Two rinks on tap for township

Ice time for hockey players and skaters is at a premium in Plymouth. Because of that, a private firm wants to build two new indoor ice rinks, one for hockey and the other for skating.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Here's some great news for local hockey players: A private firm plans to build two indoor ice rinks in Plymouth Township.

TNT Systems has won township Planning Commission approval for the Westech Sports Centre, to be built on the east side of Beck Road south of Five Mile Road.

"The emphasis of the facility will be youth and adult hockey leagues, figure skating and open skating for the public," according to the company's impact analysis on the project presented to the township planning department.

The complex will include two ice arenas, "one designed to NHL rink standards and one to Olympic skating standards," according to the company proposal.

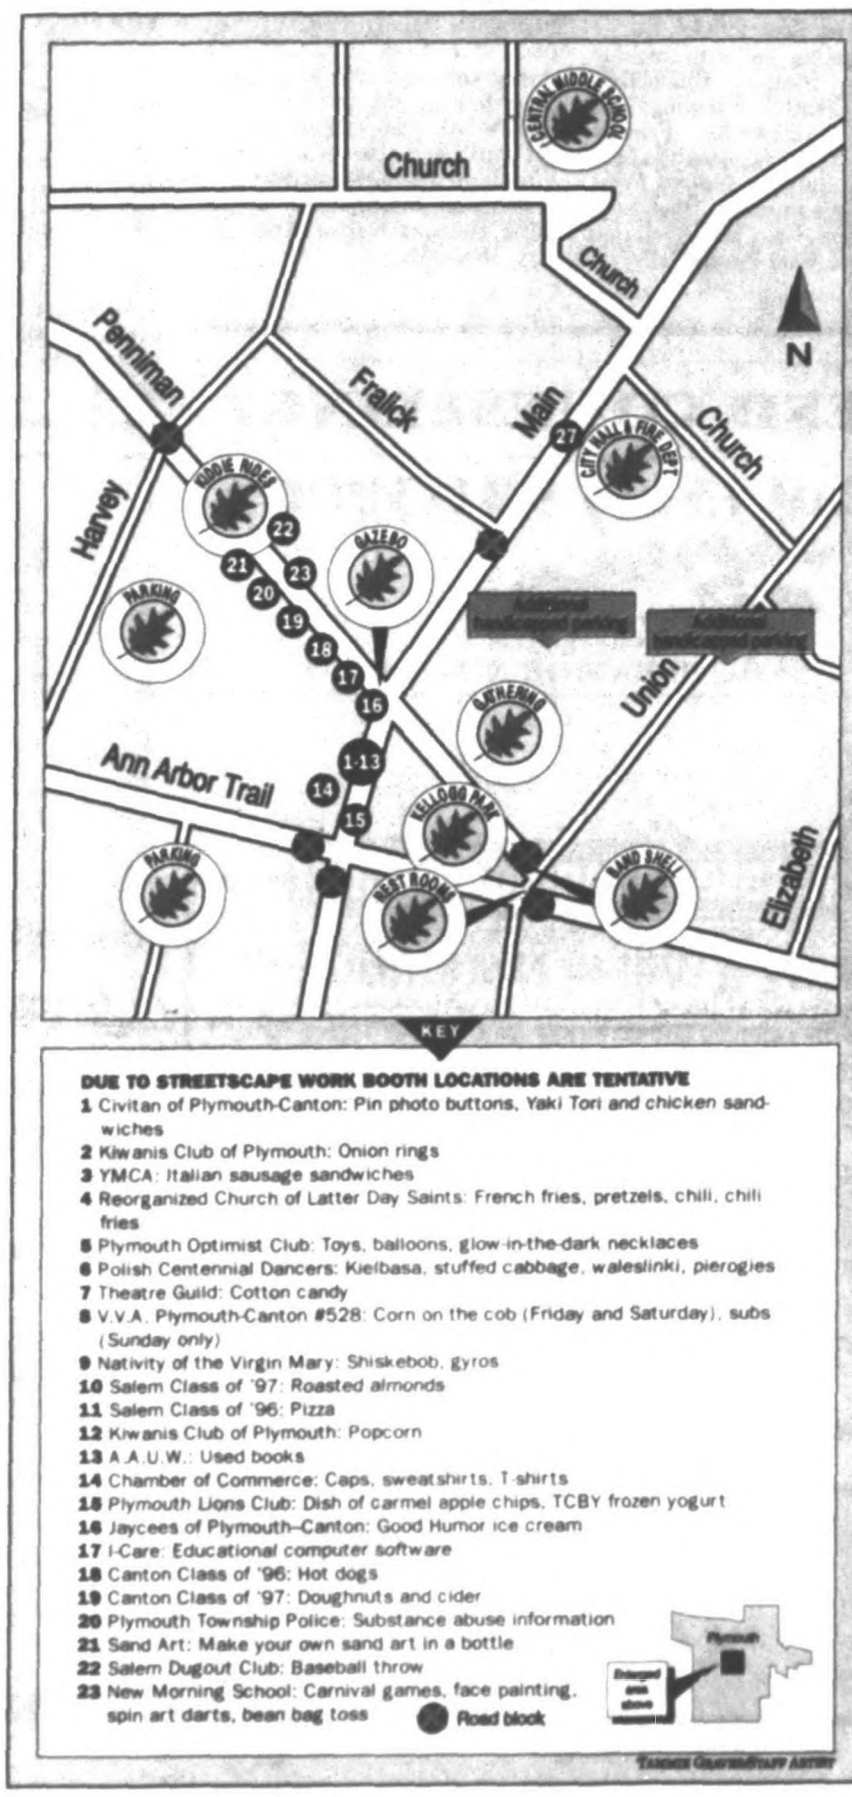

Because of the soaring popularity of youth and adult hockey in recent years, many players and parents have complained in recent years of the shortage of available ice time.

Last fall, several parents seeking to sign up kids in leagues at the Plymouth Cultural Center camped out overnight, in hopes of winning a spot. Hockey enthusiasts say a lack of ice arenas is a problem around metro Detroit.

"The proposed facility will alleviate the demand for ice time at these facilities and provide a valuable community recreational resource for Plymouth Township," according to the TNT proposal.

A company official declined further comment on the project. Plymouth Township Community Development Director Shirley Barney said the company was this week expected to

Event puts city up front

This year's Plymouth Fall Festival features entertainment, crafts and food booths — but the nearly-finished downtown streetscape project could steal the show.

"People are going to see the downtown. It's something they will tell other people," said Joe Bida, who does publicity for the festival.

Bida said food booths would be going up Thursday, in preparation for the start of the festival Friday. The 40th annual festival runs through Sunday.

"The streets will be ready," said Downtown Development Authority Director Steve Guile. He said paving was scheduled to happen on Main Street on Tuesday and Wednesday, to allow booths to set up late today.

"The main (streetscape) features are in on Main Street except for two planters, at Ann Arbor Trail and Main and Penniman and Main," Guile said, adding some brick work has yet to be completed.

So watch your step, festival goers.

"The weather looks like it's going to be cool, that could help," Bida said. "Let's hope everybody has a good time and nobody gets hurt."

Some new activities and entertainment this year include a pie-eating contest, Civil War encampment and Plymouth Parasol Promenade.

The Fall Festival board will raffle off a 1995 Ford Crown Victoria; tickets can be bought outside the Plymouth Historical Museum, just north of city hall on Main Street.

The festival starts at 6 p.m. Friday with opening ceremonies on the festival Main Stage at Kellogg Park. Plymouth Business and Professional Women's club bingo returns from 6-9 p.m. at The Gathering off of Kellogg Park, and the Plymouth Community Band performs from 7-9:30 p.m. on the stage.

Field looks rather slim for commission race

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

It could be that just four candidates will actively run for four seats on the Plymouth City Commission in the November election.

Six candidates by a May deadline filed enough petition signatures to get their names on the ballot. But one of those candidates, Bill Warren, is a firefighter with the Plymouth Community Fire Department.

City Attorney Donald Morgan said that by state election law, a firefighter employed by the city can't run for city commissioner. Morgan has sought an opinion from a Wayne County circuit court judge to back this finding. "I'm hoping within the next week we'll be able to know something," said city Clerk Linda Langmesser.

If the ruling stands, five candidates will appear on the ballot. But one of the five, Craig Brass, said he's mulling over whether to actually campaign for a commission seat, as his wife has been facing health problems.

"My interest has been diverted," said Brass, a stockbroker with Shearson and Lehman Brothers. "It's kind of interesting how people really want me to run. I don't know what I'm going to do yet. I will have some sort of announcement for lack of a better term in the next 10 days."

The other four candidates are:

■ Donald Dismuke, a tax specialist and certified public accountant with Ernst and Young.

■ Stella Greene, an incumbent city commissioner.

■ Joseph Koch, chairman of the city cemetery board and a certified public accountant with Roney and Co. of Plymouth.

■ Dennis Shrewsbury, an incumbent city commissioner.

As to campaign plans this fall, Greene said, "I'm just going to continue to do what I've done all the way through as a city commissioner, I'll stay out in the community, go door to door and see what people feel about how things are going in the community."

Plymouth attorney loved family and his work

Services for Joseph H. Dillon, 66, a well-known Plymouth attorney, were Tuesday, Sept. 5, at Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church in Plymouth, with the Rev. John Sullivan officiating.

He was born Oct. 31, 1928, in Flint, and died Friday, Sept. 1, in Livonia.

He attended St. Matthew's High School in Flint, where he enjoyed a brief football career. He obtained a bachelor of science degree in economics from the University of Detroit in 1953. He began his career working for Chrysler Corp. prior to his graduation.

After marrying his sister's best friend, Beatrice Walls, on Jan. 2, 1954, he served two years in the U.S. Army. He resumed his career with Chrysler as a marketing analyst, attending the University of Detroit School of Law at night.

With three children — Bryan, Timothy, and Terese — at home, he graduated magna cum laude from law school in 1959.

His career with Chrysler later took him and his family to Switzerland where his fourth child, Kathryn, was born.

After returning to the states, Joseph joined Cummins Engine Co. in Columbus, Ind. After a 10-year career with Cummins, including a one-year international marketing assignment in London, England, he returned to Michigan in 1972 as chief financial officer of a regional Cummins distributorship.

In 1977, after the birth of Paul, Anne, Jeanne, and Jeff, he decided to pursue his lifelong dream of a law career, and opened a practice in Plymouth with former Wayne County Circuit Court Judge George Bowles. Over the ensuing years, he built a reputation as respected general practitioner and family law specialist.

In 1993, Joseph enticed two of his sons to join forces with him; Paul as a general partner in Plymouth, and Bryan, as "of counsel" from Louisville, Ky.

He was most satisfied with life's simple treasures, preferring family gatherings in his backyard to glitzy vacations; pleasant company to professional entertainment. In his later years, Joseph even took up photography, usually making his sub-

Gallery will host portrait artists

Prominent portrait artists Joseph and Robert Maniscalo will demonstrate their art and conduct a workshop Sept. 29 through Oct. 1 at Frameworks gallery in Plymouth.

Their appearance is scheduled in connection with the Plymouth is Artrageous Gallery Walk sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

Joseph Maniscalo's recent commissions include portraits of retired Michigan Supreme Court justices Mary Coleman and Thomas Brennan and former U.S. Reps. William Ford and Augustus Hawkins.

Maniscalo has had numerous one-man shows and maintains a studio at the Scarab Club in Detroit's cultural center. His subjects have included figures from corporations, universities, government, and sports, and children and families.

His son, Robert Maniscalo, also has commissioned works displayed in public and private collections throughout the United States and Canada. He keeps studios in New York and New Orleans. The younger Maniscalo demonstrates an ability to capture the personality of his subjects, while also portraying their likenesses realistically.

He's also a musician, actor, writer and teacher, who paid for his music education at Wayne State University by painting portraits.

The public is invited to meet the artists Friday, Sept. 29, at Frameworks. Hors d'oeuvres will be served and the artists' work will be displayed.

From 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Robert Maniscalo will give a public demonstration, followed by a workshop from 1-5 p.m. The workshop continues from noon-3 p.m. Sunday.

There is a $50 fee for the workshop and space is limited. Registration is required.

On Sunday, Joseph Maniscalo is scheduled to give a free slide presentation and lecture, also at Frameworks.

Woman arrested for being drunk

A 17-year-old Garden City woman was arrested shortly after 2 a.m. Sept. 2 by Plymouth police for being intoxicated and under 21 years of age.

Officers noticed her driving erratically on Sheldon and Ann Arbor Road, drifting in and out of traffic lanes. One of her headlights wasn't working.

Pulled over on Harvey, the woman told police she'd had one beer four hours earlier. Police said she smelled of alcohol and measured her blood alcohol level at .065.

Police secured her car at the scene, and took her to the station. The young woman was released to her parents without being jailed. The driver had two driver's licenses. Police destroyed them both and issued her a driver's permit.

Van stuck

Plymouth police responded at 7:40 p.m. Sept. 1 to a report of a van stuck in a "sink hole" at 260 Parkview.

Officers found the driver, a 16-year-old from Canton, unable to get his 1989 blue Ford van out of a hole in the road. The crevice was four feet long by two feet wide and three feet deep.

The van was resting on its rear axle. The DPW and a towing company were notified, and police photographed the hole and the van.

Parkview is under construction, and a fire hydrant had been removed.

The ground under the pavement had eroded, and when the van pulled up to the curb, the pavement gave way.

The DPW placed barricades around the hole. The van was towed. The mishap caused no apparent damage.

The towing company was advised to send its bill to the city.

Car theft reported

A 1993 Lexus car was reported stolen Monday from a driveway on Green Valley in Plymouth Township.

According to a report filed with township police, the car was last spotted by its owner, a 41-year-old man, at 5:30 a.m. Saturday. He returned at 7:30 p.m. Monday to find the car gone, the report continued.

There were no witnesses to the theft and no evidence of broken glass or other damage to the car to gain entry, according to the report filed by police.

Burn victim learns that good can come from bad

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

There are those who believe that good comes from bad, and the Hillers are among them.

Vicki Hiller, who with her family owns and operates Master Lighting in Canton, was severely burned on her right side in a boating accident on Father's Day. The 41-year-old Plymouth resident has amazed her doctors with her swift recovery — something she attributes to maintaining a positive attitude and sense of humor.

Hiller and her boyfriend, Richard Asztalos, were looking forward to a Sunday on Lake St. Clair on June 18. They were moored near Strawberry Island on Asztalos' 32-foot sailboat when Hiller decided to brew some coffee on the cookstove, fueled by alcohol fluid.

"I was trying to start the burner, and didn't see a flame, but there must have been one," said Hiller, who was in the galley while her boyfriend, owner of Livonia's Charisma Salon, was up in the bow.

"I'm not 100-percent sure how it happened, but my shirt caught on fire. The reason I got hurt is because my clothing (made of polyester and cotton) held the fire to my skin," said Hiller. "Although everybody knows to stop, drop and roll, there is really no place to stop, drop and roll inside a boat. My thought was to get out of the boat and into the water, but that would have been the worst thing, because I would have gotten outside into the fresh air, and I could have fallen getting out of the boat."

When Asztalos realized Hiller was on fire, he smothered the flames with his hand, and rolled her down onto a couch.

He called the Macomb County Sheriff's Department on his ship-to-shore radio, and rescuers were there in eight minutes.

Hiller was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, and then flown by helicopter to the University of Michigan burn center. "I talked myself out of going into shock," Hiller said. "I was in pain, but you take it one minute at a time. You know you are going to get help, so you can very much survive it. I was more upset that my boyfriend burned his hand, and that I had ruined the day."

Hiller suffered second- and third-degree burns on her right shoulder, arm, hand, nose, lips, ear, and the right side of her face.

One of the few times Hiller cried was "in the emergency room that first day. I cried because I didn't know how I could work, because I'm right-handed. I've worked at our family business for 15 years. I knew I couldn't keep working in sales, because when you burn, you swell, and I burned my face." Hiller was concerned about not being able to write, but quickly taught herself to write left-handed.

She was hospitalized for a week, and underwent skin grafts and intensive physical therapy. For six weeks, Hiller couldn't drive.

To the amazement of doctors and her family, Hiller was back at work just six weeks after the accident. "I was back on the sailboat two weeks and three days after I got out of the hospital," she said. "I have a high threshold for pain."

Good has come of the ordeal, say Hiller and her sister, Sue Bartkowiak.

"The pain does not show on my face," said Hiller, who must wear custom-made pressurized clothing 24 hours a day to promote healing. "People ask, 'How can you go through this and be happy?' but I am. In some ways, I'm more appreciative and happy than I was before.

"It changes your outlook, and you can make it a positive change. Nothing bad ever happened to me before. Everything in life has taken on more of a seriousness. Things mean more. Even though I was happy before, it's like you suddenly really start to realize how important things are. You have to appreciate the little things, and take time out to smell the roses."

Hiller said that while she's had a few "pity parties," she realizes how lucky she is. There are other people who don't overcome their tragedies. "I can feel sorry for myself, or I can get better. It's rather exciting to see the human body heal itself," added Hiller, who now educates children and others about what to do if they're ever in a similar situation: "Stop, drop and roll."

Sue Bartkowiak works at Master Lighting with her husband, Bob, and parents, storeowners Hazen and Georgie Hiller.

"It's been a trauma, but you have to pick up and keep going when a family business is involved," said Bratkowiak, adding that she's very proud of her sister.

Hiller's accident has changed Bartkowiak's outlook on life.

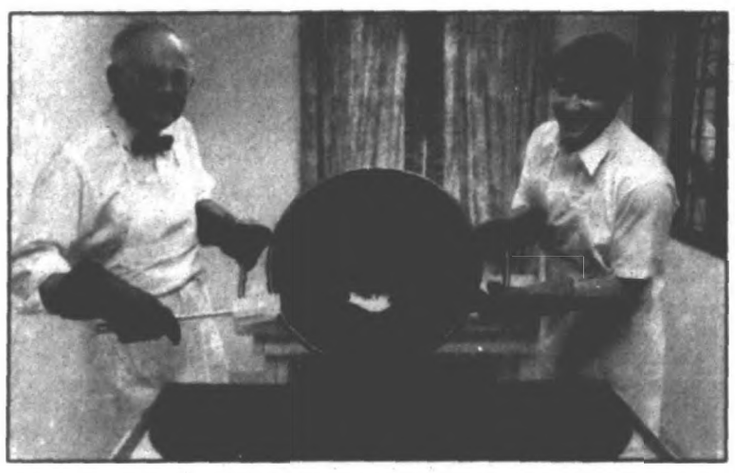

"You realize how important each day really is," she said. "Things we do on a day-to-day basis don't really matter in the long run. Survival, happiness and peace of mind are much more important."

Bartkowiak said the employees at Master Lighting "stood behind us and really worked hard. I hope we can help them in some way for everything they've done for us."

'Fudge Man' was part of community

A memorial service will be at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Unity Church of Livonia, 28660 Five Mille, for Leonard Grunwald, 74, of Northville, who turned his love of fudge and a business sense into Grunwald's House of Fudge in Plymouth.

He was born Sept. 6, 1920, in Detroit, and died Saturday, Sept. 2, at his residence in Northville.

Mr. Grunwald is fondly remembered around Plymouth as "the Fudge Man." His personal recipe for handmade fudge began Grunwald's House of Fudge in Plymouth, and at the Gibraltar Trade Center in Taylor.

He brought a smile to all as he visited around town with his bag of samples. He was especially fond of children, and delighted in showing them how to make fudge, according to family members.

The business was started in 1981 as a wholesale operation, and was expanded into handmade chocolates, specialty candies and decorative gift tins and packaging. It has grown to three outlets.

The fudge was also sold on Boblo Island, was part of Chuck Muer's "Taste of Michigan" promotion, and was incorporated into "Made in Michigan" specialty food baskets which are sold at various outlets. He is survived by his wife, Peggy; his three children, Dennis, David and Darla; and his granddaughter, Stephanie.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be directed to his wife, Peggy.

Growth in Canton increases school districts' enrollments

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

The Canton subdivisions sprouting up nearly as rapidly as the cornfields of old mean increases in enrollment for three school districts.

In the past five years, a whopping 73 subdivisions and residential developments have been built in the former sweet corn capital of Michigan. In metropolitan Detroit, only Clinton Township is experiencing as high a growth rate.

The majority of new households are in the Plymouth-Canton school district. However, given the jagged boundaries of the Plymouth-Canton, Wayne-Westland and Van Buren school districts, a number of Canton's residential developments are in the Wayne-Westland or Van Buren schools. The numbers aren't huge, but an unprecedented number of Canton youngsters will be attending those school districts. And the figures are projected to grow.

Currently, 735 Canton students attend Wayne-Westland schools. That number is expected to increase to 855 in five years. Just under 500 Canton students go to Van Buren schools, with the number expected to jump to 600 by the year 2000.

In Plymouth-Canton, a net gain of fewer than 200 students is expected this year, for a total of slightly more than 15,000 students. "Every year, our records show 800-900 kids leaving. But we get right around that number coming in," said Ginnie Murdoch, Plymouth-Canton supervisor of Pupil Accounting.

New developments

Developments in the Wayne-Westland district include the 100-unit Parkview Estates subdivision west of Morton Taylor and south of Applewood (just one mile from a brand-new Plymouth-Canton elementary school); and the 77-unit Kimberly Meadows subdivision, south of Geddes and west of Canton Center. On the drawing board in Wayne-Westland are the 216-unit Hunter's Grove condominiums south of Geddes between Beck and Canton Center, and the 42-unit Hidden Woods of Canton Apartments east of Canton Center and south of Palmer.

New housing in the Van Buren district includes the 87-unit Huntington Place subdivision east of Beck and north of Geddes; the 248-unit River Meadows site condominiums north of Geddes between Beck and Canton Center; and the 94-unit River Woods subdivision west of Beck and north of Geddes.

Two other Canton subdivisions are planned in the Van Buren district. One, the Central Park site west of Beck and south of Proctor, has space for 1,000 homes. The other, north of Geddes and east of Beck, can accommodate 135 homes.

Rezoning is proposed for three Canton parcels in Van Buren and Wayne-Westland. They are south of Geddes on either side of Beck Road.

Aside from the above-mentioned sites, limited growth is expected, said Canton planner Jeff Goulet.

"Just about everything south of Michigan is industrial land, except for a few lots along Sheldon," he said. "With the Rouge River, environmental restraints, drains and wetlands, it's more difficult land to develop."

Wayne-Westland lays claim to about eight square miles in Canton; Van Buren about three and a half. Most of the land in Van Buren is agricultural, or zoned for large lots.

Unhappy homeowners

Homeowners in the Greenbrook Village subdivision south of Palmer and east of Canton Center petitioned unsuccessfully to be annexed to the Plymouth-Canton district several years ago. They appealed the intermediate school district's decision at the state level, and lost again.

Requests from families outside the district wanting to enroll their children in Plymouth-Canton schools haven't subsided.

"We get about 50 calls a year, some from Van Buren, but mostly from Wayne-Westland," said Murdoch. "People are willing to pay tuition. But we don't allow that; we never have."

"People want to come into this district, especially around the south part of our district around Bentley Elementary," said Superintendent Charles Little. "There's a handful of people who moved into new homes and thought they were in the Bentley attendance area, when they actually were in Wayne-Westland. We try to be as fair as possible with everyone. Unfortunately, we can't accommodate everyone."

Massachusetts natives Laurie and Alain Richard, new residents of Parkview Estates, are among the Canton families who mistakenly thought their children would attend Plymouth-Canton schools.

"The developer and Realtor both told us we were in the Plymouth-Canton district," said Laurie Richard, mother of two young sons. Richard said she made three trips to Canton before moving, spending more time investigating the schools than new homes.

"The secretary at Bentley asked me what street we were on, and told us Bentley was the school my 8-year-old would go to, only to find out she was wrong." Richard said she cried while breaking the news to her son, having visited neighboring Wayne-Westland schools. "I would have moved to Westland if I wanted my son to go to an elementary on a major highway (Michigan Avenue) or schools with bullet holes in the doors," she said.

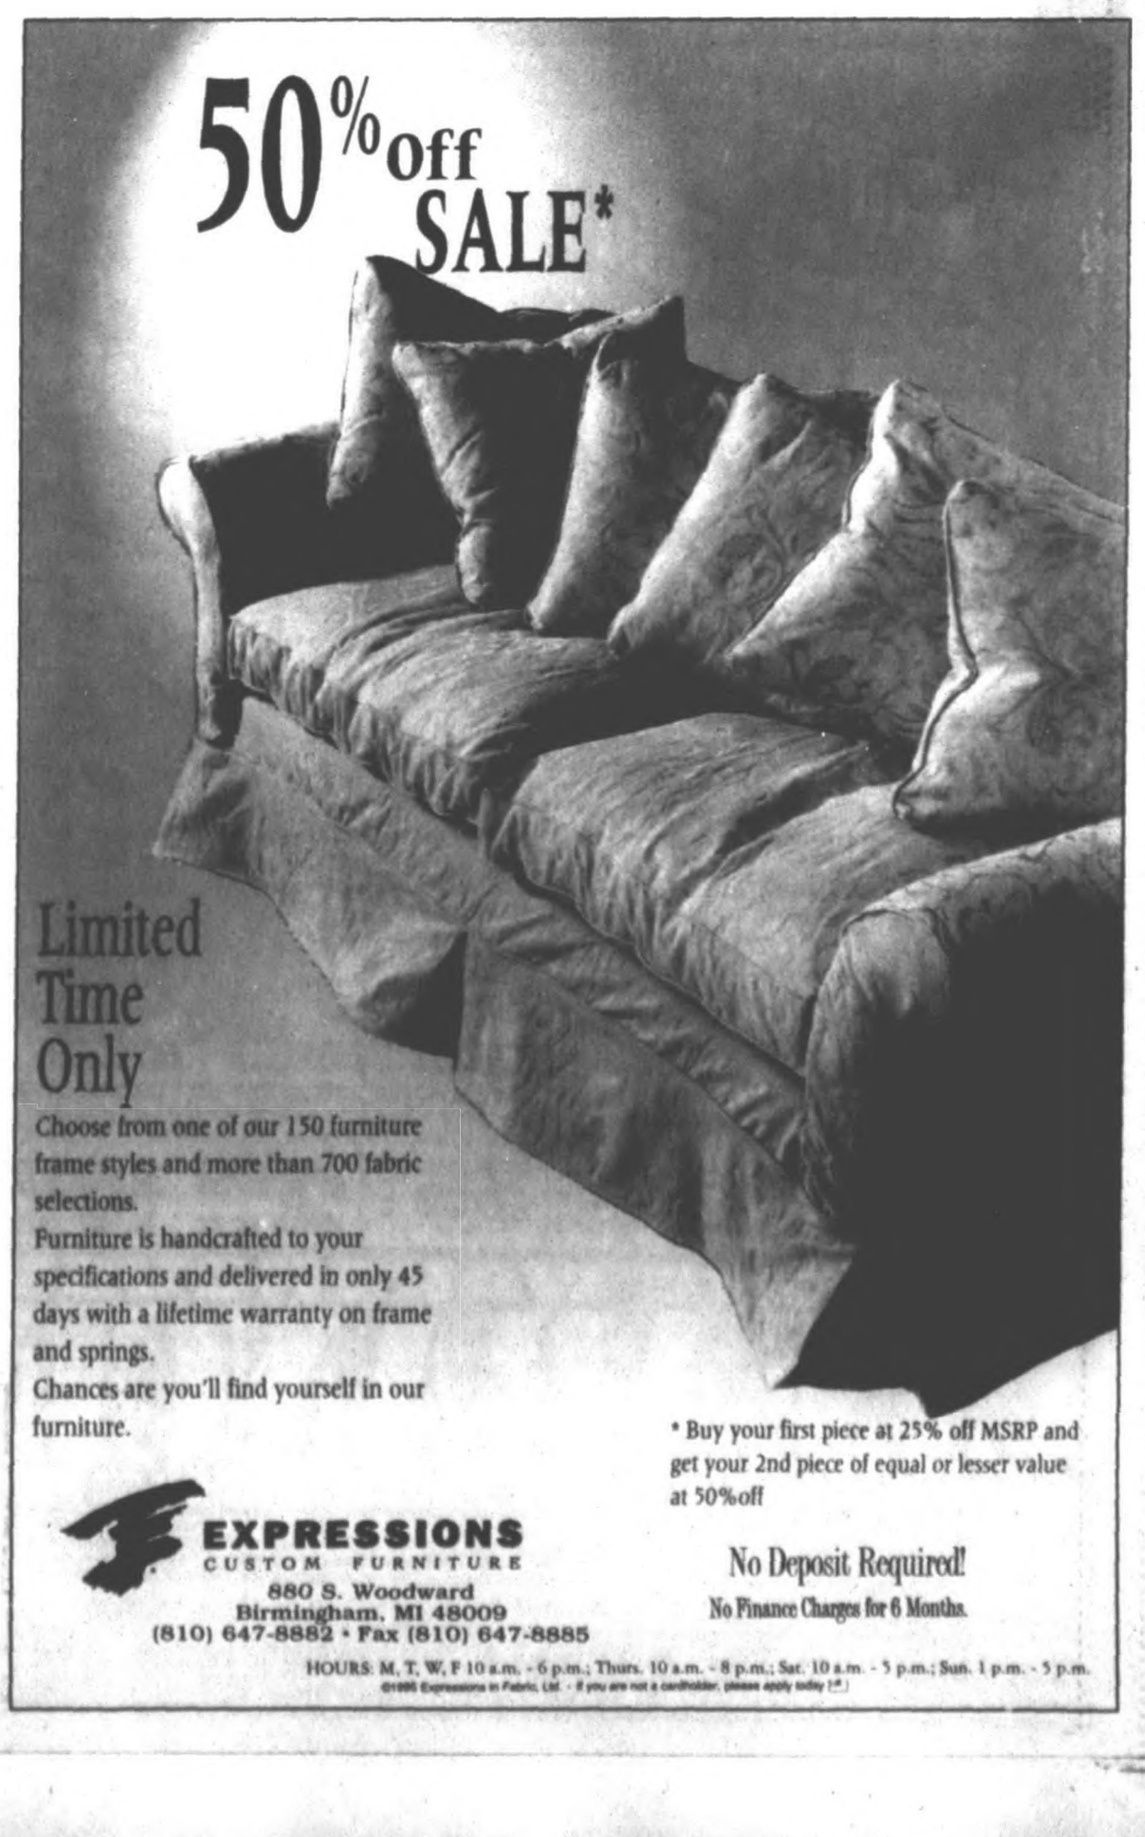

"It all worked out fine in the long run," Richard said. "Marc is enrolled at St. Damian's, and we're happy."

Better times for district

Gregory Baracy, Wayne-Westland assistant superintendent for general administration, says things are looking up since voters recently passed two millages and a new superintendent was hired.

"We've turned the corner," Baracy said. "Great things are happening in our district. We aren't out of the woods, but we're on the rebound."

Jack Hosmer is director of business affairs with Van Buren Public Schools, a district with just 6,200 students and nine school buildings. He says his district also fights a public relations battle.

jects the people whose company he so enjoyed.

Throughout his life, he gave of his time and efforts. He was a eucharistic minister and former president of the Parish Council to Our Lady of Good Counsel, a longtime Kiwanian, and most recently was a member and Advocate of the Victor J. Renaud Council of the Knights of Columbus.

Also, he served as a representative to the State Bar Assembly, arbiter in the American Arbitration Association, and former president of the University of Detroit Law School Alumni.

He was a bridge player who nearly obtained life master status.

He was dedicated to his family, establishing what can only be described as an individually special relationship with each of his eight children, and more recently, with each of his eight grandchildren. Joseph's most special relationship, however, was with Beatrice — his wife of 42 years.

He is survived by his wife, Beatrice, of Plymouth; children, Bryan of Kentucky, Timothy of Ohio, Terese of Plymouth, Kathryn of Alaska, Paul of Plymouth, Anne Andrews of Illinois, Jeanne of Canton, Jeffrey of Georgia; eight grandchildren; two sisters and one brother.

Local arrangements were made by Schrader-Howell Funeral Home in Plymouth.

Rinks

schedule a time to seek final site plan approval for the project from the township Planning Commission.

The rinks would be located on the facility's lower level, with a glassed-in viewing lounge on the upper level separating the two rinks, according to the TNT proposal.

Among other proposed features:

- Raised seating would be provided around each ice surface.
- There would be several locker rooms, including two team locker rooms that could be entered from the parking lot to avoid the mix of spectators, skaters and their equipment.
- The facility would use natural topographic features, as the building would be built into a hillside. "The pond and adjacent wetlands will create a focal point, providing natural views and a pleasant picnic-recreation area," according to TNT Systems impact analysis.
- A full-service pro shop and concession area with cafe are planned.

"It's good news for the hockey players and the skaters; I don't think it's good news for the city recreation department," said department Director Tom Willette.

Willette said that at least in the short term, a new rink wouldn't cut into the city's proceeds from hockey groups using the cultural center. "There's such a demand from the hockey associations," he said.

"But if they offer skating lessons or open skating, and I'm sure they will, I can see it taking something away from us," he said.

Willette said two new rinks — one that just opened in Farmington Hills and a three-ice surface arena planned in Ann Arbor — could also provide some competition.

Event

There will be strolling entertainment around the park from 6-9 p.m. Friday, featuring Buffalo Bob on Stilts and an organ monkey.

Main Stage entertainment continues with the Optimist Club Pet Show 9:30-11 a.m. The Detroit Edison Enviro-Magic Show is at 11 a.m., followed by the Polish Centennial Dancers at noon and the Famous Dancing Dinosaurs at 1 p.m.

Tom Hodgson performs "Sounds of the Earth" at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. and ventriloquist Tom Smith performs at 3 p.m.

Commission

"I'll continue to talk to three or four businesses a week, try to see how businesses downtown feel about how the city is doing things for them and with them. It will be a very low-key campaign," Greene said.

While she and other candidates say they haven't been contacted yet about public candidate forums, Greene said she favors such forums "so new candidates have some sort of venue, have an opportunity for people to get to know them better."

Koch said, "I've already been getting the word out, I spoke at Kiwanis, I've spoken to a lot of members of the Lions Club. I hope to have a brochure ready this weekend."

'Hollywood Nights' benefits hospital

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

The star-studded cast is missing a bit of its glitter with the death of WJR radio personality J.P. McCarthy, but his commitment will be remembered when the curtain goes up on Project SMILE's "Hollywood Nights III" in October.

McCarthy, who died unexpectedly Aug. 16 at the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York where he was being treated for myelodysplastic syndrome, was to have been a special guest at the third annual fund raiser for St. Mary Hospital.

"We share this loss with his family and with the whole community," said Sister Mary Modesta, president and chief executive officer of St. Mary Hospital. "And we are planning to honor him at 'Hollywood Nights' as a tribute to his commitment to St. Mary Hospital."

In its third year, "Hollywood Nights" has brought in more than $150,000 and has become the single largest fund raiser for the hospital. The money goes to the hospital's Miracle of Life Center to be completed in March 1997 and has helped finance the recent Women's Health Day and the purchase of electronic pediatric scales, children's ventilators and specialized infant warmers in the emergency room.

"Hollywood Nights III" will take over Laurel Manor on Thursday, Oct. 19. The evening, billed as the "premiere social event of the season" by organizers, will start with cocktails at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Star-studded lineup

Returning for a third year as the the celebrity hostess is Marilyn Turner. Also back for a third time is Warner Bros. recording artist Alexander Zonjic and his award-winning jazz ensemble. They will share the stage with Johnny Trudell and his All Star Orchestra and vocalists Sandra Mandella and Sam Locricchio.

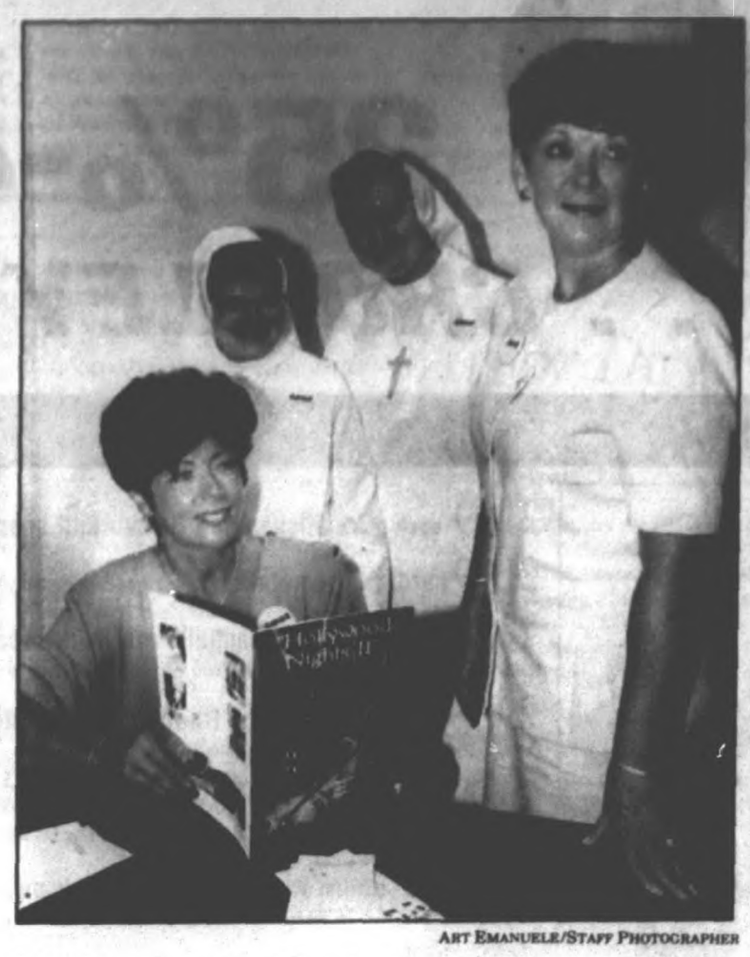

To accommodate the expanded musical entertainment, the banquet center is being transformed into a concert hall, so that every party-goer will have a clear view of the stage, said Carol Cassie, chairwoman of Project SMILE and founder of "Hollywood Nights."

There also be a dinner fashion show by Jacobson's Laurel Park store with models moving among eight stations, "so everyone will get a bird's-eye view," said Cassie.

Back by demand is the popular Star Look Alikes that saw the likes of Cary Grant, Marilyn Monroe and Hillary Clinton turn out for the first "Hollywood Nights" in 1992.

If there is one word that is key to this year's "Hollywood Nights" planning it has to be "community." The emphasis is on St. Mary as Livonia's "full service community hospital." A "community committee" was established to help with the benefit and extra effort has been made to keep ticket prices affordable so "the whole community" can attend.

"We want it to be affordable not to just a select group but the whole community," Cassie said. "When we started 'Hollywood Nights,' the idea was to keep it affordable for the community. This is for the community to enjoy."

Tickets, on sale now on a first-come first-served basis, are priced at $75 per person or $750 per table of 10 for VIP tickets (special seating, dinner, show and afterglow) and $35 per person or $350 per table of 10 for guest tickets (guest seating, dinner and the show).

"This is quality entertainment at an affordable price, quality entertainment that you would have to go to Detroit to appreciate," said Sharon Fletcher, director of volunteers and fund raising.

Organizers also have enlisted the aid of the Felician Sisters in getting sponsors for the event. The sponsorships range from $10,000 for a benefactor to $2,499 for a Friend of Project SMILE, with special recognition provided in the evening's program and from the podium for the larger donations.

Plenty of excitement

And the additions have provided a lot of excitement for those involved.

"You better believe it's exciting," said Sister Mary Renetta, the hospital's executive vice president. "How can you not be excited being with Carol."

"The sisters have really enjoyed being a part of the whole event this year," Fletcher said. "And their excitement has been contagious. This has been a lot of fun for them. Carol has orchestrated the event to be something the community can be proud of.

" 'Hollywood Nights' has become such a fun thing that it's become something the community looks forward to."

Even Cassie, president of First Michigan Title, has found their excitement inspiring — "The selling they've been doing . . . they're really dynamic."

To help kick off the event, photographer Ron Reck of Ultimate Images in Livonia will display a collection of photographs from previous "Hollywood Nights" in the main corridor of the hospital. The display, opening later this month, while show visitors "how exciting it can be," Cassie said.

Reck also is donating his services to photograph physicians to be featured in the hospital's physicians directory that will be given out at the benefit and then distributed as resource material for the community.

"The reason he is doing this is because he supports what St. Mary is about and supports that we are a full service community hospital," said, Fletcher. "It's important that there is a real harmony between the community, the community committee and the internal hospital community, that we're all working for the success of Project SMILE."

People interested in ordering tickets for "Hollywood Nights III" can send a check, payable to St. Mary Hospital Foundation, to St. Mary Hospital Foundation — Project SMILE, 36475 Five Mile Road, Livonia 48154. Orders will be acknowledged in writing, with tickets mailed out at a later date, Cassie said.

Water use restrictions have been lifted

The mandatory odd/even outdoor water use restriction in effect for 123 metro Detroit communities served by the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department was lifted on Aug. 31. Residents may resume sprinkling, car washing and other outdoor water uses on an as-needed basis.

The restriction, in effect since June 19, was imposed as a preventive measure to avoid water distribution problems due to continued hot weather and below-average rainfall.

"We're happy to report that because of the cooperation of our customers in observing this restriction that we were able to get through the hottest summer months without service disruptions," said DWSD Director Stephen F. Gorden in a press release. "I'd like to thank everyone for complying with the odd/even schedule, and at the same time, adapting it to their lifestyles."

CC welcomes new principal

At the end of the 1995 school year, Catholic Central High School bid farewell to the Rev. Joseph J. Moffatt, the school's principal for the last six years.

CC has since welcomed its 16th principal, the Rev. Harold B. Gardner. A Basilian father, Gardner continues the tradition of the Basilian Order, leading CC since its founding in 1928.

Gardner has taught at CC before, so he is no stranger to the school.

"It is exciting to return and be a part of the CC family once again," Gardner said in a press release.

Before returning to CC, Gardner held a number of administrative positions, including the Office of Registrar at St. Michael's College, Toronto. Gardner also served as principal of The Aquinas Institute in Rochester, N.Y.

Gardner's experience is expected to help when the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools visits CC in March.

Gardner prepared Aquinas Institute for such a visit when he was principal there.

Catholic Central is a private, all-male college preparatory high school in Redford.

Arbor Day Foundation offers free trees

Ten free trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during September.

The trees are the American redbud, white pine, sugar maple, white flowering dogwood, pin oak, red maple, birch, silver maple, red oak and Colorado blue spruce.

"These trees were selected to provide benefits every season of the year: lovely spring flowers, cool summer shade, spectacular autumn colors, and winter berries and nesting sites for songbirds," said foundation President John Rosenow in a press release.

The 6- to 12-inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

'Subacute care' leads rehab trend

BY JILL HALPIN
STAFF WRITER

It comes as no surprise that rising health care costs are forcing the medical field to reassess management of patient care. High costs of treatment and space limitations are just some of the dilemmas facing hospitals today.

Yet a new type of comprehensive care focusing on the patient is emerging and at least one local business is taking the lead in bringing it to the public.

"Subacute care" first entered the medical scene in the early 1980s as an option for treating and rehabilitating severely debilitated patients, according to Marty Grabijas, a program director with University Health Care Center in Livonia. A "step-down" program for those requiring sustained medical care, subacute care offers a cost-effective solution for overcrowded hospitals, Grabijas said.

Rather than receiving care in a hospital, patients in need of extensive skilled care are transferred to a subacute care center, such as University Health Care Center, where they are rehabilitated by a interdisciplinary team of health care professionals.

"A prime candidate for subacute care is a person involved in an automobile accident, suffering a variety of injuries. These patients require long-term rehabilitation. We offer a rehabilitation program similar to a hospital-based, inpatient program. Yet our overhead is so much lower that we are able to keep a patient here a little longer," Grabijas said.

■ 'We used to say that the Zarb family was on a 'roll' — we were both in wheelchairs at the same time. We had a lot of help from others, which we greatly appreciated. But these simple things really made a significant difference in our recovery.'

With the cost of inpatient care rising, hospitals face pressure to discharge patients. Pre-set diagnostic codes mandate that hospitals follow strict discharge schedules, leaving little room for flexibility in individual cases, Grabijas said. "This is a true rehabilitation center in the sense that we are with the person from start to finish. We only keep them as long as they need to be here, but those decisions are not based on pre-set codes. we are not constrained by the same regulations as hospitals."

Dr. Jim Richardson, an attending physician at University Health Care Center believes that much of the success of the subacute care program is based on the flexibility that subacute care offers.

"We consider each case individually. We sit down with the patient and develop a discharge plan. If it is not working, we can adjust it, and if a patient is discharged and later feels that they were not ready, they are able to readmit in 30 days. This type of flexibility in treating people is necessary for success," Richardson said.

For Edward and Linda Zarb of Livonia, the flexibility of the program was only one of the features that helped put their family on the road to recovery. Linda, who suffers from rheumatoid arthritis and fibromyligia, a muscle condition causing chronic pain, was planning a September 1994 stay at the center while she recuperated from hip-replacement surgery.

Fall Festival

Time to show off streetscape

■ There were some anxious moments as August's dog days came to an end and the pavement on Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail still looked rough. But the contractors came through for the Fall Festival, Friday through Sunday in and around Kellogg Park.

This year's Fall Festival will give the Plymouth community an opportunity to show off its new face, the $3 million streetscape.

The Fall Festival is celebrating it's 40th year and annually brings many visitors to the Plymouth community. This year, planning has been hampered by the streetscape work, with last-minute decisions still to be made.

Those serving on the Fall Festival Board deserve credit for being able to pull the event together.

It looks like smooth sailing, with paving of Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street started last week.

There were some anxious moments as August's dog days came to an end and the pavement on Main Street and Ann Arbor Trail still looked rough. But the contractors came through for the Fall Festival, Friday through Sunday in and around Kellogg Park.

The community owes much to the hard work of Steve Guile, director of the Downtown Development Authority, who has been a fixture on the streets of downtown, walking around and sweating out the details, even on the hottest days of August.

Guile watched and worried about the bricks, pavement and general looks of the project. By keeping track everyday, he was able to call the hand of a contractor who was dragging his feet a bit.

The contractors have basically done a good job. There are bound to be problems with any project, even those that are well planned.

On a recent day, with temperatures in the 90s, Guile paused when asked about the project, wiped off his face and talked about having to track down a retired city worker who was the only one who knew about a particular problem area.

Merchants downtown also deserve recognition for not only making the project happen in the first place, but for the patience they have displayed with the torn up streets and sidewalks. There have been sales lost to the streetscape work.

But there was no bitterness in Kal Jabara, owner of Wild Wings at Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street. Jabara is new to the corner, moving from another location on Ann Arbor Trail.

Jabara said business was up in the new location and was happy about the streetscape work.

Like others, he knows that some temporary disruption will ensure a strong retailing community in downtown Plymouth. Negotiating rough streets for a summer has a payoff, a better looking, more inviting downtown.

Fall Festival will give Plymouth its first chance to show off for visitors from throughout southeast Michigan.

People make democracy work

Becoming involved in the democratic process isn't always a satisfying experience. You don't always accomplish your goal. By participating, however, people make our system of local, state and federal government better.

It's at the local level that the impact of one voice keeps politicians on notice that people can get things started and force change, even at times when their cause seems lost.

Those lost causes aren't always totally lost. Often groups form in opposition to a project, with the desire to totally stop it. They put together a grass-roots organization to accomplish that goal.

Group members attend public meetings, speak out, and at times file lawsuits. However, many times these groups run into what our government really is about, being a republic. It's not a pure democracy. That means the rights of individuals are maintained.

At public meetings in the suburbs, that concept is played out on an almost daily basis. There's that often-heard phrase: "Can't we vote on this and stop it?"

Mostly, the answer is yes and no. Yes, a public referendum can be conducted, but no, the project often can't be stopped. The reason is that the person or group putting together the project has rights too.

That has been evident in Plymouth Township, where residents have been fiercely opposed to the building of a new Temple Baptist Church on a 54-acre piece of property.

The church would have worship space for more than 2,000 members, a recreation building and an entertainment building, along with parking.

The initial project was rejected by the Plymouth Township Planning Commission. The church then filed suit against the township, claiming its right to freedom of religion was violated by the decision. The township has since offered a compromise plan, but the lawsuit continues.

But the scene doesn't always play out that way. In Livonia, the city was struggling with its ice rinks and swimming pools, which were losing money and draining the city's finances. The hockey association became alarmed because ice time is in demand and cannot be found at area rinks. After sharing that alarm with council and the city administration, a way was worked out to "privatize" one of the city's two arenas and lease it to the Livonia Hockey Association to operate.

In Canton Township, a group organized to fight proposed runway extensions at Willow Run Airport, which is to be expanded and turned into an international tradeport. The group hasn't met with success, but it has forced government to give the project a full airing, alerting people to potential problems.

In raising the raucous, residents accomplished several things:

- They participated in the process. There's a renewed interest in local politics thanks to Timbercrest.
- They focused the media spotlight on development problems faced by so many suburbanites, who feel deserted by their local government in the face of deep-pocket developers.
- They reminded the council that government serves the people, not the other way around.
- They showed government that some people will stand and fight for what they think is right — and not give up and just move to the outer limits of suburbia.

Democracy, the way we practice it, isn't always a pretty sight. But it's a system that serves us well. It's people standing up in public and voicing their concerns. They don't always win, but even when they lose, we're all winners because they have chosen to participate.

United Way plea

The Plymouth Community United Way has existed to serve the people of Plymouth for more than half a century. This fine organization, with the help of its residents, businesses, civic groups, industry and government, has funded human service agencies for people in the community since 1944.

As general chairperson for the 1995 United Way campaign, I would like to take this opportunity to acquaint you with some of this organization's benefits. The United Way is a local charitable organization. It coordinates human services and assistance to residents and workers in the Plymouth community who are in need.

Human service agencies must increasingly rely on the private sector for funding to enable them to continue providing the services that are so desperately needed in the community. Furthermore, the Plymouth community human service agencies are not funded by any other United Way for the help they provide to the people who live or work in Plymouth.

Our slogan for this year's campaign is "Make a Difference — Meet the Challenge." With your support and the support of others like yourself, the Plymouth Community United Way will be here for another century to "Make a Difference" to the people of Plymouth. I ask that you "Meet the Challenge" and consider a gift of any amount for this year's campaign.

A choice to die

Dr. Jack Kevorkian's 25th assisted suicide and the proliferation of legislative interest in assisted suicide in the state of Michigan point to a trend.

These actions underscore that many Americans have the disturbing impression that assisted suicide is the only answer to fears of losing control over one's death.

However, assisted dying is just one of many options available to people near the end of life.

Choice In Dying, a national nonprofit organization, is devoted to ensuring that dying persons are treated with dignity and respect: that their rights to appropriate palliative care, including adequate pain medications, are secure, and that they are able to participate fully in decisions about their medical treatment.

The "graying" of America and continual advancements in life-sustaining technologies will no doubt increase situations requiring end-of-life decisions to be made by families for patients who cannot speak for themselves. Anyone who would like information or counseling about end-of-life decision making, or one free copy of the Michigan medical advance directives (or, living wills and medical powers of attorney) can call 1-800-989-WILL (9455).

Deborah Kaufman, director public relations, Choice in Dying

Jobs are available

Republicans in Washington would like to reform welfare programs and put more people to work. Everybody likes a bandwagon and so some liberals have climbed aboard. Job programs continue to be important in reform considerations.

We can all hope that there will be legislation and programs put in place to help those who are not working and need our support. But no legislation nor jobs program is necessary for people wanting work in Detroit, Wayne County, or the state of Michigan. There are hundreds of jobs available in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. They were available last week, last month, last year. For several years businesses have been seeking help and have had considerable difficulty in filling positions.

Most of us support the programs operated by government agencies which help people out of work, people in need. It is difficult to accept, however, supporting those who are able bodied who refuse to work on their own behalf.

Neil Goodbred, Livonia

POINTS OF VIEW

Recorder's Court on trial

Abolish this unfair system

GUEST COLUMNIST

DEBORAH WHYMAN

Did you know that you can't vote for all of the judges who represent Wayne County? Did you know that only voters in the city of Detroit may vote for all of the judges who represent Wayne County?

Most suburban Wayne County residents are unaware that they are second-class citizens at the ballot box. In fact, the voters of suburban Wayne County are the only voters in the state of Michigan who cannot vote for all of the trial court judges who represent them. Only Wayne County has something known as Detroit Recorder's Court.

Detroit Recorder's Court was created to hear criminal cases arising from the City of Detroit. Only residents of Detroit may elect the 29 judges that sit on that court.

The Wayne County Circuit Court was established by the Michigan Constitution to hear both felony and major civil cases from all of Wayne County. All residents of the county of Wayne may vote for the 35 judges on the Circuit Court bench.

In 1981, the Detroit Recorder's Court and the Wayne County Circuit Court administratively merged. This merger gave Detroit Recorder's Court judges jurisdiction over all of Wayne County.

Recorder's Court judges are considered to be equal to Circuit Court judges in all aspects. This system allows the voters of the city of Detroit to elect all 64 "circuit level" judges.

Only Detroit residents may vote for the Detroit Recorder's Court judges and Circuit Court judges. If you live in any other Wayne County community, you may vote only for the 35 Circuit Court judges. This system amounts to a violation of the concept of "one man, one vote."

Assume that you are accused of a crime in the city of Livonia. If you are bound over for trial, you must stand before a Detroit Recorder's Court judge. Your case would be assigned to that court automatically. You could try to invoke a little-known policy that would allow you to have your case heard by a Circuit Court judge elected countywide. You could try that, but don't hold your breath. Most attorneys won't ask for the Circuit Court judge for fear of antagonizing the Recorder's Court judge.

The judges who sit on the Detroit Recorder's Court are not accountable to the victims of crime in Wayne County. If a murderer is given a very light sentence by a Recorder's Court judge, the family of the victim cannot vote against that judge in the next election unless that family lives in Detroit.

It is absolutely wrong that suburban Wayne County citizens must live under this system.

To right this wrong, I have introduced legislation to abolish Detroit Recorder's Court and combine it with Wayne County Circuit Court. House Bill 4952 would take all Recorder's Court judges and force them to run for office as every other circuit court judge in Michigan does, countywide.

This legislation will allow for "one man, one vote" for all voters in Wayne County.

Opponents of HB 4952 claim that making Detroit Recorder's Court judges run countywide is unfair to the city of Detroit. They should find some other argument that doesn't rely upon the concept of fairness.

The voters of suburban Wayne County have endured more than a decade of unfair treatment in judicial elections. What opponents of HB 4952 really want is continued preferential treatment for the city of Detroit.

Suburban Wayne County residents need to call their state senators and representatives today and urge a "yes" vote on this legislation and end unfair judicial elections in Wayne County.

Deborah Whyman is a state representative who represents Canton Township in the Michigan Legislature. She is currently serving her second two-year term.

The court is efficient, just

GUEST COLUMNIST

KAREN FORT HOOD

The Detroit Recorder's Court is under attack and in danger of being abolished if House Bill 4952, introduced by Deborah Whyman of Canton Township, passes.

The bill, which will be before the House Judiciary Committee this month, will destroy a Michigan institution and diversity in Wayne County. The court was established in 1857, just two decades after Michigan joined the union.

Through deliberate distortion of the facts our court has been unjustly maligned and criticized as unproductive and inefficient in the press and state Legislature.

It also seems that many critics of the court like to focus on one or two cases out of the hundreds of thousands where they may not have approved of a decision of a particular judge or a particular jury.

Recorder's Court handles thousands of criminal cases a year, fairly and efficiently. In 1989 the National Center for State Courts awarded the Court and ranked Recorder's Court as one of the three best courts in the country.

By contrast in 1986, the Wayne County Circuit Court was regarded as one of the slowest courts in the country. It suffered a five-year backlog on its civil docket. As a result, the Michigan Supreme Court merged the criminal dockets of the two courts so that Circuit Court could concentrate on its civil docket. With the assistance of the Recorder's Court, the Circuit Court time to trial has been reduced from 5 years to approximately 2.25 years.

Ms. Whyman cites disenfranchisement of out-county residents as the justification for abolishing Recorder's Court. But that is a non-issue since all over this state, cases are heard by visiting judges who were elected in other counties. Also, Court of Appeals judges are elected from one of five districts, yet hear cases from throughout the state. Clearly, the 1986 merger of the courts did not disenfranchise anybody since the victim and the defendant can demand a judge or jury of original jurisdiction.

Recorder's Court judges have also been unjustly criticized as being too lenient. However, the record indicates this is another deliberate distortion of the facts and a non-issue. In trials involving capital cases presided over by Recorder's Court judges, the conviction rate is 74.5 percent as compared to 71.6 percent found guilty in Circuit Court. On non-assaultive crimes, the rate of defendants sentenced to prison is 7.68 percent for Recorder's Court judges and 3.06 percent for Circuit Court judges.

Also, both courts place approximately the same percentage of defendants on probation.

As the Detroit Free Press so aptly noted in its editorial column on July 4, 1995, House Bill 4952 is "more about city-bashing than justice . . . today Recorder's Court reflects Detroit's demographics with a preponderance of African-American judges, lawyers, defendants, jurors and victims."

In her haste to abolish Recorder's Court, Ms. Whyman has misinformed her colleagues and her constituents. Her failure to properly research the issue or to consider less divisive, more practical solutions will in the long run exacerbate this situation. Perhaps the more obvious solution would be for the Michigan Supreme Court to de-merge the criminal dockets and allow the two courts to operate as they did before 1986.

Nevertheless, it seems that a court with a distinguished history of almost 150 years should respectfully be given more thoughtful consideration than Recorder's Court has received. Moreover, it is unconscionable that the sponsors of House Bill 4952 did not sit down and discuss it with the very people affected.

Judge Karen Fort Hood was elected to the Recorder's Court bench in 1992. She is a former Wayne County assistant prosecuting attorney and a graduate of Detroit College of Law.

Immunization rate must improve

PHILIP POWER

When I was a little boy, my mother wouldn't let me go in the swimming pool from time to time during the summer. "There's a polio outbreak," she'd explain. And she'd show me a picture from the local paper with a sad looking, paralyzed child trapped in an iron lung.

I remember the day long ago when the doctor told me to chew the sugar cube with the pink liquid on it. And I recall how proud and grateful I felt earlier this summer when I attended the ceremony at the University of Michigan honoring Dr. Salk and the successful field trials for his vaccine against poliomyelitis.

So it was with feelings of shock and dismay that I heard the news that Michigan ranks last — dead last! — among all the states in the percentage of preschool kids who are immunized against preventable childhood diseases.

According to the study just released by the U.S. Center for Disease Control, Michigan's 61 percent immunization rate for 2-year-olds is dwarfed by the national average of 75 percent. (Highest score was Vermont at 88 percent, followed by Hawaii and Connecticut at 86.)

Not surprisingly, the biggest problem in Michigan is in Detroit, where only 50 percent of preschoolers have received their immunizations. This number is up substantially, however, from the measly 29 percent immunized according to the 1990 study, according to Cynthia Taueg, chief health officer for the city.

So how come so many parents ignore their overwhelming responsibilities to their own kids? The public health experts I talked to at U-M offered a variety of explanations:

- It takes no less than five visits to the clinic to have immunized properly a 2-year-old against measles, rubella, mumps, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, polio and hepatitis B. That's a hassle for any family, especially if both parents are working and don't have much insurance.
- A lot of parents put off immunizing their children, and they don't learn about the state law requiring immunization until their kid goes to school on the first day of kindergarten. Not surprisingly, the immunization percentage increases dramatically after age 5.
- There is a kind of Catch-22 at work here. Through past efforts at immunization, we have dramatically reduced — in some instances virtually eliminated — childhood diseases. An entire generation of protected parents has no idea how lethal these diseases can be and, hence, little recognition of how important it is to immunize their children.

Be this as it may, it's still hard for me to tolerate the idea that two out of five Michigan parents are so irresponsible — so lacking in family values — as to leave their preschool children unprotected against terrible disease.

There's a wider dimension to this issue as well. Immunization is one of those cases in which the welfare of society as a whole depends heavily on the willingness of individual members to act responsibly.

It's an idea in public health called "herd immunity." Essentially, it means that if a high enough percentage of the entire herd is immunized against a disease, that sickness cannot be transmitted through the total population. But if the herd immunity drops below a certain number, disease transmission increases dramatically.

The level of herd immunity required to protect society as a whole against measles, for instance, is nearly 90 percent. That's much higher than existing levels in many places in Michigan, which is why you keep hearing about periodic outbreaks of measles, especially in inner cities.

The herd immunity level required to interdict the transmission of polio, however, is much lower.

What a sad irony it would be if continued irresponsibility of individual parents would reduce Michigan's herd immunity level for polio to the point that I, in my turn, had to keep my son away from swimming pools in the summer, just the way my mother did for me.

Is A Rose Always A Rose?

There was a time when it was safe to say "A Rose Is A Rose Is A Rose". Today, we're faced with flowers of different petals.

The rose on the left is indeed a rose. The rose on the right is man-made - of plastic. See the difference?

However, husband Edward ended up taking her place in rehabilitation after suffering injuries from a work-related accident. Edward, an industrial mechanic, spent time in a local hospital recovering from multiple fractures before transferring to University Health Care Center.

Upon his recovery, Linda entered the center while recovering from the hip-replacement surgery and returned a few months later following knee replacements on both legs.

"You could say that we have had almost more experience with subacute care than we would have liked," laughed Linda. She believes that the quality care she and her husband received were important factors in both their physical and emotional recovery. "There are so many important things that the center does that helped us recover well. From meeting every two weeks with a representative from each department for a care planning session to the non-institutional setting . . . these are very important considerations when you are recovering over a long period of time," Linda said.

The welcoming atmosphere also made their illnesses and recoveries easier on the Zarbs' two daughters, Alicia and Elizabeth, who were able to ride their bikes to visit their parents.

"We used to say that the Zarb family was on a 'roll' — we were both in wheelchairs at the same time. We had a lot of help from others, which we greatly appreciated. But these simple things really made a significant difference in our recovery," Linda said.

Belle Isle Aquarium adds new fish

Saltwater fish have returned to the Bell Isle Aquarium.

For the first time in 11 years, coral reef fish are swimming in the only saltwater tank at the BIA.

There are palette surgeonfish, saddle anemonefish, pennant coralfish, Fiji damselfish, yellow tangs, emperor angelfish and queen angelfish.

Many of these fish will eventually find a home at the Detroit Zoo's Wildlife Interpretive Gallery.

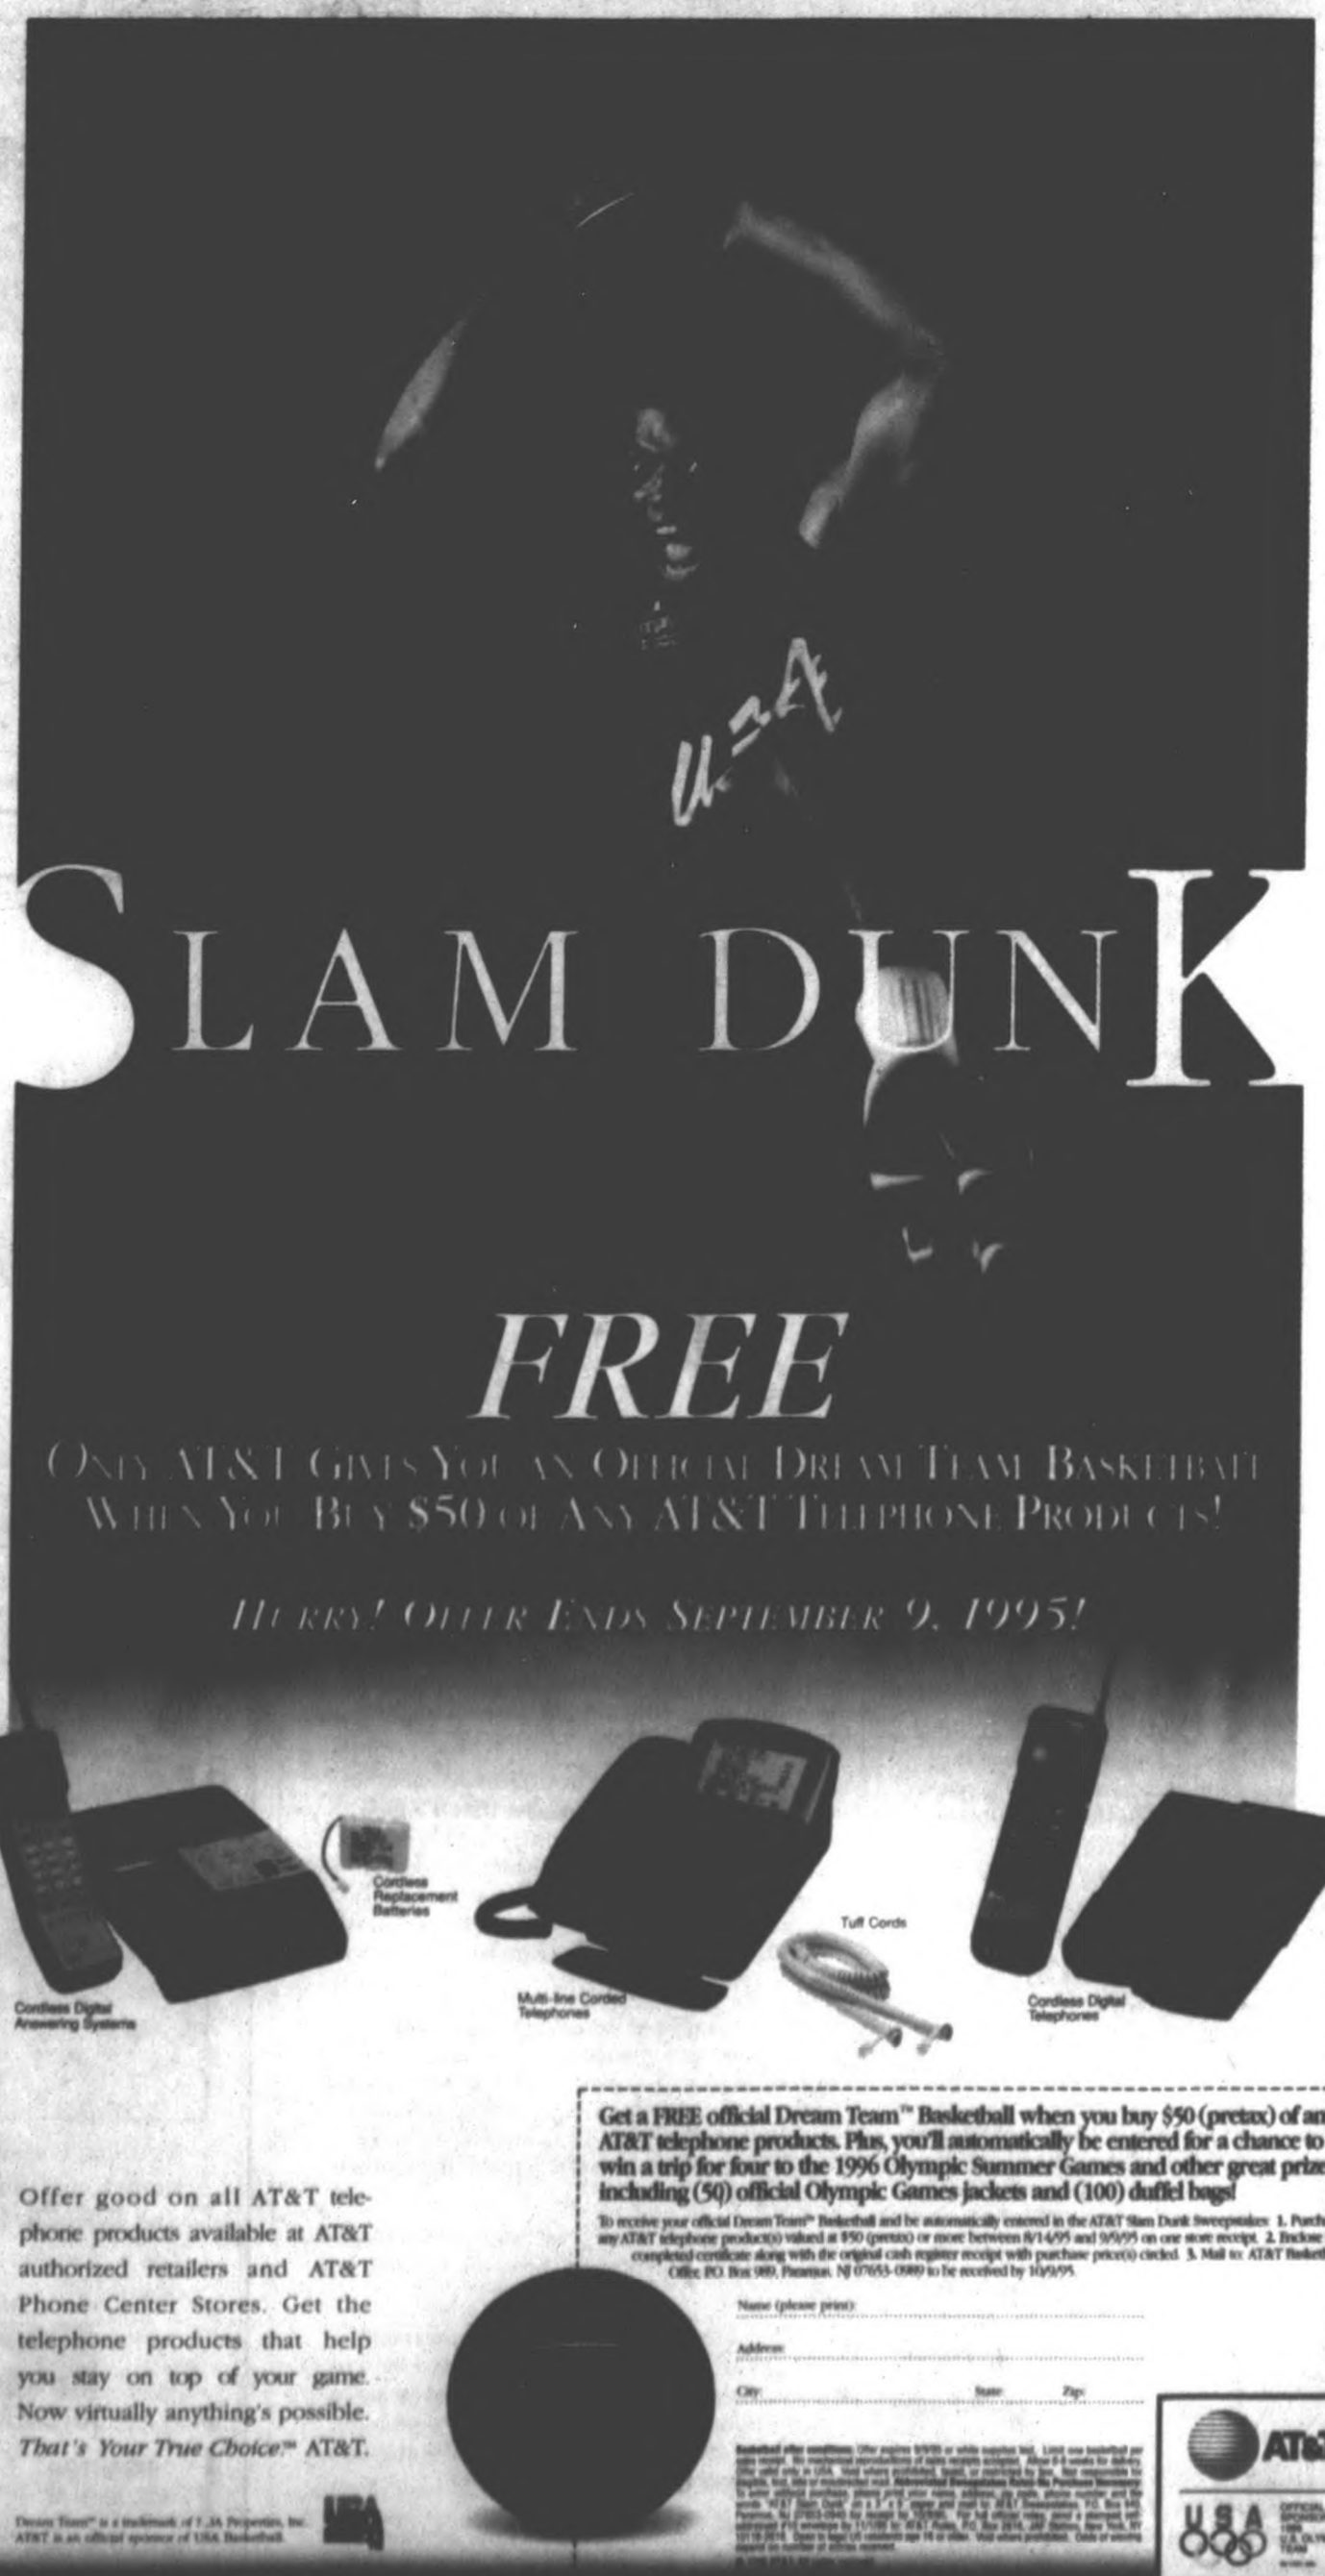

"There will be eight to 10 species on display in the WIG's coral reef aquarium," said Douglas Sweet, curator of fishes for the Detroit Zoological Institute, in a press release.

The WIG will feature a wildlife art gallery; an auditorium that will show films, a butterfly and hummingbird garden and a 2,000-gallon coral reef aquarium.

Belle Isle Aquarium is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Admission is $1.

The BIA, Belle Isle Zoo and Detroit Zoo are all part of the City of Detroit's Detroit Zoological Institute.

Lessons learned and little things

Life is full — full of all sorts of things. Big, momentous, and unmistakably important events like wars and hurricanes. And small, insignificant events like hangnails and slow drains.

And as long as there are hangnails and hurricanes, slow drains and wars, life will be full. You can't really have one sort of thing without the other. You can't have all big stuff and no little stuff, or vice versa.

I mean, if our days would be packed only with events of enormous consequence, our heads would surely fly off our shoulders. It'd be too much. Goodness, even the president of the United States balances his days with little things like Big Macs, golf and Socks the cat. And that's healthy. That's good.

The way I see it, since the little things of life don't demand that much thinking time, why not think about the big things while tending to the little things? I bet that the president, while he's eating a Big Mac or replacing a divot, doesn't think about buns and dirt clumps. I bet he thinks about big things, like balancing the budget and stuff like that.

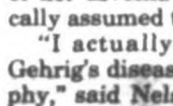

And occasionally, the little things of life go beyond just providing time for thinking. Occasionally, the little things provide training and practice for the big things, the truly momentous events of life, that lie ahead. And along the way, during the training, ease and grace and wisdom are learned. And so, the little things, the "practice" things, are valuable and have their place in

Muscle disease limits her mobility

■ When Margaret Nelson was told she had IBM, she knew her doctor wasn't referring to the corporation. Instead, he was talking about a degenerative muscle disorder, so rare that there are only nine such cases in the state.

By Christina Fuoco
Staff Writer

Margaret Nelson admits she has an overactive imagination. So when she was having problems walking up and down the stairs of her Livonia home, she automatically assumed the worst.

"I actually thought I had Lou Gehrig's disease or muscular dystrophy," said Nelson. "My imagination was running wild and I have a good imagination anyway."

She never dreamed that she'd have "something that nobody's ever heard of."

After seeing a host of doctors, Nelson was diagnosed with inclusion body myositis (IBM), a degenerative muscle disorder that causes progressive muscle weakness and disability.

Instead of letting the disease get the best of her emotionally, Nelson hit the books and learned all she could about IBM. Now, she's sharing her information with fellow IBM patients as the contact for the Michigan chapter of the Virginia-based Inclusion Body Myositis Association.

The nonprofit organization was started by Virginian Betty Curry, who was diagnosed with the little-known disease in 1992.

"I know that when I talked to her and joined that organization that was the best thing that ever happened to me," Nelson said. "I was way out in left field. I didn't know anything about it. She keeps you so informed. You read all kinds of letters (in the newsletter) — and the letters are interesting — from people who write about their own experiences and shortcuts they found to do different things."

Jim Jagdfeld/Staff Photographer

Helping hand: Margaret Nelson of Livonia never realized the importance of support groups until she was diagnosed with Inclusion Body Myositis, an inflammatory muscle disease that causes slow progressive muscle weakness mostly in the shoulders, hands, thighs and feet.

Important group

Jane Mohr, IBMA chapter coordinator, said groups like this are important.

"The purpose of the program is to let members with IBM know that they are not alone — that there are others in their state or even city who have IBM with whom they can connect," she said. "This really gives them the opportunity to give and receive support close to home."

Nelson's main concern as chapter contact is to let the public know about the disease, so those who are suffering can be correctly diagnosed. Right now there are only nine known cases of IBM in Michigan, she said.

"You can be sure that there are maybe 9,000 people at least who have it and don't know it and have been misdiagnosed. It's very often misdiagnosed," said Nelson, who's been married to Arthur for 45 years and is the mother of seven children.

Recent changes in law makes adoption searches easier

Recent changes in Michigan's adoption law have significantly affected the rights of adult adoptees and their birth parents.

The new legislation, which took effect Jan. 1, allows greater opportunities for adoptees to find out more information about their past and facilitate searches and reunions with former family members.

Birth families also have additional avenues to search and reunite with children they either voluntarily placed for adoption or had parental rights involuntarily terminated by a court.

"Everything is a little new right now and private agencies, probate courts and the Michigan Department of Social Services are all scurrying around to make the necessary changes to comply with the law," said Sharon Vichcales, Child and Family Services of Michigan Inc. administrator. "Unfortunately, few adult adoptees or their birth families know that the change was implemented January 1."

The Central Adoption Registry, administered by the Michigan Department of Social Services, is the main vehicle that facilitates the sharing of identifying adoption information. Birth parents and adult siblings can submit a statement to the registry, consenting to or denying the release of identifying information.

The statements will be forwarded to adoption agencies and courts upon request so they can determine whether or not identifying information may be released to an adult adoptee or an adult adoptee's direct descendant.

Adoptees can make their wishes known by filing the appropriate form with the placing agency or probate court that finalized their adoption. When a match occurs, the placement agency or court will notify the consenting adults.

The new law allows an adult adoptee, an adoptive parent of a minor adoptee, an adult child of a deceased adoptee or a former family member, defined as a birth parent, birth grandparent or an adult sibling, to petition the court where the adoption was finalized for the appointment of a confidential intermediary.

The court-appointed intermediary serves as a go-between to search and locate birth family members, siblings or adoptees when there are no denials of consents on file for the individual.

In addition, the new legislation:

- Allows adult adoptees whose parents' rights were terminated prior to May 28, 1945, to obtain identifying information about their birth families, if there are no consents on file.
- Establishes a registry for birth siblings.
- Expands the definition of non-identifying information (date, time and place of birth of the adoptee, medical, psychological and genetic information, age and sex of siblings of the adoptee, and racial, ethnic and religious background).

Identifying information includes the name of the child before placement in adoption, the name of each biological parent at the time of termination of parental rights, the most recent name and addresses of each biological parent and the names of biological siblings at the time of termination.

Vichcales, whose agency houses more adoption records than any other private agency in Michigan, said few funds have been allocated in the past to either publicize the opportunities adoptees have to locate information about their biological families or protection available to family members who don't want to be contacted. Likewise, no money has been appropriated to notify adult adoptees or birth families about new changes in the law.

A 1993 report by the Michigan Federation of Private Child and Family Agencies states that while courts, private agencies and DSS have been more aggressive in recent years about informing current clients of the possibility of future searches, "it is believed that many adoptees and biological parents from earlier years are not aware of the registry."

Child and Family Services has a special toll-free number — (800) 878-6587 — to answer questions about accessing adoption records. Adoptees and birth families wanting more information about the availability of adoption records may also call the agency or DSS county office that handled their adoptive placement.

Wouldn't you say all that's true? Wouldn't you say that's how it is?

Boy, I hope so. I really hope so.

Otherwise what happened here the other day you'll think was rather atrocious. And probably inappropriate. And probably politically incorrect and environmentally unsound and theologically improper and altogether weird and awful.

You see, my children, along with several of their friends, memorialized, eulogized, and laid to rest a dead squirrel, a mere rodent, the other day. And I didn't stop them. Mostly because I didn't even know it was happening; I was absorbed in some really important tasks inside the house — folding sheets, unglopping the ketchup cap, and fixing the toilet paper holder. So what I know of this incident, this squirrel burial, I know only secondhand.

The squirrel, so goes the report, met with a gruesome demise, this according to Evan and Amy, good friends of my children and the only eyewitnesses to the death itself.

The cause of the squirrel's death is believed to be that it just up and fell.

I continued to shudder and grimace as more of the story unfolded. The children, it seems, learned about rigor mortis that day. They didn't come up with the Latin term, but the description that tumbled from their lips led me to believe they had learned plenty enough about it. They also learned a little about the circle of life and how other creatures, flies for instance, keep the circle going. And they learned, or rather most of them, reviewed the concept of death being final.

Then, on their own, the children turned from scientists to mourners. They buried the squirrel in the woods by the creek. They selected this grave site because they figured the woods had probably been his favorite place to play. And then the pallbearers, actually the shovel bearers, went to the front and carefully scooped the wild creature up and then led the funeral procession from the sidewalk back to the creekside burial place.

A total of seven attended this funeral. A song was sung by the seven and words were spoken and the squirrel was laid to rest. A medium-sized rock was used for the marker and a couple of end-of-the-season flowers were placed nearby. And that was that.

Had the children done wrong? Were their priorities all mixed up?

Like I said, life is full. And little things definitely have their place in that fullness. And the little things that teach grace and wisdom in a gentle, gradual, innocent sort of way, well, they too must certainly have their place in this life.

with a related disease called polymyositis, which is characterized by weakness in the proximal limb and neck flexor muscles, as well as difficulty swallowing.

Everything she read about the disease didn't relate to her, so she sought a second opinion at the University of Michigan Hospital where she was diagnosed with IBM. Although IBM is much more severe than polymyositis, the diagnosis was somewhat relieving.

"All the things that other people with it have, I related exactly," she said. "It's amazing. This is so rare that there's only one per million that have it."

IBM is one of the three major subtypes of inflammatory myopathies (or inflammation of diseased muscles), which also includes polymyositis and dermatomyositis, a related disease characterized by a rash and difficulty in swallowing.

In IBM, inflammatory cells surround, invade and destroy normal muscle fibers, causing muscle weakness, according to the IBMA.

"The thing that you notice the most is not being able to get up from the couch at all," Nelson said. "I haven't been down in the basement in two years. I know if I go down there I'll say, 'What a mess.' "

Patients also experience difficulty walking, standing, and climbing stairs. The use of canes and wheelchairs becomes a necessity, and eventually, many victims become bedridden.

Nelson relies on a walker to get around her house. She keeps the telephone, magazines, and medication in the basket attached to her walker.

Onset can be gradual or sudden, with the disease's progression differing widely between individuals. It is typically diagnosed during middle adulthood and occurs more frequently in men than women, according to Dr. Leonard Calabrese of the Cleveland Foundation.

Some patients, like Curry, inherit the disease. Nelson can not find any history of IBM in her family, so it's believed that her case is sporadic.

No cure

There is no cure for IBM, polymyositis or dermatomyositis. In an article entitled "Inclusion Body Myositis" in "Rheumatic Disease Clinics of North America," Calabrese wrote that research has shown that IBM most likely results from a disorder in the immune system. Therefore, therapies including corticosteroid and non-steroidal drugs are recommended.

However, that so far most therapies have not been very successful in treating IBM. In the authors' opinion, the goal of therapy at this time should be to stabilize the disease and prevent its progression instead of attempting to improve patients' muscle strength.

"The first thing they do is they try and suppress your autoimmune system," said Nelson. "There's about 80 autoimmune disorders, including lupus and arthritis. Your immune system is in high gear. It's overactive and it attacks your muscles as if they were the enemy. I called it friendly fire."

She and other members of the IBMA share their treatment experiences. She said some of the members' doctors told them that there is no medication that can help. Others told her of the experimental treatments they participated in. Being able to make that kind of connection with fellow patients is what makes the group worthwhile, she said.

"I always heard about support groups, but honest to God, I never knew how important they were."

The Inclusion Body Myositis Assocation can be reached by writing to 1420 Huron Court, Harrisonburg, VA 22801, or by calling (540) 433-7686 or fax at (540) 432-0206.

Writer wants to please people and win their approval

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

I am a 20-year-old college student who recently discovered your column in the local paper. I would be very interested in seeing what my writing style says about me. I am right-handed and as a child my handwriting was horrible. I spent long hours each night practicing my cursive! I know my writing can still be a bit sloppy at times, but if I concentrate very hard, I can write almost perfectly! Please consider analyzing my writing in your column. I would greatly appreciate it. Thank you.

D.M.,
West Bloomfield

Possibly the most salient trait in this very legible, well-spaced handwriting is a strong need to get along amicably with others. She wants to please people and win their approval. If she doesn't, she tends to feel guilty.

In interpersonal relationships, she is somewhat reserved. Friendships need time to develop. Objectivity has developed at the expense of spontaneity. She practices discretion with regard to what and with whom she shares personal information.

The empathy here cannot be missed. Her caring heart often wants to help others. Some indecision, however, suggests she may be a tad unsure about actually doing it.

Her sphere of interest rests mainly in the present time. What is happening right now holds much appeal. She is traditionally oriented and does not wish to break her ties to the past.

Order and system are traits with which she has a good relationship. Her bailiwick is probably open for inspection most of the time. The hackneyed cliche, "A place for everything and everything in its place," is meaningful. I believe her appearance would also be neat and tidy.

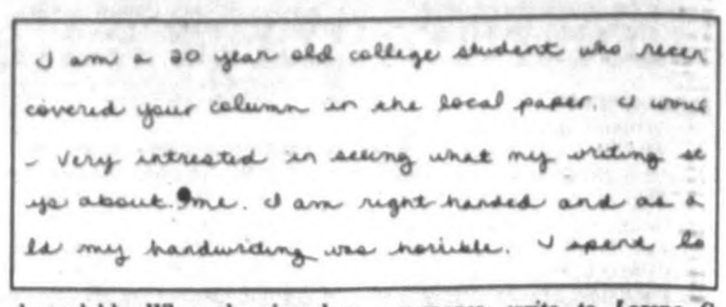

Seemingly, our writer was raised in a home where the female influence was strong and much was expected of her. Some emotional energy is still not finding release.

This young woman is sensitive enough to know how it feels to be hurt. I doubt if she would deliberately hurt another person.

This is a very conscientious person. Her thinking type is methodical and careful. She dislikes being rushed or having to meet pressure deadlines. Her first choice would probably be to undertake those involvements she can readily complete. In her work, she strives for perfection and can see and act on the essentials.

People who know her best perceive her as disciplined and dependable. When she gives her word, she follows through on her promises.

Some of life's finer things appeal to her taste. Hand dexterity and music are areas of enjoyment for her.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. And objective feedback is welcome.

ANNIVERSARIES

Jahn

Clarence and Dorthea Jahn recently celebrated their 66th wedding anniversary.

Fifty-three-year residents of Livonia, the couple exchanged vows on Aug. 10, 1929, in Napoleon, Ohio. They have two children, Gerald P. of Clarkston and Marianne Nelder of Northville; three grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Retired 32 years, he started the Livonia National Bank and built the Livonia Hardware at Five Mile and Farmington roads. Active in the Livonia Chamber of Commerce, he is a 50-year charter member of the Livonia Rotary.

Counts

Jeffrey and Catherine Counts of Livonia will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary Sept. 12.

The couple were married in Detroit on Sept. 12, 1970, at Sts. Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church. They moved to Bay City in 1973 and returned to the Detroit area in 1988.

They have two children, Christopher, 22, a 1995 graduate of Central Michigan University, and John, 17, a senior at Livonia Franklin High School.

To celebrate the event, the couple, with their English setter, Maggie, will tour the eastern Upper Peninsula.

He is the editor of the Plymouth Observer and former assistant metro editor at the Bay City Times. He also is a member of Trout Unlimited, the Western Wayne Conservation Club and the Plymouth Press Club.

She is a dental receptionist and a member of the Daughters of Penelope at Sts. Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church in Westland.

Randall

Leonard and June Randall will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary with a trip to New Orleans.

Residents of Livonia for more than 40 years, the couple exchanged vows on Oct. 23, 1945, in Croydon, England. The former June Parma, she was a war bride and came to the United States at the end of World War II.

The Randalls have two children — Paul of Cary, N.C., the former principle trumpet of the New Orleans Symphony and currently principle of the North Carolina Symphony, and Celia of Harper Woods, a former Miss Livonia and singer/actress in the metro Detroit area. They also have two grandchildren.

He is a semi-retired musician/entertainer. She is a former member of the state board of the Michigan PTA, former library commissioner and retired information coordinator's music indexer for several national and international music magazines.

The Randalls are avid readers and enjoy traveling, including yearly trips to the Leelanau Peninsula, North Carolina and the Eastern Music Festival in Greensboro, N.C.

Warner

Robert and Mildred Warner of Ocala, Fla., renewed their vows during a 50th wedding anniversary celebration July 15 at the Hawthorne Valley Country Club in Westland.

In attendance were the couple's maid of honor, Theresa Martin, and best man, Joseph Muelrath.

The Warners were married on July 14, 1945, at the Chapel of the Passionist Fathers Seminary in Detroit. During World War II, food allotment stamps were used and families had monthly allowances, so aunts of the bride pooled their stamps and went to Eastern Market shopping. They then cooked and served the marriage dinner, held in the home of the bride's parents.

The Warners' seven children, their husbands and wives, 18 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren were among friends and relatives who came to the celebration.

The Warners lived in Livonia, Chelsea and New Hudson before retiring to Ocala.

NEW EMERGENCY CENTER NOW OPEN

Family Emergencies.

No two emergencies are exactly alike. So all emergency care shouldn't be the same either.

That's why we designed and equipped our emergency department to handle everything from minor accidents to life-threatening injuries. If there are any questions about the seriousness of the emergency, a specially trained nurse is on hand to evaluate the situation and direct you to the appropriate level of treatment.

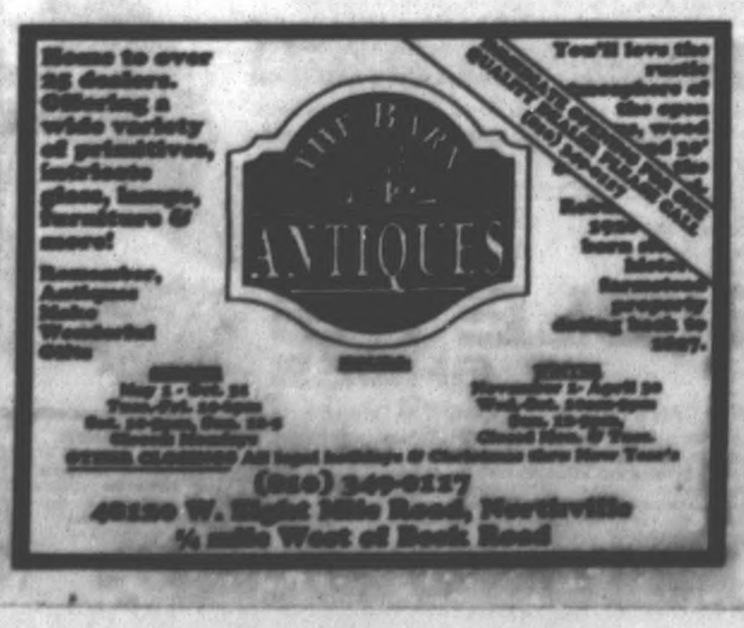

And whether you're a walk-in patient or require critical care, you'll receive the same quick and personalized medical attention from doctors who are specially trained in emergency medicine.

Our emergency care is backed by the resources of a full-service hospital, it's available 24 hours a day, every day, and it comes with the understanding that minor problems shouldn't result in major expenses . . . good reasons to go to St. Mary Hospital for sudden illness or injury. For more information call us at (313) 464-WELL.

Because when it comes to family emergencies, the specialized care we offer is no accident.

Donations sought for rummage sale

Community Hospice Services is accepting donations of clean usable items for a rummage-bake sale it will hold on Friday, Sept. 15.

The sale will take place in the parking lot of CHS's Westland office at the northwest corner of Warren and Venoy roads 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Proceeds will help fund the agency's children's bereavement programs.

In addition, CHS will launch its new line of holiday and all occasion greeting cards at the sale.

CHS is accepting donations of children's items, clothing, furniture, housewares, arts and crafts and books in good condition up until Sept. 12. Donated items are tax deductible for their fair market value, and CHS will supply a receipt for tax purposes.

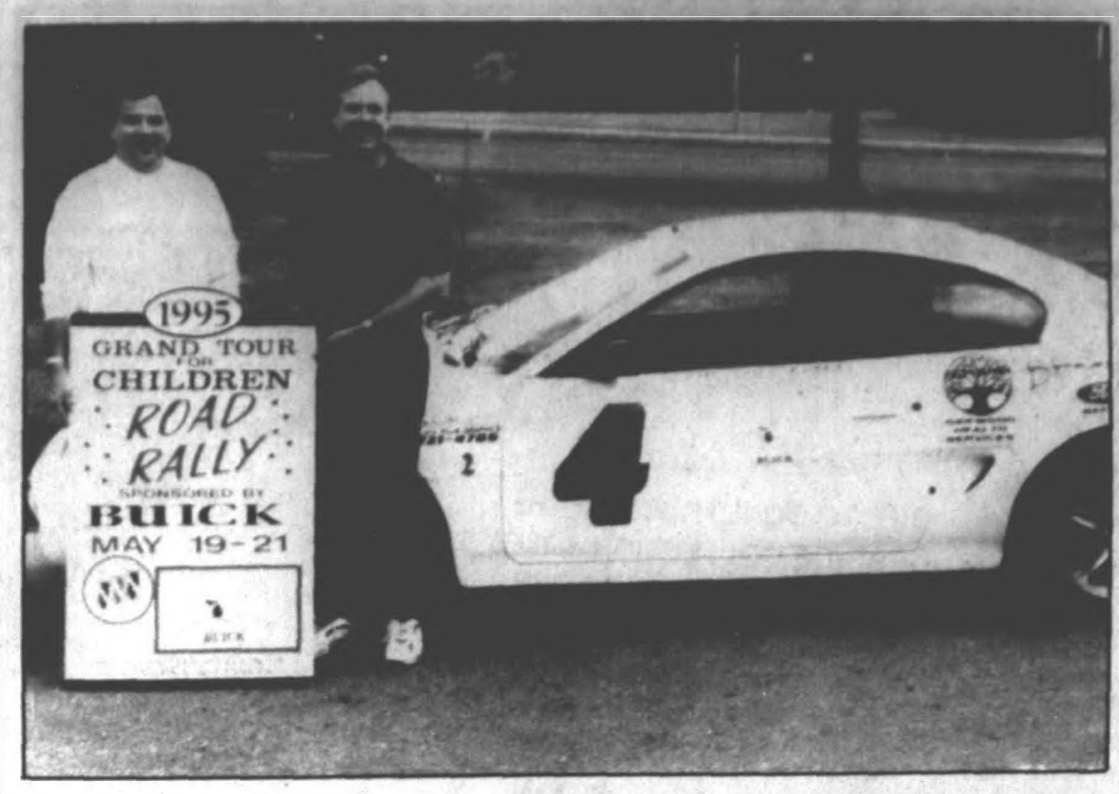

CHS has children's bereavement programs, including a twice yearly grief support series, a monthly grief support group called "Connections," and Camp Phoenix, a weekend camp experience for bereaved children.

"All of the children's bereavement services are offered free of charge to the general public and are not reimbursable by insurance companies, so we need to look to donations and fund-raisers, such as this rummage-bake sale to fund the program," said Maureen Butrico, CHS executive director.

A nonprofit organization, CHS provides services to incurably ill patients and their families in western Wayne, southern Oakland and eastern Washtenaw counties, with offices in Westland and Plymouth.

For more information, or to make a tax-deductible rummage sale contribution, call Mary Letters or Yvonne Strand at (313) 522-4244.

It took a team effort

DRIS will benefit from 'Walk with Art'

You can take a "Walk with Art" Saturday, Sept. 16, and help support services for the blind, disabled and disadvantaged.

The walk-athon will benefit the Detroit Radio Information Service, southeastern Mchigan's only radio reading service, and other Lions Club charities.

The day will begin at 9 a.m. by walking a leisurely 5K route that winds its way through the ninth annual Detroit Festival of the Arts site in Detroit's Cultural Center and New Center area.

Participants then will relax at a parking lot cookout and spend the day enjoying the area's largest multi-arts festival.

The walk-athon is open to walkers, wheelers and children in strollers (with parents), so organizers are urging people to bring the gang; groups are encouraged. Child and family registration fees are designed to make the walk-athon at family affair.

For "Walk with Art" registration materials, call Nadine Seely, DRIS volunteer coordinator, at (313) 577-4207, or the Lions at (313) 875-6464. Preregistration should be completed by Sept. 8.

Did you know . . .

When it comes to saying "I do," the number of single women is increasing.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the proportion of women ages 25-34 who have never been married nearly tripled between 1970 and 1983, from 9 percent in 1970 to 26 percent in 1993.

The bureau also found that the number of unmarried women in the childbearing years (ages 15-44) who had babies jumped by 50 percent between 1982 (30 out of every 1,000) and 1992 (45 out of every 1,000).

CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF CANTON NOTICE OF ENVIRONMENTAL DETERMINATION PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD HARRISON DRAIN CLEANING

Pursuant to an environmental review mandated by 43 FR 6030 (February 10, 1978), implementing E.O. 11988, the Charter Township of Canton has determined that the Harrison Drain, located south of US-12 and adjacent the Conrail railroad tracks beginning at Haggerty Road and extending east of Lotz Road (a total of approximately 3,000 feet), should be cleaned of debris in an area limited to the drain bed and adjacent bank, notwithstanding an area of wetland immediately west of I-275 and adjacent the drain.

The determination was made with due consideration of the following: (1) The project must be located in the drainage course and immediate bank area because that is the only practicable location to clean the drain in the project area to prevent the flooding of adjacent properties. The work will not be in a floodplain or wetland. (2) In determining to do the drain cleaning, the Engineer considered the impact on adjacent properties and the adjacent wetland. Project alternatives were considered including that of no action.. It was determined that without drain cleaning the adjacent properties would continue to experience flooding and such flooding would continue to worsen over time due to increasing blockage due to the growth of vegetation in the drain. Changing the slopes of adjacent properties or redirecting runoff to another drain are financially impracticable and would result in greater environmental impacts than removing the vegetation in the subject drain segment. (3) The drain cleaning will be coordinated with the Michigan Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) and the Wayne County Office of Public Services (owner of the drain). (4) The NFIP (National Flood Insurance Program) criteria are demonstrably inappropriate for the proposed action because the work will not take place in a floodplain. (5) Publication of this notice will be in the legal newspaper of Canton Township on the dates indicated below. (6) The public comment period will run August 31 to September 18, 1995. (7) To minimize the effect on the adjacent wetland, the Engineer will specify the construction equipment to be used, the time of year that construction takes place, how and where debris will be disposed of, soil erosion and sedimentation measures, and replacement of vegetation. (8) The drain cleaning will not affect natural or beneficial floodplain values because the work will not take place in a floodplain or wetland and steps will be taken to minimize affects on the adjacent wetland. (9) Other involved agencies are the DNR and the Wayne County Office of Public Service, Conrail, and the Dept. of HUD.

The public comment period is specified in paragraph (6). Written comments or requests for information should be directed to: Gerald Martin, Development Specialist, Resource Development Division, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton, Michigan 48188, (313-397-5417), or Susan Folsom, Engineering Services, (313-397-5404).

Women celebrate 75th anniversary of right to vote

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Liz Homer Giese of the Michigan Women's Historical Center & Hall of Fame remembers well the first time she voted in a presidential election. The year was 1964, and she voted for Lyndon B. Johnson.

"I think I took it for granted," she said. She hadn't seen much in her schoolbooks on women's voting or women's history.

Farmington Hills resident Sharon Hough remembers casting her first presidential ballot in 1968 for Hubert Humphrey. "It's been a long time," said Hough, an English as a second language teacher in the Avondale schools.

JULIE BROWN

Proclamation: Dr. Gladys Beckwith reads a proclamation from President Bill Clinton declaring Saturday, Aug. 26, Women's Equality Day. Beckwith is executive director of the Michigan Women's Historical Center & Hall of Fame.

"I think everyone takes voting rights for granted," she said. "Unfortunately, too many people fail to vote."

They were among those at a Saturday, Aug. 26, celebration of women's voting and other rights at the Michigan Women's Historical Center & Hall of Fame in Lansing. Hough's daughter, Beth, 15, a ninth-grader at North Farmington High School, was also there. She's already off to a good start in understanding American government and politics, having worked on the Michael Dukakis campaign in 1988 and the Bill Clinton campaign in 1992.

The day included a panel discussion of speakers from labor unions and related organizations, held in honor of the opening of an exhibit on "Women at Work," which will continue through January 1996. The exhibit is on loan from the Walter P. Reuther Library at Wayne State University, represented by Leslie Hough, Ph.D., director, Archives of Labor and Urban Affairs. Hough is the husband of Sharon Hough.

He credited two women at Wayne State with inspiring the exhibit. Longtime UAW leader Mildred Jeffrey, who served on the WSU Board of Governors, was one. "It was really Millie's idea," Hough said, also crediting Joann Condino, head of marketing and communications at WSU.

The state of Michigan didn't fund the celebration, said Giese, education director at the Women's Historical Center & Hall of Fame. "Here at the Hall of Fame we tried to pick up some of the slack," the Lansing resident said.

A booklet on women's suffrage was produced by the Michigan Political History Society and the Michigan Women's Studies Association. There's a tent at the State Fair, set up just as suffragists did in the early days at state and county fairs to encourage support for women's voting rights.

"It wasn't just a phenomenon of Grand Rapids and Detroit. It was a statewide thing," Giese said.

Giese said some states had commissions in operation for over a year, and were able to increase awareness of the 75th anniversary of ratification of the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The Michigan group has had several traveling exhibits on women's suffrage for use in state hospitality centers. There's one for schools, and an exhibit was done in cooperation with the League of Women Voters, which is also celebrating its 75th anniversary this year.

Each fall, women are inducted into the Hall of Fame in Lansing. This October's inductees will include the late Lucretia Grimes, a suffragist to be included among the historical honorees.

A book, "Michigan Women: First and Founders," vol. 2, is being published as well. Organizers are pushing for schools to do more on women's history, and are disappointed the State Board of Education hasn't included a standard requiring teaching of such history.

For more information, call the Michigan Women's Historical Center & Hall of Fame at (517) 372-3772.

Surviving homework requires some ground rules

(AP) — Homework happens.

It's assigned because it reinforces what's learned in school and establishes study habits, educators say. But it's also a source of frustration and dispute for students, parents and teachers.

Parents can teach by example, according to Florence Eddins, a child psychiatrist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"Sit nearby with some work of your own," Eddins said. "This way you give your child an idea of how to do homework."

Potential family conflicts over establishing workable homework routines can be avoided by making ground rules at the start and sticking to them, said Joan Hinshaw, school program coordinator at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga.

Hinshaw recommends setting the amount of time (most teachers will tell parents what's expected), helping the child create a calendar for incremental work on special projects, and asking to see the homework every day, including grading and comments from the teacher.

She also said that parents should decide how much they should become involved in homework assignments with their child. It's important to establish availability, monitor progress and look at the completed assignments.

Parents may be tempted to do the work themselves, but Hinshaw points out that will defeat one purpose of the work — to teach children to study independently. Parents shouldn't erase or discard the child's work, and if the work has obviously been done sloppily, ask the child to try again, she said.

By picking up a pencil and correcting spelling errors or tossing an assignment and redoing it with your child, you are sending the message that your child's work is not good enough," Hinshaw said.

And don't be too negative, or your child may become frustrated.

Eddins said parents must remember that what works for the adults won't necessarily work for the child.

A child's attention span is much shorter," she said. "You may need uninterrupted quiet to get work done, but your child may need short breaks."

Eddins stresses flexibility. Some children may work well with television or music in the background or need a play period before settling down to work. But if the parents find the distractions are becoming detrimental, they should discuss it with the child and try homework without the music for a week to see how it goes.

If your child has trouble establishing a good routine, help them set time limits for completion," Eddins said. Gradually, you and your child will find what works best."

Parents should acknowledge both successes and failures when the grades come in, said Eddins, adding: The best reward is that parents take notice and admire their child's efforts in school."

Costume designer helps set scene

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

On a trip to Istanbul this summer, Turkey's whirling dervishes inspired costume designer Bernadine Vida to create long flowing tunics for multimedia performances of the Detroit Dance Collective Sept. 16-17 at the Michigan Gallery.

"Encounters: A Journey Through Space and Time" integrates Vida's hotly colored silk charmeuse leotards and tunics with the video images of Bill Harder.

Even the bell-shaped sleeves of the outfits play a part, influencing the movement and choreography of Farmington Hills dancer Barbara Selinger and her modern dance troupe based at Oakland Community College in Royal Oak.

"Dance is about music and movement. As they move to the music, their fabric moves with them. In the beginning of modern dance, choreographers wanted you to be able to see the dancer's body. Now they're exploring sets, music and costumes," said Vida.

"I like to work with costume like its sculpture so that the dancers look like pieces of sculpture."

Vida is no stranger to the world of art. She's had her hand in the creation of costumes worn by performers in national Broadway tours, Elton John's "All Over the World" video, and last weekend's Rock and Roll Hall of Fame concert featuring Martha Reeves and the Vandellas and John Cougar Mellencamp in Cleveland.

Redford Township seems such an unlikely place to have bred a costume designer whose creations have graced a variety of stages from summer revivals of "Hello Dolly" at the Birmingham Theatre and "The All Night Strut" at the Gem Theatre in Detroit to the Actors'Alliance production of "Taming of the Shrew," and this summer's performance of "Libation Bearers"

Dances explore humanity

"Encounters: A Journey Through Space and Time" is an abstract work, choreographed by Barbara Selinger, artistic director of Detroit Dance Collective. It will be performed with members of the collective Sept. 16-17 at the Michigan Gallery in Detroit.

Selinger's modern dance pieces ranging from the humorous to the powerfully dramatic, explore the deepest realm of her imagination and voice her thoughts and feelings relevant to the human condition.

"Encounters" probes into the distant past, confronts the immediate present and explores the unknown of the outlying future.

The dance uses video projections edited in such a way that they become a partner in the performance. Videographer Bill Harder collaborated with Selinger in the creation of this work. Sound is based on the music of Stephan Micus and Eric Satie and designed by Selinger. Dancers include Selinger with members of Detroit Dance Collective, David Guzman, Karen Leighton and Bruce Rabey. Audiene members will have the opportunity to select what they see by where they choose to sit, stand or rove during the performance.

Funding for "Encounters" was made possible by a 1995 Creative Artist Grant Awarded to Selinger by the Arts Foundation of Michigan in Conjunction with the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs.

Selinger will also present two other pieces from her repertory:

"Telltale," a solo based on the mysterious collages of visual artist, Claudia St. Peter is performed by Selinger to Early Renaissance music. Throughout the piece, slides of St. Peter's collages are projected on a screen as Selinger dances in and out of her costume, a skirt that stands on its own.

"Journey," is a sensuous dance utlitizing a film projection of ocean waves and birds as a backdrop. It will be performed by the ensemble.

Quilts and dolls: Quilt expert Merry Silber (left) of Birmingham and doll artist Kathleen Bricker of Farmington pose by two examples of quilt and doll art to be featured in an upcoming benefit. Behind the women is a marriage quilt, circa 1840.

'Keep Me Ever Warm' embraces quilts

BY MARY KLEMIC
STAFF WRITER

A quilt can warm the heart as well as the body.

Quilt expert Merry*ok* Silber of Birmingham displayed one such example: a quilt of bright colors and cheerful images, featuring innocent drawings of rainbows and flowers and happy scenes neatly arranged within orderly borders. In the center of the piece is a large, pure white square with two blue figures around a red heart that resembles a gentle smile.

It's a quilt full of meaning; a quilt that touches the viewer without actually enfolding him or her in a soft embrace. It's a quilt made by youngsters and families who were a part of Kaleidoscope Kids (TM), a hospice program for terminally and chronically ill children sponsored by the Henry Ford Health System.

Like a quilt, a doll is close to the heart, comforts and cheers in special ways and can be a work of art. Doll artist Kathleen Bricker of Farmington showed one such example: "Mother and Child," a work featuring two dolls draped in quilt-like fabric, a small one nestled in the cloth, a larger one extending welcoming arms.

Silber and Bricker are curators of "Keep Me Ever Warm: A Kaleidoscope of Quilts and Dolls," an exhibit and sale to benefit Kaleidoscope Kids (TM). The quilt described above will be shown at the event and become a permanent part of program at Henry Ford Health System.

"What could be more wonderful than dolls and quilts for children?" said Silber, who has presented quilt exhibits around the area.

Designer

sponsored by the Athens Centre in Greece.

She currently is designing costumes for "Dial M for Murder" with Roddy McDowell opening at the Fisher Theater Sept. 29. But after all, she was voted "best dressed" at Redford Union High School.

One element remains the same in creating costumes whether it's for theater, dance or film collaboration. Vida meets with the conceptual people of the production to find out what the director or choreographer wants to say. Then she researches the subject in volved, ponders the psychology of the piece and even dreams about it.

For the collective's performance of "Encounters," Vida dyed white knits, crepes and chiffons in plum, hot pink, turquoise and royal blue because the colors were unavailable in these fabrics.

The colors depend on the music and choreography. Barbara likes to deal with going through tunnels and doors — mystery," said the 44-year-old Vida, whose mother taught her to sew and draft patterns.

The costumes are going to be treated with professional stage lighting so I wanted primary and very hot colors. Dance is the one medium that's allowed me the opportunity a painter is allowed alone in his studio."

The brick walls of the Michigan Gallery create an intimate setting. Selinger's concept for "Encounters" is to have the audience interact with the dancers, to stand and move between the two spaces where the dance will be performed if they so choose. Harder's wide angle and close-up shots of dancers in rehearsal adds an ethereal element to the audience experience as Selinger reveals her feelings about the human condition.

"The dancers will be dancing with dancers, themselves and others, on the screen," said Selinger, who founded the collective in 1980 with co-artistic director Paula Kramer.

"The costumes are always important to every dance. In "Encounters," costume is used as a symbol of the ritual. The dance is very sculptural itself and at one point costumes are hung on the wall to become one of the pieces of art in the gallery."

at the Henry Ford Village Retirement Community in Dearborn.

A fund-raising reception and quilt show preview Friday, Sept. 15 is the ninth annual Soiree of the Henry Ford Hospice Society.

On display

Sixty antique and contemporary quilts will be displayed at "Keep Me Ever Warm." Among them are works by famous quiltmakers; 25 quilts, all of which appeared on the cover of Quilter's Newsletter Magazine, now in its 25th year of publication; and winners of a Land's End ood Housekeeping contest. Also exhibited will be 36 fiber art dolls, including "The Figure in Cloth — A Celebration of the Doll," an invitational doll exhibit.

"We are most grateful to Bonnie Leman, editor-in-chief of Quilter's Newsletter Magazine, and to the generous makers of these selected cover quilts for graciously lending their works of art to this show."

The event will also feature Janet Myers' antique doll beds and quilts, demonstrations by the General Henry Dearborn Quilting Society and Stanley Dale of Florida, quilt sales, books, posters, tours of the facility, refreshments, and silent quilt auctions by area quilt guild members who made pieces especially for the benefit.

Myers and noted quilt historian Julie Silber will lecture. Merry Silber will give quilt appraisals and a walk-through of the quilt exhibit. Bricker will conduct a walk-through, "A Celebration of the Doll."

A raffle for an Irish chain quilt, circa 1850, donated by Merry Silber will take place at the close of "Keep Me Ever Warm" Sept. 20. Raffle tickets are $1 each, or six for $5. The quilt bears rows of colored squares that link to form a lively pattern.

Getting involved

Silber had just completed a show called "The Artist and the Quilt" when she was approached about "Keep Me Ever Warm."

"I thought 'I can never top this show. Maybe it's time to throw in the towel and play.' "

But "I couldn't say no. I just couldn't turn it down."

Everything fell into place as Silber gathered quilts from around the country for the event.

"I haven't had a single turndown," she said earlier.

"She's watching me — God wants this show."

Bricker called her about getting involved in the benefit. Two years ago in Farmington, Bricker and fellow artist Kath Lathers opened the Backdoor Gallery, which was devoted exclusively to non-traditional dolls.

"It's just been a wonderful partnership."

Classes will satisfy your appetite for art

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Japanese woodblock print ancient Egyptian art and parent and child pottery workshops are refreshing and intriguing appetizers in the standard fare of painting classes offered in Observerland this fall.

Arts council classes beginning Oct. 2 are structured for all ages from age 3 to senior citizens. Ancient Egyptian Art, where children learn to make their own hieroglyphics, build pyramids and wrap a mummy, is designed for ages 7-10.

Ancient Egyptian art is humanities and art history in a fun way. We like to have the kids participate in culture through costume and dance, art and a little bit of song," said Mary Mack, director of art education for the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

The new PCAC building has enabled the arts council to expand its education program from six art classes last year to nearly 80 art, drama, and music offerings this fall.

The acquisition of the building also means classes will be held during all four seasons instead of just three.

Young Architects & Builders ages 5-12 teaches students to design and build a small structure.

For the adults, there is pottery, painting, drawing, and sculpture studio. Sculptor Glen Allen, owner of the Cement Space gallery in Detroit, is heading up the design of the sculpture program.

Finally, there's even a class for the family. The Parent & Child Pottery Workshop for ages 4 and up provides a nurturing environment for parent and child to work and learn together to create works of pottery.

It's a wonderful class for parents to have a wonderful time with their kids. Sometimes people bring two kids," Mack said.

Registration for PCAC classes began Sept. 1. Classes range in price from $45 to $75 and are offered days, nights and Saturdays.

■ Beginning Sept. 11, Schoolcraft College's continuing education services revives the ancient art of Japanese woodblock prints with an introductory class taught by Yoriko Cronin, a long-time resident of Livonia now living in Farmington Hills.

Students learn to carve images on plywood Cronin supplies from Japan. Then they will apply water soluble ink such as watercolor to create images on Japanese paper by rubbing with a baren. Along the way Cronin will relay her knowledge of Japanese culture, history and language.

"Japanese woodblock has over 200 years of tradition. It was started for math production but it eventually became a form of art where people started creating with emotion in the work," said Cronin whose prints can be seen at the Cary Gallery in Rochester.

Cronin has a master of fine arts degree from Wayne State University. Many of her own abstract prints are based on the water and river that runs by her parents home in Japan. But students can choose their own subject matter.

"For Japanese woodblock you don't use a printing press but a baren to get impression from the wood you carve on," said Cronin who was born in Japan.

"If you have a very simple form or idea you can do it in a day, and you can do it at home once you learn to do it."

Also, on the college's palette of classes are Portrait Painting, Ceramics, Calligraphy, Floral Design, Creative Framing, Watercolor, Chinese Brush Painting, Marketing Your Arts and Crafts, Interior Design, and Portrait Photography.

Walk-in registration continues through Sept. 7 at Schoolcraft College. Classes cost from $48 for the Basics of Quilting to $126 for Japanese Woodblock.

■ Among the usual, but always stimulating, classes scheduled at the Visual Arts Association of Livonia this fall are sketching with Linda Koons; watercolor, Bill Bordon; marbling, Susan Argiroff; monotypes, Lily Dudgeon; painting glass ornaments, Marge Masek; and collage, and creative approach to watercolor with Farmington Hills artist Edee Joppich.

To register for classes, or for more information, call VAAI (Marge Masek), (313) 464-6772, Plymouth Community Arts Council at (313) 416-4ART, Schoolcraft College continuing education services, (313) 462-4400.

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

Jewish Ensemble Theatre opens its 1995-96 season with Norman Lessing's mystical comedy "36."

"The playwright suggests each of us needs to have faith in something. It has nothing to do with logic. We just need faith," said JET artistic director Evelyn Orbach who is directing the show.

In "36" three Chassids (very traditional ultra-Orthodox Jews), with very different personalities, journey from Brooklyn to Cincinnati searching for one of the 36 great, just men who are known to roam the earth.

■ PREVIEW

"God preserved the Earth because of these 36 righteous men," said Orbach: "When they find the guy who they believe is one of the 36, he turns out to be an electrician."

Broadway actor Sol Frieder portrays Nachman, the wise, old sage, and leader of the Chassidic trio. Robert Grossman, who most recently directed JET's production of "Golden Boy," is Mendel, hot-tempered, and bit of a curmudgeon. Daniel Kahn, who has appeared in four JET productions is Pitzik, unworldly, wide-eyed, trusting and very honest.

"It's fun," is how Orbach describes this play. Members in the cast agree.

"The play has a lot of contradictions and opposition — but it's all in good humor. I get the calling to search for one of the 36, and I bring along two sidekicks. It's a lot of fun. In the end, everyone is happy," said Frieder.

Grossman's character Mendel, could have been a veteran. He's had a rough time and is working hard to get a clearer vision of life.

"The story definitely parallels the Three Wise Men following the star," said Grossman. "But people need to know that this is a highly amusing play. There are a lot of laughs. It's quite whimsical. The specifics are meant to be taken light heartedly. The humor straddles Vaudeville and situation comedy."

For example, Kahn of Farmington Hills, who portays Pitzik, doesn't know what ping pong is. He doesn't know what a screwdriver is either.

"It is an interesting study of faith, Jewish culture and heritage," said Kahn. "It raises issues of faith, the Bible versus science, but there's a lot of good humor. I'm working with a terrific cast and director. Working with these people is a wonderful opportunity."

The cast also includes Robert Starko as Rabbi Manfred Dorfman, Jim Porterfield as Joe Walski and Cynthia Blaise as Mary.

Lessing has written over 300 TV dramas and a number of motion pictures, including "Bonanza."

Win tickets to two sneak previews

Get out your pens and paper — enter our reader write-in movie contests. Send or fax entries to: Keely Wygonik, Entertainment Editor, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Inc., 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150. To fax entries call, (313) 591-7279. Winners will be notified by phone.

■ Write and tell us about a relative who had a positive influence on your life (no names please), and share a funny story about that relative from the past to win two tickets to see "Unstrung Heroes" at the AMC Maple III Theatre in Bloomfield Hills 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 19. We will award tickets to the first 50 entries. Keep entries to 100 words or less. Deadline to enter is Monday, Sept. 11.

"Unstrung Heroes," opening at metro Detroit movie theaters on Friday, Sept. 22, is based on the memoirs of Franz Lidz. It is the story of Stephen (Nathan Watt), a young boy in New York during the 1960s who, in an effort to cope with an emotionally distant father (John Turturro) and his mother's (Andie MacDowell) illness, goes to live with his two wildy eccentric uncles (Michael Richards and Maury Chaykin). By moving into the funny, magical and sometimes painful world of this uncles, Stephen grows up and gains self-confidence.

■ Soccer players, coaches, and parents — write and tell us why your team needs a pick-me-up movie treat to win tickets to a 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 27 screening of "The Big Green" at the AMC Old Orchard Theatre in Farmington Hills. Two teams — first place and second place — will receive tickets for their team to the sneak preview of the film. The first prize team will also win additional prizes. Deadline to enter is Monday, Sept. 18.

"The Big Green," opening at metro Detroit movie theaters on Friday, Sept. 29 is about a soccer team. With nothing to do, it's no wonder that the handful of kids in British school teacher Anna Montgomery's class in Elma, Texas, have given up on life before their lives have begun.

Sports: Anna Montgomery uses soccer to encourage students in "The Big Green," Walt Disney Picture's comedy.

"Safe" (USA - 1995). 7, 9:30 p.m. Sept. 8-9; 4, 7 p.m. Sept. 10. "Newsweek" called it the "love-it-or-hate-it" movie of the Sundance Film Festival, the story of a upper-middle-class homemaker who begins to display strange symptoms of illness, though her doctors can find nothing wrong.

"Jupiter's Wife" (USA - 1995). 7 p.m. Sept. 11. A documentary look at Maggie Cogan, who is intelligent, articulate, and also homeless living in Central Park. The director does some detective work to discover the real story behind the fanciful life she describes in such detail.

■ MAGIC BAG THEATRE

"Bullet in the Head" (Hong Kong - 1990). 8 p.m. Sept. 7. Hong Kong action master John Woo calls this the favorite of all his films. It's easy to see why. "A Clockwork Orange" (USA - 1971). 8 p.m. Sept. 15. A newly struck print of Stanley Kubrick's futuristic tale about an oddly charismatic young thug (Malcolm McDowell) who has equal enthusiasm for violence as for the music of Beethoven. Happier days: Skinny Puppy keyboardist Dwayne Goettel, seated with striped pants, poses with American Recordings' executives soon after signing their October 1993 deal. He died Wednesday, Aug. 23, of a heroin overdose. Then-Skinny Puppy singer Ogre is standing third from left, while drummer cEVIN Key, the only remaining band member, is fifth from left.

Skinny Puppy keyboardist found dead of drug overdose

Dwayne Goettel, keyboardist of the industrial rock group Skinny Puppy, was found dead of an apparent heroin overdose Wednesday, Aug. 23, at his parents' home in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

The 31-year old Goettel and bandmate cEVIN Key had been in Canada since May 1994 working on the upcoming Skinny Puppy record tentatively titled "The Process." It will be the band's first album for American Recordings since signing with the label in October 1993. A spokeswoman for the label said the album, now in the mixing stage, is still scheduled for release in winter.

Skinny Puppy vocalist Ogre left the band several months ago due to "extreme internal band problems." In a statement released by American, Ogre related Goettel's death with the reality that sets in after kicking a drug problem.

"I am completely devastated with the loss and thoughts surrounding Dwayne at the time of his death. The loneliness and separation that comes when faced with the unbearable realization of addiction and the insurmountable pain from feeling after so much numbness can sometimes prove too much."

Ogre said he now wishes he could have stayed close with Goettel, who also performed in Hilt, The Tear Garden and the film score outfit Doubting Thomas.

"I left the band after internal problems eroded its core, and only wish I had been closer to this situation. I feel impotent now as Dwayne is gone. I had no chance to hold him and show him a different set of rules," said Ogre who went on to call him the "little-known genius behind the curtain of Skinny Puppy."

Ogre and Key formed Skinny Puppy in 1983 with Goettel joining the group three years later after a stint with the band Psyche. Skinny Puppy's first single "Dig It" (Nettwerk/Capitol) reached the top of the Rolling Stone/Rockpool charts. Known for their multi-media horror shows, Skinny Puppy went on to become an industrial/metal rock staple.

Gorgeous George — Edwyn Collins

Edwyn Collins' first U.S. release "Gorgeous George" (Bar None Records) could have been a wonderful album but his condescending statements about the current music scene cloud his talent.

The album kicks off with "The Campaign for Real Rock," an obvious slag on the European festival season. "Don't try so hard to be different/The cracks are beginning to show/You drift like a cloud/Through the festival crowd," he sings about the audience. He later goes on to give his opinion on the acts: "The overrated hit the stage/Overpaid and over here/And their idea of counter-culture's/Momma's charge account at Sears."

The acoustic "North of Heaven" begins as an ode to an estranged relationship then turns into a slam on Guns N' Roses (not to say that it's not well deserved): "Some mother's talking about Guns N' Roses/As if I give a . . . /At best I think they suck/I'm too preoccupied with my memories/Not nonentities."

The words "Sold" "Out of This World" lay behind words to four of his songs. Doesn't submitting a song ("A Girl Like You") to a major motion picture soundtrack ("Empire Records") fall in that category? As for "repackaged, sold and sanitized," the single "A Girl Like You" sounds remarkably like a hybrid of Peter Murphy and David Bowie.

Many of the songs on "Gorgeous George" have potential ("Make Me Feel Again" and "If You Could Love Me") but they don't get a chance to shine amongst his complaints.

Edwyn Collins plays Industry, 15 S. Saginaw, Pontiac, on Wednesday, Sept. 13. For more information, call (810) 334-1999.

Opposite Day pokes fun at Texans

STAFF WRITER

Techno pop artist Kristi, who performs under the name Opposite Day, always wanted to make a career of music, and every day she's getting closer.

The University of Michigan graduate recently signed a demo deal with RCA Records, home to fellow Michiganders The Verve Pipe and Robert Bradley, and national acts such as Wanderlust and Hum.

"They're basically paying for me to do a new version of 'Billy Ray' and two other songs," she explained about her deal. After that, RCA will decide if they want to back the recording of a full-length CD.

The first version off her self-titled, self-produced debut CD didn't do too poorly. "Billy Ray" was a top request at WHYT (96.3 "The Planet") in the spring and is still spun at dance clubs like Club X and Lipstick's. The RCA artist and repertoire's knowledge of "Billy Ray" is what prompted Kristi to sign a deal with them.

"He was talking of 'Billy Ray,' and it was really cool. He caught this hidden thing. He's like, 'You're sitting here telling this story and everything is exactly the opposite of what you mean. You really hate it and think it's disgusting. It's Opposite Day.' I thought it was cool that he picked up on that," she said.

In the song, the Texas native pans Southern men with lines like "I love your boots/ and I love your truck/ and I love your cowboy hat/ and that Texas-shaped belt buckle/ I love when you smell like sweat, cow chips and hay/ so manly/ oh Billy Ray."

"I grew up in Texas, which is why I'm allowed to do things like 'Billy Ray,' " the frail, sandy-blonde haired musician said.

"It's a joke. It's basically just like making fun of this prototypical Southern man. . . . It's one of the few things left that you can make fun of still and still be correct. At the same time, it's like an ode to the Southern man."

On Opposite Day's debut album, Kristi shows her knack for writing hook-laden lyrics. Had she not signed a demo deal with RCA, "Sugar Assault" would have been the second single apparent. She sings "I must be such a freak/ I can swear at you in ancient Greek/ Or tell you all to die in cursive letters with a heart over the I" over a bed of staccato keyboard blips and pounding drum machines.

■ 'I have a couple of record companies talking to me. The upshot of it all is within the next few months I may be able to start working on a real album, as in like record company funded, instead of me taking the time and energy to do a second run of CD with my own money.'

Kristi
Opposite Day

Throughout the rest of the album, Kristi's little-girl voice takes the listener on a techno pop journey with "Cinderella at the disco ball" ("Starry Eyes"), an odd-paired couple ("Mr. Silence"), and through an oceanside vacation ("Beach Umbrella"). On "Don't Talk to Strangers" Kristi dabbles in rap while singing "Boys go to Jupiter/ Get more stupider/ Girls go to Mars/ To get more candy bars/ Then they go to Venus/ I won't say why but/ Everybody finds their own place in the sky."

Techno pop is a relatively new avenue for Kristi to follow. A classical music fan most of her life, Kristi entered the University of Michigan in 1991 to study oboe.

"Until college I really thought it was just classical all the way. Then in college it just started shifting. It became more interesting to do the pop songwriting as opposed to the classical composing." She cites among her influences Erasure, Depeche Mode, New Order, St. Etienne, Opus 3 and Kristy Thirsk of Delerium and the Rose Chronicles.

"I've been writing songs since I was 5, but I never made the connection between the keyboard and song. I was never really clued into what techno dance music was and what it could do until college."

Ironically it was her oboe professor who helped her get her music heard.

"My oboe professor had a kid who went to school with the daughter of one of the engineers at WHYT. He said, 'I can give this to (my son) and he can give it to his friend at school.' I thought, 'That's cool. If that works that'll be a great story to tell people.' He did and a few days later I got this call from the station and he said he was interested in playing my song on the 'Industrial Revolution,' " Kristi said.

The song took on momentum of its own and was soon added to regular rotation. She wasn't prepared for that.

"I kind of wish they had called me three weeks before and said, 'We're thinking about playing your song more.' It was out of the blue. It happened and I thought, 'Wait. I'm not prepared. I don't have the CD in stores,' " she said with a giggle.

After selling more than 400 copies of her album through mail orders, Kristi put off printing a second run of CDs and instead put the remainder of her CDs in stores like Harmony House and Tower Records. They sold out quickly.

When the RCA deal came along, she nixed releasing a second single and is instead concentrating on her current projects.

"I have a couple of record companies talking to me. The upshot of it all is within the next few months I may be able to start working on a real album, as in like record company funded, instead of me taking the time and energy to do a second run of CD with my own money," she said with her trademark giggle.

Is she excited about her musical future? With a squeal she said, "Yeah I am. But I feel like I'm really up in the air. I want all this settled. I've always wanted to be able to make a living just writing music. I'm getting closer every day."

Opposite Day can be reached by writing P.O. Box 130643, Ann Arbor, MI 48113.

British band hopes to break U.S. jinx

STAFF WRITER

English bands like Blur, London Suede, Manic Street Preachers and Take That, while experiencing success in their home country, have had trouble replicating their good fortune in the United States. Supergrass, England's newest addition to the U.S. music scene, is baffled by the jinx but hopes to avoid it.

"Certainly, lots of American bands have made it in England. I don't know why it doesn't work the other way around. I don't know if they're not into the English sound, or they've got something against it or they're just nationalistic," said 25-year-old bassist Mickey Quinn.

"We just want to play our music to everybody. We listen to everybody. We don't make distinctions about where the bands come from. If it's good, then it's good."

So far, Supergrass's career looks promising here. The first single "Caught By The Fuzz" from their debut album "I Should Coco" (Capitol) is getting airplay across the dial — without the fashion angle that's played out in the infamously scandlous British tabloids.

"The papers," as Quinn calls them, have already lumped Supergrass's quirky, no-holds-barred musical style in with the glam, Brit pop, and new modern fashion categories pitting them against Blur, Menswear and London Suede.

"Me, personally, I've never gotten into music through fashions. . . . When fashions change, we won't change. We don't seem to fit in, really. We just happen to be one of the English bands."

The closest the band has come to making any kind of fashion statement is the rumor that circulated in the tabloids about 19-year-old singer Gaz Coombes and Calvin Klein.

"According to the tabloids, Gaz got offered loads of money to do underpants ads and he turned it down. I don't even know if he got offered that. That was supposedly a couple of months ago, but it's now being publicized in the tabloids. Why people are interested in that is just so stupid," Quinn explained.

Coombes and 21-year-old drummer Danny Goffey formed Supergrass after their shoegazer band The Jennifers hit the skids. Quinn joined on after catching their set at an Oxford, England, hall.

"The only lighting they had was two strobes, which were on throughout the show. They played stuff like Dinosaur Jr. covers, and Danny was doing all these crap drum rolls," Quinn said.

Producer Sam Williams saw the band and persuaded them to go into the studio with him. The result was a six-track demo featuring Supergrass's fuzzy guitar single "Caught By The Fuzz." The song made its way from a locally released "very-limited-edition" single to a mass marketed effort on Parlophone Records.

Cut to the recently released "I Should Coco," which Quinn calls a reflection of their live shows.

"It's better than being dead," Quinn said.

Apologetically, he adds, "That was a terrible one. I'm sorry. It won't happen again."

Seriously, he said, their album feeds on Supergrass's '70s-influenced rock with a little piano thrown in for good measure. (Although the happy "We're Not Supposed To" seems to be helium-influenced.) Quinn said live they take the music a step farther and rock out.

"People say that the album's really hard and really fast. Our live shows are a lot harder, faster and more sweaty basically. It blows the album up a bit."

In England, their shows have turned into a screamfest filled with teenage girls who dream of a life with one of the three.

"A third of the audience is 14-year-old kids, which is fair enough but they're not hugely discerning music fans. It's not bad for me because I'm the ugly one in the band. It's pretty odd walking down the street and getting recognized. I tend not to notice, especially when I'm walking around with my girlfriend. When we get home she tells me that loads of people recognized me but I didn't even notice. I'm in my own little world."

To Quinn, the temporary anonymity that Supergrass experiences in the United States is a good thing.

"They're like the old audiences before we made it quite big here," he said via telephone an English studio. "We had sort of serious people coming to gigs not the sort of teenage girls and stuff. We sort of got a bit of that in America playing small venues again. They just come to see live music. They're not going with fashion or anything. They think we're a good band."

Supergrass and Triple Fast Action perform Tuesday, Sept. 12, at St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Doors open at 7:30 p.m. for the all-ages show. Tickets are $6 in advance. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT.

Empty gig, good show: The last Detroit visit by English teen heart-throbs Supergrass — from left, drummer Mickey Quinn, drummer Danny Goffey and singer/guitarist/pianist Gaz Coombes — was in front of a sparse crowd at The Shelter. Before that show, they peaked in St. Andrew's Hall and "cursed" themselves for not being able to play upstairs. Now they will on Tuesday, Sept. 12.

Onced asked in an interview to give his impression of Detroit's 1950s jazz scene, Miles Davis simply responded, "It was a real hip city for music."

Much of Davis' experience in the Motor City was informed by his view from the Blue Bird's circular bandstand, the stage where Miles first landed in 1949 as a guest soloist in Billy Mitchell's band.

After logging many Blue Bird performances in the years between, Davis returned to the Blue Bird in 1957 to introduce Detroit audiences to the quintet featuring John Coltrane, Bill Evans, "Philly" Joe Jones and Paul Chambers who went on to astound jazz lovers worldwide.

Fortunately for many jazz fans, the same stage and pristinely kept and slightly elevated blue vinyl booths that once faced Davis, as well as such greats as Charlie Parker, Billie Holiday and Jimmy Smith, have survived at the Blue Bird Inn.

Thanks to some cajoling on the part of the Blue Bird's present musical director, Carl Hill, the self-described impresario who convinced Mary Eddins to carry on as the club's owner following the death of her husband and partner Clarence Eddins four years ago, the Blue Bird's resonating, airy room, along with its welcoming ambiance have survived.

For the last seven months, the Blue Bird has been presenting Detroit's Jerome Perry Quartet, enhanced by numerous area musicians who regularly sit in on the group's Saturday night and Sunday matinee performances. Hill also hopes to accelerate the club's comeback and eventually present live music throughout the week.

Jazz organist Jimmy Smith who is appearing there Sept. 15-17, last appeared at the Blue Bird 29 years ago. He will be performing with Jimmy Jackson (drums), and Terry Evans (guitar). Hill predicts his return and appeal to a vast audience will serve to spread the word that the club is open for business on a regular basis.

While Hill's role as the club's impressario is a relatively new one, the longtime jazz fan's association with the historic room, first established in 1926, according to Hill, is not. He remembers standing on a milk crate outside the window of the Blue Bird as a teenager, straining to witness one of Billie Holiday's Blue Bird performances. Throughout the early 1940s, his oldest brother Phil Hill played keyboards in the Blue Bird's house band.

When Clarence and Mary Eddins ended up with the club in 1953 and remodeled it into its present state, Hill still had to wait outside.

On a recent Sunday, the music began with the Jerome Perry Quartet, featuring Jerome Perry (sax), Glynn Oliver (bass), Ron Jackson (drums), and Alma Smith (keyboards), substituting for the band's regular keyboard player Dan David.

Increasingly augmented by vibes, additional horns and vocals as the afternoon wore on, the group's renditions of today's jazz standards, perhaps first performed in Detroit by their now legendary makers at the Blue Bird, became full-blown improvisational jazz orchestrations that instantly translated Davis' impression of Detroit's jazz past to its present.

PREVIEW

Walking into the living room of Joshua Bergasse's family home in Oak Park it's easy to see how dancing is an integral part of the young man's life. Theatrical ceramic masks, dance posters, and movie stills from Hollywood musicals fill the walls along with family photos.

The 22-year-old is making his professional stage debut as Baby John, a member of the Jets, in "West Side Story," at the Fisher Theatre. The Fisher is the opening stop in a yearlong tour that will take the production throughout the United States, Canada and Japan. Broadway remains a possibility.

When the tour finishes, it will be just short of the 40th anniversary of "West Side Story," a modern re-telling of the Romeo and Juliet story. The show is considered a landmark musical for its gritty realism, which focuses on New York street gangs, and for its total integration of dancing into the story line through the Jerome Robbins choreography.

"This production will have everything exactly as it was in the original," said Bergasse, "right down to every chorus member standing in the same spot as 40 years ago."

He does not consider the show at all dated. "When it comes to prejudice, we haven't come very far in the last 400 years. Two people from very different cultures still can't love each other without family prejudices getting in the way."

For him, family was a positive force that helped shape his career. Bergasse began dance lessons at age four with his mother, Annette, owner and director of Annette & Co. dance studio in Farmington Hills. He has been an instructor at the school since he was 17, teaching tap, jazz, and "street funk" to students ages four to 50. Now his younger brother, Mark is teaching at the studio. "It is a real family business. We all take pride in the studio, and it has brought us all happiness."

The 1991 Berkley High grad won dance scholarships to Los Angeles and New York. While in Los Angeles he did some work as a movie extra and was chosen as a dancer for the film "I'll Do Anything." All four of the film's musical numbers landed on the cutting room floor, however.

Bergasse said he believes his dance training also taught him how to act, "because the movements express character." In addition, his mother has always dealt a lot with musical theater through the studio's recitals and anniversary shows. She is currently doing the choreography for a Michigan Opera Theatre Broadway-type review.

Though he plans to return to college himself some time, right now Joshua doesn't know what he will be doing in a year or two. "I'd like to continue in productions of this caliber," he said. "I know if I were in college now I wouldn't be as happy as with what I'm doing."

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

If you've always wondered what the food is like at the Golden Mushroom, Ristorante di Modesta, Water Club Seafood Grill, Joe Muer's Grill or the Michigan Star Clipper Train, you can find out Sunday, Sept. 17, at Schoolcraft College's "feast of the season," the fourth annual Culinary Extravaganza.

The event offers an opportunity to sample gourmet appetizers, entrees, desserts, and assorted beverages from more than 65 of metro Detroit's finest restaurants, including those listed above.

To wash it all down are assorted beverages provided by A.H.D. Vintners Ltd., Central Distributors of Beer, General Wine & Liquor Company, Good Time Party Store, Viviano Wine Importers and other distributors.

Area bakeries including Mary Denning's Cake Shoppe, Elite Sweets, Great Harvest Bread Company of Northville, and specialty food producers Proper English (Scone) Products and Mama Mucci's Pasta are also participating.

Tickets are $40 per person or $75 for two. Tickets may be purchased by calling the Schoolcraft College Institutional Advancement office at (313) 462-4417. Visa, MasterCard and personal checks will be accepted.

Try your luck and buy a raffle ticket to win two tickets to anywhere in the continental United States via Northwest Airlines (first prize); two Northwest Airlines tickets to Chicago and a weekend at the Whitehall (second prize); two tickets to a play at the Fisher Theatre (third prize); fine jewelry, valued at $500, from Orin Jewelers (fourth prize); or leather luggage (fifth prize). A $500 golf accessory package from Saturn of Plymouth will also be awarded at the event.

Raffle tickets are $5 each or three for $10, and will be available the day of the event. Every ticket is a winner because you can redeem it for $5 off any dinner entree at City Grill, Cozy Cafe, DePalma's, Joe Muer's Grill, Joe Muer Seafood, MacKinnon's, Old Mexico, Peacock Tandoori or Water Club Grill. The offer is valid Sunday through Thursday, and doesn't expire until Dec. 18.

Be sure to stop by the booths of these participating restaurants to sample their cuisine to decide at which restaurant you want to redeem your ticket. Or, you could buy nine raffle tickets, increase your odds of winning a prize, and get $5 off a dinner entree at all of the restaurants. If you're busy on Sept. 17, be sure to buy a raffle ticket so you don't miss out on the opportunity to win some great prizes and save money at popular metro Detroit restaurants.

Place a silent bid auction for the "Muer Dinner." Joe Muer, who is serving as honorary chairman of the event with Detroit Edison CEO John E. Lobbia, will bake a mouth-watering whole salmon in your kitchen. Accompanying side dishes are asparagus in mustard sauce and a mushroom creation. Schoolcraft's Master Chefs will prepare in advance a variety of hot and cold appetizers and a memorable dessert.

Retired television news reporter Jim Herrington of Farmington Hills will be your sommelier and butler for your dinner party for eight or 10 guests. Vintage wines have been selected and donated by Juliette and Ed Jonna, owners of the Merchant of Vino, to complement the meal. Channel 7's award-winning newscaster Cheryl Chodun will be your waitress.

Send bids in writing to Schoolcraft College along with your name, address and phone number. Bids should be marked to the attention of Ann King, Muer Dinner Silent Bid, Institutional Advancement Office, Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia, Mich. 48152-2696. Still unbeaten

Three goals by Matt Smith propelled Plymouth Christian Academy's soccer team to its third win in four matches, keeping the Eagles unbeaten with a 4-2 triumph over Taylor Baptist Park Tuesday in Taylor.

Smith scored his teams first three goals, two coming in the first half as PCA took a 2-1 advantage. All three were unassisted.

Scott Carty converted a pass from Justin Stout for the fourth Eagle goal, which raised the team's record to 3-0-1.

Hot run

The temperatures soared, and so did Lutheran Westland's runners Tuesday in a quad-meet at Cass Benton that featured the Warriors, Detroit Country Day, Flat Rock and host Plymouth Christian Academy.

Westland proved an easy winner, collecting four of the top five places and scoring 20 points. Flat Rock was second with 57, with Country Day next at 60 and PCA fourth with 109.

"It was a hot day," said PCA coach Steve Bauslaugh, "and it was our first time out at Cass Benton."

Sam Patterson led the Warriors, finishing first in 18:00. Brad Polkinghorne was second in 18:04.

Mike Kimpan led the Eagles, finishing 22nd in 21:58. Other Eagle finishers: Dennis Donahue, 23rd (22:00); Dan Marlow, 24th (22:12); Erik Copeland, 28th (23:19); and Doug Robillard, 47th (28:55).

Dual win

The duo of sophomore Angie Frost and freshman Teri Hanson led Plymouth Canton Tuesday to a thrilling 96-90 victory against visiting Novi in girls swimming action.

The Chiefs opened their season on a winning note by taking the decisive 400-yard freestyle relay in 3:59.8 behind the team of Hanson, Andrea Cizewski, Amy Sonnanstine and Frost.

Frost picked up three firsts in all. She also won the 200 freestyle in 2:07.29 and the 100 freestyle in 58.7.

Hanson captured the 200 individual medley (2:22.07) and added a second place in the 100 butterfly with a state-cut time of 1:02.45.

The Chiefs also recorded an important second place finish in the 500 free by Sonnanstine (6:06.9) and a third in the 100 butterfly by Ericka Pendergrass (1:16.0).

A sweep in diving proved to be important for Canton. Lisa Sabina's 174.4 points led all divers, followed by teammates Jaime Skamiera's 144 and Jenny Demsky's 142.

Canton coach Ron Krueger was happy about his team's performance as well as his coaches' leadership.

"Our diving coach, Woody Thomas, was instrumental in bringing a 1-2-3 finish and our assistant coach, Sarah Eubanks, has done an outstanding job preparing the swimmers."

Masters of blasters

Despite a limit of three home runs per game, WWT Softball of Canton managed to place ninth in the American Softball Association Over-35 National Championship, played last weekend in Bloomington, Ind. A total of 41 teams representing 22 states competed.

WWT opened its tourney run with a hard-fought 34-30 triumph over the Hustlers (from Seymour, Ind.) Friday. On Saturday morning, WWT ripped Masters Masonry (Morgantown, W. Va.) 25-13, then battled back from an 8-0 first-inning deficit to beat Pro Star Design (Greenfield, Ind.), 27-15.

That pushed WWT into Sunday's rounds, but that was as far as they went, losing 13-10 to the Saints (Warwick, RI) and 26-13 to R&H Metal (Waterloo, Iowa).

WWT's hitters were led by Jamie Kitka (.765), Jay Terranella of Canton (.625), Perry Celsi (.619) and Tom Guilfoyle of Canton (.615).

Salem holds off Huron in overtime, 59-57

■ BASKETBALL

There's no doubting Plymouth Salem is a big girls basketball team.

But there was also no doubt Ann Arbor Huron was nearly as sizable. That showed in how 6-foot-1 senior center Julie Henderson handled the Rocks in her first game back from an injury.

Henderson riddled Salem for 20 points; her teammates, Jasmine Smith and Nekole Smith, also did some damage, netting 14 and 13, respectively.

However, as damaging as the River Rats' attack was, it should be noted that when objects of equal mass collide, no one wins. Which means, while Salem couldn't neutralize Huron's size, neither could Huron handle 6-foot sophomore guard Amanda Abraham.

Abraham, having recovered from an ankle injury suffered last week, riddled the Rats for 21 points, eight rebounds and seven steals in leading Salem to a 59-57 overtime victory at Huron.

"They had some nice size," admitted Salem coach Fred Thomann. "But Amanda was nice."

At least she was until she fouled out in the extra period. A strong third quarter (17-11) had allowed the Rocks to take a four-point lead (39-35) into the fourth. But Huron took advantage of Shellye Sims' foul trouble — she fouled out in the fourth — and rallied to take a three-point lead into the final minute of regulation.

Fortunately, Salem had Laurel Weiman and her three-point shooting ability. Weiman finished with eight points, none more important than her three in the final minute that tied the score.

With Sills (she went out with 14 points and six boards) and Abraham both fouled out, Thomann had to look to other sources for point production. He found it from Andrea Pruett; the freshman scored just five

1st meeting ends in 2-2 tie

The new versus the old . . . or young against the old. However you want to measure it, whatever you want to call it, the bottom line is this: a game between rivals is always emotionally-packed, and usually more physical.

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

Outsiders could argue, quite convincingly among themselves, that there was no good reason to play this game.

There was nothing to be gained, by either team.

Schoolcraft College's reputation in men's soccer is well established. The Ocelots have ruled their region for more than a decade.

What could Madonna University, a program in its infancy (translated, that means second season), gain by playing a community college powerhouse? And why would a team like Schoolcraft want to play a team still searching for its identity?

The answer both coaches would have supplied prior to Wednesday's match was "competition." In other words, the only way to be the best is to play the best.

When the two in-town collegiate rivals collided yesterday, no answers were found but several questions were created. To satisfy the local sports historians, let us note the final score — a 2-2 draw, in a match originally scheduled to be played at Madonna's home field but instead hosted by SC.

The Ocelots (now 1-0-1) broke on top, scoring in the opening 10 minutes on a play that was typical of the way the game would go. A shot deflected off a Madonna defender to SC's Wojtek Radz (from Farmington), and he booted it in to give the Ocelots a 1-0 lead.

Madonna tied it 28 minutes into the opening half on a play just as dependent on the bounce of the ball. John Courval (Redford Thurston) lined a corner kick just past the near post; the ball hit an SC defender and bounded into the net.

Crusader coach Pete Alexander was not at all pleased with his team's first-half performance. "I thought we played flat," he said. "We didn't seem to have any intensity. They knew what kind of game this was, what was at stake. They should be playing this with a lot more pride.

"Instead, they came out lethargic. We talked about that at halftime and I think they came out stronger in the second half."

Still, it wasn't enough to give Madonna the victory — even after SC lost one of its better defenders, Eric Stoecklein (Plymouth Canton), with a second yellow card, forcing the Ocelots to play short one man.

Madonna did take the lead, on a penalty kick converted by Scott Emert after Mark Garrett was hauled down in the penalty area. But the Crusaders couldn't protect their lead; SC's Nasser Salame was fouled inside the Madonna penalty area, awarding the Ocelots a penalty kick. Mo Hijazi converted it, retying the game at 2-2.

"That was one of the ugliest games I've ever seen," said SC coach Van Dimitriou. "This turned out to be a grudge match, and I hate those kind of games. This is one I'm happy just to get a 2-2 tie."

It might help both teams to conduct an all-out search for their offenses. Both Christian Emert and Jason Stempien missed wide-open chances from a few yards in front of the SC net. Salame, too, misfired on a shot in close to the Madonna net.

"We've got to finish those opportunities," said Alexander. "They took their toll. You could just see the team let down after those.

Shamrocks wear down Toledo CC

■ FOOTBALL

Redford Catholic Central took care of business in its season football opener Saturday at the Pontiac Silverdome.

The Shamrocks opened their 1995 campaign with a workmanlike 19-6 victory in the Kickoff Classic over Toledo Central Catholic.

Redford CC took advantage of four Toledo CC turnovers to earn the victory.

Eron Kosmowski got CC rolling with 4:03 left in the opening quarter on a 30-yard field goal.

With 8:07 left in the second period, sophomore Kevin Thomas returned a punt 55 yards for a touchdown.

Kosmowski's extra point attempt sailed wide, but he added his second field goal of the game, a 43-yarder, with only two seconds remaining in the half for a 12-0 Shamrocks' lead.

With 7:18 left in the third quarter, senior fullback John Spolsky capped a 65-yard, nine-play drive with a 1-yard TD run. Kosmowski's extra point made it 19-0.

Toledo CC averted the shutout in the final minute when Boe Washington connected with Phil Larkin on a 29-yard scoring pass.

Washington was six of 10 passing for 68 yards, but was picked off twice, one each by Judah May and Tom Valenti.

Spolsky, who plays nose tackle, and Chuck O'Connor, a defensive end, each recovered fumbles.

Spolsky had to leave the game with cramps in his leg after making a tackle. It looked worse than it was, he said.

"I dived at a guy, brought him down and my leg got real tight," Spolsky said. "I was like, 'Oh, boy.' Coach (Tom) Mach kept saying 'Watch out for those (cramps). Take your vitamins, eat bananas, get your potassium.' "

Junior linebacker Milam Brooks led Redford CC in tackles with five unassisted and four assists. O'Connor was in on eight tackles, while defensive tackle Nick Lachapelle added six.

Offensively, Redford CC held a slight edge in total yardage, 208-203.

The Shamrocks rushed for 190 yards, led by Greg Alcala's 87 yards in 13 carries. Spolsky added 66 yards in 11 attempts.

Junior quarterback Greg Call hit one of nine passes for 18 yards, but was not intercepted.

Madonna rallies to top Hillsdale

BY C.J. RISAK

■ VOLLEYBALL

Hey, Madonna University's volleyball season just started. So let's dwell on the positives, at least for a little while.

Like the result Tuesday, a come-from-behind 13-15, 15-4, 11-15, 15-11, 15-11 victory over Hillsdale College in the Lady Crusaders' home opener.

"We played in spurts," said Madonna coach Jerry Abraham, his team running its record to 2-3. "But I'm pleased. I'm happy with it. They stuck in there and a win's a win."

Several players contributed to the victory, in particular Kelly McCausland (from Redford Union) with a team best 13 kills to go with 15 digs. Both Julie Martin (Livonia Stevenson) and Karen Sisung contributed nine kills each, Martin adding two solo blocks and 10 block assists.

Erin Comment chipped in with seven kills and 16 digs, Erin Gregoire had 16 digs, and Meg Paris had 29 assists to kills and 10 digs.

"We don't have it in sync yet," Abraham told one onlooker. "We should be better than this."

Later, he added, "We're not fluent. Our defensive reads were weak. And we're still working on our lineup."

The Crusaders' erratic play was evident by the midpoint of the third game. After losing the opening game of the match, they took command in the second and won easily. But in the third, Madonna allowed the Chargers to bolt out in front, 8-1, although the gap was closed to 11-10, it was never completely overcome.

The Crusaders fell behind in the fourth game, too, trailing 4-0. But this time they regained their composure, pulling out to a 12-8 lead. Hillsdale got to within 12-11, but no closer.

The fifth game was the Crusaders' to control. They led 3-0; Hillsdale tied it at 3-all, but then Madonna rattled off nine straight points to take a commanding 12-3 lead. The Chargers never got closer than the final four-point margin.

Last weekend, Madonna didn't fare too well on its trip west to Mesa State (Grand Junction, Colo.) for the Coca Cola Classic. Going against all NCAA Division II teams, the Crusaders managed just one win out of four matches.

Last Friday, they played host Mesa State and fell 15-9, 15-11, 15-10; they also were beaten by University of Alaska-Anchorage, 7-15, 15-0, 15-4, 15-9. On Saturday, Madonna rallied to defeat Western State College (Gunnison, Colo.) 6-15, 15-5, 13-15, 17-15, 15-9, before tumbling against Seattle Pacific, 15-11, 15-5, 15-4.

Part of the problem, of course, is the team's youth (one senior); also, they've had little real practice time to work on problems since before heading to Mesa State.

These are concerns Abraham hopes to address, at least in part, before this weekend's Madonna University Invitational.

Included in the six-team field will be the College of St. Francis (Joliet, Ill.), which finished fifth last year in the NAIA and was ranked seventh in the preseason this year; Georgetown (Ky.) College, ranked 16th; Trinity Christian College (Palos Heights, Ill.); Huntington College (Huntington, Ind.); the College of Mount St. Joseph's (Cincinnati); and Madonna, ranked 15th.

The round-robin format begins at 4 p.m. Friday, with the next rounds starting at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. On Saturday, play begins at 9 a.m. and continues every two hours until 5 p.m.

Injury-plagued SC can't outscore foes

■ SC WOMEN

The results were not pleasing. Hardly.

But Schoolcraft College women's soccer coach Nikki Johnson would rather deal with them now than later.

Twice last weekend the second-year coach felt her team was in position to win in matches against visiting College of DuPage (Glen Elyn, Ill.) and Monroe CC (Rochester, N.Y.).

Twice, SC came up on the short end. The Lady Ocelots lost 3-2 to DuPage Saturday and 1-0 to Monroe in overtime Monday.

In Monday's OT loss, the game's only goal came six minutes into the second of two 15-minute mandatory extra periods. Tricia Diquattro scored it.

The Ocelot offensive efforts were crippled by the loss of forwards/midfielders Stephanie Surma and Melissa Crain to muscle pulls. With previous injuries to Nicole Gentry (from Westland John Glenn) and Amy Marcoe (Livonia Stevenson) already weakening the team's depth, SC had to struggle to stay in the match against Monroe, with its 24-player roster.

The loss to DuPage was even more frustrating. The offense controlled play, but failed to finish several ideal scoring chances. DuPage, meanwhile, took advantage of speedy forward Debbie Markovich on counterattacks; she scored twice.

Still, SC had a 2-1 lead on goals by Holly Kimble (Stevenson) and Surma. Assists went to Susan O'Neill (Plymouth Canton), on Kimble's goal, and Erin Stacherski (Livonia Churchill), on Surma's goal.

Unfortunately, both Surma and Marcoe went out with injuries, fueling DuPage's comeback.

Earlier last week, SC ripped Siena Heights 4-0 in Adrian. Surma and Staci Muysenberg each scored two goals (all in the second half); Kimble and Misty Heath (Stevenson) added two assists apiece. Jennifer Audritsh (Garden City) was in goal for the shutout.

"We picked up our game in the second half and just took it to them," said Johnson, her team now 1-2.

Errant shooting prevents sweep

■ MADONNA

In a topsy-turvy weekend, Madonna University's soccer team learned a valuable lesson Saturday, losing 3-1 to Aquinas College at the Cornerstone Tournament in Grand Rapids.

"We outplayed them," insisted Madonna coach Pete Alexander. "We just didn't come out with the win. It was unlucky."

As proof, Alexander pointed to the shots on goal: 12 for Madonna to three for Aquinas. "And they scored on all three," noted Alexander.

Scott Emert scored the Crusaders' only goal.

In Madonna's first match of the tournament Friday against Cornerstone, the Crusaders dominated again — but this time won, 3-0.

Charlie Bell, Christian Emert and Jason Stempien accounted for the Madonna goals. Dan McEvilly (from Livonia Churchill) was in goal.

The Crusaders' efforts did earn them something: Jason Hazinski (Redford Thurston) was named the defensive player of the tournament.

"Our defense played extremely well," said Alexander. "That's what got Jason that award."

But that second game . . .

"We played very much like we did in the first game," noted Alexander. "We missed a lot of our shots, a lot of our chances — and their defenders played extremely well.

"And they capitalized on all three of their chances."

Hopefully, Madonna's luck will change.

Note: A problem with construction of the Livonia Ladywood soccer field has forced Madonna's team to seek new accommodations, until at least October. Where the Crusaders will play their home matches is uncertain.

points, but 3 of 4 came from the free throw line in OT, including two with 37 seconds left that gave Salem a 58-57 lead.

After forcing a Huron miss, Janelle Sterling converted 1-of-2 free throws for the final margin of victory.

The Rocks host first Riverview tonight, then Western Lakes Activities Association rival Northville next Thursday — then defending Class A state champion Flint Northern next Saturday (Sept. 16). Game times for Northern are noon for the freshmen game, 2 p.m. for the junior varsity, and 4 p.m. for the varsity.

Northern, which defeated Class C champ Redford Bishop Borgess 58-56 Tuesday, returns everyone from last year's team.

■ Lutheran Wsind. 51, PCA 19: Lutheran Westland turned in what the coach, Ron Gentz, called "probably the best defense we've played all year" in subduing visiting Plymouth Christian Academy Tuesday.

The result left both teams with 2-1 records.

The game was tied at 6-all when the tide shifted, and was never reversed. Jenny Twietmeyer banged down a pair of three-pointers "and the momentum went our way after that," said Gentz.

Twietmeyer finished with 12 points. Her freshman sister, Janell, netted nine and Katie Ollinger had eight.

PCA was led by Lisa Erickson's eight points.

■ PCA 32, Agape 20: The Eagles' defense clamped down in the second half, limiting Plymouth Agape Christian to a mere four points Friday at PCA.

The Eagles led 10-4 after one quarter, but their lead remained six (22-16) at halftime. In the second half, however, PCA outscored Agape 10-4.

Lisa Erickson and Sarah Sumner each scored nine points to lead PCA. Erickson also had five steals, with Sumner nabbing eight rebounds.

Better competition should toughen SC

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

Three scrimmages and a match. Two wins (one coming in the one that counted) and two losses.

This may not be a season packed with victories for Schoolcraft College's men's soccer team over competition of a lesser caliber. But coach Van Dimitriou figures his team will get its share of wins, and should retain its stranglehold over the NJCAA Region 12 competition it has crushed for most of the last decade.

Still, the Ocelots' stay at the top of the region standings will be challenged more aggressively, if not this year then in the very near future. Chris Corteg, the former coach of Eastern Michigan University's men's team, has succeeded Mick Lakatos as Macomb CC's coach. Lakatos resigned after 29 years.

SC MEN

Corteg may not be able to field a team this season capable of upsetting SC. But in the years to come . . .

The additional competition should be welcomed by the Ocelots, who throughout Van Dimitriou's 13-year tenure as coach have ruled the region only to fail to get past the NJCAA's Inter-regional Tournament. The four-team Inter-regional, pitting regional champions against one another (the winner qualifying for the NJCAA Tournament), has been captured by SC just once.

A tougher non-region schedule should help rectify that this season. How much tougher?

The first real match, against NJCAA competition, was played Saturday when Forest Park (St. Louis) CC visited — and suffered a 1-0 loss to SC.

The only goal was scored in the game's 30th minute, when Mo Hijazi took a pass from Victor Rodopolous, a Livonia Franklin graduate who transferred from Central Michigan. Hijazi beat two defenders and the Forest Park keeper before tucking the ball into the corner.

"I was very pleased with the result," said Dimitriou. "The guys are finally starting to mold, to take shape."

Getting into playing shape is what the early-season schedule was designed for. The Ocelots realized it when they faced Michigan State in a scrimmage in East Lansing Aug. 26 — and got trounced, 6-1.

"Well," said Dimitriou, searching for a bright spot, "they helped get us into shape."

Which may have been a bit more important than one might think. As Dimitriou explained further, "It was the first time we had all 11 starters on the field at the same time."

Another question was answered in that scrimmage and one played two days later at home, when SC hosted Calvin College. The Ocelots pounded the Saints, 4-1.

Hijazi, the team's leading returning scorer from last season, answered the question Who will replace Fadi Bazzi, last year's scoring machine? by netting all four goals. Hijazi also scored the goal against MSU — which means he has accounted for all five Ocelot goals. Rodopolous had an assist.

"He's more of a thinker, more of a creator (than Bazzi)," said Dimitriou of Hijazi.

The team's final scrimmage, a 1-0 loss played two days later (Aug. 30) at Spring Arbor, was a poor performance Dimitriou attributed to sore muscles and a team still trying to work its way into condition. By Saturday's match with Forest Park, those early-season wounds were nearly healed.

Dimitriou was pleased with the defensive play of sweeper Dave Binkiewicz (Franklin), stopper Eric Stoecklein and marking defender Joe Sisco (both from Plymouth Canton), as well as returning keeper Ari Mechlowicz, in the win over Forest Park. And he was happy he had midfielder Matt Youngerman to head a sure goal out of the net early in the match.

Because SC will need big plays like that to get beyond the Inter-regional and back to the NJCAA Tournament.

CC streak stays alive

Goalkeeper Travis Miller kept his scoreless streak intact Tuesday, posting the shutout as Redford Catholic Central turned back University of Detroit-Jesuit in a boys soccer match, 2-0.

CC, which improved its overall season record to 3-0, tallied both goals in the opening half.

Mike Martin broke through at the 33-minute mark with Tom Derhake getting the assist.

"We played well and U-D is a good team, they tied both (Birmingham) Brother Rice and (Warren) DeLaSalle," CC coach Phil LaJoy said.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

■ CC GOLFERS WIN

Senior Brandon DiPaola took medalist honors with a nine-hole round of 35, leading Redford Catholic Central to a season-opening 148-164 boys golf victory over University of Detroit-Jesuit in a match at Brae Burn.

■ YOUTH SOCCER CHAMPS

The Livonia Y Michigan Hawks, under-14 girls team coached by John Buchanan (Farmington), also won its division last weekend at Troy.

They defeated a team from Scarborough, Ontario, 5-0, after posting victories over teams from Canton, Midland, Birmingham and Vardar III. The Hawks outscored their opponents, 15-1.

Gunn, a dietetics major with a 3.78 grade-point average, was named to the Iowa State Invitational All-Tournament team.

She leads the Broncos with 52 digs and is second in kills with 47.

Against Utah, Gunn recorded a .414 hitting percentage with 17 kills (five errors in 29 attempts as the Broncos recorded their first win.

Salem, Canton both seeking 1st victories

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

The high school football season is only a week old, and already the champ is in trouble.

Brad Emons landed some quick, hard hits in the first round (of games), and the reigning king of picks, Dan O'Meara, was sent staggering into the ropes.

Emons picked the winners in 14 of 16 games; O'Meara, who went down along with Wayne, Howell, Ecorse and Harrison, opened with an 11-5 mark.

Can Danny O. come back as this heavyweight bout we call a prediction contest unfolds over the next eight weeks?

Will Emons deliver an early knockout after setting up his opponent for the coup de grace?

Can Danny O. emulate another champ and use the ropes effectively to stay in the game until the time is right for a counter move?

FRIDAY GAMES
(all times 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Redford Union at Edsel Ford, 3:30: Both teams were blanked in their season debuts; RU losing to Livonia Stevenson 27-0 and Temperance Bedford routing Edsel 30-0. So it looks like this Mega White opener could be another close one. The T'birds were one of two teams the Panthers beat last year, 23-20. Both were 2-7 last year, with Edsel's wins coming near the end as opposed to early for RU. PICKS: The T'birds are no Edsels.

Borgess at Camden-Frontier, 7: The Spartans, following a winless '94 season, were a major surprise last week. Quarterback Richard Paige and running back Kevin Jordan had big games as Borgess opened with a 28-0 rout of Ecorse. Camden-Frontier lost 14-12 to Britton-Deerfield. St. Agatha beat the Redskins 34-7 last year. PICKS: Borgess made a believer of O'Meara, but Emons switches and takes Camden-Frontier.

Farmington at Liv. Churchill: The Falcons had high hopes for 1995 and still do, but they need to come back with a victory this week if they plan to reach their goals. Waterford Mott capitalized on a host of Farmington mistakes to take a 28-13 victory. Churchill's only victory in recent years was over the Falcons two years ago. PICKS: Farmington gets back on track.

Westland Glenn at W.L. Western: After an 0-2 start last year, the Rockets are back where they usually are (1-0) following a 24-6 win over Howell. But Glenn had to come from behind in the second half to erase a 7-3 deficit. The Warriors were surprise winners in their opener, beating favored Novi 17-7. PICKS: Glenn lost the '92 Western Lakes championship to Western but wins the rematch.

Ply. Salem at Northville: Ouch! Both teams gave up 42 points last week in a pair of tough openers against state-ranked opponents. Salem lost to Class AA power Belleville; South Lyon, the No. 1 team in Class A, saddled the Mustangs with a 42-14 defeat. This game should be a much more even contest. PICKS: Aneil Kersey keys a Northville victory.

W.L. Central at Ply. Canton: The Chiefs had the tougher first game, losing again (35-14) to perennial nemesis and Mega Red favorite Monroe. But the Vikings have the W after beating Milford 25-15. Skill players like quarterback Rob Johnson and end Ron Hunter could be the difference for Canton. PICKS: The Chiefs are on the warpath.

Dearborn at Garden City: Mega-Red favorite Dearborn opened with a 35-0 win over Churchill and could be headed for the playoffs with Kevin Kreger back at quarterback. The Cougars, who try to recover from a 29-7 loss to Mega-Blue contender Crestwood, gave the Pioneers a battle last year before falling 16-7. PICKS: Garden City won't find Dearborn endearing.

Red. Thurston at Crestwood: The Eagles faced last year's Class B runner-up (Country Day) and it doesn't necessarily get easier this week. Veteran tailback Mike Kaczmarczyk had a big game as Crestwood beat Garden City while Thurston absorbed a 42-8 shellacking from DCD. The Eagles took the Chargers to overtime last year, winning 19-16 during a 6-3 season. PICKS: Crestwood gets revenge.

Wayne at Lincoln Park: Warren Mott isn't Adrian, but Lincoln Park is 1-0 while the Zebras are 0-1 going into this Mega Red opener. The Railsplitters ripped Mott 33-0 while Class A power Adrian downed Wayne 28-18. The Zebras won this game 34-6 last year. PICKS: O'Meara maintains faith in the Zebras; Emons likes Lincoln Park.

Redford CC at A.A. Pioneer: The Shamrocks are highly ranked in Class AA, and this game will tell us if they belong there. CC beat Toledo Central Catholic in grind-it-out fashion Saturday, but Pioneer's victory might have been more impressive. The Pioneers beat perennial Class A power East Lansing 27-14. CC won 7-0 last year, but both went on to have below-standard seasons. PICKS: An upset? Sorta, as the Pioneers prevail, predicts O'Meara. Emons says he can see-see a victory from CC.

SATURDAY GAMES
(all times 1 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Stevenson at Liv. Franklin: Once again, the Patriots face Stevenson on back-to-back weekends, although last week it was Sterling Heights Stevenson. The state-ranked Titans won 21-7, and it looks as if their Livonia namesake might be just as formidable as last year when the Spartans beat Franklin 36-15. PICKS: Adlai gets the vote.

N. Farmington at F.H. Harrison: This will be the first meeting between these teams since the WLAA championship game of '91. Harrison was supposed to be unbeatable that year (and ultimately was, with a 13-0 record), but North gave the Hawks their toughest game. The Raiders took Harrison to overtime, but the Hawks eked out a win. North (1-0) defeated West Bloomfield 20-7 last week, and Harrison (0-1) played well but lost to Brother Rice, 16-14. PICKS: The Hawks start a new winning streak.

Clarenceville at B.H. Cranbrook: Cranbrook is picked to finish third in the Metro Conference but had an inauspicious start. The Cranes lost 29-0 in Detroit Renaissance's first football game in school history. The Trojans fared no better, although they lost to a good St. Agatha squad, 24-6. Cranbrook won 20-19 over Clarenceville last year, and it appears another close game is in order. PICKS: The Trojans turn things around.

Luth. Westland at Lutheran NW: Catholic League teams were hard on these Metro members. St. Alphonsus beat Lutheran Westland 35-12, and Royal Oak Shrine drilled Northwest 40-8. Northwest was a 20-15 winner over the Warriors a year ago, but the Crusaders finished 3-6 overall and Westland 4-5. PICKS: The Warriors are better Lutherans, on the football field.

St. Agatha at Pickford, 7:30: The Aggies (1-0) are going on the road, and they'll see a lot of it, too! St. Agatha is going all the way to the eastern U.P. to play the Pickford Panthers and plan to make it an overnight trip. The first week went well for state-ranked St. Agatha, beating Clarenceville. Class D Pickford was 2-6 last year and lost 32-0 to Rapid River last week. The Panthers are led by backs Ross Kennerly and Casey Blenkhorn.

Borgess can't derail Class A champ

■ BASKETBALL

It looks like there will be no mythical state championship for the Redford Bishop Borgess girls basketball team.

Flint Northern put a dent in Borgess' hopes, defeating the Spartans, 58-46, in a matchup of the state's top two teams Tuesday night in Flint.

Northern is the defending Class A champion and Borgess is the two-time defending Class C state champion. Since the two play in different classes, they can't meet in the state tournament.

With everyone back from last ear's team, including 6-foot-4 sophomore center Tawana McDonald and 5-10 junior guard Deana Nolan, Northern is expected to repeat in Class A. The Spartans are overwhelming favorites in Class C and they were hoping to stake a claim as the top team, regardless of class, with a victory over Northern.

At least the Spartans didn't go down without a fight. The two teams played to a standoff after Northern jumped to a 16-3 lead in the first six minutes of the game.

"We talked about playing good, intense defense from beginning to end," Northern coach Leteia Hughley said. "I saw them (the Spartans) play in the state (Class C championship) game and to me they don't play like a Class C school. They're Class A caliber. They're a good team and deserve the publicity. I'm definitely encouraged and the girls feel good about the win."

Borgess senior guard Maxann Reese, the leading Miss Basketball candidate, went scoreless in the first and fourth quarters and was held to 12 points on five of 18 shooting.

Senior point guard Adriane Bryant helped the Spartans stay close, scoring 11 of her team-high 14 points in the second half.

"I'm just mad because I know I can play better," Reese said. "People in the crowd said I'm overrated, but I didn't get there by a fluke. Of all the games we play, I choose to play like crap in this one."

Northern used fresh players against Reese throughout the game, starting with sophomore guard Clarissa Elam. Senior Taleesha Hardy and Nolan also got cracks at Reese.

"We tried to wear her down, when someone got tired, we put someone else on her," Hughley said.

McDonald, who set a Class A state championship record with 11 blocks in the final, had several blocks and led the Vikings with 15 rebounds. She also was one of three Vikings in double figures in points with 12. Senior forward Sheree Bates, no slouch herself in the low post, had a game-high 16 points, Hardy added 10, junior LaShawn Grays nine and Nolan seven.

Borgess coach Dave Mann decided to give 5-8 junior Regina Respert the job of guarding McDonald to start the game in order to save some of the taller Spartans from early foul trouble.

Respert did a respectable job, but Bates hurt the Spartans early with eight first-quarter points, including six straight in a 10-0 run.

"The biggest problem with defending them is they're all good," Mann said. "We just got our butts kicked in the first quarter. I thought we were hyperactive, which has sometimes been our problem in big games."

The Spartans switched from a man-to-man defense to a 1-3-1 zone after the first quarter, a move which helped limit Northern's chances at second shots.

Northern had a 9-5 rebounding edge in the first quarter, but the two teams finished with 33 rebounds each. Junior center Candice Finley led the Spartans with 10.

Borgess shot a miserable percent (six-for-31) from the field in the first half as Northern jumped to a 26-15 halftime lead.

Northern led 36-21 midway through the third quarter before the Spartans went on an 11-1 run to cut the lead to 37-32 after three quarters. Koren Merchant started the spurt with a three-point play, Reese made a pair of three-point shots and Bryant had a driving layup to give the Spartans hope.

But Northern started the fourth quarter with an 8-0 run to build a 45-32 lead.

Georgia on my mind after bout with bass

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

When the lunker largemouth broke through the surface of the lake with the authority of a erupting volcano and tail-hopped across the surface, Adrenalin shot through my veins sending a chill through my body like I'd been hit by an icy northern wind.

"Oh boy Don! You got cha a huge un," exclaimed our host Scott Clower in his deep southern drawl.

Upon seeing the fish, I immediately dropped my rod and reel on the grassy bank and raced to the truck to retrieve my video camera.

"Keep yer tip up. Man, that's a nice un. You got ya a seven-'er eight-pounder there bud!," exclaimed Scott.

Up to this point, our family vacation had been rather uneventful, but extremely relaxing. My wife, two daughters and I drove down to Georgia to spend a week with my in-laws. We endured a ravaging Georgia storm — the same storm that ripped three holes in the roof of the Georgia Dome — on the way down and only had to pull off the road four times. But even driving through the worst storm I had even encountered paled in comparison to the excitement of the ensuing battle between my father-in-law, Don Wrathell, and this boadcious Georgia bass.

"You got a net, Scott," questioned Don, with eager anticipation.

Boxing a bass

"Dang! No I don't. But I'll git something," he answered, then dashed back to the truck only to return with a square cardboard box he had used to store crickets in the day before.

Now I knew we were in trouble. Here was my father-in-law battling, by far, the biggest largemouth I had ever laid eyes on and this accomodating southern gentleman was going to try to net him with an undersized cardboard box?

His shoes and sox went flying up the bank as Scott dashed back to the shore. Then, without the slightest bit of hesitation, he wadded into the warm, murky water with box in hand.

"Bring 'em in, Don. That's it. Bring 'em over here," directed Scott. Then with one steady, calculated scoop of the cricket box, the fish was in the 'net'. (I know this sounds like a big fish story, but I have it on tape.)

"Wheeew! Oh Man! I can't believe it! Will you look at that! Look at that Fish," said Don, the excitement culminating in his voice.

After a couple minutes of back-slapping and high-fiving it was time to examine the fish a little more closely. He checked in at 7-pounds, 6-ounces on my digital fish scale and measured a tad short of 25-inches

The south is known for producing big bass and this adventure underlined that fact. If you ever have the opportunity to fish in the south take the time and wet a line. Don't forget a video camera, and of course, a net . . . or a box if you're so inclined.

Women experience the outdoors

A unique outdoor program designed to introduce women, single parents and their children to a variety of outdoor activities will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Pontiac Lake Recreation Area in Waterford.

Entitled "Women Experiencing the Great Outdoors," the program is sponsored by the Oakland County Sportsmen's Club Women's Auxiliary and the Friends of Pontiac Lake Recreation Area.

The two-day program is free of charge and will offer hands-on experience, demonstrations and seminars on a variety of outdoor-related activities. Topics to be covered include camping, hiking, backpacking, fishing, rifle and archery safety and shooting, fly tying, kayaking, in-line skating, mountain biking, horseback riding and water skiing.

A state park motor vehicle permit is required to enter Pontiac Lake Recreation Area. Daily permits are $4 each. A fishing license, available at local bait and outdoor stores, is required for any adult wishing to fish on Pontiac Lake. Daily fishing licenses are available for $5.35.

There will also be activities for children, a craft show with outdoor-related items, a water skiing show at 1 p.m. on Saturday, along with demonstrations, classes and informal talks by representatives of local clubs.

When we say we screen our doctors, it's not a slogan and it's not just some routine examination, either. This is a procedure we take very seriously. After all, your health is at stake here. So, before any doctors become Blue Care Network doctors, before they ever examine one single patient, they must first survive a very detailed examination themselves.

Here's what it takes. First, all doctors (personal care physicians and specialists) are reviewed against very specific written criteria. (Quality of care is what we're measuring here.) In addition, an on-site inspection is conducted by specially trained staff and results are reviewed by Blue Care Network doctors in the area.

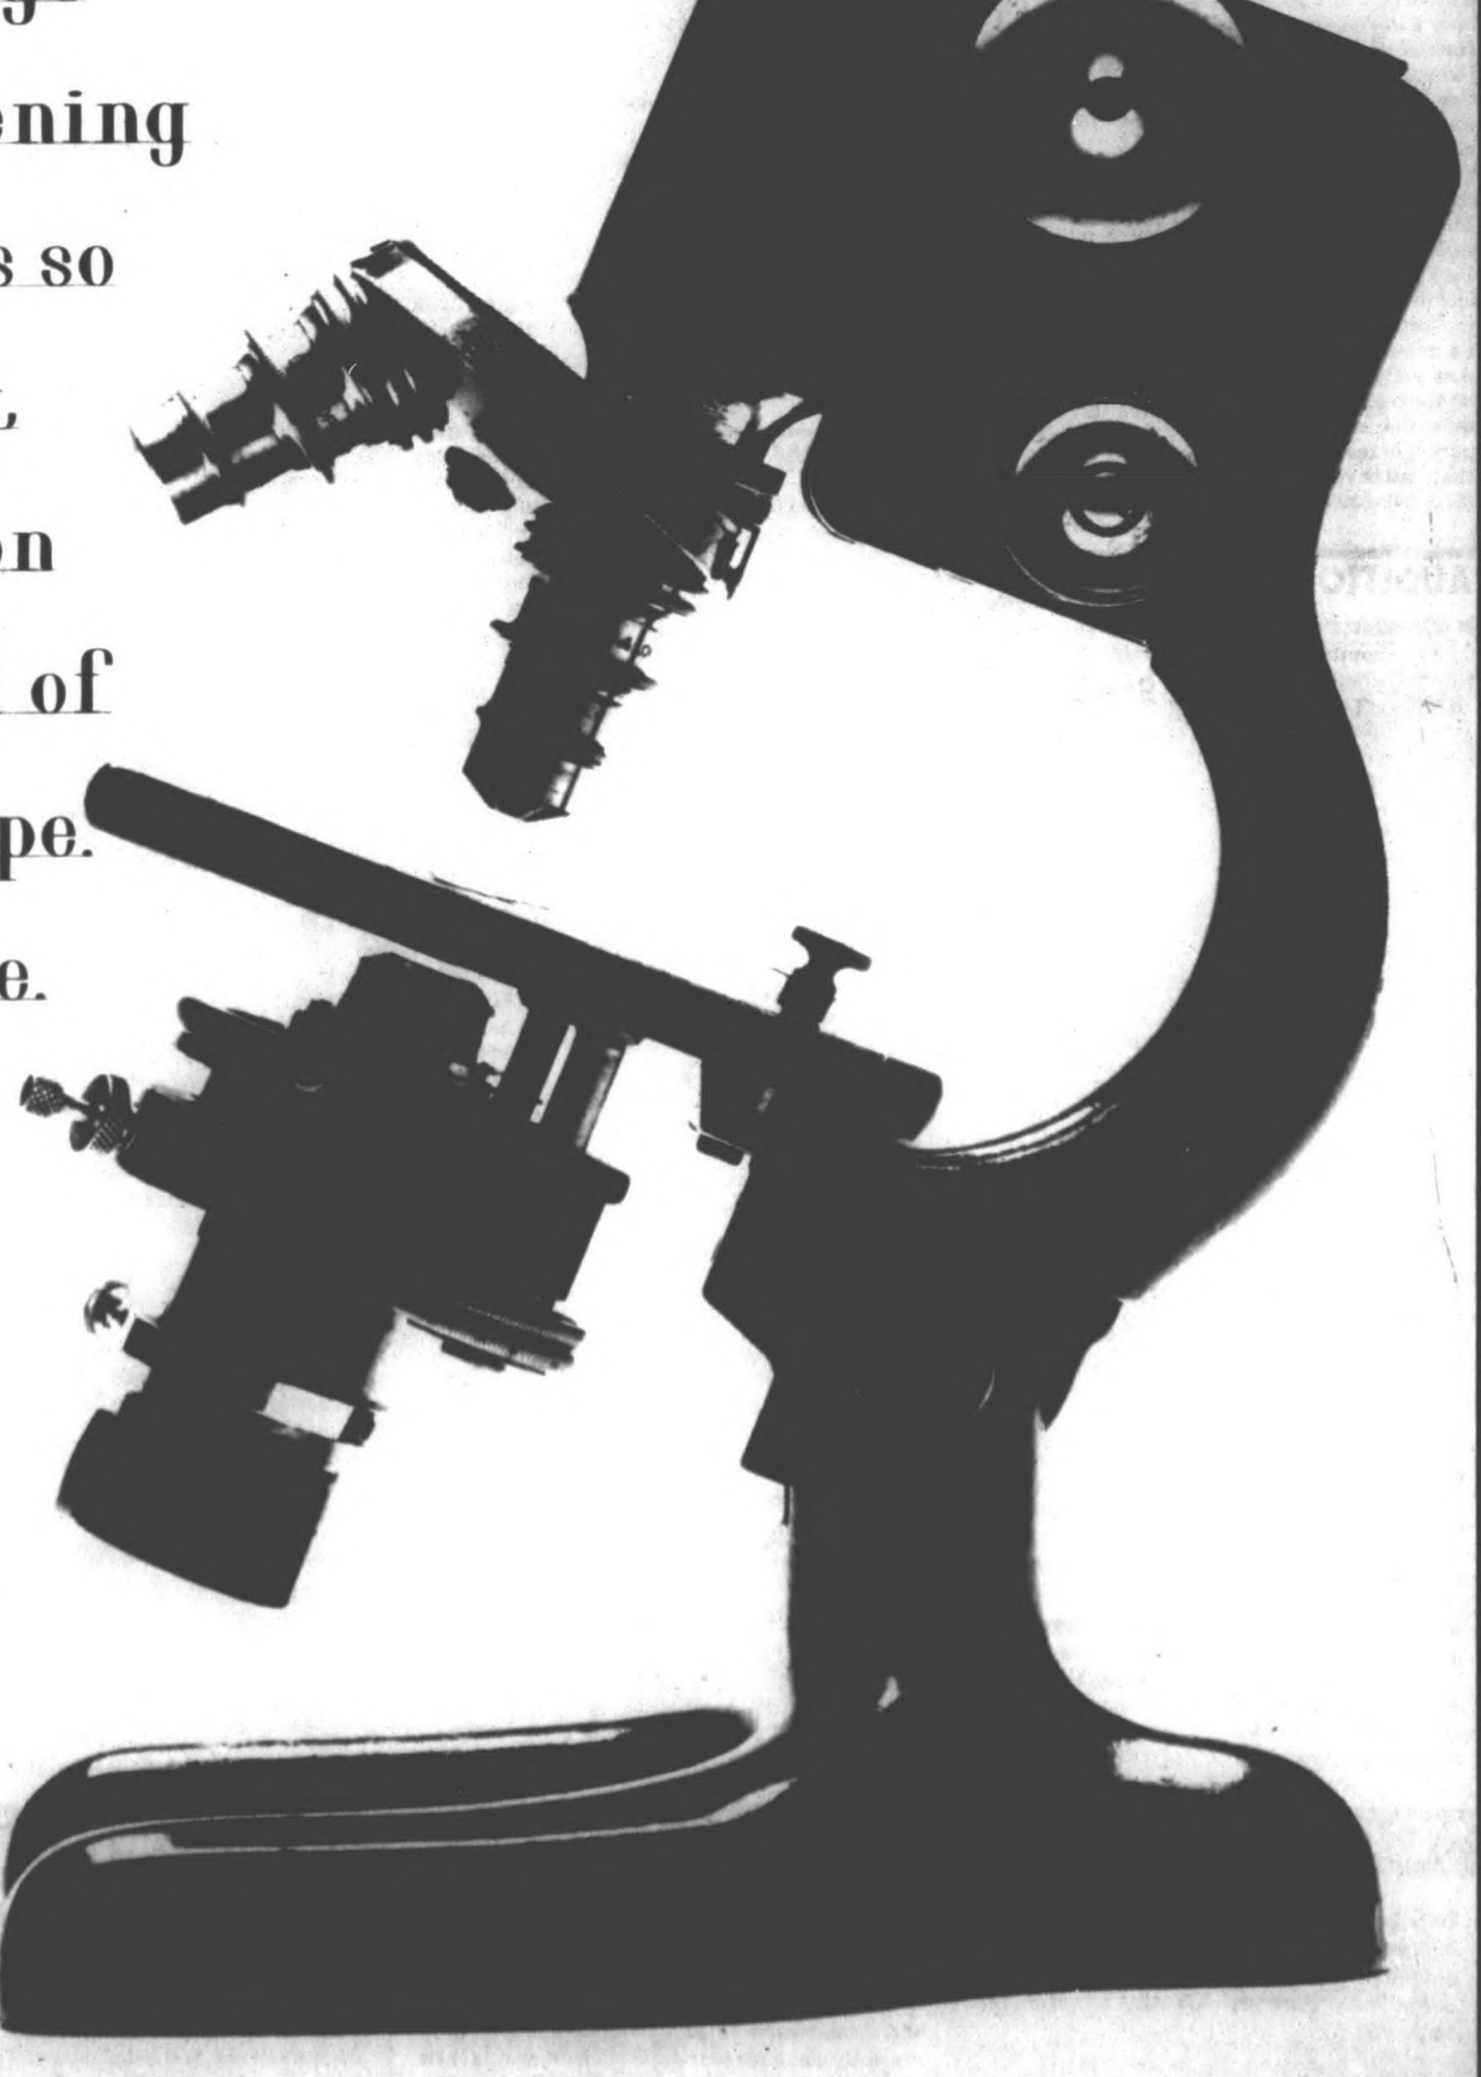

Patient satisfaction surveys are conducted by a professional, independent research company. Here, we ask patients to evaluate their doctor's technical skills as well as the basic level of service and care.

And, Blue Care Network works with its personal care physicians to ensure that quality standards are met.

Finally, Blue Care Network itself is reviewed for quality by a national industry watchdog association.

Oh, and after all these standards have been met, the doctors selected have the pleasure of going through this process all over again every two years for as long as they're with us.

Our doctors go through a screening process that's so detailed, it puts them on the other end of the microscope. For a change.

Now, that is a tall order to fill. But if we're going to take the guesswork out of selecting a doctor, we should try our hardest to provide you with a sizable list of quality personal care physicians and specialists. It's as simple as that.

Community Hospice offers adult grief recovery series

Beginning in October, Community Hospice Services will offer a free adult grief recovery series for those people who have suffered a significant loss of a loved one.

The classes will meet 6:30-8 p.m for six consecutive weeks, beginning Wednesday, Oct. 4, at the CHS's Westland offices, 32932 Warren Road, Suite 100. They will conclude with a group memorial service in November.

"One of the most important factors that influences a person's grieving process is whether that person receives validation for their feelings," said Kelly Rhoades, director of bereavement and spiritual care for CHS. "The existing societal attitude, although changing, is one of wanting to make it better and move the person through the pain at an unrealistic pace.

"Instead of offering support, society inadvertently discounts the grieving person's feelings. We need to respect the individual grief process of every person, and at the same time recognize and learn about the common themes that we all experience."

The series is designed to assist individuals and families as they attempt to understand and work through the bereavement process. Learning to manage grief is one of the themes in the grief recovery series.

"We don't really 'recover' from a significant loss, because our lives don't return to 'normal,'" Rhoades said. "We aren't the same people we were before the loss. We define a new normal for ourselves, discover strengths we never knew we had and may even grow through the grief — over time with adequate supports and opportunities to release feelings."

Other themes of the series include what makes it difficult to grieve, problems in grief, the fight against normal reactions to grief, learning to be good to yourself, and building self-esteem after loss.

The facilitator assumes an informal, open, self-disclosing style while teaching the series, and encourages participants to stay connected with one another after the series ends. Since each session builds upon the next, Rhoades suggests participants attend all six for maximum benefit.

CHS provides compassionate, skilled home care to incurably ill patients and their families in western Wayne, southern Oakland and eastern Washtenaw counties. It maintains offices in Westland and Plymouth.

There is no charge for the series. To register or for more information, call Kelly Rhoades at (313) 522-4244.

Gilda's Club looking for headquarters

As plans progress for the Sept. 17 second annual "Family Walk and Block Party" of Gilda's Club at Cobo Center, the nonprofit organization is looking for suburban office space.

Once open, Gilda's Club of Metro Detroit will offer free emotional and social support services to men, women and children with all types of cancer as well as their families and friends.

Area building owners or Realtors who have a 5,000- to 7,000-square-foot facility available may call Gilda's Club at (810) 851-6557.

The building should be easily accessible from major expressways with at least 50 parking spaces for evening and weekend activities.

Gilda's Club will need space for offices, a community room, kitchen and small meeting rooms.

The "Family Walk and Block Party" is dedicated this year to the memory of one of the Gilda's Club founders, Ina Kadish.

The three-mile walk begins at 1 p.m.

The one-mile walk begins at 1:10 p.m., and the indoor block party begins at 1:30 p.m.

Registration for the walk is $20.

To register, call (810) 540-9099.

The organization is named in memory of comedian and former Detroiter Gilda Radner.

Ladbroke horse track planing fewer races

Ladbroke Detroit Race Course will apply to the Michigan Office of the Racing Commissioner for 100 racing dates for the 1996 season, according to Ladbroke president John Long.

"Michigan's thoroughbred racing industry has continued to erode in 1995 as a result of horse supply, purse levels and increased competition," Long said in a press release. "This request for only 100 dates is consistent with that erosion.

"We believe that full-card simulcasting and tax relief could be a temporary shot in the arm. Certainly purses would be increased which would benefit the horsemen and the ability to receive thoroughbred signals from around the country would excite our fans."

DRC was not able to run the dates it was awarded for 1995 due to a horse shortage.

"We'll be feeling the effects of 1995 for some time to come," Long said. "Many horse owners lost confidence in Michigan's racing industry and left the state. We've got to try and win them back if we're going to survive."

Ladbroke DRC, located in Livonia, conducts Michigan's largest thoroughbred meet.

LET'S REMODEL

Be realistic about addition project

NARI
MICHIGAN REMODELING ASSOCIATION

Q: We are considering adding a room to our home. How long will it take to do the addition and how much chaos should I expect during the project? I was told that there are numerous people coming in and out during the project.

A: No one can prepare you for all of the unforeseen incidents that may transpire but it is important that you set realistic expectations for the project. You may want to ask the contractor for names of clients that have had additions done so that you have a better idea of what to expect. Be sure to discuss your concerns thoroughly about the project with your contractor including security issues and how to handle the traffic in and out of your home.

■ Establish a realistic timetable with your contractor. Trying to have an addition done in time for Thanksgiving may only cause everyone involved a great deal of grief. Factors that predicate the length of time include weather, supply shortages, and inspections. When doing a standard room addition (200 square feet) you can expect roughly six weeks from the time the cement contractor begins.

■ Establish a communication center for questions that arise. Keep one main spokesperson for the family, if possible.

■ There will be plenty of dirt to deal with. Try to keep a positive attitude. Your contractor will have suggestions on how to keep it to a minimum.

■ Try to keep interruptions to a minimum with work crews. It can slow down production time and your concerns are best voiced with your contractor or supervisor.

There will be many types of subcontractors for the job. Following is an outline of what you might expect in the scheduling of the job but remember the production schedule can be altered significantly if something goes wrong. The cement contractor will take a day to dig the footing followed by a city inspector checking it on the following day.

After inspection, they will pour the concrete and wait a day to set the block work. The block work should set up 3-4 days before beginning the framing. After the block sets up, the carpenter crew will take 2-3 days to frame it along with one day to install the siding. After the carpenter is finished, plan on 2-3 days for the mechanicals (heating, plumbing, and electrical).

Once the mechanicals are roughed in, everything must be inspected by different city inspectors which can take 3-4 days. Once inspections pass, it will be time to insulate. Figure one day to insulate and one day to inspect. Some cities require an insulation inspection before allowing drywall to be installed. The drywall is next and will take one to one-and-one-half weeks depending how the humidity affects the drying of the mud. Once the mud has dried, it must be sanded smooth. This step along with the break through will be the largest mess of the construction stage.

After the drywall is complete, the finish mechanicals are put in place. This usually takes 2-3 days. The finish carpentry (door installation, trim, etc.) follows taking a day or two. The debris is cleaned up after this stage and most homeowners will do their own painting, staining, and floor covering.

One of the most important factors is the choice of contractor for the job. A more experienced contractor will schedule the job tightly, supervise it properly and will do what they can to make it a good experience for the homeowner. Take a deep breath and keep your perspective. Remodeling can be noisy, time-consuming and disruptive to the normal home environment. Keep your sense of humor and stay focused on the end result instead of just the process.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Take your camera along when you 'hit the road'

MONTE NAGLER

We've all heard the expression "hit the road." Well, by hitting the road with your camera, you'll be able to add new and exciting pictures to your photo album.

Whether it's a freeway, highway or endless country road, photographing roads will open up new vistas for you. Roads have tremendous visual potential and pictures of them can capture an incredible variety of moods.

And remember, as we travel from place to place, it's most always a road that gets us there. So why not photograph them?

Begin by studying roads in different types of light and at different times of the day. Notice how a backlit road illuminated by a rising or setting sun will glisten and shine like an unfurling ribbon.

After a rainfall, a wet road with puddles offers reflections of overhanging trees and clouds that will add a mood to your shots no other weather conditions will do.

High angles and low angles will also add variety to your pictures. Climb a nearby hill so you can get a bird's eye view of a winding road, or shoot from a low angle as the road undulates up the mountain.

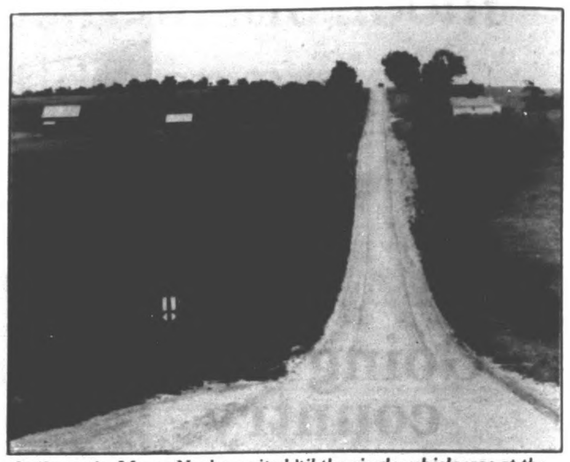

As in all good photography, pay attention to depth-of-field so that everything is sharp from front to back. You'll accomplish this by being sure to use a small lens opening.

I've always enjoyed photographing roads so that it appears the road is traveling into infinity. Whether the road ends in a bank of low clouds or at the top of a hill, there's an element of unknown and mystique because the viewer wonders what lays ahead.

The road intrigued me in the photograph shown here made near Traverse City, Mich. It looked isolated and made me wonder what was over the ridge. I waited to snap the shutter until a single vehicle was at the very top of the rise to add a further element of loneliness.

So the next time you feel like hitting the road, do so! Just make sure your camera is with you.

Monte Nagler is a fine art photographer based in Farmington Hills. You can leave him a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then his mailbox number, 1873.

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

Better consumer protection needed

JOE GAGNON

Before I write another word on this subject, I must first say that the story you are about to read does not apply to every appliance service company there is in this industry. There are many good ones in the business or repairing major home appliances and this article is not meant to hurt their reputation or good standing in your community.

It is the intention of the writer to help educate the reader that there are some appliance service companies which are very well known by the industry itself, and by the district courts and consumer advocates as Rip Offs. All in all, the education to consumers provided by the news media which listed names etc. has not been sufficient to keep these companies from doing it again. They continue on and on and there appears to be no way to stop them.

The attorney generals office is well aware of who some of these companies are and so is Ms. Esther Shapiro's office along with the Better Business Bureau. The District Courts in the very community you live in have records which show repeatedly the same companies in small claim cases. With all these records and evidence, still nothing can stop them.

Some 10 years ago, I appeared before a legislative committee in Lansing urging that some type of regulation be applied to the appliance service industry and new consumer protection laws be applied to put a stop to the rip off of the consumer in the state of Michigan. Ladies and gentlemen, the bill which was written never even got out of committee. Tomorrow may be a different story, only time will tell.

In the state of New York, a new law which mandates that appliance repair technicans can only be paid by a salary instead of a commission passed the house. Imagine the support which must have gathered to pass such a measure. They must have some pretty good facts to support such a measure.

In other parts of the country, the service industry itself is forming organizations to create and ensure measures which will protect consumers against rip offs by the appliance service industry. How much clearer can the message be than when the industry itself takes steps to enhance its own image. Maybe I was 10 years ahead of myself when I alone tried to do it. I'm not alone anymore, I have you and I have the reputation of a consumer advocate given me by the airwaves of radio, television, magazines and newspapers.

Having gone through bankruptcy court, nobody can ever point fingers at my ethics in business. Stay tuned, the story's not over on how you can help and become a part of this new consumer movement.

Shortly after you read this article, I will be meeting with State Rep. Lyn Bankes of Livonia and Redford. Ms. Bankes has become a friend of mine who stands beside me in my fight for you. She and I can not do this alone as we know we will need your support. Here is what I need you to do, if you would like to lend your support to better consumer protection in the state of Michigan. I you're interested in becoming a part of this drive against appliance rip offs, send me a note telling me about your experiences and feelings on this subject. With the support of the readers of this column, I believe that the state of Michigan will pass new laws which will save many homeowners millions of dollars per year. Now I need You.

Don't let winter catch you...

STORY BY STAFF WRITER HUGH GALLAGHER

We asked our At Home readers to share some of their summer fun with us and the response has been outstanding.

These summer homes and weekend retreats mean a lot to their owners. No matter how much work they take, our readers tell us they love their escapes from the city.

Take the Sykora family of Canton. The Pink Cottage on Danish Landing in Grayling has been in Michelle Sykora's family since 1929. Though it now sports gray vinyl siding, for 63 years in was a "bright pink" and, so, the name remains.

"When my great-grandparents had it built, only Danes could obtain property on the landing that overlooks Lake Margarethe. Each summer my great-grandmother would travel up north to the cottage with her two daugters and spend a great deal of time there," Michelle Sykora writes. "There are approximately 30 cottages on the landing. Each of the cottages remained in the original owners hands. Therefore, the families grew quite close."

The Pink Cottage passed from great-grandparents to grandparents to Michelle's father to Michelle and her husband Steve in 1989. Every year the Danish Landing families hold a Fourth of July picnic. In addition to the family atmosphere, the Sykoras enjoy fishing, boating and hiking.

For Ken and Sally Pates of Livonia, owning a cottage is a new experience, not a family tradition. They bought their charming chalet in Roscommon County in March. The cottage is in a deep woods two miles from South Higgins Lake State Park.

"One of the great things about furnishing the cabin has been getting things "on the cheap' (or free)," write the Pates. "Shopping at thrift stores, garage and rummage sales has been fun. Some of our cheap finds include a lawn mower, three-speed bike, sofa, bookcase, rocking chair and chaise lounge, each for $20 or less."

The nearby activities include golf, putt putt golf, water-slides and canoeing.

"Of course, it has not all been fun and relaxing since we bought the place," they write. "As always, there has been a cerain amount of cleaning and fixing up."

But, despite the work, the special appeal of the Michigan north is a plus for the Pates.

"It is such a pleasure to see deer and wild turkeys, not to mention the abundance of black squirrels and chipmunks, especially when out walking or bike riding. Once Ken saw a fox while walking in the woods across from the cabin."

The beauty of the Higgins Lake area also appealed to the Smith family of Garden City. Linda Smith writes that she was "awestruck" seven years ago when she first saw the crystal clear lake. Every year for six years Linda, her husband, Darryl, and their two children journeyed to North Higgins Lake State Park for "a week of boating and floating on this uncommercialized inland beauty."

But as the children – Michele and Mike – approached their teen years, camping became less appealing. Darryl and Linda began to check Observer classifieds for a cottage. A rainy week of camping led to the big decision.

They bought a place in the woods, two miles from North Higgins Lake, "a warm, woodsy, affordable vacation place, ready to fulfill our year-round enjoyment."

"If one were to ponder just what it is that Roscommon lacks, only crowded malls and heavy traffic come to mind," writes Linda Smith. "The area is blessed with open, wooded space, relaxed and free from the hustle and bustle of metro Detroit."

Getting away from the hustle and bustle also motivates Charlotte Wirth and her family of Redford to head for their cottage on Long Lake near Hale on the "Sunrise Side" of up north.

"Almost every Friday night as we pile in the car (dog and cat included), instead of dreading the three- hour drive as any normal person would do, we can't help but be excited to be going "up north.' It's a vacation every time, even if it's only for the weekend, even if we're going up to do the same work we'd be doing if we stayed home – rake leaves, cut grass, paint, cook and clean," Charlotte Wirth writes.

On the cover:

Beautiful vistas: The Wirths enjoy stunning views of Long Lake on the Sunrise Side in autumn, summer and winter.

She adds that her family enjoys the lake summer and winter and marvels at the birds and wildlife in the Huron Forest across the road.

"The family togetherness is there whether you like it or not," she writes. "We find different talents and abilities that we all have, try new projects or adventures that we wouldn't dare do at home, and learn to rely on each other out of necessity."

The casual style of life up north is what appeals to the Adams family of Plymouth, as well. Their "Cozy Cottage" on Lake Charlevoix in Boyne City strikes a patriotic theme.

"Our decor is all American red, white and blue in color and nautical, Mary Engelbreit and Disney in style. It is our fun house by the lake," writes Connie Adams.

The Adams family bought their cottage a year and a half ago and have been busy landscaping and camouflaging.

"My husband, Jim, covered all things ugly (gas meters, etc.) with flower boxes and bird houses and I painted them. We added blue shutters and a lot of perennials, black-eyed susans, veronica, iris, hosta, astillibe, daylillies and cornflowers."

The Myers family of Canton have also been hard at work on their summer place on Coldwater Lake near Mount Pleasant.

Dockside: The Adams family have an easy walk to beautiful Lake Charlevoix from their summer home.

"We have updated the interior (new floor coverings, bath fixtures, furniture, window treatments, etc.) and make substantial improvements in the exterior landscaping, especially along the 85 feet of water front," Roger Meyers, writes.

All of this is done to enjoy Coldwater Lake.

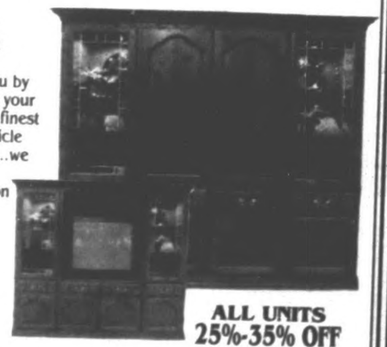

"We were attracted to Coldwater Lake by the great water quality, excellent condition of our cottage, nearby recreational amenities, friendly neighbors, good shopping/activities in Mount Pleasant and reasonable drive from Canton," Meyers writes.

Obviously, our readers love their retreats and we thank them for sharing them with us.

GARDEN SPOT

A walkway of caladiums catches the eye

MARTY FIGLEY

I never know when an opportunity for a story will come up. We were driving down a street in Birmingham recently and a planting on either side of a sidewalk caught my eye. I said, "What an idea — how beautiful!" A day or so later I went to the house and talked to the owner, Barry Harrison, a local interior designer, about the wonderful, colorful display of caladiums marching up to the front porch, which, by the way, held containers of lush geraniums and other plants.

Harrison graciously agreed to tell me his secrets. The reason he chose caladiums for this area of the garden was that there is no sun. What a delightful choice. The colors of white, shades of greens, creams and maroons on the veined and marbled foliage were striking.

Harrison waited until the bulbs were on sale (the first of July in many stores) and bought 300 mixed varieties. He soaked the bulbs in homogenized milk for five days in the garage. This allowed the milk to ferment and "do its thing" with the bulbs. Then he planted them two inches deep, he said, "in the typical Birmingham soil — mostly clay," along the walk. The bulbs begin to come up in about 10 days. I visited the first part of August and some of the plants were still emerging. Others were in bloom. Near the sidewalk, Elephant's Ear bulbs were planted to add height and a solid green tone. The leaves of this plant get quite large and added an interesting note. In a house the leaves of this bulb can grow three to five feet long.

The leaves on the caladiums were exceptionally large. Perhaps the reason is that Harrison fertilized them with Stern's Miracle-Gro with a much more concentrated solution than is recommended. He mixed eight teaspoons of Miracle-Gro to a gallon of wate and fed the plants "every seven to 10 days." He does NOT recommend this for any other plants. The strong solution would ordinarily kill them.

He will use the colorful leaves of the caladiums in indoor floral arrangements. He seals the ends of the stems with melted glue so that their beauty can be enjoyed for many days.

These plants will continue to be beautiful until frost cuts them down. Then Harrison will dig them and store them in a mesh bag or nylon hose in a cool place until time to replant them for a repeat performance.

"I may braid the foliage and hang them to store them for the winter," he said.

These lovely plants could follow a spring show of tulips or other spring bulbs that bloom before the shade takes over. I guarantee the walk to the front door will be slower while visitors admire the colors and forms of caladiums if you use this idea along your entrance path.

Caladiums and Elephant's Ear belong to the Araceae (Arum Family) of large-leafed herbs. They are native to the tropical Americas and are often used as bedding plants, where they can be set out after the danger from frost is over.

This visit with Harrison was an eye-opener to me and an invitation to you to let me know if you have an extraordinary planting, or know of a neighbor who does. Write to me at The Eccentric, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham 48009, and tell me about special treasures or your discoveries. If we can't visit to see them before winter arrives, there is always next season.

Share a row

Share a Row for the Hungry, sponsored by the Garden Writers Association of America, is still going strong. I wrote about this in May and want to remind you that extra produce can be given to, in Oakland County: Food Bank of Oakland County, (810) 332-1373; The Lighthouse, Pontiac, (810) 335-2462; Neighborhood House, Rochester, (810) 651-5836; and in Wayne County: Hunger Action Coalition, (313) 963-7788. For other locations, call Second Harvest, in Chicago, (312) 263-2303.

TIMELY GARDEN TIPS

■ For best selection, buy bulbs now; store at room temperatures until ready to plant.

■ When you visit Cranbrook Gardens, stop in the greenhouse to buy plants 10 a.m. to noon Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

■ Watch mum foliage; if it looks wilted, water.

■ Start fall garden cleanup.

■ Put cole crops plants in the garden for late fall and winter harvest.

UM holds gardeners' sale

Mums, trees, shrubs, peonies, poppies, wildflowers, grasses and bulbs are among the unusual plants being offered at the University of Michigan Matthaei Botanical Gardens Friends annual Fall Gardener's Sale fund-raiser, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday-Sunday, Sept. 16-17, at the gardens.

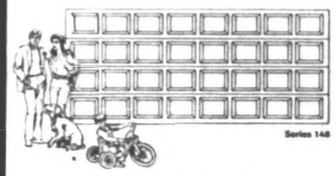

Patrons attending can choose from more than 185 robust, hardy mums and several unusual and sought-after landscape trees and shrubs that can be planted now.

Admission is free, and there is plenty of free parking on site. Refreshments will be available for a fee. The gardens are at 1800 N. Dixboro Road, Ann Arbor. Take US-23 north to Geddes Road. Head east on Geddes Road to Dixboro Road. Turn left onto Dixboro Road and go 2½ miles north. For more information, call (313) 998-7061.

Among the special items being offered will be the showy Yellow Magnolia (Magnolia x "Elizabeth"). The neat growth habit, medium rate of growth and pyramidal shape make this a landscape gem. Another special offering to this year's sale will be the Big Bluestem (Andropogon gerardii). This colorful, prairie native grass grows five to six feet tall and is spectacular after the first frost when the grass turns light red.

An assortment of barefoot dormant early spring wildflowers that are better suited to a fall planting will also be available. Several hundred choice perennials will be offered including hardy chrysanthemums, ornamental grasses, daylilies, hosta and poppies. The assortment and variety of bulbs include daffodils, tulip, crocus and hyacinth.

The selection on some plant quantities may be limited, and shoppers may want to come early to be assured of their first choice. A Members' Sale will take place 5-7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 15.

BOOK BREAK

ESTHER LITTMANN

For its size, Israel boasts one of the most varied topographies in the world. Forests and deserts, mountains and valleys stretch from the "Dead Sea to the Med Sea to the Red Sea." The same is true of Israel's history, a kaleidoscope of religions, cultures and personalities that have clashed and occasionally coalesced within its shifting borders.

This variety means something of interest to almost everyone, including author William Hare. Former lawyer and journalist, Hare's travels to the Middle East inspired a book about that area entitled "Struggle for the Holy Land" (Madison Books, 1995, $29.95). In this comprehensive and fully documented work, Hare explores the origins of conflict between Arabs and Jews by tracing the evolution of these two Semitic groups from biblical times to the creation of Islam, and finally, to the emergence of Zionism and the State of Israel.

Students of that region may wonder how "Struggle" differs from other books on the same topic. Legal training and an unbiased perspective (Hare is neither Jewish nor of Arab descent) have enabled the author to examine both sides of the conflict dispassionately. His work provides what Ethan Bronner of The Boston Globe finds woefully lacking in recent publications by Shimon Peres ("Battling for Peace") and Hana Ashrawi ("This Side of Peace"), namely, "some points of intersection," an understanding of the other side's point of view.

Convinced that history is best told through the achievements of prominent individuals, the author focuses on leaders who helped mold the spiritual and political climate of the region: Mohammed, T.E. Lawrence, Theodor Herzl, David Ben-Gurion, Chaim Weizmann, Ernest Bevin and Yassir Arafat, to name only a few.

As the story unfolds, told in Hare's

INVITING IDEAS

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Today's salads come dressed in as many flavors as Baskin-Robbins. Years ago they would say — "As many as Carter's has pills." What does this generation know of Carters? Bucolic America of yesteryear knew Carter's and they also knew that they enjoyed vegetables as vegetables, with little concern over how to "dress them up."

In the '50s, salad was an accompaniment, or maybe a first course among some. In the '90s it is not only main course material, it may be void of greens and based with rice, pasta, exotic fruits, or spicy beef. I remember the days when salads were just salads and the big four dressings were — French, Thousand Island, Blue Cheese and Italian. The explosion of multi-flavors for greenery seemed to hit after the "Ranch Dressing Craze." Well, it seems "Ranch" has stood the test of time — it still appears as a principle option on every salad bar.

Grocery stores, specialty food shops, and even discount department stores have a multitude of salad dressing choices. From every exotic oil imaginable to no-fat products laden with every herb in the book — all lined up like a casting call, and waiting for direction. Some of those no-fat dressings really scare me — I love the concept, it's what's in them that has me worried.

I must admit, while I do have parties with salad themes, the shelves of my refrigerator have never been graced with prepared bottled dressings. I just prefer to make my own.

Have a party using salads as your theme — it's fun and simple. Incorporate different types of salad — some with chunky vegetables, some with pasta and julienne strip veggies. Try a flavored pasta with a whimsical shape, mushrooms and paper thin veal with a light pesto based dressing, or a fruit, nut and poached tuna or chicken with mango yogurt topping. Make a salad with crunchy unusual rice — wild or Wehani, or couscous.

SPICY THAI BEEF SALAD

1 boneless beef top sirloin steak cut 1-inch thick (approximately 1¼ pounds)
½ medium red onion, cut into thin wedges
3 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro leaves
4 cups torn mixed salad greens or thinly sliced nappa cabbage
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped peanuts
Dressing:
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 teaspoons sugar
2 teaspoons dark sesame oil
1 green serrano chili pepper, seeded, finely chopped
1 large clove garlic, crushed

Place beef steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Broil approximately 16-18 minutes for medium rare to medium doneness, turning once. Let stand 10 minutes. Trim fat from steak. Carve steak crosswise into slices. Into medium bowl, combine beef, onion and cilantro.

In small bowl, whisk together dressing ingredients. Pour over beef mixture; toss to coat.

To serve, arrange salad greens on serving platter; top with beef mixture. Sprinkle with peanuts. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Recipe from Beef Industry Council.

GREEN GODDESS DRESSING

2 anchovy fillets, drained and chopped
¾ cup mayonnaise
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
1 tablespoon tarragon wine vinegar
3 tablespoons chives, finely chopped
2 tablespoons parsley, finely chopped
5 tablespoons yogurt or heavy strained yogurt (Leban)
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

In a bowl mash the anchovies to paste consistency — add garlic and mayonnaise. Stir in the lemon juice and vinegar. Add the chives and parsley. Whisk in yogurt and add salt and pepper to taste. Yield 1½ cups

Serve with cold potatoes, fish, shellfish or vegetables.

APPLE WASABI MAYONNAISE

2 large Macintosh apples, peeled and chopped into ½-inch dice
¼ cup white table wine
1 cup mayonnaise
Wasabi (Asian horseradish)
Sea salt and white pepper to taste

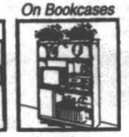

Over medium high heat — cook apples gently with white wine in a covered non-reactive pan until soft. Press the mixture through a food mill or lightly process in a food processor using the steel blade on pulse. Return the fruit puree to the pan and simmer gently over low heat, stirring constantly. When the fruit mixture appears to have absorbed the excess liquid, remove from the heat and let cool completely.

Whisk the apple puree by hand, into the mayonnaise and add the Wasabi, salt and pepper to taste. Makes 1½ cups.

This dressing is delicious on shredded cabbage and cold potatoes. It's also a good match with poached chicken.

INTERIOR MOTIVES

Wicker will work with any setting

NAOMI STONE LEVY

■ Locating several antique objects of wicker should prove aesthetically pleasing. If you are lucky enough to secure old wicker it will undoubtedly date from the 1890s.

There is a whole, wide, wonderful world of interiors out there that can be aided and abetted by including wicker furnishings. Wicker no longer is confined to porches and sunrooms. It can add sophistication to any room, as well as charm to a country-inspired background.

Wicker is available at almost any price level. Visit the huge import showrooms and you will find stacks of modestly priced tables, chairs, sofas, lamps and other accessory bits and pieces. Arrange your room, of course laid out in a pre-planned assemblage. Not the best plan of attack!

At the outset you should think of (1) color, (2) comfort and of course my battle cry (3) quality. When I mention color I am thinking of natural wicker, other stains, black or white lacquer or painted in a vast variety of gorgeous colors. Arriving at your ultimate choice will involve decisions about fabrics. Always keep in mind that because of the unstable weave of wicker, chips of paint are bound to occur as the furniture "gives." This doesn't minimize its intrinsic beauty, perhaps it even enhances it.

Comfort may be compromised by too many pieces of wicker seating furniture, without an upholstered deck. Why not create a mix? A lounge chair and ottoman of spring construction does no harm to your overall wicker look. You may not even be aware of its presence. You WILL be aware and grateful of the added comfort.

Quality in wicker has no limitations. Your interior designer knows of handsome designs and sturdy construction not to be viewed at the import showrooms. These may be more sophisticated in character, more classic in design; not curliqued or cute. Investigate.

Sisal carpeting has just come into its own and is unsurpassed as the right accompaniment to wicker. It is now available in an array of textures and natural coloring. There are sewn on incredible borders, mitered at the four corners to resemble an antique Oriental rug.

Locating several antique objects of wicker should prove aesthetically pleasing. If you are lucky enough to secure old wicker it will undoubtedly date from the 1890s. It will have a Victorian flavor and be very charming, but not truly mixable with more modern furnishings. It will most likely be painted white.

I think of fret-work as an awesome ally to wicker, to be used in combination with it. The geometrics of fret-work look handsome in black lacquer. There is a new grouping of wicker that consists of stalks of bamboo artfully bound together with rawhide. These columns are endowed with the architectural look attuned to contemporary.

A rattan coffee table base with a thick glass top becomes a fabulous centerpiece for a furniture grouping. Likewise an endtable. DON'T SKIMP on the thickness of the top. Nothing bespeaks lack of quality as does quarter-inch or half-inch glass. Never use less than three-quarter-inch thickness; one inch is worthy of the additional cost.

A dining or games table should have a wicker base. Several of the possibilities include the shape of an X or of a drum. And the inevitable glass top — the better to view the base.

Herein lies the success of your wicker room. FABRICS. A tasteful printed chintz is particularly appropriate to the aforementioned selections. I recently used wicker painted a glossy deep forest green. The leaves of the print harmonized exquisitely with the paint. It set an incredible and subtle combination. Added to this were fresh green plants in a corner, never fakes. The plants were in clay pots and saucers to add to the natural look of the room.

In direct antithesis I worked another room; painted the wicker white, and combined it with the sole colors of a lovely gray and white print, also combined in a "garden room" atmosphere — lots of sunshine, and clay pots.

I can envisage the beige beauty of natural wicker with a small black and beige plaid, a black and beige soft chenille tweed on all of the upholstered sofas and chairs, and lots of black pillows tossed into the mix. All three schemes so different from one another, each with its own personality.

Tiny repeat prints that coordinate with the coloring of the larger prints can find their niche in any of these schemes. Additionally there are luxurious textured fabrics that are tasteful, harmonious and quietly elegant. Glorious coloring is essential to the outcome of this wicker project.

excellent narrative style, we come to understand the pride, yearnings and frustrations that motivate the actions of both peoples. "Struggle" impresses us more with the similarities between the Jews and the Arabs than with their differences. On the eve of World War I, both groups were subject to foreign rule, both felt intense national pride over a once powerful past, and both yearned for freedom and self-determination in their own country.

Furthermore, Jews and Arabs alike were the object of promises made by the British government regarding the same territory in the Middle East. Zionists wanted to return to their homeland, from which they had been repeatedly expelled by foreign invaders. A more urgent need was to escape persecution in nations that regarded them as outsiders. Arabs, on the other hand, claimed they had occupied Israel (then Palestine) from the seventh to the 12th century, their sovereignity abrogated by Turkish rule.

The British, writes Hare, became "political contortionists." Welcoming revolt against the Turks, they assured Arab leaders that their struggle would be rewarded with political freedom. Yet at the same time, the Sykes-Picot Agreement of 1916 sought to divide the Ottoman Empire into British, French and even Russian spheres of influence. A year later, the Balfour Declaration supported Jewish aspirations for a homeland in Palestine. Painfully aware of the gulf between British promises and their realization, T.E. Lawrence (Lawrence of Arabia) writes in his autobiography: "In our two years' partnership under fire they (the Arabs) grew accustomed to believing me and to think my Government, like myself, sincere. In this hope, they performed some fine things, but, of course, instead of being proud of what we did together, I was continually and bitterly ashamed."

Commenting on the Paris Peace Conference of 1919, Hare writes, "So here we have it, two groups convinced that they were ultimately moving toward nationhood in Palestine while nothing was being done by the leading powers to reconcile these sharply disparate views of the future of Palestine."

"Struggle for the Holy Land" is informative and articulate, a compassionate but unbiased look at both sides of the argument.

William Hare will sign his book 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 16, at Barnes and Noble, 6800 Orchard Lake Road in West Bloomfield.

Relocating: A smooth move requires a plan and patience.

Moving day doesn't have to be scary

By Jill Hockman
Special Writer

Don't pack your dishes in garbage bags. Don't forget to pick up your dry cleaning.

And before the loaded truck leaves your home on moving day, check every room, closet and cupboard for possessions that were left behind.

These are just a few of the moving tips offered by professionals who work every day with families moving to new homes.

Everybody who's moved from one house to another has a humorous – or tragic – moving story. But professional movers and moving truck renters have hundreds of them.

There was the man who paid $900 to rent a heated van to move his plants cross-country.

Then there's the story about the moving company whose truck had to negotiate the length of a muddy, unpaved driveway to deliver a load to a recently constructed house (the customer was charged extra).

And one family that was running behind actually dumped dishes into a garbage bag. (The moving company refused to move it).

Most families move during the summer months between Memorial and Labor Day, moving companies say. And by following some simple tips from professionals in the moving business, families can help make those moves — or any move — more efficient and less painful.

More than 29,000 houses were sold in Oakland and Wayne counties last year, according to Realcomp II Limited, a service that lists houses for six boards of Realtors.

U-Haul's calculations show that the Detroit area was the sixth-most-popular destination among its truck renters during the first quarter of 1995.

If you were one of those families, you may have some stories of your own. But if you're planning a move, take some advice from the experts.

Most moving companies offer free guides packed with tips on moving. And most moving professionals are happy to share moving stories and hints.

The first step to moving: sell, give or throw away the things you don't need.

"Start tossing out right away," said Marlene Olson, relocation coordinator for Reliable Moving/Allied Van Lines in Canton. "Get rid of things you're never going to use again, because you're wasting your money to move it."

If you've planned to give something away, do it before the movers show up. Items can be inadvertently packed, and it's time-consuming and expensive for a moving crew to partially unload a truck to uncover a bureau that was supposed to go to a neighbor.

Next, decide whether to hire a moving company or do it yourself. Professional movers can charge from $100 to $5,000 — or even more — depending on the load and move distance, said Bill Phelps, general manager of Palmer Moving and Storage.

Families who move themselves spend about 50 percent less than those who hire professional movers, according to Janet Cooper, public relations manager for U-Haul.

Marc Brouillard, who rents Ryder trucks in Farmington Hills, said some families can save that much even if they hire someone to load and unload their rental truck.

But some do-it-yourselfers cite other reasons for their decisions and are "not necessarily 100 percent economy-driven," said Cooper of U-Haul. Some people want to take a drive across the country. Others don't trust someone else with their belongings.

In addition to comparing rental truck prices, self-movers should consider whether that truck will be comfortable to drive and ride in, said John Brouillard, who owns Camp-R-Cruise Inc. with his brother, Marc.

It's also smart to compare deck heights, as a truck with a lower deck is often easier to load, said Cooper.

Once they decide on a rental truck, do-it-yourself movers should reserve it at least three weeks in advance, especially if moving at the end of the month, the Brouillards said.

Renters should check if the truck is covered under their insurance and buy more coverage if needed. In most cases, truck rental is not covered by existing insurance.

The photographs of dinged, dented and torn-apart rental trucks that are posted on the wall at Camp-R-Cruise prove that accidents do happen. That's why the Brouillards display the photographs.

Families who want someone else to do most of the work should ask for price estimates from several professional movers. Most large moving companies set their prices the same way but offer different discount rates.

For local moves, customers are charged by the hour. For other moves, the rates, which are set by the federal government, are based on the weight of the shipment and the distance of the move. Companies can then offer a discount of that rate.

Special services such as packing and extra stair flights are also factored into the moving price. Price estimates are usually calculated at the house by a moving company representative.

When comparing moving companies, customers should ask about the company's insurance, said Tony Lanzilotti, the manager at Two Men And A Truck moving company in Southfield.

Some companies offer low rates because they're not insured, and if a mover drops a television set down the stairs, the customer is responsible for replacing it.

"Everybody knows accidents happen," Lanzilotti said.

Customers should also check on their moving crew's experience and accident claim ratios, said Phelps.

"If I were moving, knowing what I know, I would want to know about who's coming out," he said.

Moving companies keep statistical accident records on their drivers, and rate them 1 through 6. Customers should ask for a driver with a 1, 2 or 3 accident rating, he said.

Phelps said customers can book professional moves on relatively short notice during the winter, but summer moves should be booked three weeks to one month in advance.

A little common sense can eliminate most moving-day mishaps.

Families should be around the house to answer any questions that the movers may have while packing, loading or unloading, Phelps said. "We have an expectation that you're going to be there to assist," he said.

Another tip: Keep your schedule open and flexible on moving and packing days. If you're having professionals pack your belongings, don't plan a going-away party at your house on the night before you leave — the movers may still be packing.

And don't schedule a 3 p.m. flight to your new hometown on moving day — the truck may not yet be loaded.

"Prepare for it to be longer than you expected. Build some leeway into your schedule," Phelps said.

Satellite dish antenna has to go, court rules

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q: Do you have any recent cases around the country in regard to satellite dishes in terms of the authority of the association to enforce a prohibition on them?

A: In a recent Florida Court of Appeals decision decided in May 1995, the court ordered a homeowner to remove his backyard satellite dish.

The homeowner's dish antenna was approved by a master association before he bought his property.

However, once he moved into his expensive house, the subdivision association _ of which he was a member _ ordered him to remove the dish.

He argued that the backyard dish was covered with patio-umbrella fabric and hidden behind a 12-foot-high hedge. He also claimed that the master association had greater authority.

The court in Florida rejected his arguments and required him to remove the dish and pay the association $30,000 in legal fees.

Q: A year ago I bought a detached condominium and have been leasing it out. The association decided to build a big pool in the back of the condominiums so that they could pump water for grass sprinkling, instead of paying high water bills. There was a vote, and the people agreed to do so.

However, after that, without notice, they built a small building as a power house, etc. They built it at the end of my lot, and it turned out to be an eyesore. The association has told me that I have nothing to say about the matter and built it anyway. Apparently they did not like the fact that I was leasing my unit. I am wondering if I have any legal say as to this matter, especially since I think that there was no need for this building.

A: It appears that the condominium made a structural capital improvement to the condominium project.

To the extent that the structural capital improvement interferes with your use and enjoyment of your unit, you may have recourse against the association.

The association may have had a responsibility to seek the approval of the co-owners on the construction of the building, particularly if they needed to specially assess for its construction. Moreover, to the extent that the construction of the building materially alters the architectural integrity of the condominium, you may also have had a say so in the building, assuming it was justified in the first instance to be constructed.

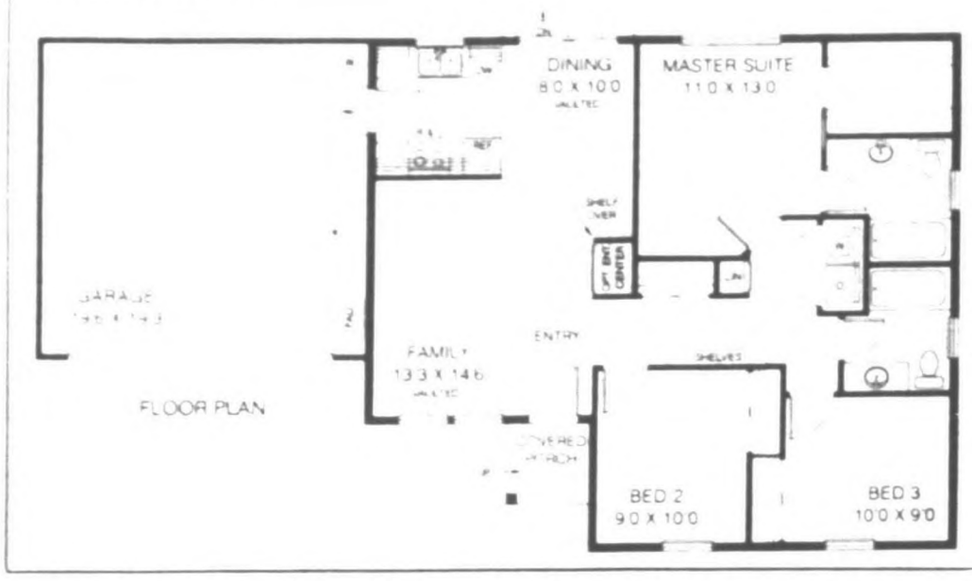

Your best recourse, of course, was before the building was constructed when you should have sought legal counsel to apprise you of your legal rights.

It may be extremely difficult now to get rid of the building, but you may have a claim for damages, depending upon the circumstances, as well as what your documents provide for in this situation.

In today's economy, when every cent counts, a young family shopping for their first house would like to make an economical purchase that presents the most for each building dollar. If you happen to fit that profile, you need look no further than the 1,033-square-foot Driftwood. This three-bedroom, two-bath house wastes none of the allotted space. Retired couples wishing to downsize, should also consider the Driftwood.

In addition to the attractive wood exterior, this innovative floor design offers more than many plans boasting a lot more square footage and a higher price tag. A classic covered porch takes you through the entry and into the spacious family room. A vaulted ceiling accents the feeling of openness that marks the Driftwood. There is plenty of room here for a full complement of furniture. An optional entertainment center will add to your enjoyment of this main family gathering spot.

The two secondary bedrooms are nice-sized, and each has a generous closet and a view window facing front. They share a full bathroom located in the connecting hallway, which also features built-in shelves and convenient guest closet.

The master suite is quite a surprise for a house this size. A big sleeping area, huge walk-in closet and private bathroom grace the main bedroom. Linen storage and a small utility closet are nearby.

The garage, stylishly attached at the side of the house, offers you the safety and benefit of being able to unload groceries directly from your car into the kitchen. No need to worry about the weather while performing this chore.

Remodeling show opens Sept. 28

Remodeling is booming in metro Detroit and around the country.

To help homeowners get a handle on what's hot and new, the Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan sponsors its third annual Fall Remodeling Show Sept. 28 through Oct. 1 at Novi Expo Center.

"The average American home is turning 28 years old, and Americans' taste in homes have changed considerably over the years," said Janet L. Compo, BIA president and a Farmington Hills residential builder.

"Kitchen and bath concepts are just the tip of the iceberg at this show where homeowners can find everything from major remodeling ideas to simple home decorating notions," she added.

Show hours are 2-10 p.m. Thursday and Friday; 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday.

Admission is $6 for adults, $4 for senior citizens and $3 for children 6-12. Family tickets for two adults and accompanying children are available at Farmer Jack for $9.

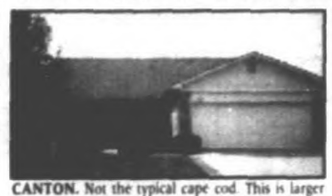

Parking is available at Novi Expo Center, I-96 at Novi Road, for a fee.

More than 200 exhibitors will show their most interesting and up-to-date products and services for kitchens, baths, doors, windows, yards and gardens, remodeling, interior design, heating and cooling, appliances, pet accessories and arts and crafts.

Special highlights include secrets of wallpaper, painting and faux finishes.

Consultations and clinics will be put on by members of the American Society of Interior Designers. Gardens will be created by members of the Metropolitan Detroit Landscape Association. The builders association will sponsor a pictorial display, Showcase of Distinctive Homes.

NEW HOMES

Fox Creek South offers amenities at affordable price

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Multi Building and Cook Development, Plymouth firms that have collaborated on several residential projects in recent years, are at it again in Fox Creek South in Canton.

They're offering 42 site condominiums, which range in price from $163,900 to $184,900 off Old Haggerty Road between Warren and Ford.

Connor Creek Building also is a partner.

"It's a rural atmosphere, a rural (unpaved) road to get to the project," said Ron Cook, president of Cook Development. "We have treed lots. We have large lots, up to 100 feet. It's close to the freeway, 275, close to M-14."

"We have a very affordable product," said Adriano Paciocco, president of Multi Building.

"We have amenities in models, and the design concept is what you'd find in half million dollar homes. We have open foyers, trim package, hardwood flooring."

Fox Creek South offers six floor plans and 24 possible exterior elevations.

Standard features in all plans include two-car garage, fireplace, oven, dishwasher and basement.

Upgrades include air conditioning, ranging in price from $2,000 to $2,500, and skylights, $750 apiece.

The on-site model, the Monteray, is a traditional colonial of 1,925 square feet with four bedrooms and 2½ baths.

The two-story foyer leads to an angled staircase. A large planter shelf is over the front door.

The main level offers a living room, dining room, kitchen/eating nook and family room with fireplace. The first floor laundry off the garage entrance includes a laundry tub. A half bath is just off the foyer.

"Kids can come in from the garage and wash their hands in the laundry room or come around the corner and go to the bathroom without going into the living room," Cook said.

Upstairs, the master bedroom includes walk-in closet, dual sink vanity, shower and cathedral ceiling. Three other bedrooms, all with ceiling lights, share a second full bath.

Base price is $173,900.

Other plans range from a three-bedroom, two-bath ranch of 1,625 square feet priced at $163,900 to a four-bedroom, 2½-bath colonial of 2,250 square feet for $184,900.

Exterior materials include brick, vinyl and wood accents.

Fox Creek South is serviced by city water, sewers and sidewalks. It's in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

The property tax rate is now about $30.89 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $173,900 house in Fox Creek South would pay about $2,685 the first year.

The typical buyer, Cook said, would be a second timer either moving up from an existing house or who has built new before. Many will work in the auto industry.

"This is a family neighborhood," Cook said. "There's a lot of kids. Now, it looks like they average two or three kids per house."

Colonials seem to be the most popular plans among visitors, said Debby Dittrich, sales rep.

"Most people coming in here have two children," she said. "Colonials are cheaper to build than ranch style homes."

Monteray: The model/sales office at Fox Creek South is a traditional colonial with four bedrooms and 2½ baths.

Anthony Cabrera and his fiance, Joanne Bidigare, are building the Aspen, a four-bedroom colonial. He had previously bought a Cook house with his brother.

"There is probably some of the most generous lot sizes in this price range I've seen in Canton," Cabrera said of Fox Creek South. "You get a lot of square footage for the money.

"It's a nice open floor plan with a loft area," Cabrera said. "The elevation has nice transom windows that give a dramatic look to the outside."

Bill and Kitty Culp bought a Monteray.

"The model was partially done," Bill said. "I liked the design, liked the way it looked. I even liked the workmanship."

The couple, though retired, wanted a four-bedroom house for resale value. They also wanted a lot that backed up to a nature preserve.

"Everything I looked at was basically what I wanted — just the complete layout," Bill said.

New home sales reach 1-year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes rose in July for the third straight month to their highest level in more than a year, and analysts predicted lower mortgage rates and steady consumer confidence will continue to strengthen the housing market.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that sales of single-family homes increased 0.4 percent last month to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 715,000, highest since 722,000 in March 1994. New-home sales in the South were at a 10-year high, more than offsetting weakness elsewhere.

"Buyers and builders are feeling better about things than they did a couple months ago," said David Seiders, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders.

While the economy slowed to a standstill this year and recently has shown only mixed signs of improving, the housing market has been a bright spot lately.

Sales in June were 712,000, revised down from an earlier estimate of 728,000 but still 6.1 percent higher than May. Single-family construction had slowed considerably prior to late spring and the turnaround in mortgage rates. Fixed-rate, 30-year mortgages were around 9 percent at the beginning of the year before dropping. They averaged 7.61 percent in July, up slightly from 7.53 percent the previous month.

The decline from their peak translates into a savings for home owners of more than $100 a month in the cost of a $100,000 loan. Consumer confidence also has been a plus, analysts said. The Conference Board, a business research group, said Tuesday its monthly gauge of consumer sentiment slipped slightly to 101 in August but remains at a high level. Expectations for the future rose this month, the board said, citing stable, low unemployment and an absence of inflation.

"We should continue to see decent strength in the housing market," said David Berson of the Federal National Mortgage Association, or Fannie Mae, a major source of home financing. "I think it will remain relatively strong as long as mortgage rates remain under 8 percent."

The stock market turned in a mixed performance with the economic reports having little apparent impact. The Dow Jones industrial average, recovering from a decline earlier in the session, gained 14.44 points to close at 4,608.44. Bond prices were little changed.

The Commerce Department said sales of new homes in the South surged 22.5 percent in July to an annual rate of 359,000, the highest since March 1986. But they fell in other parts of the nation, declining 13 percent in the West, to 281,000; 33.3 percent in the Northeast, to 52,000; and 6.8 percent in the Midwest to 123,000.

Despite the recent improvement, sales of new homes during the first seven months of 1995 were down 4 percent from the same period a year ago. At the end of July, the seasonally adjusted estimate of new houses for sale was 348,000, a six-month supply at the current sales rate.

The median price of a new home was $133,900 in July, unchanged from a month earlier.

Fleet claims suit meant to embarrass

BOSTON (AP) — Fleet Financial Group officials say a lawsuit filed by mortgage holders in Detroit was meant to embarrass Fleet, which is in the midst of hearings by federal regulators considering its proposed merger with Shawmut Bank.

P. Emery Covington, vice president of Fleet Finance Inc., the bank's mortgage subsidiary, said Saturday that the lawsuit by five low-income Michigan loan recipients was without merit.

The mortgage holders filed suit against Fleet Finance on Friday, claiming they were misled by independent mortgage brokers into signing costly loans they could not repay.

Terrence Drent, executive director of the Washtenaw County Council on Aging, the Michigan group suing Fleet, testified against the merger during a hearing Saturday before the Federal Reserve Board.

"I urge the Fed to halt the merger until Fleet makes restitution to Michigan homeowners," Drent said. "I'd like them to rewrite the loans to a level the people can afford."

Fleet officials said they stopped buying individual loans from third parties three years ago, after similar lawsuits were filed by borrowers and state officials in Georgia. But the lawsuit covers the period from the mid-1980s through 1992. It claims loan brokers made high-cost loans on Fleet's behalf to hundreds of "naive, older, poorer, more desperate" customers.

The brokers then resold the loans to Fleet's mortgage division and allegedly received kickbacks, in violation of federal truth-in-lending and consumer protection laws. One of the borrowers named in the suit, Leno Jaxon, received a $31,600 loan at 18 percent interest and now faces foreclosure.

Fleet Finance has more than 4,200 loans in Michigan.

Longtime radio show host excited about new program

BY GREG KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

After 36 years in radio, Valerie Hilsen still can get excited about starting a new program.

"It will be a lot of fun," the Bloomfield Hills resident said. Her new show will be called "Valerie's Casual Singles" and will be broadcast by radio station WPON-AM 1460 with studios.

The show airs 6-7 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. It's an upbeat, upscale show oriented for singles.

It's not a dating show, but features health, exercise and beauty tips, information on the latest fashions and entertainment.

"We will bring out the best in people," said Hilsen. The show will go on locations, too, visiting various night spots.

"We will have dance contests," Hilsen said. "There are many lonely single people. What we're doing is creating a sense of excitement for them."

Hilsen has been a familiar voice to many listeners for more than three decades. She has had a variety of radio shows over the years, featuring interviews with celebrities playing in local clubs and theaters.

Maurice Chevalier, Sammy Davis Jr., Mae West, Jose Ferrer, Carol Channing, Florence Henderson and Rock Hudson are just a few of the many people she has interviewed over the years.

She began her career by meeting with a friend who was the public relations director for the Fisher Theatre.

"I said I'd like to meet the stars. He called me back and said 'you're our First Nighter.' "

Hilsen needed a reason to meet the stars, so she went to a local radio station and sold them on the idea of starting an interview program.

That led to a string of shows over the years on small radio stations in Garden City and Mount Clemens. And memories.

She recalled Chevalier: "He was tall, very nice looking and had that continental charm."

Carol Channing had dark hair but a rack full of blond wigs, Hilsen remembered. "Her husband coached me on what to talk about." Channing liked to focus on a single topic, such as fashion.

Hilsen's favorite celebrity? "I liked Vincent Price. We had a lot in common." Both had an interest in art and cooking. "He was very charming," Hilsen said.

Sammy Davis Jr. was another favorite, she said. "He was a very nice man. He was one of the few people who thanked me for interviewing him," Hilsen said.

Generally, she said, the singers were more difficult to interview than the actors. They seemed more prone to one-word answers.

She also had a special memory of Rock Hudson. "He was so handsome and gregarious."

Unfortuantely, when Hilsen met him he was starring in a production of "The 20th Century." And, said Hilsen, "It was a big bomb."

She said to him "You're so handsome, there must have been so many women in your life."

Not many people knew at the time that Hudson was gay. Hudson just replied, "Oh, there have been a couple."

"I used to love to see the stars," Hilsen said. But she never had any aspirations to be one.

"I was on TV," she said. "But you have to be perfect. I've never been that way."

She prefers unrehearsed, off-the-cuff comments. "I work best under the wire," she said.

That kind of spontaneity can make for a lively radio program.

Hilsen asks that fans with questions, comments or suggestions call her at (810) 642-2644.

Teachers team up to strengthen humanities

Beginning this fall, a team of 18 teachers and six administrators from local school districts plus six Madonna University faculty members will meet monthly to strengthen the teaching of humanities in public schools.

The project, titled "Bridging the Gap between Knowing and Teaching in the Humanities," has received support from The National Endowment for the Humanities, which will give Madonna University $172,800.

Among the participating school districts are Livonia, Plymouth-Canton, Novi and Grosse Pointe.

"We are all partners in education," said project coordinator Richard Sax in a press release. "Education is lifelong, and we need to address this as a group."

Sax added that Madonna has participated in a related "Professors in the Schools" program which has been conducted over the past two years.

This involved primarily high school instructors and Madonna professors who combined talents to prepare students for college.

"The American Association of Higher Education, the Modern Language Association of America and the NEH have all referred to this program as a national model," he said.

Professional development opportunities for K-12 humanities teachers include 12 humanities colloquia scheduled over the next two years.

This fall, Bert Hornbeck from Bellarmine College will lecture on the Charles Dickens novel "Hard Times," and next March novelist Chaim Potok will read from and discuss his novel, "My Name Is Asher Lev."

Two two-week summer institutes will occur beginning in summer 1996:

- "Hearing Other Voices in American Culture: Multiculturalism and What We Teach" will examine the relationship between commonly taught texts and figures in K-12 schools in light of multicultural texts and issues.
- The summer 1997 institute, "Hearing Voices Across Borders: Internationalization and What We Teach," will explore texts from different cultures.

"We will also establish four humanities resource teams, composed of a classroom teacher, a curriculum director and two Madonna University faculty members, one from humanities and one from education, to address the practical dimensions of strengthening both the curriculum and pedagogy in schools," said Sax.

Digital cameras available for rent

Incorporating color images into fliers, newsletters, proposals and other documents is getting easier all the time.

Locally, Kinko's rents the Apple Computer QuickTake 150 digital camera for $25 per day.

"We've had a lot of inquiries on it," said Bob Fenbert, manager of the Kinko's at 34850 Plymouth Road in Livonia.

"We've had it a couple months now."

All the local Kinko's, including those at 29306 Orchard Lake Road in Farmington Hills and 44511 Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth, have the cameras.

Users are required to leave a refundable deposit.

Customers rent it for the day or on an hourly basis, Fenbert said.

Engineers have used it to evaluate stresses on auto parts; families have used it for picnic memories.

The camera is used much as a 35mm "point and shoot" camera is.

Images, however, are recorded on memory chips rather than photographic film.

Digital photos can be imported directly from the camera into an Apple Macintosh or Microsoft Windows system.

The image can also be sent to others via electronic mail.

Color laser prints can be produced on the Apple Color LaserWriter 12/600 PS for about $2 per page.

For more information, call Kinko's in Livonia at (313) 522-7322, in Plymouth at (313) 455-2840, or in Farmington Hills at (810) 932-3373.

Expanding Tubby's

Adding shops: Livonia residents Rita and Robert Selenis, pictured above, have signed a contract with Tubby's Inc. to open at least four Tubby's Sub Shops before 1999. The Selenises already own the Tubby's at 33995 Ford in Westland. According to the contract, the Selenises must open at least one Tubby's per year. The first new store, on Grand River west of Orchard Lake Road in Farmington Hills, opened Aug. 29. "We are going to take the same principles that have made our Westland store a success — maintain a commitment to customer service, use only the highest quality ingredients and create an inviting environment — and apply them to the next four shops," said Rita Selenis in a press release. "That formula works well, and we're going to stick with it."

Lots of Americans working on vacation

Twenty-three percent of employed Americans who vacationed this summer actually worked from the beach, mountains, their hotel room, camper or boat, as reported in the Steelcase Workplace Index, a semiannual survey that gauges workplace trends in the United States.

The survey was recently conducted by Steelcase Inc., the world's largest designer and manufacturer of office furniture, and Bruskin Goldring Research of New Jersey among 1,000 men and women, 18 years of age or older, around the country.

According to the survey, 58 percent of those working Americans polled (working Americans comprised 617 of the survey's 1,000 respondents) took a well-earned vacation this summer, with 33 percent hitting the beach, 32 percent staying at a hotel or motel, and 25 percent heading to the mountains.

Others vacationed in a camper (10 percent), on an island (6 percent), or on a boat (5 percent).

However, 23 percent of those who took a vacation did more than play during their time off, performing job-related activities.

Men were more inclined to do some type of work while on vacation than women (26 percent vs. 18 percent).

The Steelcase Workplace Index revealed that 40 percent of these Americans caught up on work-related reading, while 34 percent called to check in with the boss.

Another 29 percent took advantage of the time away from the office to catch up on paperwork, and 27 percent put out fires back at the office and conducted client relations, respectively.

Still, 18 percent boned up on a new skill in an effort to stay competitive on the job and another 18 percent dealt with staff-related matters.

"The American work ethic has changed," said Steelcase spokesman George Bell in a press release. "How and where people work has also changed." The study found that virtually all the respondents who worked while on their vacation this summer used technology to do it.

This was especially true for younger workers (18-24 year olds) — 40 percent of this age group.

Men were only slightly more inclined to use technology for work than women (24 percent vs. 22 percent) while on vacation.

For example, 58 percent used a cellular phone of those people who conducted some sort of work-related activity while on vacation.

Thirty-nine percent stayed in touch by beeper and 17 percent via fax machine.

Laptop computers ranked fourth with these vacationing Americans at 15 percent and PCs placed fifth at 12 percent.

"The increased use of technology affords Americans the flexibility to work anywhere," Bell said. "This added flexibility gives people more choices about when and where they work, allowing them to better balance their work and family life."

But how do Americans really feel about working while on vacation?

The Steelcase Workplace Index showed while 46 percent of American workers choose not to work while on their vacation, nearly 25 percent who choose to work while on holiday do so because of their sense of commitment and dedication to the job.

The Wayne County Fair's doll dressing contest attracted 67 entries, with first and third places going to Debra Busch of Adrian. Second was Leora Smith of Wayne, with Pauline Armatis of Belleville fourth, Myrna Mangel of Detroit fifth, Roberta Clinton of Taylor sixth, JoAnn Butkowski of Dearborn seventh, Veronica Johannson of Romulus eighth, Eleanor Kidd of Taylor ninth and Julie Barrett of Westland 10th.

The contest was sponsored by the Wayne County Fair, city of Romulus and Sumpter Township. Entrants were provided with undressed dolls which they dressed and returned to the fair.

The dolls were judged based on originality and workmanship. The top six entries received rosettes and first through 10th places received cash prizes. The dressed dolls will be given to the sponsoring communities for their community holiday projects.

People interested in participating in the 1996 doll dressing contest can send their names and addresses to the Wayne County Fair, P.O. Box 308, Belleville, Mich. 48112. Be sure to write doll dressing contest on the envelope. Information will be mailed out prior to the 1996 county fair.

Women still lag around the globe

A frustrating global pattern in women's lives shows them making rapid strides in education and health while lagging seriously behind men in economic and political status.

Thus, while the gender gap in education was more than halved in developing countries between 1970 and 1990, women still represent 70 percent of the 1.3 billion people living in poverty today and on an average hold only 10 percent of legislative seats and 6 percent of cabinet positions in national governments, according to the "Human Development Report 1995."

"Over the past 20 years, doors to education and health opportunities have opened rapidly for women, but the doors to economic and political power are barely ajar," said the authors of the report, commissioned by the United Nations Development Program.

As in previous reports, the "Human Development Report 1995" takes a country-by-country look at human development, using a range of economic and social indicators. This year's report focuses sharply on the status of women, using two new measures of human development. The first — the Gender-related Development Index — reflects gender imbalances in basic health, education and income, while the second — the Gender Empowerment Measure — evaluates a nation's progress in advancing women at the political and economic level.

The conclusions the report draws are "a major indictment of the continuing discrimination against women in most societies," said UNDP Administrator James Gustave Speth. "Investing in women's capabilities and empowering them to exercise their choices is not only valuable in itself but is also the surest way to contribute to economic growth and overall development."

Value of work

A special feature of this year's report is a new study on paid and unpaid labor by women and men. It finds that if women's unpaid work were properly valued, it is quite possible that women would emerge in most societies as the major breadwinners, or at least equal breadwinners, since they put in longer hours of work than men.

The report concludes that women's work remains grosly unpaid, unrecognized and undervalued, on the order of $11 trillion a year.

"Nations that sit back and ignore the disparities between men and women in their society do so at their own risk," said chief author Mahbub ul Haq. "To deny women full participation in economic and social development is to rob future generations of the opportunity to reach their full potential."

The core of the 1995 report is the Human Development Index, which ranks 174 countries by a measure that combines life expectancy, educational attainment and basic purchasing power. This year, Canada, the United States and Japan lead the rankings in overall human development, while Cyprus, Hong Kong and Barbados rank first among developing countries.

The new Gender-related Development Index shows that among 130 countries for which comparable literacy, life expectancy and economic data were available, the four top countries are in the Nordic region — Sweden, Finland, Norway and Denmark, in that order. The highest ranking developing countries Barbados (11th), Hong Kong (17th), the Bahamas (26th), Singapore (28th), Uruguay (32nd) and Thailand (33rd).

The Gender Empowerment Measure looks at women's representation in parliaments, their share of positions classified as managerial or professional, their participation in the active labor force, and their share of national income.

Torch Drive sets its corporate goal at $3.3 million

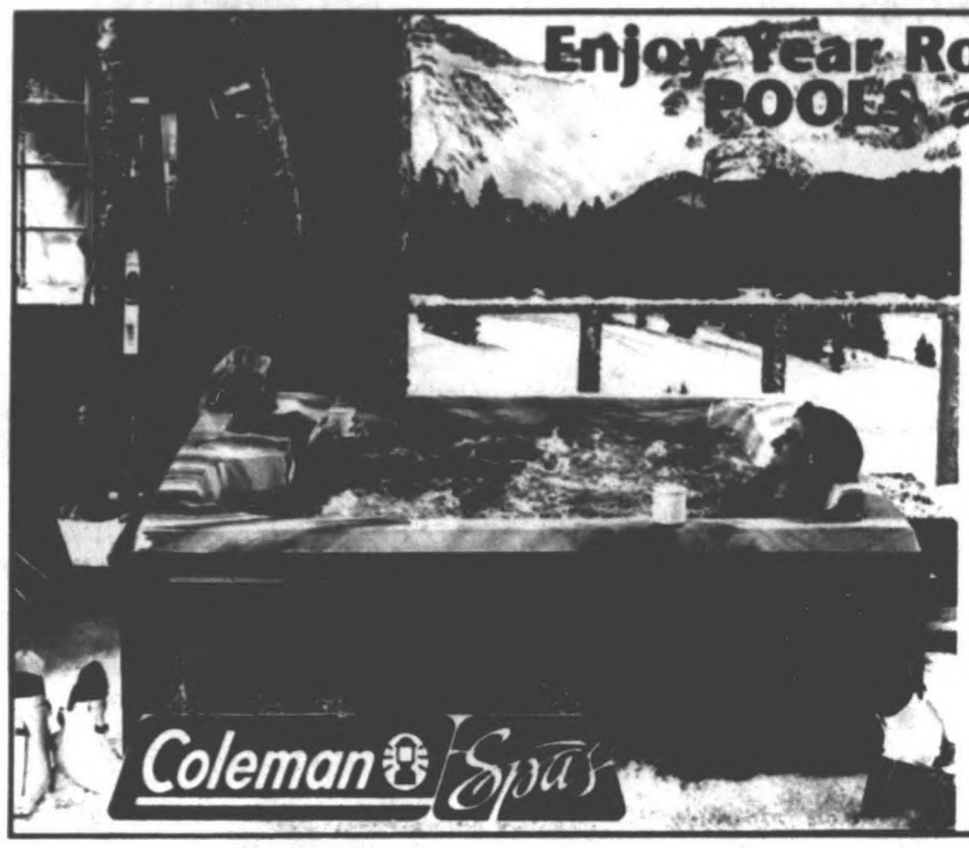

Fifty-three metro area companies have set an overall "Pace Setter" goal of $3.3 million for this year's Torch Drive.

Pacesetter companies agree to run early campaigns to be completed by the end of September and, in addition, set a minimum goal of 10 percent over their total contribution to the 1994 Torch Drive.

"I want to congratulate each company for making that extra effort for United Way Community Services, by leading the way and being a Pacesetter company," said Rudolfo Cifolelli, CEO of the Genix Group and chairman of the 1995 Torch Drive Pacesetter Campaign.

"There are many challenges ahead for this year's campaign, but with hard work and determination, I believe that we will get the 1995 Torch Drive off to a great start."

United Way Community Services raises funds for more than 130 health and human service agencies in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Websites often tie in to high-profile area events

O&E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

The construction of Websites by newspapers still is a relatively new development and those involved are trying to map out a course in these still-uncharted waters.

Many electronic newspapers, the O&E included, are offering community information, electronic classifieds, on-line columnists, and advertising Web pages. There is a recent trend, especially among daily newspapers, to tie in their Websites to special events in their circulation area.

When the Battle Creek Enquirer, for instance, launched its first Website it was an informational page for the annual International Hot Air Balloon Festival in that city. The Indianapolis Star and the Indianapolis News used a Website (SpeedNet) on the Indianapolis 500 and other major brickyard races as its first venture onto the World Wide Web.

Now the Cleveland Plain Dealer is doing the same. A major event Labor Day weekend in the Midwest was the opening of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum in Cleveland on Friday, Sept. 1. But even before the doors were open, the Plain Dealer launched its Website to allow rock and roll fans to "tour" the new museum. The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame can be accessed with any Web browser at http://www.rockhall.com.

"We are excited about the opportunity to provide information about the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum over the World Wide Web," said Alex Machaskee, Plain Dealer president and publisher. "This site will not only show the world Cleveland's newest first-class museum, but also all the wonderful things to do when they visit here."

The Website features a "walking tour" of the museum plus information about each of the hall's inductees and a sample of their songs. Also included is a list of "The 500 Songs that Shaped Rock and Roll," as selected by the hall staff. Various contests will be offered as well.

Rock and roll fans who visit www.rockhall.com also can communicate with the hall and get information. The Website offers opportunities to share rock music memories, and fans can offer their own selections of what songs should be on the "Top 500" list.

The Website also offers details on Cleveland as a destination for tourists, including how to get to the city and what to do when they arrive. Users will find a guide to hotels, restaurants and museums, shopping and cultural events. A five-day weather forecast for greater Cleveland on the site is updated daily.

Internet growth

We have not looked at the growth of the Internet since the first of the year. We can expect, of course, that it is still growing. But how it grows specifically is rather fascinating.

In early August, Mark Lottor of Network Wizards in Menlo Park, Calif., released the latest results from the Internet's most basic and longest continuing measurement of its size — the Domain Survey. At about the same time, Texas Internet Consulting in Austin released its latest report of Matrix News.

The Domain Survey attempts to discover every announced host on the Internet by doing a complete search of the Domain Name System (DNS). The results were gathered in late July 1995 and announced on the Web in early August at http://www.nw.com/. John Quarterman of Matrix News further analyzes the three-letter global domains and offers insight on 'Net growth internationally. Its latest report can be found at http://www.tic.com/ or at http://www.mids.org/.

A person can reasonably argue that the Internet defies measurement because it is a distributed aggregation of more than 50,000 autonomous networks. But DNS surveys have been conducted for years and do provide a basis for relative comparisons. A "host" in Internet lingo is a computer that is connected to and directly reachable as part of the Internet via a unique address.

Some of the highlights of the Lottor:Quarterman findings are:

- A new total of 6.6 million Internet computer hosts;
- A strong exponential growth rate, but very slightly decreased. At the average rate of increase over the past 14 quarters, the total projected hosts at the end of the decade is 101 million;
- There are .com domains in 54 countries, .net domains in 57 countries, .org domains in 27 countries including most of the United Nations agencies, and .edu domains in 16 countries;

There's money to be saved on telephone calls

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Samuel Simon believes business people and residents should be educated consumers when it comes to choosing their telephone service.

Simon, an attorney and author, is founder of Issue Dynamics Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based firm that recently worked with Ameritech to produce a booklet, "Consumer's Guide to Making Local Toll Calls." The booklet is available by calling (800) 440-5282.

In light of growing choices and competition, it's important that consumers be as informed as possible, said Simon, who began his career with the Ralph Nader organization. He agreed that most phone customers aren't adequately informed.

"In fact, I think that that's probably right." Some 70 percent of AT&T customers haven't signed up for an AT&T savings plan, he said; the figure is slightly lower, 56 percent, for MCI.

"That's like paying list price for a new car. People are not fully aware of the choices they have, even from all this advertising."

The extensive advertising campaigns have had an effect. "It has been helping in making consumers aware that they have choices." It's been less helpful in describing "dialing around" services (for "dialing around" local telephone companies) and generally helping consumers decide which services are right for them.

"It's getting more intense in many ways. There's a lot of changes taking place in the industry."

Simon is an authority on telecommunications and consumer affairs. In 1984, he wrote "Reversing the Charges: How To Save Money on Your Phone Bill" (Pantheon).

Ameritech officials were interested in getting him involved, he said, but didn't put on pressure to have the booklet come out a certain way.

"I think the booklet speaks for itself. I had total editorial control over it." He imagines that the booklet is most likely causing heartburn among representatives of the different telephone companies, but he's comfortable with it.

The booklet explains the difference between local calls, zone calls, local toll calls (also called intraLATA phone calls) and long distance calls. It's designed to help readers decide which service is right for them.

Simon pointed out that phones have been slow to change, compared to such things as airplanes. "In 1983, you couldn't even buy a phone." He believes we're on the verge of a transformation in telephones and telecommunications.

"We're going to see more change in the next two years than we did in the first 100 years," he said.

There will most likely be complete video-interactive phones at home, used with no more thought than goes into starting a car.

"Consumers are going to be able to save with the changes that come up." Benefits will come to those who use the phone for intraLATA calls, both small businesses and residential users.

"So they both could benefit from looking at the booklet." The booklet is designed specifically for Michigan; Simon is hoping to do one for a couple of other states and a slightly different booklet for nationwide distribution.

Not surprisingly, Simon and his wife are well-equipped with phones. He has phones for his office and suburban Virginia home, as well as cellular phones for the car and office. The couple's children have grown and left home, but Simon converted their daughter's phone line for fax use.

He envisions package services in the future including a data line for fax and computer connections. "That technology is already there." That will reduce the number of lines needed.

"It really is, I think, going to be better." The changes will contribute to economic development and quality of life, he said.

Free immunizations offered

Free immunizations for children will be available noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 9, in the parking lot of St. Elizabeth's Church, 3138 E. Canfield, on Detroit's east side between Joseph Campau and McDougall.

The program is sponsored by the Detroit Department of Public Health, Health Alliance Plan and McDonald's Restaurants of Southeast Michigan.

Parents/guardians are asked to bring each child's current immunization record. All children must be accompanied by an adult.

Cranbrook exhibit to spin Charlotte's Web

The friendship between an insecure pig named Wilbur and a talented spider named Charlotte is a treasured childhood memory for many.

With Cranbrook Institute of Science's presentation of Charlotte's Web, 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 10, in the outdoor Greek Theatre, children of a new generation will fall in love with E.B. White's endearing story of trust and devotion.

Charlotte's Web is being held in conjunction with Spiders!, an exhibit organized by the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Natural History. The hands-on exhibition explores the wonders and mysteries of spiders, one of the most unique life forms on Earth. Spiders! continues at Cranbrook Institue of Science through Sept. 24.

Charlotte's Web will be presented by September Productions, a Michigan-based touring company specializing in children's theater. Composed of metro-Detroit area actors, directors and technical staff, this acclaimed group creates theater that is enjoyed by children and adults alike.

Spiders!, which is circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service, is made possible through the support of Marbel Entertainment Group, Inc. with additional funding from the Smithsonian's Special Exhibition Fund. At Cranbrook, Spiders! is made possible in part by Comerica Inc., Mitsubishi Motor Sales of America, ASC Inc., Target, Snapple and D'Arcy, Masius, Benton & Bowles.

Reservations for Charlotte's Web can be made by calling (810) 645-3230. Admission is $6 per person and $5 per person for members of Cranbrook Institute of Science. The fee doesn't include museum admission. In case of inclement weather, the production will be held inside the Institute of Science auditorium.

Cranbrook Institute of Science is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $5 for adults, $4 for children age 3-17 and senior citizens over age 65. Children younger than 3 are free.
