Temple Baptist vote delayed

■ Plymouth Township trustees were scheduled to vote on the Temple Baptist Church issue. Instead, they decided on Tuesday to delay by the vote two weeks, to review an alternate legal opinion.

By Steve Stevens
Staff Writer

The Observer Temple Baptist Church design, now opposed by most Plymouth Township residents, was scheduled to go before township trustees Tuesday.

But instead of voting on whether to allow the development to go in, trustees on Tuesday voted to delay a decision for a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 8 at township hall.

The move was because trustees have asked officials to look at an alternate legal opinion, on the township's chances of winning a lawsuit to stop the big church development.

At a public forum July 6, residents working for the township administration urged that officials settle the lawsuit brought by Temple Baptist. That suit was brought nearly a year ago, after the township planning commission rejected the church's plan on grounds it would generate too much traffic.

Township Attorney Tim Cronin said it appeared likely Temple Baptist would win the lawsuit, so grounds for rejection of plans are being altered. He said the township might with some form of the plans about increased traffic. And

Changes may ease downtown congestion

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

The future of downtown street traffic switches to Main street this week and on Monday Fralick Street downtown will become a one-way westbound street.

The change results from the continuing congestion that exits on Penniman that is caused by the existing mail drop boxes and the need for additional downtown parking, said downtown development authority Director Steve Guile.

The change will allow the DDA to add ... parking spaces to the north side of Fralick. Parallel parking will remain on the south side of the street.

Meanwhile, the post office will add mail drop boxes to a new bump-out on the south side of Fralick behind the post office. This will allow postal customers the option of choosing between drop boxes on either Fralick or Penniman and will ease traffic congestion near the drop boxes on Penniman, Guile said.

As to streetscape construction planned for this week, Guile said work will continue on street curb areas on Forest and Main Street. "They'll begin bricking the area on the Kellogg Park side of Main, and street lights are going to continue to be placed along and in the median on Main Street," Guile said.

"People will begin to see the double globes installed on the light posts," he said, as electrical work on the Main Street pedestrian island continues.

Township farmer seeks fair break on his pension taxes

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

It's not fair that a retired farmer, or any other person self-employed during their working years, should pay more taxes on retirement earnings than other pensioners, said Lloyd Sharland.

Sharland, a retired Plymouth Township farmer, has contacted state legislators to seek support for legislation proposed in Lansing to end the inequity.

"All I'm asking for is to be treated equally as a citizen," he said. "I should be allowed the same $30,000 deduction on this income that my neighbor, who retired from General Motors, receives on his pension."

And some state legislators agree.

House Bill 4404, which would allow seniors to deduct interest, dividends and capital gains from their adjusted gross income up to a set deduction limits, passed the House in the recently completed session.

The bill is now before the Michigan Senate finance committee, said Sen. Bob Geake, R-Northville.

Geake said the legislation could go before the Senate "probably in late September or early October."

While a similar bill failed to pass the Legislature last year, Geake said Monday, "I think the chances are better than previously because the

First woman

Mary Beth Leininger, co-owner of the Plymouth Veterinary Hospital, is president-elect of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

The election took place July 9 in Pittsburgh, Pa. at the AVMA's 132nd annual convention.

Leininger will be the first woman president of the 60,000-plus member national association for veterinarians.

She was nominated by the Michigan Veterinary Medical Association, of which she is a former president.

Leininger is also a co-founder of Allied Veterinary Services, a Detroit-area veterinary emergency service and has received service awards from professional groups including the Michigan Veterinary Medical Association and the American Animal Hospital Association.

PLYMOUTH PIPELINE

Senior program available

Starting in August, the Emergency Pharmaceutical Program for seniors will once again be available in greater Plymouth.

Through the program, qualified seniors can get a free month's supply of medication thanks to a grant from the state of Michigan, if seniors meet authorized income guidelines.

Vouchers will be available for eligible seniors at the Plymouth Township Hall, at Ann Arbor and Lilley roads on the second and third Fridays of each month by appointment only.

To register, call Frances Rudd at 455-7526 between noon and 3 p.m. Mondays or Wednesdays.

If it's necessary to leave a message, state your name, phone number and your interest in the program.

If a ride is needed for you or another person to pick up vouchers, let Rudd know.

Christian concert

Plymouth Police Chief Robert Scoggins and his Southern gospel music group "The Chapels" will perform at 7 p.m. Friday, September 15 at First Baptist Church of Canton at the corner of Cherry Hill and Sheldon roads.

The vocal group also gives testimonies about how the Gospel changed their lives. The performance is sponsored by the First Baptist Church of Canton Golden Agers and a free will offering will be received. Everyone is welcome.

Inkster Road closed for 60 days

Inkster Road between Six and Seven Mile in Livonia is completely closed to through traffic to allow for bridge construction at the Rouge River.

That stretch of road will remain closed for about 60 days.

Merriman Road between Schoolcraft and Plymouth roads also will be completely closed to through traffic at the CSX Rail road crossings beginning Monday, July 24.

The road closure will last for about 30 days.

Local traffic will be maintained north and south of the railroad area.

Detouring will be posted to Middlebelt and Farmington roads during this period.

Alternate routes also are advised.

should the church win millions of dollars in damages, taxpayers would have to pay the judgment.

Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy said the alternate legal opinion was just presented Monday. Delaying the vote until Aug. 8 will give officials time to review it, she said.

Nearly 50 neighbors of the church proposed for the southwest corner of Ridge and North Territorial roads showed up for the trustees meeting on Tuesday. In explaining the delay, McCarthy told them, "We feel we have to thoroughly analyze that (the attorney's opinion) before we make a decision on the item."

She invited homeowners wanting to comment on the issue to submit comments in writing. Residents can also address the issue at the Aug. 8 meeting, before trustees are scheduled to vote.

One neighbor of the proposed church, Peter Grutter of Ridgewood Hills, said he wished the board would have taken public comments on Tuesday.

Of the proposed church, "The only thing that bothers me is the performing arts aspect of it," he said.

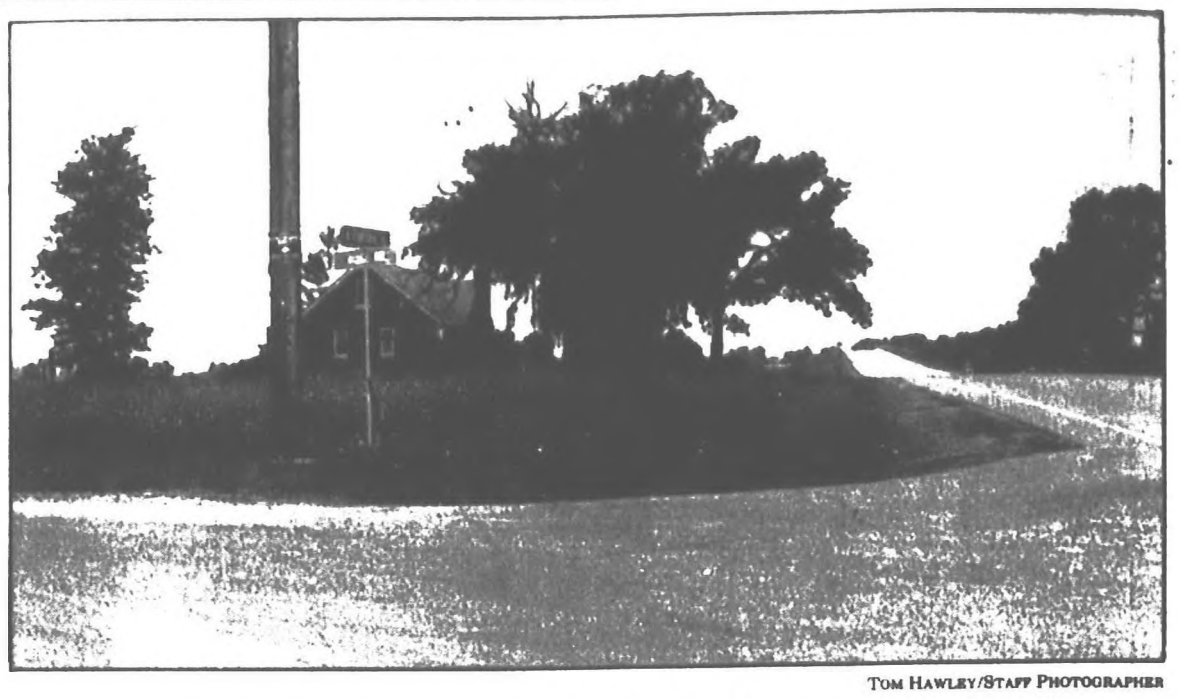

Rawa Fleisher, another neighbor, said she tried to call Gov. John Engler to see if there was anything he could do to stop the church. "They (Engler's staff) basically said this is a township issue," she said.

"We recently transferred here and selected this location because it was a residential area. It's just going to bring a lot of traffic," Fleisher said, adding she's worried about safety, as she has two young children.

Township resident Karen Boyd said that the township shouldn't give in to the church. "It's taking away the power for municipalities to govern themselves. I think you have to stand up for what's right and fight for it."

But resident Dean Swartzwelter urged the board to settle with Temple Baptist. "It's a very difficult decision for you, but you can avoid a big potential liability to the township. I believe your attorney's giving you real sound advice."

In discussions with Temple Baptist on making the church development fit better with the neighborhood, church officials have agreed to limit Christian concerts from 24 to 14 per year and to move parking lots proposed near Ridge Road to an area near M-14, said Jim Anulewicz, township public services director.

Street on the commercial side," he said. The work reveals vaults used for coal chutes and storage under sidewalks in the area in front of Country Charm and the antique store housed in the former Fred Hill Haberdashers building.

The area requires special work, because a type of well must be constructed to separate the basement area from sidewalk area, Guile said. The area must then be waterproofed, backfilled with dirt and compacted. "Once that's completed in the next two weeks, they'll begin installing the ice melt system," Guile said.

Next week, crews will start cutting trenches for crosswalk areas to run from Kellogg Park to the Main Street pedestrian island and west to the sidewalk along Main Street businesses. "The reason they do that is so a cement pad can be poured, it will hold the paver bricks when they're installed so when the road is finally asphalted the pavers will be flush with the street," he said.

Also next week, work will continue on Penniman to install electrical hookups for street lights. "A storm drain is also to be put in on Penniman, that will require some closing of Penniman near the Penn Theater for trenching and back-filling," Guile said.

"Everything's pretty much on schedule," he said. Most work on the streetscape project is expected to be completed by November.

Legislature has been in a mood to reduce taxes generally, and there's a lot of interest in helping retirees."

Geake said he supports the bill. While the Legislature is in recess for the summer, Geake said some committee chairmen continue to study legislation, to be ready to go when lawmakers convene in the fall.

The measure is estimated to save senior taxpayers $47 million annually.

Sharland said he's surprised that many self-employed people aren't aware of the current inequity in taxes collected on retirement income.

Both Sharland's dentist and a nephew who is a veterinarian in Adrian hadn't heard of the tax inequity for self-employed people. "I haven't found one self-employed person who knows about this," he said.

"I, like my father before me and like my son today, earned my living and supported my family working as a farmer," Sharland said. "I raised turkeys and grew and harvested wheat, soybeans and corn on a small 130-acre farm outside Plymouth from the early 1940s until my retirement in the late 1970s."

"My primary income at this point in my life is the interest and dividend income I receive on the investment of my retirement fund," he said.

"I maintain that this income is my pension and as such that I, too, should be allowed the same $30,000 deduction on this income."

"This gets my goat," he said.

To voice interest in the legislation, contact Senate Finance Committee Chairwoman Sen. Joanne Emmons, R-Big Rapids.

Zap! Laser tag recreates the thrill of the hunt

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER

It's the feeling of being hunted and players love it.

Two Canton establishments are offering a popular high tech game that simulates the thrills of the hunt.

Laser Tag is a game of tag played with a laser light and a computer that keeps score on a scorebord prominently displayed in a darkened laser play area.

Kid Kingdom, which opened in June 1993, started Laser Tag in June. "Laser Tag at Kid Kingdom is unique," said Patrick Harrington, president of Kid Kingdom. "Laser games allow participants to be the space hero they have always wanted to be in a safe and challenging family environment. Laser Tag, features actual laser beams zipping through the air which is both visually exciting and physically exhilarating. Laser Tag can be a great experience for people of all ages."

Kid Kingdom is a 12,000-square-foot family entertainment center located at 42599 Ford Road, in the Canton Corner Shopping Center. Kid Kingdom features an indoor playpark featuring a restaurant facility, five birthday party rooms, redemption game area and an 8,000-square-foot playscape. Kid Kingdom continues to operate its restaurant facilities and redemption game area during the Laser Tag hours.

Kid Kingdom will offer a ten-minute Laser Tag game for up to 16 players at a time. In addition to individual games, there's group rates and group packages which include food and birthday packages.

Laser Tag will be offered at 8:30 p.m.-10:30 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 8:30 p.m.-11 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Also in the planning stages are Saturday morning laser birthday parties.

Lights are turned off and the game proceeds with black lights and flashing lights. Laser Tag is played throughout an 8,000-foot playscape featuring human gerbil tunnels, ball pits, roller runs, twisting slides, swinging slides and more.

"We get alot of parents, teens and parents, and couples," Harrington said. "We believe that the offering of Laser Tag entertainment in the evening will complement an already successful business enterprise and allows us to offer our customers an exciting entertainment option."

Adrianne Brenner, of Canton, has played the game twice. Her co-worker John Mincher, of Plymouth, called it a "cool and fun time."

Children 15 and younger must be accompanied by an adult and socks must worn.

At Zap Zone, 42130 Ford right down the street from Kid Kingdom, participants enter the "ultimate adventure."

Participants enter the zone filled with barriers, smoke and blaring techno-music. Suddenly laser beams blast overhead. You grab your phaser gun, rally your team and the game begins.

Hiding behind a wall, you creep toward the neutral zone but you are spotted by the other team and they open fire. You are met by oncoming laser blasts. Your vest vibrates and you've been deactivated. Your heart pounds as you count seconds before you're back in the thick of the action.

"We have groups from Ameritech and Yazaki Corporation who come here," said manager Gaz Ismail. "It's a great stress reliever."

Employee Nick Ott, explained that the rules are stated and participants hide. "You feel like a terminator."

The game itself began three years ago in California. One man was so enthused with the game that he played 20 games in one day, Ismail said.

Carol McKee of Canton brought 14 kids to Zap Zone last week. "I found out about it through a friend," McKee said.

Early morning dumpster fire brings police to tire store

POLICE BEAT

Plymouth police and fire responded at 4:36 a.m., July 21 to a suspected case of arson in a dumpster behind the Goodyear store on Main Street.

Upon arrival, police said they observed the suspect, a 38-year-old Deer Street resident, walking his bike northbound on Main near Linden. He told police he was fixing his bike chain.

Officers took him to Goodyear. A witness, a 24-year-old Plymouth man, said he was walking his dog when he noticed the suspect near the overhead door of the building.

He said he saw the suspect walk toward the dumpster behind Goodyear. A few minutes later, he said he saw flames. He ran to a pay phone at a nearby party store to call 911.

The witness said that when he returned to the dumpster, he saw the suspect 50 feet from the dumpster, looking for a "safe avenue of escape." Not finding one, the suspect rode his bike through the parking lot and northbound on Main, said police.

Firefighters extinguished the flames before any property was damaged. The suspect denies any involvement. Both the witness and suspect appeared to be intoxicated, police said.

Caught orange-handed

Plymouth police responded at 1:09 p.m. July 22 to a larceny complaint at the Hop-In gas station on Ann Arbor Road.

The clerk, a 22-year-old Westland man, said he saw the suspect place an item in the right pocket of his shorts. The employee said he observed a bulge in his right-hand pocket that wasn't present when the suspect entered the service station.

An officer arrived and spotted the suspect, a 38-year-old Livonia man, near his bicycle on the corner. The officer said he also observed the bulge in his right-hand pocket.

The suspect was asked if he'd taken an item without paying. Police said he pulled out of his pocket a 59-cent, 1.65-ounce bag of Cheese Nips and handed them over. The man admitted he'd taken the snack without paying.

The clerk said he didn't want to prosecute, and that he would accept payment. However when the clerk called his manager, the manager said he wanted to file a formal complaint. The suspect was ticketed and ordered to appear in Plymouth district court Aug. 9. The suspect left the area after police made a background check.

Gunplay from car leads to arrests

A mailbox shooting spree in west Plymouth Township on Friday landed two men in jail.

It all started at about 11 p.m. when neighbors heard gun shots and saw muzzle flashes from a red Chevy Camero headed north on Ridge past Joy Road, according to the police report on the incident.

Police spotted a car matching the description, and made a traffic stop on Sheldon just north of Ann Arbor Road. Police said there were three men and one woman in the car — and two guns: a 12-gauge shotgun and a .32 caliber automatic gun.

Police arrested a Wayne man, 20, and a Flat Rock man, 21, both on charges of carrying a concealed weapon in a motor vehicle. The maximum penalty if found guilty on the charge is five years in jail and a $2,500 fine.

After the arrests, police found that several mail boxes, in the area where shots had been fired, had been damaged from bullets fired from the shotgun.

Both men were arraigned on the charges Sunday before district judge Sylvia Jones, who entered not guilty pleas on their behalf. The Flat Rock man was released after posting $250 bond, while the Wayne man was lodged in the Wayne County Jail on Sunday after failing to post a $750 bond, police said.

School board's support for 'career leave' at risk

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

"Career exploration leaves" for teachers will become a thing of the past if a few Plymouth-Canton board of education members prevail.

Traditionally, the board has allowed employees to return to Plymouth-Canton if jobs they've accepted outside the district didn't pan out.

Such a request was considered by the board Monday night. Farrand Elementary School teacher Deborah Greenwood has requested a career exploration leave of absence for the 1995-96 school year.

"Language in the contract has given the board discretion," said Superintendent Charles Little. "It says the board 'may' approve career leaves."

Trustee Mark Horvath said that while he wishes Greenwood well, he has problems with the practice, in light of the way "the rest of the world works.

"I don't feel I can support a leave for someone who is leaving the district. I don't feel a need to hold that opening, should their outside-the-district employment not work out."

Newly-elected trustee Carrie Blamer agreed. "I realize the precedent is that the board always approves these leaves. But I have a problem with someone coming back, saying they didn't like it in another district and replacing someone who has interviewed for that job. We need to send the message that we are going to look at things in some new ways."

Errol Goldman, assistant superintendent for personnel, said teachers on leave usually don't return, but that they are entitled to take a position for which they are qualified. "We've never had a situation where we had to pink slip anyone when a teacher did come back," he said.

Trustee Jack Farrow said, "From what I know of Deb Greenwood, I would welcome her back with open arms any day. To say we will never grant a career exploration leave puts us at risk of losing some good people."

Trustee Susan Davis said employees who leave the district have to assume some risk. "This person has a decision to make. I don't believe we have to support holding a spot," she said.

In the view of Trustee Barbara Graham, "we probably won't be granting these in the future. But this is lowering the ax real quick. I do believe there is a better way to do this."

Chuck Portelli, president of the teachers union, said he was perplexed that the issue has arisen. Personnel including administrator Donna Aveck have returned to the district, armed with valuable knowledge from the business community, he said.

"In the past, these have been granted unilaterally," he said. "I would hope you'd bargain this issue because of your past practice."

If not, he added, "this will probably come back to you in the form of a grievance in an open hearing so Deborah's side of the story can be told." Greenwood was not at the meeting, and was unavailable for comment at press time.

After reconsidering, board members agreed to take up the issue in the next round of bargaining.

"While we do have the power to put the hammer down, we need to operate together,' said Horvath. "Chuck Portelli makes some good points."

Board president David Artley said, "I think this is a change in the way we do business philosophically. We have nothing against this teacher."

Horvath agreed. "I hope Deb realizes it's not personal. I think we got to where we needed to be, getting this out in the open. We'll have to talk about this in bargaining and get the language straightened out."

Honored: Jack Bologna of Plymouth was recognized by two national organizations for his many achievements in fraud auditing and forensic accounting. In his Main Street office, Bologna displays photographs of Bobby Kennedy and Everett Dirksen, national figures he befriended while working in Washington, D.C.

Computer fraud expert wins two more awards

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

The honors keep coming for Jack Bologna, founder of Computer Protection Systems, Inc. and one of Plymouth's most noted citizens. The author and professor has worked in banking, public accounting, federal law enforcement, industrial security, post-secondary education, management training and consulting.

Most recently, Bologna was honored by the Southeast Michigan Chapter of the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners and the New York Chapter of the Information Systems Security Association.

The lifetime Certified Fraud Examiners award recognized Bologna's "unrelenting commitment to the detection and prevention of fraud."

Bologna was the first midwesterner to be awarded by the New York association. The honor was bestowed for Bologna's substantial contributions in the field in information security. "It was such a shock; I didn't expect it," he said.

Bologna has authored a half-dozen books on corporate and computer fraud, and more than 100 technical articles. He publishes two newsletters from his attractive Main Street office: the Forensic Accounting Review and Computer Security Digest.

Bologna's writings are used in colleges and universities and by certified professional accountants across the country. He's a full-time associate professor at the Southfield campus of Siena Heights College, where he teaches management, international business, strategic planning and business ethics. He also does some consulting and conducts seminars.

■ 'I'm always interested in learning something new that relates to computers and high technology.

Jack Bologna

Just about any time you catch Bologna, it seems he can relate to the day's headlines in an interesting way.

When the Observer last wrote about Bologna in 1992, a movie on Jimmy Hoffa was being filmed. Bologna was reminded of the time in 1961 when he literally bumped into the late Teamsters union leader. Then an investigator with the U.S. Department of Justice, Bologna was auditing Hoffa's union local in Detroit.

"He was running from the first floor to the second, taking two steps at a time," Bologna recalled. "I was coming down the stairs, and he was talking to somebody behind him, and there was a collision."

Taking the stand Monday in the O.J. Simpson murder trial was a medical examiner named Dr. Frederick Rieder. Rieder provided key testimony regarding chemicals found in a pair of Simpson's socks; evidence the defense is using to accuse Los Angeles police of framing Simpson.

Bologna and Rieder were part of a 25-member delegation that traveled to the Soviet Union in 1988 to exchange information on computer crime.

"We shared a room in Moscow," recalled Bologna. "He's a Yugoslavian who was the coroner in Philadelphia and New York. I think he worked here in the Detroit city morgue at one time."

self-effacing at 66. "Receiving all these awards makes me think people must be afraid I'm going to croak," he said with a laugh. "I hope the Lord gives me a few more years. There are a lot of things I want to do yet."

Bologna recently published an updated edition of his book, "Fraud Auditing and Forensic Accounting," updated with new cases, materials and references.

"I'm always interested in learning something new that relates to computers and high technology," said Bologna. "I'm very interested in technology and what influences it has economically, socially, and politically.

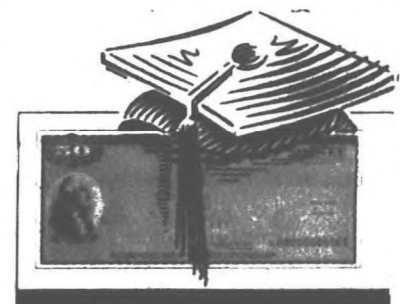

" At the moment, I'm very concerned about the social benefits of technology. Technology is not necessarily good or bad. Using technology to make bigger and better bombs may or may not be good."

Bologna, who graduated with a law degree from the University of Detroit, has worked for the IRS, the U.S. Labor Department, the U.S. Senate anti-trust sub-committee, the Food and Drug Administration, and interestingly, the Nashville-based Minnie Pearl Chicken Systems in the salad days of the fast food industry.

Not exactly a conventional career path. "I did it by accident, but I guess it was the right way to gain expertise," he said. "To just do routine financial auditing for 30 years would have driven me nuts."

Romney leaves powerful legacy

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW AND PAT MURPHY
STAFF WRITERS

George W. Romney, the former Michigan governor who distinguished himself in business, government and volunteerism, died Wednesday while exercising in his home in Bloomfield Hills. He was 88.

He's remembered as a person with unquestioned integrity whose independence and straight talk sometimes put him at odds with leaders in politics as well as the business world.

Romney, 88, seemed to "fall asleep" in the middle of his exercise routine, said his son, Scott. "He sort of fell over" and never regained consciousness, he said.

"He was perfectly healthy," said his wife, Lenore. "We had a wonderful day together yesterday. We were looking forward to another one today."

The funeral will be Monday at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at 425 N. Woodward in Bloomfield Hills. The family asks that memorials be directed to the church or local volunteer organizations.

Romney leaves a powerful legacy.

His business career included serving as chairman and chief executive officer of American Motors Corp. from the formation of the company in 1954 until he resigned in 1962 to run for governor.

At AMC, Romney erased an $85-million debt and led the U.S. compact car revolution with the Rambler, the nation's first compact economy car.

He was voted the Associated Press' Business Man of the Year for four years straight (1957-61).

In 1959 he organized a group called Citizens for Michigan to seek answers and recommend solutions for Michigan's troubles. Among the solutions was a constitutional convention, of which Romney was vice president in 1961-62.

Former state Sen. George Kuhn, now Oakland County drain commissioner, called Romney the "father of the new constitution of Michigan. He spearheaded it from the get-go."

The "Romney" constitution, ratified under a Romney administration, simplified state government by providing for 20 principal departments instead of 132 departments, boards, commissions and bureaus.

"He's got to be labeled a great American, without a doubt," Kuhn said.

A three-term governor, Romney served in that capacity 1963-71. In 1962 Romney beat incumbent Democrat John Swainson and was the only Republican to be elected statewide.

He was re-elected in 1964 and 1966 by wide margins.

In an era where the GOP was perceived to be the voice of General Motors and Democrats of the UAW, Romney stood for "consumerism." His wing of the party achieved county home rule, a civil rights commission, constitutional status for prohibition of the death penalty, a stronger state Board of Education, and a new Court of Appeals.

Former U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, a Plymouth resident, called Romney "my mentor."

Pursell was congressional district chairman in the 1960s when Romney came to Plymouth to campaign. "He just kept moving, moving," Pursell said. "You couldn't keep up with the guy. He taught me to never ride in a car. Always walk. He was a really good teacher. Everything he did, he had his sleeves rolled up. He was just a fireball."

Romney's great contribution to Michigan, Pursell said, is "his magnetic leadership that re-energized the whole Michigan Republican Party, which was really down in those days."

For 11 Hours Only, Newton Will Sizzle With The Best Furniture Savings Of The Summer.

OUR EMPLOYEE TAKE-OVER SALE LETS YOU SAVE 25-62% ON EVERYTHING IN STOCK.

Saturday, July 29 10-9 p.m.

A slight overstock in inventory has led to a complete overreaction on the part of our Employees. Armed with special tags that say SALE in big letters, they've declared their own brand of mutiny at Newton Furniture.

In fact, this is nothing less than the heated frenzy of massacring prices on the best in name brands. Like 40% off...50% off, and even more on specially selected furniture. Which makes Newton Furnitutre the hottest place to be this Saturday.

Think I'm kidding? Craig Madvin was red-faced when two numbers got switched on a multiply order of Sleep-Sofas. Big Deal, it happens. But it means a Big Deal for you. Because now, these superb sofa-beds (which were $799 are only $499. At $300 off, we're talking quite a savings...and the quality is outstanding. Get in early for these specials.

Craig's logic was at that much off that the sofas will sell quickly. Don Paul went one better, and the two set up a gentleman's bet. Don then discounted a superb contemporary sofa, covered in a long lasting weave from $1,008 to only $456. More than half off. It'll be interesting to see which sells first.

Julia Pierce thinks Prince Charles, of all people, is hot. Yet you should see her take a swipe at royalty. Specifically, Julia slashed the price of a new Queen Anne Wing Chair, one of our classiest pieces. Was $591, now only $276. Bargains like these are what our employees are trying to convey. So convey yourself in here on Saturday.

Even Our Custom Sofas are on sale... 25-40% OFF.

The take-over continued. "Let's get hot" became the word of the day. It was interesting how Richard Yanity cut a dashing figure--namely, by dashing the figures on all bedroom sets to the very depth of savings. For example, we figured that one of our best Bedroom Sets---in oak, including a bed, dresser, mirror and chest was worth $2,295. He cut it to only $988.

Then, swashbuckler Bob Corbett (I'm not kidding: Bob really does buckle his swashes!!) took a traditional sofa that was $1,078 down to $439, a savings of $639. (Talk about hot savings! Boss Newton is gonna buckle when he sees these discounts!)

Carolyn Hardacre, noted a simple 7 piece Dinette Set. Or better said, she denoted it...from $984 to only $575. Note too, that you'll save the $409 on Saturday only.

In the spirit of the moment, Tammy Davy spirited away a gallery full of premium ceramic, and brass lamps...marking them down to start at only $49. Spirits were high...which means lamps are really at a high discount.

Over the port side, Sherry Robinson espied a lovely Dining Set, complete with table, china cabinet and 4 chairs. Was $3,255. Saturday only, it'll be almost half off: $1,687, ("Perfect for lots of company", said Sherry. At $1,568, it's perfect for anything.) Susan Kolb proved in her own way that the pen is much mightier than the sword: Her pen slashed prices on select entertainment, TV and Stereo Centers, wall units, and curio cabinets by straightforward 50% off. Mighty big savings. And Sharon decided to table the issue: Rather than postpone savings on select end tables, coffee tables and sofa tables, she slashed prices 40-50% off.

If you need it, this Sale is the Chance to get it.

Don't you posptone getting in here to save on these. They start at $129.

It was a pleasure to hear pacifist Jackie say that she was heading for the country. Then our hearts dropped, as Jackie headed for our country-style sofas*...discounting an especially attractive sofa by $429!! Was $1078, Saturday only. $649. (On that note, you'll find lots of sofas at great savings this Saturday.) And Nancy took her self-proclaimed "transitional 50's phase" to extremes...and discounted a superb transitional sofa from $1,078 to only $499. "It's a price you'd see in the 50"s, she said, though the sofa, of course, is totally new. Anne set her sizzlin' theory of savings to music. Singing "Heat Wave" she gave some hot discounts to a contemporary sofa that was$1,148...*now $484...$706 off. A very hot single...the song that is. We've got lots of sofas at great values.

Slowly, the picture emerged. (Phyllis helped by *slashing prices on select pictures and other sundry accessories by 40-50% off.) Then Bobbie figured out a way to offer compound savings...by pricing one of the finest sectionals from a reasonable $2,685 to a phenominal $1,474: again, $1,211 off. While that admittedly represents an extraordinarily hot bargain, you'll find multiple settings--sectionals, modulars, sofas, loveseats, and sofa/chair pairs at great savings.

And that's only the beginning. Time and space and mutinous looks prevent us from further discourse on the hundreds upon hundreds of sizzling Summer Furniture Bargains. Think the weather is hot? Wrong. Think Madonna is hot? Nope. The hottest thing this Summer is Saturday at Newton's Sizzlin' Summer Sale. Incredible furniture, at incredibly good bargains. *Don't miss it.

New Pieces. Many One-of-A-Kind. Discontinued Items. Everything. All At Cut-To-The-Bone Savings.

Illegal evidence OK in tax case

AP — Evidence ruled illegal in a criminal case still may be used in a civil tax proceeding, the Michigan Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

The decision will make it easier to go after drug dealers even if criminal charges against them collapse, state officials said.

The high court said that outside a conspiracy between police and tax officials, unlawfully seized evidence may properly be admitted for purposes of an independent civil tax assessment proceeding."

"Paying taxes is a task shared by all citizens of this state, criminals and non-criminals alike," the court said.

The 5-2 ruling overturned a state Court of Appeals decision, which had declared that the state Tax Tribunal was not permitted to base a jeopardy tax assessment on illegally seized evidence. Such assessments can be levied if officials fear that the assets may be taken out of the state and the collection of taxes is in jeopardy because the activity was illegal.

"Today's decision is a clear victory for honest taxpayers and a clear loss for drug dealers and other tax cheaters," said Attorney General Frank Kelley.

"Michigan can now use jeopardy tax assessments to go after a criminal's assets."

According to the Supreme Court ruling, police searched the home of Diane Kivela, then of Inkster, on July 7, 1989. They confiscated four ounces of marijuana and financial records documenting the sale and purchase of narcotics.

Charges of possessing marijuana with intent to deliver were dismissed when a judge ruled the search warrant was invalid because it was not supported by a probable cause that a law was being broken. That is required for most warrants.

Even though the criminal charges were dismissed, the financial records were turned over to the state Treasury Department. It determined that Kivela owed sales, use, personal income and single business taxes, along with penalties and interest.

The department issued a jeopardy tax assessment of $26,079 for unpaid taxes on drug sales between July 1988 and July 1989. Kivela filed a petition with the Tax Tribunal arguing that the Treasury Department couldn't use evidence from an illegal search as the basis for a civil tax case.

The Tax Tribunal ruled the evidence admissible, only to be reversed by the Court of Appeals.

The Supreme Court rejected Kivela's argument that the state constitution provides in civil cases a greater protection against the use of illegally seized evidence than the U.S. Constitution.

"In this case, the defendant already reaped the benefits of the exclusionary rule (which bars the use of illegally seized evidence)," the court said. "She avoided a long prison sentence.

"If we were to extend the exclusionary to civil tax proceedings, we would not only allow this defendant to avoid a long prison sentence, but she would also be allowed to avoid paying the taxes that every citizen of this state must incur."

The opinion was written by Justice Conrad Mallett Jr. He was joined by Chief Justice James Brickley and Justices Patricia Boyle, Dorothy Comstock Riley and Elizabeth Weaver.

Justice Michael Cavanagh, joined by Justice Charles Levin, dissented. He said the exclusionary rule "clearly precludes the use of the evidence in this jeopardy tax proceeding" based on "the quasi-criminal nature of the tax fraud penalties" and on the connection between the police who obtained the illegal evidence and the subsequent tax proceeding.

"Mutts" sought for MHS fundraiser

The 1995 Michigan Humane Society "Fall Mutt March" is set for 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 16, at Nankin Mills Station, Edward Hines Drive and Ann Arbor Trail in Westland.

Anyone with or without a canine companion, may participate in the event, including cat owners.

Walkers collect pledges for each mile of the five-mile course, with a $1 minimum pledge per mile recommended.

Dogs must show proof of rabies, distemper and parvovirus vaccination and must remain on a leash at all times.

Grand prize for the top pledge-getter is a $500 Somerset Collection gift certificate.

Prizes are also given for $200, $300 and $400 or more in pledges, and anyone bringing more than $100 in pledges gets a T-shirt.

Participating dogs will receive a commemorative bandanna, and alumnus ribbons are awarded to dogs who have been adopted from an MHS shelter.

Registration forms are available at any Michigan Humane Society location in Detroit, Rochester Hills or Westland.

For more information, call (313) 872-3400.

Learning Center accepting applications

Madonna University's Learning Center is accepting applications for enrollment in the fall term, which runs Sept. 18 to Dec. 7.

Deadline for application is July 31.

The tutorial sessions are designed for pupils in grades 1-12 who have trouble reading. Individual or group sessions, consisting of two pupils, are available.

Participants meet weekly on whatever day is most convenient: 4:30-5:30 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, or 4:25-5:30 p.m. Thursdays.

Costs include a $20 registration fee, an $85 assessment fee and $168 for group sessions, or $204 for individual sessions.

House recommends foreign aid reduction to $12 billion

Here's how Observer & Eccentric-area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending July 14

HOUSE

Foreign Aid: Voting 333 for and 89 against, the House sent the Senate a bill (HR 1868) appropriating nearly $12 billion in foreign aid for fiscal 1996, down 11 percent from 1995.

The largest direct grants to countries are $3 billion for Israel, $2.1 billion for Egypt and $595 million for Russia and certain other former Soviet states. U.S. corporations are helped by $822 million to agencies that boost American exports. The bill prohibits funding of groups such as the United Nations Population Fund that promote abortion.

Supporter Joe Knollenberg, R-Mich., said: "With the end of the Cold War, there exists a sentiment in our country to place foreign affairs on the back burner . . . but I believe recent events in the former Soviet Union, North Korea and Bosnia illustrate that America cannot isolate itself from the international community."

Complaining that the bill cut too deeply, Anthony Beilenson, D-Calif., said "combating rapid population growth . . . ensuring child survival, reducing the spread of disease, providing basic education and improving agriculture . . . will promote and protect U.S. foreign policy interests."

A yes vote was to pass the bill. Area representative voting yes were: Dale Kildee, D-Flint, Joseph Knollenberg, R-Birmingham, Sander Levin, D-Southfield and Lynn Rivers, D-Ann Arbor.

Appalachia: Voting 108 for and 319 against, the House refused to kill the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC), a Great Society agency that funds economic development in 13 contiguous states from New York to Alabama. The vote came during debate on an $18.7 billion energy and water appropriations bill (HR 1905) for fiscal 1996 that was later sent to the Senate. The bill provides $142 million for the ARC, down 50 percent from 1995.

Sponsor Scott Klug, R-Wis., said "there was an election last fall that I think challenged this Congress to a new mandate . . . to begin eliminating programs that could no longer be justified."

Opponent Jim Bunning, R-Ky., said the bill asks "some of the poorest and neediest people in America to take a 50 percent hit. They are already doing their fair share and more . . . to get the nation's fiscal house in order."

A yes vote was to kill the Appalachian development agency. Area representatives voting no were: Dale Kildee, Joseph Knollenberg, Sander Levin and Lynn Rivers.

Tennessee Valley: By a vote of 144 for and 284 against, the House refused to eliminate Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) funding of $103.3 million from HR 1905 (above). The amendment sought to end TVA programs such as tourism marketing and logger education and let other public works agencies manage the TVA's dam and reservoir system. It did not address the self-supporting hydroelectric power operations that are the core business of the New Deal agency.

Supporter Jim Ramstad, R-Minn., asked: "How can we justify . . . federal taxpayer dollars going to such functions as boat landings, campgrounds, and logger education? . . . This is pork barrel politics in its pure form, and American taxpayers are sick and tired of such politics."

Opponent Zach Wamp., R-Tenn., noted that the bill already cut last year's $143 billion TVA budget by $40 million, calling that "TVA's fair share of this patriotic challenge" to balance the federal budget.

A yes vote was to strip TVA funding from the 1996 energy and water appropriations bill. Area representatives voting yes were: Rivers. Voting no: Dale Kildee, Joseph Knollenberg and Sander Levin.

Mojave Desert: Voting 174 for and 227 against, the House refused to provide the National Park Service with $600,000 for administering the East Mojave National Preserve in California. The vote came during debate on an Interior Department appropriations bill (HR 1977) that awaited final passage. At issue was whether the park service or the more commercial-minded Bureau of Land Management (BLM) should run the preserve, which was designated by the 1994 California Desert Protection Act. This vote left $600,000 for setting up the preserve in the BLM budget.

Sponsor Vic Fazio, D-Calif., said allowing Bureau of Land Management control would "make a mockery" of the eight-year effort in Congress to federally protect the California desert.

Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., said the park service is catering to "a very small group of elitists who would like to tell the people in the desert in California how best this land should be managed."

A yes vote supported National Park Service management of the East Mojave National Preserve. Area representatives voting yes were: Kildee, Levin and Rivers. Voting no: Knollenberg.

SENATE

Regulations: The Senate voted 53 for and 45 against to scale back a Republican bill (S 343) curbing federal regulations. This amendment limited the bill to new rules costing the economy at least $100 million annually. It replaced a $50 million trigger that provided more regulatory relief to small businesses. The bill, which remained in debate, requires in part that regulations above the $100 million threshold be subjected to scientific "cost-benefit" and "risk-assessment" analyses. The legislation is similar to a House-passed Contract With America regulations bill.

Supporter William Roth, R-Del., said that even with a higher trigger the bill would ease "the vast bulk of the regulatory burden" imposed by Washington. He added that the $50 million threshold would overburden agencies and thus defeat the purpose of the bill.

Opponent Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said "all of small business throughout the country is watching this particular vote . . . The issue here is whether small businesses are going to be treated the same as larger businesses."

A yes vote was to narrow the bill. Michigan Sens. Carl Levin, D, voted yes. Spencer Abraham, R, voted no.

Meat Inspection: By a vote of 49 for and 51 against, the Senate refused to exempt forthcoming meat inspection rules from S 343 (above). The likely result of this vote is to require the Department of Agriculture meat safety regulations to clear certain hurdles such as judicial review. However, the bill exempts them from cost-benefit and risk-assessment hurdles that would apply to most future government regulations.

Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said the meat rules will "help prevent a repeat of the E coli bacterial contamination. But it is not just E coli . . . It is a number of other foodborne illnesses that . . . have clearly demonstrated the need for a new system."

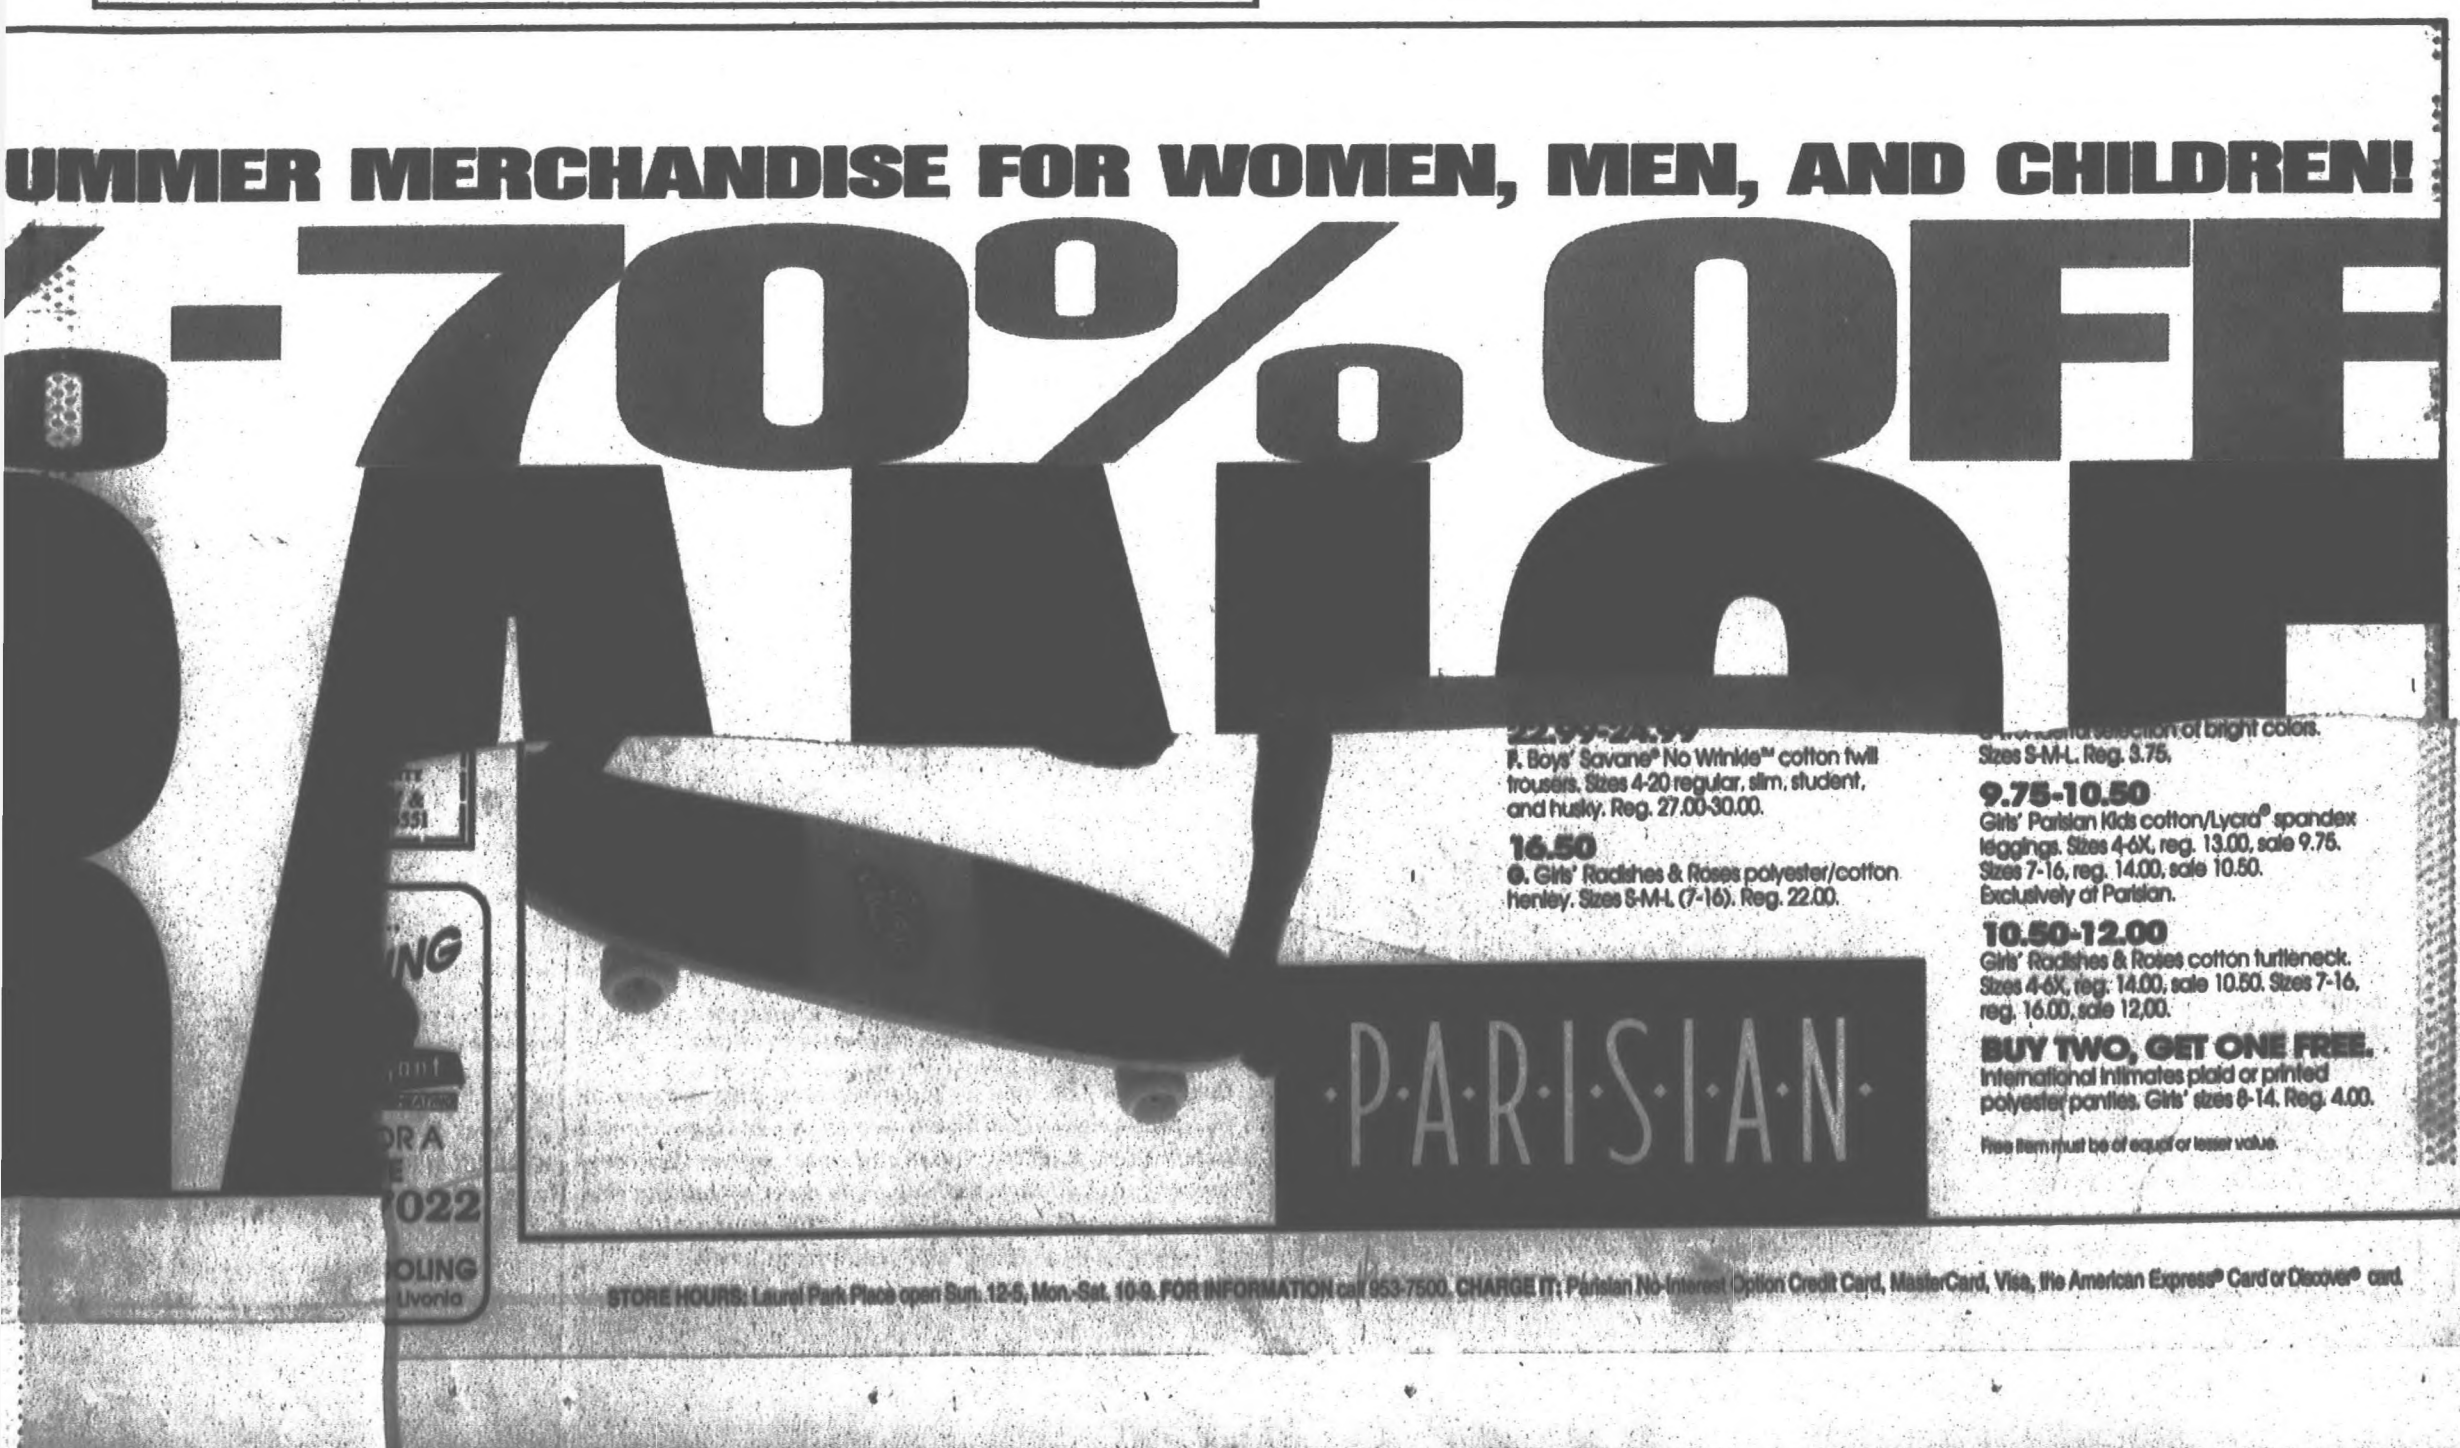

Opponent Bennett Johnston, D-La., said: "The Secretary of Agriculture has a very legitimate concern" about the meat rules. "But we do not want to come along on a case-by-case basis and exempt anything that relates to health or safety or the environment . . . because then you have no bill left."

A yes vote was to fully exempt new meat inspection regulations from the bill. Michigan Senators Levin voted yes. Abraham voted no.

Local officials get hot as state aid withers away

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

An army of municipal officials and employees are planning a flanking maneuver against state government in what is shaping up to be The Battle of Revenue Sharing.

One could almost see the troops massing Thursday, July 20, in Southgate as Wayne County suburban mayors and township supervisors gathered to discuss tactics.

They are worried because Gov. John Engler has already altered the formula used to figure how much money each municipality gets from the state each year. Annual increases in revenue sharing are not as large as they once were, and two mass rallies of municipal officials in Lansing have failed to sway the governor.

Mayors and supervisors are now ready to bypass Engler and the legislature to seek a constitutional remedy.

In a joint meeting Thursday, the Conference of Western Wayne, representing 18 cities and townships, including all Observer communities, and the 15-member Downriver Community Conference unanimously passed a resolution encouraging the Michigan Municipal League to start work on a constitutional amendment to be placed on the November 1996 ballot.

The proposed amendment would make it virtually impossible for legislators and the governor to further reduce the amount of tax revenue that is given to municipalities.

"If we don't find a way to stop this, in 10 years there will be no revenue sharing," said Dearborn Heights Mayor Ruth Canfield.

"The only way to protect that revenue is by constitutional amendment, a vote of the people," said Westland Mayor Robert Thomas. "Get it on the '96 ballot. If we don't, we're going to have to face this battle year after year."

■ 'I think it's something we've got to do. They keep nipping away, taking money away every chance they get.'

Jim Kelly
Redford supervisor

Redford Township Supervisor Jim Kelly agreed. "I think it's something we've got to do," he said. "They keep nipping away, taking money away every chance they get."

Canton Township Supervisor Tom Yack said part of the problem is state legislators who don't know how local government works.

"I certainly don't look at all members of the legislature as the enemy, but they're up there and we're down here. And there's quite a gap between the two at times, especially (regarding legislators) who don't have any local government experience."

The officials also discussed the formula used to compute each municipality's "cut" of state tax revenue. The portion of revenue sharing derived from the sales tax is constitutionally protected, but there's no guarantee regarding income tax and single business tax revenue. This is the part that Engler has reduced.

Statewide, communities can expect to get $1.2 billion in revenue sharing in the next fiscal year, which is up from $1.1 billion in the current fiscal year, a 5 percent increase. However, under the old formula the state government would be distributing $1.3 billion in the next fiscal year.

Yack warned against getting bogged down in a fight over the distribution formula. Instead, he said, they should concentrate on protecting the overall percentage of state revenue that is shared. Once that is done, the distribution formula can be altered.

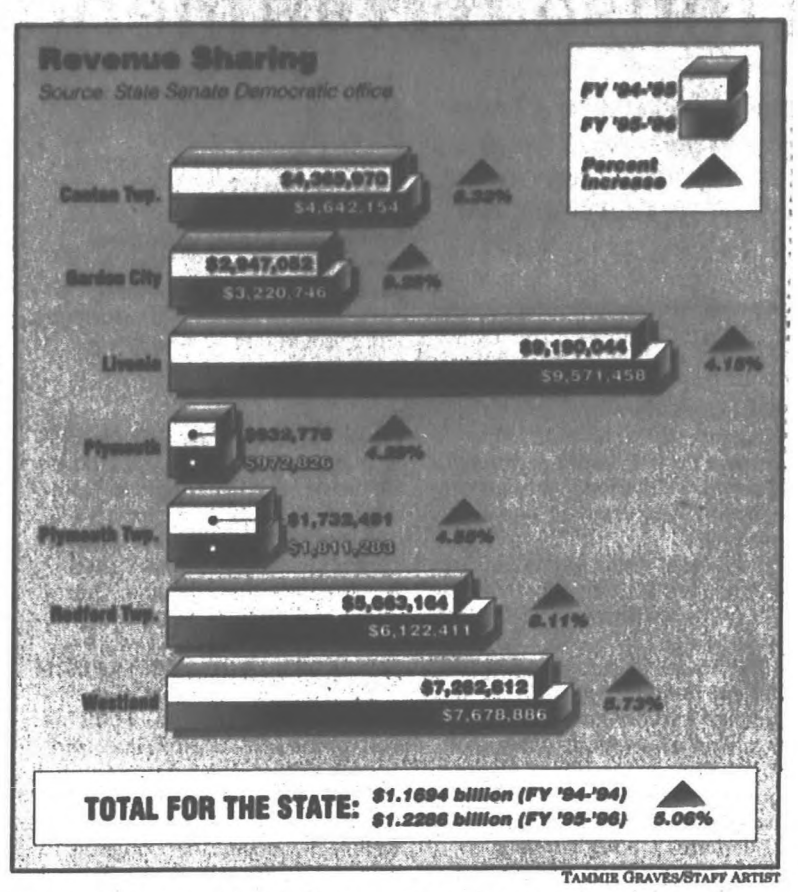

"We may come up with a fancy distribution system, but the pot keeps getting smaller and smaller and smaller," he said "I think that's the wave of the future, and that's where we ought to put our attention initially, to fix it somehow in the constitution."

David Wygonik, an aide to state Sen. George Hart, D-Dearborn, who also represents Garden City, said legislators must decide whether to obey the governor or municipal officials.

"The governor has a big stick," he said. "The local leaders also have a stick. And the representatives have to figure out whose stick is bigger."

Local officials hope to make their stick more effective by enlisting municipal employees in the battle.

These employees have a strong incentive to help, said Wyandotte Mayor Jim DeSana, because "80 percent of (a typical city's) budget goes to support employees in some way. I definitely think we should involve all the employees."

At Schoolcraft: The late Gov. George Romney delivered the commencement address in 1991 at Schoolcraft College. In keeping with commencement tradition, the governor was also awarded an honorary degree from the western Wayne County community college.

State Republican Party Chairwoman Susy Heintz, formerly a Wayne County commissioner, started out in politics working on Romney's 1962 campaign for governor.

"He changed my life," she said. "He inspired me to go into government service. When I saw him last February, I said, 'Now look at what you've gotten me into.' "

Romney, Heintz said, "left a wonderful legacy to Michigan. He just left a better place, and I think that's a phenomenal thing to be able to say about someone."

A candidate for president in 1968, Romney's campaign lost steam after he returned from Vietnam saying that he had been "brainwashed."

He later served as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development under President Richard Nixon.

Romney was also active in the Mormon Church. His activity included serving as a missionary, stake president, regional representative, and stake patriarch in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

In 1965 Romney received the Charles Evan Hughes National Award for Courageous Leadership in Governmental Service from the Roundtable of Christians and Jews.

In 1971, he was selected as Churchman of the Year by the Religious Heritage Foundation of America.

Romney also helped form the National Center for Voluntary Action, which eventually became "VOLUNTEER," a network of local volunteer action centers that give technical assistance to volunteer organizations. Romney served as chairman of that organization.

Campaigning: In the fall of 1966, then Gov. George Romney paid a visit to Westland on his third — and last — successful gubernatorial campaign. Romney wears a Lorraine Beebe for state senator button while others in the crowd sport Bob Griffin for U.S. Senate hats.

In the spotlight: George Romney was popular and sometimes controversial in his political career which took him from Lansing to Washington in the 1960s and early 1970s.

Plymouth must OK contract

The city of Plymouth should get on the Ameritech cable television bandwagon and approve a contract with that firm to provide service in the community.

Canton has approved the contract and work is set to start this summer on wiring the community. Plymouth Township has also approved the contract. Meanwhile, the city of Plymouth is dragging its feet. A decision is due Aug. 7.

Granting a cable television contract to Ameritech interjects competition into the Plymouth-Canton-Northville market. Residents will have the option of selecting either Ameritech or Omnicom as their cable company.

It's the first time there has been competition in the cable market in this area and the winners will be the subscribers.

The introduction of competition will most likely improve service and lower costs.

Ameritech will be wiring Canton with a fiber-optic system that will offer about 80 cable channels and interactive television services.

Meanwhile, Omnicom, which is still trying to negotiate a contract with Plymouth and Canton, has announced that it will also be installing fiber-optic cable, which provides better service because there are fewer interruptions of services.

Omnicom didn't have to make those improvements under its current contract. It's interesting that the firm decided to do so after Ameritech came into the market. Again, competition can be credited.

So, if having two cable firms in a market is such a good deal, it begs the question: Why is the city of Plymouth dragging its feet.

There is no serious opposition to allowing Ameritech in, only over questioning by City Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury. He says he is worried that there won't be any public access to Ameritech cable. Spokespersons for the firm say there will be public access allowed.

Shrewsbury regularly has appeared on a community access program aired by Omnicom. On the show, "Wednesday Report Live," he is identified as a Plymouth city commissioner.

In a letter to the editor, published in the Observer, Shrewsbury is looking for public comments about the new cable plan. So, we've added our opinion to the mix.

Other city commissioners should ignore Shrewsbury's nit-picking of the subject and move forward with approval of the Ameritech contract.

Competition between to cable firms will solve the problem of community access, better cable service and improved equipment, not governmental meddling.

Why are the street signs green?

Questions we've got questions we've got lots and lots of questions. Anyone who can put some honest answers to the following queries will earn something of value: our everlasting gratitude. Hey, curious people in southern Oakland and western Wayne counties really want to know:

- Why is it Middlebelt Road on some street signs and Middle Belt on others? Which is the official spelling? And just what is a middle belt?
- Why do the street signs say Eight Mile on the Oakland County side, but Base Line in Wayne County? What's a base line, anyway? Is it true that if you extended Eight Mile (or is it Base Line?) due west, it would eventually be the Wisconsin-Illinois border?
- How come Newburgh (the road) has an "h" on the end (like Pittsburgh), but Newburg (the school) doesn't?
- Why is it Beech Daly Road all through Redford Township and other parts of Wayne County, but just plain Beech Road once it crosses Eight Mile into Southfield?
- Why is it Six Mile and Five Mile roads in the western suburbs, but McNichols and Fenkell once they enter Detroit? And those roads are six miles and five miles from what?
- Why does just about every substantial town out here have a major road (Southfield, Farmington, Novi, Wixom, Plymouth, Inkster, etc.) named after it, but not Livonia? How come there's no Livonia Road?
- Didn't our street-namers of yore realize that it'd be confusing to have an Ann Arbor Road and an Ann Arbor Trail running so close to each other?
- Why is it West Chicago Road on some street signs and just W. Chicago on others? Is there an East Chicago Road?
- Speaking of street signs, why are most of them green? A few decades ago, didn't each community have its own individualistic street signs?
- Why are the yellows lights in the traffic signals a different shade of amber in Wayne County than in Oakland?
- Why are there two public school districts in a little place like Redford Township? And why is there such a concentration of private and parochial schools in Redford?
- Why is there a Clarenceville School District, but no Clarenceville? How did little Clarenceville last so long in this day of the mega-district?
- Why aren't school and city (or township) boundaries the same?
- Where can you find a decent bowl of chicken soup around here these days?
- How come no one can answer these questions?

They have a prayer

The article titled "Protests unlikely to stop church" lends much conjecture on many religious and Christian topics.

Township supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy's statement, "We don't have a prayer of winning this lawsuit," is either a pun at prayer, or a statement of no faith, or she does not believe in God, or she does not believe he has the power to stop this situation. Also the article stated that Temple Baptist church could sue the township if a delay caused the buyer to back out of the Redford deal. I guess I look at this as intimidation on the part of Temple Baptist.

The Bible states some place that Christians shouldn't sue. Yes, there is a sizable amount of money at stake, but what is the purpose of Temple Baptist church — to make money or to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ? Does our community need that gospel or is it already present? I guess I believe the Holy Spirit knows what is really going on behind the scenes. He knows the motives of the township people and those of the governing body of Temple Baptist.

Finally, Ms. McCarthy, we do "have a prayer." As long as we allow God to be God, prayer to him will exist for those that believe in him and seek him with their whole heart.

Gary Hambleton, Plymouth Township,

Keep streets open

How you could consider closing Holbrook and York streets to save the CSX Railroad a dollar is beyond me. The matter isn't really a rail closing but a street closing. Trains will still cross, cars won't. But you feel that's OK.

You would just divert that traffic to Starkweather and Mill streets, where train delays already back up traffic to Hines Drive every day. I would hope the city government won't sell our Old Village (lower town) in a deal that would increase traffic and speed on Starkweather just to replace the recently replaced wood tie crossings with so-called "the best" rubberized crossings. Train backups already keep my neighbors and I from entering or leaving our driveways. Why should lower town have to give up two streets to get rubber crossings? CSX is under state order to improve crossings; let's let them. After all, how can money even be an issue to a town that has torn its perfectly good Main Street into a streetscape that has no advantage over the previous one except that it's the most expensive around?

Joe LaBeau, Plymouth

Speak out on energy

Don't look now — but your electric bills will be going up soon. And so will levels of toxic air and water pollution if Michigan's largest utilities and some big businesses continue to get their way.

Out of the public eye, Consumers Power Company and Detroit Edison have now taken control of utility regulation. Working with some of Michigan's largest industrial customers, they have drafted a plan to reduce industrial rates while dumping the added cost on residential ratepayers.

Just as bad, the state Public Service Commission is cooperating in this effort. The commission recently killed Michigan's award-winning "Reduce the Use" program, which provided incentives to individuals and businesses to reduce electric use, monthly energy bills, and pollution at the same time. The utilities would rather sell more electricity than support energy efficiency.

Energy generation degrades Michigan's environment. Millions of pounds of carbon dioxide and sulfur dioxide are generated by coal-burning power plants, and the mercury present in coal is a major contributor to the mercury contamination plaguing Michigan's 11,000 inland lakes.

A national energy efficiency group reported this year that Michigan could create 46,000 jobs and reduce air pollution 15 million metric tons a year with a master efficiency plan. Instead, we're going in the other direction — toward more and dirtier power, and higher monthly bills for consumers.

To stop this in its tracks, write your state representative or senator, Lansing, Mich., 48933. Tell them you support a sane energy policy for Michigan's economy and environment.

POINTS OF VIEW

Don't get burned by the dangers of cookouts

GUEST COLUMNIST

DOROTHY MATSU

Don't look now, but the snapdragons in the flower box are breathing actual fire. Even with a grill as small as a punch bowl and a porch the size of a stamp, I ponder the questionable delights of cooking out as I singe my eyebrows, shifting the works away from the flowers to where it can melt the siding on the house instead.

My youth spent in Tinkertoy tenements did not lend itself to the joys of barbecue unless you count the occasional stale marshmallow on a fork over the gas burner.

I would come to associate such affairs with bad food, weather, vibes and bugs. As I go along I am learning that these gatherings can be rather pleasant if simple etiquette is applied.

There are many levels of cooking out — from burgers and franks, to catered affairs where elegantly dressed guests are made to look like simpletons tackling slabs of ribs. Add a dash of grit, a pinch of botulism and you've got a seaside clambake.

For the sake of simplicity, imagine yourself a guest among an assortment of family and friends numbering, say, 25. "Cookout" may seem to some a vague indefinition but should be thought of as a group activity.

Unless specified, only selfish morons should assume that their hosts are capable of storing and providing non-stop food and drink, so, for crying out loud, bring something besides your savage dog, at least a personality.

You might consult others. I recall one incident that involved one package of turkey dogs and 11 different potato salads. Skip the fireworks and the photo album depicting the birth of your twins. If there are to be various offspring about, perhaps you might bring something to bribe them to go away with.

I find several cheap balsa wood gliders on hand go a long way when it comes to distracting both hyperactive kids and dull adults. Don't just cruelly abandon the bores who chronically diet and can speak of nothing else; see if you can't introduce them to that hostile vegetarian glaring contemptuously across the yard.

Be on guard against the overheating and inebriation of yourself and others, with particular attention to those deadly, fruity, "girly" drinks that spell certain doom for the unsuspecting.

At all costs, you must avoid anything that smacks of advice to the person tending the grill. Many a party has come to blows over methods of lighting and cooking with coals.

Music is another volatile subject that shouldn't be left to chance. Anyone who insists on hearing any Broadway musical soundtrack more than once should beware of a "dart' in the back, or the stray horseshoe hitting their ankle.

One should, however, always humor rather than attempt to disarm that odd fellow playing the saw. Ditto for the maniac doing a Samoan fire dance with a couple of shish kebabs. A change of clothing is a wise idea, as hot weather is no excuse for ruining one another's appetites with inappropriate or obscene ensembles.

Remember: A good guest should be naturally mindful of and helpful to your host so that they might join in the frolic too.

Be cool.

Juries don't always provide the best solution

TIM RICHARD

To begin with, there was nothing sacred about the jury — certainly nothing as sacred as Democrats and Republicans in the Michigan Legislature make it appear.

Justice O.W. Holmes Jr., in his classic The Common Law, traces the jury's origins to 12th Century England, the time of King Henry II and Robin Hood. A trial by jury was a new form of trial: "It was at first an inquest of the neighbors most likely to know about a disputed matter of fact. They spoke from their own knowledge, but they were selected by an officer of the court instead of by the interested party, and were intended to be impartial," Professor Holmes wrote.

That's pretty practical, not what you hear in the partisan chambers of the State Capitol these days.

"Let the jury decide," say Democrats, supported by the Michigan Trial Lawyers Association. In tort cases, they want juries to set the limits on how much one may recover from a doctor, corporation or government — preferably a sky-high limit.

"Gotta contain costs," reply the Republicans. They like the figure $250,000 for non-economic damages, also known as "pain and suffering," as an upper limit for juries to bump against. Republicans abhor the way oily-tongued plaintiffs' lawyers twist and manipulate the emotions of jurors in order to get multi-million-dollar verdicts, with one-third going to the plaintiff's counsel, of course.

It's quite another thing, however, when the subject turns to capital punishment.

Here, as we saw in the House Judiciary Committee in mid-July, Republicans are willing to place the life of an accused in the hands of 12 people whom they wouldn't trust to spend $250,000 of Citizens Mutual's reserves.

Democrats, in contrast, voted against bringing a capital punishment resolution to the House floor. This time it was Democrats who didn't trust juries. Chief reason seems to be that juries sock it to black males much harder than to white males, in proportion to their numbers, in the three dozen or more states that have legalized the death penalty.

Republicans are right when they argue that juries need to be limited on the emotional, subjective question of assessing "pain and suffering" damages.

Democrats are right when they argue that juries ought not to be allowed to condemn someone to death, even if their argument is tinged with anti-white bias.

I was impressed with the testimony of Eugene G. Wanger, a Republican from Lansing who served in the 1961-62 Constitutional Convention. That was just after the era of Eisenhower and during the rise of Romney, when the Grand Old Party made considerably more sense that it does today.

Wanger said society's greater duty is "to protect the innocent." He goes on: "For capital punishment has and will continue to occasionally execute the innocent, for reasons which no procedural or appellate safeguards can prevent. Mounting evidence shows this risk is substantial. An examination of over 350 cases of mistaken conviction for capital crimes (collected by Professors Bedau and Radelet) shows why.

"The most common cause is perjured testimony, often supplied by jail prisoners in exchange for lenience in their own cases. Sometimes there was a deliberate frame-up. In a few cases, the murder victims even turned up alive; and in many others, there was honestly mistaken eyewitness identification.

"Hardly a month goes by without a new case being discovered. More often the error is brought to light outside the formal criminal justice process — by pure good luck."

Every time the death penalty is brought up, it's aimed at the crime of the moment. In the late 1960s, it was to be aimed at rioters who killed cops and firemen. Next it was targeted to assailants of the elderly. The current proposal is aimed at terrorists — those who kill multiple times or attempt to influence government action by killing. Wanger deplored it:

"House Joint Resolution N only makes this risk of error worse because the sensational trials are where the risk of error is greatest."

Holmes in 1881 had it right: A jury is a useful tool, but it can't be trusted too far, any more than one should trust a Democrat or Republican too far.

School districts must learn the lesson of cooperation

MICHAEL P. FLANAGAN

For parents of public school students, summer prompts a vague uneasiness. This is the season teacher contract talks get under way.

As both an administrator and a parent of three public school students, I, too, am uneasy. Are my kids going to be getting back into the classroom on time this year? Or will labor disputes cause a delay in the opening of schools, even as the World Series begins? If, unlike last year, a vicious labor dispute between the players and management doesn't disrupt the season.

Even though the national dialogue about education continues to move forward, when it comes to labor-management relations in school districts throughout the state, issues are considered in virtually the same way they were 20 or 30 years ago. The adversaries of late summer act the same way they've always acted. Behind closed doors, they spar across the negotiation table. And before camera lights, they quarrel across picket lines.

Throughout our nation in recent years, automakers and textile workers, farm workers and health-care workers have come to recognize a stark reality: management and labor must begin to foster teamwork and cooperation to survive, prosper and reach common goals. The results have been innovative collective-bargaining agreements.

Of course, our schools don't manufacture tangible products for the free market. They're responsible for something far more important and sustaining: imparting the knowledge and skills young people need to take their place as educated citizens in a democracy and as educated workers in the economy of tomorrow.

In education, labor and management must forge partnerships based on mutual respect and shared goals. Both boards and school employees must abandon dispute-focused ways of dealing with one another.

"Putting the customer first" and being "competitive in a global market" are phrases we're used to hearing when it comes to economic issues, but these concepts apply in our nation's classrooms as well. Divisive relationships only hinder progress, create long-lasting animosity and beget missed opportunities.

The education climate is very volatile. Frustrated parents throughout the state realize that they can "vote with their feet" by enrolling children in private schools and charters or even joining the ranks of the home-schooling movement.

Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency (RESA) is taking a leadership role in changing education's traditional labor-management paradigm.

Through workshops and programs, funded by a grant from the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and through partnerships with other private and public sector organizations with the Southeastern Michigan Labor-Management Committee, RESA is encouraging district and union negotiators to bridge the gap that separates them.

And slowly but steadily, school districts in this region are becoming the beneficiaries of this new way of reaching common ground.

These new management-labor partnerships, just as in other sectors, are ensuring that the competitive edge in public school education remains sharp.

School districts that remain mired in conflict need only be reminded of the days when the Bell System was the only phone company in town. School districts no longer have the non-private education monopoly.

The world will only get smaller as our children grow older. The quality of their lives as adults will depend on their ability to cooperate and reach consensus with others. The time to teach that lesson is now.

Michael Flanagan is superintendent of the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency. He was formerly the superintendent of Farmington Public Schools. He lives in Plymouth Township.

Powerless time not so terrible

During that record breaking heat wave a couple of weeks ago, I thought it might be fun and refreshing to load the van with children — my four plus two friends and their Mom — and go to the water park located about half hour away. So, we piled in towels, sun block, sandwiches and extra diapers for Jack.

The trip was highly successful. It was incredibly hot, but we all stayed really cool. We felt kind of smug. The rest of the world was melting but we were not.

After having enjoyed the water slides, the waves, the fountains, the sprayers, and the huge shade umbrella, we packed up and drove home. On the way, I turned the van's air conditioner on full blast. We, again, felt smug.

Once home, we unloaded our stuff and then I started supper. I was browning meat on the stove when I noticed the sky turning black. Just like night. But it wasn't night, it was only 6 o'clock.

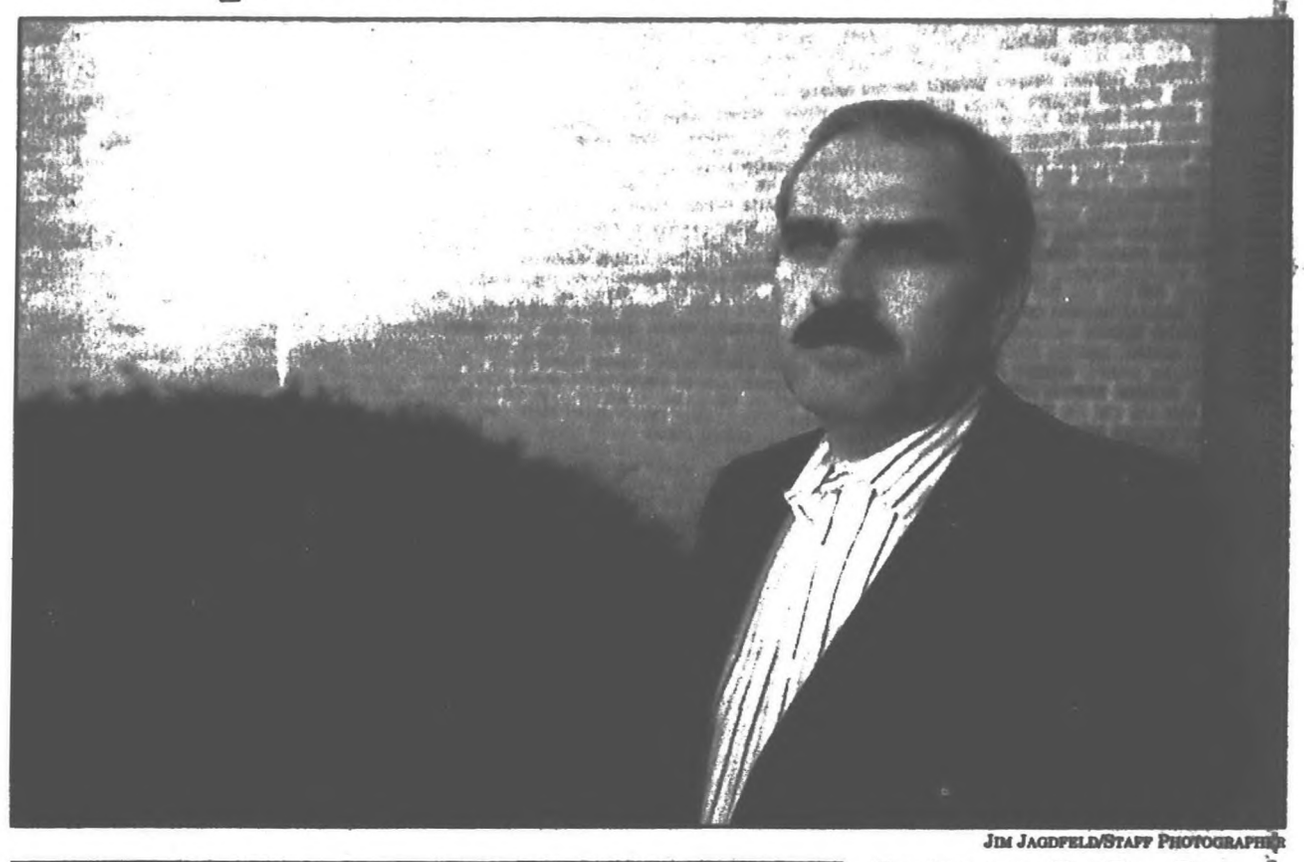

Then the creek trees turned wild. And the lightning started to frighten the little ones. Then it started to frighten me. I turned the stove off and gathered the children so we could take refuge from this wildness in the basement. It was about at that time when a huge explosion-type noise rocked the house and the lights went out. We huddled together in the basement darkness in the middle of that wicked storm, and we no longer felt very smug.

He seeks to publicize rare cancer

■ Sally DeGrazia thought the odds were in her favor, but in May she died of a rare form of breast cancer. Now her husband Tom wants to see the public educated even more about the disease.

By Christina Fuoco

Sally DeGrazia was religious about having yearly breast examinations. All of her tests came back negative which reassured the Plymouth resident that she was healthy.

So in November 1993 when she noticed redness on her breast, she went to her doctor who prescribed antibiotics. The irritation went away.

"Let me describe the redness in the sense of it was no more violent than soap irritation (or) a bra that may have rubbed. It was that kind of redness. It wasn't like an infection or an area that was terribly inflamed," explained her husband Tom.

In early January 1994 when the redness returned, her doctor told her, "I think we better get this investigated more thoroughly."

An oncologist then diagnosed Sally DeGrazia with inflammatory breast cancer, a disease that accounts for 1-4 percent of all breast cancer cases, according to the National Cancer Institute. Fifteen months later, at age 53, the homemaker died.

"I guess the thing that surprised us the most is that she really felt fine. She was not ill. She had no other symptoms of any kind," DeGrazia said. "You think of an infection, you think of a fever. You think of weight loss, you think of feeling tired or something.

"There's nothing there and to have something that serious and have no symptoms is sort of amazing to me. I guess that proves the importance of education and publicizing this. It seems once you're diagnosed you're on a steep slope. It seems to move very quickly."

Cancer-free history

There was no history of breast cancer in her family so the odds were in her favor, they thought.

"We had sort of talked about the probabilities of Sally getting breast cancer," DeGrazia said. "There are certain things that are supposed to be in your favor for not having breast cancer — not having a history of it in your family is a good start. Second, women who nursed their children had a lower incidence of breast cancer than women who don't. We have four daughters and Sally nursed all of them.

"She was sort of buoyed by the fact that that was in her favor. If you were post-menopausal, that's supposed to be a plus as well. Well, in this particular case it didn't."

DeGrazia wants to boost public awareness about the disease because of the lack of available information about it.

"It should be made better known so that women and men can be looking for it," DeGrazia said. "The time between November and the second week in January were precious days that treatment could have been started and hadn't. That's a segue of things that we really need to be mindful of, hence the importance of early detection and the importance of being more educated since it is very difficult cancer to treat because of its aggressiveness."

At one point, Sally DeGrazia asked why information about the disease isn't readily available.

"She was told, 'because it's so rare we just don't publicize it.' "

Sally DeGrazia responded, "It's not rare to me," according to her husband.

Rare and aggressive

Inflammatory breast cancer invades the lymph vessels of the skin of the breast and blocks these vessels resulting in a reddened appearance of the skin, according to National Cancer Institute literature.

Symptoms may include a lump in the breast, feelings of breast enlargement or thickness, pain in the breast or nipple, warmth, redness and swelling. Ridges may appear on the skin or the breast may appear pitted, like the skin of an orange. A small number of women with this type of cancer will have a discharge from the nipple, and the nipple may also be pulled back.

By the time the redness appears on the skin, the cancer has probably spread to other organs, said Dr. Wilson Mertens who specializes in inflammatory breast cancer at Harper Hospital in Detroit.

The most devastating part of the disease, DeGrazia said, is that it doesn't show up in tests.

"The classic form of the disease doesn't have any change on the mammogram," Mertens said. 'It is a particularly deadly form of the disease and quite unpleasant because of the type of therapy we have to apply and the poor outlook."

Sally DeGrazia went through three months of chemotherapy before having a radical mastectomy.

"The chemotherapy did cause it to reduce in size and inflammation. It sort of fools you a bit. You think that something good is happening," DeGrazia said.

After her surgery, Sally DeGrazia went through six months of post-operative chemotherapy followed by three months of radiation therapy.

"It's very invasive and very difficult on your body but that's the only chance you have," DeGrazia said. "Without it, you have no chance. She finished all that regiment Feb. 21 and died on May 14. It's a very short period of time."

The intensive therapy didn't take a toll on her spirit, however.

"She had a wonderful outlook on life," said her husband. "She did remarkably well through all of the chemotherapy and the surgery and the radiation. She was one of the fortunate ones who didn't have infections, or the nausea that's associated with it.

"She was very fortunate. Even when the cancer had spread to her vertebrae in her back and to her liver, they operated to do some work in her back. She healed very, very well."

That she healed so well shocked the family, according to DeGrazia.

"It fooled me because you don't associate someone who's within a month of death in a healing process," he said. "You think it would be just the opposite. But that wasn't the case."

Family Room from page 13A

When the storm's fury had blown itself out, we ascended. We noticed the air right away. It was much cooler and it had a vague electrical odor to it. And the color was odd. Everything had a strange orangeish tint to it. And the headlights on the cars moving down the street sparkled and glinted in a peculiar way. I've no idea what the explanation is for this, but we were all entranced by it.

And we discussed it at great length as I got back to my hastily abandoned supper tasks. Now while it's true we have a gas stove, it does have an electronic ignition So if I hadn't used my head and a long candle, we would have been stuck and crabby and hungry.

Finally, we ate. And the house was silent. No refrigerator hum, no washer sudsing, no dryer clunking, no garbage disposal grumbling, no fluorescent buzzing. Just the clatter of forks and knives against plates. And conversation clatter, too. It was nice. I liked it.

And for some reason I liked washing all the dishes, including the ones I usually thoughtlessly and hastily shove in the dishwasher. It was like camping. I even had a helper. Tony dried the dishes.

And then it was time to go for a find-out-what-happened walk. Everyone went. As we made our way down the street, we began piecing together neighborhood storm news. Three trees were uprooted behind Tom and Sarah's house and blown down on their house which made the power lines come down which somehow made the transformer at the end of the street blow up which made the lights go out here, there, and most everywhere, including the traffic light at the major intersection just up the way. Nobody was hurt but the turtle in Tom and Sarah's backyard turtle tank trundled off after his house fell apart.

After our need to be in the know had been satisfied, we gathered in the living room, the room without the TV. And I played the piano. I was quite rusty, I hadn't really sat down for some time to play. Electricity somehow busies up life to the point where there's no time for such indulgence as piano playing. I played by candlelight. And the children were right there with me. I caught one hopping about while I played an old rag-time song. And I caught another one just looking at me during a waltz.

The night passed. A little more slowly, a little more old-fashioned.

The next day turned out to be what some claimed was the hottest day of the century — 121 degrees on the heat index. And the electricity was still out. Every now and then we retreated to the dark basement. We put cold water on our wrists.

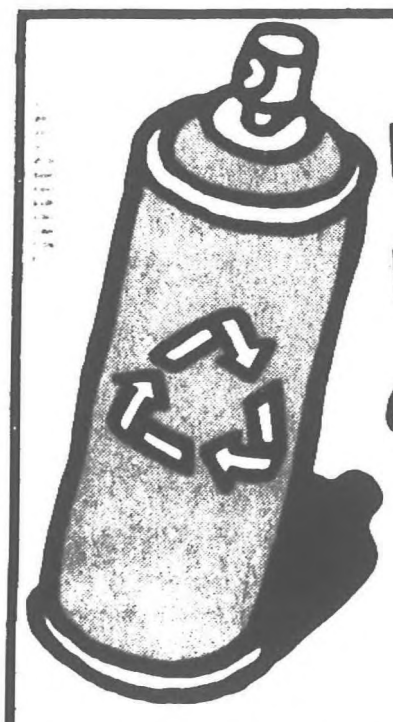

We found shade outside. We saw sweaty neighbors on their porches, drinking tap water and lukewarm Pepsi. The ice cream in freezers turned to oozy goo and began flowing. Traffic was snarled at the lightless intersection. Everyone seemed confused by the temporary stop signs.

And then, just as I was cleaning up supper, the supper I had once again prepared with the help of my handy igniter candle, the power surged on. The phone beeped, the refrigerator hummed, the light in the kitchen flashed on, and life began again.

Or, had it?

Electricity gives us a lot. But I found out in those 26 hours without it, it takes something away, too.

Alliance needs chore workers

If you are interested in helping seniors with routine household chores, yard work or minor home repairs, a program in western Wayne County would like to hear from you.

The Chore Referral Program links seniors with workers who can rake leaves, shovel snow, wash windows, repair faucets, install weather stripping, do minor roof repairs and other similar tasks.

The Senior Alliance, a nonprofit agency serving seniors in western Wayne County, acts as a liaison between seniors and workers. Workers, who are asked to charge the seniors no more than $6 dollars an hour, must provide three references, including two work references.

Workers who meet the requirements will be placed on The Senior Alliance referral list. Once a senior chooses and hires a worker, it is the responsibility of the senior to set up a work schedule and pay the worker.

People interested in joining the Senior Alliance Chore Referral Program and in helping a senior citizen, call (313) 722-2830 for more details.

IHM Sisters celebrate 150th anniversary of founding

More than 1,500 of the Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary (IHM) will gather in Monroe Friday through Sunday, Aug. 4-6, to mark the congregation's sesquicentennial celebration.

An historic occasion, it will be the first time the three branches of the IHMs will be together to recall their shared beginnings and move together with enthusiasm and hope into the future.

The sesquicentennial, or Tri-IHM Assembly, will celebrates the "Paths of Dating and Deeds of Hope" of IHM Sisters during the last 150 years through prayer and ritual, discussion and drama, video and music.

The celebration will consist of three distinct parts: A Day of Remembering, A Day for Futurizing and Transfiguration. The opening ceremonies will include the premiere of a specially-produced video, "Paths of Daring, Deeds of Hope," which traces the simple beginnings of the congregation in Monroe and its growth.

For the remainder of the first day, the sisters will travel along the "The Heritage Trail." Monroe archivist Rose Matthew Mangini, IHM, describes the trail as "places, artifacts, and displays on the streets of Monroe, the campus and inside the campus buildings which illustrate the history of the congregation from 1845 to the present."

On Saturday, the dramatic presentation, "Voices of Our Vision," will be followed by a panel of speakers who will discuss the place and role of the IHM congregation in the present and future in society and in the life of the church through ministry and spirituality.

Highlighting the day will be a "Festival of Memory and Hope," which will recall the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima. At precisely 6:15 p.m. the bells at the IHM Motherhouse will toll for one minute. The time corresponds exactly to the time of the bombing in Japan in 1945. The sisters also will participate in a Prayer of Memory and Hope to recall the bombing and the victims.

On Sunday, a Eucharistic liturgy will be celebrated commemorating the Feast of the Transfiguration. The liturgy will be celebrated in the Motherhouse chapel, with Rev. Brian Chabala, pastor of St. Mary's Church in Monroe, presiding.

Following the liturgy, a tree will be planted on the Monroe campus by the leaders of the three IHM congregations. The Scranton and Immaculata sisters will add soil and water from their Motherhouses to that in Monroe as part of the tree planting ceremony, to mark the historic meeting of the three IHM branches.

St. Mary's Church holds a significant place in IHM history. It was at St. Mary's on Nov. 10, 1845, three women formally affirmed to Redemptorist Father Louis Florent Gillet their desire to form a new religious institute. They then walked across the street to a small wooden cabin by the River Raisin, the founding site of the congregation, known then as the Sisters of Providence. In 1847, the congregation's name was changed to Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

The congregation flourished under the guidance of its first General Superior, Sister Theresa Maxis, and Gillet. Later, two other autonomous branches of the congregation were formed — Immaculata in Philadelphia in 1857 and Scranton, Pa., in 1858.

The Monroe IHMs are currently serving the people of southeastern Michigan and northwestern Ohio as educators, pastoral associates, health care professionals, social workers, advocates for social justice and in service to the poor.

The congregation also has sisters serving in varied ministerial positions in 23 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and nine foreign countries.

Model champion

Dr. Mary Fritz

Dr. Fritz retires

Recently, we asked Plymouth-Canton's nearly 100 retiring Plymouth-Canton teachers and administrators to send us a photograph, and some information about themselves and their careers.

We also asked them to share a favorite memory or anecdote. Inadvertently, Dr. Mary Fritz's response was omitted. For that, we apologize.

Fritz served as director of the Plus Program, an parent-child (pre-kindergarten) program funded by Chapter I/Head Start grants.

Fritz is completing 37 years in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, and a total of 40 years in education.

"The highlight of my career has been setting up and directing the Plus Program," said Fritz. "This is a parent-child program for parents and their children. It also features a follow-through program for support of children in reading, math and science in selected schools."

Resource Center to present 'Thinking About College'

Are you in a quandary about returning to school? Worried you won't be able to keep up with the younger students? Afraid you won't be able to juggle your other responsibilities and find time to study?

The Women's Resource Center at Schoolcraft College in Livonia may have the answer.

The center is again sponsoring "Thinking About College," a day-long program that explores the educational opportunities at Schoolcraft.

Presented before each semester, "Thinking About College" will be 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 2, in Room LA 200 of the Liberal Arts Building on the college's Livonia campus.

The program will begin with check-in at 8:30 a.m. and start with time for participants to meet with representatives from the various student services departments — admissions, financial aid, Learning Assistance Center, Registrar's Office, counseling, career planning, and the Women's Resource Center.

Topics will answer questions that the older student may have about returning to college — how to get started and afford college and keep up with the younger students.

Faculty representatives will come from the areas of business, computer science, liberal arts, health care, technical fields and the college's Radcliff Center in Garden City.

Following lunch, a panel of mature students will share their experiences about successfully returning to college and answer questions. According to Nancy Swanborg, WRC director, the panel discussion is a "welcome exchange of thoughts and feelings" and proves helpful for participants who "can ask questions about the positive as well as the negative aspects of returning to school."

Closing out the program will be a tour of the campus by WRC volunteers.

This is the 10th year for "Thinking About College," which was first sponsored in part by the Zonta Club of Northwest Wayne County Area in 1985. About 40 adults usually attend, with about half signing up right away for classes, according to Swanborg.

Registration for "Thinking About College" can be completed through Monday, July 31, at the Women's Resource Center in the McDowell Center, Haggerty Road between Six Mile and Seven Mile roads. The $5 registration fee includes lunch.

For more information, call the Women's Resource Center at (313) 462-4443.

'Grads' celebrate at picnic

Tiffany Harris was born prematurely, weighing only one pound, two ounces. She had an uphill battle to fight chronic lung disease, bacterial and fungal infections, and apnea, or pauses in her breathing. Her twin died before birth.

Tiffany didn't fight alone. Along with her family, a staff of doctors, nurses and other health care workers in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) at Oakwood Hospital and Medical Center was at her side, helping her fight for life.

Finally, after 104 days, with the dangers over, Tiffany went home. With her went strong bonds of friendship and concern that developed between hospital staff; and Tiffany and her mother, Renee.

"We get very attached to each other," said Dr. Thomas Malone, corporate director of Neonatology for Oakwood Healthcare System. "Emotions run high in life-or-death situations, and that's what most of our patients and families are facing."

That's why the Oakwood Healthcare System is hosting its 12th annual NICU picnic for all graduates of the Oakwood Hospital and Medical Center-Dearborn and Oakwood Annapolis Center-Wayne NICU departments.

The event will be 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, July 29, at Ford Field's picnic area No. 2, Cherry Hill Road east of Outer Drive in west Dearborn.

The event brings together "graduates" from the NICUs, their parents, and health-care providers who have built long-lasting relationships through their experiences in the NICU. In the past, the picnic has attracted 500-900 guests, with nearly 300 NICU grads, including twins, triplets, and even a set of quadruplets.

Today, Tiffany's mother reports her daughter is a happy and healthy 9-month-old. And the staff that cared so long for her can't wait to see her again.

"Tiffany's will to survive, and others like her, are truly an inspiration to all of us who care for premature infants," Malone said. "We celebrate the life of every one of our patients."

Recycling to benefit charities

In need of a new pair of jeans? You can get them and help four metropolitan Detroit organizations.

Hudson's is once again sponsoring its denim recycling event Sunday, July 30, through Saturday, Aug. 5.

Customers can bring in a laundered pair of used jeans — any size, any color — and get $10 off ($5 for kids) the regular price of a new pair of jeans in the Juniors, Misses, Girls 4-16, Boys 4-22 and Young Men's departments.

Hudson's will donate all the jeans it collects to The Sanctuary, H.A.V.E.N., Turning Point and The Salvation Army. In 1994, Hudson's donated more than 10,500 pairs of "recycled" jeans to community non-profit organizations.

Interest in organ donation increases dramatically here

AP — Interest in becoming an organ donor has swelled in Michigan, with two to three times the usual number of people calling the state's organ bank for information.

But unlike some other states, the increase is unrelated to baseball Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle's liver transplant surgery last month, say officials with Michigan's programs.

Instead, the interest seems tied to two high-profile heart transplant cases at home, one last August and the other a Christmas-time crisis that lingered for 34 days.

"It started before Christmas," said Tom Beyersdorf, executive director of the Gift of Life Agency of Michigan in Ann Arbor, which helps coordinate transplants in the state. "Those cases had dramatic impacts."

In past years, the organ bank received about 70 calls a week from people interested in donating organs. In 1995, that number has been about 200 a week and has gone as high as 300, Beyersdorf said.

The agency can provide donor cards, brochures and videos on organ donation.

As of June 1, 1,665 people in Michigan were awaiting transplants. Most — 1,311 — need kidneys, but 121 need a liver, 88 a lung, 78 a heart, 64 a pancreas and three both a heart and lung.

A total 550 transplant operations have been performed this year at the state's nine hospitals that perform them, Beyersdorf said.

Mantle was suffering from cancer, hepatitis C and liver cirrhosis. The former New York Yankee slugger and recovering alcoholic received a new liver June 8 in Texas.

Last week, Mantle pledged to promote organ donation as a result of his lifesaving experience.

"I'm going to spend the rest of my life trying to make up," he said. "I want to [illegible] thing back."

Worker's comp gr[illegible] forecasts slowdo[illegible] in state economy

As Michigan's auto industry begins to curb production in reaction to weakening sales nationally, the lively Michigan economy of the past several years will likely move to the slow lane for the foreseeable future, according to a forecast presented by the National Council on Compensation Insurance in its 1995 "Economic Conditions Report for The State of Michigan."

But continued steady growth in risky/hazardous industry employment, fueled by Michigan's unchallenged status as the primary headquarters for auto manufacturers and related businesses, suggests that workers' compensation losses and premiums will both increase at a modest pace, the forecast said.

The report describes a state economy that has outpaced the nation during the current economic expansion, thanks to rising auto sales and a corresponding surge in manufacturing jobs.

But while Michigan's large exposure to the auto industry is a source of strength in periods of rising auto sales, such as during the 1992-1994 period, it also makes the state's workforce prone to boom-and-bust cycles.

"Surprisingly, the unexpected weakness in auto sales that has been developing nationally so far this year has yet to dampen economic growth in Michigan," the report said. "However, there is no doubt that the U.S. economy slipped this spring, and this will lead to slower growth in Michigan."

Regardless of the predicted downturn in auto production, employment in Michigan's worker-risky manufacturing sector is expanding, and that's a factor that will limit efforts to control workers' compensation costs in the short term, says NCCI.

"Even as manufacturing employment was decreasing steadily in the U.S. between 1991 and 1994, manufacturing jobs accounted for 21 percent of Michigan's net new jobs during that period," said NCCI President Wil[illegible]

liam D. [illegible] "Unfortuna[illegible] pansion in [illegible] turing [illegible] potential [illegible] workers' [illegible] premiums. [illegible] continued [illegible] less risky [illegible] engineering [illegible] contain [illegible] losses."

In examining [illegible] tors, NCCI [illegible] Department [illegible] ment growth [illegible] considerably through [illegible] Michigan, just as [illegible]

"The slowdo[illegible] negative for th[illegible] growth is [illegible] autos," said NCCI [illegible] President for Economi[illegible] William J. Kahley.

The report cites [illegible] growth in the risky [illegible] and manufacturing [illegible] that typically lead to high[illegible] er compensation costs.

State employment in the two industries is expected to expand by 38,300 workers in the 1994-1997 period.

Average weekly wages for impact workers' comp costs, Michigan's wages are currently above average compared to weekly wages in other states and increased at an above-average pace from 1989 to 1993.

"Given the high level of unionization in the state, it is unlikely that upward pressure on overall wages will abate," the report said. "Moreover, the forecast for moderate growth in private non-farm wage and salary disbursements (7.3 percent in 1995, 5.7 percent in 1996, and 5.8 percent in 1997) is due, in part, to higher expected wage and salary inflation. These factors are likely to lead to an acceleration of losses, chiefly because cash (indemnity) benefits are calculated, in part, based upon average weekly wage levels."

Local nursing homes are targets of one-day strikes

John Sweeney, president of the Service Employees International Union (SEIU), will lead 1,000 members of the Detroit-based SEIU Local 79 and other supporters in one-day strikes against nine nursing homes in metro Detroit.

Among local targets are:

- Cambridge South, 18200 W. 13 Mile, Birmingham.
- Cambridge West, 18633 Beech Daly, Redford Township.

"The one-day strikes are meant to get the attention of the owners and management of these nursing homes," said Sweeney. "Workers feel the homes have not taken their demands seriously over the course of numerous bargaining sessions. Workers decided early on that they would not interfere with patient care on the day of the strikes.

"Ten-day notices were sent to strike targets, leaving enough time to arrange for alternative care. Striking members also decided not to interfere with family visits on the day of the strikes."

Sweeney will speak to SEIU members at a Dignity Campaign rally on Tuesday, July 25 at noon at Madonna Nursing Home, 15311 Schaefer, Detroit, one of the strike targets.

Local 79 members in nine nursing homes voted last week overwhelmingly in favor of striking the nursing homes, most of which are owned by GranCare, one of the nation's largest nursing home chains. Another strike target is a nursing home owned by Mercy Services for the Aging.

A tenth strike target, Bortz-Warren, came to an agreement with Local 79 over the weekend, and so members voted July 24 on ratification.

Local 79, which represents 7,000 nursing home workers statewide, has been involved in a nursing home reform campaign entitled "Dignity, Rights & Respect" since February, negotiating contracts with 85 Michigan nursing homes at once.

Key issues are staffing levels in nursing homes, health insurance, pensions and wages for workers. Contracts with the striking homes expired on May 1, 1995. Despite numerous bargaining sessions, no major progress in key areas was reported until the agreement with the Bortz chain.

Other strike targets include:

- GranCare homes: Bedford Vila, 16240 W. 12 Mile, Southfield.
- Belle Woods 44401 Willow Run, Belleville.
- Cambridge East, 31155 Dequindre, Madison Heights.
- Cambridge North, 535 N. Main, Clawson.
- Madonna, 15311 Schaefer, Detroit.
- Mercy Services for the Aging: St. Joseph, 9400 Conant, Hamtramck.
- Oakwood Health Services: Balmoral Nursing Center, 5500 Fort, Trenton.

"Patient care is at stake," Sweeney said.

In the August issue of Consumer Reports, the magazine rated the GranCare chain near the bottom in patient care standards among nursing home chains. The company ranked 35 out of 43 chains investigated, in terms of critical deficiencies based on federal standards on resident health and well-being.

In Michigan, he said, GranCare staffs well below the state average staffing level in nursing homes, according to state documents. Workers in GranCare homes consistently and continuously report patient care problems as a result of short-staffing.

GranCare owns and operates 17 nursing homes throughout Michigan, seven of which are represented by SEIU.

Board stops short of urging creationism

AP — The Bible's story of creation could have taken a place next to evolution in Michigan science classes if members of the state's top education panel had not backed away at the last minute.

The presidents of science teachers' groups were relieved on Thursday at the about-face.

"Based on the science teachers I know, it's safe to say creationism would be totally frowned on, primarily because it's not science," said Art Weinle of Grosse Pointe, president of the 200-member Michigan Earth Science Teachers Association.

"It's a belief system, not based on scientific evidence and doesn't follow scientific procedures. If our job is to train students in science, that does not include creationism. That's not to say it isn't true. The two issues are really totally different."

Alex Azima, science teacher at Lansing Community College and president of the 3,000-member Michigan Science Teachers Association, said members would have been "up in arms, absolutely" if creationism had been included.

"I think the science teachers would have been disappointed, angered," he said.

Slowdown

points to a negative impact on workers' compensation losses in Michigan, said Kahley. "Empirical research has shown that increases in the unemployment rate are associated with higher loss ratios."

Michigan's unemployment rate, down from a 9.2 peak in 1991 to 5.9 percent in 1994, is expected to be 6 percent this year and in 1996 before rising to 6.5 percent in 1997.

The number of hours worked per week also have an effect. As hours worked increase, workers tend to become mentally and physically tired, causing errors and injuries to rise.

"Growth in average weekly hours worked in manufacturing (or elsewhere) — a national phenomenon associated with restructuring and productivity-enhancing investments — will undoubtedly add to the system's costs," said the report.

In Michigan, where average weekly hours worked in 1994 were significantly above the national average (44.9 versus 42.0), a slowdown in auto manufacturing figures to restrain this system cost-driver.

The incidence of business failures also impacts workers' comp because anecdotal accounts suggest that claims increase when business failures increase.

Michigan's rate of business failures ran lower than the national average in 1994 (66 failures per 10,000 concerns vs. 86 failures per 10,000 nationally), and has been below the national average so far this decade.

Other leading determinants of Michigan's present workers' compensation rates include higher-than-average incidence rates for both occupational injury and illness cases and for lost workdays (last recorded by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in 1992).

■ Michigan's unemployment rate, down from a 9.2 peak in 1991 to 5.9 percent in 1994, is expected to be 6 percent this year and in 1996 before rising to 6.5 percent in 1997.

Holding all other factors constant, higher incidence rates for occupational injury and illness cases or lost workdays lead unambiguously to higher losses.

As is the case across all states — regardless of economic strength — Michigan's workers compensation costs have been adversely affected by the continual inflation in workers' comp medical rates that is higher than for the same medical care not administered through the workers compensation system.

NCCI, headquartered in Boca Raton, Fla., is the nation's largest information company serving the voluntary and involuntary workers compensation marketplace.

The corporation provides database products, software, publications and consultation services to state funds, self-insureds, independent bureaus, agents, regulatory authorities, legislatures and more than 700 insurance companies.

Creationism

Many science teachers have religious beliefs, but he said they maintain such opinions should be part of a philosophy class, rather than a science class.

The State Board of Education was considering recommending the teaching of creationism as it reviewed proposed standards for science curriculums Wednesday.

A majority of the eight-member board was ready to vote for a proposal by board President Clark Durant, R-Detroit, to recommend schools teach "various theories" on the origin of life, not just scientific ones.

"We ought not to limit the inquiry only to the Darwinian theory of evolution," Durant argued.

"At least there ought to be an openness to exploring the different theories of the origin of the universe."

Board member Marilyn Lundy, R-Detroit, said claims that no scientific evidence exists for creationism are irrelevant since she said no scientific evidence exists for evolution either.

"I think it's important for the youngsters to get both views of it," she said.

"So is this the place where we discuss the stork?" asked Democrat Barbara Roberts Mason, of Lansing.

Mason said courts would not allow teaching creationism.

"I believe in Genesis, I believe in God, but I don't believe creationism should be taught in our schools," she said.

After hearing objections from science teachers, the board unanimously approved wording offered by Carl Jay Bajema, who teaches biology at Grand Valley State University.

It says that science classes should "explain how scientists construct and scientifically test theories on the origin of life and the evolution of species." Durant had no explanation for the switch.

He insisted the new wording still leaves the door open for teaching that God created the universe.

"What I was interested in was allowing teachers and students to explore other theories. That's still possible," he said.

Asked if he thought science teachers dodged a bullet, Bajema said: "Oh you bet, a bad bullet."

A spokesman for the Michigan Family Forum was disappointed creationism was not included.

Brian Willats said the conservative group, which has a mailing list of 10,000, maintained the door is not totally closed to it.

"This opens it up a little bit for folks to be able to examine a number of different theories because that's what they are. They are theories. They are not science. Evolution is not science," he said.

A member of the House Education Committee, Rep. James Agee, said he was shocked the issue even came up.

"I think there were enough votes in that room to have creationism taught in public schools. I think that's pretty frightening," said the Muskegon Democrat, a former school superintendent.

Rescued pets now need home

Barbara and Topaz need a home.

The sisters are two 5-year-old orange cats, declawed, spayed and extraordinarily friendly. The problem is that their home got pulled out from under them.

They used to live with a man and woman in the area, according to Terri Bennett, owner of Specialty Pets in Plymouth. However, the man became terminally ill, his wife took up residence in another state, and their pets — eight in all — were being put to sleep since no one could care for them.

Barbara and Topaz were rescued from this situation and brought to Bennett's store, where they're waiting for a new home. Bennett says they're healthy, happy and come with a 20-pound bag of premium cat food.

Spotlight on Knollenberg as GOP trims budget

AP— Rep. Joseph Knollenberg is on a hot seat as a member of the committee deciding which government programs will thrive or be sharply cut under a Republican House majority intent on balancing the budget by 2002.

He doesn't seem to mind.

In fact, the second-term congressman has been waiting for an opportunity to trim government spending. He even lobbied hard to get on the powerful House Appropriations Committee, selling Speaker Newt Gingrich and other leaders on the idea after the November elections gave Republicans the majority in Congress.

"It is probably the best committee to really do something about reducing the size of government," said Knollenberg, whose district includes part of Livonia and Redford Township in addition to other affluent southern Oakland County communities.

The Appropriations Committee has 13 subcommittees which write the 13 bills proposing specific funding levels for all of the government's discretionary spending — ranging from foreign aid to defense to agriculture.

Several of the bills were introduced on the House floor and passed last week. The appropriations bills can be debated and changed in the House, and then must be reconciled with the Senate versions before they go to President Clinton.

■ 'For years and years and years, there's been a tendency for . . . the Appropriations Committee to just go merrily, merrily along — just appropriating more money.'

U.S. Rep. Joe Knollenberg
Republican

"For years and years and years, there's been a tendency for . . . the Appropriations Committee to just go merrily, merrily along — just appropriating more money," Knollenberg said of the committee's rule under his Democratic colleagues.

Now there is "a drive to reduce spending, to get at the deficit, to rein in the debt, and that's really my goal," Knollenberg, 61, said.

Some Democrats did not see it that way — as they slugged it out in opposition to cutting environmental, energy and other programs last week on the House floor. But they rarely had the votes to change the blueprint.

Knollenberg serves on three subcommittees under the Appropriations Committee: energy and water, foreign operations, and veterans affairs and housing and urban development.

That put him in a position to wheel and deal on spending away from the press cameras and the heated speeches. He is making his mark with the quiet one-on-one with other committee members that suits his style.

"So much of what you do in appropriations is behind the scene, it's not out on the floor," said Knollenberg.

For one, it is much harder to try to take something out or put something into a bill once it's on the House floor than to negotiate it into the draft sent to the floor. That puts it a big step closer to becoming law.

In the row over what is to be cut and how much, Knollenberg's staff also has been quietly defending some home turf — such as the $15 million in funding for the Rouge River project to keep sewage from mixing with drainage water during storms and dumping into Michigan waterways.

Knollenberg has particularly favored the House cut in solar and renewable energy funding from $388 million to $266 million. He also favored the House cut in the Appalachian Regional Commission from $282 million to $142 million for the upcoming fiscal year.

Those cuts passed on the House floor last week. But amidst the floor fights were Republicans who wanted programs cut even further.

For example, Rep. Scott Klug, R-Wis., led the unsuccessful effort on the House floor to cut off all money for the Appalachian commission, created in 1965 to pave roads and install plumbing in the isolated Appalachian mountain area.

The appropriations committees were sometimes a moderating force as some Republicans argued for the total elimination of such spending as foreign aid, Knollenberg said.

"A lot of folks here think if we have an embassy, it ought to be a back room or a storefront situation," he said. "You just can't do that. We've got to have a presence overseas. It doesn't have to be the Taj Mahal, but you've got to have an embassy."

Rather than take the "cheap, easy way out" of across-the-board cuts, Knollenberg said good programs should be funded and marginal ones eliminated.

But sometimes what does not work is in the eye of the beholder.

Knollenberg wants the elimination of a law that limits the cost of public housing for residents to 30 percent of their adjusted income. He believes it provides no incentive for those on welfare to work to earn more, since the extra earnings could be redirected toward their rent.

The proposal is in a bill due on the House floor by the end of the month.

However, officials at the Department of Housing and Urban Development fear such a provision, in combination with other measures such as reducing public housing operating subsidies, would simply force rent increases on to the poor.

"It does not appear the subcommittee has reviewed extensively what the impact of these actions are," said Bruce Katz, chief of staff to HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros.

House and Senate are working quickly to pass the appropriations bills for the president to sign by Oct. 1 — the start of the new fiscal year.

Hanging over them is the veto power of a Democratic president who submitted a radically different budget request to Congress.

"He has to look at this thing politically, because he's running in 1996," said Knollenberg. "How does it rub with the American people?"

ball. He thinks many people have been attracted by the friendliness.

The church is becoming healthy, with a good mix of people, he said. "But that first year was very difficult. It was like working a tough room," Sommers said. Often, if he tried to work some humor into the sermon, no one laughed. The first Sunday was so draining that he took a nap after church.

Now the church features contemporary services, some with guitars, flutes, saxophones or clarinets.

After 2½ years, Sommers feels ready to invite more people in to the church. Like in a store, a church wants to be able to meet people's needs, he said. People want a place to belong where they don't feel judged, Sommers said.

Rapid changes

Since the church was put on a schedule to get itself out of debt, there wasn't much time to make changes to turn it around. Many churches have committees and boards and changes are made very slowly, but without them changes have been quite rapid, Sommers said.

He found it more beneficial to get members involved in hands-on experiences, like working in a program for the homeless at Cass United Methodist Church in Detroit, rather than on church committees and boards.

"Here you can turn things around quickly because there are not a lot of people to resist," he said.

He still has plans of developing the music ministry more fully, speaking in a fashion people can identify with and stressing children's education.

Now that he's focusing on operating a healthy church, and the steps for each year are in place, Sommers hopes to keep up the momentum without pushing people.

A cast of area actors have set phasers on fun for the world premier of "Star Wreck: The Ghan Saga" now running through Aug. 12 at the Gem Theatre in Detroit.

Based on the Star Trek episode "Space Seed" and subsequent movie "Star Trek: The Wrath of Kahn," the play features characters such as Captain Jerk, Mister Schlock, Ensign Jerkov, chief engineer Spotty.

Also on stage are area actors Kirk Hanley of Farmington as Doctor Decoy and Lake Orion resident Julie Van Dusen as McGivers/Saavik.

As Decoy, a.k.a. Leonard McCoy, Hanley, can be depended on to deliver familiar lines like "He's dead, Jim" and "I'm a doctor, not a thespian" with all the gusto of their original utterer, DeForest Kelley.

Observers of the Farmington theater scene may find Hanley familiar. He has appeared in 12 productions for the Farmington Players, most recently as Tackaberry in "How To Succeed In Business" and Charlie in "What I Did Last Summer."

Hanley, 32, didn't begin acting until he attended General Motors Institute in Flint and discovered the engineering school's small theater group, where "there wasn't a lot of competition."

Since college, as a Ford engineer and later a self-employed utility bill auditor, the 1981 Troy-Athens graduate has continued acting. He is also part of the comedy group "Totally Unrehearsed Theater" appearing Tuesdays at the Comedy Castle.

Although never anywhere near being a hard-core Star Trek fan, Hanley has been a regular viewer of the original series, Star Trek: The Next Generation, Star Trek: Deep Space 9, Star Trek: Voyager and the seven extant Star Trek movies.

"Everybody in the cast is a fan of the show," Hanley said. Hence, the play "Star Wreck" is not an insult to the Star Trek universe, but rather a compliment. "We would never put down the show," Hanley said. "I don't think we're laughing at it. I think we're laughing with it."

Van Dusen, 22, plays two characters in "Star Wreck," McGivers, the Enterprise crewmember who falls in love with Ghan, and Saavik, a half Vulcan, half Romulan woman who was portrayed by Kirsty Alley and Robin Curtis in the movies.

Van Dusen said the pointed ears she sports as Saavik are typical of the props used in this parody. "I hope I can get them to stick right," she said.

"Some of the props are just ridiculous, and they're meant to be. I use a hair dryer for a phaser in the first act. Maybe I can style their hair to death."

Unlike Hanley, Van Dusen has wanted to be an actor since she was knee high to a short pup. "Ever since I can remember this is what I wanted to do," she said. "I used to pretend I was Lawrence Welk and put on shows for my grandma."

The Gaylord native now lives in Lake Orion and has 29 credits to go on a performing arts degree at Oakland University. The 1991 Interlochen Arts Academy graduate was named "featured role runner up" by the Detroit News for her performance as Chicklet in "Psycho Beach Party" at Pontiac's Strand Theatre last year.

Leading up to her "Star Wreck" role, Van Dusen has performed this year in "A Bright Room Called Day" (Loft) and "The Fantastics" (Greenfield Village Theatre).

Other cast members include Danny Jacobs of Warren as Captain Jerk, Dan Glomski of Detroit as Mister Schlock, Daniel Jaroslaw of Sterling Heights as Ghan, Joseph Conat of Ypsilanti as Jerkov and Spotty and Franchie Joy of Inkster as Lt. Howareya.

SPECIAL EVENT

Jazzfest '95 features best of local vocals

BY MITCH GENOVA
SPECIAL WRITER

The Birmingham Jazzfest will draw the best musicians from throughout the area for the weekend event. Included in the roster of talent promised are four well-known jazz vocalists. Concerts will be performed in Shain Park and at the Community House, as well as local restaurants.

For information on the Jazzfest, call (810) 644-5832 or (810) 433-FEST.

Barbara Coleman of West Bloomfield is no longer a well-kept secret. After several years of performing for private functions, Coleman teamed up with trumpeter/keyboardist Michael Rhoades and began appearing publicly at local supper clubs.

Barbara Coleman and Michael Rhoades

Coleman is at home with a wide range of styles and moods, but is absolutely devastating in her direct and heart-felt interpretations of contemporary adult themes of modern relationships.

Coleman and Rhoades will perform on the outdoor patio at Norman's Eton Street Station 6-9 p.m. Thursday, July 27 to Saturday, July 29.

Livonia's Heidi Hepler lends her classically trained voice to an exotic mix of jazz and Latin-inflected music. Not only does she offer thoughtful readings of many great standard tunes, and spirited interpretations of energetic, Latin-American tunes, but also with her incredible range she offers wordless vocals that approach the ethereal in their haunting beauty.

Heidi Hepler

Hepler, also a former Miss Michigan, followed her classical training with public performances in operatic productions and then turned to improvised jazz music for the greater artistic freedom it offered.

Hepler appears regularly at the Phoenicia at 558 South Woodward, with her husband guitarist Michele Ramo, and they will be there during Jazzfest 7:30-11 p.m. Thursday, July 27 through Saturday, July 29.

Longtime Southfield resident Ursula Walker is well-known to local jazz fans. She has long been

FINE ARTS

Artist explores natural patterns

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

When Livonia Arts Commissioner Dorothy Wilshaw first saw John Kroll's polarized photograph of an aspirin, she thought it reminded her of a lone pine.

Kroll's photomicrographs of chemicals, rock sections, human and plant tissue, plastics, acids and metals are on display through July 28 in the lobby of Livonia City Hall, Five Mile Road, east of Farmington Road.

Exhibit hours are 8:30 a.m to 5 p.m.

Kroll worked in Henry Ford Hospital's photography department 1948-1973 capturing every square inch of the human body for science. In fact, the 83-year-old Detroiter helped set up the department developing techniques and equipment for medical photography.

"It's a teaching hospital so we had to turn out 5,000 slides a month. We made 120 full length movies of surgeries that were distributed as far away as China and Moscow. We photographed Michigan's first open heart surgery in 1956. For these films, I had one shot and I'd better get it right," said Kroll, owner of a Livonia photo studio for eight years.

Kroll worked as an electrical engineer for the automotive industry before Kodak asked him to set up an audiovisual/photography department at the hospital. He helped establish Chrysler's industrial X-ray department during World War II. There he X-rayed castings for the B 29 bomber's bay doors, rejecting any with holes or stresses.

Today, Kroll devotes all of his time to creating and producing photographs of microscopic materials magnified 25 to 1,000 times. He disolves some of the chemicals on slides until crystallized into abstract designs. Then photographs the slides through a microscope. Through the lens of his camera an aspirin becomes an evergreen; a cast iron cylinder block looks like a stained glass window.

Objects take on new colors and designs when captured through the lens of a microscope. Polarizing filters vary the colors and add electricity.

"Everything is real except it's seen through the microscope," said Kroll. "Everything in nature has a pattern and it's identifiable if you know what you're looking for."

■ MEET THE ARTIST

Livonia Arts Commission is hosting an opening reception for artist Nancy Hurd 6:30-8:30 p.m. Monday, July 31 in the Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery, 32777 Five Mile east of Farmington Road in Livonia.

The reception kicks off Hurd's one woman show of drawings continuing through Aug. 31 in the second floor gallery. She taught painting and figure drawing for nearly 10 years in Livonia Public Schools community education program. A Livonia resident, Hurd graduated from the University of Michigan with a bachelor of fine arts degree.

Exhibit hours are the same as the library's: 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday.

■ ARTBEAT

■ EXHIBIT EXTENDED

Due to visitors' interest in "The Voyage of Marco Polo" 10 paintings by former Farmington Hills artist Lilya Pavlovic-Dear will continue on display through Aug. 29 at Clare Spitler Works of Art, 2007 Pauline Ct. in Ann Arbor.

Gallery hours are 2-6 p.m. Tuesday and by arrangement. Call (313) 662-8914.

■ SHOW CATCHES "FIRE"

Redford Township artists Marian Mudie, James Pujdowski and Sergio De Giusti are among the group of artists exhibiting in "Fire" continuing through Aug. 12 at the Michigan Gallery, 2661 Michigan Ave. in Detroit.

Curated by Carl Kamulski, "Fire" is the final segment of the element series of exhibitions. Hours are 11 a.m to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, or by appointment. Call (313) 961-7867.

Camaraderie keeps woodcarvers whittling

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Members of the Livonia Woodcarvers Club exchanged good-natured barbs as they installed an exhibit of their wood works at the Civic Center Library in Livonia.

The exhibit, through July 31, is a preview of the whittlings that will be offered at the 21st annual Livonia Woodcarvers Show August 5-6 at Eddie Edgar Arena, 33841 Lyndon at Farmington Road in Livonia. From 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday nearly 150 exhibitors will feature work ranging from three dimensional carvings of wildlife to genre scenes in relief.

The show is sponsored by the City of Livonia Department of Parks and Recreation. Admission is $1, $2 per family.

"If people are looking for collectibles or simply curious about carving, they won't want to miss the Livonia Woodcarvers Club Show. A lot of people bring the whole family," said member Judy Spught who specializes in carving miniature Santas.

Outside the arena, Windsor carver Al Heron will demonstrate his talent for using a chain saw to create sculptures ranging from bears to birds. Inside, exhibitors like Thomas Roncoli, a carver of staffs, canes and walking sticks and Nick Dattilo, three dimensional animals, will be ready to answer your questions.

Camaraderie is definitely the bond that keeps them carving and sharing tips.

"The woodcarvers share their tools and their knowledge. For instance, did you know the most dangerous tool is a dull knife," asked Datillo of Redford.

For Roncoli, who taught woodcarving for five years in Germany while he was a soldier stationed in Europe, the attraction is strictly creative. The retired Livonia resident enjoys strolling the shores of Lake Huron in search of different types of tree branches to carve his walking sticks.

"You put so much time into woodcarving. Your heart and soul goes into it. I start by looking at the wood and try to figure out from there what to carve. I like the creativity and the imagination it takes," Roncoli said.

Whether you want to learn to carve a wood spirit or a mouse Al Jenis of Northville Township is only too happy to share his knowledge. He will tell you how he lowered his blood pressure as well as the dosage of medication necessary to control it while carving dogs and bunnies.

The Livonia Woodcarvers Club meets twice a week at the Livonia Senior Citizen on Farmington Road south of Five Mile. Founded in 1975, the club boasts more than 250 members. Annual dues are $10 and visitors are welcome.

When asked last year what trait they all have in common, one member replied "we buy a lot of band-aids."

metro Detroit's premier jazz vocalist. In her early years, she appeared regularly on WXYZ-TV and WJR Radio and even sang with the Stan Kenton big band. While becoming nationally recognized, Walker has remained a maintstay of the local music scene, opening for such names as Dizzy Gillespie, Oscar Peterson and Tania Maria.

Walker lists Sarah Vaughan and Carmen McRae as her personal listening favorites, and in choosing her own material favors songs with good strong lyrics. She delivers a wide range of material from standard tunes to jazz classics, and she compels your attention with her assured quiet power.

Walker will appear with her husband, pianist Buddy Budson, at 220 Merrill on 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday, July 28 and Saturday, July 29 during Jazzfest.

Rochester-native Sheila Landis has been on the local music scene since 1973, with her distinctive pure and pleasant voice which combines jazz and pop influences as diverse as Sarah Vaughan, Betty Carter, Joni Mitchell and Aretha Franklin.

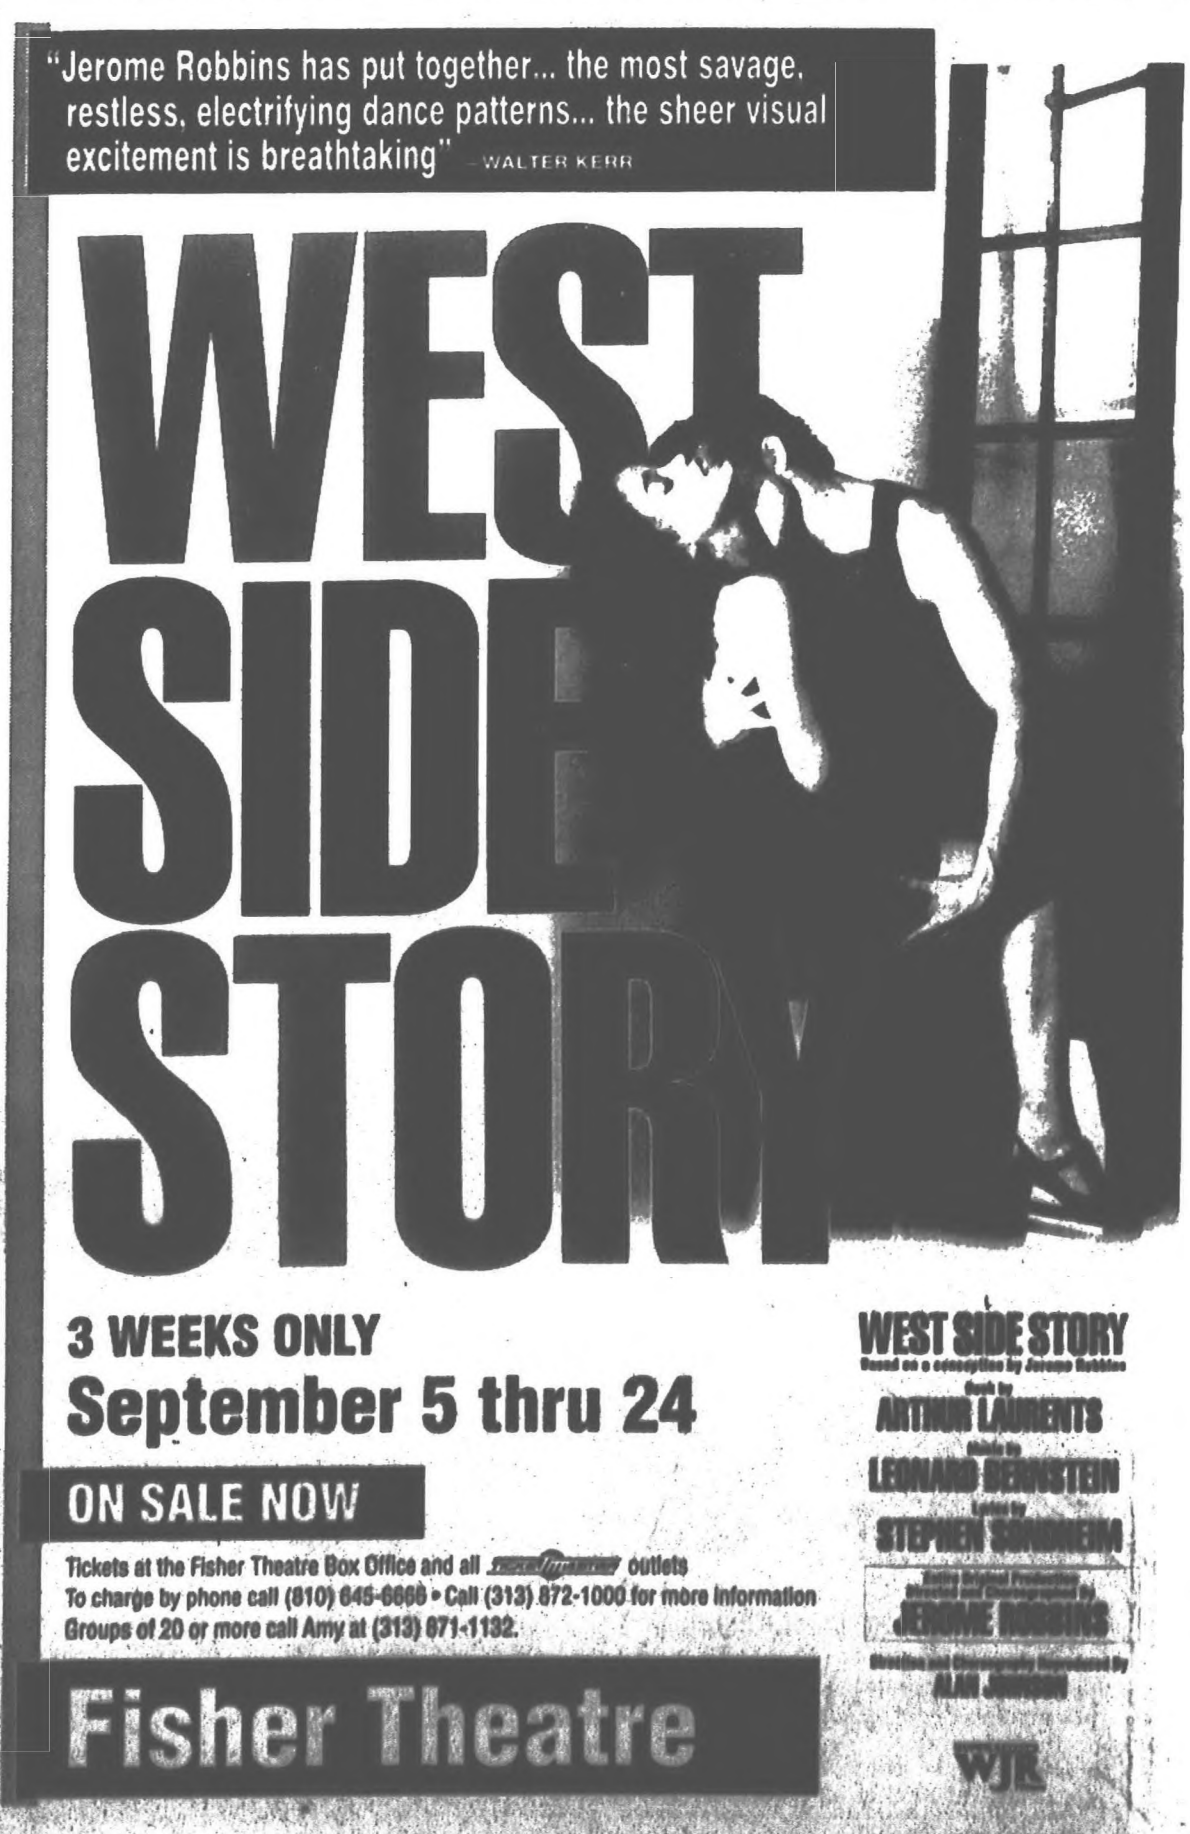

She has just released a new CD on her own Sheilan label, "Jazzscapes," which includes some of her own original compositions as well as standard tunes and jazz classics.

Landis is not only a fine singer but a gifted lyricist with an evocative, sometimes playful word sense.

She appears with her quintet at the City Grill at 725 South Hunter 8 p.m. to midnight, Thursday, July 27 through Saturday, July 29.

■ REVIEW

Jumpstart The Arts, a program devoted to introducing high school students to the realm of professional theater, pools Oakland and Wayne county's finest young talent for its production of "Jesus Christ Superstar" (music by Andrew Lloyd Webber, lyrics by Tim Rice) at Clarenceville High School.

In keeping with our American tradition, and the tradition of this particular musical, don't be surprised to find those offended by the show outside forming picket lines of protest.

"Superstar" is under the direction of Kent Dalian (who also portrayed Caiaphias quite well). Regarding pace, variety in the show's tension, effective use of space, and details resulting in delicate manipulation of the audience, Dalian does a fine job with his first directorial effort.

Musical director Randolph D. Blouse does a splendid job with the solo work in the show, but chorus work seems to lack tightness as far as enunciation and clarity.

"Superstar" is based on the last seven days of Jesus' life. Kirk Mouser (a prime force in this Jumpstart production) portrays Jesus' last seven days with a beautiful and enchanting voice. Mouser's interpretation of "Gethsemane" is outstanding.

Jesus' tension-causing counterpart, Judas, is powerfully played by Jumpstart's Daniel C. Cooney. The title song was performed with authority, but other moments in the production ("Judas' Death" and "Blood Money") better showcased Cooney's talent and range.

The youth of Oakland and Wayne counties are well-showcased in "Superstar." Sometimes "nice" comes in the simplest forms, bringing with it coziness and warm fuzzies. Andrew Lloyd Webber created one of the "nicest," and one of the most popular, tunes in "Everything's Alright."

Local youth talent Amy Law delivers an excellent version of this tune as Mary Magdalene comforts Jesus. Law is a standout actress perfectly capable of leading the chorus in this landmark song. Law also shows tremendous stage presence with the ever-popular "I Don't Know How To Love Him."

As the days go by, Jesus is brought before Pilate, played by Sean Jenness, and Herod, played by Dan Finnerty (both of New York).

The scenes with Pilate are somber or fever-pitched as Jenness takes masterful command of the stage with a stunning voice. "King Herod's Song" provides Webber's trademark unexpected comic relief as Finnerty two-steps with grand comedic style.

Stephanie Myre of Farmington gives the audience a wonderful, strong voice in "Pilate's Dream" which prophecies Pilate's dilemma to come.

The show's major dilemma, however, was the unfortunate disadvantage of a truly atrocious sound system that the actors had to overcome. Many of the show's subtleties and superb voices were lost; lyrics were alternately not heard or sound blasted the audience out of its seats.

Jumpstart The Arts does a fine job in doing just that. The ensemble work is terrific; the choreography (Susan Ancheta), especially for the Tormentors, is phenomenal. The movement for "The Temple" and "Superstar" are excellent exercises in concentration.

Highlighted youths from our community performed extremely well. Too bad more leads couldn't be filled by the young adults. As this is Jumpstart's first production, perhaps more leads will be filled by young local actors next year.

Players bring warm glow to 'Lughnasa' despite drab story

Shot through with some moments that are utterly transfixing, and suffused with a kind of warm glow despite its drab (but appropriate) sets and costumes, the Village Players' production of "Dancing at Lughnasa" seems touched with enchantment.

Set in and around the sycamore-shaded abode of the Mundy family near Ballybeg, County Donegal in 1936, Brian Friel's bittersweet-to-the-bone drama is a nostalgia play structured along the lines of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie." An on-stage narrator, Michael (played with no frills by Ron Hall) looks back at two important days in his childhood, and we look back with him. We see his unmarried mother and her four sisters (all unmarried, too). We also see his uncle, an aging priest who has been sent home from his post in Uganda because he is seriously ill. Finally, we meet Michael's father, a philandering, irresistible gramophone salesman, who can dance the night away.

■ REVIEW

In this vaguely dream-like milieu, it's a safe bet that the cracked mirror on the wall does not point toward a bright and shiny future. Already, that future seems encroaching upon the close-knit family, who feel almost bone-deep need to dance and play, but have so little music in their lives.

Each member of this cast turns in a winning performance. One of the keys to the success of this production is that they not only act out their own roles convincingly, but interact beautifully with each other. (Eric Kent Franz makes his debut as director. Let's hope he'll try again, very soon.)

Kathy Abelson, playing Michael's mother, Chris, is thin as a waif and pale, and might not embody the perfect actress to play a maternal role, no matter how young the child. But, even though she looks pretty much like a kid herself, it turns out she's exactly on the mark here. She's especially touching as a young overburdened woman who can be absolutely transformed by the dreamy, rather superficial schemer she deeply and truly loves.

As eldest sister Kate, Carol Aaron is also on target. When she makes her first appearance, in her shapeless, unattractive dress and ugly shoes, she seems so wooden you think stage fright may have gained an upper hand. After awhile, though, it's obvious this stiff, tensely poised woman is not her, but her character, a woman whose heart, after a lifetime of need, is threatening to turn frigid.

Deborah Cohen plays slow-witted Rose with just the right touch of clumsy loveliness. In a relatively small role, she's still one of the reasons this performance seems to glow from within. As an actress, she always has about her an aura that sparkles a bit. (And you're going to love her "Wellingtons.")

Linda Hammell, playing sister Maggie, supplies most of the comic touches in "Dancing at Lughnasa" (pronounced simarly to "lunacy," by the way). With her powerhouse energy and her absolute determination to create her own fun when there's no other fun around, her Maggie is perhaps the most likable of all the sisters. And you ain't seen nothin' 'til you've seen her dance and shout.

As Gerry (the charmer), Geoff Larkin does what he's got to do: appear charming.

Finally, Bob Casemore, playing the sickly Fr. Jack, shows (in extended dialogue that is more like monologue) that he is an actor who knows exactly how to involve an audience.

100 Percent Fun — Matthew Sweet

Matthew Sweet has been making appearances at all the right campaign stops lately ("Modern Rock Live," "Conan O'Brien," "120 Minutes" and locally, the Majestic), and the reason is clear: the honchos at his label, Zoo Entertainment, want his sixth album "100 Percent Fun," to win back some of the crowd he lost with risky career moves. Looking back, it probably wasn't good business sense to follow a huge breakthrough album (1991's "Girlfriend") with a dark, less accessible work (1993's "Altered Beast"), a schizophrenic album at best.

Sweet may downplay its importance in interviews and shun its most popular songs live, but "Girlfriend" was beginning to loom menancingly over his career. Three albums later, it is still his greatest work, an honest-to-goodness rock masterpiece. Both a blessing and a curse, "Girlfriend" won Sweet tons of new fans, but also ensured that all his future work would inevitably be measured against it. And at first, "100 Percent Fun" seems a little too much like a calculated effort to repeat Sweet's earlier success. From cover art to production quality to title, he seems to be going out of his way to coax wary record buyers back into the fold.

Given all these negative factors, it's a good thing the music consistently delivers. "We're the Same" couples the usual "I'm a lovesick nerd" lyrics with a forceful guitar punch. Thankfully, Robert Quine and Richard Lloyd are again on hand to lend some eccentric guitar virtuosity, their bizarre solos adding much to even the weaker songs.

The familiar Beach Boys-type harmonies of "Come to Love" are impeccable, and the single "Sick of Myself" is Sweet's most majestic work since the title track of that . . . er . . . other album. The excellent closer "Smog Moon" continues his great tradition of ending albums with a sorrowful, bleak outlook.

It must be hard to continue as a working artist after delivering what the general public and critics agree is your best work. As solid as this new album is, one gets the feeling that Sweet was under a little pressure to deliver the gold-selling power pop goods a second time. He may never write as perfect an album as "Girlfriend" again, but who cares? Hopefully, fans and Zoo Entertainment will realize that "100 Percent Fun" doesn't have to dethrone Sweet's best to still be a commercial and artistic success.

Lost in the Former West — The Fatima Mansions

Four years ago, Britian's The Fatima Mansions gained popularity in their homeland with a T-shirt phrase "Keep Music Evil." Today, the band proclaims a sit-down and shut-up socially conscious approach with its latest clothing phrases "The British Ruling Class Are Arms Dealing, Land Stealing Scum." Not exactly a rallying call, but an interesting idea for us, the generations following the colonies.

Such social attitude is not trapped on simple cloth, The Fatima Mansions have used the same attitudes as inspiration for their third release "Lost in the Former West" (Radioactive.)

The 13-track release is a mixture of strong guitar-based material, intermixed with potent vocals which is sure to raise eyebrows. The material's subject matter is simple — the trials and tribulations of British life and love and the government's political stances. OK, so the vast majority of the nation is subject to more rain per year than sunlight, but the impact of "Lost in the Former West" is lost once outside its intended clique.

Possibly, Americans find the light side to issues, but the Mansions thrive on its opposite. The Fatima Mansions may get pushed aside on this side of the Atlantic by the more sugar-coated Oasis and Blur. Actually, the Mansions may need a health warning displayed on each release before Americans digest the saccharine-coated material.

Sonic Youth wins over crowd

By Todd Wicks
Staff Writer

"You sound good!" said a pleased Thurston Moore to the enthusiastic, roaring crowd that greeted Sonic Youth's first song at the Lollapalooza Festival July 19 at Pine Knob.

If the lanky singer/guitarist sounded a little relieved at his band's warm reception, it was with good reason. After popular, crowd-pleasing acts like Cypress Hill and Hole, it was unclear how the avant-garde guitar terrorists from New York would fare before a largely teenage crowd unacquainted with most of the band's work.

"We know that a lot of kids have only heard the name Sonic Youth and have never heard our music," said drummer Steve Shelley backstage before the band's set. It's true; like the Velvet Underground, Sonic Youth's influence has proved far greater than its popularity. But despite any of Shelley's apprehensions, headlining the summer's biggest tour hasn't been as rough as expected.

"I'm kind of surprised that (the audience) has stayed for us," said Shelley, who grew up in Midland in the state's thumb area. "I thought there would be more of a mass exodus after Hole, but I'm really happy that that doesn't happen. I would've been really freaked out if that happened every night."

Then again, since its first album in 1982, Sonic Youth has probably grown accustomed to confusing their listeners. Despite a steadily growing legion of devoted fans and constant name-checks by Nirvana, R.E.M. and others, the band has yet to release a huge-selling album.

Their healthy helpings of strangely tuned guitar noise, non-traditional song structures and jams that often emphasize atmosphere over melody usually make for a love-or-hate response. After signing to DGC, a subsidiary of Geffen Records, in the late '80s, the band produced its most accessible albums but was still largely ignored by the masses.

However, watching Sonic Youth on stage, one realizes that these four are pretty much past worrying about record sales. They are artists in the truest sense of the word, daring enough to skip the hits but unpretentious and likeable enough to halt a song just to tie a loose shoelace, as Moore did mid-set.

Michigan connection

Shelley became Sonic Youth's drummer through a series of strange coincidences. Looking to make music a career, he moved to New York and happened to sublet Moore and singer/bassist Kim Gordon's apartment while they toured Europe.

The first time Shelley met both of his apartment's owners was when they asked him to join the band, which also includes singer/guitarist Lee Ranaldo. T[illegible] was no tryout or audition. Shelley had never even seen Sonic Youth perform. His first album with the band was 1986's "Evol." With his trademark "one maraca, one drumstick" playing style, he has since carved out his own distinctive sound in a group full of distinctive sounds.

"You know, I was really bummed out when I saw the 'Wild Night' video with John Mellencamp and Michelle Shocknfmbgringle (bassist/singer Me'shell Ndegeocello) or whoever, and the drummer in the video, who's always been known as kind of a pompous, 'really important musician' was playing with one maraca," he said with a laugh.

"But it doesn't matter. I didn't think of anything new. You just try and find things to make music interesting for yourself."

True to the band's characteristic adventurousness, Sonic Youth debuted several new songs from their forthcoming album "Washing Machine" at Lollapalooza. "I'm really into doing that," Shelley said. "I always liked that about Neil Young . . . when he did the 'Rust Never Sleeps' tour and then released the album after that, with all those great songs on it."

"The new album has a lot of longer songs. The last album ('Experimental Jet Set, Trash and No Star') was very short and cold and fractured. 'Washing Machine' is more exploring and long. If I had to compare it to an older record, I'd compare it to 'Daydream Nation,'" he said referring to the hugely acclaimed album that cemented the band's reputation.

Besides the new material, Sonic Youth's set omitted the obvious ("100 Percent" and "Kool Thing") and veered off into more obscure territory. According to Shelley, the band chooses what to play at each show according to that day's mood. "The set has been different each night," he said. "Tonight's is extremely different, probably the oddest set list we've made so far. Today has been a very strange, chaotic day. Nothing has gone right, so the set list reflects that."

When Sonic Youth isn't active, Shelley runs his own label, Smells Like Records, and has played on dozens of albums on the side, most recently Moore's "Psychic Hearts" solo album. With each band member's side projects piling up, does he see Sonic Youth's time coming to an end?

"I don't know," Shelley admitted. "I hope it goes on a lot longer. It's a really good format, and I think all the different people are really good together. We have fun doing the side projects, but we all know it's not the same as when the four of us get together. It's . . . "

Groping for a word to use, Shelley then said three words that describe Sonic Youth better than any thesaurus ever could: "It's just different."

Disco duo puts the emphasis on fun

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

The disco duo Peacetrain knows exactly what to expect when they open for Village People and K.C. of the Sunshine Band at Pine Knob Music Theatre on Friday.

After attending last year's concert, Detroit-area natives Phil Elam and Mike Boila know to have the riot gear handy.

"As soon as the Village People hit the stage, the lawn emptied into the pavilion," said the boisterous Elam. "It was really funny. We were in our seats standing up and looking at the people. They all had a dazed look in their eye kind of like the only thing that mattered in life was the Village People."

Longtime fans of both of the groups, it's an understatement to say that they're excited.

"When they called and told us and asked us if we were available, I had to put my head between my knees," Elam said. "Seriously, I was on the floor. It was ridiculous. The woman on the other end (of the phone line) had to tell me to inhale," Elam said mocking his reaction.

"On weekends we get together, pop the tape in and oh, it's the best, like 'Macho Man.' It's so unpretentious and that's the best thing about it. They're just having fun. There's none of that, 'I'm a reputable musician-type. Sit down and be quiet and listen to me," he said.

Elam and Boila have been getting together to listen to and perform music together since 1986, when the two met as interns at MCA Distributing in Southfield. The ironic thing is they should have met five years earlier.

"It was really funny. In '81, we both went to Interlochen. We were both there at the same time, both studying piano and obviously walking past each other," said Elam as Boila walked his fingers across the coffeehouse table.

"He had to walk by my cabin every single day to get to classes and we never friggin' met."

When they did meet, they realized they had common musical interests. For the next five years, Elam and Boila, both 31, recorded demos of their material. Boila eventually left MCA to study as an "apprentice" under longtime Bob Seger manager Punch Andrews as a management assistant and publishing manager for Gear Publishing Co. Elam has gone on to become a marketing manager for the mid-central branch and a resident record rep out of Cincinnati.

Their contacts have enabled them to polish their sound.

"Punch has been very instrumental in helping us learn how to produce, for one thing. We just used to do demos. He got us encouraged," Boila said.

The duo, under the name Peacetrain, has released a 12 inch single of the song "Bangin' My Drum" and the Donna Summer classic "There Will Always Be You."

Besides recruiting the help of Andrews, Peacetrain worked with engineers Michael Iacopelli and Michael Moore (Aretha Franklin, George Clinton, Prince), guitarists Bobby Lewis (George Clinton) and Carl Robinson (The Winans), as well as Carlton Batts of The Hit Factory. Although the single was released on their own Hulleon Records, the duo is waiting for a record deal to put out their album.

On stage, Peacetrain adds the talents of four dancers called "Color Me Funk," and two background vocalists Cathy Drapeau and Venita Fitch who perform under the name "Diva Deluxe." The duo performs with recorded background music.

"The dancers are pretty aerobic. We're out there doing the singing and dancing thing. Your adrenalin was really pumping. . . . We're gonna have eight people on stage so it's not like we're going to be shy of people."

Many critics and fans believe that disco is more of a "retro" fad than a viable music genre. Elam has a quick response to that.

"Oh please, please," he said stretching out the word into two syllables.

"They're so much fun," Boila interrupted.

"That's what it's all about," Elam said. "It's a ton of fun. They're in such a good mood when they get there they just want to have fun."

Riding the Peacetrain: Mike Boila (left) and Phil Elam are the core members of Peacetrain, a local disco act who will open for K.C. of the Sunshine Band and the Village People at Pine Knob Music Theatre at 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 28.

Peacetrain, K.C. of the Sunshine Band and the Village People perform at 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 28, at Pine Knob Music Theatre, I-75 and Sashabaw Road, Clarkston. Tickets are $24.50 for pavilion and $12.50 for lawn. For more information, call (810) 377-0100.

Buglers, drummers blare in Summer Music Games

One listen to the Summer Music Games will blast away your preconceived notions about drums and bugles. One look will forever change your definition of marching.

The Summer Music Games return to southeast Michigan July 28 and 29 when the Drum Corps International Preview of Champions, a competition featuring North America's top 20 drum and bugle corps, comes to Eastern Michigan University's Rynearson Stadium in Ypsilanti.

Several local musicians will participate in the Summer Music Games with corps from Rockford and Rosemont, Ill.; and Toledo, Ohio. Each corps is made up of 128 young musicians, no older than 21, who rehearse for several months to prepare a single competitive marching show that is presented in shows throughout the summer.

Local participants and their bands include: from Canton, Erik Meszaros of the Phantom Regiment, Kevin Borowski of the Cavaliers, Anna Miller and Jonathon Miller of the Glassmen; from Plymouth, Doug Fry and Jeff Kendzior of the Cavaliers and Michelle Mangan of the Glassmen; and from West Bloomfield, Chris Rohn of the Glassmen.

Corps are made up of four sections. The brass line consists of a variety of bugles, evolved from the tinny-sounding squawk boxes of yesteryear to powerful brass instruments. The drum line is made up of snares, bass drums, cymbals, tom-toms and any percussion instrument that can be carried. The color guard is a contingent trained in dance and visual expression. And the pit features some stationary percussion equipment — anything that makes a sound when struck.

The two-day competition begins with preliminaries on Friday and concludes with the top 12 corps competing in the finals Saturday evening. Tickets for the Friday event, which begins at 3 p.m., are $15. Admission to Saturday's finals, which begin at 7:30 p.m., is $20. Tickets can be purchased from the Ypsilanti Area Visitors and Convention Bureau at 1-800-483-4660 or Drum Corps International (708) 495-9666.

Folk music comes to Northville

Folk and bluegrass music fans can kick up their heels in Northville Sunday, July 30.

The 19th Annual Folk & Bluegrass Festival will take place from noon until 8 p.m. at Ford Field near downtown Northville. A dinner/music show featuring festival performers will take place Saturday night, July 29, at Genitti's Restaurant in Northville. Proceeds from both events will benefit the Huntington's Disease Society of America.

The event kicks off with a pancake breakfast at 10 a.m.

This year's lineup of talent includes headliners Claudia Schmitt, Josh White Jr. and Peter and Lou Berryman, as well as The Immigrants, Neil Woodward, Dennis Cyporian, Fred's Not Irish, Pat Donahue and the Hooked on Country dancers.

Adavnce tickets for the festival are $10 and are available at the Gitfiddler in Northville or by calling Ticketmaster at (810)645-6666. Tickets can also be bought at the gate for $12.

Saturday night's show at Genitti's will feature a seven-course family-style dinner followed by Schmitt and White's performance in the Genitti's Little Theatre. Tickets for the event are $35 per person. Shows are at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Call (810) 349-0522 for reservations.

The festival, expected to draw about 2,000 people, is sponsored jointly by the University of Michigan Health Center, the Gitfiddler, Genitti's, Papa Romano's, Northville Collision and the Northville Rotary Club.

Memories of Elvis

Brighton Center: Mike Albert's "Memories of Elvis" show featuring the Big "E" Band will perform at 8 p.m. July 27 and 28 at the Brighton Center for the Performing Arts in Brighton. The performaces benefit the Humane Society of Livingston County. Albert has performed around the world as Elvis and has even worked with former backup singer for The King, the Jordanaires and J.D. Sumner and the Stamps. Tickets for the shows are $25-$50 and are available at Uber Drugs in Brighton, and Pet Provisions in Brighton and Howell.

JOHN MONAGHAN

Most people (myself included) know the work of R. Crumb through one of the following: the X-rated cartoon "Fritz the Cat," the album cover art for Janis Joplin's "Cheap Thrills," and that ubiquitous symbol of the early '70s, "Keep On Truckin'."

Terry Zwigoff, director of the new documentary "Crumb" and a longtime friend of the artist, dispenses with these known quantities early. The rest of his two-hour documentary, which opens the Detroit Film Theatre season on Aug. 4, paints an unforgettable portrait of an artist who uses comics as an outlet for an often painful life.

The idyllic '50s family shown on television was alien to Robert Crumb. His father, a tyrannical Marine, constantly fought with Robert's mother, who had violent mood swings from pills she took to keep her weight down.

Things weren't much better at school, where Robert and his brothers, Maxim and Charles, were classic loners and outcasts.

Robert, of course, went on to success as an underground comic artist. His stream-of-consciousness, drug-inspired comics struck a chord with hippie culture in the late '60s and early '70s. His often grotesque images of humanity are compared by some critics to the work of Bosch or Brueghel.

Crumb, a thin man with Coke-bottle glasses, usually rolls his eyes and looks nervous when these comparisons are made.

His brothers didn't fare as well. Charles, in his 40s, is shown still

The interviews with Charles are what stick with you long after viewing "Crumb." Though heavily medicated to battle depression, he is also very articulate, remembering the early days and musing about why he hasn't left the house much since losing his first and only job in 1969.

On the first weekend of November, Boston's Alloy Orchestra will perform original scores with silent classics "Lonesome," "Metropolis," and "The Wind." Tickets are $10 for these special screenings as compared to the usual $5 admission, available by calling the ticket office at 313-833-2323.

MUSIC

P'Jazz: Cool music downtown

The Pontchartrain Hotel in Detroit is offering a great cool down for hot summer nights. The hotel has revived its popular P'Jazz summer concerts and there are still a few weeks left to catch it.

The concerts are staged on the hotel terrace with tables set up and food and beverage stations available. Shows begin at 5:30 and 7:30 p.m. on Wednesdays. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster and at the hotel. Tickets are either $12 or $18 depending on the show.

"SMARTER AND MORE ENDEARING THAN THE ORIGINAL. Fast and full of explosive action and suspense. THE IDEAL FAMILY MOVIE!"

Cleverness in 'Remains' can't overcome pretention

JOHN MONAGHAN

Something goes way wrong when Canadian filmmakers try to be hip.

Denys Arcand ("Jesus of Montreal") and Atom Egoyan ("Exotica") are well-known among cinematic circles for their post-modern views of existence in Toronto and Montreal. While their films are often ambitious, they also go way over the line of pretentiousness.

Take Arcand's latest, "Love and Human Remains." It capped a recent filmmaker's retrospective at the Museum of Modern Art and now plays locally at the Main Art Theatre in Royal Oak. Posing predominates as Arcand weaves together a group of roughly twentysomethings trying to get their lives in sync.

You know this isn't an episode of "Friends" when one of the group, a leather-clad psychic/prostitute, works a client over with a whip while whispering scary stories. You know: the one about the hook-handed killer on prom night or the drip, drip, drip saga with the psycho taking the dog's place under the bed.

Already this is pretty whacked stuff, even for an admittedly dark comedy. It gets even weirder when you discover that a serial killer is on the loose, one who takes victims' earrings for souvenirs.

The main characters, David and Candy, are former lovers who share an apartment in downtown Montreal. He's openly gay ("Honey, I'm homo," he chirps on the way in from his waiter job.) A former teen TV actor, he now spends his free time living for the moment, which usually involves sex with different men each night.

She's a literary critic who hates all the books she reviews and obsesses about spots on the furniture. Her search for love buffets her emotionally between a boring hetero-bartender, an aggressive lesbian she meets at the gym, and David, who she still holds a torch for.

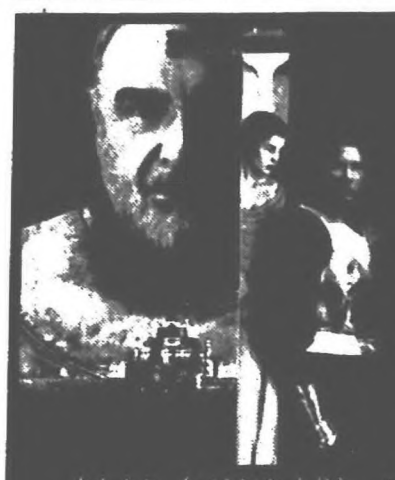

Arcand tells his story from a gay perspective. Indeed, the two consistently "straight" people in the movie are the ones we most suspect of murder. "Are there any gay people here tonight?" David says to a sometimes lover while prowling through a dungeon-like dance club. "Yeah, but they don't know it yet."

Thomas Gibson, a handsome actor with high cheekbones and a sardonic smile, has an affinity for picking movies like this (his most recent were "Barcelona" and "Sleep With Me.") His stiffness fits David perfectly, since the character hasn't landed a real acting role in over a decade.

Though everyone in the movie goes through monumental changes in a relatively short time, Candy's is most believable, thanks to newcomer Ruth Marshall's ease before the camera. Even better is Joanne Vannicola as the woman who initiates Candy's first encounter with same sex love.

"Love and Human Remains" will find a small audience among some black-clad, cappucino-sipping hipsters, but it's hard to take very seriously. Though out less than a week, Arcand's supposedly bold look at alternative lifestyles in the '90s already seems dated.

Alexander tickles customers with their ribs

BY RENEE SKOGLUND
SPECIAL WRITER

Better plan on wearing short sleeves when you order barbecued ribs at Alexander the Great in Westland. You could definitely say their ribs are elbow-lickin' good. In fact, this popular eatery bills itself as "the Place for the Greatest Old-Fashioned BBQ Ribs."

"You have to get messy and get sauce all over you," said Pauline Tomovski, who along with husband Tom has owned the restaurant for the past 18 years. Tom laughed and told a story about a customer who used to kid about having to be hosed off in between slabs. "You cannot eat ribs with a fork and knife," he said.

"Every restaurant has ribs these days. You can go to bars. People are cooking them in ovens, steaming them, but that's not barbecued. We cook them the old-fashioned way. Rotisserie. Open fire. That's real barbecue. You're going to have to grab the bone and chew on it," said Tom.

If it's true that a rib is just a rib until it is sauced, then the Tomovskis aren't revealing any secrets about their treasured sauce recipe.

"We make it from scratch," said Pauline. "We add our own little spices. I can't tell you how else it's made because it's our secret recipe from the old country."

Alexander's customers are faithful. "We have customers who come in the same day of the week, the same time. They're comfortable," said Pauline. "They believe that 10 out of 10 times they're going to get good food. That's what the regular guy comes in for," said Tom.

Besides consistency in food and service, Alexander the Great offers some terrific specials. "Barbecue rib dinner for 2," is a one such item. It includes a slab of ribs, two salads, two potatoes, and two large slices of crispy garlic bread for $14.95.

Their movie and dinner package is another favorite. "It draws a lot of customers," said Tom. "It's a package deal for $24.95 and includes two full dinners, and two passes to the show. And we give them a one-year expiration on it."

Passes are to all Showcase Cinemas, including the Quo Vadis. Dinner selections represent about 90 percent of their regular menu.

Phil Rivera is a rib-loving man from Wayne. He's been coming to Alexander's for many years.

"I come here at least once a month. I could come by more, but I have to watch my cholesterol," he said. "The food here is delicious. It's great. I've never had a bad meal here."

Without much urging, Rivera added a few more rib adjectives — "very moist, very meaty, not dry, and they're not greasy."

But lo, man or woman does not live by ribs alone at Alexander the Great. There's seafood, steak, chicken and pasta dishes, including spaghetti with homemade sauce that's the legacy of an Italian chef. There's also home fries the size of mini pancakes.

"The home fries are fantastic," said Rivera, who added, "as a recap, I give the place thumbs up."

I couldn't have said it better myself.

HOME TOWN TEAM

At Standard Federal, getting the lowest mortgage rate is a lock.

No matter what mortgage rates do next, you can get the lowest Standard Federal interest rate possible with our unique Rate Lock or Lower feature.

If you're thinking about buying a home, or refinancing your current mortgage, you've probably been keeping an eye on the recent drop in mortgage interest rates.

You can make interest rate changes work to your advantage with Rate Lock or Lower at Standard Federal. When you apply for a mortgage or for refinancing, Rate Lock or Lower not only locks in your interest rate at the time of application to protect your rates from going up – it also guarantees you that if our interest rates have gone down by the time you close, you get the lower rate while your Lock or Lower commitment is in effect. (Rate Lock or Lower not available on certain No-Point/No-Fee Mortgages)

That's right – you get the rate at the time of application or at the time of closing – whichever is lower.

By getting the lowest rate possible, you could save cash every month over the course of your mortgage. That's why now is the time to talk to Standard Federal about our unique Rate Lock or Lower opportunity. Give us a call at 1-800/643-9600 or stop by your neighborhood Standard Federal Banking Center today.

Title earns trip

It required a comeback that included beating a team that had previously handed them a 12-run pounding, but WWT of Canton proved up to the challenge last weekend.

Which meant collecting the over-35 division championship of the ASA Metro Detroit State Tournament, played Saturday and Sunday at Milford's Holden Softball Complex. And that, in turn, means WWT will advance to the over-35 ASA National Championship Tournament, played Labor Day weekend in Bloomington, Ind.

WWT harvested the state title by surviving the loser's bracket. They won their tourney-opener over Liberty Construction (of Sterling Heights), 19-18, but lost their next game to Pro Bath (Novi), 22-10. WWT advanced to the championship round, however, by beating Walsh's (Dearborn) 13-1.

In two games against Pro Bath, WWT proved superior, collecting wins by 17-0 and 19-7 scores.

Team members are Tom Guilfoyle and Jay Terranella of Canton; Mike Targac, Garden City; Fred Reho, Cleveland (Ohio); Randy Rodrigues, Novi; Perry Celsi, Belleville; Jim Guffey and Rich Grignon, Lincoln Park; Loarn Chilcote and Gail Parrish, Dearborn Heights; Jamie Kitka, Rockwood; Larry Kniceley, Donny Tillery and Billy Lambert, Taylor; and Mark McCartney, Dearborn.

Pro Bath also earned a berth in the national tournament by finishing second.

Low scorers

John Raymond, from Plymouth, fired a 38-38/76 to finish first in the Blue Division (seven to 11 handicap) at Saturday's Bavarian Cup, held at The Fortress in Frankenmuth. Raymond's score earned him a four-shot victory over runner-ups Jeremy Sova (Novi) and Frank Reed (Northville) in this stop on the Meijer Great Lakes Amateur Tour.

Sharon Laskowski of Plymouth finished with a best low-net score of 67 to win last Friday's Women's Suburban Golf Association tournament at Giant Oaks Golf Course.

Laskowski's victory came in first flight. Pat Hurick of Livonia shot an 84 to post the best low gross score in first flight.

Strong finish

The Plymouth-Canton Sandy Koufax baseball team (14-and-under) may not have won its championship, but it displayed its talent by finishing a game out of first place in the Washtenaw Baseball Association with a 14-4 record — which included a double-header sweep of first-place Belleville, 12-2 and 12-6, in its final regular-season games.

For the season, Plymouth-Canton compiled a .356 team batting average while the pitchers had a 4.02 team earned run average. Team members are Matt Carpenter, Joe Cortellini, Matt Fair, Justin Fendelet, Jeremy Finlay, Ryan Jacek, Chris Mason, Joe Niemiec, Phil Ross, Ben Tucker, Corey Wacker, Joe Wagner and Adam Wilson.

The team is coached by Duane Fair, Joe Niemiec, Gray Mason and A.J. Wagner.

Marauders struggle as playoffs approach

SOCCER

What had seemed so promising just a few days earlier has now been put into reverse.

The Marauders were in command in the Great Lakes Men's Soccer League going into Friday's match with Bud Light of Flint. The Marauders had a 7-0 record; a win would clinch the regular-season title.

They not only didn't get it, losing 3-0, but they followed it with another 3-1 setback to Bud Light Sunday in Flint. Which means the Marauders will finish second, still good enough to play their first playoff match at Livonia's Jaycee Park at 7 p.m. Friday. The opponent has not yet been determined.

"They finished their chances and we missed our chances," explained Marauder coach Dan O'Shea. True enough: In Friday's loss, the Marauders' Paul Kaliszewski completely missed the net on a penalty kick that would have tied the match midway through the second half.

On Sunday, the Marauders faced a similar situation. Down 2-0 midway through the second half, Mike Gentile lined up a penalty kick, awarded when a Bud Light defender was red-carded for purposely knocking away a sure goal with his hand. Gentile's attempt, however, was stopped by Bud Light keeper Reid Friedrichs.

The rebound came back to Gentile, but Friedrichs stopped his next shot as well.

Bud Light scored again a few minutes later, making Lars Richters' penalty-shot goal in the closing minutes meaningless.

The Marauders were 7-2 going into Wednesday's final regular-season match. Bud Light finished 7-1-2.

Elite winding down

Ann Arbor Elite will meet the Detroit Wheels for the first time this weekend in a season-ending, two-game soccer series.

The teams play at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Ann Arbor Pioneer High School, the home field for the Elite in the U.S. Inter-regional Soccer League.

A Sunday contest is scheduled for Borden Park in Sterling Heights, but might be moved to Livonia Franklin High School. Game time is 2 p.m. regardless.

Tickets are $6 for adults, $4 for children. For late word on the Sunday game call Wayne Woross at (313) 455-4011.

Twinbill loss topples Cobras

The season had unfolded so well for the Canton Cobras, but there are always lessons to be learned — and Tuesday, when they played the Livonia Churchill Knights, they learned just what a letdown can cost.

The delivery: Angela Litwin sets to send a pitch to the plate against the Knights. Litwin was unable to deliver the Cobras from defeat.

Going into Tuesday's double-header against the Livonia Churchill Knights at Livonia Clarenceville, the Canton Cobras were enjoying first place in the Incredible Girls Fast-Pitch Softball League.

A couple of hours later, their first-place ride was over.

That's because the Knights won both ends of the twinbill, 9-4 and 7-5. The losses dropped the Cobras' record to 6-4. The Knights improved to 9-3.

"That's the first time that's happened to us this season," said Canton coach Jim Arnold. "What can I say? We had a bad night and it knocked us out of first."

Cathy Herman (from Livonia Ladywood) also played a major role in the Cobras' demise. She pitched both games, and won both, allowing six hits and three walks with four strikeouts in the first game, and seven hits and one walk with two strikeouts in the second.

In the first game, the Knights struck for six runs in the second inning to take a 6-3 lead, and the Cobras never recovered. Allison Woodruff (Ladywood) had two hits and two runs batted in. Stephanie Nelson had a two-run single and Danielle Sockolosky scored three runs for the Knights.

Shana Bidrell led Canton with two hits. Audra LaGrow added a

Crusader recruits feature choices

RECRUITING

If bigger is better, then Madonna University's baseball team is on a fast track to success.

Not that the Fighting Crusaders could avoid it. With a team featuring a rebuilt infield and just four seniors, they posted a 39-25 overall record in '95 and reached the final three in the NAIA Great Lakes Regional, their best postseason performance ever.

The four seniors they're losing — outfielder-pitcher Jim Solak, center fielder Scott Anderson, pitcher Sean Henkel and catcher Steve Zann — will be difficult to replace. Making the task tougher is the loss of starting first baseman Aaron Jones, who's transferring to pursue a degree in engineering.

So, a year after rebuilding the infield, Madonna coach Mike George must do the same in the outfield.

That shouldn't be much of a problem. George will have plenty to choose from with the recruiting class he has coming in — the largest in number (17) by far since George began the program, in 1990 (10 was his biggest).

And that number does not include two redshirts George hopes to have join the team, right-handed pitcher Monte Travis and catcher Delano Voletti. Both have four years of eligibility remaining.

George knows what he's losing: a total of 22 home runs and nearly 160 runs batted in from Solak, Anderson and Jones. "We've replaced some of that with some of these kids," he said.

If he had stopped his efforts with just Dearborn Divine Child graduates, George could very probably have termed it a success. From the team many thought was the finest in the state last year, in any class, George has signed three players.

That doesn't include Voletti, also a Divine Child graduate.

The leader of the Falcon grade is Aaron Shrewsbury, a 6-foot-2, 245-pound outfielder/catcher/first baseman. An all-Catholic selection, George hopes he'll "provide some of the offensive punch we're losing."

The other two DC recruits are both right-handed pitchers: Joel Fabris (5-10, 165) and Joe Biggs (6-0, 170), pitchers George said were fourth and fifth in the DC rotation — which, considering how tough the team was, wasn't so bad.

Two of his recruits are from Observerland schools: Eric Marcotte, a shortstop from Plymouth Canton who played last year at Henry Ford CC (he'll have three years of eligibility left), and Joe Niestroy (5-10, 190), a catcher/pitcher/third baseman from Redford Thurston.

Marcotte is a strong defensive player with a decent bat, a player who has experienced academic troubles. Those apparently have been addressed, George said; as far as Marcotte making an immediate impact, he said "I would think so."

Niestroy was not only all-Mega Conference, but he was an all-Observer selection. With good reason: He hit .466 with 23 RBI, and was 2-2 with a 2.00 earned run average on the mound. A car accident cost him part of his senior season, an accident he's still recovering from.

"He's a kid who's pretty versatile," said George. "He's a good-sized kid, well put-together."

As for the others, once again George pursued pitchers. "You have to," he said.

Wildcat defense clamps down on Spartans, 6-1

In perhaps the best defensive performance of this summer season, the Wildcats subdued the Spartans Monday 6-1 in a Metro Summer Hockey League game at Plymouth Ice Arena.

The Wildcats' Jim Pietila opened the scoring at 9:31 of the first period; the Spartans' Vic DeCina (from Canton) tied it with 4:22 left in the period.

Then the Wildcats exploded, scoring three goals in the final four minutes. Pietila got his second of the contest, with Josh Wiegand (Plymouth) and Jake Guzak getting the next two.

For the game, Pietila and Wiegand each scored two goals, and Guzak had a goal and two assists while Kevin Pietila netted a goal and an assist. Ron Pietila and Bob Kangas finished with two assists apiece.

Jim Sexsmith and Matt Kucway split time in goal for the 'Cats.

The victory bettered the Wildcats' record to 9-1, still best in the Bakes Division. The Spartans lost for the second-straight time, slipping to 4-6.

■ Huskies 13, Lakers 10: Tony McGee and Dustin Sventy sparked the offense for the Huskies, combining to score seven goals and collect 12 points Sunday at Plymouth Ice Arena.

McGee accounted for four goals, three in the first two periods as the Huskies built a 10-6 lead. He also totaled three assists. Sventy finished with three goals and two assists.

The Huskies (3-6) also got major contributions from Justin Weber (Livonia), two goals and one assist; Jason Weber (Livonia), a goal and five assists; Ryan Schmidt (Livonia), a goal and two assists; Darren Schmidt (Livonia), one goal and one assist; Andrew Perry (Livonia), one goal; and Mike Forbes, two assists.

For the Lakers (2-6-1), Chad Theuer collected four goals and two assists to lead the offense. Kyle McNeilance (Livonia) added two goals and three assists, Jack McCoy had two goals and two assists, and both James Wheaton and Matt Allen netted a goal and two assists each.

■ Bulldogs 14, Broncos 11: In another high-scoring shootout, the Bulldogs finally outscored the Broncos by building a 13-8 lead with less than five minutes left in the game, and then hanging on Sunday at Plymouth.

Both Jack McCoy (Livonia) and Kris Cantu scored three goals apiece to pace the 'Dogs (3-5-1). Cantu also had three assists, while McCoy picked up two.

Todd Kesler (Livonia) added two goals and three assists, with Brent Bessey (Canton) and Tim McConnell netting a goal and two assists each, and both Dominic Catanzarite (Livonia) and Daryl Schimmelpfenneg (Canton) getting a goal and an assist. Krikor Arman had a goal and Justin Young (Westland) picked up two assists.

For the Broncos (0-8-1), all 11 goals came from four players: Paul Goleniak (Westland), three goals and three assists; Pat Brush, three goals and two assists; Dave Weaver (Plymouth), three goals and an assist; and Scott Goleniak (Westland), two goals and five assists. Chris Yockey, Eric Gateman and Eddie Switkowski (Canton) each had two assists.

■ Wolverines 11, Spartans 3: The Spartans had been on a bit of a roll — until Sunday.

Or, to be more precise, until the second period of Sunday's game at Plymouth. It was a 3-2 game after one, the Wolves up a goal. Then Kevin O'Connor got hot, scoring three times in the second period as the Wolves (6-3-1) increased their advantage to 7-3.

O'Connor finished with three goals and two assists, the exact same totals as Kevin Mankowski. Both Jim Nesich (Plymouth) and Bob Nagy netted two goals and three assists for the Wolves, with Rob Fleury getting a goal and an assist, Eric Norman adding three assists, and Kevin Matejko finishing with two assists.

four, George thinks Jabezenski could contribute on the mound right away, possibly as a starter.

Ayotte also possesses speed afoot to go with his left-handed bat, and is expected to challenge for the vacancy in center field.

Additional right-handed pitchers are Bob Hamp, a Class A all-stater from Alpena; Bob Mason, from South Lyon; and Tom Sutter, a U.S. Air Force veteran.

Several others are versatile enough to fill several spots, as well as pitch. Niestroy and Ayotte fall into that mold; so does E.J. Roman, from Orchard Lake St. Mary's, a right-hander who bats left and who can catch and play third base, too.

And Kevin Sullivan, a pitcher/first baseman/third baseman from Riverview Gabriel Richard whose size (6-1, 220) indicates "he's going to provide some offensive punch for us."

The loss of Zann left George with just one experienced catcher — Craig Petersen. Voletti will help; so will Shrewsbury, Niestroy, Roman and Darryl Rocho, from Fraser.

Helping fill the voids in the outfield will be Mark Taylor, from Gibraltar Carlson, and Bob Leon, from Roseville and Macomb Community College. Taylor, Leon and Ayotte — each a candidate for a starting spot — all run very well. Leon was one of the top hitters on a Macomb CC team that reached the NJCAA World Series.

run-scoring triple. Sarah Carson took the pitching defeat, allowing seven hits and two walks while striking out four.

In the second game, Woodruff again collected two hits for the Knights, who used a five-run third to take command. Sarah Stiles also had two hits and two RBI.

The Cobras got two hits and three RBI from Nicki Kovachevich, and a hit and an RBI each from Mandy Felkins and Karen Dougher. Angela Litwin was the losing pitcher, giving up eight hits and four walks, striking out four.

The Cobras host the Farmington Harrison Hornets in a doubleheader at 6 p.m. Thursday at Plymouth Canton HS. On Saturday, the league will host a pair of all-star games at Massey Field in Plymouth, with the novice game at 5:30 p.m. and the advanced game at 7:30 p.m.

Those expected to play for the Cobras are Amy LaGrow, Amber LaGrow, Jenny Sikora, Sarah Carson, Angela Litwin and Shelly Butske. All are entering their junior years at Canton.

SOFTBALL

Finesse claims national title

For the Finesse 19-and-under softball slow-pitch softball team, it was a worthwhile trip last weekend to Rock Hill, S.C.

Coach Barry Patterson's squad captured the 27-team National Softball Association World Tournament with a 6-3 triumph in the finals over the Gwinnett (Ga.) Panthers.

Second baseman Vonne Jenks (Garden City High) made a diving catch with two runners aboard in the bottom of the seventh inning to preserve the victory and the title.

Finesse finished with a 6-0 record, including a first-round 5-3 win over the Georgia Bandits, who have won three of the last four U.S. Slo-pitch Softball Association age-group titles.

Other victories came against the Georgia Hustlers (8-3), Alabama Lady Elite (9-2), Rat Daddy's of Georgia (6-4) and the Hornets (12-3).

"Last weekend we put it all together," Patterson said. "It was a pleasant surprise, especially after we drew the Bandits right out of the gate.

"But after we beat them, we kind of cruised from there."

Four Finesse players made the All-NSA World team including shortstop Lisa Cox (Wyandotte), who was voted tourney MVP. Also named was pitcher Mandee Horosko (Garden City), first baseman Sherry Foster (Dearborn Edsel Ford) and outfielder Colleen Wutke (Garden City).

Other Finesse members include Jaclyn Deane and Ann Bagazinski (both of Livonia Franklin); Jamie Cook (Madonna University/Westland John Glenn); Christi Wyrybkowski (Michigan/John Glenn), Christina Bogualawski (Dearborn St. Alphonsus); Jenny Myslinski and Jodie Barringer (both of Farmington Hills Harrison); Jenny Kintz (Tennessee/Garden City); Christy Riopelle (Madonna/Taylor Center); Katy Duncan (John Glenn), Carah Best (Plymouth Salem) and Heather Marley (Henry Ford CC/Walled Lake Western).

"We've had a couple of third-place finishes, but this is the first national title for any travel team from this area since 1983," said Patterson, who also received help from assistant coaches Don Dreher, Jim Baker and Danny Schlimgen. "Now we're going to try and get greedy and get two national titles."

Finesse returns to action Aug. 3-5 for the USSSA World Tournament in Lubbock, Texas.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

SALEM CROSS COUNTRY

The Plymouth Salem girls cross country team has another informational meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 9, at McClumpha Park, located at McClumpha Road and Ann Arbor Trail. Anyone interested in competing on the Salem girls team should be in attendance.

For further information, call coach Dave Gerlach at (313) 416-7708 or (313) 421-9030, or team member Leah Retherford at (313) 453-8571.

UPCOMING TOURNAMENTS

The Canton Softball Center has a full slate of softball tournaments coming up.

First, there's the Men's C Division Tournament Aug. 5-6. Cost is $150 per team.

On Aug. 12-13, three tournaments are scheduled: A USSSA Men's C Division state tournament, cost $175 per team; a Men's E qualifier, cost $150 per team; and a Women's D qualifier, cost $150 per team.

There are also two Grand Slam Giveaway Tournaments, both Aug. 19-20. Eleven trips to Las Vegas will be given away. Play will be in men's, women's and co-ed divisions. Entry fee is $200 per team, or $350 if your team enters both.

And finally, there's a Men's E Division Last Chance tournament Aug. 19-20. Entry fee is $150 per team.

For information regarding any of the above tournaments, call (313) 483-5600, ext. 102.

ALL-STAR FOOTBALL GAME

Livonia Stevenson's Jim Townsend and Redford Catholic Central's Brad Rainko will play for the East squad Saturday in the 15th annual Michigan High School Football Coaches Association All-Star game at 1:35 p.m. at Spartan Stadium in East Lansing.

Tickets, available at the gate, are $6 a person.

Townsend, a 6-foot-4, 255-pound tackle, helped Stevenson to an 8-3 record and a post-season Class AA playoff berth, and is headed this fall for Alma College.

Rainko, a 6-3, 215-pound tight end, is bound for Michigan State.

Other players from Observerland include Torrey Thomas, a 6-1, 205-pound linebacker from Redford Bishop Borgess; and Kevin Bryant, a 6-foot, 170-pound wide receiver from Farmington Hills Harrison.

ROLLERS NEED SPONSORS

The Small Town Devils, who finished third last month in the region Triple Crown Street Hockey Festival tournament at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, are looking for sponsors to send their team to the nationals, Aug. 24-27, in Steamboat Springs, Colo.

The nine-man team, made up of area college players, is looking to raise $3,500 for the trip. There will be 100 teams competing for the national title in the five-on-five format (goaltender included).

Player-coach Kevin Brady, a 1991 Livonia Stevenson High grad, said the team is also seeking a goalie. Brady played two seasons at Alabama-Huntsville before transferring to Salem State (Mass.) where he led his squad to the NCAA Division III semifinals.

Other members of the Devils include Jason Weber (Livonia), who plays for Cornell; Eric Riters (Livonia), University of Arizona; Jesse Hubenschmidt (Redford), UM-Dearborn; Darren Hands (Jackson), UM-Dearborn; Bill Scruggs, (Rochester), Matt Lazorka (Trenton), Neil Mansilla (Livonia), Brian Thomas (Livonia) and Chris Rennie (Livonia).

For more information, call Brady at (313) 464-1422 (home) or (313) 591-1912 (fax).

LCBL can't fill playoff field

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

■ COLLEGIATE

Another forfeit, another disenchanted fan.

But this time, maybe the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League should take a closer look.

Bob Cox, one of the LCBL's most-loyal fans, showed up Tuesday night at Ford Field for the regular-season finale between Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury and Dearborn Adray.

But Cox turned around and went home after learning Adray couldn't field enough players to play the scheduled game. The forfeit victory was the second in three days for Hines Park, which won the LCBL regular-season title with a 21-7 record.

Second-place Decision Consultants Inc. needed Hines Park to lose at least one of its last three games to tie for first place, but the issue had already been decided in the event of a deadlock. Hines Park won the season series, 4-3.

"I should have watched Connie Mack (baseball) this year," said Cox, who can remember when the LCBL used to field eight competitive teams.

If Cox can't enjoy the five-team LCBL, who can?

Livonia Little Caesars would have been the fourth-seed in the four team LCBL playoffs which begin Friday, but coach John Moraitis' team was ruled ineligible after a pair of forfeits in a Sunday double-header against Hines Park and Michigan Honig's.

Caesars also forfeited a game Sunday, July 16, against Hines Park. An LCBL rule says teams with three forfeits are suspeneded from playing any further games.

Adray, which finished in last place with a 5-19 record, would have taken Caesars' place in the playoffs, but coach Tim Napier had to turn down the invitation because several of his players already left for vacations.

That left Hines Park with a bye in its first-round game. DCI (20-8) and third-place Honig's (16-12), a pair of first-year teams, will meet in a first-round game at 6:30 p.m. Friday at Ford Field.

Hines Park plays the winner of Friday's game at 2:30 p.m. Saturday. The losers of the first two playoff games will meet at 5 p.m. and the championship is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

The winner gets an automatic bid to the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national tournament beginning Aug. 12 in Johnstown, Pa.

The most-frustrated team heading into the playoffs has to be DCI, which lost 7-6 on a two-run throwing error in the bottom of the eighth inning on Sunday to Honig's, and had to watch Hines Park win three games on forfeits in the final 10 days of the season.

Canton's Scott Kapla (Redford Catholic Central/Eastern Michigan University), one of the handful of Caesars players who showed up Sunday, was scheduled to start against Hines Park. Kapla would have given Caesars a good chance of upsetting Hines Park.

Now there is talk of DCI trying to get in a Wooden Bat League with Madonna University Park being one of the home sites starting next year.

"When you have forfeits, it takes away from the quality of the league," DCI coach Mike George said. "Eighteen kids on a team and you can't get nine out here? Give me a break."

Moraitis said he can't remember having a forfeit in his previous 11 years in the LCBL. He had no reason to believe he'd have trouble getting his players to show up for games.

"The only one I was worried about was Phil Piepany, because his coach last year in Connie Mack, Tom Nolan, said he was great — if he showed up," Moraitis said.

Piepany lasted only a handful of games and a couple other Caesars' players quit early on because of lack of playing time, according to Moraitis.

Director Gary Gray said the LCBL has reached "rock bottom" but added he expects to continue the league next year.

Decision tumbles down the stretch

■ BASEBALL

Sunday couldn't have been more aggravating for Decision Consultants Inc. coach Mike George.

After hearing Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury, the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League leader, won a game by forfeit in the afternoon, George watched his team lose a heartbreaker later that night.

Michigan Honig's scored two unearned runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to defeat DCI, 7-6, in the regular season finale for both teams.

DCI finished in second place with a 20-8 record followed by Honig's in third at 16-12. Hines Park, which finished the season with another forfeit victory on Tuesday against Dearborn Adray, finished atop the standings at 21-7.

Honig's scored two runs in the eighth with the benefit of only one hit, a leadoff single by Chris Kirian.

Michael Sajdak followed with a grounder to shortstop, but Kirian was ruled safe at second base on an attempted force play. DCI assistant coach Joe Saunders disputed the play, arguing that Kirian should have been out because he went into second base with a stand-up slide.

"This league has an NCAA sliding rule — you must go directly into the base and stay down. Clearly the guy popped up," said Saunders, a veteran of high school and Division I college umpiring.

The next batter, Bob Steinbrecher, laid down a bunt and pitcher Eric Butler threw the ball wildly to third base to score both runners.

After the game, DCI assistant Frank Corej (who also is an experienced umpire), argued that Sajdak failed to touch third base en route to home plate.

The umpire allowed the run to stand, however.

Honig's coach Ed Hood said the two assistant coaches' arguments are getting old.

"It's improper and taking the fun out of the league," Hood said.

Saunders said the incident at second base was the first time in 28 games he went on the field to argue a call.

DCI starter Luke Bonner, who won his first three outings, struck out eight and scattered six hits in seven innings. But he threw three wild pitches, walked one batter and hit a batter.

DCI coach Mike George chose to pull Bonner, the Dearborn Divine Child graduate who was drafted in the 34th round in the recent Major League draft by the Detroit Tigers, after the seventh inning in favor of Butler.

Aaron Jones led DCI with a 4-for-4 performance at the plate, including a double, and one run scored. Brian Hicks was walked three times and scored two runs.

All-Star game now a disappearing act

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

From an All-Star game at Tiger Stadium to no game at all.

It's come to that for the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League, which for the first time in anyone's memory won't showcase an all-star game in 1995.

Longtime LCBL fans remember the all-star games played against the Detroit Adray League at Tiger Stadium and sponsored by Mike Adray, late owner of Adray Appliance.

The Detroit league folded about five years ago, canceling any further all-star games against the LCBL at Tiger Stadium.

The LCBL continued the all-star tradition, however, playing at Ford Field against the Canadian National Team in 1991, the Lansing Team in '92 and '93 and last year amongst themselves.

But because the five coaches failed to hand in ballots to LCBL directors Gary Gray and Lyle Trudell by the July 14 deadline, there will be no all-star game this season.

Gray is getting tired of reminding the LCBL coaches of some of their duties, which include calling in their results and statistics to the Observer and nominating players for honors.

The LCBL used to have an LCBL player of the week honor called the "Perry Deakin Award." The award hasn't been given out the past couple seasons, Gray said, because coaches quit nominating players on a steady basis. Deakin, who is deceased, was the first director of the Livonia Adray League.

"He wouldn't be a happy camper," Gray said of Deakin. "Amateur baseball was his life and all-star games to me are a chance to show off your kids' talents to a lot of other people in the league. I'm disappointed in the entire league. We've had as much or more controversy than most people can take, and we still stand behind this league. The problem is we don't seem to get cooperation."

"I blame every single coach, and myself too, for not taking a hard-line attitude toward an all-star game," Hines Park coach Dave Carroll said.

The LCBL got off to a shaky start prior to the season when longtime member Walter's Appliance chose to drop out of the league after not agreeing with the addition of two new teams, Decision Consultants Inc. and Dearborn Adray.

The regular season ended on a bad note with Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury clinching first place with the help of three forfeit victories in the last 10 days.

DCI coach Mike George had a sarcastic answer Sunday for Gordie Rutherford, father of Little Caesars star Mark Rutherford, who was wondering when the all-star game would be played.

"How can we have any all-star games when we can't have any regular games?" George asked.

TENNIS

Mentadent Tour hits suburban club

By Brad Emons
STAFF WRITER

Peter Fleming doesn't have many memories of playing professional tennis in Detroit.

"I think I played an exhibition once at Cobo Arena," Fleming recalls. "But of course, I went to Michigan my freshman year — 1973 — but I didn't stay long in Ann Arbor. I transferred during the month of February. It was too cold, the temperatures were still in the 20s."

Fleming headed off to UCLA and eventually became one of the world's top doubles players, teaming up with John McEnroe to win four Wimbledons and three U.S. Open titles.

He is back in town this week at the Fairlane Club in Dearborn for the $150,000 Mentadent Champions clay-court event, a 12-player draw which gives the likes of Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg, Guillermo Vilas and Johan Kriek life again on the men's 35-and-over tour.

Action begins at 7 tonight when Fleming takes on Mel Purcell in a first-round singles match. Connors and Eddie Dibbs will then face Borg and Andres Gomez immediately after in a doubles match.

The tournament continues with sessions at 1 and 7 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The championship final is 7 p.m. Monday.

Fleming, who briefly played under coach Brian Eisner at Michigan, and alongside All-Americans Victor Amaya and Freddie DeJesus, may take a side trip sometime this weekend to Ann Arbor.

"I wasn't there very long, but I'd like to go back, walk around and see what's changed," said Fleming, a New Jersey native.

Fleming, now 40, has won a pair of doubles crowns with Jose-Luis Clerc since the Champions Tour began in 1993.

But his main emphasis is singles.

"Some guys, like John Lloyd, are playing as well as they ever had," Fleming said. "We're all pretty relaxed now, and it doesn't affect our tennis adversely.

"After I retired from the regular tour (in 1987) I did not pick up a racket for 1½ years. I don't know if it's age or maturity, but since I retired I have not had any serious injuries. Before, I usually pushed myself over the edge and was paranoid about not practicing. Now I have balance in my approach, and I'm taking care of myself."

Fleming, who posted a 14-1 Davis Cup record, said he spends 20 weeks per year working with young British pros, another seven to eight weeks doing TV commentary, and the rest practicing and playing on the Champions Tour.

Now a native of London, England, along with his wife Jenny and three children, Fleming called the first week of Wimbledon "a little slow," but said things picked up during the second week of play.

"It's too bad (Boris) Becker beat Andre (Agassi)," Fleming said, "because a lot of people would have loved to see a (Pete) Sampras-Agassi final."

Fleming also offered his insight on American Jeff Tarango's premature Wimbledon exit after an ugly scene with the chair umpire.

"What he did was pretty shocking," said Fleming, who always played the straight-man when was teamed with the tempestuous McEnroe. "It was like Roberto Duran's 'No Mas, No Mas.' It became some sordid entertainment.

"Sure, I felt like walking off the court a lot of times, but I never did because I wanted to win too much to give it away.

"Regardless of what he believed the umpires did, they're going to have to clamp down on him hard. They have to."

The Mentadent Tour features 11 different stops this year with more than $2.6 million in total prize money. It is slowly catching on like the PGA Senior Tour.

"I was not skeptical at all when it started," Fleming said. "I was excited and the reason is because they are good players. They love the game, and it's become competitive.

"McEnroe has only played two events and it would be nice if he could play more, but it really doesn't matter when you have guys like Connors, Vilas and Borg. We have most of the big names."

Tickets are $15 to $30. For information, call (313) 436-3007.

YMCA to host over 35

Prize money will be at stake once again in the Livonia Family YMCA Men's 35 tennis tournament, Aug. 4-6.

The event, sponsored by the Livonia Y and Las Vegas Golf & Tennis of Canton, includes singles and doubles draws.

The singles champion will receive $500, with the runner-up pocketing $200. The doubles champion and runner-up teams will earn $200 and $100, respectively.

Mike Rose of Grosse Ile is the defending champion. He also teamed up with Steve Winsor to win the 1994 doubles crown.

The entry fee is $32 for singles and $36 per doubles team. The entry deadline is Friday, July 28.

For more information, call Jean Carman at the Livonia Y at (313) 261-2161.

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

Carolyn J. Edds, news researcher and librarian for the Herald-Journal in Spartanburg, S.C., announces that her newspaper has developed an experimental website for the Susan Smith trial in its back yard. Or is it front yard? The Smith trial website of the Herald-Journal, which serves Spartanburg, Gaffney and Union, S.C., can be accessed at http://www.teleplex.net/SHJ/smith/.

My first visit was on July 12, the day the first five jurors were selected. Four news reports filed that day were: the "update" on the five jurors; "Two jurors seated, sequestered"; "Judge Howard delivers 'close call' "; and "CNN's 'Talkback' to air show from Union."

Going beyond that day's news reports is a link to past stories written by Herald-Journal reporters from Union, S.C., and past stories on the paper's earlier coverage of the disappearance of Michael and Alex Smith. Another link takes users to a page of thumbnail photo images taken by the Herald-Journal photographers. Click on a thumbnail photo and a large photo appears on your screen.

Another website on the Smith Trial has been developed by The State newspaper in Columbia, S.C. This page also has breaking stories, updated daily, plus photos and background pieces. When I arrived July 12 the main report was on jury selection, followed by a "Trial Diary: Behind the scenes in Union."

This page has a Smith story archive that includes "Looking back: Key dates in the tragedy," "Who's who in the Smith trial," and "The story in pictures." This site can be accessed at http://www.netside.com/(tilde mark)the state.

Metro presence

A couple of individuals well-known in the Detroit metro area now have a presence on the Internet by establishing listserv discussions. Radio handyman Glenn Haege has a HANDYMAN-HINTS listserve and rabbi Aaron Bergman has a JEWISH-PERSPECTIVE list. Both are moderated, meaning incoming messages are reviewed before being posted with the moderator eliminating duplicates or off-topic discussions.

Haege has been on the radio show "Ask the Handyman" on WXYT-AM since 1983 and his brand of knowledge and friendly advice has expanded into 19 markets in the Midwest. He also has authored several books, including "Fix It Fast and Easy," "Take the Pain Out of Painting Interiors," and "Take the Pain Out of Painting Exteriors."

He is one of the contributing editors to HANDY-MAN HINTS which will discuss such topics as how your home works, new products, Q-A from subscribers and other experts, how to fix almost anything, workshop shortcuts, how to use tools, design tips, choosing a contractor, and "projects that give you lots of impact for not a lot of time or money." To subscribe send an e-mail message to majordomo@cedar.cic.net and in the message area type "SUBSCRIBE HANDYMAN-

HINTS."

The discussion leader of JEWISH-PERSPECTIVE is Aaron Bergman, 31, a graduate of the University of Michigan and Jewish Theological Seminary and a rabbi of a suburban Detroit congregation. He also is a budding electric blues guitarist.

Bergman has lectured widely on such diverse topics as Jewish mysticism and sexuality in Jewish life. On the listserv, he will lead an open forum where Jews from all Jewish movements can discuss controversial topics such as what Jewish tradition has to say about sex, politics, government, privacy, technology, abortion and gun control.

His comments will be grounded in the classic Jewish literature such as the Torah, Talmud and Midrash but will be relevant to our times. The opinions of all Jews are welcome, with the most interesting shared with others. The rabbi merely asks that participants have an open mind and a sense of humor, irony or wit. To subscribe send an e-mail message to majordomo@cedar.cic.net and in the message area type "SUBSCRIBE JEWISH-PERSPECTIVE."

Skate event continues through Sunday

Skating at the 14th annual Skate Detroit Invitational Summer Competition continues through Sunday at the Detroit Skating Club, 888 Denison Court, Bloomfield Hills.

Skate Detroit is the largest non-qualifying competition in the Midwest, and with more than 600 skaters this year, quite possibly the largest skating competition in the country.

"Last year we had 450 skaters," said competition chair JoAnne Berry, "and we surpassed that by 200 this year.

"The added interest may be due to the fact that Nicole Bobek and Todd Eldredge, the United States ladies' and men's champions, train at our club.

"We also recently opened a new Olympic size rink and people are curious about our new facility."

Many skaters are traveling from all over the country to be here, including athletes from California, New Mexico, Florida and Massachusetts.

Skaters at all levels of expertise will be competing for medals in figures, free skating, dance and pairs.

The competition is sanctioned by the United States Figure Skating Association, which is the national governing body of the sport of figure skating on ice in the United States.

It is hosted by the Detroit Skating Club and is open to the public. Admission is free.

REASONS TO GET YOUR MASTER OF SCIENCE IN TAXATION DEGREE FROM WALSH COLLEGE

That's how many subsection amendments have been made to the Internal Revenue Code since 1981.

It gets even more taxing:
In 1913, income tax law was covered in 14 pages.

Today it takes more than 8,600 pages!

If those facts don't convince you, here are three new reasons to get your M.S.T. from Walsh:

Reason 9372
You can get your M.S.T. with just 35 credit hours.

Reason 9373
Choice of three concentrations:
Corporate Tax
Financial & Estate Planning
Small Businesses & Their Owners

Reason 9374
We offer convenient night courses in Troy and Farmington Hills.

Call our Graduate Admissions Office today for more information on the Master of Science in Taxation program.

Good interior design begins with the walls

NAOMI STONE LEVY

Whether your future plans for your interiors will be in a traditional mode or you expect to use a contemporary background I suggest we start with a blank and barren room, four walls, floor and ceiling. We have all straight lines, no breaks.

The basic necessities of windows, doors and archways logically ensue. We develop these openings further by adding moldings. A more detailed or traditionally shaped "teardrop" is only a beginning. More complicated and convoluted is an "ogee" molding, which can be accomplished by adding molding to the outside of the first molding. Try adding a beaded line somewhere within.

For a distinctive formal atmosphere one could add "ears" at door frames or archways (see illustration). All of this can be executed by that elusive qualified carpenter.

We have just begun! Archways between foyers and rooms, or between living and dining rooms, don't have to be merely plaster openings. They are frequently enhanced by wood panels, flat pilasters or even by freestanding columns. The moldings will obviously be more ornate, more formal.

Moldings

Next one should consider crown moldings (illustration). These, too, may be built up from purchased parts, some simple, some more complicated. There are "egg and dart" and "dentil" moldings (illustration) among many others.

Rooms can be further improved by a chair rail (illustration). I recommend keeping these at a maximum height of 30 inches from the floor. Chair rails are available at the lumber yards in both narrow and wide forms.

Would you believe all of the above and many more details are available in wallpaper? And they are fantastic "trompe l'oeil," known as "fool the eye."

Another stupendous traditional detail is a beamed ceiling. There are so many forms of beams. Rough-hewn ones are more primitive, but also more inordinate. These must always have a natural or stained finish. For some inexplicable reason they are just as appropriate in a sophisticated background. There are built-up beams. Therefore these can be made any size. These may be stained or painted. Additionally beams may be supported by brackets. Study some pictures for further ideas on this subject.

Floors

Floors don't just consist of wall-to-wall carpeting or vinyl. There are literally at least a dozen architectural varia-

Lots of garden ideas grow in these books

MARTY FIGLEY

In "Best Bulbs for Temperate Climates," Jack Hobbs and Terry Hatch ($32.95, Timber Press), you will become acquainted with many new plants. A few of the varieties can be grown in our zone five without having to be dug from the ground before winter. The majority prefer a warmer climate. All pertinent information is given and more than 800 species and cultivars are identified. The chapter about bulbs in containers will allow people in colder zones to enjoy new experiences with these plants.

John Brookes' "Garden Design Workbook: A Practical Step-by-step Course" ($15.95, Dorling Kindersley) simulates a class where each phase in designing a garden is explained and illustrated in easy to understand terms. Clear overlay sheets are used to reinforce a point about the design elements — the book emphasizes the importance of using a grid. Twenty-one types of gardens with plants to successful design are included. Information about specific plants isn't included, other than general categories such as trees and shrubs. For would-be landscapers and those interested in the subject, this book is a must.

"American Garden Design: An Anthology of Ideas That Shaped Our Landscape," edited by Diane Kostial McGuire ($22, Macmillan-Horticulture), includes writings of American landscape designers who wrote for the "general gardening public." The editor used pieces by both men and women. Some of the 23 names are familiar, others aren't. Included are Thomas Jefferson, Celia Thaxter, Elsa Rehmann, Fletcher Steels and Carlton B. Lees. McGuire has set the book in chronological order from the late 18th century to the present. Interesting reading.

"The Gardener's Guide to Growing Hardy Geraniums," Trevor Bath and Joy Jones ($29.95, Timber Press), illustrates that these plants can be grown very successfully in many garden situations. There are innumerable varieties of these "cultivated cranesbills," which range in height from four to 48 inches; many of them are described. Although the authors are English, a chapter is devoted to geraniums in North America and several North American sources are listed.

tions. Naming just a few I must mention hardwood (illustration). These also have many variations because they are laid in a number of patterns; Log Cabin, Chevron, Versailles or Marie Antoinette are among the most effective. If perchance they are scratched in the process of installation I don't object because that contributes to the "distressed" antique look. I have been known to deliberately hack them up. There are brick floors, many types of clay tile (some in handsome black), travertine or marble. All of these may be laid in wonderful patterns.

Baseboards in general tend to be ignored, but they can add more dignity to a traditional room. A three-inch "ogee" edged base won't have the impact of a four- to five-inch base that has been detailed with a heavier top "ogee" molding (illustration).

We haven't thought about fireplaces. There are exquisite mantels with fabulous histories to be bought from shops specializing in fireplaces, tools and screens (illustration). If they don't carry these in stock they will show you drawings or photographs from which you may order. Mantels come in pine for painting, or a better grade of pine or walnut to be stained. The size of the fireplace opening is a critical factor to be determined before ordering. You also must select a suitable surround and hearth: marble (illustration), granite or perhaps lovely decorative tiles, brick, or something else non-combustible, which is required by law.

Other features

Bookcases are essential to most homeowners. Not only are they necessary, but they add charm and refinement without ostentation. Often they are used as a pair on either side of the fireplace. For a more formal atmosphere I have frequently specified a pair of "Conch shell" carved top niches, which are known to be finished off with handsomely shaped shelf edges. These niches cn be located as a "fait accompli," but they must be "roughed" into the original framing.

The ultimate in architectural detailing would have to be an all-paneled room. To be authentic the panels must be rim-raised, not created with moldings. There follows a strong crown molding and a chair rail (illustration). The ideal room contains a handsome fireplace (note "egg and dart" molding around fireplace) and bookcases, lots of bookcases.

Stairways are a fabulous completion, and needn't be elaborate. The spindles range from extremely simple to extremely complex. They are topped with a handrail, and herein I have preferences. If you can spend the difference, a walnut or mahogany rail (not pine) that will accept a great color of stain and thence be hand polished to a lustrous glow. As the newel post finishes the twist at the bottom stair I have sometimes topped it with a lovely wood finial as the last touch. Gorgeous finials are also available in brass. There is a flat double scroll that may be added to the exposed end of the riser, yet another detail for a stairway.

■ The ultimate in architectural detailing would have to be an all-paneled room. To be authentic the panels must be rim-raised, not created with moldings.

Finishing touches

Hardware is prescribed. The history of interior photographs illustrates that doors should be hung from three pairs of butt hinges, not two. An even nicer way, naturally more costly, is handsome hinges named "olive knuckle" (illustration). Simple oval brass knobs are more gracious than round knobs. There is a colonial style, and ever so more ornate knobs with beaded edges. Lever handles are still more desirable whether used singly or as a right and left pair (illustration). The designs may vary from scrolled in brass to a simple flair in chrome suitable for the modern look.

If you are lucky enough to be involved in new construction I encourage you to increase the ceiling height from the current standard eight feet to eight feet six inches or even nine feet. Certainly it adds considerably to costs, but you will never know until you have done it how much, much more effective the result.

Having written about most of what I would like readers to note concerning traditional I must add that good judgment says be selective. Don't incorporate all of these ideas! The finale will be too busy.

($14.95, soft, Camden House), is an insightful view of what makes gardening a continuing pleasure, as the author reflects on her own garden. It is more than memories as each chapter deals with a particular element — i.e. wind, light, air, water, the earth and the plants in the garden — Bennett disperses practical advice and ideas. For instance, in constructing a path, she laid the stones directly on the grass and left them there for a winter, so when spring arrived the grass was dead, which allowed the stones to be set in place easily. Much information and good reading.

"Eyewitness Handbook on Herbs: The Visual Guide to More Than 700 Herb Species From Around the World," Lesley Bremness ($17.95, Dorling Kindersley), is very comprehensive. The plant groups — trees, shrubs, herbaceous perennials, annuals and biennials, vines, mosses, fungi and other non-seed bearing plants — are divided into categories of size and shape of growth, rather than the botanical divisions. Bright color illustrations include a main photo, fruit or flower and a drawing of the mature specimen, as well as a short description. Carry this with you.

"Plant Survival: Adapting to a Hostile World," Brian Capon ($15.95 paper, $24.95 hard, Timber Press), is especially suited to young people at least 10 years of age. Capon answers questions many people have about plants and their survival techniques. He writes in a straightforward manner in a simple, understandable style. Readers will learn about plants in the rain forest, deserts, cold Arctic regions, deciduous forests and water. This fascinating information will satisfy the curiosity of budding gardeners and horticulturists. Adults will also learn a lot from this book.

"Just the Facts! Dozens of Garden Charts — Thousands of Gardening Answers," the editors of Gardening Way Publishing ($16.95, Storey), is a handy-dandy reference book that deserves a place on a shelf near the garden. A comprehensive guide for gardening, with space provided for personal notations.

There are ways to prepare for power outage

JOE GAGNON

The word outage is defined as a period of suspension of operation or service and I can assure you that it means a whole lot more to many readers of this column.

The end result of the recent thunder and lightning storms were devastating to many homeowners. No different than the storms of 1991 when 680,000 area residents were without electrical power, this one created the same havoc. Many thousands of consumers went without the comfort of air conditioning and some of us may say, what's the big thing, or no big deal. Well folks, it's all in what you're accustomed to. If you sleep well on those hot humid nights because you have the privilege of air conditioning, I can assure you that you didn't enjoy the restful sleep during this most recent outage. The area hotels were booked solid, the tension was high, and thousands went to work the next morning with a scowl on their face.

After a few days, it appeared that everybody had a look frustration. People were getting so hot around the collar that even the freezer began to melt.

On the Monday following the storms, my little business received over 500 phone calls from area consumers. Many of these people had no choice but to throw away all of the refrigerated foods in their homes. Many of these quantities were in the preserved category of foods along with hundreds of pounds of meat and fish items. Many hundreds of dollars gone to waste because of some silly storms. There is just so much that you can do to prepare for this kind of happening, isn't there? or, "IS THERE?"

The following is a bold statement which should grab your attention to the point where you cut out this article you're reading and you use it in the future to properly prepare yourself for an upcoming creation of God's thunder and lightning. You, the consumer, must know certain things and do certain things to prevent food loss or failure of your refrigerator and freezer.

To drive home my point here I must tell you the story of Dorothy Hall in Garden City. On Tuesday, Roger Weber of Channel 4 called me to ask if there was anything in the line of customer education that could benefit the homeowner during this storm period. He pointed out that Detroit Edison was doing a terrific job in their warnings of downed power lines etc. but that little was being said on the appliances in the home. I asked him why Detroit Edison wasn't giving out advice on appliances that would benefit the consumer. He said, "Can you do it Joe?" and that's when Dorothy Hall called me.

She needed a service man because her 23 cubic foot chest freezer had failed and she had to throw all of the food away. It was loaded to the brim with a side of beef and many of the foods she prepares herself. The lightning had come down the previous Thursday in the neighborhood and shut off power to several homes for a few hours. Ms. Hall had been made aware by her son that when this happens she is to pull the plugs on everything immediately which she did. When the power came back on she noticed that the light bulbs were going dim and then bright. Ms. Hall was smart enough to realise that her home was going through a brown out condition which means that there was not full voltage going through her electrical wires.

She kept things unplugged and for several days she plugged in only what was necessary and only when the bright light bulbs indicated full power in the house. Through her awareness she probably saved several appliances from failure. Roger Weber did this story on the 5 o'clock news and the sad part of the story was the fact that Ms. Hall forgot about the freezer downstairs. During the condition of 'Brown out' the compressor failed to receive enough voltage and as a result failed to perform satisfactorily. End of story. The loss of major home appliances during the recent storms should not number into the thousands as they do today, they should number into a few hundreds and here are some things you should know, for the next time.

A. If a power failure occurs, pull all the plugs or shut off the main circuit breaker in the home. Sometimes when the power is restored to the home we receive a power surge. This means that too much voltage is sent to the house and this power surge can destroy products which are not even being used. Purchase a surge protector from your local hardware store and install one on every wall outlet where you have something of value plugged in.

B. The story of Dorothy Hall is enough to tell you what happens when too little voltage is going through your house. There is little you can do except unplug the products from the wall outlets and wait it out. The dimming of lights and the smaller picture on your T.V. set are good indications of this happening. Low voltage conditions can best be indicated by the difference in sound of an electric razor.

C. If the utility companies and the media, whose income is derived from the TV set and the appliances in your home had been smart enough, they could have saved thousands for consumers. I'm sure they will, the next time. My hat goes off to Roger Weber, even if it was a little late coming out. It did help educate the consumer.

D. If I were a rich man I would give each and every one of you the book I wrote mentioned at the bottom of this column. In my heart I wish I could do that, but I can't because of my money condition. But I can repeat what I offered a few weeks ago in this column. A free booklet on the use and care of your refrigerator. Send a self addressed stamped 4-inch by 9-inch envelope to the Observer and Eccentric paper. I'll send it to you.

Finally — A health warning. Many people called and said they were away and knew the refrigerator or freezer failed for a while while they were gone. They didn't know how much defrosting of frozen foods occurred. This can be dangerous to your good health, and if your not sure throw it away. Take a tall plastic glass and fill with water and freeze it. Put a penny on top of the ice and leave it in your freezer. If you have this problem while you're away the location of the penny will tell you how much you defrosted. Thank you readers, for letting me help you. I love it.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program for WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor," available at area bookstores.

Here's how to prepare attic for storage area

Your house's attic may be an ideal place for storing items that your family uses only occasionally, provided it's a traditional attic with rafters and joists instead of a newer one with prefabricated trusses.

Here are tips for creating and using attic storage:

Remember to protect attic-stored items from dust. Put smaller articles in tightly closed or sealed boxes. Cover furniture and other large items with plastic dropcloths.

If your attic is unfinished, create a floor by nailing down plywood panels. Panels should be at least five-eighths-inch thick, but three-fourths-inch is better to safely support walking and storage. Don't store heavy items on the panels if your joists are more than 16 inches apart.

If you have trouble getting the plywood through the hatch, have the lumberyard saw the sheets into smaller widths.

No electrical wiring in the attic? Install battery-powered closet lights, sold in hardware stores.

Think hard. What's stored in your attic? If you can't remember, it's time to take inventory. Make a list and post it near the entrance. From then on, whenever you add or remove items, note the changes.

Attic searches are easier if a quick visual survey of items can be made from the attic hatch. Keep related items near each other and label cartons with large letters, readable from a distance.

Short on closet space? Attach a wooden rod or metal pipe to rafters and use it to hang out-of-season clothing in plastic garment bags with zippered closings. Drill through the rod and secure it to the rafter bottoms with lag bolts. Or use pipe straps or clamps to hold it to the rafters.

For storage along a gable wall (the triangular wall sections at the end of a pitched roof), install shelves with brackets or with slotted standards and brackets. Make each shelf progressively shorter (starting at the bottom) to fit between the sloping sides at each end.

Here are more ways to put attic space to work:

- Hang a string hammock from screw eyes fastened to exposed rafters. Use it to store sports balls, exercise mats and other light, bulky items.
- You can store a rolled-up rug by suspending it from two older leather belts attached to the attic rafters. To deter insects from nesting inside, wrap the ends with heavy craft paper and tape.
- To avoid tangled Christmas lights, store them on empty electrical wire spools. (Ask your hardware store to save some for you.) Slide several spools onto a length of plastic pipe three-fourths-inchin diameter.

THE BACKYARD Pool

Many homeowners are making a splash with their backyard pools. The expense is well worth the fun, they say.

Jeff Young of Plymouth Township, who does home remodeling, knows his pool could be a sales drawback.

"It can hurt it, it can help it. It's capable of doing both. The real estate people have told me it's not a good selling feature. Other times, if the right person comes along it might sell your house for you."

Young and his wife, Julie, have a pool that measures 18 by 34 feet and has a slide. Julie Young, a counselor at Lincoln Park High School, always wanted a pool.

"If I had to work in the summer, I wouldn't have one," she said.

The couple's 11-year-old son, Robert (Robbie), participates in hockey and other activities, so it would be difficult for them to join a swim club. Robbie's a student at New Morning School in Plymouth Township.

The Youngs have been in their home since 1989, with Young doing the building. They put in the pool a couple of years ago, using a professional firm.

"I like it," Jeff Young said. There's plenty of maintenance work to do, such as balancing the chemicals, checking the chlorine daily, vacuuming and skimming the pool, and maintaining the pump and filtration system.

Young estimates he spends at least $200 a season on chemicals. Even so, the expense is well worth it.

"We do have a lot of fun with it," he said.

he house when the pool beckons.

Putting in a pool isn't at all unusual for Michigan homeowners, according to Karson Claussen, a designer with Paddock Pools of West Bloomfield. Some put in pools for recreational reasons; for many, there are also aesthetic considerations.

"More and more people are putting in indoor pools too. That's a growing area," said Claussen, who has been with Paddock for about seven years.

Indoor pools can include a small lap pool put in a home exercise area.

The typical tricounty area pool is about 800 square feet, and most are heated, he said. Prices start in the mid 20s and go up as special features are added.

There's a trend away from diving pools toward recreational pools less than 5 feet deep that can be used for basketball or volleyball games. Some pools have special features, although Claussen said slides aren't as popular as they once were, due to liability concerns.

There's a trend toward irregular shapes as well.

"We've got pools going in all over the place," said Claussen, who doesn't have a pool at home.

Oakland County remains the primary site for pool installations, although fast-growing western Wayne suburbs such as Canton and Plymouth also have pools being installed.

Paddock has, in the last two years, put in about five pools on Orchard Lake lakefront property. Claussen hasn't found pools to be a sales liability when homes go on the market.

"Realtors let people know right up front, 'Hey, this house has a pool.'"

One Oakland County pool owner, Howard Hertz of Farmington Hills, likes to use his pool from April to October.

"I use it for exercise," said Hertz, an attorney who practices with the Bloomfield Hills firm of Hertz, Schram & Saretsky, P.C. He likes to swim laps at least three times a week.

Hertz and his wife, Wendy, a teacher with the Huron Valley Schools, have been in their house about 10 years. They had the pool put in a little over a year ago.

"I've always wanted to have a pool," said Howard Hertz, who hasn't found the maintenance burdensome. "I like swimming for exercise and leisure. Plus I think it's a great way to entertain friends."

The couple's two sons, Ryan, 15, and Adam, 12, also enjoy the pool. Ryan attends North Farmington High School while his brother attends Warner Middle School. "They love it, and they like having their friends over." Even the family dog, Bowie, likes to get in on the pool fun.

Their pool includes a hot tub suitable for year-round use. The Hertzes also have "rock" speakers hooked up to a stereo system. The speakers are designed to blend in with the landscaping and can stay out in the rain.

Have a safe swim

Pool safety should begin with proper fencing, to ensure that children don't wander into a pool area where they don't belong.

"It's a big liability there if you don't have a fence," said Julie Sommers, aquatic director for the Livonia Family Y.

Sommers offered these pool safety tips:

- Never swim alone.
- Have the necessary safety equipment, such as a pole, ring buoy and life jackets.
- Don't swim in water that's too deep.
- Never dive into shallow water. Diving areas should be at least 10 feet deep.
- Never swim while intoxicated.
- Don't swim after dark without adequate lighting.
- Have an adult watch children who are swimming.
- Refrain from such horseplay as dunking or running.

"It's really important for people to learn how to swim no matter how old they are."

Area Y's offer beginner classes for those of all ages, and she encourages adults to sign up.

"There are a lot of people who really don't know how to swim.'

LET'S REMODEL

Many options available for countertops

This column is prepared by the Michigan Remodeling Association.

Q: We are interested in remodeling our kitchen, but with three small children we are very concerned about wear and tear, especially on the counters. Can you tell us our options and how different products hold up over time.

A: Today there are numerous options available to you in countertop material. The five most popular products chosen by homeowners today would include: high pressure laminate, ceramic tile, man-made solid surface materials, marble and granite. These materials range dramatically in durability and price.

Let's address the most popular and least expensive (under $100 per lineal foot). High pressure laminate, more commonly referred to as Formica, but also available from other manufacturers, is sold in sheets no larger than 5-feet by 12-feet. This material is available in hundreds of colors with many different edge treatments available. When looking for durability, you may try a perma-edge moulding. This type of edging offers wider versatility in style and is a great way to hide black edge seams. Larger countertops (greater than 5-feet by 12-feet) will create seams across the deck of your top. It is important to make note of where you want the seams to fall. They should not be put in heavy work areas, especially where water is common, By locating the seams in end runs or where a cut-out is planned you will minimize some of the chipping or delamination that can occur. This will also give you a much cleaner look.

NARI®
MICHIGAN REMODELING ASSOCIATION

A much less common material used is ceramic tile. Historically, this was prevalent for countertops, edge treatments and backsplashes. Although certain types of ceramic are very hard and durable, I would not recommend this for the deck of your countertop. Among the many reasons not to use ceramic, two stand out most. First, ceramic tiles come in many different types, but all are very hard to the touch and create uneven surfaces, thus being a hazard for dish and glass breakage (especially with small children). Second, and maybe more important for households with heavy activity, the grout between the tiles is porous and difficult to keep clean and sanitary. A positive use for ceramic is as a backsplash material. It can then add a unique finish without the worry of uneven surfaces.

The last three materials all fall into one category: solid surface. Whether man-made or natural materials, many people are finding certain solid surface materials to be just what they are looking for in terms of long-term durability and aesthetics. Corian (made by DuPont) was the first and is the most widely used solid surface countertop material on the market today. Although this material can be expensive (over $100 per lineal foot), manufacturers and fabricators are always looking for ways to reduce costs. Due to its composition, it is very dense and non-porous . Also, because many sheets can be molded together, a top without any seams can be created. This allows the fabricators the opportunity to create tops in many unique shapes and sizes. Another advantage to this material is the ability to mold sinks right into your top, once again creating less seams and in turn giving you an incredibly durable sink.

The last two materials, marble and granite, are natural stone. Marble, although beautiful, is not recommended for the deck of the countertop because it is very soft and easily stains. It is porous and can harbor dangerous bacteria and other organisms.

Granite, on the other hand, would be my top recommendation for a countertop. This stone is very dense and non-porous. Of all five materials, granite will have the greatest longevity. The only downside is the cost. In most cases granite will be in price range or greater than Corian. However, certain color varieties of granite are more widely available and may be les expensive than the norm. Please remember with all countertop materials you should still take care in handling. Always use a cutting board and remember nothing is totally heat resistant; therefore, continue to use your hot pads. Also, be aware of the cleaning products you use. Find out if they are abrasive, even if they say soft, and if they are recommended for your type of countertop material.

ALL ABOUT ANIMALS

Nature often branches out

TIM NOWICKI

After several days of thunderstorms last week, we have all been touched, in some manner, by the power of the natural world. Many residents in southeastern Michigan were without power because of the lightning, which was so common during those storms, affecting electrical lines and transformers. It's kind of ironic that the natural source of inspiration for the concept of electricity, can so easily take away the electrical network that we have become so dependent on.

While driving home from work south along I-75 Thursday night, I watched one of the best displays of lightning I've seen in a long time. There were bolts going up and down, across the sky from cloud to cloud and even multiple bolts. One of those multiple bolts had three main legs, all three started from the same point in the clouds. As the three legs fanned down toward the ground, branching outward from the entire length on both sides of each leg were small bolts of lightning.

This branching pattern reminded me of the small brooks and riverlets that feed the main branch of a river. Each brook follows the irregular contours of the land to drain water downhill and into slightly larger streams. Those streams then feed into rivers that eventually enlarge as more streams feed them water.

The natural branching of the lightning reminded me of how many other things in our world are organized in a similar branching pattern. Branches of a tree are one of the more familiar ones. Small twigs at the end of a main branch seek their nutrients from the larger branches, which derive their nutrients from the main trunk. Not only the twigs and trunk illustrate this principle, but each leaf has a system of small veins and larger veins to transport water. And the entire root system is organized in this manner.

Our bodies have tiny capillaries that emerge from arterioles, which develop from arteries. The largest arteries are those closest to the heart where the blood starts its journey. Sewer systems are man-made, but are designed to transport fluids like our circulatory system. Small pipes carry water from outlying communities to medium-sized pipes that connect two or more communities. The largest pipes are those closest to the waste treatment plant.

Banks often have branches that serve communities far from the corporate headquarters. Several of those branches may report to regional facilities which are fewer in number. Those regional facilities then report to the corporate headquarters of which there may be only one large building.

Our postal system is another example of a branching system that reflects the natural branching of a tree, our military system, our branches of government and undoubtedly many more.

Branching may be one of those universal principles that is so functional it just naturally develops as a way to service a multi-layered system.

HOME ELECTRONICS

Cellular phones give safety, convenience

BARRY JENSEN

Having a cellular telephone in your car is nice.

The nicest feature is that if you run into trouble, you can call for help. Perhaps you have a hotline through your auto insurance company (AAA is pushing one right now) or the company that manufactures your car. Or you can call 911.

Having a cellular phone is espeically nice if you have a young driver. Suppose you are waiting for someone to come in from a date by midnight. By five minutes after midnight, you start wondering about calling the hospital or the police.

But if your child has a cellular telephone, he can call you to warn you he will be delayed because of . . . . Having a cellular telephone in a car driven by a young person also gives him a way to communicate with the police if need be.

When you are driving down the freeway and pass an accident or a car stalled by the side of the road, you can punch 911 to report the problem without having to stop.

If you have a business, a car telephone makes all kinds of sense. While driving to an appointment, you can call that client to inform them of any delays. Or suppliers can get a hold of you if they have a change in schedule.

If you have older parents or someone who lives alone and would benefit from a regular check-in, they can reach you at any time. This makes even more sense if you spend a lot of time in your car.

It's also nice to be able to call home from the parking lot at work and find out whether you should stop at the store and pick up some spaghetti sauce or stop at the bakery to pick up a couple loaves of bread.

Having a cellular telephone ends the enforced isolation of a commute. While it's nice to be able to be in touch, many people find a quiet ride home a chance to relax from a long day. A cellular telephone will prevent the quiet time with yourself, but you can restrict those who know your automobile telephone number.

If you become lost, you call to your destination to find out where the heck you are. More than once, I have been within a mile of my destination but didn't have a clue as to where to go.

A quick call to your destination will clear up an unexpected street name change or give you the advice that the street you want is "just south of that big car dealership." This sort of guidance can be the difference between an on-time arrival and being late again.

The biggest disadvantage of a cellular telephone is the cost. This is in three areas: phone and installation, the monthly fee, and unusual calls.

You can get a deal from many businesses on the price of a cellular telephone: If you sign up for a multi-year service contract with a particular company, that company will "give" you a cellular telephone. Or you can lease a telephone or buy one from Radio Shack or whoever you please.

The monthly fee depends on two things: the amount of service you have paid for and the amount of service you use. If you pay $25 a month for 20 minutes of air time and use only that much, your monthly bill will be around $25.

If your service is for 20 minutes a month and you use 50 minutes one month, you will pay through the nose. Each company sells several plans with lesser or greater services — with fees to match. Be aware that you may be charged different rates depending on the time of day you call.

The third area of expense is for unusual calls. If you make calls to 555-1212 or long distance, you will pay extra.

Barry Jensen welcomes your comments and suggestions for topics for future columns. His telephone number is 313-953-2125. This number has voice mail attached, so you can call at any time.

You can groom dogs at home

What tips can you give me for grooming my dog at home?

Although certain breeds do require professional grooming from time to time, regular brushing will keep your dog's skin and coat in good shape, and will minimize shedding. You can bathe your dog when necessary, using a good quality pet shampoo, making certain to rinse well with lukewarm water. Some shampoos will also help get rid of fleas or other parasites. Regular dental care is very important to your dog's health and many pet owners find this surprisingly easy once they've tried it. Your veterinarian can recommend shampoo and dental products, and can demonstrate the best way to clean your pet's teeth. Clipping nails is also important for proper grooming. Check your dog's nails weekly. Depending on your dog's nail growth, a once a month clipping is generally sufficient. Make sure you use clippers especially made for dogs and clip only in front of the quick (the pinkish-colored vein within the nail).

Louis Armstrong left legacy of great music

HUGH GALLAGHER

"He is the great hero of American music."

That is how master jazz musician Wendell Harrison sums up Louis Armstrong. Harrison is artistic director for this year's Birmingham Jazzfest, today through Sunday at various Birmingham venues.

There were really two Louis Armstrongs.

The familiar Armstrong was a happy-go-lucky, gravelly-voiced entertainer who played popular music on a pure-toned trumpet and sang songs with both dramatic and comic fervor. In 1964, the year of the Beatles, this Louis Armstrong had the third best selling record of the year with a sassy "Hello, Dolly." He also hit gold with "Mack the Knife," "Blueberry Hill" and "What a Wonderful World" (a record that was even more successful after being used as the theme for "Good Morning, Vietnam"). He was an ambassador to the world.

The other Louis Armstrong was a seminal figure in the history of jazz, a trumpet/cornet player of incredible range and fluidity and an improviser with a seemingly endless imagination. He was an artist who's brilliance helped affirm jazz as a serious and important musical form. His performances in the 1920s and '30s are landmarks in American music. And, even when he became the famous entertainer, his playing still displayed some of the richness that awed his musical contemporaries.

The Birmingham Jazzfest pays homage to Armstrong this week with a photo exhibit at Community House, which is sponsoring the Jazzfest. The exhibit is provided courtesy of the Graystone International Museum, which is dedicated to preserving the jazz heritage and named for the famous Detroit ballroom.

"I do a lot of stuff around the world, in Europe. Whenever you mention jazz, the first thing that comes to a layman's mind is Louis Armstrong and his birthplace, New Orleans," said Harrison, an accomplished saxophonist and clarinetist in bop and post-bop manner and a distinguished jazz educator.

Harrison said it is important for him to bear witness to those who came before him such as Armstrong, Duke Ellington and Thelonious Monk. In that spirit, he recently worked on a CD honoring Armstrong and New Orleans, "Something For Pops."

Harrison went to New Orleans to perform and gather inspiration for his original compositions.

"There is a big statue of Louis Armstrong in Congo Square, along with a library and radio show. It's a historical and educational landmark. I wrote a tune about it called 'Armstrong Park,' part of a three piece suite that includes 'Sir Oliver' dedicated to King Oliver, his mentor," Harrison said.

Harrison said Armstrong's rags to riches story has much to teach young people today. He said Armstrong was a hood in his day.

"He was like a kid of today, he wanted to be noticed. On his birthday he shot off a gun and was arrested and put into a boys home," Harrison said.

That proved to be a good move for Armstrong. He learned to play a bugle and then a cornet. He started playing in dance and jazz bands. Finally he got a job playing on a Mississippi riverboat.

"He worked on a riverboat to build up his trumpet chops and repertoire. He learned a lot and played a lot of tunes, he was constantly playing. He had that discipline," said Harrison.

Harrison said that discipline was the secret to Armstrong's success and is something that young people today desperately need.

Armstrong also left a rich musical legacy. His Hot Five recordings of the 1920s were a clarion call that established jazz as a serious musical form.

"The main thing was he played the trumpet as a person would sing," Harrison said. "He was the first guy to scat. He popularized scatting. He took ideas from the trumpet, but he would sing the trumpet lines."

Harrison said the main thing that made Armstrong popular was his ability to creatively improvise without straying too far from the melody.

"I tell my students, when you want to build a solo, copy Louis Armstrong. He stayed close to the melody, always keeping it in mind. Later we go into more complex improvisations like bop and Charlie Parker. But for the basics, the fundamentals, I direct them to Louis Armstrong."

Louis Armstrong would be 95 years old this year, but his legacy is ageless.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Play it by air to take exciting photographs

MONTE NAGLER

Everyone who has been in an airplane knows how different and exciting things look from the air. Cars become toys, buildings are miniaturized, roads and rivers cut fascinating patterns through field and forest. Views from the air are dramatically different and are easier to capture on film than you might think.

Commercial airliners are the most common means of aerial photography. Select a window seat either in front of or behind the wing. Set your camera's focusing ring at infinity and the shutter speed at 1/500th second or faster. Because depth-of-field in aerial photography is normally insignificant, the wide aperture you'll be using won't matter. Don't brace the camera against the window or you'll pick up the plane's vibrations.

Use a skylight or UV filter to cut through haze. Be careful in the use of a polarizer filter, however, when shooting color film from an airliner. It may interact with the polarizing characteristics of the plastic window material and result in out-of-focus color bands in your picture.

With black and white film, use a yellow filter. If haze is particularly bad, switch to an orange or red filter. Because contrast is reduced in aerial photography, these filters will put "snap" back into your negatives.

With your camera ready, listen for the pilot to identify such famous landmarks as the Grand Canyon and Niagara Falls, and well-known cities. Such locations photograph well from the air.

Other good subjects are dramatic sunsets, snowcapped mountains, and patterns in plowed farmlands and checkerboard fields. Look for abstract shots, too, that will make your friends guess what your photo really is.

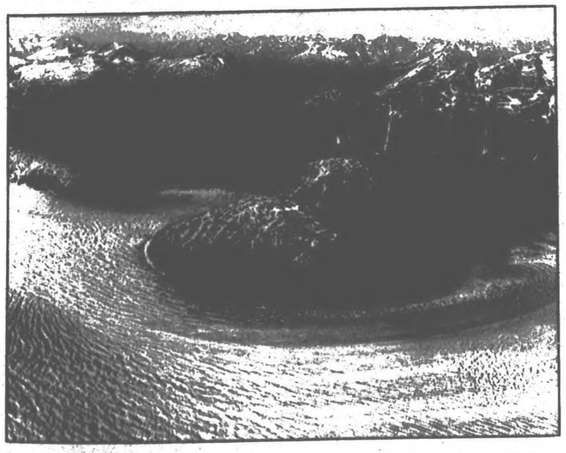

Light planes and helicopters can give you greater control over direction and elevation. They can bring you closer to the subject or give you the special angle you may want. You'll be more flexible in time of day, too. Late afternoon or early morning will produce shadows and textures not obtainable in bright, midday sunlight.

Some of the best aerial shots can be taken from a hot-air balloon. If the opportunity ever presents itself to fly in one, don't pass it up. The view is clear, there are no vibrations and the perspective is excellent.

One further word on airliners: When flying commercially, never allow your film to pass through airport X-ray devices. Most security personnel will gladly accommodate a request for a visual inspection of film.

So let your photography take off and soar — into the air, that is!

STUCK ON STAMPS

New stamps feature bright carousel design

JOHN FOXWORTH

A free "Introduction to Stamp Collecting" booklet is available on request at most post offices. The 32-page booklet tells beginners how to start a stamp collection. The different kinds of stamps available, where to get them, how to remove them from envelopes and how to mount stamps are covered.

Albums, stamp hinges and tongs are described as well as how to judge the condition of stamps. Be sure to ask for a copy of Publication 225 on your next post office visit!

A se-tenant block of four different carousel horses has been issued by the Postal Service as a pane of 20 stamps. The colorful horses are intended as a reminder of the highly decorated wooden "merry-go-round" animals we rode as children.

The new stamps are similar to the four carousel animals issued Oct. 1, 1988, as a tribute to National Stamp Collecting Month. The earlier block was designed by Paul Calle and depicted a handcarved deer, horse, camel and goat.

Free first day of issue cancels may be obtained by buying the new stamps locally and affixing to covers addressed to yourself or others. Insert a thin piece of cardboard to obtain a better cancel, tuck in the flap and mail in an outer envelope to: Carousel Horses Stamps, Lahaska, PA 18931-9991, before Aug. 20.

Missing knickers

In recent weeks, we have told you about design changes or errors on stamp subjects. For example, the design changes to the body and signature on the Marilyn Monroe stamp and the error that has the C88 Virginia flying an incorrect flag on the Civil War stamp.

This week we have a design goof by Canada Post on its recent set featuring Canadian golf courses. One of the men pictured on the 43-cent Victoria Golf Club stamp is missing his knickers! No, he has slacks in the revised stamp design, but his shadow shows that he is wearing socks and knickers. The man is Don Francis, who noted that both he and club pro Mike Parker were wearing knickers when the photo was made.

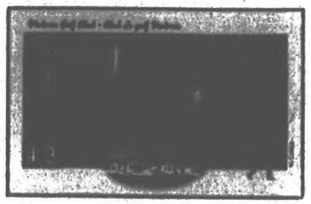

Canada Post probably thought that slacks looked better on the stamp and modified the design. However, the artist forgot to change Francis' shadow. On the stamp, the narrow shape of Francis' legs below the knickers is visible. Also, if you look closely at the stamp, the flag and flagpole aren't casting a shadow!

If you would like to add this oddity to your collection, see your favorite stamp dealer. Or send your request to: Interpost, Box 387, Malverne, N.Y. 11565.

John Foxworth of West Bloomfield is president of the American Philatelic Research Library. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then his mailbox number, 1900. His fax number is (810) 644-1514.

Merry mounts: New stamps feature carousel horses.

Shadow knows: The shadow on this new Canada golf stamp shows that the man is wearing socks and knickers instead of slacks.

1995 Concours d' Elegance at Meadow Brook Hall

Automobile Legends of Europe and America Will Grace the Meadow Brook Concours on August 6

Great automobile legends of Europe and America will fill the hills of the 17th annual Concours d'Elegance at Meadow Brook Hall when it opens to the public on Sunday, August 6 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the grounds of Oakland University in Rochester, Michigan, showing more than 250 classic autos.

With the great German classics named as the honored marque, two of the most famous Mercedes Benz autos will bask in the spotlight. They are Ralph Lauren's 1930 Mercedes-Benz "Count Trossi" SSK and the 1937 Mercedes-Benz 540 Special Roadster. The quintessentially British Morgan race car will be represented by the appearance of Morgan Company owner Charles Morgan, grandson of its founder, H.F.S. Morgan. The last car in the world still built by hand, the Morgan will be lavishly represented with over 20 three and four-wheeled Morgans comprising the largest field of "flexible flyers" ever seen in a Concours event.

Add to these honored marques, the appearance of the most famous old race car in America, the 1906 Locomobile "Old 16", and Clark Gable's often photographed 1936 Duesenberg SSJ Bobtailed Speedster, and visitors to this year's Meadow Brook Concours will need to take a deep breath when they get their first sight of lush rolling hills bejeweled with the world's grandest automobile classics.

Robert Eaton, Chairman of the Board and CEO of Chrysler Corporation, is 1996 Honorary Chairman. Michael Sheridan, Vice-President of Toundas Motor Sports Group, Inc. is Chairman.

The Meadow Brook Concours was named "America's Premier Concouers d'Elegance" in Car Collector Magazine last year. It is traditionally ranked with the Concours at Bagatelle in Paris, France and Pebble Beach in California as the most prestigious events of their kind.

The Concours is located on the magnificent 1,400 acre grounds of Meadow Brook Hall, the mansion of the late Matilda Dodge Wilson, the widow of John Dodge. It is one of the finest examples of Tudor style architecturs in America. All proceeds of the Concours go to the preservation of Meadow Brook Hall which is open to the public.

Highlights of the 1995 Concours d'Elegance at Meadow Brook Hall:

• The 1930 Mercedes-Benz "Count Trossi" SSK, owned by Ralph Lauren and restored by Paul Russel Company of Essex, Massachusetts, will be among the headline cars at Meadow Brook. Featured in the official 1995 poster, this has been called the most beautiful car in the world. Its name is forever linked with the great Italian racing driver Count Felice Trossi who originally owned it and raced it in famous European meets.

• The 1937 Mercedes Benz 540 Special Roadster, among the most valuable and certainly most flamboyant of the pre-war Mercedes-Benz autos, will be at Meadow Brook. The silver metallic masterpiece, owned by Jerome Sauls of Warrington, Pennsylvania was introduced at the 1936 Berlin Auto Show and was touted as the fastest production automobile in the world.

• The 1906 Locomobile, known as "Old 16", the most famous old racing car in existence and the car that was portrayed in the paintings of Peter Helck, will travel to the manicured lawns of Meadow Brook. It is owned by Jerry Helck of New Jersey, Peter Helck's son. The work of Helck serves as documentation of legendary American auto races when the manufacture of the automobile was in its infancy and road races were dirt flying, exciting affairs that were designed to publicize the power of the automobile to the masses. Today the car is in original condition and still runs.

• Clark Gable's rakish red and silver 1936 Duesenberg SSJ Bobtailed Speedster, often pictured with the great movie idol, will also grace the Meadow Brook Concours. Legends abound regarding how Gable got the car. Some say Carole Lombard gave it to him. Others say he bought it in a competition with Gary Cooper.

• A 1938 Adler Lemans Speedster, a futuristic aerodynamic masterpiece, is a car that will stop Meadow Brook Visitors in their tracks. Adler is now a long forgotten marque but back in the late 1930s these German Eagles (Adler is the German word for eagle) set the trends for advance engineering with all independent suspension and front wheel drive, but above all, aerodynamics.

ADMISSION AND INFORMATION

Admission to the Sunday Concours is $15 for adults (including a souvenir program) $5 for children 5 to 12 (no program), free for children 4 and under (no program). Individual programs will also be on sale at the event. Ample parking with shuttle buses is provided at no charge as well as handicapped parking. For information about the Concours d'Elegance and any of its associated events call Meadow Brook Hall at 810-370-3140.

Special Section Credits:

This special section appears Thursday, July 27, 1995 in the Eccentric Newspapers, a division of Suburban Communications Corp., Livonia. Concours d'Elegance was produced by the Eccentric Newspapers with assistance by Linda Ashley, freelance writer and president of Linda Ashley and Associates, Huntington Woods. # The Great "Count Trossi" Mercedes-Benz

Classic German Automobiles: Mechanical Masterpieces

138 Adler Lemans Speedster

1937 Mercedes-Benz 540 Special Roadster

It was an exciting time for the automobile industry during the classic era in Germany. The introduction of the Horch V-12 in 1931 lead to a styling renaissance for German car design. In the racing world, the Auto Union and Mercedes-Benz seemingly only raced each other. And in the world of sports car rallies, races and hill climbs, the BMW became the dominant car. Finally, the construction of a network of autobahn super highways influenced engine design as well as aerodynamics. The people behind this German renaissance have become names forever linked with the never equaled mechanical supremacy of German cars. They were Gottlieb Daimler, Carl Benz and Dr.*Ferdinand Porsche. As the oldest automobile manufacturer with the Mercedes-Benz cars, the union of Daimler and Benz was the starting point for the entire automotive world and not just the German automotive industry.

German Classic Highlights at Concours:

• The Mercedes-Benz which is among the most valuable and certainly most flamboyant is the 1937 Mercedes-Benz 540 Special Roadster, which will be at Meadow Brook. This silver metallic masterpiece, owned by Jerome Sauls of Warrington, Pennsylvania, was introduced at the 1936 Berlin Auto Show and was the most expensive Mercedes Benz model offered that year. At 28,000 Reichmarks, more than $12,000, it cost nearly twice the price of a V-16 Cadillac. It was touted as the fastest production automobile in the world. Dennis Adler wrote in Star Magazine, "Cars of the 1930s really made a statement about their owners, and if you wanted to be recognized as a person who placed matters of style and quality above all else, your car was the flamboyant 540 K Special Roadster."

• The 1938 Adler Lemans Speedster, a futuristic aerodynamic masterpiece, is a car that will stop Meadow Brook visitors in their tracks. Adler is now a long-forgotten marque, but back in the late 1930s these German Eagles (Adler is the German word for eagle) set the trends for advance engineering with all independent suspension and front wheel drive but, above all, aerodynamics.

1930 Mercedes-Benz "Count Trossi" SSK

Owned by Ralph Lauren.
Restored by Paul Russell Company of Essex, Massachusetts

It is not difficult to understand why this 1930 Mercedes-Benz SSK and Count Carlo Felice Trossi are sometimes inseparable, as in "Count Trossi's Mercedes SSK." The car itself is simply one of the most intriguing, awesome, and comely automobiles ever produced. Originally conceived by Dr. Ferdinand Porsche, then of Daimler-Benz AG, the SS:250 will long be regarded as one of the finest pre-war examples of German technological leadership and commitment to quality in the design and manufacture of automobiles.

The Count was born into an old Italian banking family. A skilled racing driver, his memory is indelible in the very spirit of the car. The car's remarkable physical presence is the result of his own romantic vision. Cloaked in black, it's elegance is endowed with a sort of irreverence. The automobile was created as nearly perfect as the world of 1930 had ever seen, and yet it's owner sent it immediately upon delivery to an unknown British coach builder so that he might further temper what was already a definitive statement of individuality, power and elan. The car's striking visual lines and superb visual balance are the result.

Perhaps the attempt to perfect such an extraordinary car was to be expected of such an extraordinary individual.

Partners in Community Growth

Meadow Brook Hall, completed in 1929, is one of the finest examples of residential architecture anywhere in the world. Craftsmanship, household appointments and art treasures in the 100-room mansion are now priceless and irreplaceable.

Alfred and Matilda Wilson founded Oakland University and left their entire estate for that purpose. Listed on both the Michigan and National Registry of Historic Places, Matilda's breathtaking home and grounds are open year round for tours and special events. You will never forget your visit to this beautiful site.

Oakland University represents the educational heart of the state's fastest-growing county. Beginning with its charter class in 1963, Oakland has graduated more than 45,000 well-educated men and women, more than 85 percent of whom continue to live and work in Michigan. Oakland further advances regional development through innovations in research and public service from an outstanding faculty.

Success in a world of rapidly changing technology requires a workforce that keeps pace. Oakland University understands the pressures and demands on business to train and educate employees economically and efficiently while still producing goods and services. Oakland University faculty and staff excel in designing and implementing innovative, convenient training and education programs, both at company locations and on campus.

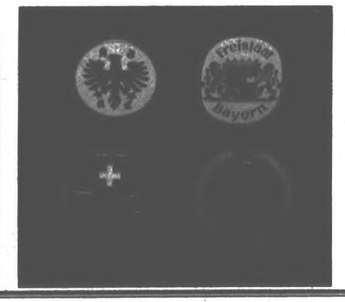

A special feature of the 1995 Meadow Brook Hall Concours d'Elegance will be the display of automobile badges from around the world from the personal collection of Dr. Arthur H. Schultz of Bloomfield Hills.

An avid automobile enthusiast, Dr. Schultz has been building his collection of distinctive automobile badges and other automobilia since the early 1970s. The Concours is privileged and grateful to be able to show a selection of hundreds of these artistic collectible badges to Concours visitors, chosen from Dr. Schultz's much larger collection. Make no mistake, each badge displays such workmanship and distinctive imagination as to be considered a work of art in and of itself - not to mention a piece of automotive history.

Dr. Arthur Schultz

Auto Badges As Art

Motor Club Badges first appeared in the late 1800s as a symbol of automobile manufacturer's desire to have their products recognizable and easily identified by the public. "Single-marque" motor car badges can be considered the beginning of motor badges. Design of the badges was obviously fertile field for the auto manufacturer/designer.

The stories of creative sources for motor badges are legion, some wrapped in mystery. The idea for badges was probably influenced by the stories of feudal heraldry (real or bogus) when knights bore proudly their distinctive identification.

When the automobile became more commonplace, motor clubs became popular and promoted themselves through distinctive badges. Soon other related organizations and associations got on the band wagon.

In more recent times, fashion and commemorative events have attracted the introduction of "specialty" motor badges. Badges are now exhibited with zodiac signs, personal monograms and representation of cities, countries and national crests.

Dr. Schultz's fascination with the automobile and collecting began in his college days. He is a member of numerous auto clubs including Rolls Royce, Maserati, Ferrari, Alfa Romero, Lamborghini, Porsche, Citroen and Classic Car Clubs. The thrill of collecting is still strong for him and includes automobilia of all types with an eye for the unusual and beautiful.

The Schultz Collection shows examples of artistic workmanship from around the world. Each badge stands out like a jewel. The badges represent a small but wonderful segment of accessories to the ubiquitous motor car.

Tickets: Admission to the Sunday Concours is $15 for adults (including a souvenir program), $5 for children 5 to 12 (no program), free for children 4 and under (no program). Individual programs will also be on sale at the event. All proceeds go to the restoration of Meadow Brook Hall, a public educational and cultural center.

The first sight of more than 250 of the finest classic automobiles in the world rolling over the hills of historic Meadow Brook Hall is a breathtaking experience. You will want to take your time getting close to the automobiles, arranged in special circles by year and make. Inside each circle, sit the auto owners and restorers. They are usually quite willing and pleased to talk about their pride and joy automobiles. Surely you will want to spend part of the time watching the presentation of awards on the hill overlooking the judges grandstand. It is a parade and show all in one. Automotive history rolls by as the Concours host, Ed Lucas, interviews each auto owner and the award sponsor makes the trophy presentation.

During the day, three fifteen minute fashion shows will take place - called the "Mode du Concours" after the original French Concours tradition of the 1920s. High fashion models will emerge from specially selected autos to show off ensembles perfectly matched to the colorful classics. The fashion segments will take palce at 11:20 with contemporary sportswear matched to classics, at 1:00 with fashions matched to futuristic Chrysler concept cars (including the Atlantic) as well as classic Chrysler autos and the featured "Count Trossi" Mercedes-Benz owned by Ralph Lauren. At 2:30 p.m. elegant evening wear will be modeled with elegantly classic cars.

Don't miss the 14th annual Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance Art Show, bringing the finest automotive artists in the world by invitation to the show. Most works are for sale. Take a break at the food tent, where everything from ice cream to a complete gourmet lunch is available, and you can relax at comfortable tables and chat with your companion or new found friends.

THE MEADOW BROOK HISTORIC RACES

By Mike Sheridan

Begun in 1985 as a supporting event to Detroit's premier vintage festival, the Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance, the Annual TDM World Conversions, Inc. Meadow Brook Historic Races has gained national prominence on the vintage racing calendar in North America. What is vintage racing?

Historic or vintage racing came to public attention with Steve Earle's Monterey Historic Automobile Races produced at the Laguna Seca Raceway in 1978. Vintage racing is history in action, with today's drivers experiencing sensations from past eras, while spectators enjoy sounds, sights and smells (caster oil) long removed from today's racing venues. Marques like Ferrari, Cobra, Jaguar, Lotus, Corvette, Aston Martin, Alfa Romeo, European V-12's engines against mighty American V8's, some vehicles that today would reach several million dollars at auction still used in their intended purpose for all to enjoy again.

Today over 90 vintage racing events produced by 49 vintage clubs and organizations again visit historic racing sites with names like Watkins Glenn, Mid-Ohio, Elkhart Lake, Lime Rock, Road Atlanta, Bridgehampson, Palm Springs, Laguna Seca and here, in Michigan, Waterford Hills.

Waterford Hills Raceway is a demanding 1.5 mile road course that has long been hailed as a driver's course with special care taken in its design to allow spectators to view racing all the way around the site from several vantage points. Founded in 1958 as part of the vast 900 acre Oakland County Sportsman's Club (OCSC) in Independence Township, the activities are managed by the all volunteer Waterford Hills Road Racing, Inc. (WHRRI). which annually hosts a number of race dates, drivers' schools and OEM Corporate Test Sessions.

The Meadow Brook events, the midwest's biggest vintage automotive festival, begins with a free Spectator Day, Friday, August 4th, at Waterford Hills raceway as drivers practice for qualifying sessions. When the track closes at 6:00 p.m. the action moves to the "SCAMP Concours in the Park" sponsored by TDM, Pontiac Tri-County Dealers Association and Chrysler Corporation in Depot Park-Clarkston, Michigan. Located in Independence Township, Clarkston provides a wonderful vintage setting, with its victorian homes, tree-lined avenues, and quaint Depot Park. "SCAMP" is an acronym for summer camp which provides services for emotionally and physically disadvantaged children in Oakland County. The Concours in the Park is an old fashioned ice cream social complete with a band, featuring 100 exciting sports cars and vintage racing cars judged by a staff of automotive authorities from the United States and Canada.

The featured marque for 1995 at the TDM Meadow Brook Historic Race is Morgan, a great English marque represented here today by private entries in competition that range from 1934 through 1969. The Morgan Motor Car Company located in Malvern Link England was established in 1909 and is the world's oldest and only privately held coach built car manufacturer. Charles Morgan, grandson of company founded H.F.S. Morgan, Managing Director today is the Grand Marshal for this years event. Mr. Morgan a vintage racer in Europe will compete in Saturday's races and Judge at Concours on Sunday at Meadow Brook Hall.

Several Morgan feature races are set for both Saturday and Sunday with a special Morgan three wheel race on Saturday with great examples of the trikes including Orleans, Massachusetts resident Chris Towner in his 1938 F type Morgan.

Sunday afternoon Victory Lane magazine in association with Fogarty Winery, Hoosler Tire, Pace American Trailer, Red Line Oil and Tilton Engineering will present their historic Trans-Am reunion for the first time at Waterford Hills. Victory Lane's Austin Miller advised their special event will provide race fans, "American Pony Cars against those foreign interlopers from across the seas on a real equalizer of a track right there in the home of the big three."

Group 6/Trans-Am racers have long been one of the most exciting races at the Meadow Brook Historic due to the efforts of race committee member Mike Sedlak of Brighton, Michigan, who vintage races his 1970 Boss 302 T/A Mustang at vintage events all across North America. Mr. Sedlak has completed a listing of the known original Group 6/TA race cars and promotes the Waterford Hills races at venues all year long. In addition to Victory Lanes series race, the Meadow Brook Historic Races regularly features two races one Saturday and one Sunday for the Mustang, Camaros, Barracudas, Cougars, Firebirds, Javelins and challenges against Alfa Romeo, BMW, Lotus, Volvo, Porsche and Mini Cooper sponsored by the Tri-County Pontiac Dealers.

Peter Toundas, President and CEO of Toundas Motorsports Group, Inc., co-producer of the Meadow Brook Historic Races with Waterford Hills Road Racing Inc., explains the race schedule, "competitors practice and qualify Saturday morning to establish grid positions for the start of each of the six races. The racers finishing position on Saturday's races becomes their starting position for Sunday races." Both racers and fans enjoy the program with two complete sets of races to enjoy.

In addition to the featured sports car Morgan, the Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance also provides a competition for vintage racing cars for the Peter Helck trophy. Each year the TDM Meadow Brook Historic Race committee selects twelve meaningful historic racing vehicles to be invited to compete for the most prestigious Concours award for vintage race cars.

Peter Helck, a founding member of the Automotive Fine Arts Society, has long been recognized as the father of automotive fine art in this country. Helck saw first hand, some of the great races in history, and recorded them for the world to enjoy on his canvases.

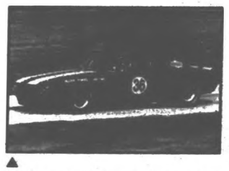

The Meadow Brook Race committee is extremely pleased to have Peter's son Jerry Helck here to present the award in 1995. Jerry Helck will also exhibit the 1906 Locomobile, winner of the 1908 Vanderbilt Cup which was the first American racer to win a Grand Prix.

The TDM Meadow Brook Historic Races offers two complete race schedules on Saturday and Sunday, giving spectators a choice of which day to attend without missing any of the action. Time trials begin each day at 10:00 a.m. with racing beginning at 1:00 p.m. Additionally, a manufacturer's midway area offers the latest in automotive parts and accessories, art galleries, special interest automobiles, car club corrals, and an outstanding automotive fine art show featuring twelve internationally recognized artists.

The Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance and TDM Meadow Brook Historic Races are designed to provide the automotive enthusiast with a complete vintage weekend showcasing the most outstanding automotive vehicles ever to grace the highway or race track. We can only hope our goals have brought you enjoyment!

VINTAGE MORGANS

The Morgan Motor Company Ltd., of Malvern Link, England, is the oldest privately owned manufacturer of automobiles in the world. It's founder, H.F.S. Morgan, started his career as a draughtsman with the Great Western Railway and made contributions to steam engine history. Around 1906, in true tinker's fashion, he set out to build a three-wheeled motorcar based on the first one he had purchased, a 2-cylinder, 8 h.p.. DeDion powered "Eagle Tandem".

He started with a 7 h.p. twin cylinder Peugeot engine and mounted in on a three wheeled tubular chassis. The car was lightweight, yet rigid, and used independent suspension. It also boasted an unusually efficient power-to-weight ratio of 90 brake horsepower per ton, which allowed the little car to accelerate as fast as any car on the road.

Although there were never plans to actually sell the car, its successful design and impressive performance earned him a patent in 1910, and when production began that same year, the Morgan Motorcar Company was born.

After World War I, the company opened a new factory on Pickersleigh Road in Malvern Link. Since 1922, all of the Morgans have been built by hand at this factory, known as the "works".

In 1936, Morgan introduced its first four-wheeled car, the "Four/Four", as in four cylinders, four wheels. After the Second World War, when steel was at a premium, Morgan began building it's bodies out of aluminum. As a post-war recovery measure, Britain decided that it would import more of its product to other markets. The Four/Four was distributed in the U.S.A., Canada, South America and Australia. The three-wheeler did not enjoy the same popularity, however, and in 1946 the last 2-cylindered cars were shipped to Australia, and production of all three-wheelers ceased in the early fifties.

Morgan continued to succeed in racing when in 1962, a specially prepared "Plus Four" called a "Super Sports" driven by Lawrence and Richard Sheppard-Baron won in the two-liter class at the 24 hour LeMans race. They averaged 94.2 m.p.h. and covered a total distance of 2,261 miles.

Today all Morgans are still handmade to individual order. About two cars can be produced in a day. While most people purchase them as sports cars, their real strength is on the race track.

This year Meadow Brook Concours is pleased to present over 20 vintage Morgans, the largest gathering of Morgans ever at a Concours.

"OLD 16" CAPTURES THE IMAGINATION

The 1906 Locomobile, known as "Old 16", the most famous old racing car in existence and the car that was the centerpiece of paintings of the most well known auto races, will travel from New Jersey to the manicured lawns of Meadow Brook to be seen "in person" by visitors. It is owned by Jerry Helck, son of famous automotive artist Peter Helck, who died recently at over 90 years of age. The work of Peter Helck - the father of automotive art - serves as documentation of legendary American auto races. This was when the manufacture of the automobile was in its infancy and road races were dirt flying, exciting affairs that were designed to publicize the power of the automobile to the masses. The image of the 1906 Locomobile literally leaving the other autos in its dust - driven by a goggled, aviator capped racer with his scarf flying in the wind--is etched in the collective consciousness of America. This is because Helck's paintings were used by early auto companies as advertisements for the strange noisy new inventions. Winner of the 1908 Vanderbilt Cup, the Locomobile was the first American automobile to successfully challenge the road racing supremacy of great cars of Europe.

Those Magnificent Men

Road racing in its formative years was a sport occupied by fearless, some might say crazy, and daring individuals. American drivers were already gaining notoriety for making up for their lack of experience with hair-raising displays of courage. Their skills at coaxing enormous machines moving at high velocities thrilled the crowds. Locomobile Company driver Joe Tracy drove one of the new Locomobiles, entered at No. 9, to a record lap of 67.6 mph in the 1906 Vanderbilt. But tire failure was its undoing, and while the Loco was the fastest car in the race, it was not the immediate success the Americans had hoped for. Victory would not come until 1908, when daredevil George Robertson piloted No. 16 to win the Vanderbilt, besting entries from Mercedes, Renault, Chadwick, Thomas and Isotta.

But the significance of the 1906 event had not escaped imagination of a 16-year old Peter Helck, who attended the race. He would later capture the event in his thrilling painting, "Tracy's Record Lap". The Locomobile was also the subject of his "Setting a Furious Pace".

No. 16 never raced again after the 1908 Vanderbilt. It spent many years on the road at auto shows and company showrooms. It was not until 1941 that the champion was reunited with one of the men responsible for its endearing memory when it was purchased by none other than Peter Helck himself. Today No. 16 is in perfect running condition, and in accordance with Helck's promise to both Tracy and Robertson, the car has not been restored.

Automotive Fine Art

Concours Exhibitors Stimulate Interest

One look at Tom Hale's official Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance poster (on our cover) shows even the newcomer to automotive fine art that this year's Concours is dedicated to breaking new ground.

Hale's evocative poster depicts Ralph Lauren's 1930 "Count Trossi" Mercedes-Benz SSK, set before a surrealistic Meadow Brook Hall. Here the artist has abandoned the more realistic formal elements of previous Concours poster art in favor of his deeply sensual, fluid style. The images induce the kind of total immersion of senses that the enthusiast feels upon entering Concourse.

The 14th Annual Meadow Brook Concours International Invitational Art Exhibition is proud to feature 14 of the world's most diverse and accomplished artists whose interpretations of the automotive epic range from cubism to Edwardian expressionism. The art show is held on the grounds of the Concours itself at Meadow Brook Hall on August 6 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m..

The 1995 Concours d'Elegance Invitational Art Exhibition will be previewed from July 28 through August 4 at the new Chrysler Technology Center in Auburn Hills, Michigan and the official Opening Reception will take place there Friday, August 4. All of the artists will be in attendance and awards will be announced. The Invitational Art Auction of the artists' works will take place on Saturday, August 5, immediately preceding the annual Black Tie Concours d'Elegance Banquet at Meadow Brook Hall. All of the artists will be in attendance at the Art Exhibition, which will be open to the public to view and make purchases at Concours d'Elegance, Sunday, August 6, at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester.

CONCOURS FEATURES BROAD PERSPECTIVES ON AUTOMOTIVE ART

From Buenos Aires, Argentina, Jorge M. Garcia will bring his work to Meadow Brook Concours for the first time. Like the great Peter Helck, Garcia brings a gritty passion to historic road racing scenes. A recent painting recreates the drama of a fleeting moment at the 1936 Gran Premio International, as Raul Riganti's Hudson Terraplane four-wheel drifts its way around a treacherous mountain pass and on to victory. In Garcia's thrilling vision, the scale of the little auto against the enormity of the barren mountainside conveys a solitary sense of place, where the landscape alone conspires to beat every rally driver.

Alain Levesque is another new face attending this year's Invitational. His European Axis inspired futurist renderings are popular in the Montréal, Canada, art scene. His automobiles seem to sprint past the canvas laden with modernistic bits of mechanicia or outlined in an orderly chaos of colorful shapes, clouds and steel. Levesque's daring cubist style compliments the fresh new look of the 1995 Art Show.

For many years, Dexter Brown of the United Kingdom has established a stellar reputation creating images for Ferrari and Porsche ads, and by accepting only commissions which meet his standard of personal involvement and satisfaction. But Brown often wondered how such influential artists as Monet and Renoir might have interpreted motoring life and whether he could successfully juxtapose the passion and tension of the 1908 French Grand Prix with the tranquillity and serenity of Edwardian expressionism. Brown created a series of 25 paintings under a self inspiring pseudonym de Bruyne. Gossip about de Bruyne in the art world ranged from wild speculation to titillation. One rumor proclaimed "the last great work of a dying Dutch painter". Another had a well known artist changing his name to protect any financial proceeds from divorce lawyers. But Brown's deeply personal experiment to successfully communicate the subtleties of the period transcends idle talk of who created the work or when it was created. The real de Bruyne, or Dexter Brown, makes his first appearance at the Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance 1995.

Sculptor Larry Braun of San Francisco has been commissioned by the Meadow Brook Historic Races to create the featured painting and sculpture as a signature for this year's race.

Fashion Focus on All-American Classics

Following a tradition of haute couture from the original Paris Concours d'Elegance in 1922, the Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance is the only Concours in the world to present high fashion alongside of classic automobiles. This year, however, trends in fashion originate closer to home as Cadillac, Somerset Collection and Saks Fifth Avenue present an exclusive showing of a designer taking the New York fashion scene by storm with his updated Fifties classics - James Purcell. Purcell's elegant creations set the standard for the current rush to recreate the glamour decades of the 50s and 60s. Meadow Brook is privileged to present a runway fashion show of his Fall collection on the grounds of the Meadow Brook Hall on Friday, August 4. Lunch will be served. Mrs. John Engler, wife of the Governor of Michigan, and Mrs. Robert Eaton are co-chairwomen of the event. Tickets are available by calling Meadow Brook Hall at 810-370-3140.

On Sunday, August 6, at the Meadow Brook Concours d'Elegance, Somerset Collection will present its enormously popular Mode du Concours, pairing the latest fashions with selected classic automobiles. Three fashion shows are presented throughout the day.

Each show features five selected autos matched with ensembles shown off by high fashion models who emerge from cars as they arrive at the reviewing stand. The overall effect is a crowd-pleasing profusion of grand color and style.

Honorary Chairman
Robert J. Eaton

Robert J. Eaton, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Chrysler Corporation, serves as Honorary Chairman of the 1995 Meadow Brook Hall Concours d'Elegance. Under his leadership Chrysler Corporation has been a dedicated supporter of this year's event, hosting the preview of the Meadow Brook Concours Art Show at the Chrysler Technology Center and providing spectacular Chrysler concept vehicles to view at the Concours.

Eaton joined Chrysler on March 16, 1992, as Vice Chairman and Chief Operating Officer and a member of the company's Board of Directors. He was elected Chairman and Chief Executive Officer on January 1, 1993.

Eaton had been President of General Motors Europe since June 1988. He joined General Motors in 1963 as a college graduate-in-training with Chevrolet Motor Division's Engineering Center in Warren, Mich.

Eaton worked in top engineering management assignments at GM. A clearly committed "Car Guy," he recently raced in the Dodge Neon Challenge at the 1995 Detroit Grand Prix.

He is a fellow of both the Society of Automotive Engineers and the Engineering Society of Detroit. He is a member of the National Academy of Engineering.

Born in Buena Vista, Colorado, on February 13, 1940, Eaton received his Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Kansas in 1963. He attended the Executive Program at Dartmouth College in 1981.

Chairman
Michael Sheridan

Chairman Michael Sheridan has made a diverse career of his life-long fascination with the automobile. Vice-President of the Toundas Motorsport Group, Sheridan has written about, photographed and built cars. He worked as a team McLaren mechanic for Can Am driver Charles Hayes. Not all of Sheridan's endeavors require getting his hands dirty. He promotes auto events and helped organize the first TDM Meadow Brook Historic Races. He was a founding publisher of the AFAS Quarterly and is a judge for the Ferrari Club of America and the International Showcar Association. Of course he can always be found working on a car in his spare time!

Builders learn to cope with clients from hell

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Residential building situations have moments of uncertainty, apprehensions and unmet expectations. Most, however, are resolved to the satisfaction of all parties. Then there are the clients from hell. A consultant advises how to deal with them – and warns against becoming the builder from hell.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

For Larry Cohen, a West Bloomfield residential builder, it was an acquaintance who wanted to take over and personally direct the entire construction process from start to finish.

For Paul Levine, a Farmington Hills builder, it was an engineer who found several hundred items needing correction during a walk-through prior to occupancy.

Tom Stephani, a consultant from Illinois, calls them clients from hell in seminars he presents to builders on how to recognize and handle potentially troublesome buyers.

"I find in the mid '90s, I'm dealing more and more with difficult clients," Stephani told a gathering of the Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan.

"Why? The frantic pace of our lives contributes to it," Stephani said. "I'm not sure that faxes, cellular phones have contributed to the quality of life rather than just speeded it up."

He identified four kinds of clients from hell:

- Those who don't know what they want.
- Those who always want more or want to pay less.
- Those who are never satisfied.
- Those who won't pay.

"Our worst client was bound and determined to buy their own lot, design a plan and build their own home," Cohen recalled. "She wanted to be her own superintendent.

"I basically threw out the rule book and ended up changing changes," he said. "Once I got halfway down the road, I realized it had gone too far. The builder must control the process, not the customer."

Cohen offers caveats to both clients and builders.

"A customer should thoroughly, absolutely research their builder. Knock on doors. Talk to the city or town building department. Talk to the state department of regulation and licensing. Check with the Better Business Bureau.

"From the builder's standpoint, make sure agreements are clear, specifications are detailed. Make sure it's not full of legalese so that a lay person can understand it," Cohen said.

People who deal with extremely precise tolerances in their daily work can cause problems when they translate those kinds of expectations to the home building experience, Levine said.

"Once we had a walk-through before closing and the customer had 500 items on a list," Levine recalled. "We couldn't possibly have that many things wrong. He was an AT&T engineer who worked with circuit boards.

"We took every one of his concerns and rebuilt the house. It wasn't money so much as time. It took over a month to take care of all of the items. Eventually, we did satisfy him."

Attention to detail and letting nothing go without saying are keys to a successful builder/client relationship, Stephani said.

"Understand our clients go through a roller coaster of emotions. We do this every day. They don't," he said.

Potentially troublesome clients exhibit several characteristics. Some may obsess over minor details, others can never make a decision and still others want more for less.

"It's our job to create realistic expectations," Stephani said. "Don't tell them they can can have everything. I suggest you create options and let them make decisions. We've got to tell them changes cost money and time."

Spell things out completely and clearly in the sales agreement, Stephani said. Include an arbitration/mediation clause.

Builders should document progress with daily logs, pictures and video, especially if they anticipate a disharmonious relationship along the way.

Communicate to clients what they can expect.

"Delays during construction are common," he said. "We won't be on your job every day all day. Sometimes, no one will be on the job. Positively, absolutely nothing is perfect."

Don't become the builder from hell, Stephani warned. Quality and steady progress to completion are important.

"When conflicts arise, you need to meet them head on," he said. "I don't know about you, but one of the most aggravating parts of my business is not getting phone calls returned.

"Get everyone involved. I find problems will be resolved immediately to everyone's satisfaction if everyone is there," Stephani added.

John Bollan Jr., a Troy builder, subscribes to many of Stephani's points.

"I've been a longtime believer of complete documentation of every aspect of the business," he said. "The customer has to know what's up next, what we do, what we won't do and what the work will cost him."

Federal guidelines will try to clarify reverse mortgages

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I understand that there are some federal proposals likely to make reverse mortgages clearer for seniors. Do you have any information on that?

A. It is my understanding that the proposals in the regulations expected to take effect in the near future will force lenders offering reverse mortgages to make detailed new cost disclosures that allow consumers to readily compare the pros and cons of competing loans.

In a reverse mortgage, rather than having the homeowner send money to the lender, the lender instead sends checks to the consumer, on either a regular schedule, or on a line of credit basis.

Although some reverse mortgages require full repayment of the debt at the end of a finite term, like 5 or 10 years, the most popular plans ask for no repayment until the borrower sells the house, moves out or dies. The proceeds compensate the lender, and anything left over goes to the homeowner's beneficiaries. Some reverse mortgages carry adjustable interest rates and cut the lender into sharing future appreciation in value of the property. Others involve purchase of an insurance annuity contract as part of the deal.

Competing programs can carry widely varying closing costs, origination fees, mortgage insurance, and other charges. In addition, the basic annual cost within programs often vary according to how long the borrower remains alive and in the house.

Therefore, there is extreme ambiguity in regard to what the reverse mortgage will actually cost the borrower and/or its beneficiaries, and it may well depend upon how long one lives in order to determine what the exact interest rate will be. Hopefully the new proposals will clarify this somewhat ambiguous and complex type of financing.

Q. When purchasers enter into a purchase agreement to buy property and the agreements provide that the seller will provide marketable title, is the purchaser entitled to specific performance, even though the seller believed that he was unable to provide marketable title.

A. Chances are that a court will find that even though the seller was under a contractual obligation to provide marketable title, the defects in title are immaterial when a purchaser seeks specific performance.

Since the purchaser sought specific performance of the property, the purchaser waived the requirement of marketable title and is entitled to specific performance.

Banks cuts price of real estate software

Standard Federal Bank, based in Troy, recuded the price of its "RealAccess For Realtors" personal computer software program, which provides online mortgage information and training/marketing services for real estate sales professionals.

The office version of RealAccess, which may be installed on any number of personal computers in a broker's office, is available for $99, and the agent version, which may be installed on a single personal computer, is available for $49.

On both versions, the flat fee covers the initial installation and all upgrades, scheduled to occur at least once every six months, for a three-year period. In conjunction with the new pricing structure, companies and individuals that have already installed RealAccess will be released from their obligation to make the remaining payments for maintaining second- and third-year service.

"With this new pricing, real estate professionals have even more incentive to take advantage of what is certainly one of the most comprehensive online services now available to the industry," said Thomas R. Ricketts, chairman of the board and president of Standard Federal.

RealAccess has two components: the first is DirectLink for Realtors, which allows a Realtor to track the status of a buyer's mortgage loan application at Standard Federal Bank through closing. DirectLink also provides online access to Standard Federal's current loan rates and terms, the amount of income needed to qualify for a loan, typical closing costs and loan product comparisons.

The second component is "Listing Strategies That Work," which provides sales training and other special marketing services, such as customized listing presentations and comparisons, developed by consultant Tom Ervin.

Experienced agents know best mortgage lenders

DAVID C. MULLY

How can you find a good mortgage lender? Ask the people who work closely with mortgage lenders day in and day out.

They know over the long haul how these lenders operate and can judge the consistency of competitive interest rates, competitive closing costs and the type of service mortgage lenders provide during and after the closing of the sale.

The people who work closest with lenders are, of course, Realtors and builders. But don't forget others such as title companies, appraisers, credit-reporting agencies, real estate lawyers and, to some extent, accountants and financial planners.

Don't take too seriously advice from family, friends and co-workers. The are good sources for referrals, but they usually base their opinions on one or two transactions they have been involved in, or may have heard about.

Although they mean well, friends and relatives usually haven't been involved in or been close to enough deals to have an accurate opinion on who is good and who is not.

With so many lenders out there now, and more and more people who need special attention when it comes to obtaining financing, it is very important go get good-quality referrals of lenders that you can trust.

Getting good referrals for mortgage lenders is so important because it is difficult to judge a good lender by its cover. It's nice to know from the people closest to the action how the lender is once you get past that cover.

Realtors will normally recommend three lenders to their clients. These lenders usually have earned their way with that Realtor by doing a good job and being fair to their clients while providing excellent service.

Realtors will not refer lenders unless they are trustworthy. After all real estate brokers believe (rightly) their reputation is at stake if the client has a bad experience with a recommended lender.

The client may blame the Realtor for recommending a poor lender, and that could cost the real estate broker repeat business or referrals from an unhappy client.

This can be a nightmare for a Realtor because he makes his living on referrals. So you can feel safe that the lender recommended by the Realtor should be able to do a good job for you.

It can be especially important to listen to the Realtor you're working with if you have a complicated situation. If you need special attention, you probably require a lender who knows how to handle that particular situation.

NEW HOMES

Landscaping is in home's price

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Landscaping as part of the base price and the waiving of some $2,500 in closing costs if buyers mortgage through a lender working with the builder are a couple of different twists at Camden Park in Canton.

Thirty-four lots are available on the 20-acre parcel off Lotz Road south of Cherry Hill.

Four floor plans are offered ranging from a 1,900-square-foot split level with three bedrooms and two baths for $129,900 to a 1,900-square-foot colonial with three bedrooms and 2½ baths for $149,900.

Each has as standard features two-car attached garage, dishwasher, cast iron kitchen sink with sprayer and textured ceilings.

"I think we're very value oriented, best bang for the buck, a lot of square footage for the dollar," said Danny Veri of Palmer Development/Michigan Builders.

Options include fireplace ($2,750), air conditioning ($2,285) and skylights ($729 apiece).

All but five of the lots carry premiums ranging from $500 to $5,000.

Two models have been constructed.

The Jenkins, a 1,900-square-foot colonial, has a living room and dining room that join together. The kitchen/eating nook and family room connect across the back of the unit.

The laundry and half-bath also are on the main level.

Large planter shelves have been built at the head and foot of the stairs.

The master upstairs has a shower and walk-in closet. Two other bedrooms share a second full bath.

Base price is $149,900.

The other model, the Manchester, is a 1,500-square-foot contemporary, open ranch with a volume ceiling.

One side of the house features a kitchen/nook, great room, dining area and laundry. Three bedrooms and two full baths are on the other side. The master has a shower, walk-in closet and sitting/dressing area.

Base price is $148,875 for two baths, $144,900 for one.

Exteriors on all plans include brick and vinyl siding.

"Most seem to be young families looking for schools, looking for neighborhood," Veri said of prospects. "Sidewalks are important with kids. Landscaping and saving on mortgage costs go over very big."

"The nice thing is the density — less than two (houses) an acre," said Bill Dempsey, sales rep.

"On approximately seven of the 20 acres we have two ponds, a creek and this is a big park area here," he said pointing to a site plan.

The western edge of Camden Park abuts I-275.

The subdivision, in the Plymouth-Canton schools, is serviced by city water and sewers.

"From the first house, we've got in there daily and got involved with trades and dealt personally with every customer," Veri said. "Once we close on a house, they have my home telephone number. I think that's very important."

The property tax rate is about $31 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $140,000 house in Camden Park would pay about about $2,170 in taxes the first year.

Miles and Cheryl Hammond along with children Joshua and Sarah will move into a Jenkins model.

"It's probably one of the best built houses for the price I've seen built in Canton," Miles said.

"We looked at at least 10 to 15 subs in Canton. For the price, you can't beat it in terms of how lots are set up, materials used, built-in dishwasher and fully-landscaped lots," he said.

The Plymouth-Canton schools are especially important to the family, Miles said.

Dan and Lin Mosier also will build a colonial for themselves and children Danielle and Christian.

"We just felt Camden Park was the best value for this money," Lin said. "We're really pleased with the builder. He didn't groan when we asked to change things.

"We have a combined kitchen/family room area where young children can be and where I can be doing chores and keep an eye on them. We think this house will serve our needs well."

The sales office at Camden Park, (313) 397-9564 is open 1-5 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.

Jenkins model: This house, with 1,900 square feet, includes three bedrooms and 2½ baths for just under $150,000.

The charm of the 1,952-square-foot Freedom is evident at first glance. An old-fashioned covered porch, with skylights and railing to the front, along with a beautiful wood and brick exterior, create a homey atmosphere that is sure to attract appreciative glances.

Walk up the steps into the vaulted entry and discover a floor design that makes very effective use of the available space.

The hallway, to the left of the entry, leads you to a master suite that projects outward from the rest of the house, giving you a full view of the surrounding area and an assurance of privacy. Amenities here include a private sky-lit bathroom and a huge walk-in closet.

Directly across the hall are two identical bedrooms that are situated where anxious parents can easily check on small children. Each has generous closet space and a view window. Another full, sky-lit bathroom, with linen storage, is in the hallway.

The living room and dining room, both with vaulted ceilings, occupy the center of the floor plan. The living room has a built-in corner wood stove to keep you and your guests nice and cozy. The dining room is adjacent to the kitchen, a fact that is sure to please the cook in the family. The large, walk-in kitchen features a step-in pantry and a convenient eating bar, perfect for informal meals.

■ LANDLORDS MEET

The Real Estate Investors Association will hold a general question and answer session 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 1, at the Southgate Ramada on Northline one block east of I-75. Cost is $10 for non-members.

Beginning landlords interested in a free introduction package should contact Wayde Koehler, association president, on the landlord hot line, (313) 277-4168.

■ REFINANCING REPORT

Ross Mortgage, with offices in Livonia, Rochester and Birmingham, will make available to consumers a free report discussing the ins and outs of refinancing a house.

Homeowners thinking about refinancing can use the 10-point report to learn about costly mistakes to avoid and strategies that can save money. Issues addressed include when it makes sense to consider refinancing, typical fees involved and tax implications.

To order, call (810) 968-1800.

■ MALAN ACQUISITION

Malan Realty Investors, a real estate investment trust in Birmingham, has signed a purchase agreement to acquire the Shops at Fairlane Meadows, a 330,115-square-foot shopping center in Dearborn.

Purchase price is approximately $16.6 million.

The property, on Ford Road east of Southfield, was developed in 1987 by Ford Motor Land Development. The center is currently 98 percent leased.

Malan owns and operates a portfolio of 25 shopping centers and 26 free-standing stores primarily in the Midwest.

■ HOUSE DONATED

The law firm of Fieger, Fieger, Schwartz of Southfield has donated a house on land it intends to use for an office expansion to the Think Twice Foundation.

The foundation channels people and money to Detroit's housing and redevelopment needs.
