrayal of Louisiana Gov. Huey Long, a performance which won best actor in 1949. Screen this video just before trekking out to the theater to see Paul Newman's current hit, "Blaze," the story of Huey's younger brother, Earl, also a governor of Louisiana.

BESIDES BEST actor, "All the King's Men" won best supporting actress and best picture. Based on Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, it also was nominated for directing, writing and film editing.

"On the Waterfront" (1954, black and white, not rated) and "From Here to Eternity" (1953, black and white, 118 minutes, not rated) are in a similar class.

"Waterfront," the well-known film about labor racketeering, stars Marlon Brando, Eva Marie Saint and Lee J. Cobb. It won best picture, actor, supporting actress, directing, writing, cinematography, art direction and film editing.

"From Here to Eternity," featuring Burt Lancaster, Frank Sinatra, Montgomery Clift, Ernest Borgnine, Donna Reed and Deborah Kerr, won seven Oscars for its compelling tale of army life in Hawaii just prior to Pearl Harbor.

The two new video releases, "Picnic" (1956, color, 113 minutes, not rated) and "The More the Merrier" 91943, black and white, 104 minutes, not rated) are both well worth your viewing time.

"Picnic" stars William Holden, Kim Novak, Rosalind Russell and Susan Strasburg in a drama about an egotistical drifter and the effect he has on the lives of five women in a small, Midwestern town. It won Oscars for art direction-set direction and film editing while being nominated for best picture, supporting actor, direction and music scoring.

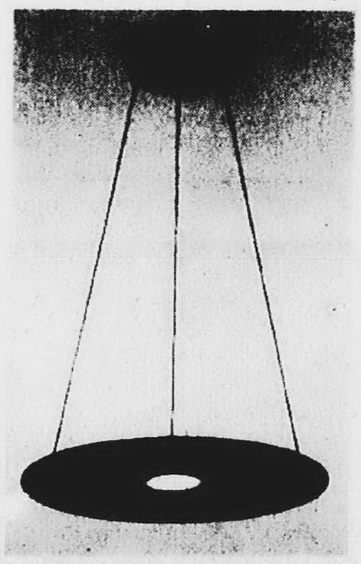

"The More the Merrier" is a comedy set during World War II in Washington. Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea and Charles Coburn star, with the last winning best supporting actor. Arthur was nominated for best actress. The film also was nominated for best picture, director and screenplay.

Bismark readies for debut

"My friend introduced me to a woman she said had a dog I was going to love," Tippery said. "I meet her and the dog and fell in love with Topas (Bismark's father)."

One thing led to another and a year later, Tippery and her husband became the proud owners of Bismark. As dogs go, Bismark is a well-traveled pooch. He was 12 weeks old when he was shipped via Luftansa Freight to New York, with a connecting flight on United Freight to Detroit.

He came with a letter, explaining his care. According to the letter, Leonbergers dine on tripe and rice. They should never be placed in a cage (it will break their spirit, Tippery said). And the long fur on their paws should never be trimmed. The fur attracts ice crystals, protecting their pads from frostbite, Tippery explained.

Being a German dog, it's to be expected that the animal would be named after a famous German, in this case, Prince Otto Von Bismark. But Bismark got his name more for a painting of the Prussian chancellor of the German Empire than the man himself.

"There's a painting of Bismark in a museum in Munich," Tippery said. "He's posing with two Leonbergers. I saw it as a young girl and someday I'm going to go back and take a picture of it."

Bismark has a good temperament and is "wonderful" with children. "He knows his limitations," Tippery said.

He also is protective of the family cat, Bubbles, although the feeling isn't mutual. Bubbles tolerates Bismark, Tippery said.

For now, Bismark is brushing up on his rink etiquette at the Birmingham Dog Obedience School in preparation for the dog show — his and Tippery's first. There will also be a visit to the groomer's for some primping.

And, of course, there will still be the morning walks and playtime.

"You really have to work with them," Tippery said.

Sheila Kay is finding fame on West Coast

By Bob Sadler
special writer

Sheila Kay is yet another transplanted Detroit comic seeking limelight in La-La land — not to mention maybe a part in a decent sit-com or even a husband.

"God knows I'm waiting for the perfect marriage," Kay said. "I just want to take care of somebody and be a domestic goddess like Roseanne."

Maybe the former Southfield resident is pulling our legs a bit. She'd probably like the weekly television show and notoriety that a certain Ms. Barr now enjoys, but that domestic goddess stuff may not exactly be her cup of tea.

"I've been married so many times I don't remember," Kay said.

In actuality, it's only been twice, but she's certainly not that far removed from the realities of domestic life. She was washing dishes at the beginning of the interview.

She only uses her first and middle names for her stage moniker, because the wry comic doesn't "want people to find her." Standing about five-feet tall, Sheila describes herself not as another Roseanne, but as Carla from "Cheers" plus another 20 pounds.

The majority of her humor is of the self-deprecating variety — the kind of "how do I look to you" stuff that has spelled stardom for people like Gary Shandling.

SHE FOCUSES on her appearance (particularly on her ongoing diet and exercise battles), her history of relationships (or "dating and the lack thereof" as she put it) and the family that provided both material and support through the years.

"I hate watching me perform," Kay says in her typical self-deprecating way. "I've got all these tapes of myself, and I never see them. I never like me as much as I hope everybody else will."

It's been a long road to full-time comedy and Los Angeles for Sheila Kay. Born in Detroit, she spent the first six years of her life in the old Dexter-Davison neighborhood. Later, her family moved to Oak Park, where she grew up playing the clarinet and taking dancing and singing lessons.

"I always had that show biz thing around me; my uncle used to be on the 'Soupy Sales Show,' doing skits and other stuff," she said. "I had a lot of background in the family, but I never really thought about show business as a career.

"I got married right after high school (she graduated from Ferndale High School), and it threw a monkey wrench in my entire life!"

In March 1979, she joined the nucleus of Detroit comics who all earned their wings during the early days at the Comedy Castle. This illustrious group includes people like Bill Thomas, Van Gunter and Tony Hayes — people who have been able to stay alive on the comedy circuit ever since. Kay remembers those days well.

"WE HAD A real camaraderie. It was really tight," Kay said. "All the comics helped each other, critiqued each other."

Sheila Kay is part of a nucleus of Detroit comics who earned their wings during the early days at the Comedy Castle.

Kay worked at various day jobs while learning the comedic ropes and actually ran a club in Bloomfield Hills for a short time. The experience gained booking a club and emceeing shows gave Kay the confidence to take her act on the road. Finally, the move to Los Angeles was made three years ago.

Now, she has made it as a national headliner, with some television credits to boot — "Comic Strip Live," HBO's "Not Necessarily the News," "Evening at the Improv," and a soon-to-air appearance on the Showtime Comedy Club Network. However, the humble comic still sees room for improvement and more stars to reach for.

"I feel I'm doing my job well, but I'm not really where I want to be yet," she said. "I'd like to get better. In fact, I'd like to be a director someday — because I'm really good at telling people what to do."

Sheila Kay will perform March 2-3 at the Mainstreet Comedy Showcase in Ann Arbor and March 21-25 at the Holly Hotel.

HERB RITTS

Michelle Pfeiffer won her best actress nomination for her performance with Jeff and Beau Bridges in "The Fabulous Baker Boys."

Politics aside, Tandy, Huston are best picks

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

Ten lovely ladies in nine movies are vying for two of the most prestigious Oscars — best actress and best supporting actress — to say nothing of those who weren't nominated although many think they ought to have been.

It's unusual, but not unheard of, for two nominations to be made in the same category for a given film. Anjelica Huston and Lena Olin — wife and mistress to Ron Silver's Holocaust survivor in "Enemies, a Love Story" — are in that category and among the brightest performances nominated this year.

Julia Roberts nominated for her role as the tragically fated daughter in "Steel Magnolias" is in a film that some think ought to have had a few more nominations for best supporting actress. Shirley MacLaine and Olympia Dukakis were magnificent in that film.

Of course, what constitutes a supporting role is open to debate. Who was the feminine lead in "Steel Magnolias" that Roberts supported?

The same question might be raised regarding Huston and Olin in "Enemies, a Love Story." In terms of lines, screen time or any other measure, both were featured more than Sophie Stein who supported them in the role of the Polish servant that saved Silver from the Nazis and later married him. Her fine performance also deserved a nomination.

Well, who will win?

LET'S ELIMINATE Brenda Fricker as Christy Brown's mother in "My Left Foot." It's hard to credit a performance that presents the same visage over a 40-year period. The incredible strain of bearing and raising seven children in poverty, particularly when one of them has cerebral palsy and one's husband is less than a perfect gentleman, ought to show more on the features and the bearing but Fricker carries on brightly and bravely throughout. Far too much so for credibility, much less for accolades.

Dianne Wiest in "Parenthood" was effective as a distraught, single mother with difficult children to raise, but her performance wasn't all that noteworthy. Competent, yes, award-winning, no. In fact, given some of the possible choices this year, this was a puzzling nomination.

Julia Robert's nomination also strikes a strange note. Despite a sympathetic role, she was overshadowed by an extremely fine cast, some of whom had to be in "support." So, eliminate her and that brings us back to Olin and Huston in "Enemies."

Both were excellent and both have a lot of political sympathy working for them, attitudes which mean so much in the academy's selection process. Olin was well-regarded for her role in "The Unbearable Lightness of Being" despite the fact the film didn't do well. Huston, of course, because of her talent, her father, John, and her friend, Jack Nicholson, is a popular figure.

Both performances were excellent, but it seems to me that Huston has the political edge and, as a matter of fact, her role was much more "supporting" in scope than Olin's. The latter, in my book, had the lead feminine role so the envelope for best supporting actress will say "Anjelica Huston."

THE BEST ACTRESS nominations are equally intriguing. The lovely and talented Isabelle Adjani — probably best known for her role in Truffaut's "The Story of Adele H" — has been out of sight for some time.

The bizarre rumors about her death from AIDS and the fact that she appears in a largely unknown film, "Camille Claudel" as the French sculptor Rodin's mistress probably will work against her chances.

Jessica Lange in "The Music Box" performed extremely well but despite a politically hot topic, the Holocast, the film generally was not well-received for its writing and direction. That probably works against Lange's chances.

Michele Pfeiffer's role in "The Fabulous Baker Boys" was very popular and well-done but must be eliminated in face of the two top choices, Jessica Tandy in "Driving Miss Daisy" and Pauline Collins in " Shirley Valentine." Both these films and both performances were far superior to most films in this or any year.

These two performances and these two films ought to be on everybody's all-time top 40.

Both are very different. The 81-year old Jessica Tandy portrays a strong-willed, independent Jewish widow in the south from 1948 through 1973, a period of great cultural change and a period in which Miss Daisy slowly ages and decays from a strong, independent character in her late 60s to a weak, dependent old woman in her 90s.

"SHIRLEY VALENTINE" is a much tighter film, dealing with a short period in the life of an intelligent Manchester (England) housewife who takes charge of her drab life and infuses it with life, excitement and good spirits. makes the important choice to live.

Not only is Collins' rendition superb, but the film recreates her Broadway, Tony Award-winning performance in an unusal way, direct communication between performer and camera lens, a theatrical style and very difficult to maintain throughout a feature film. Nonetheless Collins does so with the very best style and technique.

In my book both Tandy and Collins deserve best actress but since the Academy rules don't allow for that, I'm picking Tandy who, at 81, has never won despite a long and glorious career on Broadway and in films.

TAKASHI SEIDA

Lena Olin's performance as Masha, the passionate and troubled mistress of Herman Broder (Ron Silver) in "Enemies: A Love Story," won her a best supporting actress nomination.

ZADE ROSENTHAL

Julia Roberts earned her best supporting actress nomination for her role as Shelby Eatenton Latcherie in "Steel Magnolias."

Mushers enjoy a doggone way to travel

DAN DEAN/staff photographer

Andrew Zabik (right) gets help reining in the dogs as he brings his wife's three-dog sled to the starting line.

The trail at the Kalkaska County Fairgrounds was hard and icy on this weekend and Zabik, in just her second season of competition, had trouble on the first day of the two-day event. She tipped her sled a couple times and banged her elbow pretty hard, forcing her to ask for help from one of the trail marshals.

Because of the assistance she received, she was disqualified from the competition and ran her dogs the second day strictly for recreation. The elbow, though stiff and visably bruised, felt "much better" by Sunday morning.

Sled dog racing is not a sport for frail, wimpy individuals. Bumps and bruises to mushers are like chapped lips and rosy cheeks to an Eskimo.

Zabik has suffered broken ribs and a broken nose and received stitches in her lip from sled accidents during training.

"The danger is if you fall off your sled," said Zabik. "If you fall, you don't let go of the sled. 'Lose your sled and you're dead,' is a slogan of the mushers. You have to hold on until the dogs stop, otherwise you'll have a team that's out of control."

Zabik bounced back from the Kalkaska disaster to finish second the following weekend at the Michigan/Wisconsin Curtis Cup Challenge in Curtis.

"I came in second on Saturday and had to pass a couple people," Zabik said. "On Sunday I didn't see a soul. It wasn't icy at all; the trail was great. I fell once on the trail, but overall it was a great race."

ZABIK WAS introduced to the sled dog scene several years ago while visiting a friend in Alaska, home of the Iditarod Trail Race, the most famous dog sled race in North America which covers more than 1,000 miles. She was bitten by the sled dog bug several years later while vacationing in Montana.

"I first became interested 11 years ago while visiting friends in Alaska," Zabik said. "Then, two years ago, I was visiting another friend in Montana and I went on a free dog sled ride with Mary Mohon (a well-known musher). That was it. You do it once and you're hooked for life."

Zabik has been harnessing and unharnessing her dogs ever since.

After that first meeting, Zabik and Mahon became good friends. Mahon gave Zabik her first two sled dogs — a pair of registered Siberian huskies.

"She gave me one great dog and one good dog," Zabik said. "It's really not unusual for some other racer to give you a dog because everyone is really friendly. But it is kind of unusual for someone to give you a good dog, especially two of them."

Experience with the dog team means a lot on the trail. The secret, according to Zabik, is having a good relationship with all your dogs, especially the leader of the team.

"IF YOU HAVE a good relationship with your dogs, they'll do anything for you," she said. "

Although Zabik obviously enjoys the sport, after one glance at a team in action one realizes it's really the dogs that are having the most fun. Sled dogs are born to run.

Once harnessed and in place, the team of dogs must be physically restrained by several adults. That's when the yelping, barking, jumping and pulling begins. But as soon as the team is released and allowed to run, all becomes quiet on the snow covered trail as the dogs do what they enjoy and do best.

If you don't believe dogs can smile, you've never seen a sled dog team in action.

Custom doodlin'

Mom/artist dotting her pieces and cubes

By Cathleen Collins Lee
special writer

When Birmingham artist Carol Jacobson comes across some limitation or problem in her work, she is frustrated but she's also, well, pleased.

"It's a challenge to me to see what I can do with a limited resource," she said. "The creative process is simply like that in that there are problems that don't have obvious solutions. It pushes you into learning to do new kinds of things yourself. You can try a lot of different things."

Jacobson had just that kind of experience a few years ago when she wanted to buy baby furniture for her daughter Lacey, now 3½.

A graphic artist and a graduate of University of Michigan's fine arts program, Jacobson has an intense visual awareness and her own definite sense of style.

When she found that the traditional nursery furniture did not appeal to her, she decided to create what she wanted herself. She bought unfinished furniture and garage sale castoffs, then painted them in bright, colorful patterns; Checkerboards, splatter paint, small scattered flowers, polka dots, and combinations of scattered doodles, crosses and dots. Friends asked her to paint furniture for their children, and soon her basement painting projects were becoming a business.

JACOBSON NOW sells a variety of hand-painted furniture for children, including chair and table sets, rocking chairs, toy high chairs and toy chests.

She also works with a furniture maker to design custom-made furniture for adults such as console tables, coffee tables and armoires. Jacobson sells her furniture under the name Doodles and Dots from her house and through three Birmingham stores — Kiddlewinks, Ariana Gallery and Expression. But she's hoping that soon she'll be able to open her own place.

"It's a hard thing to sell through other stores," she said, "because people don't always understand that what they see there is not all that's available. I can custom-design my furniture to fit any decorating scheme."

Indeed she can. Jacobson has matched the color of a design on a toy chest to the blue in a particular shopping bag that matched someone's decor. She has replicated a particular wallpaper on a rocking chair. And one time, when a customer was trying to plan a surprise gift for someone, Jacobson had a housekeeper sneak in the house and describe the color scheme.

For Jacobson, much of the pleasure of her work comes from working with people to create pieces that will fit particular situations.

"Often the people who order the furniture are really excited about it because they're buying something special for somebody," she said. "That kind of thing is part of the fun. People feel like they've had a hand in designing it, and they also give me a lot of leeway to do what I want."

On a recent weekday, several examples of Jacobson's work were scattered around her house. Down in the workroom awaiting a few finishing touches were a white doll's highchair with small scattered pink and green flowers and a white toy chest with bright blue dots and the name Jason on the front. A child's roll-top desk and small antique table were stripped and ready for painting.

And up in the kitchen was a striking chair and table set that Jacobson painted for her daughter: the arches on the chairs and the edge of the table are painted in a black and white checkerboard design, while different sections of the chair legs and the table are painted in bright purple, pink and turquoise and orange.

JACOBSON USES a high-quality enamel oil-based paint that gives her many color options and which she feels is very durable. Her prices range from $70 for a child's stool to $100 for a small rocking chair and $250 for a high chair. If someone asks her to paint a piece of furniture they already own, Jacobson charges $40 to $200.

"Many people don't realize how time-consuming and skilled this is," she said. "I spend at least 10 hours on every piece of furniture. You can't paint two different colors that are touching at the same time, and each coat takes 12 to 24 hours to dry. It also takes a great deal of concentration."

One of the things that Jacobson enjoys about her furniture is twisting together two different styles in an unexpected way.

"Most of the furniture I do is early American and that's usually stained. "But when I paint it I handle it in an unexpected way, and there's a contrast there. My approach is eclectic, and I think it gives it an eclectic feeling. I like traditional and I like contemporary, but I'd go crazy if I could just have one or the other."

Jacobson brings the eclectic approach to her own house, a 60-year-old fieldstone house. The living room's pink walls, white trim, bleached oak floors and white mini blinds give it a light, contemporary feeling. A black leather sofa, a shiny black dining room set and several large oil paintings are major focal points.

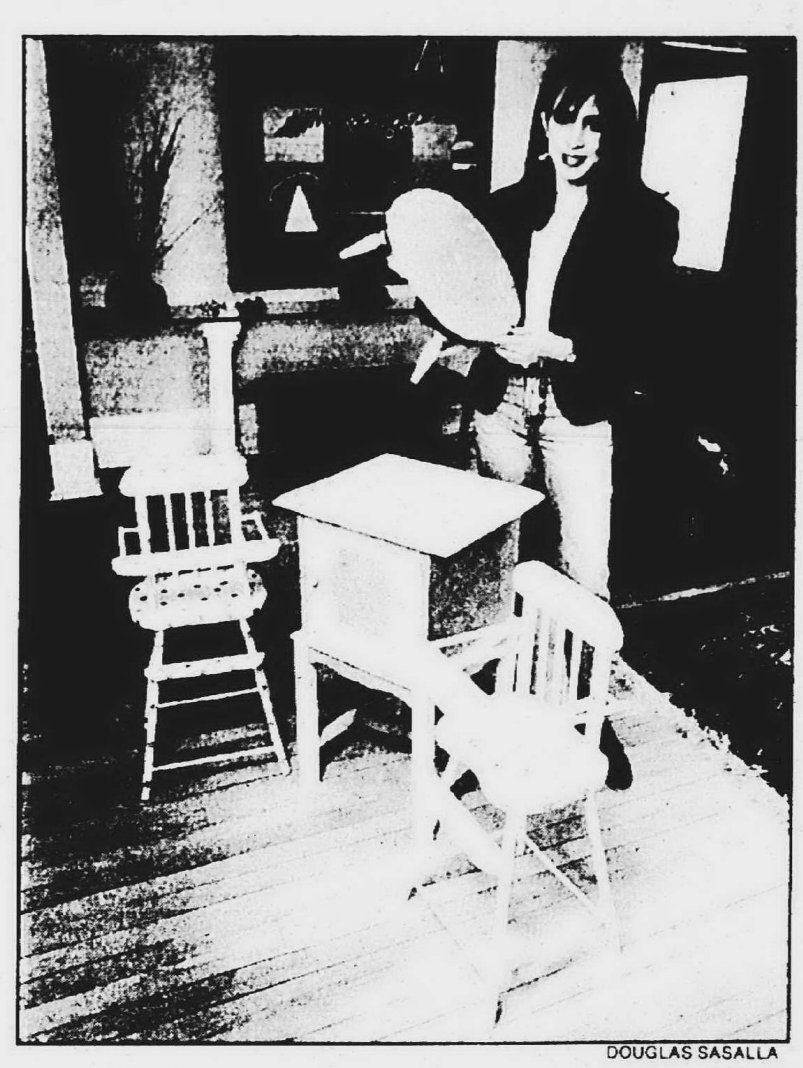

But a few traditional pieces turn up in unexpected places: a small marble-topped chest near the door, a china cabinet in the dining room and a small stand in her daughter's room.

THOSE PIECES, rescued from relatives and friends basements, represent Jacobson's creative and personal approach to decorating.

"I rarely go out and just buy something," she said. "I like taking these old one-of-a-kind pieces and deciding myself how I want them refinished. You're not dealing with a middle-person."

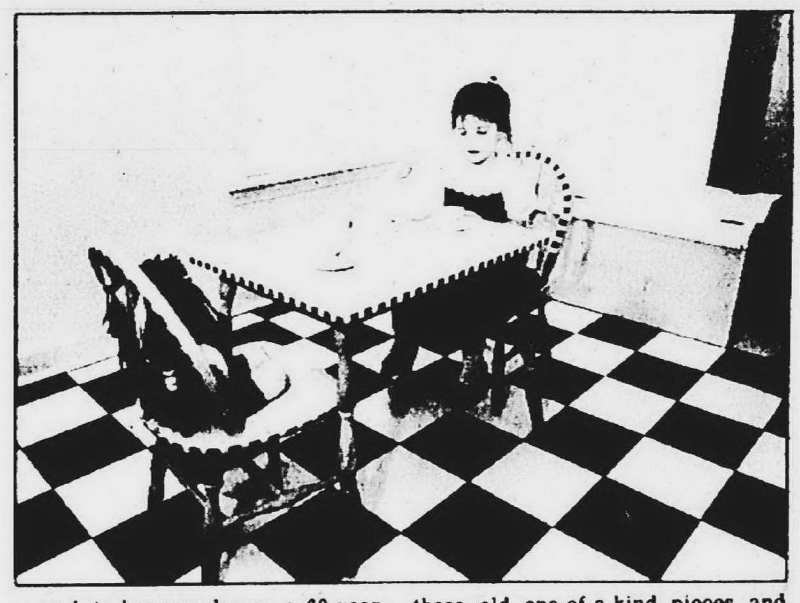

Another theme in Jacobson's approach to art is a black and white checkerboard design. Jacobson's 10 years in graphic design accustomed her to working with black and white, and although she uses color liberally she finds her emerging trademark seems to be in the checkerboard. You can see it in the kitchen floor, in several of her own paintings, which hang in the dining room, and in the narrow checkerboard wallpaper border she was delighted to find for a bathroom. Even her dog, a Dalmation named Chloe, fits in with the color scheme.

"The dog came first," she laughs. "Not the other way around."

Handbook a guide in records retention organizing

Dorothy Lehmkuhl

Q. The filing cabinets in our offices are bulging and we don't know what to keep or throw away. Can you give us some guidelines?

A. The answer to how long to keep which records is elusive, and it's difficult to give a definitive answer. You will even get different answers from the IRS, depending upon who answers your telephone call. One thing is for sure: Most people don't relish purging files but when it is delayed the result is overcrowded drawers, difficult filing and wasted clerical time and effort searching for information.

Records retention involves not only active files, but also semi-active storage, permanent storage and destruction schedules. Active files should, of course, be kept in a place convenient to its users and, bottom line, you need to dispose of all documents which you no longer need.

Inactive papers which must be kept should not take up expensive prime space. Instead, they should be transferred to less expensive remote storage which still allows for easy retrieval. Specially designed cardboard boxes serve well for this type of storage.

Many companies transfer their files after the end of each fiscal year. One easy approach is to cycle files from the top drawers of filing cabinets to bottom drawers as periods are completed, then to low-cost storage space and finally to disposal.

As to how long to keep specific documents, times vary from one to three, seven, or 30 years, to permanently. My best suggestion is to write to Fellows Manufacturing Co. (makers of what used to be known as Bankers Boxes) and ask for their Records Management Handbook with Retention Schedules. This booklet gives a thorough discussion of records retention not only of paper documents but also of micrographic, magnetic media storage and vital records protection. It also discusses lists, inventories, computerized records management and various methods of records destruction. They are available as long as supplies last.

It's Suggested Retention Schedule for business records was determined by a nationwide survey of leading authorities and daily time reports and invoices received. When Fellows receives conflicting answers from various sources, it opts for the longer, "safer" time. You may receive a free copy of this booklet by writing Fellows Manufacturing Co., 1789 Norwood Avenue, Itasca, Ill. 60143.

With or without the booklet, your company should establish its own record retention schedule. Some companies which generate massive amounts of paper require managers to justify the retention of their documents.

Home security alarms a matter of preference

By Doug Funke
staff writer

It may seem strange that buyers would spend a couple of hundred thousand dollars on a new house or condominium, then not install security systems to protect against burglary.

After all, a relatively simple alarm system containing several perimeter door/window contact points, an interior motion detector, a touch pad activation unit, control box, audio alarm and back-up battery can be purchased and installed for less than $1,000.

Or a customer can lease a system for the duration of home ownership for a one-time installation fee of about $200.

Not a lot of money, it appears, even figuring $20 per month under either option to tie into a central telephone emergency notification center.

But consider the flip side.

If you're going to spend a small fortune on a condo or house, you probably figure it's in a nice, safe neighborhood, right?

Some builders include security systems as part of their standard construction package. Others, like James Bonadeo, a Plymouth builder and president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, don't.

"WE DON'T get much of a call for it," he said.

"Most people use plastic money, so they don't have cash in the house. If you have jewelry, it's usually in a safe or deposit box. Outside of furniture, TV and a few electronics, people don't keep much expensive stuff in the house," Bonadeo said.

Dennis Park, president of Blue Heron Construction, intends to put security systems in all 140 condos under construction at the Blue Heron Pointe Subdivision in Northville.

"It's something that was requested, something that added value," he said. "By standardizing, you can offer a better product with nice amenities for less money."

A security system doesn't top the wish list of the average home buyer, Park conceded.

Park said he doesn't know now whether security systems will be included as a standard feature on future projects, but where Blue Heron Pointe is concerned, "We've been well received."

MORE BUILDERS are making home security systems available to consumers early in the construction planning process.

That's good news for buyers because systems can be installed easier, neater and cheaper while the house is going up rather than as an add-on.

"Stuff on the market today has changed significantly, but it hasn't changed. It does the same thing," said Timothy Sass, manager for Brinks Home Security in Farmington Hills.

Master control units formerly turned on and off with a key now can be programmed with the touch of a finger to a small microprocessing unit.

The touch pads have panic buttons for quick notification of medical emergency or physical attack.

Some of the more sophisticated control units have a digital readout indicating where a door or window has been left open if the system won't activate.

Infrared motion detectors are sensitive to temperature changes of people entering a room. Contact switches built into doors and windows detect movement or breakage.

AN INTRUSION will activate an audio alarm in the house and send a signal over telephone lines to a central processing center which, in turn, notifies local police or fire departments of emergencies.

Panic buttons on touch pads also will summon help.

Simple systems — alarming every door plus one motion detector — provide the most protection for the money, security advisors said.

"About 90 percent of all break-ins come through the door," Sass said. "A guy breaks into a house, the first place he's going to go is the master bedroom."

If a burglar were somehow to defeat a door alarm, he'd likely be tripped by a strategically placed motion detector.

Homeowners can alarm other potential entry points like windows and add touch pads, motion detectors and exterior cameras at a cost of several thousand dollars.

BUT KEEP in mind that most residential burglaries aren't pulled by master criminals, said George O'Malley, a security consultant for Vitex Inc. of Commerce Township and a former police officer.

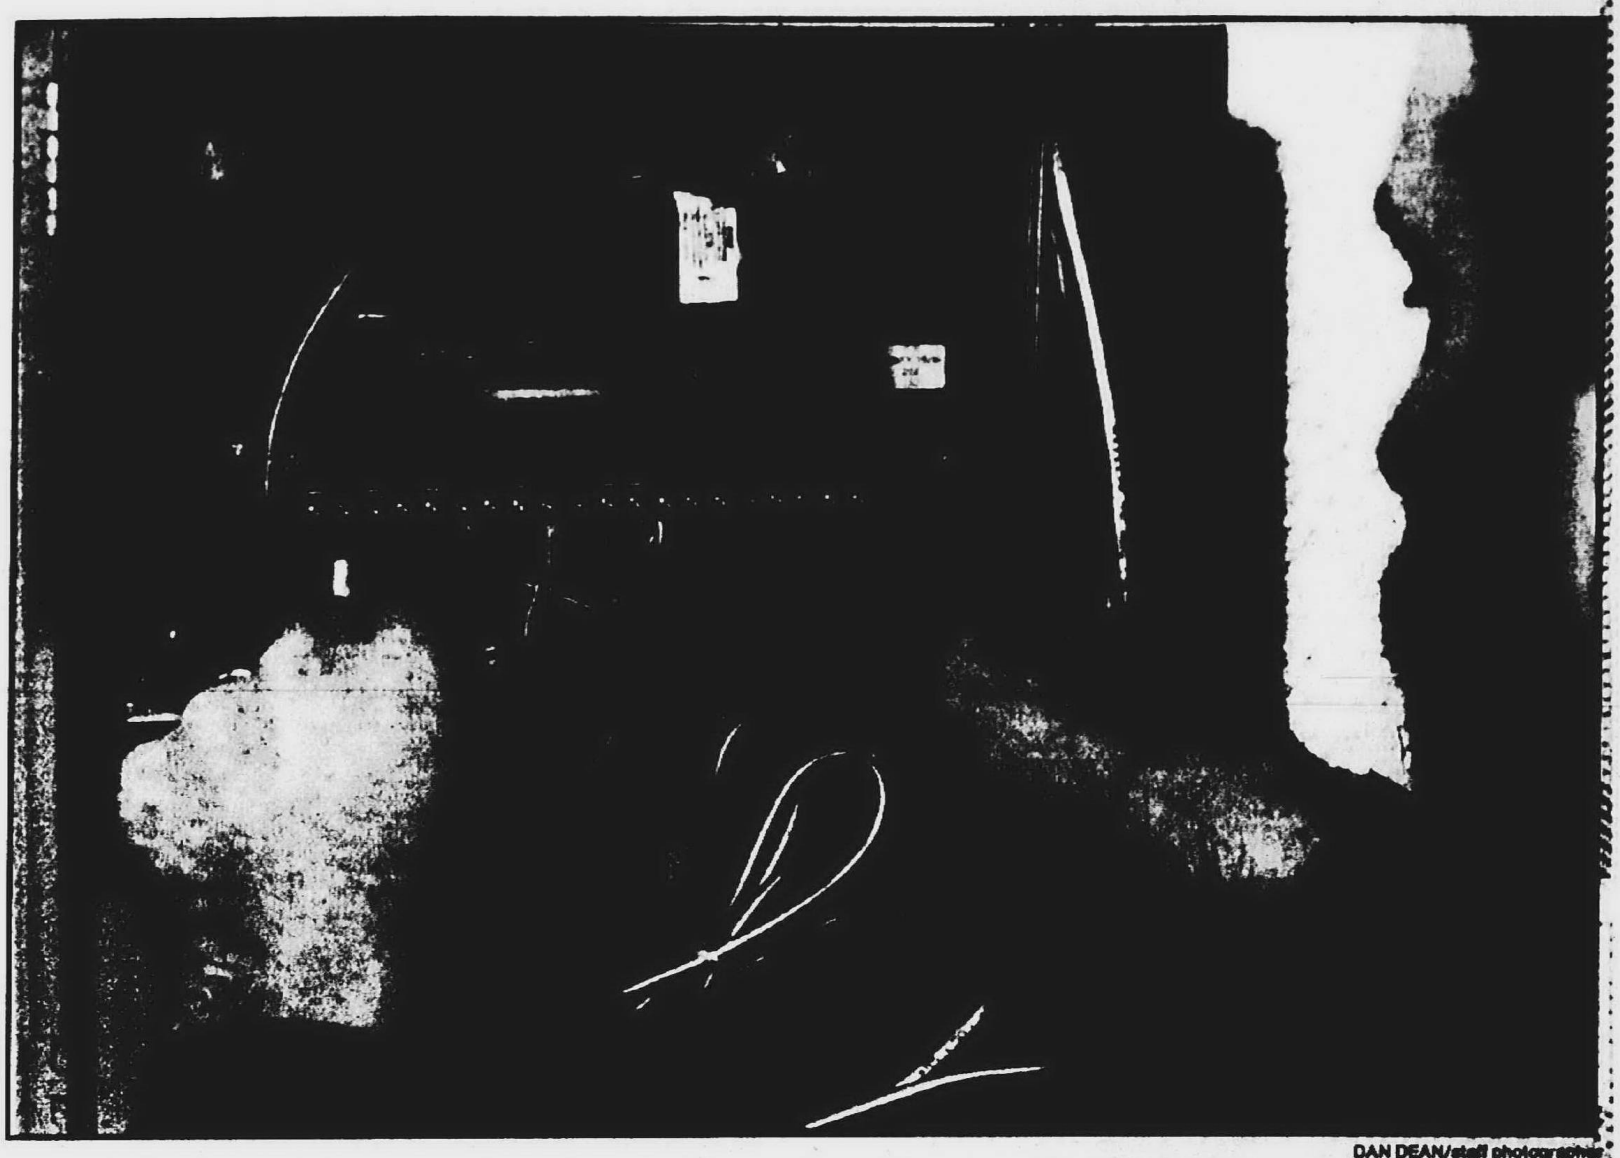

"It's not the crackhead from Detroit, but probably a neighborhood punk most of the time, a youngster looking for guns, money or drugs," O'Malley said.

So super-sophisticated systems, unless they're installed in luxurious, isolated houses or by wealthy people who fear kidnapping, can be security overkill.

Home security systems have evolved beyond the point of just protecting property and people from violence.

"The same (master control) panel is fire protection. We can tie in electronic smoke detectors," O'Malley said. "Then you have a 24-hour monitored fire system." The cost — about $200 for two detectors.

Sensors can be connected to sump pumps to warn of inoperative pumps and rising water before flooding occurs. That connection would cost about $110, O'Malley said.

DAN DEAN/staff photographer

Mike Wassil, a technician for Vitex, checks where the wiring for a home security system comes together at the basement control box. Some builders include a security system or an allowance for a system as a standard feature on new houses or condominiums.

Keeping indoor air healthy takes care

(AP) — Since people generally spend a lot more time at home during the winter, an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) report that indoor air is five times as polluted as outdoor air is particularly alarming.

Linda Hunter, a freelance journalist, wife and mother in Des Moines, Iowa, became so concerned about the report that she decided to make her home a safer place to live. She published her experience in a book, "The Healthy Home."

Ladies' Home Journal interviewed Linda and picked up some first-aid tips for making a house its healthiest and most comfortable:

- Track down all pressed wood. This popular building material — including plywood and particleboard — is often used for cabinets and countertops although it contains formaldehyde and emits toxic fumes. Look up under the sink to check (tip: pressed wood gives off a sweet-smelling odor). Seal the exposed surfaces using a sealant without solvents.
- Increase humidity with an ultrasonic humidifier. Homes with forced-air heating systems are especially dry. The humidifier should be cleaned and replenished with fresh water daily.
- Make sure the house has good ventilation, which is the most important condition for clean air.
- Check for asbestos. The government's EPA Asbestos Hotline (202-554-1404) gives information on where to look for asbestos and what to do if it is found.
- Test the water supply, which could be loaded with contaminants, including bacteria, pesticides, industrial runoff and lead.
- Get rid of radon. This naturally occurring gas found in soil is a known carcinogen that gets into a house via the basement. Determine the level of radon by calling the EPA (800-SOS-RADON) for testing.
