Last leaves

The city of Plymouth leaf pickup ends next week, so now's the time to get those last leaves raked to the curb.

"The leaf pickup has been going extremely well, actually our guys have been doing a lot of 14- and 15-hour shifts to keep up with the schedule," said Paul Sincock, municipal services director.

"We are in the final pickup week next week, hopefully we'll get it pretty well wrapped up by end of next week and the first of December," he

Residents are encouraged to keep leaf piles neat. "That helps tremendously. Get them out as soon as you can," Sincock said.

Those who miss final pickups can still bag leaves in large brown paper yard waste bags into the first week of December. And if you miss that week. Sincock said it's OK to put brown bags out during the Christmas tree pickup the first two full weeks in January.

Deer crashes into window

Laurel Furniture owner Donald Wurm was on his way to an anniversary dinner Sunday with his wife, when he got beeped by the Plymouth Police Depart-

But upon answering the page, they told him something that Wurm found nearly unbelievable:

A deer had crashed into his showroom on Ann

Cut after breaking through the glass, the mediumized doe left a trail of bloody hoof prints as it ramiled through the store, before escaping back into the

Dave Herron, manager of the Plymouth Train Shop across the street, saw the deer crash into the building and called police.

"When I called, the dispatcher said, You're kidding," Herron recalled.

The showroom was closed Sunday. It was about 2:20 p.m. when the deer crashed into the business at 584 W. Ann Arbor Trail.

Upon arriving at the scene, police talked to some witnesses, then heard a rustling sound in the southwest corner of the showroom, according to the police

Police shined a flashlight at the deer, and it again ran into a showroom window, crashing outside before fleeing south. It was in the store from 10-15 minutes.

Called to his store after the incident, Wurm started making arrangements to clean the carpet and replace windows. Damage was estimated at around $10,000.

As for merchandise, "Virtually nothing was damaged, just one mattress. It jumped over the top of a bed and got blood across it," Wurm said.

As the deer fled the scene, "The legs were mostly bleeding," Herron said. The deer ran past the new Bush Jewelers building before witnesses lost sight of it.

"This time of the year deer move around a little bit more, this is the mating season," said Tim Payne, Department of Natural Resources wildlife biologist.

"In all probability the deer got spooked by a dog or whatever, it got the deer moving around. It looked into the window and probably thought it could see its way through," Payne said.

He said the DNR records the highest incidents of deer hit by cars in October through December, as these are the animals' most active months.

"When they get out there sometimes they do things that are not too smart," Payne said.

On July 4, 1992, a deer crashed through the glass doors of the Penn Theater, ran down the sisle and out the back just after a special showing of "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Lorenz family offers flagpole for Kellogg Park

BY KEVIN BROWN STAFF WRITER

The family of the late Ralph Lorenz, longtime owner of the Mayflower Hotel, is offering to erect a new flagpole in Kellogg Park for Plymouth residents and to honor him and wife Mabel.

"My parents had an anecdote:

Let's run that idea up the flagpole and see if it flies," son Randy Lorenz told Plymouth city commissioners on Monday.

He appeared before the commissioners at their regular meeting to present the idea. It would replace the current aged 70-foot park flagpole. "With the rest of downtown being updated, certainly a new flagpole would be a great addition," said Paul Sincock, municipal services

Randy Lorenz said the plan calls for capturing his parents' words about running ideas up the flagpole at its base. The acceptance of such gifts or monuments is covered under a city ordinance adopted in 1993.

That ordinance calls for waiting 10 years before deciding whether to honor someone with a public monument. But City Attorney Don Morgan said the ordinance can be interpreted to allow the Lorenz family

High school singers headed to Carnegie

Plymouth-Canton Educational Park choir members must have heard about the New York cabbie who was asked, "How do you get to Carnegie Hall?" His reply was, "Practice, practice, practice."

City to decide fate of Holbrook rail crossing

The proposed closing of the street crossings over railroad tracks at York and Holbrook streets in Old Village will go before city commissioners at a Dec. 2 public hearing.

Plymouth city commissioners voted at their meeting Monday to set the hearing date. The city administration presented commissioners with a range of written and phoned-in comments from nearby business owners and residents, following the temporary closing of the two crossings in September.

Tim Rice, president of Rokay Floral at 913 York St. at the railroad tracks, told the city administration in September "he had big, big, big, big problems

The business reported trucks can't get in and out and "this test needs to be eliminated now before damage is done to someone's vehicle or a child is backed Paul Molnar of J.P. Transportation Inc., which services Rokay Floral, wrote the city administration, "Your closing this crossing jeopardizes the present business we have with Rokay.

"Our drivers must now back up over 100 yards to make their deliveries. This not only increases the chances of an accident, but most importantly, could result in serious injuries if someone is not paying attention to our vehicle.

Lydia and Eugene Olson of York wrote they favored the closings. "Speeding traffic has now been almost eliminated, making the streets safer for the children in the area as well as the residents going in and out of our driveways," they wrote.

"We would appreciate not having to be taxed for keeping these streets open. Our taxes are high enough," they continued.

City officials began considering closing the crossings in spring 1995 after the state Department of Transportation required the city to spend $60,000 on new crossing gates and signaling equipment if the crossings were not closed.

Also favoring the closings were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Micek of Holbrook. "We feel it has cut down on traffic and also speeding on our streets. We also feel our 3-year-old triplets are more safe due to the decrease in traf-

Phillip Hawk, representing Greenhouse Shoppes at Liberty and Mill streets, said the temporary closings had made deliveries inconvenient for drivers.

"Congestion on our street and in our parking lot is at times unbearable because customers and delivery men are having to turn around to return to their northern routes," he said

"Traffic on North Mill was already heavy for its width and condition. Now it's at times exasperating," he continued.

City Building Official James Penn reported the closings have increased traffic during peak hours on Mill. The number of vehicles counted May 29 before the temporary closings, from 8-9 a.m. and 5-6 p.m., was 1,226. On Nov. 12 after the closings, peak traffic was at 1,357.

Property owners in a two-block radius from the proposed closings are to be notified by mail of the public hearing, at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 2, at the commission chambers upstairs at City Hall, 201 S. Main.

Carnegle Hall bound: Jaqui Holland, dad Greg Holland and Vicki Holyoak and her parents, Bonnie and Dennie, listen to plans for the upcoming trip. At right, teacher Don Daniels explains Carnegie Hall plans to students and their parents.

Leonard Riccinto, conductor and musical director of the Oratorio Society and director of EMU choral activities.

Since receiving the prestigious invitation last January, PCEP choir director Don Daniels and his students at Salem and Canton high schools have staged car washes, bake sales, candy sales and concerts to help defray the travel costs of $1,200 per person.

Canton's Samantha Voyles is among the students making her first trip to the Big Apple. "I guess it's almost kind of overwhelming," said the soprano, a junior at Salem High School. "We've been planning this for awhile, and now that it's so close, I'm saying, 'Whoa, I'm really going. I can't believe it."

"It feels great to be going," said class representative Grace Tomlin, a Salem senior. "I think it's a great opportunity that's not going to come along again. It's definitely worth the money.

Daniels explained how difficult it is to arrange such an invitation.

"You either have to have a production-company tape submitted that a panel of judges listens to for quality, or you have to be invited by one of the conductors," he said.

"It's not simply a matter of paying your money and going. There's a high set of standards. And it's an established, legitimate concert series, not just an enrichment opportunity. The kids will be performing with Metropolitan-level soloists.

PCEP received its invitation through Riccinto, who was in-residence at Carnegie Hall last January in preparation for a performance of the Verdi "Requiem."

The Plymouth-Canton Madrigals went to state ensemble two years ago, where they received first-division ratings at the district and state levels. As one of the 14 best choirs in the state, they were honored with a trip to the Michigan Youth Fine Arts Festival at the invitation of Riccinto, a judge in the competition.

Riccinto invited the PCEP singers and alumni, as well as bass John Stewart of Plymouth Township, to join the EMU choir at Carnegie.

It's unusual for a high school choir to take part in the Mid-America Production concerts. "Most often, the groups that perform at these are college level, or semi-professional community choruses," said Daniels. "It's designed to allow select high school groups to participate, based on their reputation.

PCEP joins the Ann Arbor district and just a handful of others whose high schools have been invited to Carnegie. The PCEP and Oratorio Society singers, who leave today for New York and return Monday, had a dry run at a concert Sunday at EMU to help get rid of the butterflies.

Voyles is excited about the whole the itinerary. "We get to go to the Christmas Spectacular show at the Rockefeller Center. We'll take trips to some of the museums and the Empire State Building," said Voyles, who's looking forward to her first plane ride. "We're going to try to go to one of the recordings of the 'Today Show.'

Tomlin plans to join her. "We're going to get up early and go yell at the cameras," she said of the show's 8 a.m. outdoor taping. "We're going to see a play on Broadway. We want to go out to fancy restaurants and experience New York. After our performance Sunday night, we'll take a tour around Manhattan at a banquet on a cruise ship until 2 a.m.," said Tomlin. "I've never done anything like this before. This is amazing. When Mr. Daniels told me we were going, I didn't believe him," added the Stewart, a Plymouth attorney who sang in the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Chorale for 12 years, is just as excited. "It is a great honor for Plymouth-area residents and students of EMU and alumni to have this opportunity to perform in Carnegie Hall," he said. "Len Riccinto has a unique combination of intelligence, musicality, sensitivity and personal warmth to bring great choral music to many people. The singers truly love to sing for him, and we are all looking forward to the performance.

Daniels says he's proud of his singers. "They're excellent students. We really do have a lot of exciting things going on, especially in choral music. Every year, it gets a little better. But I don't know how we are going to top

Police called to check on older man

County expected to report today on Rouge River progress

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

Representatives from Wayne County's Department of Environment expect to report today in U.S. District Judge John Feikens' courtroom on progress of the cleanup of the Rouge River

But Feikens does not rule on this report. The hearings are conducted periodically for officials to report progress in meeting the Clean Water Act.

Wayne County's environmental officials generally outline in court the work of the Rouge River's National Wet Weather Demonstration Control Project. The report focuses on the first phase of the combined sewer overflow program and water quality data for the entire Rouge River watershed.

Robert Fredericks, director of the division of watershed management for Wayne County Department of Environment, said the CSOs still send a significant amount of water pollution, into the river.

For the CSO control — soon entering its second phase — Fredericks expects officials to discuss ways to more cost effectively battle storm water pollution into the river

CSOs are combined sanitary and storm sewers that overflow into the Rouge after heavy rainstorms. They annually discharge millions of gallons of storm water, and raw sewage from households Feikens may encourage communities to examine ways to prevent storm water runoff and pollutants into the Rouge, rather than mandate additional expensive work on CSOs.

Fredericks said Feikens would prefer communities, Wayne County and the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, the enforcing agency for the Environmental Protection Agency, negotiate agreements.

Agency, negotiate agreements.

Wayne County and the watershed communities are waiting for general permits to address storm water. The permits are more general in nature than the discharge permits, Fredericks said.

"It is a much more cooperative

Part of the Rouge cleanup project includes retention basins.
These basins will hold and treat water from CSOs.

The Rouge River Remedial Action Plan Advisory Council received a construction update from Wayne County officials in October on those basins. The council meets bimonthly to discuss cleanup efforts.

The following projects have been completed:

The Redford Township retention basin now accepts wet weather flows. That project located near Lola Valley Park cost $14.3 million.

An $18.6 million basin in Inkster along the Lower Rouge River began accepting CSOs in October

The Acacia Park basin in Beverly Hills in Oakland County began operations this month.

The cities of Dearborn Heights and Detroit requested and received extensions from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality on construction deadlines.

Dearborn Heights — a $18.6 million project along Hines Drive just east of Telegraph—, obtained an extension from December 1996 until June 1997. Detroit received one for the Puritan-Fenkell basin.

According to Wayne County's Department of Environment, these other projects continued to progress:

Garden City: About $29.9 million in sewer separation projects were slated for this community. No retention basins will be built in Condon City.

New storm sewers ranging from 12 inches to 108 inches in diameter were installed.

Perrin and Middlebelt separation work was expected to be finished in December. About $11 million in contractual work was completed in 1995 for Mid Town West and South Venoy.

Livonia: About $1 million in sewer separations were installed in the Joy and Middlebelt area in October.

Westland: Sewer separation projects in several areas throughout the city expect to cost about $10 million. About $5.6 million will be completed in November, and the remaining $4.3 million scheduled for completion by September 1997.

Health care program enrolls 4,000th customer

HealthChoice, Wayne County's small-business health care program, has enrolled its 4,000th

County health officials view the statistic as more than just a number. It means 4,000 more people — from gas station attendants to hair stylists — now have health care coverage than just two short years ago when the program just started.

"We're excited HealthChoice has had such a wide appeal," said Edward McNamara, Wayne County executive. HealthChoice offers comprehensive treatment and preventative health care services to Wayne County businesses that cannot afford to offer any health coverage to their employ-Clients include small business owners who employ five or more people and who have at least 90 percent of their business in Wayne County. Fifty percent of the employees must average $10 an hour or less. "This means many businesses that could never afford the coverage finally have a source," McNamara said.

Employers, employees and HealthChoice each chip in one-third of the cost of coverage — a cost now averaging about $40 a month for each party. About one-third of the nearly 400 enrolled businesses are minority owned and about 20 percent are restaurants.

"I'm really happy with it," said Tim Haber, co-chairman of the exhibit which continues through this weekend

Canton Township Treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter remembered the first year when the exhibit was held in the township administration building then in the midst of renovations and sawdust. Paintings literally leaned against the walls of the offices prior to the jurying process and installation.

"We've changed our location and the quality continues to increase," she said. "We have different respected jurors and it gets better every year."

As honorary chair of the event, Kirchgatter presented a $750 cash prize for Best of Show to Connie Lucas, an exhibitor in all four Canton shows. A total of $1,500 was awarded to artists this year - nearly twice the amount of the first year.

"I think it's the best one we've done yet," said Eugene Ham-monds, Canton Project Arts president.

Marsha Wright co-chaired the second show held in the old location. She was pleased with the setting the Summit provided for the first time in December of 1995. "It's really improved," she said. "They've pulled in some good art and the environment is wonderful."

Earlier in the day, Sharon Dillenbeck and Ilene Tarkington assembled and erected screens on which the artwork was hung. Both artists had paintings in the exhibit. "There's a considerable amount of talent here," said Dillenbeck. "It gets getter and better every year.

Sherry Eid of Livonia was thrilled to have one of her colored pencil portraits juried into the show. She echoed Dillenbeck's sentiments. "I think it's an outstanding show," she Retired teacher Rosemary Allan of Plymouth recently had a surprise reunion as a patient at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia.

Teacher meets former student

The person on call turned out to be a former student.

Dave MacIntyre of West Bloomfield, a fourth-year medical student at the University of Health Science College of Osteopathic medicine in Kansas City, Mo., was serving a clinical rotation when he saw his second grade teacher.

"I recognized her right away," he said.

Allan, 66, who was hospitalized with pneumonia, was happy to see her former student from Taylor Elementary School in Livonia.

"I recognized him right away, too, but I checked his name tag to make sure," she said.

McIntyre remembered her as one of his favorite teachers.

"She was very patient and considerate of all of her students,"

UM-D wins grant for environmental ed

The University of Michigan-Dearborn has received a grant of $100,000 from the Environmental Protection Agency to host an environmental education institute for teachers from southeastern Michigan next summer.

Up to 40 teachers will be able to participate in the 15-day program next July.

This region is an especially appropriate location for an environmental education institute." said Orin Gelderloos, director of the campus's Environmental Studies Program and biology professor. He notes that as the location for mass production for more than a century, southeastern Michigan has accumulated significant historic pollution.

First we have hundreds of contaminated sites which pollute the soil and ground water," Gelderloos said. "Second, urban sprawl is consuming vast amounts of open space as citizens avoid the 'brownfields' in the city centers. The spread of urbanization is likely to counteract the improvements which have been made in air and water quality over the past decades."

Faculty and staff at UM-Dearborn have provided environmental education to teachers in southeast Michigan since the early 1970s, with significant funding over the years from the National Science Foundation.

"The interactions among teachers from throughout the Detroit metropolitan area have proven to be invaluable for establishing cross-district and cross-cultural linkages," Gelderloos said. "In fact, the model of environmental education used in our most recent program was deemed so successful by the NSF that it chose to disseminate this model nationally."

In addition, the UM-Dearborn campus itself is a unique environmental resource in the metropolitan area. One third of the campus, more than 70 acres, is designated as an environmental/historical preserve, adjacent to the Rouge River and the river's flood plain.

"This area provides a rich diversity of flora and fauna in forest, aquatic and field habitats," Gelderloos said. Recently the Rouge River Bird Observatory was established on campus to study the use of urban areas as stop-over sites for migrating

Thousands of schoolchildren and teachers take part in programs sponsored by UM-Dearborn's Natural Areas each year, and more than 30,000 visitors walk through the area each year. "Clearly, UM-Dearborn has an enviable record in community interaction and public service," Gelderloos said.

UM-Dearborn officials are still developing a selection process for teachers interested in the program. Preference will be given to teachers who apply as teams from a single school.

"We have found that the greatest impact for making a change in the schools is to have teams of teachers from different disciplines, such as social studies, natural sciences, mathematics, languages arts and humanities, work together in a program," Gelderloos said.

The EPA-funded program, which will include hands-on experiences in the field and workshops on curriculum development, will focus on the Rouge River watershed, which includes 47 governmental units; a great diversity of people, from some of the wealthiest in the world to some of the poorest; and rural, suburban and urban areas.

"A watershed model brings global environmental issues and problems to the local level; in many respects a watershed is a microcosm of the planet and developing solutions to environmental problems in a watershed is similar to solving environmental problems in the United Nations," Gelderloos said.

"By using a watershed approach to environmental education, not only will we be able to bring teachers from a variety of academic disciplines together in a real-world, interdisciplinary problem-solving situation, but also we will be able to bring people from a variety of socio-economic situations together in a common cause which will improve the quality of life for all citizens," Gelderloos said.

For additional information or application forms, contact Gelderloos at (313) 593-5339, or electronic mail ogg@umd.umich.edu.

Night driving tips can protect pedestrians

Since winter brings more hours of darkness, motorists need to sharpen their nighttime driving skills to help reduce pedestrian fatal and injury traffic accidents, advises AAA Michigan.

Last year in Michigan traffic, 181 pedestrians were killed and 3,303 injured. "With half of Michigan's fatal crashes occurring during non-daylight hours, motorists have to be very alert for pedestrians who suddenly appear on the roadway," said Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager.

He added that children under making it harder to see if objects 15 years of age account for nearly 30 pedestrian deaths a year. with youngsters 4-10 years of age the most frequent victims.

"No one sees as well at night as during daylight and this increases the risk of car-versuspedestrian accidents," Basch

For safe night driving, AAA Michigan recommends: Look far down the road and off to each side to anticipate pedestrian movement.

Focus on edges or outlines of images rather than looking directly at them. Depth perception worsens as daylight fades, are close or far away.

■ Use extra caution in neighborhoods, near schools and malls, or wherever youngsters may step into streets.

■ Be alert for pedestrians at mid-block and at corners.

■Keep windshields and headlights clean. Dirty or fogged windshields further reduce limited night vision and worsen glare. Dirt on headlights can cut illumination in half.

■ During dawn, dusk or foul weather, always turn on low beams to make it easy for others to see you.

When traveling rural or country roads and no traffic is in sight, switch to high beams for greater distance and peripheral

■ Don't overdrive headlights. Compensate for reduced visibility at night by increasing your following distance to four or more seconds.

■ Minimize glare from oncoming headlights by looking at the road center or edge lines to guide a car at night.

■ Motorists who have difficulty seeing at night should adjust travel schedules and take advantage of daylight hours.

"We are increasingly con-cerned with the safety of Michigan motorists," said Ronald Steffens, president and CEO of AAA Michigan. "Through awareness of this growing traffic safety problem, we hope to reduce deervehicle crashes, which result in more than $50 million in vehicle damage annually."

Efforts are underway to distribute posters and brochures. Also, billboards will be placed in selected areas. The project is a program to study long-term and other short-term methods to reduce the likelihood of deervehicle crashes.

Work begins on lake dam, road to close in February

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

It is a $10 million job and a dirty one.

Over the next two years, the Wayne County Department of Environment and Environmental Consulting & Technology in Detroit will oversee a $10 million project to clean up Newburgh Lake.

With the work already started on the dam on the east end of the lake, officials from Wayne County's Department of Environment hope the lake level can be lowered soon so lake sediment contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) can be removed.

It is a grand plan to make the lake recreational again to allow canoeing and fishing in about two or three years.

The lake is located on the Rouge River, west of Newburgh Road and east of Haggerty. Nearby Livonia and Plymouth Township residents can expect to see much activity over the next two years:

Fish will be killed on the lake on two separate occasions, the first possibly in December or January, with rotenone, a chemical that will be sprayed on the Hines Drive will be closed from Newburgh Road to Haggerty between February 1997 and July 1998.

Once the lake is lowered and first fish kill occurs, construction crews will transport several pieces of heavy equipment to excavate the lake's floor, probably early next year. Workers will dig up dirt to an average depth of about 8 feet to ensure all the PCBs are removed.

Wayne County officials say the source of the PCBs was Evans Products in Livonia, a manufacturer of lubricants that is no longer in operation. These PCBs are dielectric fluids in electrical equipment, hydraulic fluids and lubricating oils.

The highest PCB levels are located in the west end of the "(Residents) probably won't notice much over the next two months," said Ellen Lindquist, chief deputy director of Wayne County Department of Environment. "If they live close by, they may see the spray on the water, and a dye color of purple in December, but maybe just for a couple of days."

But residents can expect to see a lot of activity over the next two years. Here is some of the work planned in chronological order:

Dam rehabilitation

Newburgh Lake contains a dam on the east end of the lake. That dam needs a new sluice gate to hold back water and maintain the level of the lake

Once the excavation is completed, the lake is expected to be about 8 inches deeper.

Divtec Corp. will complete a topographical survey, construct a template and build a temporary cofferdam with stop logs in front of the old dam. Divtec's bid for the dam rehabilitation work was set at $227,568.

The cofferdam will hold back the water while the existing sluice gate on the dam is removed this month. That gate will be replaced. The temporary cofferdam will be removed once the sluice gate is completed.

That work is tentatively scheduled to be completed in January.

Newburgh Lake

Over the next two years, the Wayne County Department of Environment and Environmental Consulting & Technology in Detroit will oversee a $10 million project to remove polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) from Newburgh Lake.

Nearby Livonia and Plymouth Township residents can expect to see two "fish kills," the first possibly in December or January. Hines Drive will be closed from Newburgh Road to Newburgh Polyce in December of January.

Fish kills

Wayne County's Department of Environment is awaiting approval from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality on a permit application to conduct two fish kills.

Once the permit is approved, contractors will spray rotenone onto the water and around the shore starting at the Wilcox Dam and working down to the east edge of Newburgh Lake and its dam.

Rotenone is a chemical that works like a "peanut butter on gills," Lindquist said. In effect, the chemical suffocates the fish and they die. The chemical acts as a pesticide, but it is not toxic to humans, officials said.

Project manager Jim Ridgway added: "While it isn't a toxin, it is still a dangerous chemical and has to be handled as such. You need a license to apply it."

The chemical is expected to kill an estimated 25 tons of fish in the lake in December. Because of the spray's physical characteristics and its placement on the water, the spray is not expected to harm the wildlife.

"Actually the biggest problem to wildlife would be the PCBs within the fish," Ridgway said. "And we'll do our best to rid the lake of the PCBs."

The fish cleanup will take place within 24 and 48 hours of the spraying.

Lindquist said that the fish advisory originally was issued at the lake warning people not to eat the fish because of the dangers of consuming PCBs.

Prior to the lake's recent shutdown, Lindquist said some people were still consuming fish caught in the lake, despite signs and warnings notifying people of the advisory.

"It's terrible, but they still do," Lindquist said.

Once the fish are killed, it will be checked for its species, counted and taken to a landfill.

The kill will be monitored closely, officials said.

Potassium magnate will be added to the river to oxidize the rotenone, and monitors will be placed in locations to ensure the rotenone doesn't flow downstream.

The lake will be excavated, and the level lowered again, then a second kill will be completed in June 1998.

That kill is expected to assure that all contaminated fish are removed, because some fish eggs and fish may not have been destroyed or killed the first try. The second kill will be completed on the advice of the state DEQ, Lindquist said.

The PCBs are bioaccumulative, which means they accumulate or become larger in effect, as they move up through the food chain. The PCBs accumulate in fatty tissues. Several of the fish in the lake have tumors, Lindquist said.

Native fish such as bluegill and large-mouth bass will be restocked in the lake in August 1998.

Soil excavation

Nearby residents are likely to hear construction crews digging up and removing the PCB-contaminated sediment once the lake is lowered. That is expected to begin in April 1997 and continue until June 1998.

Hines Drive will be closed between Haggerty and Newburgh roads in February. County officials expect the bike path will be closed during the time construction crews work there.

If sediments are less than 2 parts per billion, they will be transported to landfills. Sediment with those "nondetectable" levels could be used to cap the Cooper School site, but the county would hold a public hearing before using it there, Lindquist said.

Residents can expect to smell the muck on the shoreline, which also will be removed.

The Hart-Crowser firm, a national firm known for sediment removal, will recommend the easiest way to dispose of the dirt, following state guidelines. Bid specifications will be drawn up by Environmental Consulting & Technology Inc. in Detroit.

"We don't want a dirt problem, we don't want an odor problem, we just want to minimize the impact,' Lindquist said.

UPDATE Chris Knight

DO YOU WANT TO BE A LANDLORD?

While it is impossible to predict what a particular house will be worth at any point in the future, single family homes have a track record of being excellent investments. If you want to take the plunge, what should you look for in an investment property?

Location is the prime factor. A great location will make a property easier to rent or sell later on for top dollar. You also want to consider the cash flow situation. It is often difficult to break even or show a profit from your rental income for the first few years of owning a property. Assuming the property will appreciate as you own it, you will want to consider the potential amount of equity you will build up each year. If you are planning to become a landlord in the Plymouth and Canton areas, it is a good idea to consult a Realtor and an accountant to help make sure that your decision to purchase investment real estate is an informed one.

Southeast Michigan residents can prevent electric service shutoffs this winter through Detroit Edison-sponsored programs and other types of assistance that keep out the cold.

"We urge customers with billpayment problems to call us immediately at (800) 477-4747 so we can help them avoid shutoffs," said Ronald Klinect, manager of customer service at Detroit Edison. "When a customer tells Detroit Edison that a problem exists, then we can begin to offer help.'

Detroit Edison's programs range from energy education and conservation measures to information on financial assistance. The utility also pledges to offer up to $1 million to help customers through matching donations to THAW - The Heat and Warmth Fund - and bill credits to qualified homeless shelters.

Help available for heating bill payments

Help is available again this year for seniors and low-income residents who have concerns about keeping warm in the harsh, cold winter months, Gov. John Engler announced Friday.

The Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC), the state's regulated gas and electric utility companies and rural electric cooperatives have joined forces to alert these citizens about state and federal programs that are available should they need help with paying their heating bills this winter.

"This campaign is another example of the public and private sectors working together to help our most vulnerable citizens," Engler said. "I applaud their efforts in extending a helping hand to these citizens who may need help in paying their heating bills this winter.

The campaign, "Be Winter-Wise," encourages customers to contact their utility company immediately to sign up early for the Winter Protection Plan, or to receive information on the Federal Earned Income Credit or other bill payment assistance

The utility companies began pre-enrolling customers Friday in the winter protection plan. Through this plan, all state regulated utility companies will offer assistance and/or shutoff protection programs this winter to assist low-income customers, senior citizens and public assistance recipients.

In addition, a family with a qualifying child and at least one worker in the household may be eligible for the Federal Earned Income Credit. The basic credit can exceed more than $2,000. A family without a qualifying child can receive credit for more than $300. Application forms are available from the U.S. Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service.

The MPSC encourages lowincome and senior citizen customers to call their utility company as soon as possible before high utility bills become a problem. The utility company will attempt to enroll the customer in a bill payment assistance program and will put the customer in touch with public or private social service agencies which may be able to provide financial coming Thanksgiving holiday period? Ensure your family a hassle-free experience by remembering the ABCs of travel:

 Arrive early, be prepared, and remain calm, advises AAA

Travelers thinking they can arrive at the airport a half-hour before flights with lots of carryon baggage and wrapped packages will be in for a disappointing experience," says Bill Best, AAA Michigan travel service director. "But if you know what to expect and plan accordingly, holiday travel can be one of the most exciting family experiences of the year.'

Detroit's Metropolitan Airport expects a 6 percent increase in travelers this holiday period compared with last year. Upward of 117,000 persons per day will use the airport on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving (Nov. 27) and the Sunday following (Dec. 1). On Wednesday, business travel ends for the week at many firms, adding to the congestion.

"And this year, increased secu-

Planning a trip by air over the rity for passengers' checked baggage and carry-on items means travelers have to build more time into their schedules," Best added. "That's the reason for the first rule: Arrive early ...

"Holiday travelers should arrive at the airport at least 90 minutes before domestic flights and at least 2-1/2 hours early for international destinations," Best said.

Other suggestions:

 Anticipate delays before you arrive inside the terminal. "Since there is a higher percentage of pleasure travel this holiday, many travelers will be ropped off and picked up in front of the terminals," Best says. Expect heavy congestion around curbfronts. Metro Airport does not anticipate parking problems, since nearly 1,000 new spaces have been added since last February.

Curbs will be reserved for active loading and unloading only. Drivers dropping off or picking up passengers will not be allowed to wait. Park in short-term parking and meet your party in the baggage claim area, Best recommends.

If you're unsure where to park, call the airport parking hotline at (800) 642-1978 for information on availability and • New security measures mean more hand-searches of checked and carry-on baggage, which may cause slowdowns at checkin and screening check points. "Savvy travelers are prepared to have all baggage handchecked even though it may not happen," Best added.

· All passengers are required to have photo identification.

• "Do not wrap gifts or other packages before coming to the airport, since security personnel may request unwrapping them," Best says. "Wrap gifts after you arrive at your destination."

•Keep calm in lines and during inspections. "Don't make jokes or take actions that might be construed as threatening,' Best warns. The 102-hour holiday (6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 27, to midnight Sunday, Dec. 1) is traditionally a time for family travel; much of that will take place by car in Michigan. Auto travel is also expected to be heavy throughout the weekend. Traditionally, about 20 percent of Michigan residents - 1.8 million people - travel during the Thanksgiving holiday.

Michigan motorists will find gasoline plentiful during the weekend, but they will pay an average 20 cents more per gallon than last year at this time. A gallon of self-serve regular unleaded currently averages $1.28 statewide

Motorists should be alert for deer on highways. There were a record 62,535 car/deer crashes in Michigan during 1995. That's an average of 170 a day. Eight persons died and 2,193 were injured.

During the 1995 holiday, 12 persons died in 11 crashes on Michigan roads, compared with 21 deaths in 1994. Of the seven victims with safety belts available, three were buckled up and three of the fatal crashes were alcohol-related.

School forum

Public has chance to speak series of school forums on the building of new schools that started in early October have been sparsely attended by

It's unfortunate. The Plymouth-Canton Community Schools are considering a bond issue on the March ballot to raise money to build as many as five schools.

That's an important tax issue that concerns both parents and those who don't have children in the schools.

However, there's still a chance for people to have their say. The last forum is slated for 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 23, in Pioneer Middle School.

The forums aren't limited to just discussing building issues. The first forum included a discussion of what kind of teaching facilities will be needed in the future.

Computers have changed the way classrooms operate, and more room in schools is devoted to that equipment.

The forums are an honest attempt by the schools to listen to what residents think about

The forum on Saturday is a chance for residents to have their say before the school board makes a decision on a bond issue and new

It would be time well-spent.

Help needed for the holidays

The economy is strong, unemployment is at its lowest in years and times are good for most people - but not all people.

In Wayne County, there are more than 400,000 people living at or below the poverty level and more than 17 percent of them are families with young children, according to United Way Community Services.

They need the same things all of us need food, clothing and safe shelter.

Although most social service agencies need financial and volunteer help year-round, the Thanksgiving season often inspires those who have a lot to pause and try to help those who don't have as much.

Please remember the following area agencies and service groups who help a lot of needy people in our local communities and throughout Wayne County and who now need help this holiday season.

• Focus: HOPE, 1355 Oakman Blvd., Detroit 48238

(313) 494-5500.

Communities are invited to adopt individu-'als and/or families this holiday season. The organization will partner individuals, families and groups with those in need. Share with a Senior program runs through Feb. 3. Family to Family program ends Dec. 20. To participate, call the Focus: HOPE Volunteer Depart-•Gleaners Community Food Bank, 2131 Beaufait, Detroit 48207 (313) 923-7855.

This nonprofit organization is dedicated to feeding the hungry and poor. Surplus food donations are received from farmers, food manufacturers, food processors and grocery stores and stored in its warehouse. Gleaners distributes 12 million pounds of food per year to more than 200 southeast Michigan area soup kitchens, church pantries, homeless shelters, day care centers and other nonprofit feeding agencies. These agencies provide more than 200,000 meals a week to the hungry, 40 percent of whom are children.

Donations requested include canned or dry goods, to be dropped off at Gleaners 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Friday or call for name of member agency in your area. Monetary donations may be made to Buy a Case of Food, Plant Some Seeds, or Emergency Food Boxes by call-

 Salvation Army Plymouth/Canton Corps, 9451 S. Main Street, Plymouth, (313) 453-5464

The Red Kettle drive begins on Nov. 29 and continues through Dec. 23. To collect enough money to allow the Salvation Army to assist people in western Wayne County, a single bell ringer would have to ring a bell all day long, every day for more than two years. In the Plymouth and Canton areas, the most pressing needed is for bell ringers between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday. To volunteer, contact Martha Schultz at the Salvation Army at (313) 453-5464

The Salvation Army Center in Westland-Wayne will have about 12-15 Red Kettle locations. Captain Mark Welsh invites area businesses, churches, schools and community groups to sponsor a food or toy drive, adopt-afamily or volunteer as a bell ringer.

· Goodfellows:

Goodfellows throughout western Wayne County will be out in force beginning Nov. 29. Goodfellows provide food baskets, clothes and toys to local families

In Canton, Goodfellows will be at major intersections throughout the township on Saturday, Dec. 7.

To make a donation or to volunteer, call Canton Goodfellows President Nancy Spencer at (313) 397-8975.

In Garden City, the annual Goodfellows paper sale is Friday and Saturday, Nov. 29-30, at major intersections throughout the city. To volunteer or make a donation, call (313) 425-

The Special Edition Livonia Goodfellows Newspaper is planned from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 7. Volunteers are needed to collect donations at area shopping mall. Call President Ken Ray Jr. at (810) 476-7094 or Al Judge, past president, at (313) 464-3747. Those wishing to send a donation should make it payable to Livonia Goodfellows Inc. and send in care of Livonia City Clerk's Office, 33000 Civic Center Drive, Livonia, Mich.

In Plymouth, the annual Goodfellows paper sale is Saturday, Dec. 7. Donations can be made to the Plymouth Goodfellows, P.O. Box 700912, Plymouth, Mich. 48170.

The Redford Township Goodfellows will hold their annual newspaper sale Friday and Saturday, Nov. 29-30. Volunteers will accept donations at various intersections throughout the township. Interested volunteers may call Irene Newton at (313) 537-0986 or Redford Township Hall at (313) 531-3110.

In Westland, the paper sale is set for Friday and Saturday, Nov. 29-30. Goodfellows President is Jerry Smith. To volunteer or make a donation, call Smith at (313) 728-8888.

Don't let the season pass without giving thanks. What better way to say thanks than to help someone in need?

Deal with facts

his letter is in response to E.S. DuBois' letter of Oct. 2. In your letter to the editor, you admonished me for failing to define average "as in average teacher salaries," when I addressed the teachers at the Sept. 24 board of education meeting. I sincerely apologize for such an oversight. I had assumed that the Plymouth-Canton teachers understood the meaning of the word average.

You also admonished me for failure, in quoting national teacher salaries, to provide data on national cost of living. The American Federation of Teachers can provide you with such data. Michigan teachers' salaries rank in the top five in actual salaries and first when the modest Michigan cost of living is factored

In response to your question, did I compare my position with comparable positions in the Big Three? The answer is no. There were no comparisons made among salaried personnel since the salaries were determined on an indi-

You asked, in the "real" world, what are the professionals paid who have a master's degree and have worked for the same company for at least 11 years? You may want to call Jerry Robbins, dean of education at Eastern Michigan University. He will tell you that EMU's associate professors of education with doctorate degrees and 10 years of experience earn in the low-to-mid $40,000 range for nine months

I did not inquire whether these professors paid for their own education. The wage for a Plymouth-Canton teacher with a master's degree and 11 years of service is $61,968, plus a bonus of $310.

As to my credibility, let's deal with data and facts, not emotions.

In conclusion, let me ask you a question: With the school motto that "All students can learn and succeed," whey did 28.5 percent of 11th-grade students flunk math, 39.3 percent flunk in reading, 47.7 percent flunk in science and 44.6 percent flunk in writing in the recent 11th-grade high school proficiency tests?

Ted Bohlen Plymouth

I have a suggestion that solves the problem that rally participants say is wrong with the youth today.

All of them should have been at home caring for their children instead of being at another forum, another rally, meeting another agenda in an already too busy (for their children) schedule.

Court statistics, school statistics and police statistics each reveal: Parents do not spend enough time with their children. They leave their children home alone or in day care too much. Statistics clearly state that the No. 1 cause of youth problems is related to parent absence. If in doubt about this, ask the judge, the sheriff, and the teacher that attended the rally if these statistics are not true.

Revise system

Recently there has been a lot of hue and cry from our politicians on the future of Social Security. Will it die on the vine?

For all intents and purposes enough money is collected but instead of being properly invested it goes into the government general

Many have voiced an opinion that we and allow the individual to invest the withholding funds on his own.

This poses the problem of investments going sour and leaving the individual with nothing for retirement.

I believe the system should be completely revised to keep the money in a separate fund and by all means advise the people that Social Security alone is not enough to retire on. They must make other investments.

Social Security can be what it was intended to be - a supplement to a retirement plan.

Group on lookout for new Grumpies t's time for some new Grumpies to

You remember the Grumpies. They are the group of inveterate letter writers from our communities who get together monthly at the Bloomfield Township Library to share their thoughts.

You've seen their letters to the editor in local newspapers. Think Tony Brehler of Livonia, Ray Dubin of Farmington Hills, Neil Goodbred of Livonia, Patricia Alspach of Farmingtoh Hills, R. Thomas Hunter of Bloomfield Township. They also write our elected officials.

But as they are about to celebrate their fifth anniversary in January, we're sad to note they have lost some of their word-hardy band. One of their founding members, Paul Harding of Livonia, died in July. Just a couple of weeks later Bob Carruthers, also of Livonia, died. Another resigned during an illness. "The mood of the whole group was just devastated," reports Brehler, who formed the Grumpies and keeps it going.

Still, at their regular monthly meeting last week the attending members were as loyal and the conversation as grumpy as ever.

Ross Rhinehart, Goodbred and Alspach were sporting sweaters with images of Grumpy (a la Disney's Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs) which Alspach kindly made. And a couple of others wore their Grumpy pins.

Although all Grumpies write letters with the hope of changing minds and policies, they don't all think alike. And the free-flowing conversation reflected their diverse and spirited views on a variety of topics.

Some memorable quotes: On teaching character in the public schools, Alspach: "If you want to teach character, teach it to the adults."

On diversity, Goodbred: "I think diversity means ideological differences - not what color you are." Alspach, disagreeing: "I live in a diverse subdivision with people who are Arabic, African-American, Asian. We all agree we need speed bumps."

On English to be a citizen, Goodbred: "You'd better know English to compete. I wouldn't wish the inability to use the English language on anyone in this country." Steve Matz: "You don't understand that some of our ancestors came with no support, no family, no social service agency. You still have that from Mexico, the Caribbean, Africa."

■ Social Security: Goodbred: "I resent having to pay into social security. I already have gotten back more than I put in. I still would have rather invested it myself." Rhinehart: What happens if along the road you have some bad investments?" Dubin: "What about a voluntary social security plan for those who want the government to manage their money. Brehler, who informally chairs the group, takes minutes and keeps a running record of who has what published where. He sets up field trips and guest speakers from government and media. He also recruits new members.

The Grumpies has a limit of 18, only because that's the number of people that can fit into their meeting room. Dues of $12 annually covers paper and copying expenses.

So if you like taking perf (or word processor) in hand to commend or condemn and would enjoy a couple of hours a month of discussion on current issues, call Brehler at (810) 477-

Parents' rights proposal has hidden hooks ov. 5 wasn't Betsy DeVos' day. The Republican national committeewoman, who doubles as Michigan GOP chair, saw the defeat of her U.S. Senate candidate, the loss of one Republican congressman, loss of control of the state House of Representatives, loss of control of the State Board of Education, defeat of all university board candidates. . . and the rejection of Colorado Proposal 17.

What does a Colorado proposal have to do with it?

Colorado 17 was part of an effort in 28 states, including Michigan, to insert in state constitutions recognizing the right of parents "to direct and control the upbringing, education, values and discipline of their children." Colorado voters said no by a 58-42 percent vote. (In Michigan, the proposed constitutional amendment never got out of a Senate committee.)

DeVos is a co-chair of Of the People, a group pushing the "parents' rights" notion. On Grand Rapids radio station WGVU last summer, a woman caller asked who is involved in Of the People. DeVos consumed 90 seconds of air time (I clocked it) to say it's "a national organization," never answering the question.

The Denver Post provided a little light. Of the People is based in Arlington, Va. Its president is one Ralph Benko; its chairman, Jeffrey Bell. It put up $400,000 in support of Colorado 17.

The phrase "parents' rights" sounds bland enough. There are, however, concealed fishhooks.

The Denver Post article (Nov. 3) reported that many opponents - and some supporters - saw it as a stalking horse for vouchers, a form of tax support for private and religious schools that is prohibited by Michigan's constitution. (The school-age DeVos kids attend a religious school.)

Marti Houser of the Colorado Education Association opined that a parent could demand a voucher to send a child to a private school; the school board probably would refuse; and then the parent would sue, citing the constitutional right to direct and control the child's education.

That would be messier than the O.J. Simpson trials.

Houser's idea isn't far-fetched, especially when you consider that insurance executive J. Patrick Rooney, who gave $50,000 to the Colorado 17 campaign, and Betsy DeVos are big voucher fans.

There are other problems:

■ Michigan's Constitution gives the State Board of Education "leadership and general supervision over all public education" (Art. VIII sec. 3). Would a rival parents' rights amendment upset the applecart? I think so especially in light of the Tennessee and Alabama lawsuits of the 1980s in which parents, 'ed by fundamentalist preachers, tried to assert they had a right to overrule state and local boards of education, superintendents, principals and teachers on textbooks. The appellate courts said no.

Michigan has laws to punish parents who abuse their kids. So what about the Warren parents who put gloves on their 6-year-old twins and told them to beat the crap out of each other? What about the dozens of other cases each year in which parents neglect, lock up in dark rooms, chain to feces-caked beds and otherwise are mean to their kids? What about moms who cover up for the boyfriends and stepfathers who rape little girls?

DeVos had an answer: The proposal she supports would have "absolutely no impact and effect on child abuse laws on the books."

Wrong, of course. Our restrictions on child abuse are laws, while the "parents' rights" conundrum would be amend the Constitution, and the constitution takes precedence.

The whole idea of a public school system, mandatory education, child health laws and child protection laws is to raise kids above the level of their parents. The DeVoses of this nation would "turn the clock back" (Betsy's words).

Colorado voters said nuts to that kind of parents' rights.

Right-wing ideology hurts study's usefulness

here must be a fair-sized industry out there that concerns itself with finding the names and addresses of media folks like me and then selling the resulting mailing list to various groups with an ax to grind and handouts to duplicate.

I'm sure that's why I get inundated with mail every week. Some of it is boring; some interesting, despite itself; some offensive; some kind of

Among the better-financed (judging from the frequency of mailing, the quality of paper in each mailing and the fancy-colored letterhead stock on which the material is printed) is an outfit calling itself the Mackinac Center for Public Policy. Most moderately informed news folks recognize the Mackinac Center as a generally very right-wing think tank, located in Mid-

So it was with only limited expectations that I ppened up a mailing a couple of weeks ago that contained a handout headed: "Study: Michigan Universities Not Adequately Preparing Graduates for Teaching and Business.

The "study" turned out to be an extended essay by a Dr. Thomas F. Bertonneau, who is billed as a "Mackinac Center adjunct scholar" (meaning somebody who is right wing enough for the center to engage him to conduct studies) whose credentials to opine on universities consist in being an English instructor in Central Michigan University's extended degree pro-

The conclusion that Michigan university graduates are not adequately prepared for busis comes from a real study on recruiting nds by Michigan State University Professor L. Patrick Scheetz, who found, "Employers elieve college graduates are receiving degrees in academic majors with low market value."

Bertonneau's contribution to the piece conted of reading through 300 course catalogues. He issued a blanket indictment of "Michigan iversities" in general which consisted of many rtions, some sensible and some merely ideobord of courses, some serious and some not. Graduates with such training, however, will find it hard to get good jobs and harder still to excel in them. Isn't that precisely the working of the free market that the Mackinac Center so stridently favors?

Bertonneau also attacks "indoctrination in the classroom" and thinks "rules and regulations against political indoctrination should be vigorously enforced." Although it isn't said explicitly in the stuff mailed me, the fact that it comes from the Mackinac Center leads me to conclude that what Bertonneau opposes is left wing political indoctrination in the classroom.

I don't know a university in Michigan that doesn't disapprove of and monitor against political indoctrination in the classroom. That said, however, it's hard to understand just how even the Mackinac Center is going to sheer each individual professor in Michigan universities of their particular political point of view when teaching courses. Most teachers make no secret of their preferences, and then work very hard to show students how best to achieve their own through study of the material.

Bertonneau also wants more great books courses (he's right), more required foreign language instruction (right again), less multicultural rubbish and more solid emphasis on grammar and syntax (mostly right but probably self-

What was sad about reading through this stuff was that much of Bertonneau's handout was solid and sensible but inextricably mixed in with right-wing ideology. That hurt the usefulness of his conclusions because it made me, at least, suspicious they were based more on politics and less on fact.

United Way offers holiday program for families in need

For the sixth consecutive year, United Way Community Services' Tel-Help service will offer the Holiday Connection program from Thanksgiving until Dec. 30.

Holiday Connection serves as a clearinghouse to meet the special needs of the tri-county area that emerge during the holiday season.

It refers families in need to human service agencies; links individuals, families or groups who wish to donate time with volunteer opportunities and matches financial or other resources with agencies serving families with similar needs.

"The demand for resources continues to increase each year," said Virgil H. Carr, president and CEO, United Way Community Services.

"Of the more than 800 calls that Holiday Connection received in 1995, less than 5 percent were from businesses and families wishing to donate goods or financial resources," he said.
"Because the need for services has been greater than the resources available, agencies and groups often can't meet all the

Holiday Connection will match the people with special holiday needs, with the human service agency that can provide them the necessary services.

In addition, individuals or groups who want to volunteer or give resources such as food, blankets, toys or gifts of money may do so by calling the Holiday Connection and be linked to the agencies that are in need of resources or volunteers for their holiday activities.

A group of employees can volunteer at a soup kitchen or put on a children's party as part of their way of celebrating the holidays. Working directly with Holiday Connection and United Way Community Services' Volunteer Center, the program identifies the soup kitchens and groups that may be in need of volunteers and matches the group of volunteers with the project. AAA has tips for motorists

OK, the car's all checked out for winter and nothing can go wrong...go wrong...go...wrong...

But it can and does.

Doubters should heed Peter Erickson, director of AAA Michigan Automotive Services, who notes that last year the Auto Club received some 647,229 emergency road service calls from drivers having car troubles.

For those times when you want to go and your car doesn't, AAA Michigan offers tips on how to cope in an emergency breakdown situation, recommending that drivers always carry an emergency kit in the vehicle, containing a flashlight, flares or a reflective triangle, distress sign, telephone change, first aid supplies and some basic tools.

Also, when traveling, be aware of early trouble signs by monitoring dashboard gauges and warning lights. If differences in handling are noticed, have the car checked out. If the vehicle becomes disabled:

- ■Activate hazard warning lights immediately and pull off the road on the far right shoulder, well off traveled lanes.
- ■Warn oncoming traffic by setting flares or reflective triangles behind the vehicle, especially at night.
- ■If it's necessary to stop on a center median, pull off the traveled road as far as possible.

If you decide to stay with your vehicle, close the windows and lock the doors. If someone approaches offering assistance, talk through a closed window, and ask the "Good Samaritan" to call for help by telephoning police or the nationwide AAA Emergency Road Service net-

Should it become necessary to jump-start a dead battery, the general procedure follows, but Erickson advises to always consult the owner's manual for specific instructions.

- Position the cars so they are close enough for jumper cables to be connected, but not touching. The transmission on both vehicles should be in park, or neutral for a manual transmission. The parking brake should be set and the ignition and accessories turned off.
- Connect one end of the positive cable to the positive terminal of the good battery. Attach the other end of the positive cable to the positive terminal of the disabled battery.
- Connect one end of the negative cable to the negative terminal of the good battery. Attach the other end of the negative cable to a good ground like a bolt on the engine or other unpainted, metallic surface on the car with the dead battery. Do not connect the negative cable to the negative terminal of the dead battery.
- mStart the engine on the car providing the jump. When attempting to start the disabled vehicle, don't crank the starter for more than 20 seconds. If it doesn't start in 20 seconds, wait two minutes before trying again.
- When the disabled car is running, disconnect the jumper cables in the reverse order from ward, they were connected.

Vitamin therapy works for Steven emember last week when I told you about the time my hand got smushed in the but-ter in the dormitory food commons? And how it got all gloppy and how I was such a gullible sophomore to believe that salt sprinkled on butter would produce heat?

Well, I bet, I just betcha, if I'd looked into the matter, at all, opened a book, maybe two, my hand wouldn't have become gloppy. But there you go, too much trust, no investigation.

Anyway, two decades have passed. I've grown up, I'm a skeptic. Less trust, more investigation. As a grownup skeptic I came to the "targeted nutritional intervention" for Down syndrome that I started telling you about last time - that nutritional therapy for baby Steven, now 9

Steven now has over three months of the therapy - the specially formulated vitamins and enzymes - under his belt (or more accurately, under his diaper waistband) and here's what I know. He's never had the "numerous upper respiratory infections" the books and doctors warned me about way back when he was brand new. In nine months, he's had the sniffles once, for two days.

Full-blown ear infections? Never. Even with chronic fluid in the ear canals which to me seems just ripe for infection, that "standing water" in Families honor a special 'friend'

■ Mary McGinnis spent 30 years helping families. And when it came time for her to retire, it was those families, their adopted children and grandchildren who gathered to honor her for her work on behalf of children.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO

During Mary McGinnis's 30-year career, she has seen the process of adoption change from an infant-dominated business to one that focuses on placing "special needs children."

Now we are placing far more school-age children than infants; all the agencies have experienced that," said McGinnis, who recently retired from Catholic Social Services of Oakland County. "Our agency has increased our placement every year with the word getting out that there are these kids that need families and that you can do it.

"There aren't these rigid requirements anymore.'

A special needs child is a ward of the state and it could be any child through age 18, although of the agency's children are older than 5. They may have some kind of handicap, physical or mental disabilities, be a minority or in a sibling groups.

Adoptees and their families, along with McGinnis's friends and family, recently celebrated her long career with a retirement party at Vassel's Catering and Banquet Hall in Southfield in conjunction with National Adoption Month.

"It was a marvelous experience," said Sandy Scharmen of Canton, a member of one of the families that attended the party. "The caterer and the person who owned the hall couldn't believe that all these kids were adopted. They just stood there in awe. Some of the adopted kids had their own kids there.

"It was something that Mary wanted as part of her retirement to share it with the adoptive families that were very important to her.

It was a wonderful experience."

McGinnis agreed.

"This was the most gratifying thing at that party," she said. "The families came in and they all had the children first. Some of these kids I placed 10 years ago, 12 years ago. So I'm looking and here comes this one youngster, I'm looking up at him and I recognized him immediately. I placed him when he was 5 and now he's 16. He had a terrible learning problem and he still has. Oh, how they (the parents) worked for him. He couldn't wait to reach in his pocket and pull out his driver license. It was just goose bumpily," McGinnis explained.

And he did it again Later in the day when everyone as home from school and work. and the day after, the physical therapist made mention of his great progress since last time - last time he'd only been on the vitamins for a week and a half.

Would all this stuff have happened anyway? According to the books and pamphlets and explanations I was given when Steven was born, no. They painted a much different picture, parts of the picture pretty grim.

Ron, my husband, and I went to a seminar on this just last month in Windsor and what a thing that was! There were researchers there, doctors, geneticists, a biochemist, a pediatrician, lay people, on the panel. They all spoke.

The experts spoke for six hours. Chemical formulas, blood chemistry, equations, gene mapping, blind studies, low zinc levIt's a vitamin and enzyme regimen specially formulated to meet the specific needs of the person with Down syndrome. No prescription is needed, yet. It's a vitamin and enzyme regimen specially formulated to meet the specific needs of the person with Down syndrome. Studies have shown that health and development are enhanced no matter when the vitamins are first introduced. Progress happens at any age.

That Steven is on his knees, has brought me to my knees. And he rocks on those knees. And he rolls across the floor. He's rocking and rolling. He just may get up and dance one day!

The "targeted nutritional intervention" is not a salt and butter deal to me anymore. My hand isn't gloppy. And because of that I've reached my glopless hand into my pocket and put my money where my mouth is, into the nonprofit, charitable organization, "Friends of TRIP (TRI stands for Trisomy 21 Research, Inc.). Its goals are to raise awareness of targeted nutritional intervention for those with Down syndrome, disseminate information to those who seek it, and raise money to fund

What they're doing and why they're doing it is important to me, the mother of Steven. But beyond that, there are nearly 250,000 people in the U.S. affected by Down syndrome, with 5,000 new Down's babies born each year. Awareness, information, better health for them all and for Steven is my personal goal, it's my charity's goal, and funny how things work out, it's now a goal of the soon-to-be released book "The Phoenix."

"Friends of TRI" is working with me on the production of the book, "The Phoenix." The book that's BY you, the "Family Room" readers, and FOR you. The book that's been warming my soul and bringing tears to my eyes as I transcribe the words you've written.

The words in "The Phoenix" heal and inspire. It's wonderful, And the proceeds from the sale of this book will go directly to a wonderful, charitable cause, whose works heal and inspire others who truly need it.

This sounds like an advertisement. It is. Take it with a grain of salt. But be assured, there's no butter around. Your hand over this will not be gloppy; it will be giving and helping and tax-deductible and, what the heck, "The Phoenix" could even make a pretty nice Christmas Ordering information will be available next week.

Here we have a woman who has her feet firmly planted on terra firma. Although she is retired she continues to be goal directed and performs with efficiency and determination.

She appears to be single-minded once she starts on an activity or project. Her concentration is very good and she dislikes being distracted while working.

Her retentive memory is a real time saver. She does not need to waste time searching out information that she has previously used. It is probably stored right in her mental com-

Our writer is rather serious minded and has a need to be right. Her sense of values is well balanced. Her thinking is logical and she is in touch with everyday events.

This is also an organized person who can handle her daily living well. First, she plans and then she sets about to implement her planning.

She is neat and tidy and likes everything around her in their proper places. Her aesthetic sense probably makes for an attractive home.

This woman continues to adhere to her early training following traditions and values with which she was raised. She may have an attitude regarding ethics, morality and social responsibility that is a little on the strict side. Authority figures are treated with respect.

She wants to please other people and be accepted by them. It is her nature to be helpful, caring and altrustic at times.

She is a people person. Relationships with others are both enjoyable and necessary for her happiness. She may have a tendency to crowd people a little.

I think our writer would be an asset to any organization to which she becomes involved. She would probably make an efficient officer as she seems willing to accept additional responsibilities. She may have a talent for dealing with money or figures.

Her signature and writing are the same, telling us she is the same nice person in both her social and private lives.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful.

Wonderland hosts Tree of Memories

Community Hospice Services again invites the community to celebrate the memory of someone they love with the seventh annual "Tree of Memories" Nov. 29 through Dec. 24 at Wonderland Mall in Livonia.

"This annual holiday celebration has become a CHS tradition over the years," said CHS executive director Maureen Butrico. "It began as a way to memorialize patients that died within our program but has evolved into cherishing the memory of all loved ones (living or deceased) by displaying a golden angel ornament on our memory tree."

For many, the healing process can be reached in the sharing of stories, or by writing a special note on an ornament, she said. It can also be accomplished by seeing other ornaments on the holiday tree and sharing stories with those who have also experienced loss.

Wonderland Mall and Schostak Brothers & Company is committed to community service," said Robbie Sherman, marketing director Wondedand Mall. "It is only fitting to support the community that supports us; we wouldn't have it any other way."

For more information or to have an ornament mailed a home or business; CHS at (313) 522-4244.

Community Hospice Services has been providing care to incurably ill patients and their famlies since 1981.

HAP COVERS

Definitely worth looking into.

At HAP we consider mammograms basic to an effective health care program. Because they are, by far, the most efficient means of early detection of breast cancer. Which is why the breast cancer screening rate of HAP members has already exceeded the goal set by the U.S. Public Health Service for the year 2000. Preventive women's health programs are part of the reason HAP's HMO has received full accreditation—the hignest quality status-from the National Committee for Quality Assurance. Making all the advantages of HAP worth a closer look. Be sure to sign up for HAP-health care you can feel good about.

Good food, fun is good news for Hospice

STAFF WRITER

The ninth annual "Light Up a Life" benefit is now history, but the Italian-American Club of Livonia and Jacobson's of Laurel Park Place have already started planning for number 10.

"Nov. 9 is the date for next year," said Carolyn DiComo, who co-chaired the event. "We're working on having some really big celebrities next year and we'll have only one big fashion show, so people will have time to move around."

Some 850 people turned out for the event which raises money for Angela Hospice Home Care. While the number is down from last year's 1,200 party goers, "Light Up a Life" still raised $58,000 for the organization, ODiComo said.

Thirty-one restaurants provided the food for the strolling supper, which included the sounds of the Stevenson High School Brass Ensemble

The three fashions shows were hits with the patrons. The always-popular children's fashion had Don Shane of WXYZ-TV as master of ceremonies, while channel mate Teresa Tomeo handled the celebrity show.

"The children's show was the best," DiComo said. "He loves children and made each one feel that they were the most important person there. People loved the designer show, and Teresa did a fantastic job with the celebrity show. All three shows were a big hit."

Two longtime "Light Up a Life" stars, Cheryl Chodin of WXYZ-TV and Paul Gross of WDIV-TV, were among the celebrities to take to the runway during the celebrity fashion show. To accommodate the crowd for the celebrity show, two 34-inch monitors were stationed in other parts of the store.

And it is that crowd that organizers hope to make more comfortable with the switch to one show next year, DiComo said.

"People will be more comfortable and we'll be able to seat more people," she said.

New to the benefit was the silent auction that raised $8,400. Of the 64 items available, the two-night stay for two at the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island was at the top. Valued at $900, it went for $700, followed by a $360 bid for a Detroit Red Wing jersey, autographed by Steve Yzerman. The autographed hockey stick Yzerman used to score the winning goal in the Oct. 19 game went for $300.

This is the fifth year the Italian-American Club and Jacobson's have teamed up to present "Light Up a Life." DiComo estimates that almost $200,000 has been raised since the benefit moved to the store.

"We do have good support from Jacobson's," she said. "Jacobson's donates the store and the people have to pay a per person price.

"And the restaurants are so generous in donating the food." While attendance and amount of money raised was down from last year, DiComo doesn't think become too staid. She suspects the economy is a factor, pointing out that St. Mary Hospital's "Hollywood Nights" and a fund-raiser for Children's Hospital's "Festival of the Trees" also were off in atten-

"We know it can be uncomfortable for people, but it's all profit," DiComo said. "We have a real good thing and a fun way to raise money.

"We have so much beautiful support from the celebrities and the community. Angela Hospice needs that support being the non-profit institution that it is."

In need of a quick gift idea? Something for the nut lover in your family?

The Zonta of Northwest Wayne County has the answer. The organization is holding its annual Koeze's Nuts sale now through Monday, Dec. 9.

The 12 selections are a popular fund raiser for the Zonta

"The candy and nuts combo makes a super gift and the candy and nuts in the canister are super duper gifts," said Zonta members Kay Diggs. "It's our major fund raiser and we get and overwhelming response to it. Many of our customers are return patrons who call us to or we call them when the sale

"This is a group effort," said Diggs. "Our first shipment has arrived, so we have items available for immediate delivery."

Zonta International is a worldwide service organization of executives in business and the professions working to improve the legal, political and professional status of women. The name Zonta is the Souix Indian word for honest and trustworthy, according to Diggs.

Zonta of Northwest Wayne uses fundraising projects like the nut sale to benefit the Women's Resource Center at Schoolcraft College, Greenmead Historical Village in Livonia and several international projects.

dopted three children - Michael, Tracy, and Amy, who were 8, 7, and 5, respectively - thanks to the help of McGinnis who made them aware of the older children's program.

"When we were first thinking about that, all there was was infant programs and the obstacles were so great to be able to adopt an infant. People didn't find out about the older children's program," Scharmen said. She found out about the program after finding McGinnis's number folded in her wallet. It was given to her by a friend, but she kept putting off calling her. The Scharmens' children moved in 14 years ago this

December. "It was a very exciting time to have the children move in Dec. 10 just before Christmas, (and) to have them reunited because they had been separated. Michael was in a foster home in Holly and the girls were in Clarkston in a home together."

Three years ago Patty Sinta, a Royal Oak resident who is the co-chairperson of Addition by Adoption support group, and her husband, Ron, adopted Keith, 9, and Richard, 7.

"It turns your life upside down but I think you begin to really find out what's important," Sinta said. "I know when I worked full time, I was always searching for this satisfaction, something that was really going to make me feel good. Now that I've got those boys, it's meant everything.'

Adoption career

- McGinnis began her career at Catholic Social Services of Wayne County's Infant Adoption Program after graduating from the University of Michigan in 1955. She remained there until 1958 when the Ann Arbor resident married and began her own family.

A strong believer in families, McGinnis returned to work in 1967 - this time at Catholic Social Services of Oakland County - after her youngest child began school.

"I think it probably had to do with how I was raised," McGinnis said about her decision to return to work with adoptions. "I came from a large family and families were important to me. It was just so appealing. When I took the time off to have my own children, it felt so gratifying that I automatically decided to focus on families.

At the time, McGinnis's agency only placed infants. The older children were not made permanent wards. They stayed in the system until they turned 18, she plained.

It wasn't until the early '70s that the courts began to (decide) Let's start terminating parental rights and get these kids a permanent adoptive family,' " she In 1975, the State of Michigan asked Catholic Social Services to pilot a program to place older children; at the same time, McGinnis was selected for a University of Michigan fellowship in training adoption workers for special needs children.

"It was wonderful timing. It was a seven-week program and without that I know I couldn't have gotten this program started," McGinnis said.

For the older children's program, the only fee involved is the $100 charged by the court, McGinnis and Marge Huggard, director of Catholic Social Services of Oakland County,

In many cases, medical and support subsidy goes with the child; for infants and babies who are state wards, there is a fee," Huggard said.

Although Oakland County is the organization's title, Catholic Social Services of Oakland County works with families in western Wayne, Oakland, Lapeer and St. Clair counties.

Most of the kids in Michigan are in Wayne County," McGinnis said.

Myths dispelled

Besides focusing on older chilfren, the adoption business has anged in other ways during eGinnis's career, according to

It really went from having 'I think that if there's et that (McG) held true all along, ias been that (she) n educate people . . Marge Huggard -OCSS director people qualify to having people qualify themselves for adoption. I think that if there's a tenet that (McGinnis has) held true all along, it has been that (she) can educate people, (she) can orient people, (she) can support people, but then they have to make that decision to step up to the challenge," Huggard explained.

Many of the requirements once imposed on families have been lifted, she added.

That 40 magic number, I think is still out there," Huggard said, referring to the misconception that potential adoptive parents can be no more than 40 years older than the child. "We've had a number of families where the spouse, perhaps the wife, is much younger than her husband; or there was a previous marriage. People believe that that would prohibit them from being able to adopt."

Instead, the agencies look at the strength of the family.

"I don't think our agency's a whole lot different than other agencies where they look at the strength of the families and they try to get the families to look at their own circumstances and their own ability to meet the need of the child," Huggard said.

Religion, income and marital status also don't play a significant role in choosing adoptive parents, Huggard said.

"You don't have to be Catholic; you don't have to have a certain income. You have to be able to provide for a child. That could be an apartment. You don't need to have a house," Huggard said.

Even single people are taken into consideration. There are some children who do better with single adoptive parents than in a couple. They get the kind of attention that they need from the single adult. I think it can be harder because you don't have support of a spouse so that requires a special study," Huggard said.

There is still a great need for African-American families and those who will take in children older than 10.

"When I first started I would get calls about an older child and they thought 2 was old. Now they're saying up to age 10," McGinnis said. "That's the fear of the teen-ager. But teen-agers are delightful to place. They really know what they're talking about. They want a family, they don't want to be moved every couple years. They're eager for the adoption experience. The younger kids are bewildered.'

For McGinnis, placing older children has been the most satisfying aspect of her career.

"My greatest joy has probably been working with people like the Sintas and the Scharmens who have turned into truly close people to me," she said. "And seeing these children getting the permanency that 20 years ago they wouldn't have got. The blending of families has been thrilling.

Addition by Adoption is a support group for those who are thinking about adoption, going through the process of adoption, or have already adopted a child. The group meets the third Friday of the month at St. Vincent and Sarah Fisher Center, 27400 W. 12 Mile, Farmington Hills. For more information, call Catholic Social Services of Oakland County at (810) 333-3700.

Season of honors

The future certainly is bright for Eastern Michigan's men's soccer team.

True, the Eagles will lose five seniors from this season's 7-12-2 team, including Tim McCarley, a defender from Livonia Stevenson/Schoolcraft College who was named to the Mid-American Conference's all-academic team (3.54 grade-point

But there's an awful lot of young talent on this

Such as defenders Brian Zawislak (Livonia Churchill) and Drew Drummond (Plymouth Salem), and keeper George Tomasso (Plymouth Canton). All three are freshmen, and all three received post-season honors.

Zawislak and Drummond were both named to the MAC's all-tournament team after helping the Eagles upend Miami (Ohio) 4-1 in the opening round of the tournament last Friday in Bowling Green. EMU was edged 1-0 by the host Falcons in the semifinals Saturday.

Tomasso has impressed just about everyone in the MAC, it seems. He was named to the all-MAC first team and earned the conference's freshman of the year honors as well.

In 21 matches, Tomasso finished with a 2.35 goals-against average, making 115 saves and recording three shutouts.

Drummond finished with a goal and two assists during the season for the Eagles, while McCarley and Zawislak each scored one goal. Michael Kley, a sophomore defender from Salem, netted three goals for EMU and Matt Simons, a freshman back from Salem, had one goal.

Winner's circle

Chris Gilles, a Plymouth native and Salem HS graduate, still has her stroke in tennis.

Now 30, Gilles rolled through the field last weekend to win the USTA Women's Hardcourt National Championship in the 25-and-over division at Belboe Tennis Club in San Diego.

In the championship match, Gilles romped past Debbie Higa of San Francisco 6-2, 6-1. In her earlier tournament matches, Gilles defeated Carolyn Medlock (Australia) 6-1, 6-4 in the semifinals and Darice Carnage (Mission Viego, Cal.) 6-0, 6-3 in the semifinals.

Gilles, a University of Wisconsin graduate, came into the tournament as the No. 1 seed.

SC women ousted

It was a longshot to start with.

Schoolcraft College's women's soccer team traveled to the NJCAA Regional Tournament, hosted by Dekalb CC in Atlanta, last weekend. Their first opponent: Brevard CC (from Ashville, N.C.), the NJCAA's No. 1-ranked team, last Sat-

The Lady Ocelots, who had been blown out by Brevard 6-U earlier this season, made a game of it. They trailed by just one goal midway through the second half, but they couldn't generate any offense -- and Brevard did, winning 3-0.

Sunday's win over College of DuPage (Glen Ellyn, Ill.) gave Brevard a berth in this week-end's NJCAA Tournament in Baltimore.

"We gave them a run for their money," said SC coach Nikki Johnson. "They didn't expect us to play them as tough as we did."

Brevard's first goal was scored in the opening half by Holly Palombi when SC keeper :Janelle Baldwin was caught out of position on what looked to be a crossing pass.

Two quick second-half goals ruined any Ocelot upset hopes. Palombi scored again after Brevard defender Amie Bradley intercepted an SC through ball and sent it forward. Moments later, Brevard made it 3-0 on Shannon Riley's goal from 18 yards out. Johnson cited Susie Parrish (Plymouth Salem), Lisa DeShano (Livonia Franklin), Anne Hokett (Franklin), Susan O'Neill (Plymouth Canton) and Staci Muysenberg for their strong

"We came out real strong," said Johnson. "We had been working on playing a physical game because they're so big, and Brevard really wasn't expecting it from us." But SC (6-8-2) managed just two shots on goal against Brevard (19-0), which has yet to be scored upon this season.

Canton shoots down Salem in classic district duel

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS EDITOR

Someone has to lose. When two teams as strong as Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem tangle, that is the only unfortunate certainty.

Last night in a Class A girls basketball district semifinal at Northville HS, the two rivals met for the third time this season. After splitting their first two, it figured this would be a war.

It was. Canton battled, Salem fought back. The Chiefs surged, the Rocks

But in the end, Canton presented an equation Salem could not decipher, winning 37-29.

The victory puts the Chiefs (16-5) into Friday's 7:30 p.m. district final opposite host Northville, which beat Novi last night and has beaten Canton twice this season.

Just two weeks ago, the Rocks hung a 16-point defeat on the Chiefs, pushing them outside with an inpenetrable zone defense.

This game was totally different. How so? "We scored," was Canton coach Bob Blohm's simple answer. "We were more patient against their zone than last time. And the kids were able to get open inside and we got them the ball." The Chiefs didn't score much inside against the much taller Rocks, but that was no measure of the value of those passes. Once Canton got inside, Salem collapsed, which opened things up outside. And Canton's Kristin Lukasik didn't need much space. She scored eight first-half points, drilling two three-pointers and knocking down a put-back at the halftime buzzer to give the Chiefs a 17-13 lead at the intermission.

"We had some scoring opportuni-ties, we just didn't convert early," said Salem coach Fred Thomann. This was definitely a test of wills. In the first two meetings, the team that dictated tempo and Thomann knew this. Which must have made him uneasy, after Lukasik's fadeaway jumper at the buzzer went down to give Canton that four-point halftime cushion.

Then the Chiefs opened the second half with a 9-2 run, and Salem was in real trouble.

And it only got worse, The Rocks' only real offensive weapon in this game, Amanda Abraham (11 game, Amanda Abraham (11 points), collected her fourth foul with 12 seconds left in the third. Before Thomann could remove her, she got her fifth — with one second left in the period. For the quarter, she had four fouls.

Still, the Rocks weren't finished.

Key shooter: Canton's Melissa Marzolf (left) has struggled at times at the free throw line this season, but against Salem she was right on, making 6-0]-1 to score a game-high 12

Back-to-back triples by Heather Guerin and Laurel Weinman ignited a 9-0 run in the fourth quarter, with Andrea Pruett shooting a second free throw (she made the first) trying to make it a one-point game. She missed, and Salem (17-4) did not score again in the last 3:04.

The Chiefs did, however. They didn't get a basket in the last quarter, but they hit 7-of-10 free throws. For the game, Canton was 17-of-21 from the line; Salem was 1-of-8.

Melissa Marzolf, who made 6-of7 free throws, led the Chiefs with 12 points. Kristi Fiorenzi had 11

"We were in position to win the same," said Thomann. "We had to ake one more play and couldn't.

Canton did. "It was a fight to the finish, believe me," said Blohm. A draining, determined, elation-filled fight for Canton.

Titans aim for NCAAs

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK STAFF WRITER

The University of Detroit Mercy's men's soccer team is going to the NCAA tournament -- but it had to go through Observerland to get there.

The Titans took a 14-3-4 record and the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament championship into their NCAA tournament opener at 1 p.m. Saturday at Bowling

"This is absolutely incredible," said one of Detroit's key players, sweeper Jeff Thomas. "This is a goal that we had when we all came in as frosh. There were 10 of us.

"Our freshman year we lost in the conference finals. Then we lost again (in the finals) last year. So this year was pretty much do or die for us."

"We've played them before," Titans' coach Morris Lupenec said of the Bowling Green contest, "so it's not like they're a team we're not aware of.

"And they are the 14th-ranked team in the nation. You've got to be pretty good to be ranked that high."

Detroit defeated Bowling Green in that earlier meeting, 3-1, in over-time on the Titans' turf.

"We scored with 24 seconds left," he said, "on a goal by Michael Giese.

Madonna ready

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS EDITOR

Whatever happens now, one thing is certain: Madonna University's volleyball team has had one heckuva season.

Of course, the Lady Crusaders won't be happy with it if it ends this weekend, short of the NAIA Tournament.

In fact, they won't be too happy with it if it ends shortly after their arrival in San Diego for Nationals, scheduled to run Dec. 4-7.

But first things first, And first comes the NAIA Regional Tournament, which starts tonight at the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

There are 12 teams scheduled to compete in three pools of four teams. Madonna is the region's No. 1 seed; College of St. Francis (from Joliet, III.) is No. 2.

"We can beat any of them," said Madonna coach Jerry Abraham warily. "We've proven that. We have beaten them already."

The Crusaders, 46-3 going into the tournament and ranked 11th in the NAIA, are 3-1 against the four teams Abraham figures to be the tournbest in the regional. 20th the toughest in the regional: 20th-

Greenhills rips Agape

BY NEAL ZIPSER STAFF WRITER

The Plymouth Agape Christian girls basketball team used hustle and determination to record 17 victories this season. But Ann Arbor Greenhills didn't allow the Wolverines to showcase that spirit Tuesday, as the Gryphons used a suffocating fullcourt press early and gradually pulled away for a 63-27 victory in Class D district action at Plymouth Christian Academy.

The win sends Greenhills (16-5) into tonight's district semifinal against Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard, a 44-21 winner over PCA on Mon-

Agape fell behind 12-5 after the first quarter to the bigger and faster Gryphons. After shooting poorly in the first quarter, Greenhills took control of the game by scoring the first 11 points of the second quarter.

"We tried to take them out early with the press, but sometimes the press takes us out of what we want to accomplish and tonight it back-fired for awhile," Greenhills coach Andrew Wright said.

The Gryphons weren't shooting the ball well but were helped by 10 Agape turnovers in the second quarter to take a 30-13 halftime lead.

Salem's Fox is all-Observer

Detroit Catholic Central, which placed seventh at the Class A boys golf team meet, leads the 1996 All-Observer first team with two representatives.

The Shamrocks making first team were senior Mike Pedrys and junior Adam Peters. Senior Nick Watts earned a berth on the second team.

The other seniors on the first toam are Plymouth Salem's Brian Fox and Livonia Churchill's Gary Kraus.

Following is a profile of each player on the first team:

Gary Kraus, senior, Livonia Churchill: The three-year letterwinner averaged 37.5 strokes per nine holes, including 34 twice. He had a round of 76 at the Class A regional at Oak Pointe, missing the state meet by one stroke

He was the Western Lakes Activities Association champion, scoring a one-over par 72 at Hudson Mills. He also recorded 73 at the Brighton and Pinckney

As a junior, Kraus was comedalist at the regional after struggling at the WLAA meet.

"He was the last of the three amigos, the golf rats of that crew," said Churchill coach Kirk

Osler, referring to 1996 Churchill gradiates Chris Kiehler and Dan Higham. "He's got a great attitude, extremely positive toward the game. I remember last year when he shot an 88 at the conference meet. Before we drove out of the parking lot he was talking about winning the regional."

Kraus made recent visits to the University of Minnesota and Michigan State University.

Steve Polanski, sophomore, Livonia Stevenson: The sophomore averaged 38.4 strokes per nine holes, including a seasonbest 34 against Plymouth Salem at Idyl Wild Golf Course. He was in the 30s 12 times and took third place at the WLAA meet with a round of 75.

He shot 78 at the Pinckney Invitational before scoring 82 at the Oak Pointe Regional.

"He's got more talent than any young man I've had a chance to coach at that age," Stevenson coach John Wagner said. "He's got a tremendous future, very, very focused, well beyond his years. But not without a good sense of humor and spirit."

Brian Fox, senior, Plymouth Salem: The four-year letterwinner recorded 79 at the Oak Pointe Regional after scoring 77 at the WLAA meet.

He finished in the top 5 with a 76 at the Traverse City Invitational and duplicated that score at both the Pinckney and Brighton invitationals.

He averaged 40.3 per nine

"Not type that would get angry, but he's a fairly tenacious, intense player," coach Rick Wilson said. "He worked hard on every hole, had a complete game. He's probably the most openlyintense player I had. For him it's good because that's his demeanor.

Derek Fox, junior, Farmington: The junior averaged 39.4 per nine holes and 77.4 at tournaments.

He was medalist at the city tournament with 72 at Huron Meadows and finished with 73 at the Kensington Invitational. He had a 78 at the regional at Oak Pointe and tied for eighth place at the Western Lakes Met with a round of 82.

"Derek hits a good ball, a draw right to left," coach Miner said. "He snaps his wrist the right way and has good club head swing and course management."

Mike Pedrys, senior, Detroit Catholic Central: The senior finished fifth at the Class A regional with a score of 77 at Pontiac Country Club and sixth

Cornerstone clobbers outmanned Madonna

Well, the bright side is that Madonna University did play better in the second half Tues-

The down side: It didn't really matter. The Fighting Crusaders weren't nearly good enough to challenge visiting Cornerstone College, the defending Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference champion in men's basketball, •the league which Madonna will be a member of next year.

The final score was 90-64, and from the start the Crusaders were no match for Cornerstone. Madonna converted just 10-of-27 first-half shots (37 percent), while the Golden Eagles were nailing 17-of-28 (60.7 percent) en route to a 42-25 halftime lead.

It was better for the Crusaders in the second half, but not much. They were outscored 48-39 and improved their shooting (slightly), hitting 12-of-30 from the floor (40 percent).

It wasn't nearly enough, however. For the game, the Golden Eagles riddled Madonna's defense with 32-of-53 shooting (60.4 percent), including 7-of-11 from three-point range (63.6 percent). Madonna was 22-of-57 from the floor (38.6 percent).

Cornerstone also had a 40-24 advantage in rebounding.

John-Mark Branch's 18 points topped Madonna. Mike Maryanski had 17 points and four steals, and Brandon Slone finished with 15 points and five rebounds.

For Cornerstone, Paul Wanloss and Matt Mekkes each scored 12 points. Chris Fisher and Cameron Currie added 10 apiece. Thirteen players scored for the Golden Eagles.

Grand Valley 95, Madonna 71: Mistakes proved pivotal to Madonna's chances Saturday at Grand Valley State.

The Fighting Crusaders committed 24 turnovers -- 10 more than the Lakers, who took advantage of the extra opportunities. Grand Valley took 15 more shots from the floor, converting 11 of them.

Schoolcraft gains title with 2 easy wins

Tenacious defense combined with balanced scoring led Schoolcraft College's women's basketball team to the championship at the Waubonsee College Tournament last weekend in Sugar Grove, Ill.

SC's Kristi Engel (from Redford Thurston) was selected as the tournament's most valuable performer. Engel nailed 9-of-16 shots to score 18 points while grabbing 13 rebounds (six offensive) and making four steals in the Lady Ocelots' 75-65 win over Carl Sandburg Friday.

On Saturday, in SC's 85-40 triumph over host Waubonsee, Engel had eight points, seven boards and four more steals.

Joining her on the all-tournament team was SC's Sheilah Coulter, who finished with seven points and five rebounds against Carl Sandburg and had a team-best 22 points and three assists against WaubonThe wins give SC a 3-1 record.

In the opener against Sandburg, the Lady Ocelots built a 35-28 lead by halftime and kept their opponents at bay with a defense that forced 27 turnovers while limiting their floor shooting to 22-of-64 (34.4 per-

Four players reached double-figures in scoring for SC: Engel, Crissy Harmon (17), Esther Ross (11, with six assists) and Julie Schmidt (10, with 12 boards).

Saturday's game against Waubonsee was never close. SC led 44-21 at the half and just kept pulling awaym, as five players reached doubles in scoring: Coulter, Christine Edwards (14, with five rebounds and three steals), Yvonne Malewski (from Thurston; 12 points, five rebounds), and Harmon and Ross (10 each).

Waubonsee was ineffective on offense, making 14-of-40 from the field (35 percent) and committing 50 turnovers.

Oakland 89, Madonna 42: Madonna University's poor shooting blended with Oakland University's lopsided edge in rebounding to make a one-sided game of Saturday's contest at OU.

Madonna (2-2) made just 12-of-72 shots from the floor (16.7 percent) and was outrebounded, 60-40. OU converted 33-of-65 from the field (50.1 percent).

Dawn Pelc had 12 points, four assists, four steals and three blocked shots to lead the Lady Crusaders. Mary Murray added 11 points, six rebounds and three steals.

OU got 14 points from Kristen Grant, 13 from Courtney Ruffing, and 11 apiece from Tamika Bates and Lori Young. Bates also had 11 rebounds, with Young dishing out

Wayne's Guess picks MSU

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

Michigan State University got a two-for-one deal Wednesday when Wayne Memorial's Lorenzo Guess announced he will play football and basketball for the Spartans.

The 6-foot-3, 188-pound Guess who has thrown for over 4,000 yards as a quarterback and scored over 1,000 points as a point-guard, made a verbal commitment Wednesday morning before a gathering of teammates, fellow students, family and coaches at the school's auditori-

The big surprise is that Guess will sign a national letter-ofintent in football in February. The early signing period for basketball ended yesterday. Basketball letters-of-intent cannot be signed again until April.

With his twin brother LaVelle at his side, Lorenzo Guess had MSU and Michigan baseball caps planted on the podium before announcing his decision.

"I decided to commit now so there wouldn't be as much pressure for the basketball season," said Guess, who led Wayne to a 23-3 record and a berth in the state Class A semifinals in East Lansing a year ago. "All the pressure is off now and I'll be able to play better. I feel good about going there. I just had a feeling.

"I called (basketball) coach (Tom) Izzo this morning and I talked with coach (Nick) Saban (the football coach) last night. I didn't get to sleep around midnight.

In a way it was tough because they both had good academics and both are nice schools. I just wanted to get it over with.'

The trump card in Guess's decision may have been his association with basketball assistant coach Mike Garland, who is in his first season at MSU after coaching at Mega Conference-Red Division rival Belleville.

"I've known Mike since the ninth grade and he's known the family even longer," Lorenzo Guess, who originally indicated he would wait until sometime sion, made an official visit last weekend to Georgetown University, but the Hoyas did not make an immediate scholarship offer.

"They wanted to wait and see me play sometime during the season," Guess said. "I had a nice visit. Coach (John) Thompson is more laid back than I thought. But when he talks, he has everybody's attention. I was impressed with the way he ran

At MSU, Guess will join a talented recruiting class in basket-

Flint Southwestern's Charlie Bell, considered to be a friend and among the top five seniors in the state along with Guess, recently signed with the Spartans. All-Stater Mateen Cleaves of Flint Northern is a freshman guard this year.

Guess, who is an honor student at Wayne, also liked MSU's accounting program.

He will also get an opportunity to play quarterback.

"I'm playing football because I like it," he said. "And when I play football, I want to play quarterback."

Then we scored two goals in the overtime to beat them."

Which, of course, won't mean jack when they play Saturday -and might even work against the Titans since they are just 3-2-2 in road games.

'We've played there before," Thomas said. "But this is a different case. Going into the tournament, we knew for sure if we got in that we wouldn't host a

"I don't think anybody is concerned about playing on the road. That was pretty much expected. We're peaking at the right time. We've got an eightgame unbeaten streak.'

UDM will start six Observerland players against the Falcons with another two coming off the bench. In addition, a ninth Observerland player is being redshirted as a freshmań.

Starting in goal for the Titans is senior Kal Kaliszewski (Livonia Churchill). His successor, freshman Jim Grewe (Livonia Stevenson) is being redshirted. Senior Thomas (Stevenson) is Detroit's sweeper while the midfielders in front of him include senior Dario Rauker (Churchill) and senior John Truskowski (Plymouth Salem).

Freshman Matt Quinter (Stevenson) plays fullback or midfield and senior Dominic Vella (Churchill) starts at for-(Stevenson). The Titans are laden with seniors plus a core of sophomores and freshmen who will take over next season. Lupenec's sixth as the team's coach.

"When I first took the job," he said, "I was given the job in December, around Christmas time. The recruiting process was almost shot by then. But we did the best we could.

We really kick-started it with the seniors on the team right now, led by Kal and Thomas. Of course we got Truskowski and Rauker the year before that."

"I knew who I was coming in with," Thomas said of why he chose the Titans. "And I knew the coach. It was also close to home, which was important to

"Morris had a lot to do with it. I knew what type of coach he

"I went to high school with Pichler and we played on the same club team. Along with Kal.

"And I knew Dario, who was a year older than me. We all just decided. We talked a few days a week during the high school season, to see what everybody was doing, which schools had called, things like that. In the end, we all decided to stay together." Detroit won seven times in Lupenec's first season, reached 16, 8, 13 and now 14 victories in successive campaigns. This, though, is the first for UDM in the NCAA tournament for Lupenec The Titans came close last year, losing to Butler, 5-2 in overtime, in the MCC tournament championship match.

"That was the toughest loss I'd ever experienced as a coach, Lupenec said, "just because I thought we had a very good chance of winning last season.

"We had to win in overtime with 10 players in the semifinals. Then in the final we felt we weren't on an even slate -- but that's not taking anything away from Butler."

There were problems that aren't worth going into at this point, but they left the Titans with incentive for this year.

"We knew we had a quality team coming back," Lupenec said. "The thing about this season is there were 4-6 teams that could have won that tournament. We've seen a lot of parity within the league.'

Detroit was picked to win the MCC, but finished third, losing to Butler and Wright State. The Titans hope to at least do better than Butler, eliminated in the second round last year.

Should Detroit defeat Bowling Green, it would likely play at the winner of the game between Evansville and Indiana. "In high school," Thomas said,

This is something we always thought about. And it's always been so close. We just couldn't get that last win. "I think it's been 17 years since the sport's gone to the tournament here.' With the way things stand now, and with a continuation of the influx of local talent, it won't be 17 years before the next. That isn't an overwhelming concern of Lupenec, however. He's got the bigger picture in mind.

"We've got 10 seniors on this year's team," he said, "and all of them are graduating. "I think sometimes ... there are definitely soccer programs out there ... I'd like to know what percentage of their seniors are graduating.

"It's a tribute to the university and the professers. This is a game. There's more to it than that. We want to get them career oriented, so if this is as far as they go with soccer, we can get them so they'll be productive to

So even if Detroit loses, it wins.

A CAPSULE LOOK AT KEY OBSERVERLAND CONTRIBUTORS TO DETROIT MERCY'S NCAA TOURNAMENT SOCCER TEAM

·Kal Kaliszewski - Titans' goalie has six shutouts and 0.99 goals-against average. Career total of 19 shutouts. Twice All-MCC second team pick and member of 1996 MCC All-Tournament team. Helped Livonia Churchill reach state title game in 1990.

Coach Morris Lupenec's comments: "Kal was a Parade All-America corning out of high school. He felt that if someone could get this program turned around, get it into the NCAA tournament, that I could do that - and I was just as confident in him. He was a big part of our recruiting. You've got to build from the back."

• Jeff Thomas - Sweeper named MCC tournament MVP. One of the best in the Midwest at his position. Three-time All-MCC second team pick, twice All-Mideast Region selection. Had three ssists this season. Led Stevenson to 1991 Class A tournament title.

Coach Lupenec's comments: "He's the core of our back line. He's been a steady sweeper from Day One. If there's one word that defines Jeff Thomas, it's steady."

• Matt Quinter - Freshman started in 18 of a possible 21 games. Earned MCC All-Newcomer status with his play. ed his senior season at Stevenson due to a broken leg but led Spartans to nce title as a junior. Made All-District as a sophomore in Virginia before moving to Michigan.

Coach Lupenec's comments: "In my view, there were two players I believe were the top two players in the state of Michigan. One was Stevie Williford, who had a very good season for Michigan State. The other was Matt Quinter. see two can play in any program in the country

"Matt was very instrumental in the final (MCC tournament) game in shutting down Butler's top offensive threat."

· John Truskowski - Fifth-year senior started all 19 games he played, netting a goal and two assists. Had four goals and three assists as a junior. As a prep, led Plymouth Salem to a district title.

Coach Lupenec's comments: "In John's first year he suffered a broken leg and did not play. He's working on his Masters and is taking a very heavy schedule while playing soccer. Definitely has been our defensive leader for the last four years. A super individual."

. Dominic Vella - Second-team All-MCC this year. MCC Tournament MVP in 1995. Started all 21 games, scoring seven goals and adding two assists, the 16 poings placing him tied for ninth among MCC scorers. Played at Churchill, went to Schoolcraft before transferring to UDM.

Coach Lupenec's comments: "He's the big man for us up front. He's scored a lot of important goals in the last two years. I hope he's a key for us in Satur-

· Adam Pichler - Scored the last goal of a shootout which enabled UDM to eat Wisconsin-Milwaukee in overtime in MCC tournament semifinals. Appeared in seven games, starting one. Key Stevenson player in 1991 state ship season.

Coach Lupenec's comments: "He came in with Thomas and Kaliszewski as a freshman. He plays midfield for us and come off the bench this year. He's given us value there, especially against Wisconsin-Milwaukee."

• Michael Glose - Tied for 10th in MCC scoring derby with 15 points.

Ended with 17 points on six goals, five assists. Farmington product transferred to UDM after a year ago Wisconsin-

Green Bay.

Coach Lupenec's comments: "It was a joy to have him come in. He's the type of kid that hasn't gotten the recognition. We always joke around, tell him that he'll score five goals in the championship game and they'll still miss him.

"He played his first year at midfield.

which isn't a position that is suited for him. He's a super class act kid and will do anything for the team. "We moved him to left wing, and he's just been able to run past people the past two years. He was injured the first game in the tournament, but we should have him back Saturday."

· Darlo Rauker - Twice honored as second-team All-MCC selection. Was second-team All-State at Churchill.

Coach Lupenec's comments: "He took a year off for personal reasons, but decided to come back. And what a valuable part of the team he's been. He's a steady outside midfielder for us. He's steady with the ball and can see the field very well."

•Jim Grews - Red-shirt freshman from Stevenson, where he recorded 22 shutouts. Led Spartans to 1993 state Coach Lupenec's comments: "When we looked at the core of our recruiting, we looked at the goalkeeping situation in the state. There was a kid now at Eastern Michigan who is from Canton, a boy from DeLaSalle who went to Michigan State - and Grewe from Stevenson.

"We knew we needed to get one of those three to take care of our goalkeeping for the next four years. He was fortunate, too, to be able to play under Kaliszewski for a year.

"We think he's going to turn some heads next year. He's a lot better than some people give him credit for."

RELIGIOUS NEWS

Cloistered monastery makes habit of denial

Past the visitor's room, everything is frugal and simple. There are no radios. The only newspaper is a small clip from the Wall Street Journal.

Of course, there are no restaurants. No movies. Television is limited to religious airings, such as the Pope's visit to New York City last year.

Even the food at meals is sparse, sometimes porridge, a baked potato or leftovers. They don't visit with one another and while they eat, Scripture passages and interpretations are read. A picnic on the grounds is considered an exciting outing.

A bleak and dreary existence? Not according to the nuns who talked to the Observer during two recent visits.

"The life is a paradox," said Sister Mary Thomas who wears a beeper on her belt near a large brown rosary. Ironically, the touch of modern technology helps eliminate an intercom system and maintain the quiet.

"All those negatives," she continued. "The materialities are not what makes you happy in the long run. It's being at peace with yourself and God. The things that we give up are not the essentials.

"People can't believe we can be so happy in this life, which is not to say we don't have trials, but because we are growing in the Lord, the joy comes in the midst of the sacrifice."

They're dressed in full white and black habits. Their smiles are peaceful and constant as they tell about their lives in the monastery and their reasons for choosing the Dominican cloistered order.

'... Really is a calling'

Sister Mary Paul had a playful smile and a relaxed manner as she explained how she never imagined she would become a nun. She entered the monastery in 1983

"A lot of people say, 'Why are you locking yourself up?' I left a possible, career, husband and family," she said. "There really is a calling. It's that fundamental faith, belief and transcended values that make it possible.

When I was in high school I didn't hear a lot of encouragement to become a nun. I'm an oddity among my friends.

"I suddenly knew beyond a doubt that there is an Absolute that God is - and I knew everything existed in relation to God. I knew I would be a nun and what kind of nun," she said. "The first five years I was here, I was in shock, because I couldn't believe it. It's such a fantastic what life is easy?"

She does miss Canadian homeland and seeing her nieces and nephews. Later, she added Big Macs and french fries to the list.

"This life is God's gift to us," she said. "That thought permeates me. It's the last thing I ever planned or deserved.'

Sister Mary Trinity said there are nights when she wakes up and says to herself, almost in shock, that she can't believe she's there.

"I feel very blessed in this life," she added, explaining that she entered the monastery when she was 40. She was teaching at a nearby Montessori school and passed the monastery regularly. I decided to come to Mass here, she said, adding that she felt comfortable and at home. Blessed Sacrament Chapel is open to the public. However, the cloistered nuns are separated by a clear glass wall.

Today, these nuns live in the second-largest Dominican cloister in the United States.

At Blessed Sacrament, the women range in age from 33 to 95 years old. Two nuns, Sister Mary of the Visitation and Sister, Mary of the Pure Heart, are 90 years old and identical twins They were professional photographers before they entered the monastery.

However, women are entering the monastery later than in the past, usually after attending college and leaving a job. To be a cloistered Dominican nun, you must have good physical and-mental health, be a Roman Catholic and single. Candidates also need to be social.

"People who live life are the ones who do the best in clostered life," Sister Mary Thomas said. "People who try to escape from life wouldn't make it here.

A recent phenomenon is that older women were applying and sometimes they have had fange lies, according to Sister Mary Trinity.

"Our community has decided not to accept women with grown children, because it's very difficult for them to leave them," she said

A tenuous future

The future of the cloistered order is tenuous, however, because fewer women are entering and many of the nuns are elderly. Their virtuous lifestyle, they believe, has a positive effect on the world. They help to balance the scales of evil with their goodness, prayers and devotion. The public is invited to call a hotline with their requests for prayer, (810) 626-8253.

There have been times people call and say they have cancer, according to Sister Miriam. They'll go in for tests and there are no more signs of the disease. The nuns often hear that prayers are answered.

Each day is planned and is just like every other. The sisters awaken at 5 a.m., have morning prayer, private prayer, celebration of the Eucharist, mid-morning prayer, and then their break-

At mid-day, they have prayer, lunch, a short recreation period, rest, reading, study and work. They pray, have dinner and another recreation period, followed by night prayer. A night vigil in the chapel ensures the sacraments are never left unat-

For most, the monastery is the only way of life they know or remember. Sister Mary Margaret entered the monastery when she was 18.

"I've been here 30 some years," she said looking much younger than her age. "I felt I wanted to give my life to God. I dedicated it to him in something that was not active work, like teaching, and found it in liturgical praying and perpetual adoration."

Sister Mary Elizabeth was born and lived in the Netherlands.

"I had to support my parents until I was 30 years old," she said. "I wanted to come into the religious life and I was very much impressed by the Dominican Sisters."

After World War II, she was sent to Canada to help establish a new group of Dominican nuns. She was later sent to Michigan.

A Dominican order was established in Detroit in 1906 and in 1966 the monastery was moved to Farmington Hills.

Most people don't see all the good in the world, Sister Mary Paul said.

In mid-September, Collins, Ed Spinazzola, Jim Klauza, Stan Sala, Mike Sauer and Carl Zoff participated in a pheasant hunt at the House of Burgess on Harsens Island, which produced 65 birds. Spinazzola, of Utica, connected with an 8-point buck the first week of October while hunting at his

James Halley is off to a great start in bow hunting. The Novi resident purchased a bow in September and brought down his first deer in October. But it wasn't just his first deer. Halley's trophy was a 150-pound, 9-point. Halley shot the buck in the Proud Lake Recreation Area at 7:35 a.m. on Oct. 5.

"I drew down on a 14-point and he caught me and took off," explained Halley. "I looked back at the 9-point and he was still there and I got a good shot at •Ron Webster opened the 1996 firearms season with a bang. Hunting in Lenawee County, the Redford resident dropped a beautiful 180-pound ,10-point at 7:30 a.m. on Nov. 15. Webster was hunting a fence row along the edge of a cedar swamp and said the buck was following three doe into the swamp.

·Larry Kammerer Sr. had a fantastic hunting season. The Metamora resident shot a trophy 8-point with his bow in mid-October, then topped that feat by dropping a thick-racked, 9-point buck on opening day of the firearms season. Kammerer was hunting farmland in Oakland

The only regional team to beat Madonna was St. Francis, and that was in the first week of the season, in the final of the Madonna University Invitational Sept. 7. The Crusaders avenged that defeat by beating St. Francis on its home floor at the Big Guns Classic Oct. 26.

The regional championship match will be at 2:30 p.m. Saturday. The winner will get a bid to the NAIA Tournament.

"I think we'll play well," said Abraham. He has no reason to think otherwise; since losing to Oakland University Oct. 8, Madonna has been unbeatable.

Last weekend the Crusaders romped through the NAIA Sectional Playoffs, which they hosted, beating Central State (Wilberforce, OH) 15-3, 15-4, 15-

Five Madonna players were selected to the all-sectional team, and Abraham was named coach of the year. Kelly McCausland (Redford Union) and Julie Martin (Livonia Stevenson) were co-players of the year.

Meg Paris, Heather Steinhelper and Karin Sisung were also named to the all-sectional McCausland finished with 23 kills and six blocks in the two matches, while Martin had 20 kills and seven blocks. Paris totaled 54 assists to kills, 17 digs and four service aces; Steinhelper had eight kills and 18 digs; and Sisung contributed nine kills and 13 digs.

"We were really dominant," said Abraham. "Like I said before, the kids just keep improving. I sure hope it contin-

There's no reason to think otherwise. With four seniors --McCausland, Martin, Steinhelper and Paris -- to provide the leadership, Madonna has the right stuff to advance to the NAIA Tournament for the third time in four years.

"The kids are very anxious, very antsy," said Abraham, which explains why the Crusaders dispatched their sectional tournament opponents so expediently. "They've put a lot of time into this." And they don't want to spend much time at the regional, if they can help it. They'd like to set their time aside for that trip to San Diego.

Agape, which lost for only the third time this season, was once again led by its sister-tandem of Jaci and Kim Ther. Jaci, one of two seniors on the squad, struggled from the floor and finished with seven points. Kim, a sophomore guard, led the Wolverines with 12 points. "This wasn't the way I wanted to end my career," Jaci Ther admitted. "I think I tried to carry the team and maybe got nervous. As a team, we didn't play like we usually do and weren't passing the ball well."

The Wolverines as a team showed some nerves, combining for 27 second half turnovers

"They took us out of what we wanted to do early with the full court press and we may have got frazzled," Cook said. "We just never got going and weren't into it. We didn't play as scrappy as we could usually do. Maybe we were in awe of them and the lights. We're not used to this."

Awe, maybe, but fatigue could have also been a factor. This was the third tournament for the Wolverines in three weeks. Two weeks ago, Agape finished second in the ACSI regional tournament, and last week, the Wolverines won the Metro Christian Conference championship behind the play of the Ther sisters and junior center Caley Mullen.

Mullen, who averages in double figures, was limited to two free throws by the swarming Greenhills defense.

CANTON CHIROPRACTIC LIFE CENTER

Chiropractic is not a new concept. In 1995 it turned 100 years old. Today, Chiropractic has become the largest drugless healing profession in the Western World. This science explains that some of the causes of pain or disease in the body are the vertebral subluxations which create pressure upon nerves and interfere with the normal transmission of vital nerve energy.

The Chiropractor's objective is to locate the place in the spine where the nerve pressure exists and by specific adjustments restore vertebrae to their normal function. These corrective adjustments release pressure on nerves, and thereby allows the body to heal itself. In addition to traditional "back pain" other conditions which may respond to Chiropractic care include treatment of headaches, whiplash, work accidents, sports injuries, pinched nerves, and numbness, to name just a few.

The results from recent studies have just come out. Chiropractic spinal adjustments is now the most studied method of treating back pain. All of the studies have proven that it is nearly twice as effective as traditional medical treatment for back related problems. It has been found that patients recover twice as fast, recovery is for a longer period of time and it is much less expensive. This information has been brought to in the interest of better health by Dr. Cheryl Snyder of CANTON CHIROPRACTIC LIFE CENTER located at 43050 Ford Road, Suite 140 in Canton, phone 313-981-8210.

If your Christmas list has a bowler on it, here is the ideal answer to a gift-giving situation for that bowler.

The year's hottest bowling ball is the Brunswick Zone, and almost everybody wants one, as they may be. The next proam at Taylor Lanes features the newest of the Zone balls, the D2 Z Deep Danger Zone. One will be given away with each paid entry

The best news of all is these balls are available immediately in all weights, so they're just in time for Christ-In addition to the ball, entrants have the option of obtaining a Brunswick Professional Roller Double Ball carrier.

This year even the kids can bowl in the pro-am and receive the same ball and carrier with a paid entry.

If you have a hot shot youth bowler on the wish list, this is ideal; they get all this and a chance to bowl with the pro bowlers as well. The adults will compete for cash prizes as usual.

The pro-am dates are Saturday, May 31; Sunday, June 1; and Tuesday, June 3. Monday is set aside for a golf outing with the bowling stars. More on that at a later date.

Best news of all, here are the fees: adult entry fee, no ball or bag, $70; bad only, $110; ball only; $135; entry with ball and bag, $175; junior entry, no ball or bag, $35; bag and no ball, $75; ball only, $135; ball and bag, $175; combined adult/junior entry with one ball, $159; two balls, $219.

The entrants get a card which entitles them to pick up the equipment at anytime, so all Santa has to tote is a bunch of cards instead of all those bowling balls.

Entry blanks are available at the local bowling center counter or by calling Taylor Lanes at (313) 946-9092.

If these costs are too heavy at the holidays, there is the option of joining the pro-am club and getting the same thing in easy payments. A little extra bonus is added as each entrant also receives a free ticket to the TV

Hey, Santa, don't forget your friendly bowling writer. He could us a new ball, too.

Anyone who watches a lot of TV has probably seen the commercial from a mattress company in which they drop a bowling ball on the mattress. The first demo has all the pins fall down except for one; wouldn't you know it? It's the ten-pin.

Now here is a TV commercial that is true to real life, for every bowler can relate to the doggone stubborn ten-pin, even in an advertisement.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Parents and health

Despite many differences in parenting, there are common blunders, especially when it comes to family health. When in doubt, don't be afraid to ask your pediatrician, said an expert from Children's Hospital of Michigan.

Every mom and dad is different," said Dr. Herman Gray, vice chief of pediatric education. "Parents know their kids better than anyone else, but sometimes we need a little guidance."

He offers the following problems, or missteps he often sees regarding children's health:

- Coming into the pediatrician's office unprepared, which puts the doctor at a disadvantage.
- · Making a child eat when the child is "full" or not hungry. The bottom line is that the child will eat when he or she becomes hungry
- Failing to vaccinate. Consult with your doctor about the age-appropriate immunizations your child needs.
- Not finishing the prescribed antibiotic. Even if your child is feeling, acting and looking better, the infection may not be gone. It is crucial for children to finish the entire course of medicine as prescribed.
- · Smoking in the house or around children and pregnant women. Second-hand smoke and pregnant women who smoke can increase risk of SIDS, low birth weight, asthma and increased infections
- · Improper isolation rules. It is important not to expose others to a contagious disease like chicken pox. Call ahead to your pediatrician's office so the child can enter through a back door and not expose others.
- · Allowing children to sleep with parents. Parents need to recognize that kids need their own space and should enforce some rules for separate sleeping areas.
- Rewarding bad behavior. Parents must remain consistent when disciplining their children. Set clear limits and don't send mixed mes-
- · Avoiding regular check-ups is bad for both children and adults.
- · Misunderstanding the common cold. Colds are caused by a virus that cannot be cured by medication. A normal cold runs 10-14 days with runny nose, headache, congestion and sore throat.

Top awards given

For the first time, a single facility has captured three of the five top awards given annually by the Health Care Association of Michigan to recognize excellence in the delivery of long-term

Westland Convalescent Center on Warren Road received the: Certified Nurse Assistant of the Year Award, the Public Relations Award, the Presidents Award recognizing the state's top long-term care administrator, Judith Caroselli.

"This is the first time in HCAM's history that one facility has collected all three prestigious awards in a single year", said executive vice president Reginald Carter. "It is a testament to the excellent staff, dedicated leadership and innovative management."

Arthritis run scheduled

Runners and walkers looking for unique winter race venue won't have to look any further when the Arthritis Foundation-Ann Arbor Region hosts the Max & Erma's Sixth Annual Jingle Bell Run for Arthritis on Dec. 8. This year's 5K run and walk will provide participants with an opportunity to travel through a portion of the Christmas Light Display at Domino's Farms which features more than 900,000 lights. New laws clear way for more hospice facilities ncouraged by approval of recent state legis area hospices are building and planning for facilities where terminally ill Michigan patients can live out the rest of their days.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Sponsored by state Rep. Gerald H. Law, R-Plymouth, legislation approved last summer enables the incurably ill, without anyone to care for them, to die with dignity in hospices instead of hospitals or nursing

"I think the public acts have had a very positive effect in that it raises awareness that hospice is different from other types of care, than a hospital or nursing home," said Maureen Butrico, executive director of Community Hospice Services in Plymouth and Westland.

"People tend not to want to deal with the issues of death and dying. Being that November is National Hospice Month, this is an appropriate time to help educate the community about the whole issue of hospices."

New laws approved

Signed into law by Gov. John Engler in late July, the laws include:

■ PA 224, which specifically

PA 224, which specifically exempts Medicaid-certified hospices from the state definition of nursing homes allowing them to operate under regulations appropriate for dying patients. For example, nursing home hours restrict visitation while hospices provide 24-hour access to family, friends and even pets.

PA 267 defines hospice residences as establishments operated by a licensed hospice program that have been in business for at least two years. The facility must provide 24-hour care and serve at least two patients. Also, the majority of patients must be cared for in their homes.

Butrico said she hopes by late 1997 to find a site and open a hospice home for Community Hospice to serve between six and eight patients. Presently, Community Hospice Services contracts with nursing homes and area hospitals to provide hospice services.

"We've put together a task force to help with a feasibility study and secure support. Do we want to build new or buy an existing home? There are a lot of question to deal with," said

Until recently, area hospic contracted with as many as 100 nursing homes at a time to care for their patients. While they continue to do so, many have built or have plans in the works to create facilities.

Angela sets trend

Opened in 1994, Angela Hospice in Livonia is a 16-bed residence capable of expanding to 40 beds. It was the first inpatient hospice facility of its kind constructed in Michigan.

"Essentially the Public Acts help not only Angela Hospics but all of the hospics in Michigan because it excludes hospices from the definition of a nursing home which is more restrictive," said David Rinols. strictive," said David R

Since 1980, Michigan hospice patients who wanted to die at home. Unlike hospitals and medical centers whose goal is to cure and preserve life, hospices strive to lessen the pain of incurable illness

"In some ways, I think Jack Kevorkian has been a stimulus to the hospice movement," said Mary Lindquist, founder and director of Arbor Hospice. "He and Geoffrey Fieger say the patients they assist can't stand the horrible pain and that's not "Truly, we can promise people that we can control their pain with the right combination of medications. Hospice is about living and taking care of your Pain."

Arbor Hospice serves all of Washtenaw County as well as portions of Livingston, Lenawee, Monroe, Wayne and Oakland counties including Plymouth, Canton, Livonia, Westland, and Farmington Hills land, and Farmington Hills.

Facilities being built

Arbor Hospice broke ground on Oct. 20 for a 30-bed residence to be built in Ann Arbor by the Plymouth-based general contractor R.A. DeMattia Company. Estimated to cost more than $7 million, it will assist patients from the elderly to children to die with dignity if they are unable to receive hospice services at home.

"The acts will help the frail elderly – many live alone – and also children," Lindquist said.

"We're taking care of more children who for a variety of reasons can't be taken care of at home. ence to be built in Ann Arbor will be hide-a-beds to pull out for families. Even their pets can come and stay."

based Hospice of Michigan noted the need for inpatient facilities after analyzing patients' needs five years ago. Some $12 million in facility building is currently under way.

Construction has begun on a Farmington Hills facility comprised of two 20-bed homes tentatively scheduled to open next spring, with the hope that another two homes will open within a couple of years, said spokeswoman Barbara Lewis. Called Hospice Home of Farm-ington Hills, it is located near the southwest corner of 11 Mile and Middlebelt.

Other plans for Hospice of Michigan include an additional 72-bed home in the Detroit Medical Center area, although no firm date has yet been set for construction there.

"We're the largest nonprofit hospice in the country caring for over 7,500 patients a year," said Carolyn Cassin, CEO of Hospice of Michigan. "Long before legislation we noticed a need for inpatient facilities for patients without a primary caregiver. Five percent needed the service then, 22 percent need it now.

"However, the legislation is a welcome opportunity to bring up the issue of hospice," she added.

Grief support for families is an important component of hos-pice care. "We maintain contact with bereaved families for at least 13 months following a patient's death, and provide patient's death, and provide intensive counseling for the who need it," Cassin said.

who need it," Cassin said.

The hespice has grief recovery programs for both children and adults, ongoing support groups and specialized seminars such as how to cope with the holidays after the loss of a loved one.

WSU physician wins grant to study blood flow during exercise

Despite its benefits, exercise is the most significant stress for which the body has to compen-

Blood is pumped up to five times faster during exercise by healthy people; in heart failure patients, cardiovascular responses are even more extreme. Blood pressure goes up and blood flow is redirected to activated muscles. Wayne State cardiovascular physiologist Donald S. O'Leary, M.D., has received approximately $1 million from the National Institutes of Health to investigate how the brain controls the cardiovascular system.

"The body undergoes incredible adjustments to compensate for increased muscle and aerobic activity," said O'Leary, an associate professor of physiology at the WSU School of Medicine, "particularly if your heart is not functioning at full capacity."

O'Leary, who is studying the reflexes which induce cardiovascular responses during physical activity, notes that the muscle metaboreflex may be the most powerful cardiovascular reflex in the body, mediating the brain's response to activity by increasing blood pressure and heart rate to drive more blood flow where it is needed.

Research has also shown that the baroreflex - or sensory - system does not shut down during strenuous activity, as originally believed, but rather resets and readjusts for a higher level of activity. Thus, blood pressure increases during exercise, despite the body's control systems which are supposed to keep it constant.

The funding, O'Leary's fourth NIH grant and third since joining WSU in 1989, has made it possible for O'Leary and coinvestigator Noreen Rossi, associate professor of internal medicine, to examine the importance, function and interaction of the metaboreflex and the barore-

This basic science research has direct clinical applications, especially for heart patients and their physicians who want to know more about appropriate and safe levels of activity.

In addition to opening the new facilities, Junior Achievement has set a new goal for the future. The organization plans to be in every school in Southeast Michigan by the year 2005, according to president Tom Dewar. More than 66,000 students from 10 counties currently participate in JA; their goal is to have 100,000 students.

Sunday Morning: Patricia Groenenboom graphically illustrates the desperation of a resident standing in front of a burned-out church, once a historic architectural treasure.

Artist confronts truth with nature

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

often Quite Patricia Groenenboom's 5-year-old daughter Sara helps collect and assemble the twigs, pebbles and shells for her epoxy resin assemblages currently on exhibit at the Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery. The intricate wall pieces use found objects to relay a serious message about life and the tendency of humans to avoid the truth. Overall, nature and confronting the truth dominate the 39-year-old Center for Creative Studies instructor's themes, even in her painted art furniture.

"Tve noticed in the last couple of years that nature is present in my work. Even in the drawings of Detroit's old buildings, nature takes over," said Groenenboom who grew up in Washington and Alberta, Canada.

"I love nature because it's so beautiful. There's so many answers in it that will make you go out and admire the world in different ways." To create her assemblages dealing with the four seasons, Groenenboom used five layers of epoxy resin over Styrofoam to construct a topographical relief before embedding it with twigs, parts of old clocks, and dozens of other objects. The completed works tell a story about a fictitious character named Helen. Groenenboom conveys the woman's maturing process by mirroring nature's seasons.

"I've collected endless shoe boxes full of found objects from Rhode Island to the West Coast. The mixed media is meant to hang in people's houses to look at over time," said Groenenboom, who earned a master of fine arts degree from Mt. Royal School of Art at the Maryland Institute in Baltimore and a bachelor degree from Dordt College in Sioux Center, Iowa.

A part-time teaching position at Center for Creative Studies brought Groenenboom and her husband David, who teaches in Birmingham Public Schools to Michigan in 1987. On Sunday mornings while living in Detroit Groenenboom would visit deteriorated areas to photograph burned-out churches and abandoned businesses. Her series of graphite pencil drawings with their emotionally wrenching scenes, capture the realism of living in the inner city.

In "Detroit II: Sky over Delray" she accurately depicts the historic architecture of Jefferson Avenue, which once dignified, is now dilapidated and decayed.

"It was the Detroit series that led me to book Patricia into the library gallery," said Livonia arts commissioner Bob Sheridan who had previously exhibited Groenenboom's work in The Art Gallery he owns in Garden City.

"The quality of the graphite pencil is just outstanding. It's definitely realism and in the Sky Over Delray she places the eye of the lord and angels in the clouds above the deteriorating under the baton of Bob Ballard and a large (35) a talented cast, directed by Lisa Andres, combine for a splendid production of "The Sound of Music" by the Players Guild of Dearborn.

Randy Polega's lovely scenery, Diana Reunold's elegant costumes, accomplished musicians

This Rogers and Hammerstein musical features seven precocious pranksters (the von Trapp kids), a dictatorial Austrian father who has made them into little marching machines (the

Trapp, who allows no singing in his home) and a governess to show him the error of his ways (the lively young, Maria, for whom singing is next to godli-

At the heart of "The Sound of Music," however, is the relationdren. They interact with spontaneous effervescence, which is not easy to stage. But it seems to come naturally for them, espe-cially in the mirthful "Do-Re-Mi" number. Janet Patten, Stephen Roth, Brooke Andres, Matthew Miga, Emily Tar, Caitlin Donovan and Lauracindy Plague are delightful as the seven von Trapp children.

Dave Hoey, as Rolf Gruber, does a nice job as Liesi von Trapp's boyfriend and joins Janet Patten as a winsome young couple in "Sixteen Going On Seventeen.

Jennifer Clark is springtime fresh as the zesty Maria, and gives a nice interpretation of her numbers such as the title song, "The Sound of Music." Ronald Otulakowski cuts a fine figure as Captain von Trapp and he is in good voice throughout the Jeanette Sowman is luminous as the wise, Mother Abbess. Her inspiring rendition of "Climb Every Mountain" just might be the high point of the evening.

Also with good performances are Patricia Jones, Annette Missong and Lisa Salazar as sisters at the Abbey, and Bill Rumley and Robin Blesener as the butler and housekeeper.

"OK buddy boys - get ready to rumble!

The Jets and Sharks are engaged in a heart-breaking "turf war," in the new international touring production of "West Side Story," now playing at the Detroit Opera House.

This high energy presentation, directed by Alan Johnson, reproduces Jerome Robbins' original direction, and Tony-Award winning choreography, which broke new ground for musical theater in the 1950s.

"West Side Story," based on the book by Arthur Laurents, with music by Leonard Bernstein, and memorable lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, is as thrilling today, as it was when first opened at the Winter Garden Theatre in New York City on Sept. 26, 1957.

As the Jets and Sharks battle over their share of neighborhood turf; a boy and girl from the opposing sides, and of different races, meet and fall in love.

"West Side Story," is about gangs - "you hoodlums don't own the street," people from different nationalities falling in love, in this case Polish and Puerto can never be.

"West Side Story's" timeless appeal makes it a favorite with audiences all over the world, and this production does not disappoint.

The sets and costumes are creative, colorful, and enhance the production. An especially nice touch was laundry hanging from clotheslines in one neighborhood

"It's like they stepped out from the cartoon onto the ice," said Lori Anderson, a former instructor at the Birmingham Ice Arena, and member of the show chorus. "The girl who plays Pocahontas, (Joanna Ng), really looks like Pocahontas. and the guy who plays Captain John Smith, (Sergei Petrovski), looks like Captain John

Set in 1607, the production brings to life the story of Pocahontas, a brave Powhatan princess, and Captain John Smith, a gallant British soldier. Smith arrives on the Vir-

"It's a really exciting show," said Anderson, 25 who taught at the Birmingham Ice Arena from 1990 to the spring of 1992 when she joined the company of Disney's World on Ice. "You're supposed to lose your-self in this production. It's a fantasy world."

Dramatic lighting, magnificent sets, costumes, and special effects immerse the audience in another place and time. Anderson said friends won't recognize her on the ice.

When you have full makeup on you look very different," she said. Throughout the production, Anderson appears in a variety of costumes - Native American, Colonist, and "Colors of the Wind."

"In two of the numbers I skate in I have props in my cast does both pair and singles skating. It's hard to find people who have the ability to be so versatile," said Anderson, who earned a gold medal in freestyle and a silver medal in dance from the United States Figure Skating Association.

"A show like "The Spirit of Pocahontas' is fun. . . a great opportunity for those skaters who really enjoy skating to use their talents to entertain audiences and excel as performers," said choreographer Sarah Kawahara who uses movements that are poetic and spiritual, but at the same time require athleticism and technical skill from the cast of more than 40.

lovers. The kids, for the most part, were exhilarated by this modern mix of iambic pentameter and in-your-face filmmaking. The adult chaperones walked out exhausted. As one aptly put it, "it reduces the beauty of Shakespeare to the level of Quentin Tarantino."

My own feelings fall somewhere in between. The movie is visual fast food: crass, noisy, junky, with a shelf life due to expire by Christmas. But for now, as an accessible approach to the Bard for its teenage target audience, it works like crazy. Immune from critical slings and arrows, it spent its opening weekend at number one.

Leonardo DiCaprio, who is making a career out of troubled youths, was a good choice for this pistol-packing Romeo. Smooth in his Hawaiian shirt, wisps of blonde hair falling across his face, he and his Montague Boys are a sharp contrast to the swarthy, darker-skinned Capulets, who mix it up on the beaches and boulevards of Verona Beach, Florida.

The opening is a dizzying (often headache-provoking) display of shaky camera and lightning-fast editing. The story is now framed by a newspaper report as we see the stately families of Montague and Capulet as Mafioso lording over a violent urban landscape Romeo and Juliet first make eye contact at a garish costume party thrown by the Capulets. He has crashed the party with the help of best friend Mercutio, a Dennis Rodman-style party boy with connections almost as extensive as his wardrobe, aware but unfazed by the disaster that could come from diddling with his enemy's daughter (Claire Danes, from "My So-Called

The balcony scene now takes place around and inside the Capulet's swimming pool. Paris, who Juliet's parents want her to marry, is a bachelor-of-the-year patterned after JFK, Jr. and a horrible dancer. The mixed up letter that further seals the lovers' doom is a Federal Express screw-up. If you didn't recognize the Friar as a holy man, just look at the full-size cross tattooed on Pete Postlethwaite's back.

Religious imagery dominates the film, not used as a coherent symbol as much as a broadly painted backdrop. The church may stand between the Capulet and Montague high rises, but it's also on the handles of the gangs guns, which are branded Longswords and Daggers to make 17th-century lines like "hand me my long sword" and "O happy dagger" fit with the '90s visuals. About half of Shakespeare's original words are used in the film. The director, Baz Luhrman, who made the equally dizzying (if overrated) musical "Strictly Ballroom," prefers to tell the story with the camera and, for the most part, conveys it well. He even improves on it a bit, heightening the drama of the final scenes, leaving the audience literally mouthing warnings to the characters on screen.

A week later I spent an evening with another Shakespeare adaptation in virtual silence - a bad sign for a comedy. "Twelfth Night," at the Birmingham and Maple Theatres, is far more tasteful, better cast, truer to the original text, and, for the most part, a great bore.

It opens with a storm where Viola (Imogen Stubbs) and her brother are cast to the sea. Thinking each other dead, they make their way through a potentially hostile foreign country. Viola thinks she'll have a better chance for survival as a man, so she lops off her hair and pledges service to Count Orsino, who she has a crush on. He sends his new "boy" to deliver messages of love to Olivia, (Helena Bonham Carter) but she falls for Viola instead. The romantic complication is one of the funniest and most bizarre in all of Shakespeare, working to Danes as Juliet in "William Shakespeare's Romeo & a satisfying conclusion and by far the best part of the film.

A great deal of screen time is spent with Sir Toby Belch (Mel Smith) and friends, who drink, exchange witticisms, and play vicious tricks on stuffy houseman Malvolio. He's played by Nigel Hawthorne, the respected Shakespearean actor and Oscar nominee ("The Madness of King George") and to me too old for the part.

The broad comedy doesn't inspire the desired laughs, despite the best efforts of Ben Kingsley's wise fool, who has a definite poignancy beneath his typically intense brow. Trevor Nunn, who has spent at least 130 years directing Shakespeare, probably thinks he's radical by staging the 15thcentury play in the Victorian era, but only academics will appreciate the difference. A general audience will still see it as stuffy classical actors in old clothes spouting dialogue only half understandable.

Shakespeare is vying with Michael Crichton and Jane Austen as the screen's most popular sources of material. Al Pacino's free-wheeling "Looking for Richard" remains at the Main while Kenneth Branagh's new 'Hamlet" opens around Christmastime, just a few years after Mel Gibson made it with Franco Zefferelli.

What the Bard would think of the Rap and rolling "Romeo and Juliet" is anyone's guess. Before anyone labeled him as England's greatest poet and playwright, Shakespeare was an entertainer, trying to capture the attention of rowdy Elizabethans at performances that often turned into free-for-alls. Would Shakespeare turn around in the theater and tell the movie's young audience to settle down and be quiet? He'd have to be at least partially pleased at how well his words, even backed by explosions and gunplay, still have the power to

Thornetta Davis releases solo album

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

Multiple award-winning singer Thornetta Davis was a little hesitant when she was approached by Seattle's Sub Pop Records to

This year marks the seventh year she has fronted the Detroit blues band The Chisel Bros., and had worked as a back-up singer for Big Chief. But working on a solo record called for the talented, well-known local singer to do something that she had never done before.

"I had started writing songs," said Davis during a recent interview from her east-side Detroit home. "When I signed to the label I told them I couldn't write. They were going to hire writers and musicians and all of that. It went on for a year and a half after I signed the contract."

Instead she went with a hometown approach. Turning the tables on her experience with Big Chief, she decided to work with former members drummer Mike Danner, bassist Matt O'Brien and guitarist Phil Durr. To help her write songs for "Sunday Morning Music," she recruited the White Room Studios' Al Sutton, her boyfriend Jeremy Williams and Rootbox's M.E. Jonson.

"The album is about relationships. With 'Cry' you feel help-less. Sunset comes when you're always happiest. You want that person to be the only one," she said.

"Sunday Morning Music" also includes a cover of Stevie Wonder's "You Haven't Done Nothing'," the funky song "Helpless," the acoustic blues and organ-driven title track "Box of Memories," and the Motown-like "Come Go With Me."

Davis, who has been consistently voted as the Outstanding Blues Artist in the Motor City Music Awards, and the Metro Times' Best Blues Vocalist, began her singing career with the all-female Chanteuse, performing top 40 R&B hits by groups like the Pointer Sisters and The Emotions.

"I started out really slow singing with some girlfriends in a group called Chanteuse. As a matter of fact, they sang background on the album. We were doing cabarets and some background work around the city and not really getting paid. We were doing it for the experience. We'd do a whole show and get $10. That's it. Then I joined the Chisel Bros.'

In 1991, the Detroit-based funk rockers Big Chief recruited Davis to add vocals to "Fresh Vines" and "Reduced to Tears" for their Sub Pop debut "Face." A year later she returned to the studio with Big Chief in 1992 to record "Mack Avenue Skull Game.

Releasing her own album is 'very exciting," Davis said. She's already nervous about her two local shows - Saturday, Nov. 23, at the Blind Pig in Ann Arbor, and Wednesday, Nov. 27, opening for the Howling Diablos at St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit.

"People expect different from me," Davis said. "People think I'm going to sing the blues." Both of the singing styles, she

emotions come out with whatever I sing. If not, I couldn't have recorded this album."

Thornetta Davis headlines a show at 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 23, at the Blind Pig, 206-208 S. First St., Ann Arbor. Tickets are $6 in advance for the 19 and older show. For more information, call (313) 996-8555. She will open up for the Howling Diablos at 10 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 27, at St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit. Tickets are $8 in advance for the 18 and older show. For more information, call (313) 961-MELT.

Pacific Grill specializes in Pacific Rim

Opening without fanfare in ate August, Pacific Grill is the inspiration of Ray Wong, well-known for Wong's Eatery in Windsor, Ontario, which he owned and operated from 1975 to 1992. Wong's longtime patrons, who expected him to open an exclusively Chinese restaurant, now find that he has gone way beyond, creating Thai, Malaysian, Filipino, Indonesian and Vietnamese dishes along

All this food creativity is centered in an atmosphere resembling a neighborhood bar, with soft beige walls, forest green accents, dark wooden pillars and hardwood floor. A 20-seat bar has a TV, but it's not blasting a sporting event. The mellow mood set by the overall atmosphere is rendered casual by butcherblock table covering and bamboo chairs with soft cushions at table seatings for 60 people.

"Food concepts are more inter-national now," Wong said. "I did the Chinese thing, but I needed to expand my horizons." He did this by selling his Canadian restaurant and going to Pacific um countries including Hong Kong as a consultant for American companies wishing to establish business connections there. Wong, a Southfield resident married to a U.S. citizen, wanted to leave Hong Kong before its return to Chinese rule in July 1997 and establish himself in a U.S. business.

"During the four years I was in the Far East, I tasted fabulous foods and wanted to bring these to America," he noted. "Basically I went back to the restaurant business for three reasons. I get to eat the food I like. I get someone else to cook it the way I like it. And I can see all my friends who frequented Wong's in Windsor because they are finding me here."

"Here" is the lower level of Tom's Oyster Bar in Southfield. Tom Brandel, owner of this

Tom's location and others in the greater Detroit Metro area, is a partner with Wong in the Pacific Grill venture. And it is both venture and adventure as Wong's ideas evolve. As he's training kitchen and waitstaff to a new cultural experience in food, he's moving off his first menu to a new, more ambitious presentation including Chinese and Thai spring rolls, Malaysian Satays, Chinese pot stickers, crispy shrimp, fish and pork balls from the Philippines, Vietnamese beef rolls, Indonesian crispy shrimp fugor, spicy beef puffs and inside out drumsticks.

Although not on the menu, Wong will provide such Chinese culinary favorites as his famous Peking Duck with a 24-hour notice. Actually, diners should always ask for a Pacific Rim favorite that's not on the menu. As an example, you might want a combination plate of spicy soft shell crabs and spicy frog legs. These are separate items, but a simple request gets you the combination on a bed of rice, noodles and vegetables.

Diners unfamiliar with Pacific Rim cuisine should inquire about spicing when ordering a dish. Most items are bland when ordered mild. Ask about the best use of dipping sauces if you're not experienced with Wong's house-made hot mustard, garlicchili or tropical fruit sauce (better than jarred plum sauce).

On one evening recently, we noticed that patrons inexperienced with foods of the Pacific Rim made some poor choices on their own and were not pleased. Those more experienced, such as Letty Lardizabal of West Bloomfield eating with an out-oftown companion liked the small

East and understands these foods and how they differ from authentic Chinese. "The Atlantic Salmon is especially good tonight," she said. "I like the intimate, cozy, quiet atmosphere. I will recommend Pacific Grill to others."

Such praises are due in great measure to native-Detroiter Lester Barnett. After graduating from the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, New York in 1990, he worked at Birmingham's Townsend Hotel, Club Med in Bermuda and Vista International Hotel in New York

"I'm from Michigan and I wanted to come back home," Barnett admitted. "When I was at the CIA, I worked on campus in the oriental kitchen, specializing in Chinese and Thai foods. I'm inspired by the different spices and unusual third world ingredients we use at Pacific

At age 27, Barnett who calls Wong "boss," says that Wong has a wealth of information he wants to share. "Boss makes me energetic and I look forward to coming to work every day. He's given me freedom to create some dishes such as Fried, Fruited Won Ton with chocolate, a specialty dessert selection."

Barnett's personal goals go well beyond the kitchen at Pacific Grill. He plans to take the master chef exam in 1998, hoping to become the first African-American master chef in the world.

As menu items evolve at Pacific Grill, plans are in the works for a Sushi Bar. Don't expect it to be traditional. Ray Wong has his own ideas.

Fabulous foods: Ray Wong presents Pacific Rim inspired fish and poultry dishes at Pacific Grill in Southfield.

JAC officials are proud that they chose to retain the topography of the site during its development.

When we looked at the land, it had been approved for 69 lots," Linkner said. "We have a lot of nice hills. It's rolling. We would have had to flatten the property to get 69 lots.

"From an aesthetic standpoint, we didn't want to rape and pillage the land so much," he said.

We try to clear the minimal amount of trees as possible," Eizen said. "We clear each lot as it comes up for sale."

"More house, bigger lot, less money is the catch phrase we use," Rosenzweig said. Five floor plans are available.

Prices range from $191,900 for a colonial of 2,000 square feet with three bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $223,900 for a colonial of 2,840 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths with base elevations.

Fancier exteriors, premium lots and finished walkouts will cost more

Standard amenities in all plans include three-car sideentry garage, fireplace, first-floor laundry, basement, dishwasher, carpeting and a $1,000 light fixture allowance.

One model has been completed; two others are under construction.

The Ashton, already finished, is a story-and-a-half of 2,850 square feet that places the master suite on the first floor. The

The Ashton also features a formal dining room, that could be converted into a den, an open great room with a 16-foot-high ceiling and kitchen/nook on the main floor.

Three bedrooms, two with walk-in closets, the other with a 14-foot wall closet and a full bath, are upstairs.

Four bedrooms are upstairs. The master with cathedral ceiling has a separate tub and shower, walk-in closet and dual sink vanity. A second full bath serves the other bedrooms.

Base price of the model currently is $219,900.

The Monterey, 2,660 square feet, will feature a study, living room, dining room, family room with sloped ceiling and kitchen/nook on the main floor, four bedrooms and two baths upstairs.

The Monterey master contains all of the elements of the master

Here's what an architect gets paid for

What should a homeowner expect to pay for architectural services? The answer is based upon the degree of service that is provided.

Architects are licensed by the in the same way that doctors and attorneys are.

Traditionally, architects provided full services, which I consider "cradle to grave" involvement. These services are divided into five phases: schematic design, design development, construction documents, bidding and negotiation, and construction administration.

· Schematic design focuses on determining what will be built, budgets and preliminary sketches, which establish room relationships and three-dimensional continued refinement of the first phase with initial material selections and more refined sizing of the design elements.

· Construction documents are the blueprints and specifications for the project - which includes the lighting fixtures, finish plumbing fixtures and window

· Bidding and negotiation actually begins during the design development phase when the work of two or three builders is reviewed. The architect will talk with past clients to determine whether the builder can provide the right kind of product at the right price. The architect also helps in the contract negotiations between owner and general contractor by making substitutions that allow the contract price to more closely match the client's intended budget.

· Administration (not supervision) of the construction contract makes the project run smoothly.

• Design development is the There are literally thousands of fee is based upon two factors: issues that wind up getting resolved during construction. In addition, liability issues may necessitate the architect's involvement during construction.

> Clients frequently believe they can do this work themselves. If a client has an extensive background in residential construction, the ability to negotiate without threatening non-payment, the freedom to visit the job site during the hours of construction twice or more per week and take an unlimited number of phone calls, I might agree: Something will get built ... sometime.

But, when it comes to quality, architects can help decide what is acceptable. They also have the ability to move the construction process along and protect the homeowner from undue discomfort from the construction pro-overhead and degree of competency - some offices are more expensive to run than others, and Michael Jordan gets paid more than most other basketball players for a good reason.

Not all architects sell full services. Such firms will have lower fees than the full-service firms, but they are aware the service being provided is not complete. As a consumer, you must find out what services are included in a proposal for work before selecting an architect.

If an architect's fees are too high, you may be able to negotiate a lower fee by performing some of the work yourself. Examples are the bidding and negotiation phase and perhaps construction supervision after all the structural work has been completed. Do not hold your breath on this one, though. If this does not work, try barter - it has been known to work!

The fee should not decide which architect you select. Although fees vary by as much as 8 percent, most of the architects who provide similar services will have similar fees. For example, the high-end boutique firms who are concerned with every detail will be more expensive and should not be compared to those whose details are not as intricate or the firms that do not provide details.

Those who shop at Neiman Marcus do not shop at The Gap for the same clothes, and it would be unfair to make price comparisons between the two retailers. Fee shopping for an architect is as dangerous as fee shopping for a doctor, and the few percentage-point difference between the right and the wrong architect will be a mistake that you will never forgive yourself for. If the fee difference is a deal maker or breaker, you are playing with fire in undertaking the project in the first place.

The right carpet can enhance ly maintenance, spill control, emergency spill removal and deep cleaning.

Most carpet available today Carpet care consists of four has been treated for stain resiskinds of cleaning: daily to week- tance and soil retardance, but

"stain resistant" does not necessarily mean "stain proof." The longer a spot is allowed to remain on any carpet, the more difficult it will be to remove. Take preventative measures to keep your carpet from coming in contact with makeup, pesticides, disinfectants, iodine, mustard, oven cleaner and plant food products because these stains generally cannot be removed.

New registry allows wedding gifts to go for purchase of homes

(AP) - A new house may seem like a little much to put on a bridal registry. But a new account allows couples to register to have money deposited by family and friends into such a specialized account.

With the lending institution account, a Bridal Registry Account similar to a department store merchandise registry, couples can use the money for a down payment toward a home.

"A lot of people in their 20s and 30s don't have large savings accounts," said Aylin Gonen, a spokeswoman for U.S. Housing and Urban Development, which is promoting the program. "This is just another way to help out a young couple."

Burning Wood and Coal includes advice for both the veteran with solid fuels and the complete novice.

This comprehensive manual provides detailed sections on evaluating solid fuel options, fireplaces, stoves, furnaces and boilers, installation, chimneys, wood and coal as fuels, and an appendix on safely cutting firewood with a chain saw. Many comparative tables and informative diagrams are incorporated. Burning Wood and Coal was written by Susan MacKay, Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service; L. Dale Baker, International Harvester; John W. Bartok, Jr., University of Connecticut; and J. P. Lassoie, Cornell University. Although the comfort of radiant heat is undeniable, any solid-fuel system is costly and requires a change in life style. It is important to analyze home-heating needs and be aware of both immediate and long-term costs. Wood and coal are less expensive than natural gas, oil, or electricity because the heat provided by solid fuels is not as even or as controllable as the heat from these more expensive options.

Many economic comparisons consider only relative fuel costs and neglect the expenses of purchasing, installing, and maintaining an additional heating unit. It pays to be wellinformed before shopping for that new stove.

In addition to the many personal factors to consider-economics, convenience, comfort, and labor intensity-many types and sizes of stoves and heating units are available from which to choose.

Since the strong revival of burning wood for home heating in the 1970s, major advances in stove design have caught up with present-day demands for convenience. These newly developed stoves, of which the most significant is the catalytic wood stove, reduce creosote and emission problems and bum solid fuels more efficiently.

Burning Wood and Coal stresses safety when installing wood and coal stoves and shows both present and future stove owners how to protect walls and floors near the stove. Many house fires occur because stoves are improperly installed or incorrectly connected to the chimney. Check with a local building official to make sure a stove has been tested for quality standards. The book contains a helpful 23-question stove installation checklist.

Property tax pinch? Try this tax cut kit

By MICHAEL HILL ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - Think your property taxes are too high? Join the club.

Complaints about property tax payments are as inevitable as death and — well, you know. Richard Singerle has a kit for homeowners who want to do more than complain.

His how-to guide, "Everything You Always Wanted To Know About Reducing Your Property Tax, But Were Afraid To Ask," offers tips and instructions for homeowners wanting to fight City Hall. Singerle claims assessors are often nice people – really – and they're willing to listen.

"Everyone thinks with assessors, you know, this classic image of the mustache wax and the big hat, and I say 'C'mon he's no different than the rest of us."

Maybe no different, but more feared. Assessors wield power where it counts: the information they keep on your home and its condition can literally mean hundreds of dollars a year in taxes.

That's where Singerle's kit comes in.

For decades, Singerle has helped mostly commercial clients who feel their property is overassessed. His kit is a distillation of what Singerle does professionally. A brief book explaining the property tax system, worksheets and reference materials are included, along with optional-use computer diskettes.

Singerle says a surprising number of homes are overassessed, often because assessments have failed to drop along with sale values, which peaked in the 1980s. Also, many town assessors have a minimum of training and thousands of parcels to classify.

"You'd be amazed over how many people don't know how much they're paying in property taxes," he said.

A rough rule of thumb is that a third of all homes are assessed at a reasonable price, while another third are valued too high and a final third too low, Singerle said. If you're underassessed, you might want to keep quiet.

If you're overassessed, Singerlevithinks he might be able to help you: he breaks down into simple steps the seemingly mind-bending task of challenging your assessment.

Key to all of this is having facts in hand. Maybe the assessor added a couple of feet to the dimensions of your house by accident, or incorrectly marked you down as having a fully-finished basement. That can mean tax money out of your pocket. All that information should be on file at municipal offices on a file card.

Also, you're assessment might look fine, until you compare it to what similar homes in the neighborhood have sold for recently.

The tax cut kit details how to find this information, and how to go about asking for a change.

You can save yourself a professional's fee, although some professionals threw a caution flag.

Richard Southern, president of the American Society of Appraisers, said it can be beneficial for a homeowner to check property cards for mistakes, but an experienced professional could prove be invaluable for more complex formal complaints. Fees are usually $250 to $450, he said.

Marc Kaplan, of the accounting firm Horwath David Berdon warned that would-be tax rebels risk putting their foot in their mouth

"If you go into this thing blind, you're liable not to make your own best argument," he said.

Singerle doesn't rule out seeking professional help, but stresses that homeowners armed with facts can maybe save themselves some money.

"The difference is having information," Singerle said. "If you enter the assessor's office and say "I want to pay less taxes,' he'll say "Tell me something I don't know."

Humidifier won't cool basement

BY POPULAR MECHANICS FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Q: I have a TV room in my basement. The room is hot during the summer months. We have a dehumidifier in the room, so we thought the room should be cool. Could you please tell me why it's hot down there?

A: The room is hot in the summer because of the dehumidifier. A dehumidifier is basically a small self-contained air conditioner. An air conditioner discharges the heat removed from the circulating air and from the compressor to the outside, but a dehumidifier dumps that heat into the room.

If the TV room is small and the dehumidifier runs continuously, it discharges enough warm air to heat the room. It makes a room more comfortable by lowering the relative humidify.

You would be better off with a small wall-mounted air conditioner. This unit also removes excess humidity and cools the room. Even though the TV room is in the basement, a section of the foundation wall is generally above grade. If it is a concrete block wall, an opening can be cut in the foundation for an air conditioning sleeve, or an air conditioner can be installed in a basement window.

Q: I recently replaced the old galvanized storage tank from my well pumping sys-tem with one that has an air bag to separate the water from the air. Since then, whenever I turn on the water faucet, air spurts out of the spout along with the water. Do you know what's wrong?

A: In all probability, you did not remove the snifter and the drain and Y-fitting from your well system when you switched to the new tank. These valves were installed on well systems that used submersible pumps and a water storage tank with no membrane separating the water and air in the tank. These valves introduce air into the tank to replenish the air lost through turbulence and absorption.

An air cushion at the top of the tank acts like a spring, and as water is pumped into the tank, the air is compressed. The compressed air forces the water from the tank to the spout. Without the air cushion, the tank is waterlogged and the pump per-forms as if no tank were used, wearing it out prematurely.

In a properly operating system, the pump is stopped by a pressure switch, and the snifter on the check valve opens, allowing air into the pipe. The water slug between the check valve and the drain and Y-valve drains into the well. When the pump is activated, the air slug is forced into the tank.

air bag or diaphragm is used, the water and air are permanently separated, so it's not necessary to introduce air into the tank. Since you did not remove the snifter, every time the pump is activated a slug of air is sent into the tank. The excess air escapes every time water is drawn.

Remove the snifter and see if that solves the problem. Back out the snifter with a wrench and replace it with a pipe plug. If this doesn't work, remove the drain and Y-fitting. However, because the drain and Y-fitting are 7 to 20 feet below the well's top, you may need to hire a pro-fessional well installer to remove the fitting.

Consumers demand cordless power tools

Cordless power tools, more than ever before, are in demand by do-it-yourselfers. Nothing is more frustrating than having an electrical cord too short to reach a project. And clumsy extension cords add problems of their own.

Consumers prefer cordless tools because they are convenient and easy-to-use. Battery technology has come a long way in recent years, allowing batteries to charge faster, run more powerfully and hold their power longer. But usually different batteries are required for different tools, and that can be a hassle.

with a solution for do-it-yourselfers by creating a family of cordless power tools that have one thing in common - batteries. The VersaPak Interchangeable Battery System is a new line of power tools and outdoor products that run off the VersaPak battery.

"We developed the VersaPak System based on consumer research," says John Constantine, director of product development. "Consumers told us that, although they wanted the benefits of a battery system, they wanted each product to stand alone.'

Designed and engineered to be durable, the VersaPak battery can be recharged more than 300 times. In addition, the battery has no memory cells and can be fully recharged before the charge has completely run out.

The VersaPak charger and bat-teries are sold separately. "This allows the customer to have more freedom to purchase the tools he desires because he will already own the power supply that drives the entire system," says Constantine. "Because the consumer pays for the power supply only once, additional savings are passed on with each purchase of a VersaPak

PermaFlow can end backed-up gutters to fix basement flood

Most basement water problems can be traced to the condition of the rain gutters and grading around the house. Debris can block water reaching the downspouts, causing it to spill over the gutter edge during rain. This water then saturates the back-fill zone running along the foundation, and ends up creating a small river in the basement after every heavy rainfall, according to Tom Kraeutler, a professional home inspector, home care columnist and President of HomeChek.

Gutter runoff can also increase hydrostatic pressure (the weight of the wet soil) on the foundation walls and can even wash out footings which support the building. Water imported from the roof can cause severe basement wall cracking, called "frostheave," as well as spalling damage to the foundation.

Walk around your house.

Troughs of eroded soil under the gutters tell you that rain water has been collecting in puddles next to the foundation.

the job with a hose.

Restore the eroded soil at the foundation perimeter. Order a truckload of clean fill dirt and spread it so that the slope of soil beneath the eaves pitches downward six inches, over a horizontal distance of three to four feet away from the house. This will allow water to drain away along its natural course into the lawn. Tamp it in place and then cover with just enough top soil, stone, mulch or other ground cover to prevent erosion.

■ Install a total gutter guard system to end the problem. One solution is a new plastic device called "The PermaFlow Gutter Guard System," by Crane Plastics, one of the country's oldest producers of vinyl siding.

The system consists of a louvered plastic guard installed across the top of the gutter and under the edge of the roof system. The system is inexpensive and attractive, and installation is very simple, with only a few hand tools. PermaFlow comes in three foot lengths for easy handling by do-it-yourselfers.

For more information, contact Crane Plastics, P.O. Box 1047, Columbus, OH 43216, telephone 800 420 7246.

eral months I have

I tried to talk myself out of it, and yet the urge to do it became stronger than life itself. I'm doing it no matter what, so here it goes. It's a script about a guy who does a radio show on appliances and writes a column about everything in the world of consumerism. He's become syndicated across the country and is now big time commanding some pretty big bucks for his lectures across the wants to meet secretly to discuss some very bad things that are happening at corporate headquarters. I meet him in an empty railroad boxcar which is attached to a moving train, probably to drown out voices in case of a tape recorder, or to dump my body over the proper river. With a diaper firmly attached to my oversize pants I sit across from Mr. Doe and ask firmly but politely what I can do for him. He stands up and points his finger as me and says, "I will give you information that will make you bigger than Ralph Nader, allow you to sue a manufacturer for over $500 billion and let me die with piece of mind. You see, I have six months to live so I have to do some fast talking." End of first act.

Act 2 - In a large conference room with only the two of us in attendance, the camera is rolling as Mr. Doe describes the decisions made some 10 years ago by himself and other corpobecause of the few manufacturers left in the appliance industry his company would try to force out the remaining few with some pretty dirty tricks. the board of directors knows nothing about what is happening and neither does the Federal Trade Commission. He hands me copies of interoffice memos and letters explaining in detail, with signatures, how all this would happen from

Act 3 - In the comfort and safety of my home town I play back the hours of tape I've collected from our conversation. I've had Mr. Doe checked out even to the size of his shoes, and yes he is dying. All the information he's given me leads to one unbelievable conclusion. His firm is intentionally building into an appliance a COMPONENT FAILURE which will require service in the first few years of operation. Already proven 10 years ago when his firm repaired some 2 million defective door handles at rate officers. It was jointly agreed that a reduced price, consumers were quick to think that his firm was the best there is. Already done again in the last few years on four different component failures, consumers by the millions were buying service contracts from his firm like they were ice cream. I called a few dealer friends who said I was correct in my assumptions and their rapport with customers was going downhill, and yes they would testify in front of the Federal Trade Commission. Is it possible that in this great country of ours - this can happen? Stay in touch for Act 4 coming up in next weeks column.

> Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor," available at area bookstores.

O: I would like to know if a major remodeling project is something I can afford. How does home improvement affect me long term and what is my

A: If you, like many, had resolved to save more earnestly and to develop a money saving income tax strategy, by completing your home improvement in 1996, you can still make good on those promises. In fact, by completing your home improvement project now, you can also greatly increase the value of your single most important investment - your home and consolidate other payments to reduce your total monthly obli-

How does all of this help you to save money on your 1996 income taxes. Great question! Interest which you pay on monthly revolving credit cards is not tax deductible; nor is the interest you pay on installment loans tax deductible. But, you may be able to deduct all of the interest from a home improvement loan. So basically, you get one loan which allows you complete your remodeling project and to pay off your outstanding revolving and installment debt.

Taking this one step farther, if you have the same credit cards most people have, your interest rate is probably around 14 percent. So if the outstanding balances of all your credit equals $5,000 the annual interest which you pay is approximately $700. Mind you $700, which cannot be deducted from your income tax. Now, before you begin to feel overly confident because you have a lower paying bank card, take a look a what you are paying on your gasoline cards, department store cards and any retail cards. If you average these cards together I believe that your confidence level may diminish. To compound the situation, most credit card companies apply your payments to any outstanding fees, then toward interest and finally toward the principle. But wait, you have to add on the interest that you are paying on your car note. If consolidating the debt with your home improvement loan is looking better, well read on.

If you care disgruntled with the return you are getting on your investments, an improvement to your home will provide a solid return. Example: (Taken from Remodeling Magazine)A new family room provides an average return of 83 percent; an extra bathroom, 89 percent; and the average rate of return for a minor kitchen makeover is a whopping 98 percent. Not bad when you consider the 2 percent to 6 percent paid on most savings accounts. There is receive will do more than help to accomplish your project, reduce your total monthly obligations and increase the value of your home. It can also help you to pay off your first mortgage quicker. How? Apply your monthly savings to the principle of your first mortgage; reduce total principle, reduce the interest payment and reduce the term. Obviously the monthly savings will vary by individual, but a home improvement loan can unlock the door to your now addition and a whole lot more.

a hardware store, or better yet, a lumber yard for inspiration. Some of it can be bought "by the yard." Some of it

There are many

Beginning with doors there are a myriad of choices. For a modern look you will only want a slab, but there is still a selection. The least costly is pine, with no discernible pattern - only to be painted. Additionally slab doors can be ordered in oak, walnut or mahogany to be stained a number of gorgeous ways. The casing to use for modern should be flat, of varying widths or depths. Don't choose an "ogee" or convoluted casing.

Stock "raised" paneled doors are available in varied ways: two, three, six and eight panels. Again, they can be obtained in pine for painting, but they can also be had in knotted pine for staining. These are delightful for an American interior. Don't ignore walnut, oak and mahogany, best for varied stains; natural, light, medium or dark.

Now you are ready to "gild the lily." The casings are to be had in simple ogee curves, but you needn't stop there. I frequently add two, or even three, moldngs. Try several ways while at the lumber yard. You are now doing what you would pay an architect to do for you.

We have only enhanced the doorway. Want it more important? How about a pediment? There are choices here, too. A pointed pediment is only one way. There are "ears" that can be built up and surrounded with distinctive moldings. What a way to go! Painted pine again tops the list as the least expensive. Using a second color on the woodwork only is a charming addition to the decor. Not necessarily a contrasting color - a darker shade of the wall paint is also esthetic.

In the "by the yard" category exists "egg and dart" and/or "dentil" patterns. As the name suggests, a dentil molding has squares that resemble teeth. These vary in size, and can be added to a handsome "crown molding." Said crown can be very imposing, built up with components.

We are all accustomed to a base board, but they, too, can be important. The base board is used to conceal the errors made by incompetent carpenters. Not so if you add to the standard three-

Another great architectural detail is a chair-rail. These are standard at lumber yards, but they can be enhanced with an added board or moldings.

Nothing will resonate good taste as much as any of the aforementioned details. A simple four-walled room suddenly has character.

Way to go: Standing in the middle of the road gave Monte Nagler dramatic perspective in this shot of Utah's Highway 163 as it leads into Monument Valley.

Hit the road for exciting pictures

We've all heard the expression, "hit the road." Well, by hitting the road with your camera, you'll be able to add new and exciting pictures to your photo or an endless country road, photographing roads will open up new vistas for you. Roads have tremendous visual potential and pictures of them can capture an incredible variety of moods.

And remember, as we travel from place to place, it's almost always a road that gets us there. So why not photograph them?

Begin by studying roads in different types of light and at different times of the day. Notice how a backlit road illuminated by a rising or setting sun will glisten and shine like an unfurling rib-

After a rainfall, a wet road with puddles offers reflections of overhanging trees and clouds that will add a mood to your shots no other weather conditions

High angles and low angles will also add variety to your pictures. Climb a nearby hill so you can get a bird's-eye view of a winding road or shoot from a low angle as the road undulates up the

As in all good photography, pay attention to depth-of-field so that everything is sharp from front to back. You'll accomplish this by being sure to use a small lens opening.

I've always enjoyed photographing roads so that it appears the road is traveling into infinity. Whether the road ends in a bank of low clouds or at the top of a hill, there's an element of unknown and mystique because the viewer wonders what lays ahead.

The road intrigued me in the photograph shown here taken near Mexican Hat, Utah. I loved the way it led into the buttes and mesas of Monument Valley. When traffic cleared, I stood right in the center of the road in order to add dramatic perspective to the shot.

So the next time you feel like hitting the road, do so! Just make sure your camera is with you. Roads, quite literally, will take you and your camera to new and exciting places.

Celebrate with tree-mendous decor

BY MARY KLEMIC At Home Editor

The holiday season brings out a special urge to decorate. If you're humming "Deck the Halls," "It's Beginning to Look a Lot Like Christmas" or "We Need a Little Christmas," you could be thinking of how to dress up your home for the season as well as you are showing the yuletide spirit.

Anne Musson of Plymouth knows. Her Creative Custom Christmas husiness, which she started six years ago, offers professional interior holiday deco-

"It's become a huge business," said Musson, whose area of clients extends from Canton to Bloomfield Hills and who was recently featured on Canadian cable

Musson, who decorates homes and businesses, practices what she preaches. Visitors on "Holiday Homes and Hosts," the Plymouth Symphony League house tour Sunday, Dec. 8, will see for themselves as her exquisite home is one of those featured.

"People are putting up more than one

"A lot of them want at least one tree that is the traditional tree that the sentimental ornaments go on."

The other tree - or trees - could feature special colors or themes. A tree could be coordinated with the colors in the "(Popular) colors have more of a tendency to change (from season to season) than themes.'

Cream, gold and peach are strong these days; cream, gold and maroon never go out of style, Musson said. Blue, purple and black can be attractive on the

"Use different textures," such as silk, picks, glass and wood.

Instead of hanging glass ornaments individually, put them on in clusters of three. Weave ribbon in and out of the tree, with coordinating bows and topper. Tulle or paper twist can also be used.

Decorate the tree with the lights out. The tree should be as attractive when the lights are off as when they are on. As you decorate, check the lights from time to time to be sure you haven't disturbed any connections.

Try silk flowers, poinsettias and large bunches of dried flowers on the tree. Dead tree branches or bush limbs spray painted gold give an elegant look.

Add color with crystal ornaments so they won't get washed out. Cream and gold work well.

Elsewhere around the home ...

"One big thing that people get into is to decorate the backs of the dining room

Season's seatings: Decorating the backs of chairs is popular. Musson says.

Spray paint pineapples or other fruit gold and use them as candle holders.

Start putting up your holiday decora-tions in mid-November, Musson advises. Buy your items early; they could be gone by the first week in December.

"If you like a particular color ... buy as much as you can."

Janice Cecil is visual merchandise manager at Jacobson's, which sponsors one of the Holiday Tables at Cranbrook House in Bloomfield Hills Thursday-Sunday, Nov. 21-24. She suggested lighting candles in the home, keeping them in groups and setting them on silver trays. Fresh greens placed around the candlesticks, over wall mirrors or pictures and on the mantel soften the decor and act as a base for special small ornaments tied with ribbons, Cecil said. The greens also give the room a fresh fragrance.

"I love bright color and as I've done for Cranbrook Holiday Tables, I would bring an unexpected color to the table linens." Cecil said

For example, fuchsia instead of red, lime green with apple green, sapphire blue with silver.

"Look at your china pattern and be inspired to try some bold color."

concerned about the amount of light our plants receive outdoors, we need to keep those same requirements in mind when we grow them indoors. Perhaps many of us put a plant in a sunny room some time ago only to discover that now it isn't doing as well in that location.

The reason may be lack of light. Shrubs and trees mature faster than we think and a taller and broader outdoor plant may be robbing our room of sunlight. I believe a grow-light would look rather ridiculous in an otherwise wellfurnished room; the result would be a healthy plant but quite an evesore! Another way to solve the problem is to put the plant where a grow-light would be acceptable, and then bring the plant into the room for esthetic purposes. That really sounds like a lot of fussing to me.

Success story

With that in mind, shade tolerant house plants can be the solution. Let me share a success story with you about my common rubber tree plant that has resided in a low-light area for quite some time. As the song says, "We've got high hopes, high hopes, high apple-piein-the-sky hopes ... OOPS! there goes another rubber tree plant." This one could reach 10 feet!

I didn't know what I bought until I did some research. The Ficus elastica, a native of Northern India, was to be a gift for a friend in Chicago several years ago; a snowstorm prevented the trip and we still haven't made it. Now it has become a member of the household.

I repotted the small rubber plant in an all-purpose, well-draining potting soil in a pretty Planterra pot and set it on a table that had an eastern exposure. The curtain is always closed.

After some time I set it in a bathroom window that is covered with a miniblind. My instincts were right, as these plants generally like three to four hours of sunlight from any direction, filtered through a curtain. The bathroom location has a northern exposure. One book I consulted advises "bright indirect sunlight for best growth" and continues, tolerates low light."

Ficus elastica has now grown to a height of about 18 inches with several "trunks" - I guess I can call them that since it is considered a tree. It is watered when the soil feels dry to the touch and fertilized several times a year with a weak solution of Jobe's plant food. Any house plant fertilizer would work. It wouldn't care. My research tells me that these plants need to be fertilized every other week all year, with a heavier concentration in the summer, so I will follow that advice.

I have especially enjoyed F. elastica when new leaves emerge, first resembling a little red candle, then as they unfurl exposing the dark green shade of the full leaf. It has been a carefree plant and I expect to enjoy it for a long time.

I don't know what cultivar of F. elastica I have, as the tag didn't give that information, but there are several that you might want to check out before making a decision. My species is tolerant of cool temperatures, but newer cultivars can adapt well to warmer and different environments. They all are quite alike in appearance. Look for "Decora" with longer and wider leaves; "Honduras" with white midvein streaks in the leaf pattern; or "Rubra" with long red or pink leaves. There are several oth-

The family of Ficus (Fig) is very large, with more than 800 tropical trees, shrubs and vines, with Ficus benjamina being one of the most readily recognizable and the most popular. It is also called Weeping Fig and is from the Western Pacific area. Mistletoe fig, F. deltoidea, bears inedible fruit that turns red in bright sun; Traingleleaf fig, F. traingularis, also produces inedible figs and has leaves in that shape; F. maclellandii "Alii" has narrow, bamboo-like leaves. The list goes on and on.

If you grow a Ficus plant and wish to propagate it, stem cuttings can be taken before they have hardened or matured, or propagate by air-layering or leaf-bud cuttings. As the plant matures, it can be pruned to the form you wish and if it gets too leggy, cut the stem back to the base of the plant and it will regenerate. The lower leaves will drop occasionally, which is common in this plant. The leaves need to breathe so will need cleaning periodically, but don't use a leaf polish. A big bonus: Figs are resistant to disease and pests.

New windows help old homes

The average U.S. house is 28 years old, according to Builder magazine. And while homes of that age are developing character, problems are appearing in the existing features that need to be updated.

The wear and tear of continued living can take its toll on virtually all parts of the house - from the foundation to the roof and everything in Upgrading older homes, such as replacing inefficient windows, is easier than ever, particularly if homeowners are looking for a "do-it-yourself" pro-ject, says Bob Kerr of Pella Windows & Door Co., the Livonia representative of Pella Windows and Doors. Kerr says these older homes were often built with window products that simply don't measure up to the modern designs available today.

"A recent advancement - the wood double-hung replacement window allows homeowners to replace the sash and glass (the movable parts of the window) without having to tear out the window frame," Kerr says.

Kerr recommends that homeowners look for specific features in replacement windows. First, the window should come fully assembled to prevent installation headaches that often accompany so-called sash replacement kits. Second, the window should be made to the homsowner's precise measurements to prevent drafts and red berries native to North America and northern Europe, once called the crane berry, is considered a must for most on Thanksgiving Day menus.

Native Americans incorporated the well known and loved cranberry into their diet and into their food, specifically into pemmican. The basic pemmican recipe consisted of abrading buffalo jerky and packing it into bags made of buffalo hide. Atop the jerky, hot mar-- row fat was poured to encase each and every morsel of meat, many tribes did add cranberries, and/or nuts.

Each bag was then stitched and sealed with tallow along all seams. Prior to the hardening, the bags were compressed into flat pillow-cased packages for easy transporting. This process

Today more than one third of the $200 million plus annual cranberry harvest winds up as some form of cranberry juice. We may not be making pemmican, but we are using those wonderful tart berries for; muffins, cakes, jams, jellies souffles, pies, sauces, fruit compotes, teas, catsup (KETCHUP), and that tasty snack of plain dried cranberries paint inspections and risk assessments. An additional service, developed by the National Center for Lead-safe Housing. is called a lead survey and can be used as a preliminary screening device.

The center has worked nationally to find ways to reduce the risk of leadbased paint to families and helped the EPA set the curriculum for lead risk assessments. Following is a description of each of those options.

Lead paint inspections - A paint inspection is a surface-by-surface examination of every painted surface in the home. Generally done with a portable X-ray fluorescence machine (XRF), this test will cost from $300 to $450 for most

The XRF is an expensive, sophisticated instrument that uses a radiation source to instantly analyze paint for lead content. It should be used only by a trained, certified technician. A lead paint inspection, according to EPA protocol, doesn't tell you if the lead found during the test is a hazard, nor does it tell what required for that information

Risk assessments - Unlike a lead paint inspection, a risk assessment is designed to help assess the risks of leadbased paint and provide information on how to address existing hazards.

A risk assessment doesn't include testing of every paint surface in the house. Rather, samples of deteriorated paint, dust and soil are taken. Thus a risk assessment, as defined by the EPA, cannot document the absence of leadbased paint but, unlike a paint inspection, will determine hazardous conditions and options to correct those conditions. A risk assessment should only be performed by a trained, certified indi-

Beaded bag holds Indian history

Dear Nancy and Frank:

I bought this bag at a flea market for $5. They told me it was a flapper bag from the 1920s. It has green, blue, white, gold and mauve beads. What's your opinion?

You have an American Indian beaded

Each group or tribe of Indians had its own distinctive style of dress, whether for everyday wear, ceremonial occasions or war. Everyday clothes were basically unadorned and the rest were often painted, decorated with porcupine quills or beaded.

Here's how we believe your story unfolds

The Woodland Indians were so called because they were forest or woods dwellers, living in an area along the Atlantic coast from the upper part of North Carolina into Canada that is now Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, west across the Great Lakes region to the Mississippi River, and south to the Appalachian Mountains. Many of these Indian tribes summered on the coast of the Atlantic, enjoying a huge bounty of shellfish. When they returned to their inland villages to winter, they took shells with them to convert into utensils and tools. The variously shaped and sized shells could be worked into cups, scrapers, fishhooks, dance rattles, war clubs and so on.

Most importantly, some of the shells were cut and worked into disc-shaped beads to be sewn on clothing and accessories. Initially the bead making was very crude, but with the help of European tools, the Indians were able to raise bead polishing to such an art form that it resembled porcelain.

The Europeans, who traded with century but more frequently beginning in the 17th century, realized that the shell beads were so highly prized by the Indians that they were taking these beads from the white man in trade for furs and other commodities. The Europeans started treating the shells as money or "wampum," which comes from the word "wampumpoeag." The beads were so treasured by the Indians that some Europeans built and ran wampum factories along the coast so that there was always a ready supply of wampum to use in trade.

In the early 17th century, six white wampum beads or three purple wampum beads equaled one English penny. Just as in any economy, shortages made the values go up and overproduction made them go down. With wampum, one could pay taxes, buy real estate and even pay part of one's Harvard College tuition. Strangely, the Indians say that wampum never represented "money" to them.

Wampum sewn on clothing was the precursor of beaded decoration on Indian clothing and adornments. Porcupine quills were also used for decoration. The quills were moistened, flattened and sewn on with animal sinew.

The Europeans introduced glass beads in the 16th and 17th century so we know your purse isn't earlier than that. Beads of that era were individually blown and were therefore very large. Your beads are small so we know your bag isn't that early. When machines were introduced and bead making became industrialized in the middle to late 19th century, beads were able to be made much smaller. This helps date your bag at no earlier than mid-19th century as the beads are very small.

The Plains Indians sewed on beads with a "lazy stitch," which is a stitch with one stitch. Your beads appear to be individually sewn, so it's more likely to be a Woodland Indian piece. In summary, taking all of the above into consideration, we suspect that your piece is a late 19th/early 20th century Woodland Indian beaded bag, probably made for the tourist trade. Considering that the upper part appears to have something missing, we'd estimate the piece at $150 to $250 at auction and possibly twice that at

Mortgage options paint a good picture

BY NORMAN PRADY

It appears you can credit the mortgage industry with inventing some special lighting to counter the dimming of the American dream of home ownership.

It's a dream threatened by economic and social changes in business and family life over the past decade or two. It's a dream that easily could slip away from many of the increasing numbers of persons now unable to grasp it under old rules.

Those rules, to qualify for a home mortgage, "used to be arbitrary," said Thomas P. Cronin, vice president, MCA Financial Corp., Southfield.

But today, Cronin and other mortgage company executives will tell you, the rules are continually changing as the industry strives to keep up with the realities Americans now are forced to face at work and at home.

Cronin, the new president of Mortgage Bankers Association of Michigan, estimates that about "one-third of persons coming into the housing market' these days wouldn't qualify without fresher ways of considering their situa-

He also believes there are many present homeowners who now wouldn't qualify for the mortgages they hold.

Cronin explained that a mortgage applicant previously was approved based on three elements: collateral, which could be equity in a present home, or some form of savings; credit, which would be indicated by a good record; capacity, which would be a measure of the borrower's ongoing ability to repay the loan.

Today, Cronin said, a two-out-of-three score is acceptable.

The downsizing of America, Cronin said, with its mergers, acquisitions and reduced work forces, has placed increasing numbers of Americans outside of the traditional range of acceptability. This includes "all the people who are no longer doing what they were doing two or three years ago."

Lenders, Cronin said, are seeing "a bigger and bigger percentage of people the traditional underwriting criteria applied by Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, "the two major and government-backed purchasers of loans from banks. Investment-grade loans, Cronin said, speaking of the loans that attract Wall Street investors as the ultimate sources of the money, are rated as "A" loans. "A whole new alphabet has been longer qualify," Cronin said.

The following is an example of Rock's 2nd mortgages

"The alphabet grading equates risk to interest rates," he said, explaining that the lower a rating, the higher the interest a borrower must pay. On the other hand, "an 'E' a few years ago might not have been eligible at all." In other areas, as well, Cronin said, the industry is putting increased effort into helping more people become homeowners. Among these programs are the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) bridal registry, to which cash gifts can be made to aid in the gathering of a down payment; the government-backed Housing Opportunities for Women (HOW) program, which recognizes the increasing number of women-run households; and plans to help more renters become homeowners.

At the same time, in a seeming contradiction to the economic qualification problems, mortgages are getting bigger. This, the experts report, is a matter of the mortgage industry catching up with the increasing values in today's real estate market. "Five years ago," said Daniel Smith, Plymouth office manager for Republic Bancorp Mortgage, "we didn't see loans for $250,000 and now we see them every day." These so-called "jumbo loans" - from $207,000 to $350,000 -"are up almost 400 percent," Smith

"The mortgage market is getting much more competitive," Smith said, "and the consumer is getting a better price." But lowest rate, he said, should not be the borrower's main considera-

"More important is reputation. Who is the lender? Is he above board?" Smith said hazards for the borrower include promises not kept, loans not actually made or made at a higher rate than quoted.

The proliferation of mortgage companies and mortgage brokers is a result, Smith said, of the deregulation of savings accounts and the subsequent decline of the traditional savings-andloan home-bank institution.

So you buy PMI from a specialist company to guarantee payment of that unprotected $15,000. You pay monthly premiums. No part of that insurance payment is deductible or Private mortgage insurance pro- the home's price. The lender's problem is that Fannie Mae will reimburse just 80 percent of the home's price, or $120,000 which leaves $15,000 of the lender's money unsecured. Rock Financial of Bingham Farms believes it has a better way. Rock's program, said Lindsay Gross, executive vice president of the company, offers greater tax deductibility and faster equity buildup - at lower cost.

Instead of a loan and PMI, Rock gives a first- and a second mortgage that total the needed $135,000.

HUD loosens definition for seniors-only housing

Q. Please tell me about a recent rule published by HUD regarding senior-only complexes. I am living in a community that is primarily senior citizens, and we are wondering'whether we can comply with the new HUD rules.

A. There is new legislation that has been passed that now makes it possible for a community with at least 80 percent of the occupied units occupied by at least one person who is 55 or older to obtain an exemption from the Fair Housing Act, Family Status Provision, which precludes discrimination on the basis of familial status. The housing facility or community must publish and adhere to policies and procedures and demonstrate an attempt to provide housing to persons who are 55 or older. The amended provision also calls for HUD to promulgate rules for verifying the age of occupants by "reliable surveys and affidavits". The new HUD rules also must include examples of the types of policies and procedures that demonstrate an attempt to provide over-55 housing.

Moreover, in an attempt to protect real estate brokers, the new rule bars the imposition of monetary damages against people who relied, in good faith, on the application of the senior's housing exemption. Good-faith reliance can be shown only if the person had no knowledge that the community or facility in question did not qualify for the seniors-only exemption and the community or facility certified in writing that it did qualify for the exemption.

Q. My wife and I are the owner of a condominium unit and are elderly. The owners of the unit directly behind us are owners of a large dog that barks continually when the owners are gone. The condominium bylaws state very are gone. The condominium bylaws state very clearly that a co-owner may not maintain a dog that is an annoyance to other co-owners. Complaints to the board and the management company have not resulted in any action other than to write a letter. They suggest that I contact the police. I believe the dog owners are violating the condominium bylaws, and the board and the management company should pursue the problem. What do you think?

Most condominium bylaws give both the association and the affected co-owner a right to seek redress against those co-owners who violate the condominium restrictions, which are covenants running with the land.

The board of directors has some discretion in terms of what provisions it has a responsibility to pursue, but if those dogs are affecting more than one unit, I believe that you have a strong argument that the board of directors has the responsibility to enforce the restrictions and not to so to speak "cop out" by suggesting that you call the police.

Certainly, you have a right to go to court to seek redress under a nuisance theory as well as a violation of the condominium restrictions by the dog owner, but I would continue to pursue the board of directors, advising it that it has a fiduciary responsibility to enforce the restrictions in behalf of the members of the association, and that is its primary responsibility.

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

In this segment of my column, I look back and compare mortgage interest rates and mortgage trends over the last 25 years. Looking at the last 25 years, the rates on 30-year fixedrate mortgages have had quite a large variance. The highest was at 18.45 percent in October of 1981 and the lowest was at 6.83 percent in October 1993. The difference this can make really hits home when you loo, at a payment using those interest rates for an $80,000 mortgage. For instance, the payment would be $1,234.08 per month using 18.45 percent and just $523.14 per month using the 6.83 percent. That is a $711.94 difference in payments! This makes you realize just how fortunate we are that rates are as slow as they are because of lot of people simply could not buy homes if rates were as high as in

To qualify for an $80,000 mortgage in 1981, you would have had to make an annual income of approximately $56,000. But with today's rates around 8 percent, for the same mortgage, you would need to earn just $28,000 a year. I could go on and on about the impact interest rates have on our home ownership goals, but I think you can see how rates dictate to a large extent just how nice of a home we are able to live in. Let's rope rates stay low!

This week's Timeline question is: Looking at 15-year fixed-rate mortgages, typically how much lower are they than 30-year fixed rates? Also, since 1991, what month and year had the lowest 15-year fixed rate? (Answers appear in next week's column.)

Buying an existing home

Q. I am selling my home by myself without the help of a real estate agent. I know my home will sell fast because it is in a nice area and my I know my home will sell fast because it is in a nice area and my home is in good have heard stories of people having a pre-approval letter from a mortgage company but still not being able to get the mortgage. How can I keep this from happening to

A. Since there is a lot involved in selling a home, I hope you have a real estate attorney to help guide you. When you receive an offer to purchase, always ask for an approval letter, not a prequalification letter. Then call the person listed on the letter and verify with them that the proposed mortgage amount is going to be OK. Also ask how long it will take for them to close the loan and how long before their appraiser will be out to inspect the home. (This is a good indicator of how fast the mortgage process is happening when the appraiser contacts you quickly after you accept an offer.)

I have talked to many home owners who have sold their homes on their own and most have said the task was more they will be able to get prospective buyer and seller approved for the financing. I sometimes become emotional and not having a third party involved, such as a Realtor acting strictly from a business perspective, may be difficult.

Buying a newly built

If your home is three to six months away from being completed, consider an interest rate cap protection program. If you will not close on your final mortgage until your new come is completed, you may want to take a look at a rate cap commitment from a lender.

This is how the program generally works: You choose a rate of, say 7.25 percent with two points for a 15-year fixed rate. The lender then will guarantee that over the next four months, your rate cannot exceed 8 percent. Your cap is the 8 percent maximum. You can exercise your free lock anytime during the last 60 days of your home's being completed at whatever time and rate you pick. If he rate is lower, you will lock that rate. If the rate is higher than the 8 percent cap, involved than they had antici- you will get the 8 percent rate.

program is having a chance to rate lock during the last 60 days rather than just at five or 10 days before closing, like most other programs. Another advantage is that there is no actual fee for this program. You pay only a deposit of one-quarter point upfront but this is credited back to you a closing. This is a much lower up-front cost than other long-term lock programs and is not a separate fee like most other programs require.

Refinancing your home

I would suggest to anyone planning on refinancing in the future to consider a no-point, noclosing-cost mortgage. No matter what type of mortgage you go with, whether it be a fixed-rate or adjustable rate program, you can inquire about a no-closingcost mortgage. The rate is 1/4 to 1/2 percent higher than the rate for the program you select, but, in the long run, it can make more sense. I favor paying zero closing costs and getting the higher rate mainly because if rates drop over 1/2 percent, you will be in a better position to refinance again if desired. You will not have had to invest in act when rates drop will be much easier. You won't have to first determine if you've recouped your original investment in closing costs.

Timeline Mortgage answer from last week

In February of 1994, the oneyear adjustable rate had reached a low point of 4.20 percent. On a $150,000 mortgage, the payment would have been $731.53 per

Renew your kitchen with stock kitchen cabinets

BY READER'S DIGEST BOOKS

If your kitchen cabinets look stodgy or don't have enough room, consider installing new ready-made stock cabinets.

With careful planning, a moderate cash investment and plenty of elbow grease, the project can be a rousing success: You save money, and improving your kitchen is one of the best investments for future resale.

Stock Cabinets

Stock cabinets are mass-produced units offered in a limited number of styles and finishes, and in standard sizes. They cost half as much as custom-built cabinets, and they're readily available through home centers, kitchen design centers and lum-design of stock cabinets have improved greatly over the years. In addition to standard base and wall cabinets, better-designed corner, pantry and specialty cabinets offer capabilities of expensive custom cabinets.

Even if you can't change the size, shape or overall layout of your kitchen, you can gain extra cabinet and counter space with modern stock cabinets. And available colors, styles and accessories will suit almost anyone's

Plan for Success

Good planning is the key to a successful kitchen make-over. Remember that you won't be able to use your kitchen for preparing meals while you are installing cabinets, so do everything you can to shorten the time the project will take. Solicit professional or volunteer help as needed and allow plenty of time for deliveries so that the whole project isn't held up because of a missing unit.

Before making any design or layout decisions, spend a month or two noting all the problems you encounter while working in the kitchen as well as improvements you'd like. Keep a list, and in a few weeks you'll have a good feel for what you want and need in a kitchen.

If you plan on replacing some or all of your appliances, select new ones before ordering cabinets. Dishwasher width is usually 24 inches, but ranges, refrigerators and sinks can vary in depth and width. Check the refrigerator height to see if you can put a cabinet above it.

If at all possible, avoid changing the location of the sink, dishwasher and stove. This will avoid the hassle of moving a lot of wiring and pipes and the expense if you hire a professional to do it.

Shop Around

Order cabinets through a home center or a specialized kitchen center. Large home centers often have a staff consultant or designer whose services are free to help you with your cabinet selection and purchase. You may or may not pay a designer fee when working with a specialized kitchen center. It pays to shop around for a cabinet style, price and consultant you like.

When you shop for cabinets, bring a floor plan of your kitchen with critical information: exact dimensions of the room and exact location of windows, doors and permanent fixtures. If possible, include the location of wiring, plumbing and duct work. Also bring the dimensions of your old appliances as well as installation instructions and measurements for new appliances you may be adding.

Accurate measurements are important. Most cabinet dealers have kitchen-design software on a computer that makes the design process easier and more flexible. They just enter the numbers, and the computer lets you test a number of possibilities. But the computer can't tell how accurate the original information is, so be careful when you make your measurements.

Find out how long it will take for your cabinets to be delivered. Then work backward and plan your demolition and installation

NANCY AUSTIN

I am a Senior Citizen. My father who is 90, says he is not. He says he has entered the "Age of Wisdom". In his wisdom, he has decided to remain in his home. He cooks, cleans, gardens, drives, visits and has me for dinner once a week. He is also updating his house for when the day comes that his wise decision is to sell. I have been his gentle guide, because, not only am I his daughter, but I am a Realtor. In honor of my father's wisdom, I have decided to help Seniors by making available a Free Report which answers your questions: How to Decide When To Sell. ESTATE UPDATE by Chris Elder MORTGAGE MEDICINE you will almost certainly feel an incredibly intense attack of panic and anxiety. Did I pay too much? Is it really the of panic and anxiety. Did I pay too much? Is it really the right one? How can I ever pay the enormous mortgage payments? How can I get out of it? This response--called "Buyer's Remorse"--is completely normal!

When you feel such anxiety coming on, call your friends who have owned a home for a few years. Are they bothered by rapidly escalating prices? Not at all! That means the value of their home is going up, too. While their mortgage payments seemed high at first, they are now probably less than renting a smaller home. There is also the pride of ownership as improvements are made to the property. Did they feel anxious when they first signed the agreement? They felt just as anxious as you feel, but they are really glad that they went through with it. When you experience "buyer's Panic"--hang in there--you will be glad you did!

In addition to being a long time member of the Multi-nillion Dollar Club, I am also a licensed builder. For professional advice on all aspects of buying or selling real estate, talk to me at Century 21 Towne Pride. Please come by my office at 36450 Ford Rd., Westland, or phone me at 313-326-2600. JOHN TOYE Professional Realtor
