District OKs pact; awaits vote by teachers

staff writer

Negotiators for teachers and administrators in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools have agreed to terms of a three-year contract granting teachers increases of 5 percent, 4 percent and 5 percent and an additional cost of living adjustment of a maximum 2 percent annually.

Based on current state equalized valuation, a 7-percent increase would cost the school district $2.66 million. A 6-percent raise would cost $380,000 less. The two-year, 4-mill tax increase approved by voters last

The Board of Education approved the agreement Monday night. Teachers were expected to meet to discuss the agreement today, and to vote on it Monday and

"It worked out pretty well for everyone," said Tom Cotner, chief negotiator for the teachers. "Hopefully the teachers will be happy. We'll know pretty soon

"It's a good deal for both sides," he added. "They made some gains where they wanted to, and we ended up with a pretty reasonable salary settlement."

CURRENTLY, pay for Plymouth-Canton teachers ranges between $23,794 and $46,402, placing the district in the middle third of school districts in Wayne County.

The agreement compares favorably with most of the recent settlements in metropolitan Detroit school districts, Cotner said.

Both sides dropped issues from the bargaining table to expedite an agreement. But changes in in-service scheduling for teachers mean students will receive an additional two and a half days of instruction.

Improvements also were made in teachers' life insurance and long-term disability plans.

A change also was made in voluntary retirement pay. Employees retiring at age 62 or younger will be able to accept a one-time payment of $7,500 under the pact, instead of payments on a graduated scale.

THE CONTRACT also improves measures for handling overcrowded elementary school classes, long identified by teachers as a concern.

Educational aides are now supplied for classrooms with 34 or more students. Under the new contract, classrooms with 32 students or more would receive paraprofessional help.

The contract also establishes a class size review

Fountain is 'gem' that needs polishing

staff writer

Kellogg Park is "quite a gem," the focal point of downtown Plymouth, say architects working on a downtown development plan.

And many would agree that the park fountain, built and paid for by the Rotary Club of Plymouth in 1969, is the focal point of the park.

But amid talk of re-designing downtown are suggestions to improve the fountain. Talk of a fountain in the park first surfaced in the 1920s, said former mayor and long-time

Plymouth resident Jack Wilcox. That location (where the fountain now sits) was set out specifically," Wilcox said, as a place to move the fountain originally on the Wilcox but a statue of a mythological character slaying a dragon - in the Wilcox fountain - was eventually moved to another location in the city, before it was moved to Long Island, N. Y., Wilcox

Rotary presidents in the late '60s, Cliff McClumpha and Bob Gould, said the Rotary agreed to build a fountain in the park and pay for it with proceeds from the annual chicken barbe-

"They gave me the job of being chairman of that because I was in the construction business and knew the people that could do the best concrete forming work," Gould recalled. Gould was also involved in the design, using a book on fountains be had.

"(The site) lent itself to a round fountain with the paths coming up toward it.

'We formed it up and poured the concrete," Gould said.

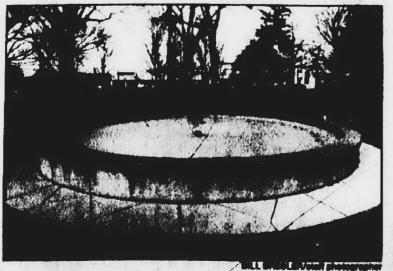

He said that the fountain is a popular attraction in warm weather, as people like to sit along its base. "Kids put soap in there every little while, it takes care of the (sprayer) bearings," he said, laughing.

Cost was "around $5,000-$6,000 with the plumbing and the pump," Gould said. "Over the years I would say it probably has done quite a bit for the downtown area. It's a congregation area for the younger group. There are weddings there. They eat lunches there."

At a recent public meeting convened by the Downtown Development Authority, some residents suggested improvements to the fountain.

Vorva cites study; seeks ouster of city's police chief

staff writer

Former Plymouth police officer and now city commissioner Jerry Vorva has suggested that Police Chief Richard Myers be removed, in the wake of a private study of the police department.

"I think it's going to be impossible for the current police administration to form any kind of trust through the ranks," Vorva said.

Vorva - fired from his police job last year after he stated publicly that the department had a ticket quota system - said damage done when police management allegedly played favorites in the department can't be reversed under the current administration.

"HANK GRAPER (the former city manager) is gone and so the need for a person that fits Hank Graper's personal style is not needed," Vorva said. "I feel that the police administration has outlived its usefulness." Myers responded, "I work for the I think it's going to be impossible for the current police administration to form any kind of trust through the ranks."

Old Village backers to get less grant aid

Old Village backers wanted more, but they'll have to settle for one-seventh of Plymouth's federal grant

By a plan approved Monday by Plymouth city commissioners, $56,000 will be divided among various eligible city groups.

Suspended West Bloomfield High School history teacher James Spinelle was described this week as a friend and "the best teacher in the school" by students who said he should be returned to his classroom.

Others, however, said the arrest of Spinelle, of Plymouth, on Thursday, March 15, during a Southfield marijuana raid cast him as a poor role model who should lose his job.

"He was more than a teacher, he was a friend," said J.B. Carlin, a 17year-old junior, as school let out Monday and students filled the parking lot. "You could talk to him about things that you couldn't talk to other teachers about - girls, your family, friends.

"WE LOVE Doc," Carlin said, referring to Spinelle's nickname.

"Doc is the best teacher in the school," agreed student Ed Rapal, Spinelle was "a really good teacher who made kids enjoy history," said junier James Coleman, 16, who was taught by Spinelle in 10th grade.

"He expected the kids to do their homework," Coleman said. "I was really surprised he would be in something like this. I couldn't be-'lieve it."

Coleman said it was ironic the Spinelle saga surfaced one day after the high school sent an anti-drugs pam-phlet to parents.

"I really don't think he should be allowed to teach," Coleman said. "It just wouldn't be fair. If a student gets caught (using drugs), they get won't let him come back to school," expelled. Teachers are supposed to said Ari Byer, a 15-year-old sophobe setting examples for us. This is pretty sad."

Spinelle, 47, was arrested with two Southfield men, Richard Barth and Elmer Drouillard, who lived in the Southfield house where federal agents found 388 marijuana plants during a raid.

No charges were filed, and the men were later released from custody, but Bill Ward, a Drug Enforcement Agency spokesman in Detroit, said a grand jury indictment on charges of possession with intent to distribute and on conspiracy to dis-tribute are expected in the next month. Each charge carries a five-

SOME STUDENTS said they thought it was "terrible" the way Spinelle has been publicly embarage of his arrest.

"It's terrible the way he has been condemned," said one student who asked not to be identified. "It really aggravates me."

Rumors surfaced this week that students who speak to reporters about Spinelle could face some type of discipline, even suspension, from school. However, Schools Superintendent Seymour Gretchko said "there has been no threat of disciplinary action against students."

In other developments, Spinelle and Steve Amberg, attorney for the West Bloomfield teachers' union, met Monday with Gretchko to dis-cuse the situation, though little emerged from the talks.

GRETCHEO SAID Spinelle was looking to hire an attorney. The two sides planned to meet again Wednes-day, Gretchko said, in attempts to termine the facts."

Zimbalist, Reagan said. If convicted, Shields could be sentenced to un to five Plymouth woman. Shields allegedly sent the woman threatening letters with "very explicit sexual connotations," said Plymouth Police Chief Richard Myers.

Shields, who is unemployed, has lived for the last 20 years in a senior citizen complex on Sheldon Road with his mother. Neighbors described him as a loner type who weighed between 250 and 300 pounds.

While many Americans believe the proposed postal rate increase is too high, one local congressmen is worried it might not be high enough.

"I hope it is enough," said U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, of the proposed increase that would raise the price of a postage stamp to 30 cents. "The problem last time (rates were increased) was that it wasn't enough."

As chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, Ford is considered an expert on Postal Service operations.

While his committee doesn't hold approval over the increase, Ford believes it is justified.

"THEY'RE GOING to have to do something," he said. "They have a $1.5 billion operating loss."

Even with the 5 cent increase, he added, Americans would still pay less postage than citizens of other

"That means it's going to cost Newsweek more to deliver to your door," Ford said. "It's going to be interesting to see what they have to say about that."

Despite its critics, Ford said the American postal system was among the world's most efficient.

"We've seen studies that show our system is 21/4 times more efficient than (West) Germany's and Japan's," he said. "You show me another undertaking where we're more efficient than the Germans and Japanese."

Postal officials tour for support

By Wayne Peel

Even though the price would rise a nickel, U.S. Postal Service officials are calling their propo cent first class stamp a bargain.

"I know people will complain, but they should realize this is helping make for a better, more efficient mail system," senior assistant postmaster general David Charters said Tuesday, during a visit to the Detroit area.

Aware the proposed 30-cent stamp is unpopular with many consumers, postal officials are hitting the road to explain why they believe the increase is necessary.

Charters' metro area app ance included an interview at the Observer & Eccentric, a luncheon meeting with 23 large scale mailers including the Big Three automotive companies, Michigan Bell and K mart Corp.

"WHAT WE'RE teiling people is this isn't being done randomly," Charters said. "We do have a plan that will improve mail service for everybody."

The first step, he added, is balancing the postal service ledger.
Even though the postal service budget has produced a $404 million surplus thus far this year — and ended 1989 with a $61 million surplus - rising operating costs are expected to produce a deficit of $1.4-$1.6 billion by December, Charters said.

Rate increases are expected to increase post office revenue 19 percent, exceeding the combined inflation rate for the past three years. The proposed rates are expected to keep post office operating costs below the rate of inflation through 1995 — at least delaying one future increase.

we are providing good service," U.S. Postmaster General Anthony Frank said, announcing the rate increase proposal.

Discount plans for businesses are expected to help keep mail flowing rapidly, postal officials said.

At many modernized post offic-es, including the main branches in Detroit and Royal Oak, mail is sent to optical charter reader machines that add nine digit bar codes for rapid sorting, then sent to bar code sorting machines for final sorting.

"We're telling businesses there are things they can do — like presorting and pre-coding — to keep costs down," Charters said.

By doing the work themselves, he added, businesses are also free-ing postal workers to process more mail. Businesses could see their postal rates fall as low as 25 cents per item, Charters added. In addition, some first class mail

Headlee's new tax campaign seeks to reduce assessments

By Tim Richard staff writer

The latest Richard Headles notition drive is almed at reducing rising

"It was written by taxpayers for taxpayers," Headles, 50, told an anti-assessment rally on the State at rally on the State s last week.

Readlee is chairman of Alexand Hamilton Life Insurance Co., 1962 Republican candidate for governor and chairman of the 1978 drive that led to the Headlee amendment to the state constitution.

"This thing is going like wildfire," added Bill McMaster, who heads a public relations firm in Bloomfield Township and is co-chair of Taxpayers United for Assessment Cuts.

UNLIKE THE 1978 state constitutional amendment that bears Headlee's name, the new effort is targeted at three changes in state homes for property tax purposes, particularly in the growth suburbs of Livingston, Maccomb, Oukland and western Wayne counties.

If approved by the Legislature or by voters, the initiative would:

• Cut assessments 10 percent on Dec. 31, 1990, and another 10 percent the next year.

cent the next year.

• Force the Michigan Legislature to fund any lost revenue to local government from the general fund.

• Allow taxpayers to sue in circuit court to enforce the statute "instead of going to fruitless board of review hearings," in McMaster's words. A taxpayer who wins would have 150 percent of his attorney's fees paid by the taxing body. A tax-payer who loses could not be charged with the local government's attorney fees.

THE CAMPAIGN will be run out Taxpayers United wants to roll of the McMaster Communications

Their goal is 240,000 petition signatures by May 15. The Legislature would have 40 days to enact the requested law. If the Legislature fails to act, the proposal would go on the Nov. 4 hallet Nov. 6 ballot.

Other leaders of the group are Tom Ritter, vice president for gov-ernmental relations of Alexander Hamilton, treasurer; and Dr. Walter Averill III of Saginaw, a co-director.

Another anti-tax petition drive seeks the Patterson-Anderson amendment to the constitution. L. Brooks Patterson, former Oakland prosecutor, and economist Patrick Anderson of the Alexander Hamilton company split from the McMaster-Sessa group last year.

Fountain Tell us how it should look

HAT ARE fountains to a community? Apparently they mean a lot. They often are the centerpiece in a town square, as is the fountain in Kellogg

And folks can get pretty particular about their fountains. That's why we paid special attention to comments made by Plymouth residents at a recent Downtown Development Association

Residents were asked to attend the meeting so the DDA could hear what they had to say about the looks of downtown Plymouth.

There were plenty of comments about the fountain. The sentiment was that while the fountain is a gem, it's a gem that needs polishing.

And that's why we're starting a contest to come up with fountain ideas. The top three winners will receive a free lunch at Station 885 with staff members of the Plymouth Observer. We'll also put their pictures in the paper.

But we hope that it's just not the thought of a free lunch that prompts folks to write their fountain ideas on a piece of paper and send them to us at 744 Wing St. Plymouth, 48170. We hope that there's a spirit of: "Let's make the community

BUT WHAT ABOUT a couple of ideas to get us

Talk of a fountain for the park surfaced in the 1920s and according to Jack Wilcox, a long-time Plymouth resident, a fountain from the Wilcox house which abuts the park was to be moved to the site. That never happened. The fountain was moved to another location in Plymouth and later to Long Island, N.Y.

That fountain had a statue of a Greek god slaying a dragon.

There's one idea.

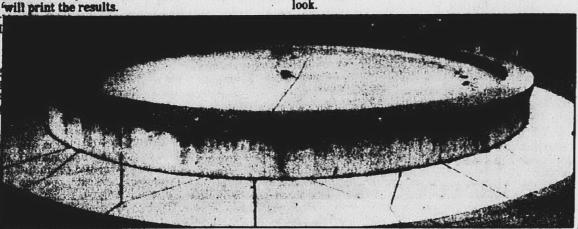

Another idea is a statue done by Canton artist Joe DeLauro. It's called the "Dancing Lady," and while it's just a small model now, it could be turned into a bronze statue to serve as a centerpiece for the fountain.

We don't profess to be art experts, but we do like the idea of having a piece done by a local, yet world-famous artist serve as the centerpiece. Those are two ideas, but there have to be

County charter Beware of panel's tinkering

EWARE, WAYNE County voters! The old-style politicians are thinking about turning back the clock to the pre-charter days when they used to appoint themselves to high-paying administrative jobs.

Voters in 1981 wisely gave 80 percent approval to the first home-rule county charter. It set up an elected executive to draft the budget and supervise all departments lacking an elected official. The executive appoints a deputy, subject to confirmation by the county board. The deputy can exercise all the duties if the exec is absent or disabled or vacates the office.

Three commissioners — including Kay Beard of Inkster, never a fan of the charter, and the ambitious chairman Arthur Blackwell of Highland Park — are proposing an amendment whereby the commission would appoint a temporary executive until a special election can be Clearly the board chairman would be a leading ite for such an appointment. Clearly the politice would have a leg up on all election machinations — public hearings are d April 3 and 4 in Westland and Detroit, specifically started Accesses the rumor mill by Recoultive SA Molecular may pull up the started povernor, governor the started povernor governor that the started pould leavy Mighael

The old-style politicians want it both ways - fill their own vacancies and fill the executive

Duggan, his able but not universally beloved deputy, as executive. Ability aside, Duggan never has faced the voters, according to the commissioners' reasoning, although he was confirmed by the commission.

Supposedly there is something sacred about an elected official.

We notice, however, that no commissioners are seeking a charter amendment to hold special elections when a commissioner vacates office, as several have. No, they fill vacancies by their

In other words, the old-style politicians want it both ways - fill their own vacancies and fill the executive vacancy.

We also hear suspicious talk about "fine tun-ing" the charter and "taking another look" at a neatly crafted and popular document that has been in use less than eight years. Voters should be very, very, very suspicious of any commission-sponsored amendment.

Keep your eyes open for child labor cheats.

I hate when people take advantage of kids. It really drives me nuts. You, too?

That's why last week I know we shared our anger upon learning that some 20 businesses in metro Detroit and 40 statewide were found in violation of child labor laws. Sounds like something right out of a Charles Dickens novel. You know the vision, children in tattered clothes stuck away in dank, dark basements toiling away for endless

But you can just wipe that one right out of your little head. Forget the tattered clothes and replace them with colorful uniforms. Disregard the gloomy surroundings and think about specially designed, brightly lit interiors, created with data gleaned from expensive marketing studies.

THAT'S RIGHT. Today's purveyors of exploitation are much more subtle and devious than those 19th century English shopkeepers. who cheated and victimized employees. Ebeneezer Scrooge had nothing on today's breed, not a thing.

These modern day Fagins have not only convinced the children that it's perfectly fine to work too many vinced parents to sign "permission" slips verifying that working children more hours than is allowed by law is perfectly all right with them.

The most disheartening fact is that this practice is much more common in the more affluent areas of the metro area, according to U.S. Department of Labor officials who launched the surprise visits on 50 businesses in the area and 70 in the Oakland County in general and Birmingham and Bloomfields Hills in specific were singled out as areas where violations are common. Seems businesses in affluent areas have a tough time filling jobs; so they reach deeper down into younger age brackets and work them more hours than is allowed. Some children were younger than 13 years old.

IN ECONOMICALLY hardpressed areas like Flint, businesses have a larger pool of adults on which to depend for employment. So the temptation to cheat is much less.

But facing a labor shortage is no excuse. Those who live in affluent areas, most of who have been welleducated and enjoy the best of what America has to offer, should be more aware of child labor exploitation. Af-

Now for all of you laissez faire aficionados who have both feet planted firmly in the free enterprise system, keep in mind that this recent crackdown, labeled Operation Child Watch, is no left wing crusade. No, indeed. This campaign has been marshaled by U.S. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, which only goes to show you that even most conservatives hate to see kids getting ripped

Lawyers free work should be known

To the editor:

This is to advise that responsible lawyers continue to perform legal pro bono services, and those services continue to remain unrecognized. The initial legal challenge to the lottering ordinance in Plymouth was an actual motion contesting the constitutionality and validity of a law that was unjust, and designed as a vehicle for the local police to harass teenagers that frequented local fast food

Attorney John Walsh voluntarily represented teenagers who were ticketed as a result of allegedly violating the ordinance. Several of the toenagers were in a local fast food establishment and purchased the usual burgers and soft drinks.

The management of the establishment gladly sold its products to the teenagers and accepted their money but also had literally blocked access to the seating area of the restaurant thereby denying all patrons of anywhere to sit to consume the food.

Photographs are available of this incident which clearly depict the circumstances, and which were taken by a father of one of the teenagers. Needless to say, when these young adults left the interior of the restaurant and ventured into the parking lot to eat their food, they were ticketed for loitering.

Another teenager had recently re-turned from his grandmother's funeral and was simply sipping a soft drink alone in his car trying to sort things out from his recent tragedy when he was ticketed.

These circumstances merited legal representation and a challenge to the loitering ordinance. Mr. Walsh was the first attorney to research the constitutional issues and to submit a written motion and brief to the court. A copy of the motion and brief is attached hereto for your review. In addition, there were conferences at the courthouse with the city attorney, Mr. Lowe, and the trial judge. After the initial legal challenge was filed by Mr. Walsh, other attorneys filed similar motions. However, the legal groundwork and research had been completed. A formal hearing was never necessary because the City Attorney recommended that the tickets be dismissed.

My purpose herein is to recognize the efforts of John Walsh, to appreci-ate a job well done, and to indicate to you and your readers that there are attorneys who are willing to pro-vide free legal services when the appropriate circumstances arise. Al-though John Walsh is not alone in his efforts to correct unfairness, he is entitled to be recognized.

Teachers get singled out

LAST WHEEK I had the privilege to write about an inspiring teacher, Dr. Edith Kovach, now a Bleamfield Hills resident, who taught Latin and inspired students at Mumberd High School for many years.

Great teachers don't often get the public recognition they deserve.

However, that changes when a teacher is accused of wrong doing. It was the teacher who get all the notice last week in connection with a marijuana-growing operation in

That's what the Southfield Public Schools superintendent says is used in determining all the speakers fit to hear. To wit, Carl Hassel gave the following example:

"Certainly a speaker who advertised in advance that the topic for the day would be the 'joys of illicit sex' would probably not be welcome the rule of common sense would be applied," Hassel wrote in a letter to the Oakland County Branch of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The ACLU had written to protest a performance by Miss America Debbye Turner at Eisenhower Elementary School in which she performed, as part of her appearance, a Christian rap song. The school is located south of 10 Mile and west of Telegraph. That appearance sparked a complaint that led to the protest and, eventually, to Turner being told by Miss America headquarters to drop the rap song from her performance.

THERE ARE SEVERAL points to consider here: Did Turner cross the line from informing students of a religious conviction to proselytizing? Did it violate the First Amendment to the Constitution? Could the dis-

BUT THE SCHOOL district issued its own challenge: Is the ACLU suggesting that the district engage in censorship, also protected under the First Amendment?

Some of the suggestions made by the ACLU rank on that order, such as screening content of speeches. Content guidelines would help, but still there would have been little the district could have done once Turner was into her rap song.

The direction, as it eventually did, should have come from the top in Miss America headquarters. It's only

Kids learn how to handle peer pressure

BILL BRESLER/staff photographe

After a long night at the PIP-Fest, student Janie Decourcy heads for a Saturday morning presentation while still carrying her pillow. The Partners in Prevention Festival was this past weekend at Central Middle School in Plymouth.

It's not always easy being a kid.

Peer pressures, worries about doing well in school and family problems take their toll on teenagers. are orten forced to make major d cisions while still young.

"I think that's a real big issue," said Nic Cooper, an alternative education teacher at Plymouth Salem

It's not unheard of for students as young as 11 or 12 to begin abusing drugs.

'Kids at this age are still kids," Cooper said. Middle school students are making the transition from childhood to adulthood, and don't always know just what's expected of them.

HELPING YOUNG people deal with those pressures was the goal of the Partners in Prevention Festival, or PIP-Fest, Friday-Saturday, March 16-17, at Central Middle School in Plymouth.

A total of 83 students in seventh through ninth grades participated. This is the third year such an event has taken place locally. Most of the students were from the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, although others from Lake Orion, Ionia and South Lyon participated. The event was presented by Michigan PIP-Fest in cooperation with the Plymouth-Canton schools, the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and the Plymouth-Canton Substance Abuse Task Force.

"THIS COMMUNITY has really embraced this," said Rick McCoy, an alternative education teacher at

He has found people generally don't deny that substance abuse is a problem in the suburbs. That kind of denial was seen among some people in the past, he said, but not now. Cooper and McCoy, are involved in coordinating Michigan PIP-Fest programs, and have presented on the local event with Nan Hansen, a teacher at West Middle School.

THROUGHOUT THE weekend, students participated in large group presentations and in small group discussions. One presentation, "You're Special," reminded students that everyone has special qualities and gifts.

"It lets them know we are here because they're special," Hansen said.

Other presentations were on feelings and defenses and family systems.

"I guess I would hope kids would learn a little more about themselves and about healthy relationships," McCoy said.

STUDENTS PARTICIPATING in the PIP-Fest paid $45 for the weekend. Some scholarships were available. Students staved at Central Middle School overnight Friday, and enjoyed a dance and athletic

Parents and volunteers from the school district helped out at the PIP-Fest, and some stayed at the school overnight to supervise the students. Students didn't misbehave and cause problems during the

"I think it's fun," said Sarah Rowe, a 13-year-old seventh grader at East Middle School. "I think it's good for the kids to get their feelings out. I was nervous when I came, but it was easy to talk because "I think it's kind of hard being our age," she said. Students worry about being labeled by others and about peer pressure.

Shannon Eddy, 13, attended last year's PIP-Fest and would like to participate in next year's as well. She would recommend the program to other stu-

SHANNON LEARNED at this year's festival "that it's OK to be yourself and you don't have to be worried about what everyone else thinks.

"I think it's really great because everyone here accepts everyone else," said Shannon, an eighth grader at West Middle School. "No one labels you just by your appearance."

She agreed growing up can be tough.

"There's a lot of peer pressure, and everyone really wants to be accepted."

It's hard for some people to express their feelings,

Organizers of the local festival hope they'll be able to continue to present the event each year. Cooper, who has two daughters, ages 8 and 10, would like his children to participate in a PIP-Fest a few years down the road.

Seniors enjoy wearin' of the green

By Julie Brown staff writer

Irish eyes were smiling Saturday at the St. Patrick's Day party sponsored by the Canton Seniors.

Many of those attending the event, held at the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth, wore green attire.

"They were encouraged to wear said Dianne Neihengen, green," enior citizens coordinator for Canton Township. Being Irish wasn't a requirement for those attending.

"In fact, we don't even know anymore who is and who isn't," she

About 125 seniors attended the St. Patrick's Day party. They enjoyed a luncheon, dancing, a singalong and the pleasure of each other's company.

"I think it's great, and I'll tell you something about people my age," said Rose Walker, president of the Canton Pioneers group, 'we're doing something all the time. I'm out every single day."

WALKER AND her husband of 51 years, Maurie, enjoyed being at the party. They attend the get-together each year.

"I'm Irish today, sure," she said with a smile. "My English father is turning over in his grave."

Her late father liked to tease Irish people at St. Patrick's Day, saying that he would wear orange rather than green.

Awards were given Saturday af-ternoon to the best-dressed Irishman and Irishwoman, and door prime were given. Baby photos of staff members from the senior center in Canton were displayed, and seniors enjoyed guessing the identity of each person.

Musical entertainment for the day was provided by Johany Chase and by the Canton Kitchen Band. Chase sang while playing the ac-cordion and keyboard. Such favor-ite tunes as "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and "My Wild Irish Rose" were among those heard.

"It's such fun to watch," Neihen-gen said of the party, held each year for the past eight years. When Neihengen started work in 1962, one of the seniors mentioned it would be nice to have a party.

"So we decided to have it after Christmas," Nethengen said. Those attending enjoy celebrating the end of winter. Some newcomers are at the party each year, along with some people whe've been to parties in previous years.

"We always have a good turnout every year," she said. "People enjoy it."

If you go by the misinformation that has been handed out in the last 30 years, you'll gain 15-30 pounds while pregnant and breast feed the baby to lose more quickly what weight you did gain.

That's what women were told in the 1950s and '60s. What doctors discovered was that women would restrict their weight gain during pregnancy by dieting. And women discovered that by breast feeding their babies, they didn't lose the weight

It's the 1990s and things have changed. Doctors are more relaxed about weight gains. Today, mothersto-be gain an average of 33 pounds during pregnancy.

"They now believe such a weight gain is better because the baby is born slightly bigger and healthier. said Dr. Lindsay Allen, a nutritionist with the University of Connecticut. "The babies are more alert and interact with the parents more and that's good for the babies."

Nutrition and pregnancy are issues near and dear to Allen's heart. At the age of 43, she is seven months pregnant with her first child.

Allen has done a lot of work in developing countries like Mexico, where women between ages 18 and 40 are almost constantly pregnant, breast feeding or both. In those countries, there is a serious problem with nourishing the mothers well enough to avoid malnutrition in the children.

ALLEN, WHO enjoys studying the nutrition of pregnant women because "it is a very exciting, dynamic period of life," was in the metropolitan area last week, working to correct some of the misinformation associated with nutrition and pregnancy and breast feeding.

According to Allen, the more weight gained during pregnancy the longer it will take to lose after the baby's birth and breast feeding. However, for the average women, diet, what the baby needs to develop will literally be stripp of from the mother's system.

"IF THERE'S not enough calcium, it will come out of her bones," she it will come out of her bones," said. "A study showed that maternal hone calcium goes down during prognancy and lactation (breast feeding), but eventually — about a year after the birth — it will start to recover and go up."

A lot of women may think they need to eat more to provide the necessary nutrients to their unborn child, but, according to Allen, the ap-petite of a pregnant woman isn't much larger than that of a non-preg-

"What they need to do to get the nutrients and minerals to their babies is to eat high quality foods and cut down on junk foods," Allen said. They need to replace soft drinks with juice and milk and replace high carbohydrate desserts with ice cream and fruit."

Allen added that pregnant women should eat less at each meal and snack more on foods that provide nu-

'The best thing is to be prepared to have snacks available to provide nutrients," Allen said. "You have to have food around and not junk food."

ONE MYTH Allen likes to dispel is that poor nutrition is a problem of poor women. True, women with lower incomes may not be able to afford quality food or may give the best food to their children.

However, professional women tend to be more concerned about not gaining too much weight and tend to skip meals. They don't eat enough or the right kinds of foods during their pregnancy.
"You can have permanent bad outcomes by not doing things right," Allen said. "Low weight gain is associated with low birth weights, higher infant mortality, behavorial changes in in the infants at birth.

They're reaching out to help someone

If Life Care Ministries fied a slo-gan, it might read something like, "Have an ear to lend, need someone to talk

LCM is a Christian telepho Volunteers man teles 66 hours a week to listen to people who have problems, need one to talk to or just the name of a person or place that can provide

In return, callers receive "caring, loving assistance" that "help callers identify feelings and seek solutions." If the caller wants it, the listeners are available to pray with them or take prayer requests.

Founded in April 1988, the Livonia-based ministry fields 200 telephone calls a month and with a cadre of 56 volunteers, it's ready to handle even more.

'We'd like more callers; we can handle more callers," said Kay Harder, director of operations. "The length of the calls we get really vary with the crisis. Some just need a referral; some need to talk.'

There are two things LCM isn't. First, while it is Christian in its focus, it is not affiliated with any specific church or religious sect. Its funding comes from area churches and private donations.

Secondly, while LCM believes that God is the answer to people's problems, callers aren't subjected to heavy doses of religion. "Presenting God as the answer comes at the point where they (the callers) are ready to receive that," Harder said. LCM sees itself as a community service for the eptire metropolitas area. People with problems can call from all over and find a "listening ear," Harder said.

"OFTEN PEOPLE don't want to talk about their problems to some-one face to face," she said, "so we're that anonymous, confidential

"It's important for people to know that listeners take a pledge of confi-dentiality, that that listener isn't going to go out and talk about them." added Joan Merritt, secretary of the LCM board of directors and a listen-

Most of the calls deal with problems with marriage, divorce, mental illness and substance abuse. Listeners receive 13 weeks of training in phone skills, crisis intervention, suicide prevention and the like.

Once trained, they're assigned to two four-hour shifts each month. The listeners range in age from the late 20s to 80s and have a common interest — caring for people — that attracts them to the telephone ministry, Harder said.

Harder started out as a listener in 1988 and accepted the director's job earlier this year. She got involved in the ministry because of the satisfaction she gained from the work.

"I like being able to help people with problems and I care for people," she said. "Some people call because they're lonely and need someone to talk. Sometimes a call may be training is in crisis intervention."

THE EMPHASES at LCM is listen

re're here to give them hope, confi-lence and referrals to solve their ace and referrals to solve their oblems," said Merritt. " We really try not to judge people.

"We help people get a new persepective on what's happening to them," Harder said. "Often in talking to us, they begin to resolve their problems. We're trained to give them new directions to help them

Presently, an LCM listener mans a telephone between noon and 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Hopes are to expand the service to 24 hours a day. LCM also reaches out to senior citizens and shut-ins with its telecare service, providing "caring com-panionship" by telephone.

The service maintains a human resource listening so that it can pair up a caller with an appropriate agency for things like counseling, housing or medical care. It also is developing a listing of support groups.

"A lot of times people don't know where to turn to for help," Harder

For people with problems, the Life Care Ministries telephone listening service can be reached by calling 427-LIFE between noon and 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Inquiries should be directed to P.O. Box 52611, Livonia

Help with outdoor adventure plans

(AP) - Even though it's only March, many thoughts already are turning to summer vacation. If outdoor adventure is on the agenda, there are government maps that may help.

Most hikers and campers already know about the detailed U.S. Geological Survey maps that provide a close look at a small area.

Folks just looking for a park to visit or a scenic attraction may want something less detailed but provid-

The government has four maps that may be helpful, all available

Seniors take spring break

(AP) — City leaders who abandoned college spring break as a bad idea say they'll replace the lost income, if not the crowds, by catering to the over-50 set with a Senior Spring Festival.

But Daytona Beach, which gladly took in the snubbed collegians and now reigns as spring break king, says it wants the seniors, too.

Fort Lauderdale plans to kick off its festival in May, offering Big Band concerts instead of wet T-shirt contests and juice cocktails instead of cold beer.

"We hope to bring in the seniors to take up the slack left by the spring breakers," said Bart Strang, festival president and director of the Center for Gerontology in Fort Lauderdale.

'Everyone in the world has something to sell to the seniors these days.'

> - Philip Goldfarb

IN ITS 1985 heyday, Fort Lauderdale's spring break drew 350,000 college students, a record Senior Spring Festival organizers don't hope to match. But they say the elders will spend far more than the students

> Organizers envision 2,000 festivalgoers 50 and older this year with location promotions.

> Next year's festival will be advertised nationally, bringing in 10,000 seniors and as much as $10 million, Strang predicted. Delta Air Lines has agreed to be the official carrier for the 1991 event and will include the festival in its vacation packages.

"Everyone in the world has something to sell to the seniors these days, and we wanted to get in on the ground floor," said Philip Goldfarb, general manager of the Guest Quarters Suite Hotel, a festival sponsor. "Frankly, we're glad spring break is over."

Fort Lauderdale's original title for the festival was "Senior Spring Break," an idea nixed early by the Greater Fort Lauderdale Chamber of Commerce for fear of negative comparisons.

But civic promoters in Daytona Beach aren't afraid to use the words, even though they haven't yet firmed up their plans for this year.

"We've had some strategy sessions on a senior spring break," Ty Wilson, member of Daytona Beach's Spring Break Festival Task Force and former president of the local Chamber of Commerce, said Thursday. "Volusia County, you know, is next to Pinellas in having the highest rate of retiree residents in the state."

NEXT YEAR, he said, "We're going to do something, some type of festival that would basically be targeted toward the seniors because they're a vital part of our resort community."

Daytona Beach expects 400,000 college-age visitors during a five-week period this spring and will try to get them back next year, but still has plenty of room for the older crowd, said Wil-

Fort Lauderdale expects less than 20,000 young people during spring break.

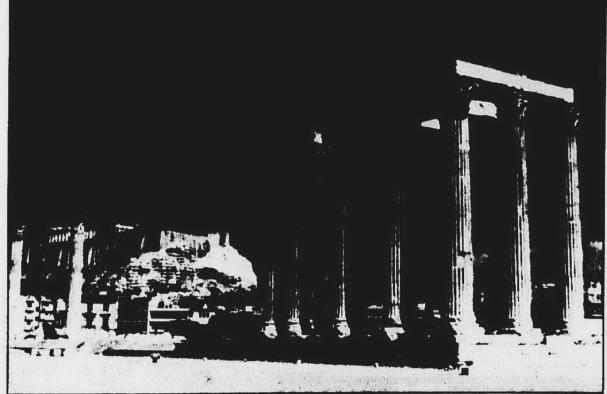

We have 28 miles of beaches, and we have a lot to do, with all of our golf courses, et cetera," Wilson said. "And we still think we're certainly a better value. You still can buy an oceanfront condo here in the 70s."

SALLY DAVIS

The Temple to Olympian Zeus is surrounded with Acropolis in the background. Athens, Greece.

By Sally Davis special writer

Greece, the beautiful. Greece, the splendid. Greece, the historic. Greece, the home of Elias Anastasopoulis.

Having sailed through the Corinth Canal on a friend's yacht a few years ago, I was familiar with the small island of Trizonia, which lies in the Gulf of Corinth, across from Patras. Another friend and I decided to visit Greece and create our own classical excursion, away from structured group tours.

Our adventure began at the Trizonia Yacht Club where we became the owner's first guests to arrive by land. Sailors from all over the make a stop at Trizonia for a drink, a meal and a chat.

We left Athens and took a bus and ferry to the nearest point on the mainland to reach Trizonia, a fishermen's village. Ion, the owner of the yacht club, wrote me and said that we would meet a moustachioed taxi driver, Elias, who would deliver us to Hania.

AS WE WERE getting off the ferry at Agios, we were confronted by the hired taxi driver, holding a sign that read, "Ion, Trazonia." There was no chance for him to miss us. We looked like Americans and we were the only passengers with large suitcases. Graciously, he took our luggage and ushered us to his awaiting taxi. His English was non-existent, as was our Greek. We crammed into his car. There wasn't much room because he had brought his wife and young daughter along, who both knew a bit of English and could translate. There was much joking and laughing along the way to the dock where we were to take a boat taxi to our yacht club destination.

After a few days of getting acquainted with the island, we decided to take some day trips through the country. Ion, our host, arranged for Elias to drive us to our desired destinations.

Our first stop was Messolongi, the memorial cemetary dedicated to the Greeks who were killed during the Greek-Turkish war in 1826. Also the burial place of Lord Byron.

After a full day of sightseeing, we decided to head back to the yacht club and rest up for our next day's

WE TALKED OF renting a car to see the sights of Peloponnesos, but Ion advised us that it would be cheaper and more convenient to rent Elias and his taxi for the week.

So, we took a few trial runs to see how we felt about our charioteer.

Delphi was a breeze. Meteora was four hours travel each way and the taxi was much quicker and easier than the bus, which takes seven or eight hours one way. It also gave us a chance to check out Elias' driving ability in the mountains. He easily passed.

We felt privileged to hear his car horn play its song, "Never on Sunday." We were treated to the song of the horn only if there was a pretty girl by the roadside or if the road disappeared behind a hairpin curve in the mountains.

Near Kalambaka, we visited the hanging monasteries at Meteora, high on top of the rocky pinnacles. When the sites noon closing time arrived, we ended up staying 12:15 p.m. As we retreated to the parking lot, Elias was waiting impatiently, making heated remarks in Greek and pointing at his watch.

By this time, we had learned to say, "parakalo" and "efkharisto"; "please and thank you." Our efforts to teach Elias English however, fell on deaf ears. His limited English ironically consisted of "stop" and

ELIAS CHOSE TO use his own style of communicating. He was very demonstrative in getting his point across and would punch our shoulder or arm for emphasis. It took nearly a whole day for our arms

He became very protective of us and would search out hotels for us, speaking to the desk clerk first to pave the way for his non-Greek speaking clients. We turned down a couple of sleazy rooms he suggested and made him drive to the next town. He didn't understand. Hotels were hotels to him.

When we finally settled on a place, he dropped us off and we said, "Avrio" and gave him a time to pick us up in the morning. We did much speculating as to how he spent his evenings, but he was always waiting for us in the morning at the restaurant in the hotel, sipping his little era, Elias." which means "good

One day, we drove through the mountains and Elias stopped along the road to climb a pear tree and treat us to pears. "Patera," father, he said pointing at his chest.

Elias had a nasty habit of throwing trash out the window. We quickly looked up the word "illegal." "Ameriki, no," we said.

"Greco," he replied, as he tossed out an empty cigarette box. "Litterbug" became his nickname.

Blossoms in south bring buds north

Spring has made its way north with flowers creeping up from the barrier islands near the Florida/ Georgia border. The sweet scented blossoms are on their way from the Bellingrath Gardens in Mobile, Ala., to the gardens of the antebellum houses in Natchez, Miss.

Some of us Northerners go crazy waiting for that first traveling flower to bud. During these early days of spring, I dream of the unfolding dogwood trees in North Ca-

College kids are almost finished kicking the sands of Daytona Beach and Padre Island, now its our turn. But before you pack your bags, take my advice on spring season travel; never travel Easter week because you're back in high season and every teacher and family-withkids is on the road.

Railcar mansion dresses up resort

AP - An Amtrak train rolls past the depot at The Greenbrier and for a few brief seconds the Curlyhut comes to life.

The luxurious 1931 train car, fitted out royally from the brase clock to the detailed woodwork and Chippendale furnishings, is one of four that have found a new home at the hotel.

About the only thing noticeably absent is the clackety-clack, clackety-clack of the rails.

Besides the Curlyhut, built in 1921 for a wealthy New York City businessman, there are the Randleigh, the Virginia and the St. Nicholas.

The four private-railroad luxury cars were brought to the hotel last year, and soon will be put back into service as a novel actime for private parties and receptions.

"THEY WERE called me

Greenbrier," Conte said. "And it seems to me a very appropriate one, because from 1876 to 1976, the vast majority of people came here by rail."

The depot, an attractive white brick building built in 1931, will be restored to its original condition to ment the addition of the railroad cars.

"The cars are museum pieces," said Rodney Stoner, director of food and beverage. "And we think having a reception in that kind of setting will appeal to some of our customers."

Stoner said basic food prepara-tion would most likely be done in the kitchess of the botel, and finishing touches done in the train o

Direct mailers develop new strategies

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Direct mail marketing companies vying for advertising dollars are coming up with new ways to attract consumer attention.

With the huge retail market and advertiser unrest over substantial advertising cost increases since the joint operating agreement between metropolitan Detroit's dailies, the size of the direct mail market pie has grown and everyone is looking for seconds.

ADVO Systems Inc. in Livonia, one of the largest direct mail advertisers in the country, has delivered direct mail packages of coupons and flyers on Monday or Tuesday in the metro area for nearly 10 years.

The company instituted a twiceweekly delivery service on March

ADVO REGIONAL vice president and general manager Jon Singer said ADVO's early week "mailbox values" will continue to circulate to 1.7 million homes and the new, late week mailbox values coverage will circulate to 1.3 million homes.

Twice weekly coverage will focus in the inner communities of the tri-county area and Ann Arbor, Singer said. Outlying communities will still receive the service in the early part of the week only.

Although ADVO is a national company in 160 markets with circulation approaching 50 million weekly, metropolitan Detroit area will be the first to have a twiceweekly circulation, Singer said.

"But I'm sure the company will be keeping a close eye on this to see how it goes," he added.

Although it would appear as if ADVO is launching its twice-weekly direct mail in response to the JOA, the idea was first proposed several years ago in response to customer demand, Singer said. Serious consideration began about 15 months ago, he continued.

'We were going to do it whether the JOA went through or not," he

"THERE ARE three or four other markets large enough to warrant (twice-weekly direct mail), but nowhere is the timing good," he said. "We've just changed from a two to a one newspaper town, (daily newspaper) advertising rates are increasing significantly, and we have a sophisticated enough and competitive enough retail market for successful alternatives."

Singer said ADVO is committed to seeing the twice-weekly direct mail marketing through and this is not a "test-the-waters" proposi-

This is not a trial move - even if competition is stepped up we don't intend to turn around on this.

Direct mail marketing offers

continued, so in addition to cheaper rates, advertisers can target

ADVO offers zone advertising to between 300 and 400 ZIP code zones throughout Michigan, although its major client base is in the metropolitan Detroit area. Advertisers choose their target audience by ZIP code.

Advertisers in large newspapers must pay for a papers entire circulation even though their actual customer base is very small and localized. "We go for the targeted, rather than shotgun approach."

SINGER ALSO said advertisers who traditionally used both major dailies were often spending double the money to advertise to the same customer. Many people took both dailies prior to the JOA — especially on Sundays — and now that there are combined weekend editions, advertisers will realize this.

Postage hikes raise concerns

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

For every ying, a yang; for every win, a loss; for every profit, a Direct mail marketers, who were looking forward to the potential profits from an ever-growing retail market and advertiser fallout from the Detroit News/Detroit Free Press joint operating agreement got some bad news several weeks ago - postal rates are going up.

A week later, the postal service announced it would be changing and realigning ZIP codes zones in the affluent target markets of Oakland, Macomb and Washtenaw counties.

Michael Jolet, vice president of operations at Joseph Marketing Resources Inc., said there's little doubt the rate increases and the ZIP code changes to a lesser extent will impact the industry, but it's difficult to gauge that impact.

Ninety percent of all packages delivered by the postal service in 1989 were business related, with two of every five packages classified as direct mail advertising, according to the U.S. Postal Service 1989 annual report.

"If prices go up, mail volumes could go down," Jolet said. "If postage increases, it might be too much for some advertisers."

Direct mail advertisers will be forced to either lower profit margins or increase rates - either way, the advertisers are likely to turn to alternative forms of advertising, he said.

THIRD CLASS Mail Association executive director Gene DelPolito said it is difficult to gauge the rate change's impact, but it could benefit some third class mail users and harm others.

"This is the most complicated rate schedule the postal service has proposed yet," DelPolito said. "Some of the things they're talking about are winners, but some of them are really losers.

By putting in a little effort, some pre-printed direct mail advertisers could actually see their rates drop, while on the other hand, people who mail catalogues could really get socked."

The thrust behind the current rate increases, DelPolito said, is to encourage mail that can be machine processed. Letter-sized packages with destination codes which enable optical scanning are easily processed - odd-sized, loose mail is not.

Those third class mailers who don't fit the profile will shoulder the brunt of the increase and there's not much they can do about it because the product they offer is incapable of being machine processed. You can't play golf wi tennis racket," DelPolito said.

Saturation direct mail which is prepared in walk sequence, meaning all the postal worker has to do is pick it up and deliver it to at least 90 percent of a route, could also be less expensive, he said. U.S. Postal Service spokesp son Susan Gillespie said it will do several things to help business mailers through the upcoming

Service-type jobs lost with mergers

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Look for Michigan - you know, the state that catches a cold every time the auto industry sneezes to be an above average state as far as employment in the 1990s is concerned.

Currently, Michigan's job market is softer than most states, according to president Sam Skeegan of the personnel consultant firm Roth Young Personnel Service of Detroit Inc. in Southfield.

'The overall market is soft and the Detroit area is softer than most, but the disparity between here and other states isn't there (like it was in 1986)," he said. To some, that might be a cause for concern, he said, but then this is not 1980.

"Michigan's economy is much more diversified than 10 years ago." Service jobs will continue to chip away at the manufacturing employment base in southeast Michigan in the 1990s.

MANY OF Roth Young's clients today are based in the service industry - retail, medical and food ser-ces — as opposed to the manufacturing industry. New York's reliance on the financial industry, New England's reliance on the computer industry and California's reliance on the defence industry has resulted in higher unemployment rates when that particular segment of the economy soured.

States like Michigan, which has made a conscious effort to diversify away from a strict reliance on automobile manufacturing, and Texas, which has moved away from the building industry, will have an advantage over other states during the slow growth in the coming years, Skeegan said.

Skeegan said employment watchers are looking for the economy to improve after June of this year and then continue to improve through the coming decade. 'Michigan should do better than average in the 1990s."

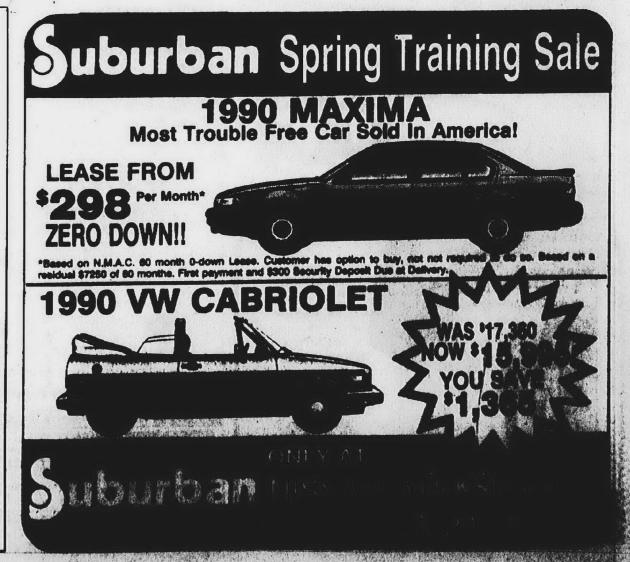

Food preparation, packaging and hotel management, for example, are good examples of where the state is going. The technically orientated curriculums at schools like the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor and Lawrence Technological University in Southfield - while still an important training place for students — will have less of an impact.

Stan Hart, president of Hart Personnel Consultants Inc. in Farmington Hills, said the high unemployment Inc. in Farmington Hills, said the high unemployment numbers of the 1980s were weighted because of Michigan's over reliance on manufacturing.

It won't be the automotive slow down, but mergers that will affect the service economy, Hart said. Company, mergers became more common as the 1960s ended and they are likely to continue into the 1990s, he said.

WHEN TWO companies merge, the new corpora-tion usually cuts employees that perform duplicate jobs, Hart said. "The cream of American know how is getting wiped out and it doesn't have a dama thing to do with ability."

"If your reserve is almost 25 percent of a rate increase, there's get to be some questions," DelPolite said.

Gillargie said the agency doesn't always get what it asks for. Rate phanges are proposed to the Postal Rate Commission (PRC) which has up to 10 months to review the After review, the PRC makes a commendation to the U.S. Postal rvice Board of Governors which can approve reject or modify the rate changes, Gillespie said.

We are in the unfortunate position of not setting our own rates and we don't receive subsidies from the federal government," she DelPolito noted the rate increase is being requested for the postal service's budget that begins in October 1991. "The rate increase, however, will go into effect in January 1991. We think there's room for some balance there - where's the econometric justification for

ZIP CODE change impacts are also difficult to gauge, Jolet said. Simply changing ZIP code numbers would hardly impact the direct mailers, but changing ZIP code boundaries could have a real impact. "It all depends on what they do," he said. Direct mailers have do," he said. Direct mailers have developed marketing strategies based on where people live in relation to ZIP codes, he said, and a change in the boundaries will require new marketing studies.

Adapting to changing ZIP codes will not impact the industry as much as the cost increases, because mailing lists are updated fairly regularly regardless of ZIP code changes.

code changes.

It is possible the changes could even be helpful if identifying certain target audiences is easier with the changes, Jolet added. "They were going to have to do something to adjust to the population any-

Gillespie said business mailers should experience little difficulty adapting to the changes as major direct mailers compile lists approximately every three months.

"Normally, we charge them for the service, but we'll provide them with the new ZIP codes and addresses free of charge," she said.

Direct mailers may have to do some new demographic studies to find the "higher profile" ZIP codes, she continued, but most changes will respect previous ZIP code boundaries.

"A lot of the new ZIP code boundaries will be the result of splitting larger areas into smaller ones, she said.

Finally, Singer said local advertisers have little legalty to the two major dailies. "It might have been different before I was here, but because of corporate ownership of the two dailies the retailers never had a good feeling about them be-cause there's no local connection."

ADVO believes the twice-weekly circulation will enable it to pick up more and different customers for its direct mail marketing. Singer said. "There's nothing I can really point to yet — we're seeing fast food, home improvement stores, department stores, furniture stores — but we won't really know for several months "

Singer said he doubts the Detroit Newspaper Agency (DNA), the body which now runs the two dailies, will sit quietly by and watch the direct mailers gobble up advertising dol-

DNA officials wouldn't respond to phone calls.

"WE'VE ALREADY seen they (the DNA) are realigning their advertising zones and aggressively pricing

Twice weekly, direct mail advertising isn't the only option available to the direct mailers, however.

Bill Buczak and Don Duncan, coowners of Val Pak direct mail, are launching a new venture this month called "Reach," a slick, four-color, 8 1% by 11 inches magazine advertis-

The first edition of Reach will be 16 pages with future editions roughly four each year - approximately the same length.

The magazine is an attempt to appeal to a wider advertiser base, Buczak said. Val Pak appeals to middle and often go into other jobs. "They are the entrepreneurs, they get other jobs, open stores or start businesses because they can't get jobs in what they're good at."

Hart also said company loyalty is also a thing of the past. In the past, workers got a job somewhere with the intention of being there for a good many years.

Today, frequent company changes and even occupation changes are the norm. Hart said that most people can expect to change companies al-most ten times in their life with several occupation changes.

"Twenty or 30 years ago people would work someplace for a lifetime," he said.

Calvin F. Weaver CPC, president of the executive search firm Opportunity Knocks in Livonia, agreed that Michigan is far more diversified than 10 years ago and should weather the current slow down.

"We'll see a far more stable job market than we did before."

Weaver said the impression the country is gripped in an economic recession is incorrect. "Some areas have slowed, but others have not."

BLUE COLLAR manufacturing jobs and their corresponding supervisor jobs will continue to decline during the next several years, but there will be an increased need for research and development and other high tech jobs.

Data processing and engineering will continue to be strong candidates for job growth, and printing and sales ishe are also growing fields. s are also growing fields. Financial, insurance, employment companies and retail firms, for ex-ample, are always on the lockout for good people.

In some respects, businesses rely on the automobile industry because it generates customers and people, but the relation is tenuous. Even automotive suppliers have other cus-tomers, he said.

Some of the current economic slowdown can be attributed to a self fulfilling prophecy. "I hear from some people that since the auto industry is slowing down, (they'll) be slowing down."
Hans Becker, president of the executive search firm B. Hans Becker Associates Inc., and the temporary help firm TRC Temporary Services Inc. in Troy, agreed that the changes made during the last decade will ensure that the state will not see high unemployment in the 1990s.

The diversification of Michigan's economy was planned, it didn't just happen, he continued. "People were getting sick and tired of this up and down thing."

"I AM really gratified to know that it was such as important part of the Michigan planning," he said. 'I feel strong about Michigan and U.S.

In addition to the new positions generated by attrition, retirement and job changes, manufacturing companies are always looking for high-caliber talent during economic down turns, he said.

"In 1962, when we were in the depths of recession, I had my second st year." Executive search firms, in fact, have good years during slow economic times because companies are looking for the best of the best.

"Companies want people who can hit the road running and keep the company profitable during leaner economic times." Becker said. There may be fewer jobs, but placing them is far more critical."

Even though newspapers continue to report automotive industry woes, Becker said the current slowdown is probably a fluctuation, not a trend. The first half of 1990 is slow because manufacturers have huge invento-

"When those inventories clear, things will pick up in the spring. I feel very confident about Michigan's job market," Becker added.

But just as the economy has changed during the past decade, so has the job market. "The temporary job market is a much bigger and important part of the picture."

It's the kind of question you proba-bly won't ever hear on "Jeopardy," but it was tossed out to an audience presumably concerned and knowleg-able about the subject. The guest speaker was Chrysler Motors chairman Ben Bidwell, who had just finished a lengthy speech that touched on the subject of how the Japanese have closed their mar-kets to other countries. Bidwell is the kind of guy who lives and dies by 10-day sales returns and can ge ally rattle off market shares of five competitive products without inhal-

The speech brought out the usual questions from the attending press, such as how can American auto companies criticize Japan and still form oint ventures and sell Japanesebuilt cars in their dealerships?

One reporter asked this one four times in a row, with Bidwell countering by pointing out that joint ven-tures had nothing to do with a onesided policy on trade. A good point, but it was also apparent that the questioner was having a tough time making the distinction.

BUT THE question about the Japanese market was the shocker, at least after it became apparent that none of the collected opinion-makers knew even a ballpark answer. It was an appalling acknowlegement of ig-

SHARING IS CARING

To fight crime in Philly, people plant posies.

"The bad part of town." Abandoned cars. Sidewalks scattered with crack vials. Bombed-out buildings.

A neighborhood whose spirit is as broken as the bits of glass that dot the street. There are only two things to do if your neighborhood becomes a war none: give up or take action.

The Philadelphia Story
One day, in the "bad part" of Philadelphia, a neighbor sined to a neighbor. an to imother And Some People didn't splices total spirit to coega.

getting fixed up. Vacant lots were cleaned up and fenced off. Abandoned cars were towed away. Painting and repairing programs began.

The neighborhood was cleaning itself up. The local 4-H Club even helped set up garden clubs where kids, teens and adults could work together on plants and flowers while talking over ways to raise awareness.

When people care and get involved, neighborhoods change. When a block doesn't look like a haven for orime and drugs, it won't be. And in this part of Philly, where once only apathy grew, seven gardens now bloom.

This is only one success story of many. To find out what can be done in your neighborhood, write: The

Listen to the subtle sounds of nature

Our sense of hearing is attended of constantly. So much so, that we tend not to listen to many sounds. Background naises of traffic, voicon, humming electric motors and such, are frequently ignored.

Walking through the weeds and meadows also can etimulate your sense of hearing, but with totally different sounds. Wind rustling leaves, birds singing, bees humming or frogs calling are sound likely to be heard because they are so different than the usual sounds of the city.

These and other sounds are produced in a variety of ways. One sound that I am always intrigued by is that produced by the wing feathers of a birds. I remember sitting in my grandfather's mode.

watching for squirvols and ony other activity, when all of a sudden I heard a whome-whites-whome sound. When I looked around to see what was creating such a cound, I saw my first pilested weedpacker.

Waterfewl enthusiasts can identify when ducks known as common goldeneye are appreaching by listening to the whistling of their wings. Feathers cutting through the wind act like the road of a woodwind instrument and create a wibration. Not all birds have the proper feather structure or flight manner to produce such loud sounds. Mourning doves flying to and from your yard produce sound in a similar manner.

ing edge of their wing feathers which muffles any sound produced by the wind through the feathers. Though nights are not always quiet, owls do not want to be heard by mine or any other netestial near mice or any other potential prey.

March happens to be the mouth that woodcock arrive back in southeastern Michigan from their wintering grounds in Louisiana.

This week is "Whyne County Counts Week" in an effort to get county residents to respond to the uncoming U.S. Census.

upcoming U.S. Census.

The countywide effort involves a
206-person public relations committee of county governmental and business leaders.

In an effort to assure all county residents are counted, the committee is distributing flyers to recipients of meals on wheels projects and enlisting the aid of hospitals to keep track of all babies born before midnight, April 1.

"An undercount could have a ma-

"An undercount could have a major impact on the amount of federal and state dollars our communities use to fund a wide range of programs, including education, housing, roads and social services," Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara said.

The county would lose a estimated $3.5 million per year in federal and state revenue sharing if a mere one percent of its population wasn't included in the census, McNamara said.

Census figures will be used as the statistical base for state and federal aid for the next 10 years, McNamara said, increasing their importance.

"The best way be can ensure that we are getting the state and federal dollars we deserve is by helping the census bureau meet their goal of counting every person in Wayne County," McNamara said.

Gas sale helps river

In a fund-raising event to benefit Friends of the Rouge, Marathon Oil Co. will donate 5 cents per gallon of its new "clean burning" gasoline sold in the metro area on Monday, March 26 to the environmental group.

Friends of the Rouge, based in Livonia, coordinates the annual volunteer Rouge River cleanup, as well as education programs and other activities designed to restore the heavily-polluted Rouge River.

The new gasoline is billed as 20 percent cleaner burning than standard and the Pollute Rouge River.

The new gasoline is billed as 20 percent cleaner burning than standard gasoline. It will make its Detroit-area debut that day. Michigan Department of Natural Resources director David Hales will pump the first gallon at the Marathon Station at Lahser and Northwestern, Southfield.

Battle Creek knocks Salem from tourney

By Den O'Meera staff writer

Marc White played the game expected of him for Battle Creek Central in Wednesday's Class A quarterfinal basketball game against Plymouth Salem.

The runner-up in the Mr. Basketball voting scored 27 points, but the unexpected support of teammate David Freeman made sure the No. 2 Bearcats advanced in the tournament and Salem did not.

The 6-foot-2 guard scored 26 points - nearly double his average - as Central eliminated the Rocks from post-season play 89-77 before a capacity crowd at Jackson Lumen Christi High School.

The Bearcats, 24-2, will play Saginaw in a semifinal contest at 1 p.m. Friday in East Lansing. Salem, ranked No. 8, finishes with a 23-3 record.

"We haven't been a great three-point shooting team, but we must have watched Loyola Marymount," Central coach Chuck Turner said. "Freeman averages 14, so he had a great game for himself."

THE BEARCATS made only three triples, but Freeman, who signed early with Fairleigh-Dickinson, hit two in the third quarter when he had his big moment.

He destroyed Salem's zone, shooting 6-of-6 in that period and scoring 14 points as Central expanded a 42-34 halftime lead to 69-57

'We've weathered runs before," Salem coach Bob Brodie said. "We came out in a man in the first half, and they drove right by us to the hole. You just have to be patient and hope they don't make those shots."

Freeman was 10-of-11 for the game, and White, a burly, 6-3 forward who hasn't signed, was 10-of-19. Michael Mosley was 6-of-8 and contributed 16 points for the Bearcats, who shot 57 percent (32-56) overall. Six-4 Kenyon Murray, the other postman, was 5-of-9 with 12

"We knew (Freeman) was the shooter," Brodie said, "but we didn't expect White to light it up from the outside. But we knew Freeman could. He has the ability to score with a hand in his face."

To their credit, the Rocks stayed with their style of play, playing the same up-tempo game Central likes to Salem played well, too; the Bearcats were just a little better. Salem shot well - 51 percent on 28-of-55 shooting - handled Central's pressure and got up and down the court.

JAKE BAKER scored 22 points and had 13 rebounds to lead the Rocks. He always drew a crowd whenever he got the ball on the perimeter, and most of his points came either in transition or on weaving drives Central's 6-foot-3 guard Marc White (27 points) and company slipped through Rocks' man-to-man and some defensive walls on route to ent shooting night (32 of 56 a 57 percent sherom the field).

"We tried everything," said Salem ceach Bob Brodie. "They've got a lot of weapons. If you put a guy on just on White, then it creates openings for the other players. There's no real nicks you can use."

Central's other guard, Fairleigh Dickinson-bound Daniel Freeman, sat out much of the second quarter in foul trouble, but finished with 26 oints on 10 of 11 shooting from the

'Our objective was to force them to shoot from the perimeter when we went to the zone in the second half," Brodie said. "I didn't expect them to hit from the outside and that's what really put a nail in our coffin."

DEFENSIVE SPECIALIST Ryan Johnson, a 6-2 senior forward, said Salem's diamond zone wasn't quite as effective as it had been the previous week in regional wins over Ann Arbor Huron and Romulus.

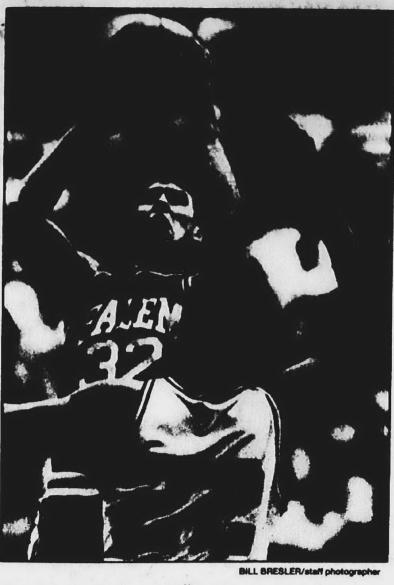

"We wanted to come out in a hard man-to-man," he said. "There were no real changes to make . . . whatever happens, comes. When we went zone we wanted to pressure the ball, et some steals and some turnovers, but we didn't get enough tonight."

Some of Salem's aggressiveness defensively may have been stymied by a slew of early whistles, many of them teach fouls.

Johnson, who finished with 16 points and hit seven of eight field goal trys, picked up two quick peronals in the opening quarter.

"We had a few shots that didn't fall," said Johnson. "Obviously they (Central) were the better team, but they're not as good as they're rated. I don't know much about either Sagi-

Despite the loss, Johnson said Salem's 23-3 season was a success.

"We went at lot further than people expected, all the way back to game (number) one," he said. "Salem is going to have a heck of a team next year, a lot of senior leadership. I look for them to go far again next

SENIOR GUARD Tom Noonan, who finished with 14 points on six of 11 shooting, was also elated with the team's 1989-90 showing.

"If somebody had told me before the season that we'd go to the quarterfinals, I would have looked at them funny," Noonan said. "They (Central) were really 'on' and I don't think we could have beaten them even with a perfect game. They handled everything well. They're one of the most talented teams we've faced. Everytime we'd score, they'd come back and counter with a three-

"It's been a great season and it's been a lot of fun. We only lost three games and we achieved every goal that we wanted this season with the exception of the conference (Western Lakes) championship. This season is something we all can look back

Salem deserves salute for fine accomplishment

After Priday's regional-clinching 86-73 triumph over Romulus, Brodie told our Dan O'Meara: "By today's standards, to get a team to the quarterfinals is a pretty good accomplishment."

Taking it one step further, it's even a batter accomplishment for a even a better accomplishment for a suburbas, non-parochial team from western Wayne County to reach the final eight in the state.

Brodie's Rocks broke a 15-year drought by winning the Class A regional at Ypailanti.

And no matter what happened Wednesday night against Battle Creek Central, Brodie has to feel good about the 1989-99 season. He and his team should gain a great deal of satisfaction because the public schools in the western Wayne suburbs have produced competitive teams in such sports as football, soccer and baseball, but never in boys basketball.

THE LAST TEAM to do it was the 1975 Salem team, led by Jim Ellinghausen and Eric Agardy, which gained the state semifinals before losing to Flint Northwestern.

In 1974, Livonia Franklin, led by Kevin Kaseta, reached the state quarterfinals before losing to eventual winner Birmingham Brother

In 1972. Dave Jackson carried Garden City East into the state quarterfinals before losing to perennial power Pontiac Central.

In 1971, Livonia Stevenson's "7come-11" team, coached by George Van Wagoner, gained a quarterfinal berth before falling to Campy Russell and Pontiac Central. (Stevenson's regular season record was 7-

Pontiac Central in the quarterfinals.

During that eight-year period from '68 through '75, six different teams from the Observerland's western Wayne County coverage area reached the final eight or better.

THAT'S WHY SALEM'S win over Romulus, breaking a 15-year drought, had such special signifi-

The Class A boys basketball tournament has been dominated the past two decades by schools from the city - the Detroit Public School League, Highland Park, Flint, Pontiac and Lansing. (Romulus may be the only exception.)

The last parochial school to win a Class A title was Redford Catholic Central in 1976. The Shamrocks also came close in 1983, falling to Detroit Kettering in the state quarterfinals.

When Salem last won a regional, Fred Thomann was coaching the

Some thought that Salem's boys program would tail off when he switched allegiances from boys to But to Brodie's credit, he's done something that no other Observerland public school coach has done in 15 years. And he's done it in an environment where basketball is really secondary to many other sports and fads. Driving a souped-up Camaro, or working at a Burger King often carries more importance than lacing up basketball sneakers for your school. Those are just some of the diversions for suburban kids.

The Marlins wasted little time in the second game and jumped to a quick 7-3 lead, but Ladywood ran off seven consecutive points to take a 10-7 advantage and eventually win the game.

"I was real pleased with the way we fought back to win that second game," Ladywood coach Tom Teeters said. "It tells you about the type of team we have. This team has tremendous fortitude."

The Blazers' momentum from the second game carried over to the finale, and they took a quick 11-3 lead. Mercy, however, managed to re-bound and cut the deficit to 11-10.

Ladywood walked away with state champlesstips the last two years, but the 1890 grows belongs to East Kestweed, which defeated the Blassy two games to some at Kalemason Central High School and claimed its first state championship.

"This is a great wis," said East Kestwood coach Bud Cole following the Falcons' 15-10, 15-6 victory. "We play a let of tough teams throughout the season, but Ladywood was one of the toughest."

The Blazers (49-12-2) established themselves early in the first game, taking a 5-2 lead. But Ladywood's momentum was short-lived, as East Kentwood rallied to tie the score at

The remainder of the game was controlled by the Falcons, who took leads of 11-8 and 12-10 before finishing off the Blazers.

"I WAS worried during that first game," Cole said. "But that's my job. We didn't play to our capabilities." Ladywood coach Tom Testers was eased with his team's performance in the opening game.

"I think we had them thinking after that first game," Testers said. "It's too bad we couldn't have continued our roll, but East Kentwood is just too tough a team."

The Falcons displayed their talent in the second game, dominating play more than in the first opener.

with a record of 75-1-1, the most wins by a volleyball team in the school's history, shattering the old mark of 70.

"They proved that they are the best team in the state," Teeters said. "They have a lot of good athletes."

Hidland Dow, the top-ranked team most of the year, won the team title with nearly a two-point advantage over runner-up Muskegon Mona Shores, 130.70 to 137.75.

"We went to the regional trying to best Canton, and I think that's what screwed us up," Kinsella said. Salem was runner-up to the Chiefs in that meet. "We were more relaxed and enjoyed what we were doing.

"I told them we could come in anywhere from second to fifth, and the deciding factor depended on how good they felt about what they were doing. We were 15 hundredths out of second. We were ranked third, and that's where we ended up.'

MILLER WENT to the individual finals in all four events, and teammate and fellow freshman Courtney Gonyea, who was fourth in the all-around at 35.75, on vault and beam. Also doing the all-around were Sa-lem's Autumn Bunch, who placed 18th with 34.00, and Canton's Kim Rennolds, who was 22nd with 35.80.

"I was surprised Courtney made it on vault, because her best events are beam and floor," Kinsella said.

After the first day, Miller was second on bars (9.05) and fourth on floor (9.10). She was tied with Canton's Heather Murphy and Gonyea on beam (8.85), and she was deadlocked for eighth on vault with Canton freshman Kim Rennolds (9.30).

Miller trailed Ann Arbor Pioneer's Tammy Crocker by one 10th of a point on bars entering the second day, but she made up the difference and won the title with an 18.25 total.

"She cleaned up her routine the second day," Kinsella said. "She knew what she had to do, and she took care of it.

All-Stater contest North's Heller champ on vault

As sure as night turns to day and winter becomes spring, North Farmington is always among the state's top gymnostics teams.

The Raiders, who wave fifth last year, stepped up to fourth place in this year's statewide competition Friday at Saginaw Valley State University. North was 11th two years are and second the previous year.

ago and second the previous year.

"It's consistent," ceach Jeff Dwyer said. "When you start beating the Hollands, the Troys, the Cantens, you've done a good job. Our goal was to get in the top five, and we're happy with where we were."

Midland Dow, the No. 1-ranked team most of the year, captured the team championship with a 139.70 score. The first division included Muskegon Mona Shores (137.75), Western Lakes Activities Association champion Plymouth Salem (137.60), North (137.00), Plymouth Canton (136.90) and Holland (136.80).

THE SECOND tier consisted of Freeland (133.75), Troy and Fraser (133.30), Holt (132.70), Ann Arbor Pioneer (128.80) and defending state champion Rockford (123.45).

"Dow was uncatchable at this meet," Dwyer said. "It was the toughest meet I've been to as far as the number of teams capable of contending for the state title. We finished behind some good teams, and we finished ahead of some good (Haather Kahn) was the only girl there who attempted a double back flip (in the finals on floor exercise). She had some difficulty with the landing, but I was glad she went for it. It took a lot of courage to change her routine at the state meet and go for the gusto."

- Jeff Dwyer N. Farmington gymnastics coach

The Raiders were led by junior Heather Kahn, who was runner-up to state champion Kim Miller of Salem in the all-around, and senior Kym Heller, who finished her career winning an individual co-championship

Kahn, who scored 36.00 in the allaround Friday, also qualified for the finals Saturday on every event but the balance beam.

"She's been so dang consistent," Dwyer said. "She beat Kristie Kelly of Freeland and the all-arounders from Dow. She did really well, considering the pressure of the meet."

Heller, who scored 35.60 in the allaround and placed sixth, also had a great meet, according to Dwyer.

AS A SENIOR, she was subsequently selected for the four-person Michigan team that will compete against the top gymnasts from other states later this spring in Nebraska. Kelly, Dow's Tracee Lewis and Ann Arbor Pioneer's Tammy Crocker also are on the elite squad.

That's quite an honor," Dwyer said. "It was a great way to go out." Junior Kristin Szutarski and sophomore Jameelah Gater contributed the other scores in North's team total Szutarski was 33rd in the allaround (33.00) and Gater 37th

"They get overshadowed by Heller and Kahn," Dwyer said, "but, without them posting scores in the mid to high 8s, the team wouldn't have been what it was.

"Those four individuals carried us through the season, and there was al-tition. She finished with a two-dittal of 18.85 to share top home

"SHE LEARNED the trick last year but had a lot of difficulty with it the last few weeks," Dwyer said. "Either her rotation was off, or her landing wasn't what it should have

"But she worked real hard on it and it paid off. I was glad to see it after all the hard work she put in. "She did a one-and-a-half twisting hand spring, and I didn't see anyone else doing that at this most," he add-

Kahn finished fifth on vault (18.65) and seventh on bars (17.06), and she tied for eighth place on floor (18.06). "She tried a more difficult (bars) routine on Saturday, and I have to give her credit for that," Dwyer said.

The kids are so drained after Friday, and I was glad to see her try it." Kahn was second on floor (9.15) after the first round Friday and also a attempted a harder routine in that event, which resulted in an 8.90, the following day.

"She was the only girl there who attempted a double back flip," Dwy-er said. "She had some difficulty with the landing, but I was glad she went for it. It took a lot of courage to change her routine at the state meet and go for the gusto."

All on a whim

First role led to career success

special writer

OURTNEY B. VANCE, the actor who is collecting rave reviews for his performance in "The Hunt for Red October" seems remarkably calm after a day of taking his hometown by storm.

Vance, who was born in Wayne and raised in Detroit, is a 1978 graduate of Detroit Country Day School in Beverly Hills.

'I was a different person at Country Day," he said. "It's funny, because I was out there. I was making announcements, doing the skits, doing the student council, captain of this, captain of that. I burned myself out. After I made the speech at graduation, I was exhausted."

Vance began his theatrical career during his senior year with a onescene performance in "Arsenic and Old Lace." The play's director, Ronnie Clemmer, now vice president of Longboy Productions in California, recalls that Vance tried out for the play on a whim with several other athletes and nearly stole the show in his single scene. "He was incredible," Clemmer says. "He brought the house down at every performance."

VANCE REMEMBERS things a bit differently.

"I don't know what made me try out for "Arsenic and Old Lace," because I certainly didn't have the time. Maybe it's because I had all my English classes with another teacher and wanted a chance to work with Ronnie in a setting that was removed from the way I knew him." (Clemmer coached Vance in football.)

After graduation, Vance attended Harvard and it was there that he began to seriously explore his potential

When I got to Harvard, I was exhausted, totally whipped. I didn't do anything. All I could do was to try to find out what I could do with my life. That's all the energy I had for myself and it was very important for me not to just settle for anything." Vance remembers. "I wanted to find out what it was I really wanted to do and that was painful." Vance initially turned to acting at Harvard as a way to combat feelings of loneliness and confusion.

"I wasn't having a good time and Ronnie made me promise that I would continue to try out for plays. There came a time when I realized that I wouldn't be able to run track and still be able to act. Once I gave up track, I was able to release myself into the auditions," Vance said. He graduated from Harvard in 1982 with a bachelor of arts in history, knowing that he would pursue acting as a career.

"IT WASN'T difficult for me to tell my parents that I would be an actor, because I had finally found something that was right for me. Of course. I found out later through my aunts and uncles that my parents weren't as sure. They sent me off to Harvard and I come back and say I'm going to act, but they were supportive," he said. Vance then took a year off and worked as a night security guard at the Museum of Fine

"I took a year to get myself ready for Yale. I walked the galleries and got myself together to apply. I was ready because of the emotional work I had done in two summers with the Shakespeare company in Lennox and I knew that the next logical step was some technical training," Vance says. He recalls his days at Yale with a charming reverence.

"Yale Drama School was one of the most difficult experiences of my life. And one of the most rewarding. It is a three-year commitment to work on yourself, and you're always doing something. After your first se-mester, you're thrown in the casting pool and you can be doing two or three plays and still keeping up your classroom work. You can talk to 15 different people and get 15 different experiences as to what Yale was, because it's easy to get side-tracked."

It was while at Yale that Vance was given the opportunity to originate the role of Cory in the highly acclaimed play, "Fences." Vance traveled to Chicago with the play during the summer before his final year and then played the role on Broadway opposite James Earl Jones. His performance earned him a nomination for the Antoinette Perry (Tony) Award.

While doing "Fences," Vance auditioned for and got the featured role in the much-praised commercial for the United Negro College Fund which still runs today. In the spot a young man tells his parents he understands when they tell him that they haven't got enough money for tuition, while his younger brother retrieves a piggybank and offers it in hopes that he will help.

WITH THE EDUCATIONAL opportunities he has had, Vance is very aware of the fact that he carries the burden of being a role model on his shoulders.

'There's no way anybody who gets in the position I'm in can get around it," he said. "You may say that I am who I am and I need to do what I need to do, but you have to remember that because film and television are such powerful mediums, you influence people's lives.

"But right now," he said, "it's about playing the waiting game, building a foundation and putting together a body of work which will allow me to reach a point where I can begin to develop my own projects. There's not a whole lot being written for people of color. We'll still see "Raiders of the Lost Ark" because it's a good story, but there's a tremendous untapped market out there. Sooner or later Hollywood will figure it out, because this business is about making money."

Vance plays Jonesy, the sonarman in "The Hunt for Red October," who, on pure brainpower, finds the elusive Soviet submarine. He has been singled out among a noteworthy cast, which includes Sean Connery, Alec Baldwin, James Earl Jones and Richard Jordan. For any other actor, it would be a breakthrough performance, leaving him poised to become terness. "The focus of my career right now is films. After 'Doc' in 'Hamburger Hill,' my agent and I knew that we needed a commercial success to move things forward. He's very meticulous about the kind of role I go up for. We have to be careful so that I'm not scattered all over the place and get overlooked for the better parts. There's a balancing certain things I have to give up

Schoolcraft College's "Plaza Suite" is one of the best productions of Neil Simon's hilarious comedy

"Plaza Suite" consists of three playlets that examine various aspects of marriage. The first story is review about a wife (Linda Bodnar) trying to hang onto her husband (Frank Betzel). Bodnar is excellent as a wife who decides to rekindle the flame with an anniversary party in the same room as her honeymoon. Betsel is equally good as a man more interested in business (and his thin, young secretary, played effectively by Donna Christensen). We chuckle when we see this husband and wife are on different wave lengths - laugh when they discuss the possibility of his affair - and are filled with compassion when we learn it's true, and wonder if they can work things out. About the only thing that would improve their scene are a few more knowing looks and gestures typical of couples who have been married for some time.

THE SECOND SCENE is about a famous Hollywood producer (married three times) who invites his old high-school girlfriend up for a drink and a chat. Rob Rehn is perfectly devilish as a smooth-talking seducer. Amy Van Buhler as the old girlfriend is the picture of innocence. And nervousness. She has a husband and three kids back in Tenafly, N.J. She just can't seem to resist one more

Glass art has master's touch

special writer

The current show at the Habatat Gallery showcases the striking and diverse works of glass artists Dale Chihuly and Robin Grebe.

Chihuly, a legend in the contemporary art glass movement for more than 20 years, is having his eighth exhibition at Habatat.

The gallery, while introducing his latest series, the Macchia Pheasants, is actually showing a mini-retrospective of Chihuly's work. He is a master at capturing the sensual, tactile, brilliant color qualities of blown glass.

FBCHIHULY WORKS in a series, approaching the same subject Blanket Cylinder series, beginning around 1974, was inspired by Navajo Indian weavings.

In these, he uses individual glass threads calligraphically to express gesture, motion and direction, contrasting with the neutral and stable cylinder that serves as a base.

The Pilchuk Basket Series (1977) was inspired by visions of Indian baskets piled inside each other, dented and misshapen. The series is marked by the use of subtle color and simple, swelling forms.

When he started grouping them together, five or six smaller ones within a larger form, the work developed an interactive aspect, permitting the viewer to assemble and reassemble the individual elements as desired.

CHIHULY BEGAN using ribbed molds to give his forms more strength and enable him to work with thinner glass. The work is reminiscent of sea life — wonderful new shapes with a delicate arouses tactile curiosity.

side. A bright edging complements the inside color. The result is daring, delicate and sensous.

The Persian Series (1987) is marked by color striation and more radical forms - squiggly, with knobs, greater transparency, more intense colors, spiny edges.

The most striking piece in this show is one of the Persian Series, called "Untitled." It is an enormous, floating wall sculpture of brilliant, whirling, elliptical forms. Lighting and installation are included in the $75,000 price tag. Viewers are very taken with this piece, craning to figure out the lighting sources.

The Venetian Series (1988) shows heavier forms and strong baroque Italian influence, with rope-like in many different ways. The Indian squiggles cascading down the > ROBIN GREBE, in contrast to Chihuly, is an East Coast artist in her 30s, having her first exhibition at Habatat. Her imagery of human form invites speculation, but gives enough clues for interpretation.

Grebe uses a pate de verre (glass paste) technique in which she makes a mold, paints the inside of the mold with the paste, then fires it. The texture of the finished piece results from texture applied to the interior before casting.

She focuses on themes of decline, change and regeneration. We see a recurring Botticelli influence, with hands covering part of the body.

Grebe's work is marked by the use of other materials - wood, paper, metal - in conjunction with glass. Most works consist of several elements, including those of other materials. While her sculpture lacks the sensual appeal of Chihuly's, she uses imagery that HABATAT GALLERY owner Ferdnand Hampson realized a long-time fantasy in this exhibition showcasing a large art glass sculpture floating on water.

A Chihuly work in the Macchia Series, displayed in the bubbling, black marble fountain of the Triatria lobby, appears to be suspended in air. Grab your hat and go see it before the show ends Saturday, color where the outside color is 32255 Northwestern, Farmington

Since the mid-1970s, Dale Chihuly has been a leading figure in using glass as an art form. He likes to develop shapes within shapes with an organic reference point.

Colonial craftsman

By Ariene Funke special writer

ICHAEL Camp of Plymouth grew up with family members who loved and collected 18th century American furniture.

When Camp decided to convert his cabinetmaking hobby into a full-time profession, it seemed perfectly natural to specialize in pieces from that colonial era.

Now, 10 years later, Camp's are listed. hand-crafted replicas of furniture from the early to mid-1700s are sold in selected furniture stores in 14 states and by mail order.

TO CELEBRATE his 10th anniversary, Camp has designed a simple yet elegant reproduction of an 18th century Connecticut secre-

It will be available in cherry or tiger maple at a cost of $8,500. This limited edition piece has an order deadline of early June.

'We wanted to do something important and dramatic," the 31year-old Camp said during a recent interview in his Plymouth work-

"It follows perfectly in line with what we have been trying to accomplish for the past 10 years."

CAMP'S PHILOSOPHY is to build and sell attractive, authentic and functional period pieces.

He specializes in the popular Queen Anne and Chippendale styles that predominated in colonial Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

'We hand-do everything." Camp said. "We use no man-made materials. One person builds, from start to finish. That's one of the significant ways we keep a handle on quality."

SIMPLICITY, GRACEFULNESS and elegance are the hallmarks of 18th century American furniture. Adornments, where used, are understated.

The woods that were frequently used were cherry, maple and tiger maple, which is maple with a subtle patterned effect.

"That period, and those two styles are considered the most important American furniture produced," Camp said. "The periods overlapped and a lot of work was

High demand and limited quantities push original pieces beyond the reach of most people, according to

"WHEN YOUR TASTE elevates to the point where you like the very best, there is no availability, Camp said.

Camp's brochures illustrate a wide selection of tea tables, dinner tables, hutches, armchairs, lowboy and highboy chests and accent pieces. More than two dozen items

Prices range from for a decorative bird to $3,600 for a Connecticut highboy.

The commemorative Connecticut secretary, which will have drawers, a pull-down writing surface and storage cubbyholes, has a rich honey color.

The pieces will be numbered in order of production. It will be sent with a blueprint, letter of authentication containing date built and name of cabinetmaker, and a numbered brass nameplate.

"My sincere hope is for people to have these things forever," Camp

CAMP IS a self-taught cabinetmaker. He has learned about period furniture from his parents, friends and other family members who love the colonial American Camp also collects reproductions. His tastes run to lighting devices, textiles and pottery.

"Because all that stuff goes together," he said.

Camp bases his designs on research and personal knowledge of the period. Sometimes he will copy a private collection. His workshop is at Amelia and

Farmer streets in Plymouth. He employs two other cabinet-makers, Dave Kalanik of Redford and Mike Favors of Livonia. QUITE FRANKLY, THERE aren't a lot of people teaching this work," Camp said. "There is no one that I know of." Camp uses cherry, maple and tiger maple, with pine as a second-ary wood. Joints and dovetails are hand-done. Hardware is of solid brass. All carving is done by hand.

To retain authenticity, Camp finishes the pieces with a durable milk paint, which combines water, CAMP'S LINE is advertised in several early American lifes and decorating magazines.

He publishes a sales brochure, which may be obtained for $3, but furniture is very difficult to sell mail order because the photos can't do justice," according to Camp. He offsets this obstacle by taking by wholesaling through selected stores in 14 states.

Most are clustered in New England, where interest in the colonial furniture is strong.

NO LOCAL stores carry Camp's pieces. In Michigan, potential customers may inquire at Camp's workshop, or visit his showroom at Amelia and Main in downtown Plymouth.

The showroom, which sells reproductions of period furniture and related accessories, is managed by Camp's mother, Rhonda

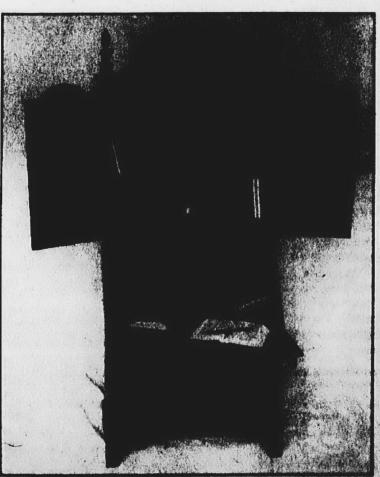

Camp of Farmington. Hours are noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Custom orders make up 40 percent of Camp's business. He recalls the Ann Arbor woman who had in-Cuipper a much larger original set. She hired Camp to build her nine more identical ones.

Camp especially enjoys doing commemorative pieces to celebrate anniversaries, weddings or other special occasions.

"I like doing that kind of work because it is special, more than just a piece of furniture for function," Camp said.

e're attracted to a sense of and light that large wisdown after, we've also consequed we might be petting too much of a good date. What advice can you give that takes a lot of natural day light too consideration, particularly as is will influence the interior planning and the color of furnishings?

A. If you have any say in the mat-ter, first try to establish the orientan of the house on its lot to take best advantage of the sun's radia-tion. Ideally, for this climate, the length of the house should be on an past-west axis, so that the broadest areas face north and south. What this does in winter is to allow the south wall maximum exposure to the sun; and in summer the minimum exposure for the east-west walls.

Even if you are unable to achieve this ideal alignment, there are other things you can take into considera-tion that will help you control the effects of a lot of natural sunlight. Depending upon the style of your home, plan on a roof overhang. Recognize that careful positioning of trees and landscaping will affect the quality of reflective light into the interior of your home.

Explore the variety of Thermopane windows, including the argon gas injected types as well as the film coatings to help reduce ultraviolet and infrared causes of fading and discoloration of interior furnishings.

For the brightest exposures, be aware that sheer curtains become the vehicle for extending light into the interior. Consider the use of various types of louvers, including horizontal or vertical blinds, depending upon the high or low angle of the sun, for the windows in question.

Although air conditioning will control the actual temperature, the quality of light from the different exposures will nonetheless influence the perception of warmness or coolness. How you respond to light from different exposures has a lot to do with your individual disposition.

Morning people, for example, love the clarity of the early sun. It's appropriate that they enjoy having their kitchen or bedroom with an eastern exposure, decorated with clear, fairly bright colors. There are those who live and work most comfortably in the environment of cool, even light that the northern exposure offers. For these who find this light too cool, brighter, lighter colors should be used as compensation.

The western exposure, the direction of the setting sun with its subdued light, is best served by clear and balanced color harmonies for those who enjoy the twilight zone. Finally, the southern exposure, which receives considerable everall radiation and light, can best accommodate the widest range of colors, both bright or grayed, dark or light, cool or warm, with perhaps a greater emphasis on the cooler shades. It's the exposure for those who enjoy It's the exposure for those who enjoy activity as in a family room.

For each exposure, there's considerable leeway in the use of favorite

Q. We want to transform our entire attle into usable, living space, but the slant of the roof and the position of the windows low to the floor are offering us problems. Large, exposed wood beams, spaced quite far apart, emphasize the slant. We don't know whether we should treat this as if it was a ceiling, or consider it a part of the short, vertical wall where the windows are located? What part can color play in this situation?

A. I would recommend incorporating as much soft blue or blue greens as possible for all of the wall surfaces because these colors psychologically and optically convey a sense of distance and space. If you are thinking of using wallpaper, choose a subtle all-over or vertical pattern to optically 'straighten out' the angle of the roof.

Paint the wood beams white, or the lightest background color of the wallpaper pattern. Then install a brass ceiling fan with light fixtures to help distract from the low-positioned windows. Anchor the angled space and the color scheme with a patterned rug in deep reds of cinnamon and apricot colors.

Make sure your furniture is light in scale and neutral in color. Accent the entire scheme with a touch of lemon yellow in accent pillows or

Italians honor Livonian

A Livonia resident, Sergio Nascimbeni, will be one of two Italian-Americans to be honored at the Italian Study of Troy's 16th annual Festa Italiana at 5 p.m. Sunday, April 1 in the San Marino Club, Troy.

Nascimbeni will share the spotlight with Troy city councilman Anthony "Tony" Pallotta. Both men were selected for their involvement in civic and charitable projects and for reflecting the traditional values of their Italian American heritage. Born in Castions di Strada (Udine) in the region of Friuli in northern Italy, Nascimbeni is a technician with the Ford Motor Co. (engine plant), founder of Foglar Furlan of Michigan and active in numerous social service organizations serving immigrant families. He was recently appointed corConsul of Detroit to represent western Wayne County. He and his wife Teresa have two children.

Featured at the gala Italian ban-quet will be the dance music of the Blue Genes and Napoli, strolling musicians from Windsor. There will also be Italian folk dancing performed by the Ballerini Dancers, a dance group sponsored by the Italian Study Group of Troy.

Tickets for the annual event are available at $25 and may be obtained by calling Tina Silverio at 585-5246 or by mailing a check payable to the Italian Study Group of Troy in care of Lisa Polsinelli, 5123 Southlawn, Sterling Heights 48310,

Plodding through goofiness

Two area authors pled through goofiness to reach some reasonably lofty heights in their latest publications.

Oak Park poet Jack Zucker begins his volume, "From Manhattan," with a paean to rustic America entitlied "Adams Hardware." The poem establishes one of the major themes: that of transition through New York. In it we see Eu-ropeans becoming New Yorkers and New York-ers venturing out into the American Heartland.

But in "Adams Hardware" Zucker's effort to attach a sense of importance to this transition isn't convincing. He begins with a vivid description of the Ohio countryside and of a hardware store found there. The poem falters when its narrator, recently from Manhattan and awed by the simple integrity of it all, enters the store and greets an old man inside.

Before he can say anything. I fall at his stained work shoes and kiss them without surrender.

Sorry, but that's corny. It's also patronizing to Midwesterners and the working class.

Zucker does better in "Coulinan," a description of an old, dying and particularly principled Irish rebel whose convictions have remained strong, in spite of their diminished relevance, in

In the midst of boiling cabbage, priests muttering in the adjoining room. Coulinan refused last sacrament. cursed Pope Pius and the British with his white and dying tongue.

Thomas Wiloch, a writer from Plymouth, offers a collection of tales originally attributed to Lord Shantih, a figure said to appear in ancient Eastern mythology.

Because Wiloch has adapted traditional folk tales, it's not clear whether he deserves credit as creator or as interpreter for his "Tales of Lord Shantih." Either way, the collection, in which woodblock illustrations by David Nikias are given almost as much prominence as the text, generally is thought provoking.

'Save Our Planet' author here

Author Diane MacEachern will be signing her new book, "Save Our Planet: 750 Everyday Ways You Can Help Clean Up the Earth," at Borders Book Shop in the Novi Town Center 7-9 p.m. Friday, March 23. MacEachern is president of Vanguard Communications, a national communications company based in Washington, D.C., which specializes in environmental issues. In "Save Our Planet" MacEachern focuses on ways everyone can help clean up the environment. For those planning Earth Day activities (April 22), MacEachern's book can serve as a useful guide.

"Save Our Planet" shows how the problems we hear about in the news overflowing landfills, global warming, acid raid - affect our everyday lives. MacEachern goes on to explain hundreds of simple lifestyle changes that will make a big difference to the environment.

When it comes to the environment, MacEachern practices what she preaches. In the 1970s she led a national campaign to send 40,000 empty beverage containers to President arter to support national deposit legislation. As director of comm cations for the Sierra Club, she helped strengthen the Superfund (to fight toxic waste) and promoted legislation to control acid rain.

Originally from Michigan, MacEachern has a master of science degree in natural resources from the University of Michigan. She now lives outside Washington in a solar house she helped design and build.

Novi Town Center is off Novi Road, just south of I-96.

Wide open living spaces a new home option

By Doug Funke staff writer

Some people put a big premium on their own space

Others like to keep an eye on what's happening and to be part of Architects and builders appeal to that second group of buyers by providing a housing option without traditional room divisions in common living areas. The open look usually includes higher ceilings.

Thomas Kurmas, a Birmingham architect, and Mark Farber and Stuart Cykiert, partners in Lenwal Building Co. of Farmington Hills, offer a colonial in which a great room, kitchen and dining room merge together with no separation walls.

That living space includes some 425 square feet, but seems larger.

"You stand here and you feel like you're in one big room," Kurmas said. "The kitchen, living (family) room and dining room is where the family spends most of its time."

THE OPEN LOOK is noticeable as soon as you step in the front door. Much of the house - upstairs landing, living room and the kitchen/dining room/great room — is visible from the entrance foyer.

John Minor bought that style house in Canton's Lexington Square Subdivision.

"In our last home we had a formal dining room. Typically, you don't use it unless for special occasions. The other house, while it had extra room, it was non-functional," Minor said.

MINOR HAS an exercise bike and entertainment center in his great room, a couple of chairs around the kitchen counter for eating on the run, a table in the dining portion of the common area for normal family get-togethers and a formal dining set in the living room for that rare special occasion.

Its openness specifically attracted him to the floor plan, Minor said.

"There's more they can do with their house," Farber said.

C.C. Building Co., owned by Walter Cyklert, Stuart's father, offers The Great Room Ranch in Canton's Greenbrook Village.

THE COMMON kitchen/d.ning room, 230 square feet, opens directly into a large living room, about 325 square feet.

What draws customers?

"Brightness, the very well-lit rooms, no wasted hall space," said Philip O'Niel, sales agent for C.C. Building

"The floor plan movement goes beautifully. In this house, the great room and huge kitchen is what people beg for."

Marc Ruben, president of the fledgling Muirfield Homes Ltd. of West Bloomfield, presents an open look in his Muirfield model. He's building in Canton's River Park Sub-

"If we're going to compete with large builders, we had to come in with something different," he said.

THE KITCHEN/DINING room, 430 square feet, opens into a great room of 220 square feet. The upstairs, with two bedrooms and a bath, overlooks the great room.

Another interesting aspect of the model - the master bedroom suite is on the first floor, the other two bedrooms upstairs.

The Ivanhoe Building Co. of West room suite downstairs, two bedrooms up and an open, common living area in the Mission Springs subdivision in that community.

More buyers who preferred traditional floor plans with walls separating the dining room, kitchen and living room have come around to the open look in the past seven to eight years, said Gary Shapiro, Ivanhoe

Especially if there's a good view at the rear of the house, which presents the opportunity to use more glass for emphasis.

"WE HAVE a great room, dining room and sitting room in the kitchen along the back three-quarters of the house open into one space," Shapiro

The open look also provides for another possibility.

"It makes the staircase an amenity," Shapiro said. "Handrails are a orating."

As usual, location, size and amenities will determine the price of a specific house with an open floor

The three houses in Canton range from 1,505 to 1,725 square feet and from $115,900 to $119,900. Shapiro's 2,700-square-foot model in West Bloomfield is priced at $248,000.

Window treatments can downplay house flaws

By Reader's Digect AP Newsfeatures

Proper window treatments can downplay your home's shortcomings and make the most of its advantag-

Here are suggestions for making the best use of curtains, draperies, blinds, shades and shutters.

 Consider how your home looks from the outside. For a harmonious appearance, all windows seen from the same angle should appear similar in style and color.

• The best decorated window is seldom the most decorated one. Remember, the primary function of a window is to admit light and air.

• When a window provides a beautiful view, don't hide it with heavy draperies or undercurtains. Hang simple draperies in quiet colors and think of the window as framing the view like a picture.

e In planning a window treat-ment, consider the kind of light the room gets. If the window faces north, aim to admit as much light as possible. If it faces south or west, you may want to cut the amount of sun the room receives.

Draperies or Curtains?

How do draperies differ from curtains? Generally, draperies are made of heavier fabric, are lined, and are hung from hooks. Curtains are usually made of a lightweight fabric, are unlined, and have a casing or pocket for a rod.

An expanse of draperies and undercurtains can compensate for skimpy moldings and awkwardly lo-cated or oddly shaped windows by tying a whole wall area together. placed windows, on the other often need little more than

Solutions for Problem Windows

· When you need the light but the view outside is dreary, suspend plants from the ceiling in front of the window. Or stretch glass shelves across the window and show off a collection of glasses or old bottles through which the light can shine.

• When French doors or casement windows open into a room, use extra-wide drapery rods so you can draw the draperies clear at each side before opening the doors or windows. Or place shades well above the frames so the doors or windows can open freely when the shade is rolled

• If two small windows on one wall are relatively close together, treat them as a single unit by spanning them with one set of Venetian blinds or a single window shade.

• To minimise a bulky air conditioner in the window, hang two sets of louvered shutters. Put the upper set over the window with the lower set over the air conditioner. To admit cooled air, fold the lower shutters open or adjust their louvers.

• Get the most from the small high windows often found in base-ments by using miniblinds or trans-lucent window shades that can be raised by day and closed at night.

• Extend a small, high window with a two-tier cafe curtain whose lower tier hangs below the win-dowsill. Pull back the upper curtain to admit light and air.

Aluminum wiring components pose potential fire hazard installing new copper-wired fixtures in existing circuits. A friend warned us that connecting copper to aluminum wiring could create a fire hazard.

Aluminum wiring is a potential fire bazard. Between 1965 and 1973 about 1.5 million homes were wired with aluminum, which at the time was approved by the National Elec-trical Code. Later it was found that dangerous overheating in 15 and 20 amp circuits, at some connections between aluminum wires and outlets, switches, fixtures and appliances resulted in fires.

Correcting the problem does not require rewiring the house. You can replace switches and outlet receptacles that are unmarked, or marked AL-CU, with devices that are marked CO-ALR. Or, you can use ex-
