Bombing of Iraq impresses Vietnam vets

By Diane Gale staff writer

As the world watched the results of the precision bombing in Iraq, Vietnam pilots remembered a war when things weren't as accurate and as popular.

Area Vietnam veterans said a new generation is experiencing the atrocities of war, but said the troops are better equipped to fight than they

While pilots in the Persian Gulf are pinpointing their targets, pilots in the Vietnam War dropped bombs and hoped they would come in the area of their aim.

"IT'S THE DIFFERENCE between using a hand calculator and using today's computers," said Bob White, a Plymouth Township resident, who piloted an A-7 attack plane in Vietnam.

"It would be like flying in a video game, it would be very accurate and three dimensional," White said. "We had two dimensional pictures and no depth like they have today."

Pilots in Vietnam depended on photos and scouters who reported back what they saw. Today computer equipment eliminates the guess-

And, he said, the political climate is much better for the troops in the Persian Gulf, while American soldiers in Vietnam were restricted from carrying out certain missions.

"It (Vietnam) was a terribly political war," White said. "Hopefully they can run their missions the way that they can plan them to be most efficient. When someone in Washington, D.C., decides your targets it makes it difficult.

"One of the things that concerns me is that the media keeps saying it's just the United States. This is a United Nations event and not just the United States," he said. "It's a global peace-keeping force."

A VIETNAM veteran from Canton, who asked not to be named, said he served on a couple of bombing runs in North Vietnam.

"We didn't have the opportunity to pinpoint our bombs," he said. "We had a target, but we pretty much blew up the area to hit the target."

The Canton resident said he was a "kid" when he served in Vietnam. "I went along with what I thought was right at the time. I didn't think that one day I wouldn't want to publicize talking about it."

When we bombed North Vietnam and killed civilians, we had the whole world on our necks saying that we were terrorists.

George Klepack, a Plymouth Township resident, was a crewman on a SH-3 Delta helicopter in Viet-nam. His primary mission was searching for downed pilots.

He said he was pleased to hear President George Bush say military personnel won't go into Iraq, "with one hand tied behind their back" like they did in Vietnam.

You see it's necessary, not from a monetary standpoint, but for what was done to the Kuwaitis. For a lot of guys who went to Vietnam it wasn't as clear as it should have been, and there was lot more protesting at home.

Local students divided over draft

By M.B. Dillon staff writer

It was finals week at Plymouth-Canton and Salem High Schools, but the pall over students was caused by something much gloomier than exams alone could create. The overriding concern of students was the outbreak of war in the Middle East.

AS THE SCHOOL DAY ended buses - some of them with yellow ribbons tied to their sideview mirrors — filed into the parking lots. As they headed home, students shared their thoughts about the possibility of being drafted.

Jason Weller would oppose a draft. "I'll be 18 in 11 months, and I just wouldn't want it. It'd be too scary to go."

To the window of her car, Canton senior Khristina Kozuch was affixing a bumper sticker that read, 'Prayer is power, pray for peace."

'Personally, I don't think there's really a need for a draft. But if there was a draft, I would go," said Patrick Stanton, a junior who plays

Ice fest a success despite war

Talking to his friends, one young man at the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular summed it up well: "The sky is blue; there's not a cloud in the sky; we're looking at ice sculptures and the world is at war. It's kind of weird."

If the minds of ice festival-goers were preoccupied with international events, so too were those of professional ice sculptors, at work with chain saws and chisels in The Gathering Saturday morning.

The competition was multi-national, with ice artists hailing from the Soviet Union, Japan, Canada and throughout the United States for a trip to the Moscow International Festival Feb. 4-11.

Among them were full-time ice sculptors Steve Rose and Joe Ring of Ice Effects in Boston, Mass. As Rose held an opened book for Ring, Ring eyed a drawing and sketched. Slowly, a block of ice became "A Lady in 'My son won first place with his ballet dancer carving last night," said a proud Nabarro in broken English. "He works in the cold kitchen at the Hotel Admiral.'

Commission expected to make airport decision

The Mettetal Airport issue gets another public airing tonight, as Plymouth city commissioners are to decide whether to join Plymouth Township in creating a governing board to buy and run the Canton air-

In December most commissioners said they'd likely vote to form that governing board, saying the airport was a valuable public asset.

Dec. 17 - several suggested more study - commissioners voted to delay a final vote until today.

In a report prepared in response to lingering questions about the agreement to form an airport governing board, City Manager Gordon Jaeger said, "Because the airport would have no debt for property acquisition, it would immediately net approximately $225,000 per year.

Students remember King as world goes to war

staff writer

As the world went to war, children in schools throughout the Plymouth-Canton district commemorated Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday with poems, illustrations, essays and announcements dedicated to peace and

Activities began on Jan. 15, King's birthday, and are continuing this Canton High School principal Thomas MacKenzie took time out during finals week to speak to the student body about King's life "and the things he stood for in relationships - peace, justice and equal rights.

"I RELATED it to the current world situation in the Persian Gulf and expressed the hope that world leaders would remember the vision of Dr. Martin Luther King," Mack-MacKenzie asked everyone in the school, "if they felt comfortable, to join hands wherever they were and observe a moment of silence.

"Everything was totally quiet for a minute. Teachers told me kids put their heads down and held hands. I thanked them and asked them to care about one another and to remember Dr. King's goals and values in their lives. And I wished them good luck on their exams."

SALEM HIGH SCHOOL principal Gerald Ostoin asked school mayor Nicholas Dazer to give an address.

His reading discussed "Dr. King's helping to desegregate many of the Southern states; the major roles he played in securing voting rights for blacks; his march on Washington, D.C., in 1963; his helping to persuade Congress to pass the Civil Rights Bill and the Nobel Prize he won in 1964," Dazer said.

Dazer, a junior, learned much about King from his parents, he said. "They were pretty interested in civil rights; they lived in Detroit so it was kind of hands on for them," he

"Around my house he is revered a lot. I just cannot help but think that anyone who could be like him couldn't do too bad in this world."

GALLIMORE ELEMENTARY first grader Patrick Meyn wrote about King and asked to read it to his fellow students on the public address system, said Joyce Deren, principal.

"It was Martin Luther King's birthday on Tuesday," he wrote. "He tried to change the laws so that black people and white people could be friends. He changed the laws so that black people could sit in the front of the bus and eat in restaurants. Because of what he did we have a special holiday for him."

Brian George, a fifth grader at Bird Elementary, also addressed his fellow students on the P.A.

"Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was a great man," Brian said. "He believed everyone should be treated fairly. He worked very hard to change our country so that all people would be treated equally. Dr. King believed these changes should be made peacefully without violence."

NANCY LARSON teaches first grade at Eriksson Elementary.

The children drew a bust of themselves and filled in a comic cloud containing the words, "I have a dream for our world and it is that ' Larson said.

"I have a dream for our world and it is to love one another," Meridith Sims wrote.

"I have a dream for our world and it is that you should not fight," James Toth said. "I have a dream for our world that people don't get into war." Dawn Alsobrooks said. "I care about others," Ryan Morse time; not being able to play baseball with white children and not being able to buy shoes at the store he really wants, Myers said. 'Little Boy King" also deals with King's involvement with his father and grandmother, and the inspira-

Bostic, who came to the festival with her two daughters and three of their young friends, was impressed with what she saw Friday afternoon.

"Oh, it's great. It's so unique." The children also liked what they saw.

"I like it because I think that they look really pretty," said Michelle Bostic, 7, a second grader at Metropolitan Junior Academy in Plymouth. She particularly liked a sculpture of a toothbrush and toothpaste.

Her friend Janelle White, 8, was impressed with a swan sculpture she saw in Plymouth's Kellogg Park.

"I like it because it's made out of ice," said Janelle, also a second grader at Metropolitan Junior Academy. Jeanne Bostic has been to a number of earlier ice festivals in Plymouth. This is the ninth consecutive year the event has been held.

"I used to bring my daughters when they were little babies."

SHE AND OTHER festival visitors were concerned about the outbreak of war in the Middle East but didn't cancel their plans. "We all wish that there's peace over there, but we can't stop living our daily lives." Events such as the ice festival help make people happy, Bostic said.

Joyce Foust of Plymouth has also been to a number of earlier ice festivals in Plymouth.

"It makes a fun weekend. I think it's very interesting," she said. "It isn't raining, thank heavens.

She and her husband, Fred, came to this year's event with friends Jack and Barbara Otto of Glen Arbor, Mich., in the northern Lower Peninsula.

"I'm really very interested in it," Barbara Otto said. She'd seen already-completed ice carvings at hotels, but hadn't seen the actual work done until this past week-

"I love watching them do it," she said. Jack Otto also liked what he saw during his first visit to a Plymouth ice festival.

"Outstanding and I'm looking forward to more," he said.

The Fousts and Ottos had heard a great deal about the Middle East situation

"We saw a lot of television." The situation's grim,

Joyce Foust said. Fred Foust had work to do during the festival. He and fellow members of the Plymouth Kiwanis Club were busy selling popcorn from the antique popcorn wagon they've restored.

PROCEEDS SUPPORT various club programs in the community, and there were plenty of people lining up at the popcorn wagon on Penniman.

"People eat it all the time," he said. Russ Webster, owner of the Penniman Deli in downtown Plymouth, also had some hungry and thirsty people show up. Few were looking for meals, however. 'Hot chocolate, hot coffee. You get a little bit of extra," Webster said. He saw some of the festival events but was busy working much of the time Webster heard some customers talking about the tense situation in the Middle East.

"It's on everyone's mind." Even so, many people came to the ice festival to see the sights. "They're just out looking around," Webster said. This year's festival began Wednesday and continues vous moments for festival organizers. They covered the sculptures with plastic, helping to preserve their distinctive shapes. Temperatures dropped and the rain stopped, helping to boost attenet Union. The festival was scheduled for six days this year, a shorter length of time than in previous years. Toney noticed attendance was down a bit as of Friday afternoon, but was optimistic many more visitors would show up Friday evening, Saturday and Sunday. She and other staffers at the chamber of commerce fielded a number of calls from people interested in coming to the Ice Sculpture Spectacular. 'We can say 'Come on out, everything is beautiful.' The decision to cover sculptures with heavy plastic helped a great deal, she said.

The chamber of commerce doesn't sponsor the ice festival but helps to support it, answering phone calls and handling walk-in visitors, she said. Toney would like to see the annual event continue

"Oh my goodness, of course. Absolutely, no doubt about it." The festival helps to attract people to Plymouth and to promote the community, she said.

About 8:45 a.m., Myers was informed on his radio about a redhaired male suspect, on foot, who was being pursued on Ann Arbor Trail east of Mill by city and township police on an outside warrant.

Commission to vote on joint fire, police services

By Kevin Brown staff writer

Talk of combining police, fire and emergency medical services in Plymouth and Plymouth Township is getting more serious.

Plymouth city commissioners are scheduled to vote today on whether to authorize the city manager to begin negotiating joint services with the township.

The same issue is scheduled to go before township trustees Jan. 22. BACKERS OF joint services say it could trim costs to run police and fire operations in the city and township, and possibly result in better service.

Of areas where money could be saved by combining these services, "capital equipment is the most obvi-ous thing," said township Supervisor Maurice Breen

"It's too early to tell (if joint police and fire operations would save money)," City Manager Gordon Jaeger said. "We have to determine the level of service that's needed.

"I think the benefits would come out of our discussions. One of the benefits would be cooperation."

Both city and township officials have said joint police and fire operations could lead to cooperation in other areas that would benefit residents throughout the community.

operations, Jaeger said, "I wouldn't predict anything like that," as negotiations have yet to start. Should it be determined to reduce staff, layoffs could be avoided by not replacing retirees, Breen said.

Equipment savings is "one of the things you could analyze," Jaeger said. "You have to start by reviewing what you have."

ASKED IF there are drawbacks to combining police and fire, Breen said, "There are a number of people who don't want to deal with the other community. We ran into that before when we ran joint services back in the early '80s (1982-85).

"I'm not sure how much support there is (for combining services). That could be measured by (township) trustees and city commission-

No timetable for combining services has been discussed yet, both Breen and Jaeger said.

Should both governing boards OK negotiations, "We'll meet as often as practicable," Breen said. "The idea would be to make some real prog-

Of any police and fire services that could be combined this year, combined dispatch operations is one possibility, Breen said.

"We want to get the troops home," said Lisa Klieger, a 1990 graduate of Plymouth High School. "We'll protest as long as it takes."

Klieger was one of an estimated 1,000 protesters who gathered at the McNamara Federal Building at Cass and Michigan about 4:30 p.m. Thursday. After about 40 minutes of speeches, chanting and marching, the protesters paraded along Michigan Avenue to Woodward en route to the Central Methodist Church less than a mile away.

"We're not here to burn flags or trash the city," Al Fishman told the demonstrators over a public address system. "We're here to protest the

Fishman, a Detroiter who also protested the Vietnam War, is a spokesperson for the Committee for a Peaceful Resolution to the Gulf Crisis which has an office in Fern-

The committee is a coalition of numerous antiwar groups. Fishman said it has nearly 17,000 members in metro Detroit, including about 11,000 in Oakland County.

"WE WANT TO reawaken the conscience of America," Fishman said. We have no shame for our tears or for our anger.

Marsha Cohen of Farmington Hills agreed. "I don't like this feeling of helplessness about what's happening in the gulf," said Cohen, who believes that demonstrations she and others staged nearly two decades ago helped end the Vietnam War.

"This way I feel like I'm doing something," stated Cohen, who said she left antiwar phamphlets at Farmington Harrison High School, hoping students would attend the ral-

Kristine Calvin, a 1989 graduate of Troy High School, said the protest was against President Bush and the war, but not against the military personnel fighting it. "We support our troops," she said, "we don't want Donna Hommes, an Oakland Com-munity College student living in Troy, agreed. President Bush "was . too soon with the planes.'

Ari Schwartz of Birmingham was also critical of Bush. "Bush talks about a new world order," he said. "We say it should begin with peace.

"Instead of waging war, the U.S. should be putting its resources into housing for the homeless, or better education." Schwartz said. "How can we telf the world how to live when we have so many problems?'

ONE PROTESTER insisted George Bush is a war criminal. "Bush should be put on trial for war crimes," said Richard Feldman of Huntington Woods. Feldman said he is a member of the bargaining committee at UAW Local 900 at the General Motors truck plant in Warren. Some of the chants had a familiar ring. One, for example, was, "Hell no, we won't go. We won't kill for Amoco."

The Amoco reference, of course, relates to the protesters' insistance the root cause of the war is oil. Hostilities, they assert, needlessly spill blood for oil.

Another chant offered a contemporary twist. "George Bush read our lips," it went. "Bring back the guns and ships."

Across Michigan Avenue, in front of the Michigan Bell Telephone building, a handfull of counter demonstrators waved an American flag as if to taunt antiwar protesters.

"Get out of the country, you traitors," yelled Donald Lobsinger, a Detroiter well-known for his antiprotestor and anti-communist views. "If somebody trys to burn this,"

Lobsinger said, pointing to the American flag waving briskly, "there'll be SERIOUS trouble."

One demonstrator tried to take the flag, but was taken away by police who had at least four cars separating the two groups.

Temperatures hovered near the 30 degree mark as the protesters started marching from the federal building toward the church. Temperatures seemed much colder because of brisk winds at times gusting at 17 miles per hour, according to the U.S.

"I was in the middle of the group," said May Davidson, a protester from West Bloomfield. "And I couldn't see the beginning of the march . . . or

Her husband, Morris, did not march, but was waiting at the church to do crisis counseling. "My job was to help people who might have been traumatized by the war,"- said Davidson, a psychologist. "As it turned out, I didn't counsel anyone."

DAVIDSON SAID he believes the media has not objectively reported the depth of antiwar sentiment.

'The church was jammed," he said. But there are a lot more people against the war who haven't begun

Davidson also insists the media has not clearly reported how many protesters - especially those downtown Thursday - are against the war while supporting the troops. "Our disagreement is with Bush and his policies, not the troops," he said.

Kathy Derderian of West Bloomfield said she is upset equally with Bush and Saddam Hussein, president of Iraq. "Because these two presidents are too stubborn to negotiate, people are dying," she said.

Danielle Walquist, a 1989 graduate of Plymouth High School, shook her head at what she considered the futility of war. "Any war is inexcusable," she said, "especially this one. It doesn't make any sense.

Carl DeLano was convicted of corruption charges. So were a former lieutenant governor, 11 other senators, 11 representatives - 18 Democrats and five Republicans. So were scores of prosecutors, police offi-cials and lobbyists — 62 convictions

The case exploded 46 years ago last week - Jan. 10, 1945 - when Sen. Warren G. Hooper, R-Albion, was assassinated, gangland style. On his way back from Lansing, Hooper's green Mercury was forced off M-99 in rural Jackson County.

The tale is told in "Three Bullets Sealed His Lips" by Bruce A. Rubenstein and Lawrence E. Ziewacz (MSU Press, 1987). It happened as Hooper, who had admitted taking money, was ready to sing to a grand

FOR TWO decades, say the authors, rumors had swept Lansing of legislators accepting money and gifts for their votes on "sausage manufacturing, commercial fishing, barber and beautician regulation, naturopathy, chain banking, taxation, kerosene inspection, legalizing dog racing and slot machines, horse racing, small loan company interest rates, the manufacture of oleomargarine and the size of bakery bread

I bring up this sordid chapter not to dishonor my colleague's memory or because of the anniversary, but because of the argument going on in Lansing today:

"The Pay Raise!"

HOOPER, THE authors tell us, sold his gasoline station when elected to the House in 1936. His legislative salary was $3 a day - when the Legislature was in session.

Hooper became chair of the House Public Health Committee. He also landed a job as executive secretary of the Michigan Association of Os-teopathic Physicians and Surgeons. Conflict of interest? Absolutely.

Elevated to the Senate in 1944,

A newsman told the authors of the 1943 incident when former Gov. Fred Green re-visited the legislative halls and looked at group portraits of the lawmakers. "Fine pictures," said a reporter. Replied Green: "Yes, sir. There's one of the finest legislatures money can buy.

Green didn't smile when he said it. I guess it wasn't a joke.

Yeah, sure, the timing is dreadful a recession, $1 billion in revenue shortfalls, 8,000 state employees facing layoff.

Yeah, sure, I think the Legislature ought to turn down at least part of the increase.

But I wouldn't be too quick to curse the handful of lawmakers who defend the increase. I think, in particular, of Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville, who says he attends many meetings on public policy where he's the lowest-paid person in

If we're going to make a mistake, I would prefer to make it on the side of paying officials a bit too much rather than too little.

In the 1940s we saw one-sixth of the entire Legislature convicted. That was a pretty stiff price for keeping the budget low.

Desert Storm Fight against Irag is well justified

OR SOME reason, many of us look at current situations through the blur of the past. Some are comparing the war in Iraq to that in Vietnam 20 years ago. I don't think there's a comparison to make. That's why I think we're doing the right thing by

In the past year the world has changed more and for the better than it has in the past 40. It was only a year ago that the Berlin Wall came tumbling down and the Russians traded those old baggy suits for stylish Western clothing and started talking like Wall Street bankers.

And as the old Russian war bear headed for what seemed like a permanent hibernation, Saddam Hussein emerged.

Is he the new Hitler? Probably not, but he's the closest thing we've got as a new era emerges in the world. And to knock him off is the CRITICS OF the war and those demonstrating say that the economic sanctions should have been allowed to work. The anti-war demonstrators are chanting "no blood for oil."

The anti-war folks want us to believe that somehow the war is being fought for the oil companies. They want us to believe that Americans will be dying for the right of Exxon to do business. That's an issue, but one that's distorted

It's true that oil firms will benefit from a stable Middle East in which they can do business. But then again so would the entire world. When we talk about big oil it's easy to conjure up the image of a fat-cat capitalist. But there's also the Third World family dependent on cheap oil for

There is a new order in the world. It's called peace, prosperity and human rights. That's something the world has been searching for for years. And it's within our grasp.

HOWEVER, I find it ironic that it's the peace movement folks who are likely to hold us back. They are trapped in a Vietnam-era thinking that says war is an end to nothing and that all military people lie about everything. When the Vietman War was going on, they were right. That war was political. President John Kennedy tot us into it to deflect criticism that he was soft on communism, and it was continued by Johnson and Nix-

In a sense it wasn't really a war, just American guys stuck over in a country they knew little about, mostly fighting small engagements to prop up a corrupt government.

One of their missions was to convince the peasants that capitalism and the American style of life were better than communism. It was a fruitless task, and a fruitless war.

In Vietnam the military objectives were political.

BUT IN the war with Iraq we're bombing Baghdad. I'm glad. President George Bush has showed that this isn't going to be a political war like Vietnam or Korea. We're headed for the heart of the beast.

And from initial reports we're doing the bombing in the most humane way possible. We're not napalming little children, we're knocking out Saddam's nuclear and chemical warfare capabilities. We're making war on the war makers and their machines and not on the Iraqi peo-

As for the anti-war folks: Nice try, guys, but you're about 20 years too late. The sentiment is nice, but you're all wet. Get out of your Vietnam-era thinking and try to look at the new situation.

Vision could have kept us from war

HIS WAR should have been avoided.

How so? Well, let's start by recalling those fireside chats Jimmy Carter had with the nation shortly after taking office in Dressed in a warm sweater, Carter told the nation he had turned down the thermostat in the White House to save energy. He urged homeowners to do the same, and encouraged businesses to adopt similar

The reason: to cut the nation's dependence on foreign oil.

Of the masses of people who elected Ronald Reagan president nearly four years later, many said Carter was weak. To them, the image of Carter urging sacrifices, dressed in a sweater, was a laughable, wimpy

BUT I SAY Carter's vision was truly wise. We needed government leaders concerned about cutting our reliance on foreign oil, much of it from the turbulent Middle East.

Clearly, the message learned after the Arab oil embargo in 1973 should have been this: Develop gasahol or some other U.S.-made fuel for cars and other machines powered by petroleum. It would take time, but a concerted effort would work. After all, didn't we put a man on the moon?

And had that message been embraced by our leaders, they would have really been doing something to ensure our national security.

Imagine that - Jimmy Carter was more concerned with national security than Ronald Reagan.

BUT REAGAN'S message was more appealing to most. We're Americans, he said. We're great, we don't have to change a thing. And we're tired of people saying we have to change. Those people are wimps.

It was often said that Reagan had much appeal to youths. Popular stars Tom Cruise in "Top Gun" and Michael J. Fox in "Family Ties" played parts that reflected youths' backing of the values Reagan ex-

How ironic it is then, that many young people who backed Reagan's glory-view of America will likely die in a war needlessly joined by George Bush, his vice president.

"We have to stop Saddam Hussein because he's a madman," many say. But so was Idi Amin, Pol Pot and the rulers of South Africa who say blacks are second class citizens. And few, if any, have called for war against these men.

SO THIS war must be over oil. But would you send your son or daughter to the Middle East to die so I can have cheap gas?
Go ahead, call this a peacenik view. But before you call it wimpy, consider this: Wouldn't it have been more effective to send a few CIA 007-types to Iraq to off Hussein? A different Iraqi leader would likely have been easier to deal with in negotiations over Kuwait.

Instead, the most wise course our leaders could choose was to commit young men and women to war. And this one likely won't follow Reagan's John Wayne-like view of movie war. Look for poison gas and protracted, savage ground fighting. Thousands of young Americans could die before

Muscles can get workout

Nothin' says lovin' like somethin' from the oven - and when we find ourselves right smack dab in the throes of winter. spending an afternoon making homemade bread not only pleases the palate, it also fills the house with an aroma that signals warmth.

The manual labor involved strengthens the muscles as well as the mind.

Frustrations over credit card bills, the recession and the Middle East take a back seat, if only for a short time, while the hands feel the softness and pliability of the

The hour or so intended for rising can be spent making a homemade soup or just curling up with a good book.

Better yet, take the opportunity to stretch out on the sofa, envelop yourself in the cuddly afghan Aunt Reggie sent last Christmas and just close your eyes for an hour's worth of personal reflection and relaxation

All the while, the bread becomes more aromatic and full.

BREADMAKING IS being lifted to new heights.

A trip to virtually any grocery store unfolds a breadbasket full of wheats, ryes, sourdoughs, seven grains, oatmeal, bran and interestingly shaped baguettes. Even the baking section has reduced the amount of plain allpurpose flour and has expanded to include whole grains, regular and quick-rise yeasts and even an occasional jar of sourdough starter.

KITCHEN AID MIXERS are considered the Cuisinarts of the breadmaking group, but on this cold wintery day, the electrical wizard will remain in the cellar, leaving the hands and muscles to do the work.

All-purpose flour is the most widely used flour. It contains a special protein called gluten, the structure builder of bread.

When mixed with liquid and then kneaded, the gluten will stretch and give elasticity to the dough by trapping bubbles of gas formed by the yeast. Some flours, such as rye and whole wheat, lack sufficient gluten and should be used in combination with all-purpose flour. Self-rising flour, which already contains leavening and salt, is not recommended for yeast breads.

BUT WITH all due respect to the flour, it is the yeast that will transform a bowl of dough into a pillar of subtlety, lightness and great taste. Yeast is a live plant that releases a gas that makes the dough rise. Unfortunately, for the inexperienced breadmaker, it is also very finicky. Too much heat likes the yeast. Too much cold will stunt its growth.

Unless you have a temperate index finger like Momma, who can discern the temperature of water with simply a feel, an instant-read thermometer is a safe bet.

A FEW simple tips to remember for optimum results include the use of glass or darkened metal breadpans for well-browned crusts. Those shiny stainless pans will suffice, but the crust will be lighter and more

Also, the top of each pan should be level with or slightly above the middle of the oven for best baking results. Stagger the pans so they do not touch the sides of the oven or other pans. Probably the most important suggestion of all is to remember to remove the bread from the pans immediately and place on wire racks away from a draft to cool.

Of course, when the Janes Gang gets together to make bread, it seldom has an opportunity to cool.

As Momma did and still does, the loaf is marked with a sign of the cross before slicing and then broken by hand and dipped into a stick of butter that has been left out of the fridge to soften just for that occasion.

N 1990, ANASTASIOS "Tasso" Bozadzis of Farmington Hills realized a dream come true when, after thousands of hours of effort and some $24,000 in cost, he was awarded a coveted Grand Diplome from Le Cordon Bleu Ecole de Cuisine et de Patisserie in Paris, perhaps the most notable academy of cuisine in the

With wife Carol, he plans to make cuisine a full-time endeavor, launching an unusual business concept - an outlet for gourmet cuisine-to-go, named Tasso's Cuisine Nouvelle.

"I loved cooking and baking from a very young age. I can remember helping my mother fry potatoes when I was 6. I've spent 27 years as an engineer. I'm taking a different direction entirely. It's a very good change," Tasso said.

The business, Carol said, will not be your typical run-of-the-mill cuisine outlet. "It will be authentic gourmet," she said, envisioning Tom's roasted stuffed duck artfully reconstructed, life-sized rosettes of tomato or beet, and charlotte russe or cream gelatin molded with decorative fruits and lady

Each creation will be "decorated and presented, authentic displays of artistic food," Tasso said. Food also will be prepared with an eye toward health, in keeping with American preference. In recipes calling for cream or eggs, Tom normally halves amounts to appeal to the American palate.

"I ACTUALLY THOUGHT I knew everything. Midway through, I realized there is still more to learn," Tasso said of the five three-month courses he completed at the Cordon Bleu academy.

Studying 12 hours a day, six days a week, he mastered basic, intermediate and superior cuisine and basic and advanced patisserie in record time. He also studied

A cheer for Franco's Cafe: Italian food to remember

At a time when the opening of yet another Italian / restaurant could elicit a yawn, Giolando Franco has opened a place in Troy worth cheering about.

Franco's Cafe features wonderful spaghetti with meat sauce, terrific Sicilian treatments of such things as scrod or steak, excellent veal dishes and pizza that will spoil your taste for any other. It's good enough to make Franco's a regular haunt. In fact, the cafe would qualify as a great neighborhood gathering place if it weren't so difficult to establish a "neighborhood" along busy Rochester Road. In the corner of a strip center, the restaurant is small, tastefully decorated, friendly, and accommodating beyond a doubt. It's not unusual to see the chef whisk a curious guest into his tidy kitchen where he will talk endlessly about the proper way to take veal off the bone or how to make his favorite dessert - can-

JUST TASTING his food convinces you his enthusiasm is real. Franco's sauces have the body and flavor that suggest the freshest of ingredients and the extraordinary patience of a chef who is unwilling to hasten the cooking. Because the meat sauce isn't highly seasoned, the taste of fresh, ripe tomatoes shines through. The alfredo sauce tastes of butter, cream and cheese - not of

Likewise for soups. It seems that wherever we have had really superb soups, a memorable meal followed. That's true here. We've been at Franco's often enough to try two soups from the regular menu - the minestrone and the tortellini in broth, and two specials - a lobster bisque and a cream of sorrel. All were excellent, especially the sorrel which included small wedges of potatoes and scallions. The entrees were equally satisfying. Not enough can be said about the pastas because the sauces are so good. The veal parmigiana is very good, again because of the freshness of the ingredients, in this case the veal. The dinner menu offers a wide variety of pastas, plus vegetarian dishes, steak, seafood and chicken entrees. Included is a reasonable children's menu of hot dogs, chicken tenders, spaghetti and hamburgers for $2.50 to $3.95.

On the lunch menu is an especially good Sicilian scrod entree in which the fish is rolled in seasoned bread crumbs and gently cooked. Accompanying that entree was a medley of sauteed vegetables, including green beans, cauliflower and carrots - all

The recipe for Blueberry Pancakes that appeared with the article "Cooking from Scratch" in Taste on Monday, Jan. 7, should have read: 3 teaspoons baking powder (not 3 tablespoons).

Larry Janes' column Taste Buds on Monday, Jan. 14, should have stated, "The best that money can buy is dubbed Minor's soup base." The name of the brand was inadvertently omitted. That was in 1868, more than 100 years ago, and the popularity of chili continues to grow and grow. A heartwarming, sometimes even heartburning Southwestern dish, chili is a winter favorite and often the subject of fun-filled but competitive chili

This week's Winner Dinner Winner, Sandy Pattock of Canton, submitted her family's chili recipe. It is one of the best I have ever tasted. Served with freshly baked bread and honey, a marinated broccoli salad and no-bake peanut butter bars, this is one dinner that promises to become a family classic, loved by young and old alike.

Pattock is married and the mother of two young children. Her husband, a self-employed construction worker, often works outdoors, and during the cold winter months she makes a lot of chili for dinner. Whenever she has any left over, she heats it up and puts it in his thermos so he will have a hot and hearty lunch.

PATTOCK AND a friend recently started a cake decorating business called Create-A-Cake, with their specialty being birthday cakes decorated and designed to look like different characters. They also took orders and baked Christmas cookies this past holiday season, in addition to making cakes for birthdays and showers. Pattock loves what she is doing and derives much satisfaction watching children's faces light up when they see the cakes she has decorated for them.

Thank you, Sandy Pattock, for sharing your delicious recipes with us, and congratulations on being this week's Winner Dinner Winner. I wish you continued success with your new business and hope that you will enjoy your well-deserved apron.

Considering that Burgundy pro-duces only one-tenth as much wine as Bordeaux, that Burgundy suffers from huge vintage variation and the weak American dollar, it is inevitable that prices of Burgundy wines will continue to escalate.

"Not all Burgundy wines are very expensive," said Pierre-Henry Gagey, assistant managing director of Maison Louis Jadot in Beaune. "There are many fine Burgundies, both red and white, that I would classify as affordable.

"The current vintage in the market is 1988. It is a great vintage because the tannins are softer and the quality from the small grower is high. Throughout 1991, the 1988 vintage offers a fantastic opportunity to discover the affordability of many Burgundy wines.'

To begin a discovery of white Burgundy, produced entirely from chardonnay, Gagey suggests searching out wines from four small villages in the Cote d'Or: Savigny-Les-Beaune; Pernand-Vergelesses; Auxey Duresses, St-Aubin; and Rully in the Cote Chalonnaise.

For red Burgundies on a budget, Gagey recommends selections from the villages of Pernand-Vergelesses, Marsannay, Santenay and Cote de

IN ADDITION to touting the new 1988 Burgundy arrivals, Gagey points to 1987 as an underrated vin-tage. # Sweet potato is so versatile

When Columbus discovered America in 1492, he also discovered a yellow-brown vegetable, the sweet potato. Guess what he did? He took some roots home with him.

By the 1600s the delicious, edible sweet potatoes were a leading crop of the Virginia colonies, and by the 1900s more than 200 varieties were grown in the South. Sweet potatoes are available year round but are most plentiful from September to. December for holiday eating. How ever, sweet potatoes are great for eating all year.

Sweet potatoes are versatile, easy to prepare and have great potential. They can be served as an appetizer, salad, main dish or dessert. They seem to have taken a burn wrap because of the name or the heavy amounts of sweetener that is added to them. Actually, a sweet potato has no more calories by weight than a white potato. As with other potatoes, it's what you add to them that makes the fat and calories add up.

The darker the orange color of the egetable, the more beta carotene vegetable, the more beta carotese (which the body transforms into vitamin A). A serving of one sweet potato has two to five times the recommended amounts of beta carotene. A sweet potato serving has more otassium than an orange, plus some etary fiber. It also contains about half the amount recommended for a daily allowance of vitamin C and about 120 to 140 calories. All this nutrition inside the skin of a sweet po-

SWEET POTATOES come in two versions: the light or pale-skinned type with yellow pulp that remains firm when cooked, or the bright orange, more moist, rough-skinned that becomes soft when cooked. The moist, flaked potato tastes sweeter than dry varieties due to the starch converting to sugar while cooking. Some people call the softer, more moist version a "yam." But a true yam is really a starchy white root grown primarily in the tropics of West Africa, the Caribbean and Latin America.

Select well-shaped (tapered toward the ends), firm, plump, brightly colored skins that are free from decay. Do not choose one that has cuts, holes or blemishes. Best supplies of potatoes generally are in the winter months. Store in a cool, dry, dark, well-ventilated place. Do not store in refrieerator. If you have not store in refrigerator. If you have purchased more than you can use in a short period of time, cook, mash and freeze for use later. .

Cook a sweet potato in the skin to help preserve the vitamins. Treat just like a white potato. The skins will slip off easily after cooking, but it is also edible. Since the skin is a little tough you may want to rub with a little margarine and wrap it in foil to bake. Place sweet potato on a baking sheet and bake at 375 degrees for about one hour or until tender. To boil, place chunks in saucepan (leaving skin on), add water, bring to a boil, cover, reduce heat and simmer until tender. Drain well. Slip the skin and use in whatever dish you are making. Pierce sweet potatoes several times with a fork before microwaving to prevent expleding. Microwave on high six to seven minutes per pound.

ENJOY SWEET potatoes combined with white potatoes to make your favorite potato salad recipe. As a main dish, bake or microwave in their skins. Scoop out the pulp and mash it, add pineapple or orange juice. or diced apples and raisins with spices, and return the pulp mixture to skin and reheat, and you have twice-baked sweet potatoes. Mashed sweet potatoes can be put into a casserole. Add fruits, juice, spices and top with chopped nuts for a great side dish (skip the marshmallows).

Mix shredded sweet potatoes with chopped apple, flour and onion and fry as pancake in a little melted margarine or oil. Shred raw into salads for crunch, or pare and slice and serve raw with a dip. Raw sweet potatoes taste like a sweet raw carrot. They will darken quickly so soak in water before serving and refresh frequently if served on a raw vegeta-

Start fresh in '91, making meals without fuss

The new year has arrived. What better time to get back to the basics, in the kitchen. Using fresh ingredients including fruits and vegetables is not only healthy, it's smart.

By following recipes that include little fuss, such as Spicy Winter Chili and Beans, you can create a delicious homemade meal in no time. Chili also freezes well. Just reheat and you have a warm welcome to enjoy after a busy day. A simple tip is to heat the chili in the oven, not on top of the stove, so you don't have to worry about burning it. Favorite Vegetable Soup is another delicious recipe that can be made a day or more ahead and enjoyed all week

Nothing warms and fills you up on a brisk winter evening like pasta. Ratatouille-Pasta Gratinee is delicious with the zest of eggplant and zucchini. It's easy to prepare and the sauce is easily frozen and reheated when needed.

Today's kitchen appliances are also helpful time-savers. Food processors chop our vegetables and puree our fruit in seconds. The microwave oven is a cook's best friend when it comes to defrosting and heating anything quickly.

Shopping for fresh ingredients and preparing recipes ahead of time makes it easy to get back to the basics of nutritious eating.

Salem swim stars outshine Canton

By Dan O'Mears staff writer

There were individual stars on both sides Thursday night, but Plymouth Salem had a few more and won its annual swimming duel with rival Plymouth Canton.

Curt Witthoff and Joe Pawluszka were at the forefront of the winning effort, which carried the Rocks to a 108-78 victory over their host. Salem is 2-3 in dual meets, Canton 1-1-1.

Witthoff won the 200-yard individual medley in 2:09.37 and the backstroke in 59.47. He and Pawluszka helped Salem win the 400 freestyle relay, and Witthoff was the leadoff man on the second-place medley re-

'He's really come on for us," Salem coach Chuck Olson said. "He's one of those guys the last couple of years we had looked to be backing up in a lot of events. This year he's taken that next step and is not afraid to go out there and race people. We're real happy with the way things are going for him."

Pawluszka's successes came in freestyle races. He won the 50 in 23.37 and the 100 in 52.10. He was on the winning 200 freestyle relay

"HE'S DONE a heckuva job for us," Olson said. "Tell him 'You gotta swim well' and he gives you everything he's got.

Olson added it was a big night for the Salem senior tri-captains, which includes Gary Bergman, who finished second in the 100 freestyle (53.54) and third in the 50 freestyle (24.33). He anchored the medley relay and joined Pawluszka on the 200 freestyle relay.

'That kinda shut the door on any hopes they had of coming back," said Olson of Bergman's second in the 100

"There was a lot of discussion it was going to be a very good meet, and (the seniors) didn't want to be the first to lose to their buddies across the creek." Olson also was pleased with the performances of Brett Petroskey, who was second in the 200 freestyle (1:59.85) and helped the Rocks the 200 and 400 freestyle relays. 'He's starting to come around for us." Olson said. "Once you break the two-minute barrier (in the 200 freestyle), you're starting to get serious."

Pawluszka, Petroskey, Albert Sneath and Bergman had a 1:35.89 time in the 200 relay, and Sneath, Pawluszka, Petroskey and Witthoff were clocked at 3:33.54 in the 400 re-

A standout for the Chiefs was freshman Mike Orris, who won the 200 freestyle (1:53.18) and the 500 freestyle (5:07.91). He also anchored Canton's second-place teams in the freestyle relays.

'He had good times in the 200 and 500 and fast splits in the relays,' Canton coach Hooker Wellman said. "He's in here for the four-year program, and he's doing exactly what I'd like him to do now.

"HE'S WORKING hard and swimming fast. He has a great attitude, and that's good for the kids around Ron Trosin won the breaststroke in 1:05.82 and combined with teammates Doug Nevi, Mark Ealovega and Craig Steshetz to win the medley relay in 1:45.78, a season best.

"All the people on medley relay went faster, so we've got a real good chance to qualify that relay for state, I think," Wellman said. There was an upset in diving where Canton's Nick Atwell defeated Salem's Steve Salhaney and Pat McManaman. Atwell scored a career best 206.8, Salhaney 201.15 and McManaman, the all-area diver a year ago, 195.55.

"What I really liked is when (Atwell) got down to his last dive and was beating two kids who have gone higher scores than him, he didn't choke," Wellman said.

Others finishing in the top three for Salem included Matt Erickson, third in the butterfly, 1:00.59; Brett Meik, second in 500 freestyle, 5:22.15; Aaron Berlin, third in 500 freestyle, 5:24.58; Scott Helmstader, second in backstroke, 1:01.46; Jon Stridiron, second in breaststroke, 1:06.26. Witthoff, Stridiron, Matt Erickson and Bergman were second in the medley relay (1:46.14).

Canton swimmers with top-three places were Pat Lancaster, third in 200 freestyle (2:02.13) and backstroke (1:01.87); Doug Nevi, third in IM, 2:17.96; Steshetz, second in 50 freestyle (23.98) and third in 100 freestyle (53.54); Mark Ealovega, second in butterfly, 59.98; Shawn MacInnis, third in breaststroke, Dave Nevi, Jeff Clark, Josh Blunt and Orris swam the 200 freestyle relay in 1:39.42, and Steshetz, Lancaster, Doug Nevi and Orris were timed at 3:37.19 in the 400 freestyle relay.

"We did OK," Wellman said. "This

Salem pins North

Plymouth Salem set up this week's wrestling showdown with Farmington by trouncing North Farmington 54-21 Thursday night.

The Rocks, 3-0 in the Lakes Division and 4-0 against Western Lakes Activities Association teams, will wrestle Farmington in the opponent's gym at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

The Falcons are 2-1 in the division, losing to Westland John Glenn and defeating North and Stevenson.

Salem started with five consecutive pins to establish a 30-0 lead. John Moran (103) pinned Mark McDonald in 1:04, Scott Martin (112) pinned Dan Cassidy in 5:57, Dan Bonnett (119) pinned Jeremy Moy in 1:46, Chad Wilson (125) pinned Eric Grant in 1:14 and Dan Phillips (130) pinned Dan Marcus Brown (135) scored the first points for the Raiders, pinning Jeff Shumate in 5:44.

The Rocks came back with two more wins to lead 42-6. Jeff Coleman (140) won by void, and Josh Viau (145) pinned Kevin Demeter in 1:02.

North won three of the next four bouts to make the score 48-21. Jared Lawrence (152) pinned Bob Hansen in 3:52, Aaron Lawrence (160) pinned Phil Haynes in 12 seconds and Bob Chika (189) won a 7-4 decision over Wade Langdon.

Salem's Charlie Apigian (171) returned to the lineup for the first time following surgery to remove a cyst from his neck and pinned Rob Chuba in 1:19. Heavyweight Ken Coker won on a forfeit for the Rocks.

Gymnasts prevail

Plymouth Salem's top-ranked gymnastics team had its lowest score of the season Thursday, but the Rocks were in no danger of losing the meet. Salem scored 126.65 in the absence of five gymnasts but easily defeated Ypsilanti (108.4) and host Ann Arbor Pioneer (82.05).

The Rocks competed without Alysia Sofios, Sue Farmer, Kim Miller, Courtney Gonyea and Sarah Makins - all of whom were recovering from food poisoning, according to coach Kathi Kinsella. They became ill after team members ate at a restaurant following the Troy Invitational on Jan. 12.

Salem's Autumn Bunch was first on vault (9.35), balance beam (7.65) and floor exercise (8.8). She also scored 7.05 on the uneven parallel bars and had an all-around total of 32.85.

'It was a strange meet," Kinsella said. "The scoring was really different. The judges were tough on bars and floor.

Stefanie Angiulo was the only other Salem gymnast to do the allaround. She won the bars competition (8.0) and scored 8.5 on vault, 7.6 on beam and 8.6 on floor. Her total score was 32.70.

Other scores included Jenny Wong on vault (8.7) and bars (7.6), Aimee Wong on vault (8.5) and bars (7.8), Theresa Giacherio on beam (7.3), Dana

Driscoll on floor (7.25) and Leanne Savola on beam (7.05) The Rocks competed in the Midland Invitational on Saturday and trav-

Plymouth Salem and Northville entered Wednesday night's Western Lakes Activities Association volleyball match at Salem having identical seasons.

Both teams were 2-0 in the WLAA and had beaten Farmington and Walled Lake Western in four games. But it was the Rocks who came out of the match with an exciting 7-15, 15-7, 6-15, 15-13, 15-11 victory.

"This was our week for finals and we didn't practice well Tuesday and we were scared about this match," Salem coach Brian Gilles said.

"I think two things won it for us: our team's athletic ability and our conditioning. We have a lot of girls on the team who play several sports, and they kept their composure toward the end. Also, toward the end, I think our team's good conditioning showed.

The Rocks improved to 3-1-3 overall and 3-0 in

With the fifth game tied 10-10, Salem jumped ahead to a 12-10 advantage. Northville got the serve back but served the ball into the net. That gave the Rocks all the momentum they needed, according to Gilles. Sophomore Shelby Carey led Salem with six kills in 22 attempts, five aces and 10 serve receptions. Junior Julie Thomas added four kills in 18 attempts and eight blocks. She also received 12 Senior Andrea Welling chipped in six kills and nine service receptions, while junior Martha Bol added eight blocks. Juniors Sarah Krieger and Jenny Emmett had four and five aces, respective-"We didn't find out until right before the match that they had the same results we did," Gilles said. "They were a very good team, and we are fortunate to come out of the match with a win."

Salem's victory sets up a matchup between 3-0 teams when Salem clashes with Livonia Steven-

PLYMOUTH CANTON came alive in the third game of Wednesday's WLAA match at Stevenson, but it wasn't enough as the Chiefs fell 8-15, 3-15, 14-16 Trailing 14-10 in the third game, the Spartans came back and captured the game for the sweep Stevenson improved to 3-0 in the WLAA and 9-3-4

"We played with them and couldn't put them away," Canton coach Jacque Getz said. "Eventoally they caught up. I told the team afterwards that when we have a good team, or any team, in trouble, we have to put them away."

The Spartans, who played everybody on the roster, were led by Sue Bell's 15 digs, four kills and four aces. Teresa Sarno added seven blocks and 11 kills. Laura Zatorski had 16 digs and three kills, while setter Patty Diamond had 25 assists, four kills, six digs and two aces.

Canton was led by sophomore Stephanie Gray's eight kills in 20 attacks and junior Allison Phile lips' 20 assists. Senior Cindy Granger added 18

"In the first game, we played tough and hung in there," Getz said. "But we didn't play like a team which was disappointing."

Chiefs stare down division foe

By Neal Zipeer staff writer

Walled Lake Western's basketball team was looking up to the taller Plymouth Canton squad for all of Friday's game, but when the final horn sounded, the visiting Warriors left the court with their heads definitely down.

Even though seven Chiefs were taller than the tallest Western player, the visiting Warriors almost pulled off the upset. They wound up falling on the short end of the 50-43 Western Lakes Activities Association game at Canton.

Leading 39-37 with 3:55 remaining in the game, Western let victory slip through its hands by committing basketball

three turnovers and managing only one field goal the rest of the way.

Meanwhile, the Chiefs finished with a 13-4 run, led by senior guard Karl Wukie's eight points. Wukie finished with 15 - 13 of them coming in the second half.

When the game is on the line, Karl rises rises to the top of his game," Canton coach Dave Van Wagoner said.

CANTON IMPROVED to 6-4 overall and 4-0 in the WLAA, while winning its first Western Division game. The Warriors are 4-5 overall and 1-2 in the league.

"We're happy being 4-0, but for us to contend with the elite in the league, we have to improve in every aspect of our game," Van Wagoner The Chiefs held a slim 33-29 lead entering the final quarter, but Western scored 10 of the next 14 points.

After a Canton basket, senior Bill Hulme hit successive layups to bring the Warriors to within two. With 5:52 left, junior Todd McMillan nailed a three-pointer to give Western a 36-35

After two Derrick McDonald free throws put Canton up by one, Western regained the lead on two free throws by junior Dan Doerfling and one by senior Jeff Kubik. Canton junior Jon Paupore's two free throws knotted the score at 39-39.

After a free throw by Canton's Wukie, Kubik was freed by a baseline pick and scored easily on a layup to give Western its final lead; 41-40, with 2:57 remaining.

THE REST of the game belong to Wukie and the stubborn Chief defense. Wukie hit a three-pointer from the corner to put Canton ahead for good. Senior Brett Howell's two free throws gave the Chiefs a 45-41 advantage. Kubik countered with two free throws with 2:06 left, but it turned out to be Western's final points of the night.

Prep gridders ponder college choices

By Steve Kowalski staff writer

Despite carrying a reputation as a big hitter, Farmington Hills Harri-son linebacker Blazo Sarcevich hasn't been such a big hit with some of college football's national powers.

After showing early interest in Sarcevich, the University of Michigan, Michigan State and Penn State all have shied away from Harrison's all-time leading tackler. Sarcevich made an official visit to Central Michigan University last weekend and will visit UCLA later this month.

Sarcevich said he also may visit Miami (Ohio) University. He is waiting to hear from Arizona, Stanford and Florida, all of which have film on his playing days at Harrison. One of the films they have is of Harrison's 18-15 loss to Detroit St. Martin DePorres last fall, when Sarcevich set a school record with 25 tackles.

Harrison coach John Herrington, who has sent John Miller, Brian Smolinski and Mill Coleman to MSU, was shocked to hear both MSU and Michigan back off of Sarcevich.

"I really think they're missing the boat," Harrington said. "I've seen a lot of linebackers in 30 years of coaching, and I think Blazo is a Big Ten linebacker. And I don't think I'm wrong on this.

'Michigan State said they're looking for another Percy Snow and at this time they didn't think Blazo could be one. And Michigan didn't give any reason. Penn State said Blazo's good enough to play for them, but they have linebackers in Pennsylvania just as good as Blazo and they'd just as soon recruit them first - which makes sense. Central loves him '

The 6-foot-3, 230-pound Sarcevich said he carries about a 3.0 grade point average and "education is going to play a big part" in his decision. He said he enjoyed his visit to CMU, the Mid-American Conference champion which played in the California Raisin Bowl.

"It's pretty nice," Sarcevich said. Wednesday, Feb. 6, is the first day high school athletes can sign binding national letters of intent.

Sarcevich is scheduled to visit UCLA Jan. 27, but isn't sure what the other two weekends have in store for him prior to the signing date.

"I kind of want to go out of state and I'd like to play in the Big Ten or PAC 10 - big-time Division I football," Sarcevich said. "In the next few weeks I'll know.

• Redford Catholic Central won

the Class AA state title, and as expected the Shamrocks have the most recruited senior class in Observerland. As many as 10 players could receive some kind of football scholarship, with safety Mike Thomas being the most highly recruited.

Thomas has visited U-M and MSU and will visit CMU this weekend. The University of Colorado also has shown interest but Thomas hasn't scheduled a visit

"I'm not leaning toward any," said Thomas, who added that MSU is the only school of the four to have offered a full-ride football scholarship. 'Right now I'm taking a close look at each (U-M and MSU) and if I don't fit in at either State or U-M I feel pretty secure with Central. (MSU coach George) Perles is a great guy. If I choose to go there, he should be a great father figure."

While Thomas admits the recruiting season is exciting, CC coach Tom Mach has found it somewhat hectic. The football season ended for CC in late November and college coaches were able to begin contacting players Dec. 1.

"It's fun, because the kids have a chance to go to school, but hectic because we have a banquet coming up and I've got films out on kids all over America," Mach said. "I'm trying to figure out who has sent film back and who hasn't."

· Plymouth Canton's Karl Wukie, the first-team All-Observer quarterback, wants to play at the MAC level, according to Chiefs coach Bob Khoenle, but few teams have shown

Balancing muscles limits body aches

Dear Myrns: I used to bowl at a fairly competitive level, but stopped six months ago because of continuing back and joint problems. My joint problems were diagnosed as synovitis of the wrist and tendonitis of the elbow and shoulder. The back injuries were never significantly diagnosed, though one chiropractor suspected a displaced rib. I would like to know if the Nordic Track cross country ski machine can correct these problems.

I'm assuming you bowl more than once a week in order to be at a competitive level. Let's analyze the physical activity of bowling.

Bowling is an asymmetrical activity. The pendulum motion of the shoulder and twisting action of the wrist and forearm as you lift the ball is asymmetrical. The twist and the torque of the lower back during the same motion are probably the cause of some of your lower

The Nordic Track ski machine has been used by many people, including those with back problems, I'm sure. The gliding minimizes jarring, and the crossed extension of the arm and leg seems to help balance the muscle exertion on the lower spine.

Since the exercise involves both arms and legs equally, this will help to balance your muscles and, therefore, put you in a less injurious position altogether.

I ALSO recommend light weight training to especially strengthen your upper body. Possibly, a carefully planned program consisting both of weight and stretching (to add flexibility) would even enhance

If you like a little company, try a weight training class (we call it muscle madness). Whichever, make sure you consult an exercise expert and do tell about your joint problems. Depending on how bad your symptoms are, you may need to see a doctor. Possibly, anti-inflammatory agents may be needed to get your synovitis and tendonitis under control. Remember, bowling is an asymmetrical activity. In order to combat all future injuries, you must make sure you strengthen your muscles in a well-balanced manner. Let your body recover from injury

Bowling champ refused to quit

HE WAYNE-WESTLAND Men's Bowling Association held its ninth annual "700

Ypsilanti's Milo Quiton walked away with the title of the tournament, which was open to association members who have bowled a 700 series.

Milo and his son Andy Quiton both qualified for the semi-final squad of 77 bowlers on Saturday. During qualifica-tions Milo shot a 703 series and Andy scored a 300 game.

It was dad who made the final six on Sunday along with No. 1 seed Russ Gaz-dag of Canton, Anthony Woods of Taylor, Jeff Wojcik of Livonia, and Ken Paczas

In being the fourth seed, Milo had to win every match. He beat Ken Paczas 217-198, wound up in a tie with Jeff Wojcik at 197-197, and took care of him in a two-frame rolloff. Milo then proceeded to knock off Tony Woods, 221-214, in the semifinal.

In the final match against Russ Gaz-dag, Russ came out of the gate with the first seven strikes, but Milo kept up after a spare in the first frame and fought it out to the last pin. The result showed a tie at 256. The final score was determined by a few pins in handicap, and Milo Quiton was the winner of the $700 first place payoff.

Milo Quiton really did it the hard way. This was the climax of years of recovery from two heart attacks and two strokes. Milo is partially paralyzed from his illness. This is a story of a man who refused to quit in the face of adversity, endured years of treatment, therapy and pain to fight back and compete again at the age of 57. Most people would simply give up, but not Milo Quiton.

As he said, "Bowling gave me the incentive to keep going."

Bowling runs in the family. Milo's wife, Jo, still has her name on the board at Westland Bowl for a 275 game way back in 1968. They have six children and 10 grandchildren, many of whom are bowlers, including sons Andy at a 200-plus average, and Daryl in the 190s. Milo started bowling 47 years ago and was also a 200 plus bowler years ago. He also became an accredited instructor in 1962. Not many people win a tournament, not very many can survive strokes and heart attacks. Milo Quiton has done it all and is truly an exceptional man.

Continental Cablevision will televise the taped replay of the tournament. Check with your local office for date and

 Many league officers are experi-encing "contract shock," as the bowling centers are sending out the new contracts for next year. Many houses are sharply raising the line fees. This is a reflection of our inflationary times, although the owners can say the rates are still a bargain compared to most of the rest of the Detroit area rates are generally much lower than other cities around the nation. Conversely, we also have by far the largest bowling population, so perhaps the lower rates have had something to do

The proprietors deserve to operate profitably, however. A price increase could become a "double-edged swore." Economists refer to the "law of diminishing returns

If some bowlers drop out because of the higher costs, it would only hurt the future of the industry. Bowling must grow in order to flourish. There is a need for innovative marketing and sound management by the proprietors.

Spartans top Churchill

Livonia Stevenson captured 11 of 12 events Thursday, dunking city rival Churchill in a boys swim meet.

The host Spartans are now 3-1 overall and 2-0 in Western Lakes Activities Association dual meets.

Aaron Rieder and Bryan Morrison each captured two individual events Rieder, swimming for the first time in the 100-yard backstroke, earned a state qualifying cut of 56.42. He also took the 200 freestyle in 1:52.22. "He (Rieder) scored in the state sophomore," Stevenson coach Doug Buckler said. "This is a real good time (in the backstroke). He's a real good kid and a hard worker. I have a lot of high hopes for him." Morrison added victories in the 50 freestyle (22.27) and 100 butterfly (57.76). He also teamed up with Eric Peterson, Taki Caranicolas and Alex Goecke to win the 200 freestyle relay in 1:35.35.

In the 200 medley relay, the foursome of Ryan Freeborn, Goecke, Mike Gravina and Joe Petrillo took first in 1:48.52. Stevenson's 400 freestyle relay team of Jason Fried, Caranicolas, Petrillo and Jason Fried also finished first in 3:41.22.

Other Stevenson individual winners included: Rich Bennetts, 200 meet (200 individual medley) as a IM, 2:14.8; Jason Norrid, diving, 220.55; Caranicolas, 100 freestyle, 53.47; and Freeborn, 500 freestyle, 5:08.32.

Churchill's lone winner was Jeff Danner in the 100 breaststroke (1:06.6).

is more than the flag. It's a basic principle in every American life.

One of our most basic freedoms is freedom of the press. Americans are guaranteed access to all the news—the good right along with the bad.

We here at The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers guard this precious freedom with every edition we publish. We watch and report the actions and decisions of your government—from the county commissions and city councils to township supervisors and schoolboards. If it affects your home, your family, your life, we make every effort to be there for you.

'Paradise:' A good topic doesn't mean good flick

tured, nicely detailed depiction of labor unrest in the mid-'30s, specifically 1936.

Jack McGurn (Dennis Quaid), an organizer for a Brooklyn film projectionist union, is too honest for union politics and is advised to "Get out of town or else!" He winds up in Los Angeles with his brother's fami-

Like so much of "Come See the Paradise," all this background on Jack, including a lengthy and abrasive dinner with his brother in L.A., is nicely done and characterizes him quite well but — and this is a very big but — it has little to do with what the film is all about - the terrible treatment of Japanese-Americans, Nisei, native-born citizens of this country, after Pearl Harbor.

That issue is particularly sensitive and emotional these days as the Persian Gulf crisis threatens Arab-Americans with the same kind of tragic backlash Japanese-Americans faced in the '40s.

Unfortunately, a significant topic and sensitive issue doesn't automatically make a terrific film. Just as "Hidden Agenda" is a boring, preachy movie about the terrible tragedy in Northern Ireland, "Come See the Paradise" degenerates from a stately, graceful statement about human suffering to a routine and ponderously slow motion picture with a number of loose ends.

THE STATELY grace revolves around the Takamura family who run a Japanese-language movie house in Los Angeles' "Little Tokyo" where Jack gets a job as a film projectionist. The Takamura family's self-respect and charming, well-mannered conduct are fine statements about human conduct at its Jack quickly falls in love with Lily Takamura (Tamlyn Tomita). Her father objects and California law prohibits their marriage so they head for Seattle and marriage.

Shortly before Pearl Harbor, Jack gets arrested for union activity and Lily returns to L.A. with their daugh-

"Come See the Paradise" (B., R., ter. She and her family are interned

Jack keeps showing up in his Army uniform at the Japanese DP camp but his appearances add very little to the suffering of the displaced Japanese. With one exception, his presence garners no anti-Japanese commentary from Americans in the vicinity. Given the passions of 1942, that's a rather strange facet of this

Additionally, a number of his appearances have unclear dramatic functions as do many events in his life. Aside from his love-affair with his wife, Lily, Jack is largely irrelevant to the Takamura family and their problems.

The bottom line is that "Come See the Paradise" is too long, too slow and has too many confusing distractions to do justice to such an important, significant topic.

IN "GREEN Card" (C, PG-13), George (Gerard Depardieu), a bumbling French music-composer, and Bronte (Andie MacDowell), a horticulturalist, are paired in a marriage of convenience. He does it to get a green card - an alien resident/ work permit - and she wants to rent an apartment restricted to married couples.

When a government team investigates them, they find it necessary to live together for appearances sake. They create a fictitious life and, naturally, fall in love in this plausible but uneventful film.

When the Immigration and Naturalization Bureau finally investigate George, they ask him some really obscure questions about his wife's life and personal habits. If answering similar questions successfully was the criterion for allowing husbands to remain in this country, America's male population would be reduced drastically.

Depardieu's attempts at comedy are clumsy and not very appealing. He's much better in more serious roles — "Jean de Florette," "Danton" and "Cyrano" - which better

Aside from some opening shots of New York City, home is physically and emotionally very far away. Why they left is unclear, though it's obvious that with unlimited financial resources, they plan to stay for quite a Solid details are few and far between in "The Sheltering Sky." Bernardo Bertolucci's latest melodrama - currently playing at the Maple Theater — has some moments of existential power, though as a whole, it's incredibly dull to watch.

Aside from Bertolucci brought the screen such gems as "Last Tango in Paris" (1973) and "The Last Emporer" (1987) — the movie employs two of Hollywood's brightest actors. Surprisingly, John Malkovich and Debra Winger give perhaps their weakest performances

Malkovich with his alligator grin and wild eyes looks more and more like Jack Nicholson every year. Perhaps intentionally, he's like a sleepwalker moving farther away from civilization with every leg of the

Debra Winger is Kit Moresby, a playwright who runs off and crosses the desert with a nomadic tribe in "The Sheltering he lands in an African village literally swarming with flies. "Do you think we could live here?" he asks. He's deadly serious.

Winger, meanwhile, must singlehandedly hold together the last hour of "The Sheltering Sky" as she takes off alone across the desert with an Arab tribe. The film goes nowhere even faster.

Cinematographer Vittorio Storaro, best known for his work on "Apocalypse Now," captures vividly the mysterious villages and landscapes. He follows characters through long, shadowy tunnels. Sand and mud HE'S NOT remotely happy until towers contrast with those opening shots of New York City skycrapers. The film takes place in the 1940s, but it exists in a vacuum. Malkovich is a composer, Winger a playwright, day accountants. There is a little references to their previous lives and not much more about what they're thinking now. Which brings us to the real problem with "The Sheltering Sky." Paul Mitch Ryder is legendary around these parts. He's the original local boy who made good.

In the mid-1960s when America was in the throes of the British invasion, Ryder and his band, the Detroit Wheels, helped keep American rock on the charts with a string of top-10 hits like "Devil With a Blue Dress On/Good Golly Miss Molly," "Jenny Take a Ride" and "Sock It to Me — Baby!"

After Ryder decided to go solo, his career suffered until 1983 and the release of "Never Kick a Sleeping Dog," which included an infectious cover of Prince's "When You Were Mine." He's currently in the process of trying to get signed with an American record company.

In a telephone conversation, Ryder talked about his current mini-tour, his past and his thoughts on music.

What have you been up to lately? 'Well, we've had about five releases in Europe (since "Never Kick a Sleeping Dog"). We just returned from a tour there. This is our off-season right now. I've got some new material and I've been working on that.

We don't have a deal yet. I passed out seven demos about seven months ago, and haven't heard anything yet, but that's just part of 'When we did it, we all lived with mom so we could just be wild men.'

Any plans to re-release it?

No. It needs to be treated like a diary - something that's looked back on occasionally.

John Cougar produced "Never Kick a Sleeping Dog." Are you going to work with him again? John is going to be a film star. I talked to his brother, and he said that John's working a movie he's been making for years. He's also an artist of some repute now - he paints pictures. So if you want to see John, you'll have to look for him in a museum."

You rose from the Detroit local scene. It is different now?

Your probably are not a health-nut

Well. I had to become that way. There was too much self-indulgence and obsessive behavior left over from the '60s. It took its toll on me psychologically."

You're into clean living then? "Publicly, yes."

STANDING LIKE SHADOWS - The Ragnar Kvaran Group

With "Standing Like Shadows," the Ragnar Kvaran Group shows the results of more than a decade of inventive music making. This band is fronted by Kvaran who writes many of the songs, sings vocals and plays the guitar.

Kvaran is a native of Iceland and also attended high school in India (He's now based in comparatively non-exotic Ann Arbor). He uses his experiences in these countries as the basis of many of his well-written songs.

His song, "Children," for example, has lyrics that manages to be at once masterful, strange and touching quite simply, they'll blow you away.

In the epic, Kvaran describes the "hills to the north" where he talks with a boy and a girl who died in a fire in the hills in 1945. "To the best of my knowledge, no one else sees them. This must have to do with the fact that I was born on that day. Something was passed along," Kvaran sings/talks.

What do they talk about? "Metaphysics is a waste of time with them, however. Gassing on about the meaning of life and death confuses them . . . They ask me if I go to the movies, if I like spaghetti, if I can dance. They know they're lost. I don't think they know they're dead." With lyrics like these, you can spend some enjoyable time just reading the words without even putting the record on the turntable. But do listen to the record, because its well worth your while.

There are no obvious comparisons to other groups on the album. Instead, little wisps of recognizable influences drift in and out of the songs. Sometimes you hear a little bit of Tom Petty, there's parts that sound something like Neil Young and even some Stan Ridgway (of Wall of Voodoo fame). The three different guitar players guarantee some fancy play-

Vocals are shared by Kvaran, Kurt Browne and Terry Vogel, so the songs sound different depending on who's singing. If you don't like one cut, listen to the next because it's sure to sound different.

It all adds up to an eclectic, intensely creative mix.

NOWHERE

- Ride

Ride is somewhat of a rock'n'roll retrospective, grasping at those neofuzzy psychedelic guitar melodies of the 1960s and dressing it up in a 1990s perspective (sans bell-bottoms and platform shoes, we hope).

Amid their contemporaries Stones Roses, Charlatans UK and Inspiral Carpets, Ride might be the artsiest of the bunch

Such a conclusion can easily be drawn from the fact the band was formed in British Art School, a place where the Rolling Stones and the Kinks were initially launched. A cursory listen to "Nowhere" (Sire) puts this beyond the scope of guilt by in-

Let's say Ride's music is a tad impressionistic. Mark Garderner's vocals and guitars swirl in grand strokes designed to be mind altering as well as engaging. In essence, Ride tries to capture the moment on musical canvas.

The vibe is there, man. Dig? Body, mind and spirit are working as one, even if Garderner is left repeating nonsensically the word "paralyzed" to numbing lengths in one number. Peace, cool daddy-O.

Of course, aimless lyrics are only part of the equation. Numbers on Nowhere" are also abound with protracted guitar lines that are dizzying and dazzling in their pinnacle. - Jill Hamilton At their worst, Ride executes what

The extremes of this are borne out in the song "Dreams Burn Down." A gorgeous, cascading guitar melody is rudely crashed into by the worst Sonic Youth feedback drone heard this side of the Holland Tunnel. Trying to merge the past with the future apparently has its drawbacks.

Oh, and yes, the touch of the violin at the end of "Vapour Trail" further enhances the image of these moody Brits as artistes.

A tad cynical? This latest parade of musical archivists have become as wearisome as an unsightly bunch of nose hairs. They need to be

REVERBERATION - Echo & The Bunnymen

With a new lineup, some "exotic" musical matruments and more than a touch of neo-psychedelia, Echo & The Bunnymen has put together its first album since frontman Ian McCullough left the band to pursue a solo career.

"Reverberation" is an interesting, though lightweight, effort.

The album's lyrics are a well-intentioned attempt at continuing in the McCullough vein - dark, violent, utterly scornful of society's destructive, materialistic side.

Consider these lines from "Thick Skinned World:" "A thick-skinned world will feign concern/for reasons we have yet to learn./Preserve the world for baby's sake,/for baby must accumulate.

Missing, however, are the literary references, the conviction and the haunted aura of old-time Bunnymen gems. Newcomer Noel Burke does a good job technically on vocals, but - Larry O'Connor somehow lacks passion, as when he takes on wife-abusing lager louts in "King of Your Castle:" "King Rat, god of the barstool, hold your court./ So self-centered, so deluded, so self-

Missing, too, is the desperate, driving Bunnymen sound - crashing guitars and drums that build to a climax. Instead, the swirls of the mellotron and the farfisa organ match those of the reflecting ink on the the cassette's cover and the sitar - prominent on several songs — provides a definite late Beatles feel.

"Reverberation," dedicated to the late Pete De Freitas — the band's original (human) drummer — is a worthwhile post-McCullough effort but will probably disappoint hardcore Bunnymen fans.

To film an adaptation of any Shakespearean play is a risky venture in the best of circumstances. Rarely is the medium able to capture the nuances of language and thought that characterize the Bard's writing. Doing so has long been a challenge to filmmakers since the immediacy of the big screen is friendly to subtle manipulations of meaning and emotion.

This version of "Hamlet" (A, PG, 133 minutes) is faithful to the spirit, if not the letter, of the original. It is a convincing and engrossing interpretation of the classic tale of one man's obsession with love and

Mel Gibson and Glenn Close lead an international cast of actors, all of whom deliver gripping performances. Gibson, in particular, stands out in an exhibition of depth and humor which is delightfully unexpected but entirely believable.

While it was understood that he would be at the very least adequate, he surpasses expectation and may just introduce Shakespeare to a new generation of students. So, maybe it was "Lethal Weapon II" or "Mad Max" that got them in the theater. Once there, however, magical things are likely GLENN CLOSE is radiant, even in her most tortured moments, as Gertrude, Hamlet's mother. She appears in many more scenes than in the play but to the credit of adaptors, Christopher DeVore and Franco Zeffirelli, who also directed, this variation works.

Gertrude is not given unneces-sary dialogue and Close relies on sheer talent to convey context and meaning. It is these new observations which remind the audience of the humanity lost to the depravity of vengeance. Hamlet has never been for the faint of heart nor has it ever been an easy read as any English Lit student will remind Zeffirelli rises to the challenge of exploring these complexitities without making concessions to them. This version should stand well the test of time. (Reviewed

Timing, they say, is everything and the success of "Flight of the Intruder" (B, PG-13, 95 minutes) may be, however unintentionally, directly dependent upon current events. A well-executed film about an A-6, aka the Intruder, a bomber squadron in Vietnam, may just score in these troubled times

BRAD JOHNSON and Willem DaFoe star as hot shot pilot and ace bombadier who take it upon themselves to destroy "Sam City," an outdoor service to missiles in downtown Hanoi. They do so to avenge lost comrades and give meaning to their war.

"Flight of the Intruder" effectively recalls a war which few servicemen knew but many Navy pilots experienced. These men flew dangerous missions yet enjoyed relative safety aboard aircraft carriers in their off times.

Brad Stine unusual? Not really.

He's just your average fire eating, razor blade chewing, steel rod swal-lowing and nose flossing screaming comedian. Oh, and yes, Stine adds, he's the chosen "Messiah of Improv."

"What can I say, I'm the comedy of the '90s," said Stine in a telephone interview from Anchorage, Alaska. 'Leno's called and he's quitting. Seinfeld's quitting. They said, 'Please get out of the business. We have families to feed.'"

Messiah of Improv is perhaps stretching it a bit. Funny, definitely. Stine produces more laughs during a 15-minute phone conversation than a feather tickling contest.

Every question is promptly turned into a stand-up routine on the war in the Persian Gulf, the slumping automobile industry and alleged comedic hotbed of Indianpolis, Ind.

Then he stops abruptly. "Are you getting this all down?." he asks, sounding concerned. "Don't ask me to repeat any of this. I just

From the ramble this much is gleaned. Stine was born in Indianapolis, Ind., and moved to Los Angeles when he was 9.

STINE ORIGINALLY started out as a magician but switched to standup comedy four years ago. He always wanted to be a comedian.

"Besides when's the last time you've seen a magician having a TV

Stine has appeared on the Ha Channel, MTV and Showtime. He's a growing force on the club circuit, though his upcoming appearance at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle this week is his first engagement at that Much of his act, such as swallowing nose floss and then having it reemerge from his nostrils, was per-fected as a magician. His comedy heroes are Steve Martin and Monty Python, both masters of the absurd

"Steve Martin and Monty Python were geniuses," he says. "What's amazing is they did that show in 1969. Also, they come from England, and no one is funny from England."

Stine screams a lot during his stand-up routine. He also sweats "like a pig." Since his act is high-energy, improvisational, comparisons to Robin Williams are natural. Stine doesn't like it.

"That's like saying the wheel on the tractor and the wheel on the car are the same," Stine said. "Just because it's improvisational and highenergy, they look for a hook."

But, unlike Williams, Stine's routine is squeaky clean. He prefers it.

STINE STILL shocks audiences. In his magician days, apparently too much. His razor blade chewing routine included fake blood running out of his mouth. People eating dinner at a club in Newport Beach, Calif., didn't appreciate it and complained

For the most part, though, Stine said audiences appreciate something different than the regular stand-up

"I never had that problem of losing control," Stine says. "You might have an audience that is conserva-tive who don't know what's going on. You still have to sell yourself.

You have to get them involved. "When they trust you, they'll let ou run with it."

How far Stine runs remains to be seen. The ability to make up comedy routines as you go along is left but to Then again, this is a "Thor-like" guy we're talking about here. Comedy comes natural.

"It's like passing the mantel down," he said. "We had Jonathan Winters who was a god of improvisational comedy, and then we had Robin Williams.

"It's like they said, 'It's Bradley's turn now.

Brad Stine will appear Tuesday through Saturday, Jan. 22-26, at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle, 269 E. Fourth, Royal Oak. Show times are 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8:30 and 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday. For information, call 542-9900.

I have luged and lived to tell about it.

I have toured Muskegon — home of the Midwest's only Olympic-sized luge run — during the height of a winter blizzard and survived.

I have careened down an icy-slicked chute, a human bullet out of control, without screaming "OMYGOD, OMYGOD, OMYGOD, I'M GOING TO DIE."

Well, you can do it too!

Luge is a cross between sledding and roller coaster riding — not the German term for "death trap." Europeans excell at the sport. East Germans took gold medals in all three luge events in the 1988 Olympics. Most Tyrolian tots learn to handle a luge sled at about the same time Americans are swinging their first T-ball bats.

During snowy, northern European winters, "sliders" of all ages practice informally on mountain roadways (a sport called turbine) or on luge runs specifically built to accommodate the one- and two-person sleds.

Americans have climbed steadily toward the top in the Olympic luge event — Bonny Warner went from

15th place in 1984 to sixth in 1988 - but haven't won

OLYMPIC COMPETITORS head for the luge run built on a mountain at Lake Placid, N.Y., to practice for international events. Novices and some Olympic hopefuls work out on smaller runs built on a sand dune in Muskegon State Park.

The park hugs the Lake Michigan shoreline — a landscape littered with snow boulders and icy surf during the winter — north of Muskegon. Two luge tracks run by a consortium of civic groups, are open from November through February.

Visitors pass by a warming house, snack bar and luge rental facility before setting foot and sled on the icy, downhill tracks that wind with serpentine, gently turning and angular curves through the forest.

Sliders speed along at 25 miles per hour on the lower track (if it's icy and well-groomed) or hold on for dear life at 45-65 miles per hour on the upper run.

The wooden structure resembles a double log flume and is elevated several feet at the top and about one foot from the ground at the bottom.

Luge coach Jim Rudicil starts novice sliders off on a lower section of the smaller run before letting them propel themselves off the take-off ramp. After about 30 runs on the lower ramp they advance to the faster, Snow on the tracks cut speeds considerably the day I visited, but turned the surrounding pine forest into a delicate snow shaker scene.

"IT'S REAL PRETTY up here, but as you're going down you don't see anything. I mean, you're looking at the sky, right?" I asked Rudicil.

"Yeah, yeah. It's not a nature ride. You just lay flat the whole time."

And hold onto the 40-pound sled with pinkies and the neighboring two fingers, with head craned up and encased in a crash helmet.

As I zipped a tape recorder into my parka (to capture my blood-curdling screams), Rudicil claimed that although he once cut his eye on a luge run at Lake Placid, the sport is relatively safe.

"Don't worry, we've only had sprained ankles and scraped elbows here."

I lingered inside the warming house, then at trackside, stalling my inevitable first run on the luge.

When I couldn't stall any longer, I met my first challenge head on.

"How do you do up the little strap?," I asked,

"Everyone has trouble with this. Don't be embarrassed," he reassured me. "This is the hardest

All suited up in my head gear and sunglasses, I waited at the top of the entrance ramp.

"Oh, shouldn't I have goggles?" I gasped.

This wasn't the Indy 500, Rudicil reminded me. I just needed to keep snow off my face.

"He cut his eye once at Lake Placid," I ventured meekly, fishing for sympathy from onlookers before heading to the 13-foot ramp.

NEXT CAME A quick coaching session: Keep your legs extended with feet wrapped around the ends of the blades, (koufens). Two fingers on each hand grasp the bar on each side of the sled. Head up.

Watch the track. Lean with your right leg and left shoulder to go left. Reverse to go right. Stay in the middle of the course. Hit the wooden side walls and you'll ricochet off the sides like a pinball.

DON'T LET GO WHATEVER YOU DO!

"Just relax," Rudicil coached. "And put your butt

"Oh, I think I'm going to scream right now," I said, settling onto the canvas seat.

"Ready?"

"Oh God. Oh God. Go ahead," I sighed, tensing every muscle in my body.

A dog jumped onto the bottom of the track last year, but was rescued by a bystander seconds before colliding with a sled.

He gave the sled a shove and yelled "Here we Seventeen seconds later I coasted to a stop.

"I couldn't see daylight between you and the wall,"

If the track had been icy slick instead of dusted with snow, I wouldn't have seen daylight again. I probably would have killed myself. There was just enough fresh powder falling to cut the speed of my glide.

AND JUST ENOUGH weight from the sled (40

At Lake Placid, a truck transports luge sliders from bottom to top of the mountain. At Muskegon, you walk.

"Hey, this is the worst part of the ride," I yelled, lugging my luge sled to the ramp.

I tried the run again, this time launching myself by holding two fixed poles and pulling myself over the top

The ride was fast, thrilling and a challenge to keep on course. Steering the sled by shifting my body, using subtle leg and shoulder movements, I never completely lost control, although I edged up the wall

on "Kiss and Tell" curve.

When it comes to luging, Sharon Dargay found tightening the chin strap of her helmet the hardest part. As for the ride . . . AUGHHHHH . . .

Another time, a slider's down jacket ripped when it scraped the wooden wall, spewing feathers over the icy hard track. "We've got plastic on the side walls now that kind of take care of that," he said.

But he suggests that sliders leave designer parkas, high heel boots and heavy snowmobile pants at home.

TENNIS SHOES with heavy socks or casual leather shoes, lightweight insulated clothing such as stretch pants, padded vests and ski shells worn in layers, won't feel as bulky and restrictive as thickly-padded snow

The park provides the coaching, crash helmet and sled for $10 a day. Rudicil says that's a bargain compared to Lake Placid's $10 per run admission.

He said 50-120 people of all ages use the luge tracks daily during the season, which runs from November to early March. With sleds making a run about every 13 seconds on each track, the longest wait to go down is about 15 minutes on peak days. The average wait is

That gives you a chance to rest up. And to muster enough courage to try again. Rudicil said the sport demands more brain than brawn, more mental focus than dare devil bravado. "It does take some coordination. It takes more brain power to operate the sled than physical ability. The heavier you are the faster the sled will move on the Heavier sliders are permitted on the runs "as long as they fit on the five-foot wide" sleds, Rudicil noted. Shorter sleds are available for youngsters.

"IT'S A FAMILY sport," he said. And a group activity as well. Corporate leagues compete 6-9 p.m. Mondays and Tuesdays and school leagues race 5-9 p.m. on Wednesdays. Races also are held on Saturday mornings.

The luge is open to the public 5-9 p.m. Thursdays and Fridays and 2-9 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

"At night it's a whole different feeling. You see the formation of ice and the lights," Rudicil said. "You can see everything at night."

The park also rents cross-country skis and boasts the longest — six miles — lighted trail for night treks.

If Sharon was looking for a place to relax after her quick trip down the luge run, the shore of Lake Michigan at the Muskegon

State Park wasn't the place. In the dead of winter, it was none too inviting.

Materials aid in artistic expression

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

RTISTS CONTINUALLY search for materials to express ideas through their creations and evoke emotions in those viewing them. Albert Young successfully uses the hardness of steel and fragility of glass to depict the rise and fall of the industrial revolution and cities effected by its demise in his sculptures, on exhibit through Jan.

Young, an instructor at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit, created the sculpture entitled "Fallen Angel" using a rectangular piece of glass as the center of focus. Encircling the glass form, he wound a coil of steel, placing both on a rusted, flowing sheet of metal then balancing all on a twisted, contorted beam of iron.

The symbolism behind this particular work is quite moving: once a giant in the industrial revolution, now a fallen angel.

Planned budget cuts would upend the arts

By Raiph R. Echtinaw staff writer

Gov. John Engler's proposed budget cuts in the arts area are having an impact in small local arts programs all over Observer & Eccentric communities.

While proposed cuts to high-profile institutions like the Detroit Institute of Arts and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra are grabbing most of the headlines, programs in Plymouth, in Southfield, at Cranbrook Academy of Art and at Meadow Brook Theatre are already affected.

In keeping with his plan to reduce overall state spending by $1.1 billion. Engler has issued an executive order that would drastically reduce support to arts programs throughout the state. Although the cuts must be approved by appropriations committees in the Michigan House and Senate, a freeze on all grant payments was put into effect earlier this "Temporarily, everything's stopped," said Patrick Diehl, administrative assistant to Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills. "Monies owed all over the spectrum of government services are frozen.

Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, a Senate appropriations committee member, said he expects the votes to take place Tuesday Geake said the Senate committee will probably approve Engler's executive order and the House committee will reject it. In that case, Engler would have 30 days to submit another executive order. The order's purpose is to balance the state budget for the current fiscal year.

BUT MANY state arts organizations are already feeling the bite as grant payments due them have been MCA spokeswoman Martha Gibiser-Shea is worried the MCA grant freeze will become permanent ven if the legislative committees force Engler to reduce the severity of the arts cuts.

"It's not something we can assume is going to go away," she said. We're not sure if they're negotiable in the grants area

The Southfield Symphony Society is perhaps the most affected program. Society president Charles Marx said the organization will fold if it doesn't get its $9,900 grant. "If we do not receive the money promised us, the Southfield Symphony Society will discontinue," he said.

Kathryn Savitskie, Plymouth Community Arts Council executive director, said the $6,800 grant her organization may lose represents 10 percent of the budget.

Cuts may be made, she said, in the

"These cuts will have long-lasting negative effects," he said. "It's devastating to the entire state. The people who will suffer most are the citizens of the state of Michigan."

"To say the arts are not important is to say the state of Michigan is not important."

FRANK CARDIMEN, Oakland University interim vice president for university extensions and public service, administers the Meadow Brook Performing Arts Corp. Meadow Brook stands to lose $176,800 of a $252,500 grant.

Although that's only 3.4 percent of Meadow Brook's budget, Cardimen said the effect would be severe when one considers the organization has lost $1 million in the last three

"If that goes through, it can have an impact on this season's Meadow Brook Theatre and it has a definite impact on Meadow Brook Festival this summer," Cardimen said.

Meadow Brook personnel are trying now to see where money can be saved and what activites must be cut. "It's tough, but we're going to live with it," Cardimen said. "Our American Arts Series ($9,900), the Oakland Community College Arts Project ($8,800) and the Troy schools' "Artist in Residency" program ($8,400 of $20,000).

Sen. Faxon, who sits on the appropriations committee, vociferously opposed the proposed cuts in a news release issued Friday. He said Engler's plan "represents disaster for Michigan's cultural environment."

"By assigning an arbitrary cutoff date for distribution of funds to cultural groups and individuals, the state has in a sense issued a bounced check to grant recipients," he said.

Faxon added: "The citizens of Michigan must inform Gov. John Engler that being penny-wise and pound-foolish makes no sense for culture, which is one of the youngest children of the state.

"This proposal is parallel to choosing which of our children is to starve and go to an early grave. We must oppose this type of short-sightedness and protect culture within our great

Other local programs with frozen grants include the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association ($12,050 of $24,100), the Birmingham Public Schools "Artists in Schools" program ($18,000), the Oakland County Cultural Commission ($7,000), the Southfield Parks and Recreation Department ($7,200 of $13,000), the strategy is to find how in the hell we can cut $176,000."

Livonia Symphony Orchestra officials, however, have said their organization won't suffer greatly from its frozen $9,900 grant.

"I don't think it's going to be a disaster for our organization," symphony president Kenneth Kelsey said. "It's a very small percentage of our budget. If it's not there, we just have to move in other directions.

Noted cellist to visit WSU

Room 207 of Schaver Music Build-he'll teach a master cello class. There is no charge for any of his

Practice prudence in finances to control bills

Last week I discussed ways to organize your checkbook to keep from overcharging. Today, I'll discuss organizing your finances so you don't run up holiday bills again next year.

With the exception of necessities like a house and car, two rules for borrowing money include:

1. Never borrow money for depreciating assets. Since charging constitutes borrowing money and nearly all charges are made for items that go down in value, that's a losing way to do business. As a prime example, grocery stores are now beginning to accept charge cards. Beware of running up huge bills that will cost you dearly in interest charges later. Always pay cash for food unless you know you can easily pay off your total charges at the end of the month. "Buy now, pay later" is ultimately the charge company's advantage, not the buyer's, when you carry over

2. Only borrow money for appreciating assets. It's OK to borrow for things that will gain in value, if the money you'll earn is greater than the cost of the interest paid to borrow it.

BESIDES CHARGING only what you can pay off each month, set up a plan to assure you'll always have money in advance for other needs. Set aside money for large annual or organizing

semiannual costs such as the holiday season, vacations, income and real estate taxes, dues, conventions, insurance premiums, gifts and contributions, etc. List and add all your annual bills together and divide the total by 12 to find the average cost of annual bills per month.

Then set up an "Annual Account" and deposit that amount into it each month, so the funds will be there when they're needed. This account can be in the form of a savings account or as a part of your checking account. Some banks waive the checking account service charge if you maintain a minimum balance in an accompanying savings account. Since those accounts also earn interest, putting your annual funds there would be a smart way to provide for your needs. Large sums could be placed in short investments.

Finally, chart out the rest of your regular monthly expenses, including funds for entertainment and a cushion for unforeseen costs such as repairs, medical, etc. Add in your annual account monthly payment and see how you come out. If there isn't enough money available to cover all your expenses, you'll need to cut something out.

The first thing to eliminate is unnecessary interest and/or finance charges. If you are paying 20 percent on $1,000 balances on three credit cards a month, that's $600 per year, or $6,000 over 10 years, plus the interest you could have earned on that money if it had been invest-

Perhaps you could tear up your charge cards and take out a loan at a lower rate of interest to pay off your charges. But beware! Don't even consider doing this unless you are very serious about not making any charges you can't cover in the meantime, or you'll be in deeper trouble than ever.

Dorothy Lehmkuhl is a Birmingham-based time management consultant. You can enroll in the following organizing seminars: Birmingham Community House, Jan. 21 and 28, 12:30 p.m. 644-5831, or Schoolcraft College, Feb. 4 to March 12, 7:30 p.m., 462-4448.

Architects challenged by $65,000 idea house

By Doug Funke staff writer

Given the right circumstances cheap, developed land and no stringent lot size requirements new houses can arise with construction budgets of $65,000 in the Detroit market.

That's what architects say. The houses probably won't be the 3,000-plus-square-foot estates erected for recent Homearamas, and they likely won't be found in tony northern and western suburbs.

But they can be built and stylishly,

Progressive Architecture, a magazine for professionals, recently announced a competition for architects and designers to do just that. The winning plan will be built on a 103by-66 foot corner lot in Cleveland.

The challenge - to design a single-family house of at least 950 square feet not to exceed 35 feet in height with a construction budget of $65,000, moderate income housing in Cleveland.

"A lot of architects are involved in high-end housing, expensive housing," said Thomas Fisher, executive editor of the magazine.

'A lot of architects have ideas to reduce the cost of affordable housing. It's not often they're given that opportunity or perceived to be inter-

ARCHITECTS HERE detailed how they would approach the task.

"The answer has got to be in man-ufactured housing," said Francis Bartlett, a Rochester architect. "We just can't go run around in the muck and cold weather and nail 2-by-4s together. It's dumb."

Prefab housing, built to specification in a factory, then transported and assembled on a building site, is safer and more attractive than traditional stick construction, Bartlett

Robert Ziegelman, chairman of Luckenbach/Ziegalman and Partners of Birmingham, figures that elements of a prefab project designed for overseas markets could be adapted here.

Now we're in the midst of . . . going back to prefab, modular housing for Israel and Czechoslovakia,' Ziegelman said. "It's basically threedimension steel trusses 12 feet high, 36 feet long and 9 feet 4 inches high.

"YOU TAKE a multiplicity of that module. You can hang on any kind of exterior, any floor system. All materials are top grade.

You can go faster (with modular)," Ziegelman said. "Money costs money. The faster you go, the more you pick up on interest and carrying Ease of expandability is another good feature of modular housing, Ziegelman said. "You can start with three boxes and add more."

But what of interior elements? "I would really start out with some very open floor plans, one or two major open spaces public in character where you can bring in guests," said Robert Clarke, president of CBI Design Professionals of Birmingham. "That would include a kitchen/eating area and possibly including an entertainment area.

"I'd do some loft-type things. The house probably will be two-story, one or two bedrooms. A loft can serve as . . . a guest area, entertaining area, a play area if you have children.

level of housing is a lack of storage space," Clarke said. "I would look at a basement dedicated to utilities and storage. It's good, cheap space."

Bartlett believes that ego has surpassed need when it comes to housing for many buyers in this country.

'In America, bigness is ego. The bigger the house on the block, the bigger the ego. I think there's a lot of duplication today. House design can be used and should be used to get costs down. People buying for $65,000 want something very comfortable, very cozy, low mainte-

"You need a conversation area to talk. It can easily be the same place you sit down to dinner," Bartlett said. "Obviously, you need a bedroom for parents and children. The real question is do you need a (separate) bath for parents and children? It could be combined with the right

"I DON'T THINK you need an enclosed garage. That's a tremendous cost," Bartlett continued. "Perhaps just a covered area.'

Ziegelman talked about movable pods within a large shell.

What you can do is give one great space and pods, like a kitchen pod, and allow the owner to break up space any way he wants," Ziegelman said. "It doesn't have to be permanent walls. The kitchen and bathroom are the only ones that have to be private spaces.

Fisher, an architect in addition to his duties at the magazine, expects that a couple of hundred architects will submit entries to the contest.

"I think we're going to see various kinds of prefabrication. stress skin construction, things that go beyond 2-by-4 stud construction,' he said

"Another big area is the way houses are planned internally. The emphasis is on flexibility. The standard dining room, living room, kitchen, three bedroom, bath is a considerable luxury in the way space is used.

"Architects are creative people," he said. "They always surprise you."

Wall maps have evolved from an instructional item for the classroom to a decorating item for

Maps as decorating items are just out of this world

Maps that aren't for getting anywhere are becoming hot items for the home. Decorators and home owners, rather than the usual collectors, are buying them up.

It's not that these newcomers to the wonderful world of maps have suddenly started poring over navigational charts or town plans; they're just interested in the maps' aesthetic

"Maps have great wall appeal and come at the right price," Sandra Brusewitz, director of design for Environmental Graphics, said. "But it's only recently that Americans have discovered this. Probably it's a trend triggered by the English look. Once Americans fell in love with the way English country homes look, it was inevitable that they would discover maps as a decorative tool.

But the irony is that an interest in maps would occur at a time when people seem to know less about gethat bemoan the knowledge of geography among students," she said. Yet people travel more and they see maps all the time on television news. But I guess a TV map of the Philippines or Israel with stars indicating Manila and Jerusalem flip by, and people don't grasp where those countries really are. And in school, kids don't learn about maps any-

One of the favorite rooms in the house for maps is the family room. In family rooms, frequent travelers often adorn it with pins to show off ports of call," Brusewitz said. 'And since this is an inexpensive decoration, it's even OK for family members to use Magic Markers to highlight countries, cities or memories. After all, one reason that people are drawn to maps is that they relate to personal experiences.

People like to look up places where they spent their vacation, hon-

"We read about all those studies eymooned or where their ancestors came from.

> BRUSEWITZ ADMITS there's a tendency to think that maps have a masculine bend and work best in dens, offices and libraries, but she believes that thinking is outdated.

> 'Sure, that's the way they do it in English manor houses. But this is the here and now. Women travel just as much as men and are as interested in world affairs as they are. They're no longer sheltered from the world. The topic is so interesting that it would look great in any contemporary and informal setting, even a dining or living room."

She also likes the idea of using maps in hallways.

"It's hard to find something interesting to do with hallways," she said. Besides in hallways one can get close up and study it real good." And she sees them complementing home offices

Members' income shouldn't sway board

ber in a condominium project where the units range from $79,000 to $105,000. I am truly amazed at how cheap the other members of the board are to spend any money on anything significant. All they seem to do is talk about the fact that they need to save-money because some of the members of the association are on a fixed income and that therefore they must reduce the level of maintenance to accommodate these people's economic needs. How do I convince them that they are wrong and are running a potential risk in regard to their responsibilities?

You have encountered a situation where your board is not aware of its fiduciary/legal liabilities and of the distinct possibility that the board can be sued by a co-owner or other person for breach of these duties. It would appear that only through education, short of the "school of hard knocks," will your board understand its legal responsibilities and of the necessity to run the condominium association properly. Perhaps you should consider attending a seminar or obtaining some information on the subject of condominium opera-

condo queries Robert M. Meisner

I am a member of the board of directors and want to get rid of another co-owner/director whom I and the other members of the board suspect has been pocketing funds. One of the directors says we should just throw her off the board, but I am not sure the bylaws allow for it. How can we handle this matter?

More than likely, your condominium bylaws provide that a director of the association cannot be removed unless 50 percent of all the co-owners at a special meeting agree to do so. This requirement must be confirmed, but assuming that is the case, you will have to convene such a special meeting and request that the co-owner/director be removed. Obviously, this is a very difficult task to undertake, resulting in great internal decisiveness and embarrassment to all parties. If, in fact, you have documented evidence that the co-owner/director has absconded with funds, you should approach that director and advise her of your knowledge and request that they resign from the board immediately. Otherwise, consult with your attorney as to what course of action the association should take against the director. Basically, the association should initially be concerned with recouping any funds that were improperly taken, and it may be necessary to immediately notify the association's insurance company regarding any alleged pilferage. You may also have to consult with local police authorities, depending on your discussions with legal counsel and the board member in question.

I am a developer who is planning on doing an airport hangar condominium. Have you had any experience in this area?

Airport hangar condominiums can be a viable form of development if the developer is careful about defining the particular areas that are being sold off and allowing for adequate expansion or contraction, if necessary, of the condominium space. As in the case of parking facilities, recreational condominiums and boat slip condominiums, airport hangar condominium projects can be a viable way of insuring one's ownsership interest, particularly from a commercial standpoint. I would strongly recommend that you thoroughly review from a marketing standpoint the feasibility of the airport condominium and then consult with an experienced condominium lawyer who can provide you with the flexibility that you will no doubt need in preparing the condominium documents

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney specializing in condominiums, real estate and corporate law. You are invited to submit topics about condominiums that you would like to see discussed in this column by writing Robert M. Meisner at 30200 Telegraph Road, Suite 467, Birmingham 48010. ### Boyish capers familiar to comic Chris Elliott

By Christy Bergslien

Who is that crazy guy posing as a prepubescent riding a bike and delivering newspapers on Fox's Get a Life?

The man behind the boyish antics is comedian Chris Elliott. Elliott portrays 30-year-old Chris Peterson, a freespirited man who refuses to grow up. His father, played by his real-life dad, Bob Elliott (of the legendary comedy team Bob and Ray), wishes his son would become something other than head paperboy, and possibly even move out

It all began in 1983 for the younger Elliott, then an NBC tour guide, when he recognized David Letterman taking his mother on a tour of the studios and joked with the talk-show host.

When Late Night With David Letterman was launched, Elliott was hired on - to make coffee and run the office copier, that is.

"I almost left after the first month," said Elliott. "I was screwing up the coffee, and I wasn't answering the phones. I was scared I was going to be fired."

But Elliott's antics would eventually take him out of the office and put him in front of the camera. He became famous for his "Panicky Guy," "Fugitive Guy" and Marlon Brando and Morton Downey Jr. parodies. He also won four Emmy Awards for his writing contributions to the show, and in 1989 he published a book called Daddy's Boy, lampooning novels such as Mommie Dearest. * TV Listing Inc

Louisville meets UNLV in hoops competition

By Steve Paschal

The Louisville Cardinals could take a giant step in the direction of the NCAA Baskethall Tournament when they face the top-ranked Runnin' Rebs of Nevada-Las Vegas before a national television audience on CBS Saturday, Jan. 26.

Louisville won two national championships and made three trips to the final four during the 1980s, but coach Denny Crum is rebuilding this season after the NBA and academic problems robbed his team of most of its veteran players. With All-Metro Conference center Felton Spencer passing up his final year of eligibility and super-sub Jerome Harmon sidelined by grades, the Cardinals have at best an outside shot of making it to this year's sweet sixteen.

Nevada-Las Vegas, on the other hand, is a team with a mission. A year ago the Rebs proved beyond a doubt they were the top team in the country when they pounded Duke 103-73 for the national championship. They seemed destined to watch this year's tournament from the stands until a miracle ruling by the NCAA in November. Faced with a lawsuit, the NCAA, in effect, allowed Coach Jerry Tarkanian to dictate when the Rebels would have to face the music for recruiting violations. As a result, Nevada-Las Vegas will be back to defend its national title when the big boys gather for post-season play.

Tammy Lauren plays a 16-year-old who attempts to legally divorce herself from her mother in "The Emancipation of Lizzie Stern," a CBS Schoolbreak Special, Tuesday

Cable Comments

By LARK L. SAMOUELIAN Executive Director, SW Oakland Cable Comm.

How we think and what action we take is taking on a serious dimension. There is no kidding around we are now to be accountable for our luxurious lifestyles which result in solid waste. What a disgusting topic! And yet how ironic that we must go back to basics because of our need for instant results.

Community television is turning out to be a perfect vehicle to inspire each of us to follow through with necessary routines to assure that our environment improves quickly. Oakland County has an authority established to analyze and develop policies and educate the public as it pertains to recycling opportunities. Their purpose is to "establish the most cost efficient and environmentally sound manner to best serve the residents."

In Oakland County the Resource Recovery and Recycling Authority of Southwest Oakland County was formed in 1987. Lenora K. Kadun, P.E. is their General Manager. Lenora's educational background has major emphasis in Civil Engineering and Public Administration. Her primary responsibility is to plan, construct, and manage a Materials Recovery and Transfer Facility. Such a facility is crucial as landfill space across the nation is quickly running out. The RRRASOC has member communities of Farmington, Farmington Hills, Novi, South Lyon, Southfield, Walled Lake, and Wixom. As an educational tool, the authority has produced programming which may be seen on Community Television Channels which explain exactly how we may plan our home and office environment to recycle, reduce, and re-use our solid waste. Wayne County has established the Conference of Western Wayne. This is a consortium of 18 communities which are: Belleville. Dearborn. Dearborn Heights. Garden City. Inkster. Livonia. Northville. Plymouth. Wayne. Westland. Canton. Huron. Northville Township, Plymouth Township. Redford. Sumtor. Romulus. and Van Buren. The Board of this consortium serves as a program planning and development entity as it pertains to special projects.

Materials Recycling Facility

They are to monitor design, and implement programs. On the subject of recycling, the consortium acts as a central network for all the communities. They have received a grant to facilitate Resource recovery education to residents. To receive a free presentation, those residents living in the communities of Western Wayne may call 525-8690. The Executive Director of the Conference of Western Wave is Daniel Gilmartin. Marcia Bianconi is the Assistant Director. Each community in Oakland and Wayne Counties have established their own procedure for recycling, such as drop off recycling centers, composting areas, and curbside recycling procedures. In one of the educational pieces about recycling, it states, "every day each of us generates an estimated 31/2 pounds of garbage. At face value, this seems like a small amount, however, compounded by the population of Michigan we collectively create enough garbage to fill the Silverdome each and every day of the year." Education and television programs tell us what we can recycle. The following are the basic rules of thumb:

PAPER Newspaper: collect and tie in bundles. No books, magazines or catalogs please METALS Tin or metal cans such as soup or vegetable cans. Rinse out, remove both tops, and flatten.

GLASS Any non-deposit glass bottle or jar: clear, brown, or green. Rinse and remove lids for deposit in color sorted bins.

PLASTICS Cloudy, opaque, and colored plastic containers such as milk jugs, laundry detergent, and bleach. Rinse out and remove caps.

Most centers vary on what grades of plastic they accept There are two other programs on recycling which may be seen on Community Television. Community Forum: Environmental Concerns is a panel discussion program about recycling in the home, underground water contamination, and techniques used to recycle. The other program is Rescuing and Recycling It's Cool To Care. It is hosted by fourth and fifth graders at Allen Elementary. They ask questions. which they have written, of guests Jan Hoffman and Janet Cameron.

As the future unfolds into the present, our local channels will help each of us as we sit in our own living rooms feel confident that we are doing our share to take action and make initial decisions which will help clean up our environment. As you can see by reading this article, the recycling issue is important to all ages. Let your television turn into an educational tool for your family as residents and local government staff create a team that will conquer every challenging issue that comes to each of our communities.

To find out more information contact your respective township or city hall and they will direct you to the correct department to learn the procedures for recycling in your community

Super Bowl has had ups, downs

Game one of TV's most-watched shows

January 21-January 27

By Steve Paschal

In the 25 years since the National Football League championship game became known as the Super Bowl, there have been quite a few games that didn't live up to the expectations the name implies. But, cliff-hanger or blowout, ABC knows it can count on a Super Payoff in the A.C. Nielsen ratings when the AFC and NFC champions meet Sunday, Jan. 27, in Tampa, Fla.

The best of the two conferences have battled for the Lombardi Trophy 24 times beginning with Green Bay's lopsided 35-10 win over Kansas City in Super Bowl I.

According to Nielsen Media Research, which began monitoring the television viewing habits of the American public in July of 1960, 17 Super Bowls are among the top 50 watched programs of the last 30 years.

Super Bowl XVI between the San Francisco 49ers and Cincinnati Bengals became the top-rated sporting event of all time, garnering a 49.1 rating and a 73 percent audience share for CBS. The only programs ever to draw a larger audience were the 1983 final eipsode of "M*A*S*H," the Nov. 21, 1980, "Who Shot J.R." episode of "Dallas," and "Roots, Part VIII," which aired on Jan. 30, 1977.

Super Bowl XVI was one of those games that lived up to its advance billing. With more than 150 million people watching, young Joe Montana led San Francisco to the first of three Super Bowl titles that gave the 49ers the undeniable right to be called the "Team of the '80s." Montana, who completed 14 of 22 passes for 157 yards and a touchdown, was named the game's Most Valuable Player. Although the 49ers built what appeared to be an insurmountable three-touchdown lead by the middle of the third quarter, they had to rally to defeat Cincinnati 26-20 after the Bengals came back to score three times in a 10-minute span.

There have been other games that truly deserve to be called "Super." Perhaps the most memorable Super Bowl of all time was played two years ago at Joe Robbie Stadium in Miami when Montana directed a 92-yard drive in the game's final seconds to beat the Bengals again, this time 20-16. All-pro wide receiver Jerry Rice was named the game's MVP after catching 11 passes for 215 yards and a touchdown.

The 1970s saw two unforgettable clashes between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Dallas Cowboys. In Super Bowl X, the Steelers won the second of four titles in the 1970s by scoring twice in the fourth quarter to beat the Cowboys 21-17. Two years later, Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw had one of the most unforgettable days in the game's is a true and hair-raising look at what becomes of convicted females and their families on the outside. Three stories of three women comprise the HBO-made trilogy starring Rae Dawn Chong, Lolita Davidovich (Blaze) and Annabella Sciorra (True Love). The film debuts Jan. 26.

An international cast assembles for the world premiere of Disney's Bejewelled Jan. 20. Starring in the action comedy about a beautiful woman, a detective-in-training, two precocious youngsters and a stolen gem collection are Emma Samms, Jerry Hall, Dirk Benedict and Denis Lawson.

history when he threw for 315 yards and four touchdowns in a 35-31 victory over Dallas.

But, there have been laughters, too. In Super Bowl XVIII, underdog Oakland faced a Washington team that had pounded its way to a 14-2 record behind the bruising running of fullback John Riggins. However, the day belonged to Raiders running back Marcus Allen, who ran for 191 yards and two touchdowns as the Raiders crushed the Redskins 38-9. Then, last year, the 49ers put the crowning touch on their dream decade by humiliating the Denver Broncos 55-10.

The silver anniversary of the Super Bowl will be ABC's third presentation of the post-season event. The "ABC Monday Night Football" trio of Frank Gifford, Al Michaels and Dan Dierdorf will be in the broadcast booth, while Brent Musburger will serve as pre-game and halftime host. He will be joined by commentators Bob Griese, Lynn Swann, Dick Vermeil, Beth Ruyak, Jack Whitaker and Jack Arute.

on extended leave By Candace Havens

Eileen Fulton

Dear Candace: I have watched As the World Turns for many years and now wonder what happened to Eileen Fulton, Lisa from way back.

Also, on China Beach I read where Dana Delany at one time was on ATWT. Could you tell me what part she played? -Thank you, Henretta

Dear Henretta: Eileen Fulton is on an extended leave of absence from the show due to illness related to a recent surgery. After her recuperation, she should be returning to the show

You are correct about Delany She played the character Haley Wilson on ATWT during 1981. It was one of the first television roles she played, and she wasn't really on the show all that long.

Dear Candace: What has happened to Mason on Santa Barbara? I liked him on The Young and the Restless and was amazed how soon he became Mason on SB. The Mason they have now is a good actor, I guess, but why mess around with the viewers like this? Just when we get used to good actors, wham, they are gone! - Thank you, Bea Emery Duncan, Okla

Dear Bea: Terry Lester left SB of his own accord when his contract was upthis past October. He surprised everyone - especially the show's execs with his decision to leave, and he cited only that he wanted to go on to do other things. This decision was made just one year after his messy departure from

Dear Candace: I watched General Hospital the other day and was surprised to see Dr. Steve Hardy on Is the woman who played his wife Audrey, still on GH2 How about nurse Jessie" - Thank you, Myra Martin. McMinnville, Tenn

Dear Myra: John Beradino (Dr. Steve Hardy), Rachel Ames (Audrey Hardy) and Emily McLaughlin (Jessie Brewer) are all still on the show. They just haven't had storylines that are on the front burner lately. It should be interesting to see if the return of Gloria Monty, executive producer of the show, brings about some new storylines for these favorites

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, TX 76102-0748
