PLYMOUTH PIPELINE

Rotary to the rescue

The Rotary Club of Plymouth launched its Second Annual Repair Blitz at 8 a.m. Saturday, as skilled craftsmen from several trades and other volunteers came to the aid of an elderly Plymouth Township woman on a fixed income who needs home repairs.

Sixty volunteers were scheduled to be on hand, to help repair a leaky roof, paint the interior and exterior, replace broken doors and plumbing, upgrade wiring, replace carpeting and landscape the outside. Supplies and equipment were paid for through the generosity of contributors and the Plymouth Rotary Foundation.

Dog Walkathon

The Humane Society of Huron Valley presents its annual Dog Walkathon from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 3 at the society shelter on Cherry Hill Road just south of Dixboro.

Proceeds benefit the homeless shelter animals, the spay-neuter program and other programs. Walkathon prizes will also be offered, including a stay for four at Shanty Creek Lodge near Traverse City and gift certificates for two to ride the Grand Traverse Dinner Train.

Pledge forms and information are available by calling the Humane Society of Huron Valley at 662-5585, extension 103.

Artist at Gabriala's

D. Morgan will show her framed artwork from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday at Gabriala's, 322 S. Main in downtown Plymouth.

The Georgia artist's blend of sentimental verse and watercolor artistry are the hallmarks of her creations. Those showing for the event can bring one Doris Whitten Morgan print for signing. A free signed print will be presented by the artist to the first 200 customers.

Saying goodbye

Friends wish police chief well

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

You'd think that after serving 12 years as police chief, a guy would get a little respect.

But when some politicians, police staff and friends showed for a reception April 18 at Plymouth Township Hall and a party April 24 for retiring Police Chief Carl Berry, some took a good-natured parting shot or two.

Pulling a squeaking rubber rat from his blazer pocket, County Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter told Berry, "This kind of sums up what we think of you."

State Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, presented Berry with a framed proclamation signed by Gov. John Engler.

"I'd read what it says, but it was put together by your staff so it's probably not true," Law said.

It was time to thank, honor and show some affection for Berry, who most say did a fine job with the department he helped create in 1985. But while he's retiring from his post, it really wasn't time to say goodbye.

While Berry is soon to operate a Harley-Davidson motorcycle dealership on Telegraph Road in Taylor, he and wife Lucy will still live in Plymouth Township.

He's also been active in local Republican party

Bigger Kroger bothers residents

■ As word gets around that Kroger wants to build a larger store at Ann Arbor and Sheldon, residents are jumping to offer their opinions.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

The issue of a bigger Kroger at Ann Arbor and Sheldon roads wasn't scheduled to come before Plymouth Township trustees on Tuesday.

But after dozens of neighbors of the proposed expansion showed up to give township planning commissioners the thumbs-down April 16, two more showed to voice disapproval on Tuesday.

"I'm 83 years old, I've been living here 18 years. I'm quite disturbed about Kroger. They want to take some of the land and some of the apartments," said Martha Suchsnshi of Tennyson Drive.

"You shouldn't give an inch," she told the seven-member board.

"Why should we have more traffic?," she asked. "It's difficult to cross the street already. This is going to look terrible. Please reconsider your attitudes about it."

Residents of the Wedgewood Village Condominiums were among some other neighbors of the planned project against the plans for a larger Kroger and expansion of the shopping center at Ann Arbor and Sheldon roads.

The expansion would mean demolishing three buildings in the Plymouth Square Apartments complex just west of the shopping center.

Warm up for annual Magic Ridge

BY RENEE SKOGLUND

Oil those spokes, polish those walking shoes, and hope for sunshine. The eighth annual Southeast Michigan Warm-Up Magic Ride and Magic Walk will be held on Saturday, May 17 at the Canton Recreational Complex, located on Canton Center Road, south of Cherry Hill, from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Come rain or come shine, participants of all ages will hit the highways and byways of Canton and Sumpter Townships to raise funds for the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Out-Wayne County.

CapCo, which started as a task force in 1975, is composed of individuals and agencies collectively working together to prevent child abuse and neglect. They sponsor numerous child-abuse education and awareness programs in schools and communities throughout Wayne County each year.

Magic Ride is made for family fun. Every year, Silver Sounds Professional DJ adds to the festivities by playing toe-tapping tunes and giving away prizes to all who come by. This year, Marc Thomas & Max the Moose will entertain and inspire youngsters and their parents and grandparents with a free concert at 11:30 a.m.

Kids will especially love "Something to Do" by Tickle the Earth, Inc., which promises an irresistible hands-on experience with "goop, flubber and clean mud."

"We are really trying to encourage parents with young children to participate so that the children can grow with this event," said Sandra Murphy, executive director of CapCo., which is located in Inkster.

Murphy is counting on the influx of new families this past year to boost the events participation. "We are hoping to raise $10,000. In the past, it's been $8,000 to $15,000," she said.

Bike routes are 5, 15, 25, and 50 miles. If you're an average rider, plan on approximately one hour to ride 10 miles. If you're a couch potato on wheels for the first time, don't

Day of Prayer celebrated May 1

Locally organized celebrations, big and small, will be held simultaneously May 1, in observance of National Day of Prayer.

Churches, groups and individuals will pray as a unified force, symbolic of all denominations who believe there is a need for God in their lives.

The first official call for a national prayer came in 1775 by the Continental Congress, asking people to pray for God's guidance in forming a new nation.

It was President Harry S. Truman in 1952, however, who approved a joint resolution declaring a suitable day each year be set aside on which "people of the United States may turn to God in prayer and mediation."

At daybreak Thursday, May 1, more than one million Americans are expected to celebrate and worship for God to work in their nation and their community. Hundreds of cross-community events will take place throughout the area in Garden City, Livonia, Plymouth, Westland, Canton and Redford.

"It is a time of worship and guided prayer as a result of people coming together who want God to bring spirituality and health to their community," said the Rev. Eric Moore, Canton Community Church.

Denominational boundaries will be crossed as individuals form a concerted effort to bring God and spiritual renewal into their culture.

"We need to continue to be praying for the country, especially when it's proclaimed as a national day of prayer," said the Rev. Diane Goudie, co-pastor at Redford's Aldersgate United Methodist Church. "We need to unite and encourage Mary Beth Reef, 69, was enjoying the prime of her life teaching home economics at Pioneer Middle School when she began experiencing problems walking.

"I was dragging my foot. I couldn't walk across the room right," said the Plymouth Township resident, then 50.

A mother of four who'd lost her husband to a heart attack 10 years earlier, Reef then began losing her sense of smell. The physical task of writing became more difficult.

"For six months, I thought it was a brain tumor," said Reef, who'd recently lost a relative to brain cancer. "We were having so many problems at the time with year-round school that I really didn't have time to worry about it. Work was very time-consuming."

The Big Boy restaurant which faces Ann Arbor Road would remain, by the plan.

The proposal calls for building a new 58,472-square-foot store on the current site of the three apartment buildings. It would face east and the existing Kroger, at just under 30,000 square feet, would be demolished.

The plan also calls for increased landscaping and a wall between the side of a new Kroger and apartments to the south.

Planning commissioners have put the project request, from Paul Dietz, on hold. They are reviewing a legal agreement that allowed the construction of the current shopping center.

"Don't be swayed by Kroger, they're not good neighbors," Suchsnshi maintained, adding that there are no benches provided for seniors.

Her neighbor Stephanie Skolnicki told trustees the current store, "definitely is down scale. It doesn't look too good."

worry. A SAG vehicle travels along the route to take care of emergencies and breakdowns until 3 p.m.

Plan to do the event by foot? Great. Walking paths are well-suited for walkers, strollers and children on trikes.

All the bike routes are paved, country roads with low volumes of traffic in most areas. There are two rest stops with water and refreshments along the routes. The rest stops are staffed with nurses from Oakwood Healthcare Center-Canton. Also, the Oakwood health promotion van will be on-site in case of any medical needs.

Like most community events, Magic Ride/Magic Walk will have its celebrity riders. Demonstrating their pedal power at this year's event will be: Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton; Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Redford; Rep. Lynn Rivers, D-Ann Arbor; Kathleen Keen-McCarthy, Plymouth Township Supervisor.

Marie Salvato, manager of Bruegger's Bagel Bakeries in Canton, who also is planning to ride, should be considered a celebrity for the day. Salvato is donating bagel sandwiches for participants and volunteers. This is Bruegger's first year as a Magic Ride/Magic Walk sponsor.

The cost for participating in Magic Ride/Magic Ride is minimal: $10 without t-shirt and $15 with t-shirt for registration before May 9; $15 without t-shirt and $20 with t-shirt for registration after May 9; $40 family rate (4 members) for four registrations and four t-shirts before May 9; $50 for family registration after May 9.

The Canton Community Foundation is one of the event's main sponsors. "CapCo is the reason for the Canton Community Foundation's support of the event. We're helping kids. We're making a difference in children's lives," said Joan Noricks, director of the foundation.

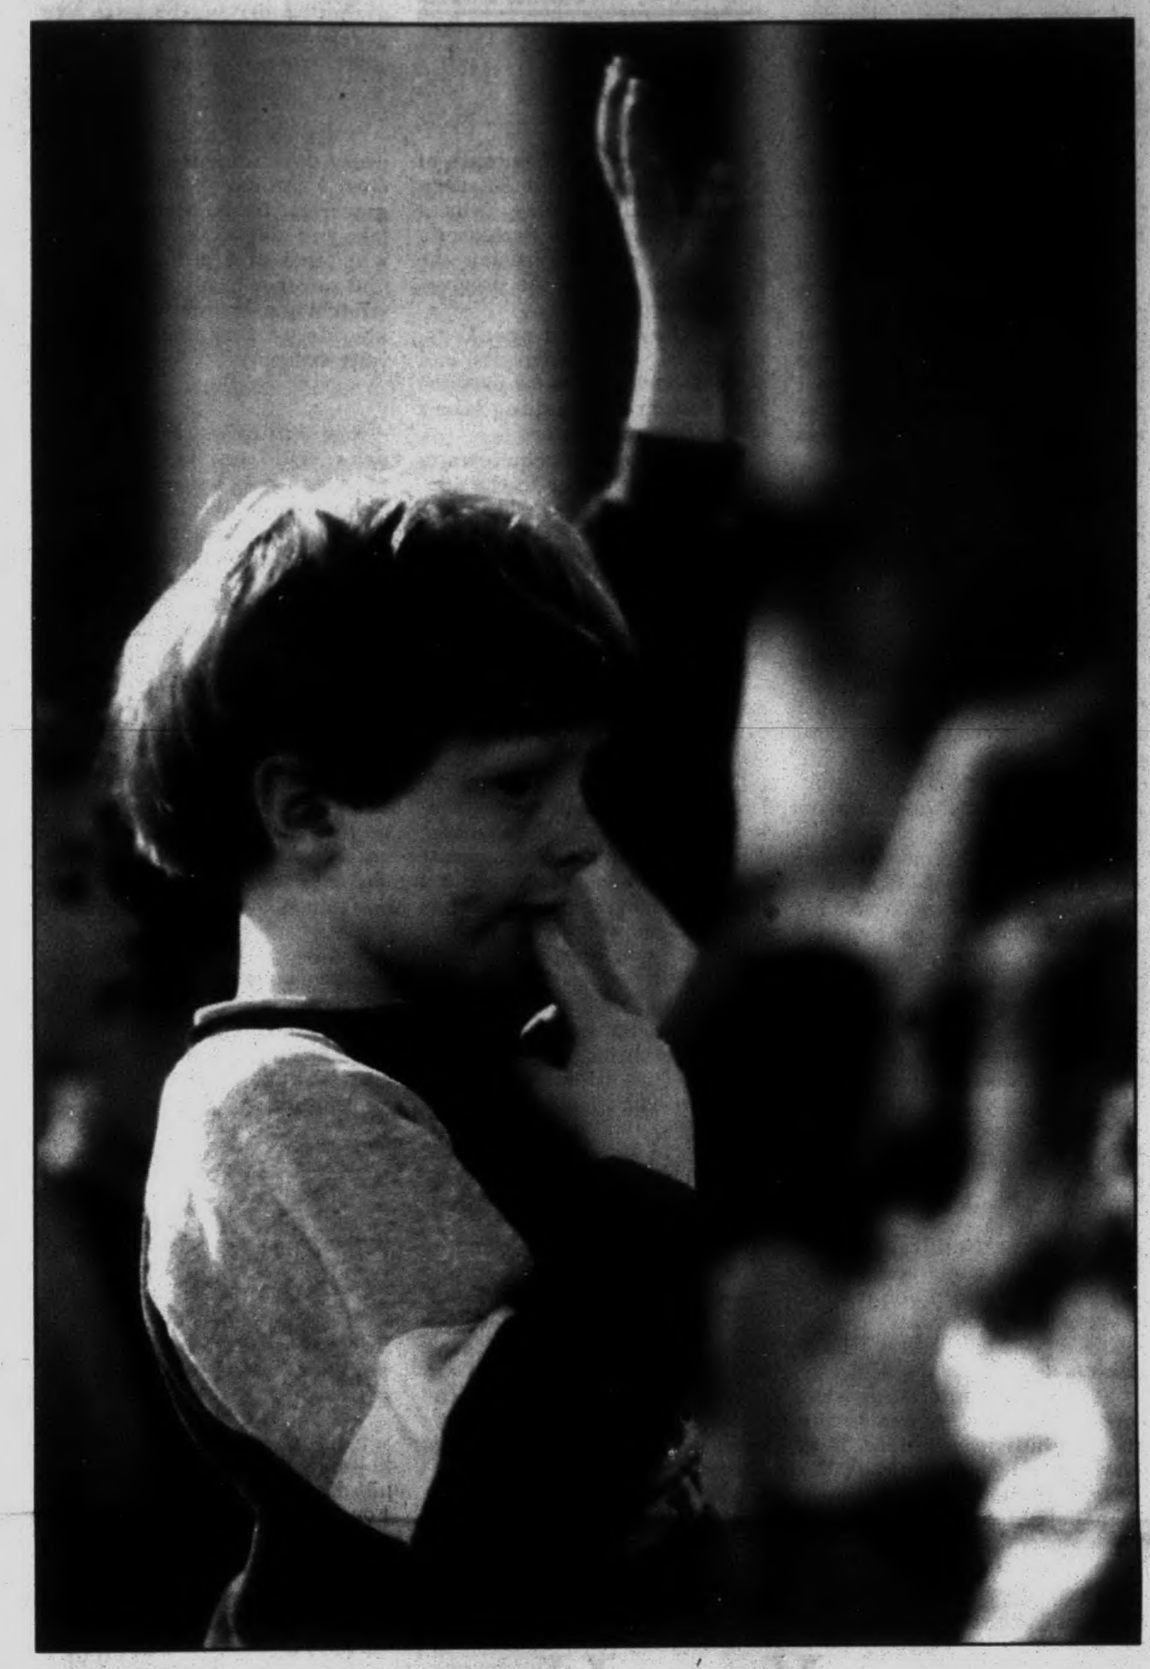
Bird students demonstrate their knowledge



BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

If you had walked into Bird Elementary School last week you would have seen maybe 1,000 shoes in the lobby.

"The shoes will either be reused or recycled," said Bird Principal Jane VanSteenis.

Kids were asked to bring in old shoes - part of an Earth Day connection called Second Chance Shoes - to help others. Shoes that can be reused will be sent to Third World countries, while those that can't are recycled into insulation or those little wheels on garbage cans, VanSteenis said.

The shoe collection coincided with preparation of one of the school's biggest and most important events - Curriculum Night.

That's the night - Thursday to be exact - when students have a chance to show what they are learning and teachers, what they are teaching.

■ 'It was totally connected to parents and students.'

Jane VanSteenis
—Bird Elementary principal

This year's Curriculum Night boasted a fitness theme, "Shaping Up Minds and Bodies."

For example, students traced their bodies on paper and made cut-outs with accompanying information about their height and weight. The kids also color the cut-outs to look like themselves.

The school also hosted a jump rope team from neighboring Gallimore Elementary School in Canton.

What is now Curriculum Night used to be called Young Author's Day and still is in many schools in the district. Students are required to publish their own books, some are all poetry, others a story, and illustrate it.

To show how it's done in the professional world, Bird Elementary hosted illustrator Patrick Girouard.

"He showed how illustrators work and what is involved in illustrating a book," VanSteenis said. "He also talked about what his profession is like, how he went to school and became an artist."

Because Thursday also was Earth Day, the kids learned about the environment and the Second Chance Shoes effort was a perfect match.

"Everything is connected to curriculum," VanSteenis said. "This is like our second biggest night. It was totally connected to parents and students."

By the way, the shoe drive is actually a contest. The class that collects the most wins a pizza party - and at the same time learns the benefits of recycling and protecting the environment.

Channel 7 reporter will speak at prayer breakfast

Reporter Teresa Tomeo of WXYZ-TV Channel 7 will be featured speaker at the seventh annual Canton-Plymouth Prayer breakfast set for Thursday at Summit on the Park in Canton.

Teresa Tomeo

"I'll be talking about the role I feel prayer plays in my day-to-day life and how my Christian faith plays a role in my work life," said Tomeo.

A member of St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church in St. Clair Shores, Tomeo said her faith has spilled over into the newsroom where any assignments of a religious nature are routinely turned over to her. That is how she met Canton minister Ken Bieber of Church of the Risen Lord, who recommended that Tomeo be guest speaker for the prayer breakfast.

Tomeo said she also feels religion is getting more coverage in the media.

The breakfast, which offers an opportunity for Canton and Plymouth residents to come together for inspiration, prayer and fellowship, begins at 7:30 a.m. It coincides with the National Day of Prayer.

Kim Moore, a local contemporary Christian recording artist, will perform as well.

The breakfast is coordinated by the Canton Community Foundation in conjunction with the Canton Ministerial Association. This year's sponsor is the L.J. Griffin Funeral Home of Canton.

Tickets are $10 and reservations for tables of eight are available. To make reservations call Joan Noricks, foundation executive director, 981-3002.

others to show their support."

The theme for 1997, "In God We Trust," is a well-known phrase that has graced American currency since 1865. The theme is based on Psalm 20:7, "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the Lord our God."

Local volunteers have organized several individual and community-wide events, open to the public, with an appeal, according to Moore to both the active Christian fellowship and the "unchurched community."

In addition to the annual Plymouth-Canton prayer breakfast, here the area events scheduled for Thursday:

■ A worship activity at Plymouth City Hall will take place 12:20-12:40 p.m. at 201 S. Main St., corner of Main and Church streets, sponsored by Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church.

■ Worshipers are expected to gather at the Canton Township Administrative Building flagpole to pray 12:20-12:40 p.m., 1150 S. Canton Center Road.

■ The Canton Free Methodist Church will host a "Community Concert of Prayer" 7-8:30 p.m., 44815 Cherry Hill Road. Approximately 12 churches are expected to participate including Trinity Presbyterian Church, Calvary Baptist Church, Plymouth Church of the Nazarene, Geneva Presbyterian, Canton Free Methodist, Tri-City Christian Center, Lakepointe Bible Chapel, Canton Community Evangelical Free Church, Christ Community Church, St. Michael's Lutheran, Church of the Risen Lord, Charismatic Episcopal Church and Crossroads Community Church.

For more information, call (313) 981-5350.

Westland:

■ Westland Free Methodist Church, 1421 Venoy Road, will open the sanctuary from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. in observance of National Day of Prayer. Prayer cards will be available at the altar.

Reef's symptoms worsened, and a co-worker eventually convinced her to see a neurologist. She was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease.

A progressive brain disorder, Parkinson's causes tremors, imbalance, slowed movement and impaired dexterity. The disease afflicts 35,000 people in Michigan. Currently, its cause is unknown. There is no cure, although most patients respond to medical treatment. April is Parkinson's Awareness Month.

"No one I knew had it; I'd never heard of it," said Reef, who rejected the first doctor's opinion. When the second neurologist confirmed the diagnosis, "I was in shock. I couldn't cry when I got home, because my daughter was there. When I finally was alone, I sobbed."

Reef worked until "it got so I couldn't keep up with the kids. My voice wouldn't carry. It got lower. I slowed down, and my writing got smaller and smaller. I couldn't walk much, and the kids would mimic me."

The decision to quit teaching in 1985 at age 57 "was hard. But I knew I wasn't doing the job I should." Reef was at least consoled with the news that her life expectancy would be near normal. Staffers at Pioneer "were wonderful."

Born in Owen Sound, Ontario, and raised in Detroit, Reef reinvented her life during a difficult year. "My Dad died that September, and my mother-in-law died the next August," she said. "On the radio, I heard about a Parkinson's organization. It was a support group for people in Plymouth, Canton, Livonia and Westland."

■ 'No one I knew had it; I'd never heard of it.'
Mary Beth Reef
—Former teacher

Before long, the graduate of Albion College and Eastern Michigan University was a group leader for the Parkinson's Support Group, a position she still holds, despite the progression of her disease.

Reef has booked speakers, mailed out announcements, and taught herself how to produce newsletters and mailing labels on her home computer.

She tries to find volunteers to drive Parkinsonians to the support group meetings, held 7 p.m.-8:30 p.m. the second Thursday of every month at the Livonia Senior Center on Farmington Road south of Five Mile Road. If you're willing to help, she'd welcome a call at (313) 459-0216.

"A big thing is listening to newly diagnosed people who call," said Reef. "Doctors don't tell them anything.

"We don't try to diagnose them, but we talk over problems," she added. "I tell them Parkinson's isn't something that kills you; you can live with it. I tell them I live alone. You have to adapt, but you can exist. You have to keep moving. If you don't use it, you lose it."

Reef has found that "attitude has a lot to do with it, and your ability to think positively. If someone says, 'How do you feel?' and I say bad, I feel bad. But if I say I feel fine, it boosts me up."

While there are things she can't do – "the hardest thing was giving up driving because I've always been independent" – Reef concentrates on what she can do.

"I try to walk up to a mile every day. Pushing my yellow cart, I can carry three bags of groceries. I ride my stationary bike two miles a day," said Reef, who rises at 5 a.m. every day and never sets an alarm. "I do stretching exercises every day. I also do writing exercises and voice exercises."

Reef still bakes, cares for her grandchildren, takes family trips, and does her own laundry. She gardens, even though with her impaired balance, she often falls. "I've gotten good at falling and getting up. They showed us how at a workshop," said Reef, who also is active with her Alpha Chi Delta sorority and church, First United Methodist.

In addition to volunteer drivers, Reef is looking for someone to give her at-home lessons on her IBM-compatible computer. Never ready to stop learning, she says "there's so much to it I don't know.

"I love working on the computer. I was a math major, and I like to see things come together. Typing is a problem, but you can erase. That's what I spend half my time doing."

activities, and addressed the notion that he might seek a seat on the township board of trustees in the future.

"It's a possibility, first I have to run a dealership," he said.

"You can't put into words what this community means to me and the individuals here. It is very difficult to leave, but I'm not leaving," Berry said.

On behalf of the township police officers' union, Det. David Hayes presented Berry with a special badge. "His door has always been open for the officers and the association," Hayes said.

Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy said, "I have truly enjoyed working with Carl, he's taught me a lot about the history, where this community's going and where it's been, I've appreciated his wisdom."

Law thanked Berry, saying, "He's helped explain a lot of things about police work. It's really a pleasure to recognize Carl's 35 years of service to the Plymouth community."

Of Acting Chief Robert Smith, Berry said he hoped Smith would be named to the full-time position.

The township board of trustees is reviewing a list of consultant firms, one of which will perform a national search to seek and evaluate candidates for the full-time police chief job.

Newburgh Lake

Water level lowered, excavation to begin

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

The river runs low tonight.

That ballad penned by pianist Bruce Hornsby can describe the current scene at Newburgh Lake, now well into a $10 million restoration project.

Now that the lake — actually an impoundment of the Rouge River — has lost about 9 feet of water from its deepest areas, nearby residents and motorists can expect to see the excavation of nearly 400,000 cubic yards of soil contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) over the next year.

Newburgh Lake is located in the middle branch of the Rouge River, west of Newburgh Road, south of Hines Drive, east of Haggerty and north of Ann Arbor Trail. It is in the city of Livonia and Plymouth Township.

Excavation begins

Excavators from John Carlo Inc. of Clinton Township are expected to begin removing this week approximately 390,000 cubic yards of soil contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) from the lake, and transporting it on trucks to a landfill in Salem Township. Another 230,000 cubic yards of additional sediment will be excavated to increase the lake's depth.

The restoration plan will provide for an 8-foot minimum depth, with the exception of shallow areas built for fish spawning and nursery.

Approximately two weeks ago a stoplog was removed from a sluice gate to allow water to drain out of the lake. Since then, the lake's depth fell from about 15 feet in its deepest area to about 5 feet.

Much of the lake's bottom is now exposed to the open air. Motorists driving on Newburgh Road have probably noticed the lower level, and the exposed debris and vegetation that was formerly underwater.

But officials were pleasantly surprised that the exposed river bed did not fouled the air of the nearby neighborhood as was feared.

No odor

"There's no smell anywhere right now," said Roger VanOmen, chief engineer with Wayne County Department of Public Works. "Right now, we have very few dead fish. We have no smell, but that may change once the weather warms up."

Jim Ridgway, president of Environmental Consulting & Technology and the lake's pro-

Restoration project calendar revised

Here is a revised schedule of the restoration of Newburgh Lake:

Lake lowering — Now through May 17. The first of several 8-inch "stop logs" — which actually resemble railroad ties — was removed to initiate the lowering of the lake's water level. The lake levels vary between six inches and 15 feet, but will fall in a range between zero and 5 feet.

Lake excavation — Now through April 1998. Excavators from John Carlo of Clinton Township are expected to begin removing soil and sediment contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) from the lake. Approximately 390,000 cubic yards of contaminated sediment will be removed, and about another 230,000 cubic yards of additional sediment will be excavated to increase the lake's depth.

Contractors will transport PCB-contaminated soil to a landfill in Salem Township.

Road closure — Now through July 1998. Wayne County officials have closed Hines Drive between Jughandle Road, just west of Newburgh Road, and just east of Haggerty Road. It will be closed until July 1998 while contractors excavate and transport PCB-contaminated soil.

The 100 to 150 trucks transporting the soil each day will travel the following route: Newburgh Road south, then west on Ann Arbor Road, I-275 north to M-14, west to Beck Road, north to Five Mile, then west to Napier north to the landfill entrance.

First fish kill — June 15 through July 16, 1997. Rotenone, a pesticide derived from plant roots that kills fish and can be fatal to tadpoles and frogs, will be sprayed on the water in a monitored environment, while potassium permanganate will be used to detoxify the rotenone.

Second fish kill - May 1998

Fill lake — May through July 1998. Stop logs will be replaced on the dam to begin an impoundment of Newburgh Lake. It is expected to have a average depth of 8 feet.

Road restoration — May through July 1998. Hines Drive will be repaved between Newburgh and Haggerty roads.

Site restoration — June through July 1998. Wayne County facilities will be restored near the lake.

Lake plantings — May 1998 Aquatic vegetation near the shoreline provides valuable fish and wildlife habitat and can be attractive, using plants with flowers.

Fish restocking — July 1998 Species expected to either be stocked or recruited from the upstream Rouge River are bluegill, largemouth bass, pumpkinseed and possibly northern pike.

Schoolcraft trustees OK new budget

■ Schoolcraft is expected to collect $15.3 million next year in property taxes, $12.3 million in general student tuition and fees, $10.3 million from the state's appropriations, and $558,220 from other sources.

Schoolcraft College trustees unanimously approved a $38.6 million general fund budget for 1997-98.

The budget represents a 2.9 percent hike in overall expenditures, but increases of 5.9 percent in instruction, 6.2 percent in student services and approximately 5 percent in business services and general administration costs.

No questions were asked at a public hearing prior to the budget approval.

Trustees received a budget presentation from Butch Raby, Schoolcraft's vice president of business services, at a board meeting in March.

On Wednesday, Raby said the budget "marked a milestone" because it was below inflation which has happened two or three times in his years at Schoolcraft.

New construction will bring 3.6 percent more tax revenue than last year, and state appropriations is expected to increase 3 percent, Raby said. "We're pretty sure it will be no less than 3 percent," Raby said.

Tuition and fees will bring in 2.1 percent more than last year.

A truth in taxation hearing on Schoolcraft's 1.8521 millage rate was scheduled for May 21. The rate remains unchanged from last year.

Schoolcraft is expected to collect $15.3 million next year in property taxes, $12.3 million in general student tuition and fees, $10.3 million from the state's appropriations, and $558,220 from other sources.

Proposed expenditures are as follows: instruction, $23.4 million; business services, $7 million, student services, $4 million; general administration, $2.5 million, and $1.5 million in contingency, equipment and transfer funds.

S'craft board split on tuition increase

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Students at Schoolcraft College will be paying a little more for tuition this fall after trustees approved increases Wednesday.

Students who reside in the Schoolcraft district will pay $1 more per credit hour or $51 a credit hour, Michigan residents outside the district $2 more or $75, and out-of-state residents $3 more or $112. A district resident who takes 18 credits will pay $918 in tuition this fall.

Schoolcraft's district includes the Wayne County portions of K-12 districts of Clarenceville and Livonia Public Schools; the Northville district; Novi Community Schools, excluding the portion covered by Oakland Community College and portions of the Plymouth-Canton school district.

The $1 increase is the fourth increase in four years for in-district students, but the smallest during that same time period. Last year and in every year since 1993, tuition increased $2 a credit hour.

Trustees approved the hike, 4-2. Board chair Patricia Watson, vice chair John Walsh, and trustees Mary Breen and Brian Broderick supported the hikes, while trustees Dick DeVries and Stephen Ragan opposed them. Trustee Carol Strom was absent.

In a second motion, trustees unanimously approved the elimination of the $10 application fee. They also increased an instructional equipment fee from 50 cents to $1 per credit hour.

Walsh said he struggled with his decision to support the increase. He pointed out the increase is below inflation, which allows students to receive tax credit.

By keeping the tuition hike below this year's inflation rate established by the state Department of Treasury, students can receive tax credit for 4 percent of their total tuition.

"This way we don't have to hit students with a double-whammy in a couple of years," Walsh said.

Ragan said the college was created to be the "easiest access to higher education" for students. Students who receive scholarships often refer to the need for the scholarships due to the increasing tuition costs, Ragan said.

"I don't think there's enough emphasis on cost-cutting," Ragan said, pointing out there were increases of 6 percent throughout the budget. "We haven't talked about privatization. We need to take a strong stance on this."

DeVries believes the tax credit has an indirect affect of forcing colleges and universities to increase tuition slightly each year, because school officials do not want to raise tuition beyond inflation in a subsequent year after a tuition freeze. In that case, students will not receive the tax break, which is what happened a year ago at Schoolcraft. That was an argument that could be used by a tuition hike supporter, DeVries said.

"I am yet to be convinced that students at Schoolcraft College take advantage (of the tax break)," DeVries said.

On the technology fee increase, Broderick said: "I think it's important that if we have fees that we explain what they're for. That the payments are accounted for and people know what they are getting."

ject manager, said there was little vegetation and algae apparent.

"Two things are happening real well," Ridgway said. "There is no odor, and many of these plants that grow underwater during the summer are gone and biodegraded.

"All the mud is flat, there are no plants and it's drying out real nicely."

Park closed

Wayne County officials also have closed Hines Drive between Jughandle Road, just west of Newburgh Road, and just east of Haggerty Road. It will be closed until July 1998 while contractors excavate and transport PCB-contaminated soil to a landfill in Salem Township.

Not only are motorists advised to stay off of Hines Drive, but bicyclists, joggers, roller-bladers and other pedestrians are advised to stay off the bike path between Newburgh and Haggerty.

"People can get hurt easily with all the truck traffic, and people need to stay out of the construction area," VanOmen said. "It will be closed allow that truck traffic through."

The 100 to 150 trucks transporting the soil each day will travel the following route: Newburgh Road south, then west on Ann Arbor Road, I-275 north to M-14, west to Beck Road, north to Five Mile, then west to Napier north to the landfill entrance.

Excavators are expected to start in the area where the river first enters the lake in its west end.

The soil's PCB levels fall under the old guidelines that permit PCBs that are below the standard of 50 parts per million to be transported and housed in traditional landfills, and not specially-lined landfills.

VanOmen said the low PCB levels do not pose any risk to people.

Ridgway said soil samples did not exceed the 2 parts per million, which would require the soil be transported to a different site.

A temporary channel will be constructed to carry the stream flow through the lake bottom during the work. Small dikes will be built so that spring rainstorms will not flood over areas where contaminated soil lies.

Fish kills

The first of two fish kills is scheduled for mid-June. Rotenone, a pesticide derived from plant roots that kills fish and can be fatal to tadpoles and frogs, will be sprayed on the water in a monitored environment, while potassium permanganate will be used to detoxify the rotenone.

The fish eradication is expected to remove fish contaminated with PCBs. PCBs have entered the food chain in the lake and are currently present in the fish.

These contaminated fish result in a potential human health hazard associated with their consumption. As a result, a fish advisory has been issued.

UM-D to dedicate development center

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Eric Brucker has a picturesque way of describing the new Center for Professional Development on the University of Michigan-Dearborn Campus.

"It's a gate to the outside world and a window from the world to the campus," said Brucker, dean of the UM-D business school.

In this case, the students will be from the professional world. They will attend non-degree conferences, workshops, seminars and other learning programs.

UM-D Chancellor James Renick announced the CCPD will be dedicated next week with a pair of activities:

- An informal public open house from 3-6 p.m. Tuesday, May 6.
- Formal dedication ceremonies at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 7, at which state and campus officials will speak.

CCPD is one of three new buildings UM-D is constructing with $14 million from the state more than $2 million from private gifts.

The project made UM-D one of the most favored of 15 university campuses in the state in fiscal 1993, when Gov. John Engler recommended and the Legislature voted the money.

Architect for all three was Sims-Varner of Detroit. General contractor was Walbridge-Aldinger.

The UM-Dearborn Campus, now 37 years old, is located on Evergreen south of Ford Road in Dearborn. Total campus enrollment tops 8,000.

CCPD is unique, however, because its 93,000 square feet will serve other than traditional students. "CCPD represents an area of real potential growth for our campus," said Renick, "and reflects our commitment to serving the life-long educational needs of this region."

Gary Kesckes, CCPD executive director, said the new building attracts not only corporate but civic groups, trade groups, governmental agencies, professional associations and cultural groups.

Previously, CCPD had operated out of two off-campus sites: rented quarters in the Armenian Community Center nearby and a Southgate site. The Southgate quarters will be retained. Programs also are offered in a company's own quarters.

Chairs in the new CCPD building won't be bolted down. "They are on rollers and can be turned," said Brucker. The chairs came from auto insurer AAA, which provided them when it remodeled its own facilities in nearby Dearborn. If purchased new, the 700 chairs would have cost $270 apiece.

The other two buildings in the project, both partially opened, are the School of Management and the School of Engineering buildings. They will be dedicated in fall.

The three-building package will be of particular interest to the auto industry, with their emphases on engineering and management.

The Management Building, said Brucker, "will hold the largest audiences on campus – 350 seats. There are two computer labs and space for teaching students to work in five groups of five.

"All of the building will be computer-wired and wired to Internet. The whole building is designed to encourage student interaction and student-faculty interaction."

The School of Management building has 45,000 square feet. In UM-D's 35-year history, the School of Management has compiled an alumni list of more than 5,000, with 85 percent working in the tri-county metropolitan area, Brucker said.

Detroit Zoo extends hours

Animal enthusiasts have an extra hour to enjoy the sites at the Detroit Zoo.

The Detroit Zoo opens at 10 a.m. It is located at the intersection of 10 Mile Road and Woodward Avenue, just off I-696 in Royal Oak. Regular admission is $7.50 for adults, $5.50 for senior citizens (62 years and older) and students, $4.50 for children (2 to 12) and free for children 2 and under. Groups rates are also available.

For more information please call (810) 398-0900. Other DZI facilities include the Belle Isle Zoo and the Belle Isle Aquarium.

Host families are needed for exchange students

Plymouth resident Lynne Levenbach is looking for families to participate in a cultural exchange experience by hosting an international high school student for the coming academic year.

Levenbach serves as community coordinator for PAX, a non-profit foundation which provides a U.S. high school and homestay program for students from over 20 different countries.

7 As far as Rob Peters is concerned, a tee shot that isn't long is wrong. That's because Peters, a five-time national finalist in the long-drive contest, has the sole aim of driving a golf ball the greatest possible distance.

8 Our two-page color map charts all the area golf courses in Wayne County and nearby counties.

10 When it comes to golfers, Cindy Diakow is more concerned with making one able than improving one's ability. Which, come to think of it, should be a top priority for avid players.

Computer helps get in the swing

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Chris Hart doesn't consider himself a golfer, but the 29-year-old president of Interactive Frontiers shoots under-par when it comes to analyzing your swing.

Hart has tapped into the burgeoning golf boom through computers.

His V1 Golf Swing Analyzer is a computer digitized video teaching system which is equipped to give students an instantaneous, synchronized split screen perspective. It also comes along with colorful drawing tools, a telestrator of sorts, which allows the instructor to interact with the student during a lesson

The V1 features high resolution and detailed graphics with a unique 17-inch monitor. The VI also has a built-in CD-ROM drive to make future upgrades easy to install.

"It's not a complex device and it doesn't require an operator," said Hart, who began his company in 1994. "It's not intimidating to the non-computer person. It's a system designed for the student who can see his swing and get immediate feedback right on the range."

The VI contains two video cameras with a playback feature as simple as a click — all with the stroke of a graphics pen (instead of a mouse).

Swinging system: Chris Hart's V1 Golf Swing Analyzer is a computer digitized video teaching system.

Students can pop in their own tapes and compare their "bad swings" with the "good swings" of a Fred Couples using a variety of split screen angles or views. Once you record a swing, you can play it back in slow motion, freeze it, reverse it, or repeat in single click.

"Running a regular videotape back and forth can be time consuming," said teaching pro Craig Mueller of Commack, N.Y., who has used the system for a year. "With this system you can take it right on the course or use it indoors. Three lessons can fill up a tape and once they (the students) can see themselves, it reinforces their game through visuals. If they have questions about drills, you can review it instantly and that makes it useful."

Hart is a 1985 graduate of Plymouth Canton and has a degree in computer science from Eastern Michigan University.

He markets and assembles his four different V1 Coaching Systems from his third floor office, located off I-275 and Six Mile Road in Livonia.

The total cost for Premier Mobile Kiosk System is $16,932, while the ABS Portable System is $12,044.

"If you utilize it eight hours per day, it pays for itself in one year," Mueller said.

The V1 is already aligned with several heavyweights in the golf business.

It is used exclusively at all Nicklaus/Flick Golf Schools, all Golden Bear Golf Centers (soon to be coming to Oasis), Pebble Beach Golf Academy, the Faldo Golf Institute, the Calloway Golf Experience, Disney World, the Muirfield System and Golf Digest Schools in Edison, N.J.

New Oasis owners on course for change

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK
STAFF WRITER

Oasis golf center has a new owner with new ideas but retains its traditional emphasis on quality and service.

Golden Bear Golf Inc. has purchased Oasis and renamed it Golden Bear Golf Centers at Oasis. .

The new owners have plenty of plans for the facility. One of the first is removing one of the two miniature golf courses and expanding the parking lot.

"Parking has always been a problem here," said Stephanie Ashley, in her fourth year at the facility.

"Then they're going to give us a new mini-course called 'Bear Tracks.' It's going to be phenomenal," she said. "They'll totally redo the old one for that and it should be done by the end of May, I would assume."

Two years ago Oasis installed new state-of-the-art batting cages. Now it will add new bats and helmets.

A new retail golf pro shop is being designed and Golden Bear has promised new range balls every six months.

"All of our golf pros are going to be certified in the (Jack) Nicklaus teaching philosophy," Ashley said. "We have seven pros on site and we're looking to expand.

"We'd like to bring in some more women. We have one now but they're hard to find with LPGA certification."

A bigger parking lot will enable Oasis to service more customers.

So it plans to expand its grass hitting area by more than 50 bays, arching them around to better use existing space. It currently has 75 mats and 45 grass hitting bays.

A Jack Nicklaus coaching studio will be built, either with a rollup door so it can be used all year or under the highly visible golf dome. It will feature use of video tape for teaching.

"We're going to have demo days," Ashley said. "We're bringing in new teaching equipment, new loaner clubs, practice clubs for the lessons. And we're not increasing rates this summer, which is nice."

Companies take swing at growing golf market

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

The golf business continues to mushroom.

The 1997 PGA Merchandise Show on Super Bowl weekend (Jan. 24-27) in Orlando, Fla. can attest to that.

In 1993, the show, attracted 698 exhibitors.

In 1997, more than 1,200 exhibitors rented booths at the mammoth Orange County Convention Center.

Attendance by buyers and sellers topped the 45,000-mark this year, nearly doubling the mark of 23,222 in 1991.

What does this all mean?

Golf remains a bull market with more and more avenues opening up each day.

Steve Rentschler, vice president of Special Markets for Sterling Cut Glass of Erlanger, Ky., is targeting the expanding corporate golf market.

"More and more corporations are entertaining customers and business prospects through corporate golf outings," Rentschler said. "Business has always crossed both sections. It's been there all along, now everybody is trying tap into that."

Founded in 1902, Sterling Cut Glass has two retail stores in the Cincinnati area with the corporate headquarters located near Greater Cincinnati-Northern Kentucky International Airport.

Sterling carries on an artistic tradition of old-world craftsmanship. It is one of the leading producers of custom etched crystal for trophies and presentation pieces, recognition and achievement awards, barware and stemware, gifts and accessories.

Custom crystal: Founded in 1902, Sterling Cut Glass carries on an artistic tradition of old-world craftsmanship.

"We feel the corporate golf business is one of the fastest growing facets of the golf industry with Michigan leading the nation in corporate golf outings in relation to the population," Rentschler said. "That shows how big it is.

"You can also see they also have more charity outings than any other state."

Popularity grows for junior golf

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

Like so many of us, Ron Burchi wishes he would have taken up golf at an earlier age.

Because of his title, Burchi is reminded of this every day.

Burchi is in his fifth year as director of Junior Golf for the Michigan Professional Golfers Association, and he has seen the ranks grow each year.

The interest has led to what is expected to be the biggest turnout ever for the 1997 Maxfli Michigan PGA Junior Championship, held in June and July at golf courses throughout the state.

Girls and boys ages 11-under to 17, of all talent levels, are eligible.

There are 13 qualifying sites in June, leading up to the championship on Thursday and Friday, July 24 and 25, at Milham Park in Kalamazoo. Compare that to 1993 when there were only five qualifying sites leading up to the championship round.

Burchi expects more than 800 boys and girls to participate this year, which is more than double the turnout four years ago.

If there is a future Tiger Woods out there, chances are Burchi will know.

"I started when I was 23, now you see 8-year-olds playing," said Burchi, 59. "I used to play baseball and thought, 'Oops, I can't play that anymore,' and gravitated toward golf.

"It's a game you can play your whole life, in your 60s, 70s, 80s. You can only play football, basketball and baseball in a small window of your life. We now have over 800 high school teams in the state. Some get instruction right in gym class."

There are age divisions for 11-under, 12-13, 14-15 and 16-17. The top 170 golfers from the qualifying sites reach the championship.

■ 'I started when I was 23, now you see 8-year-olds playing.'

Ron Burchi
director, Junior Golf

Entry fee is $15 per golfer in the 11-under age division and $25 per golfer for the other three divisions. Participants are only allowed to play at one qualifying site.

There are no handicap requirements.

"Our only requirement is age," Burchi said. "We want to make our program available to as many as possible."

Among the 13 qualifying sites in June are four within a short driving distance of Observerland: Pine View Golf Club, Ypsilanti, Wednesday, June 18; Sylvan Glen, Troy, Friday, June 20; Mystic Creek Golf Club, Milford, Monday, June 23; Woodlands Golf Club, Wayne, Tuesday, June 24.

While the interest among boys is overwhelming, the event hasn't caught on as well among girls, according to Burchi. The girls high school season is in the spring and Burchi is hoping more stay interested after the season long enough to try their luck.

"They're coming off their high school season and maybe they've had their fill of golf," Burchi said.

Caddies are not allowed, which is fine by most of the participants 12 and over who usually prefer to carry their bag rather than use a pull cart.

"Ninety nine percent of the kids put the bag on their back and carry it," Burchi said. "It's almost taboo (to use a pull cart). They put the bag on their shoulder and away they go."

For entry information, call Burchi at (313) 522-2323. The Michigan PGA Office is at 32744 Five Mile Road in Livonia.

Salem grad wins award the hard way

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

Sometimes, a guy can get himself into a groove, where everything goes right.

In 1995, Jeff Roth found himself on the opposite end of that furrow, plowing through some pretty bad luck.

Roth, a Plymouth Salem graduate (1975) who serves as the pro at the Flint Golf Club, thought he had won the Michigan Section PGA Player of the Year award. And according to the numbers calculated by the rules that had been in use, he had.

But the rules were changed. Another Michigan pro, Steve Brady, was awarded five points just for playing in the national PGA Championship, a tournament he qualified for as an alternate and got to play in only because others withdrew.

Those five points Brady received were pivotal, however. They gave him the state's top player award.

Roth, who had won the award in 1987, did not take the disappointment easily. He was engulfed with a determination to prove himself.

"It was definitely my motivation last year," Roth recalled.

The way 1996 turned out, well — let's just say anyone with similar Player-of-the-Year aspirations should consider doing anything to prevent any possible incentive from reaching Roth.

Yes, Roth won the award last year. And he did it the hard way; not by playing in every tournament that awarded points, but by playing in a select few — and scoring extremely well in those.

How well? In the three major state tournaments — the Michigan Open, the Tournament of Champions and the Michigan PGA — Roth had a stroke total of 702.

Par for those three tournaments combined is 720. Next best scores after Roth were Brady and Bob Makoski, who tied for second with even-par 720s.

That's an 18-stroke difference. By comparison, the gap between second and 10th was 17 strokes.

In short, Roth lapped the field.

"You've really got to be a little lucky, especially for someone like me, because I don't play in as many tournaments as some of the others," said Roth of his award-winning season. "So I really have to play well."

Which he did. But don't limit Roth to this state, or even this continent, when reviewing his 1996.

Because if you do, you'll be eliminating one of the highlights in a career filled with them.

Indeed, while reaping Player of the Year accolades was quite a sought-after honor, it wasn't his biggest thrill of the year. That came in September, in Gleneagles, Scotland.

Roth had qualified for the U.S. team competing in the PGA Cup. The team is not easy to qualify for; it consists of the club pros who score best at the National Club Professionals Championship Tournament.

Ten make the U.S. team for the biannual competition against a squad of similar caliber from England and Ireland (the previous year's Club Pro Tournament champion, plus the top nine scorers from the current year's Club Pro Tournament).

Roth was appearing in his third PGA Cup. Only 11 others before him had played in as many.

His experience proved pivotal.

The Cup is divided into three types of competition: foursomes (two-man teams with players alternating shots), fourball (two-man teams competing in match play, with the best players' score each hole counting) and singles (one-on-one match play).

America's hopes came down to the final competition — singles. If the U.S. team could win, it would finish in a tie with its English and Irish counterparts, which meant the U.S., as defending champions, would retain the Cup.

Sounds like pressure enough. But for Roth, there was even more.

"The night before (singles play), I had a conversation with Gary Shaw on the order of guys playing," Roth said. Typically, the team's strongest players either go first or last, when pressure is greatest.

Shaw told Roth he would play last. "You have the most experience on the team," Shaw told Roth. "We'll be counting on you."

It wasn't easy, but Roth came through. Playing against Bill Longmuir, Roth found himself trailing by two holes as he approached No. 14.

"It was in those last four holes that everything happened," he said. Including what Roth referred to as a "typical Scottish" downpour made playing conditions worse.

Roth missed a birdie attempt on 14 as the two split the hole, but he got his birdie on No. 15 to win the hole and narrow the gap to one.

On 16, Roth played steadily but Longmuir didn't, bogeying the hole to tie their match.

By this time, the greens were surrounded with spectators, all well aware that the Cup outcome rested on their match.

"Our particular match had been a dogfight all day," Roth said. Longmuir had had the best of it, until the turning point at 15. "After that, it snowballed real quickly.

"The putt I made (for birdie) on 15 was the biggest of my round."

That 10-footer, combined with Longmuir's bogeys at 16, then at 17 and 18, gave Roth his come-from-behind, 2-up victory.

"It was just a euphoric kind of feeling," Roth said. "Just a real special moment. When teammates are involved, highs are higher and lows are lower."

It was a year of high points for Roth — and this was the highest.

Going long: Rob Peters is a five-time national finalist in the long-drive contest and has the sole aim of driving a golf ball the greatest possible distance.

Local man goes for long shots

BY DAN O'MEARA

As far as Rob Peters is concerned, a tee shot that isn't long is wrong.

That's because Peters, a five-time national finalist in the long-drive contest, has the sole aim of driving a golf ball the greatest possible distance.

For long drivers like the 32-year-old Westland resident, a good drive is like the thrill that comes with hitting a home run.

"If you've ever hit a baseball just the right way, kicked a football or shot a hockey puck, you know when you really get it," he said.

Peters played golf in high school and junior college but wasn't good enough, by his own assessment, to take his game to the next level.

However, he could hit a golf ball far, and he found his sporting niche in the long-drive contest.

"Trying to be competitive in all facets of the game — chipping, putting — got old quick," he said. "Doing long-drive events, I can still be competitive in a form of golf."

Peters, whose best drive was 388 yards, got the idea to enter a long-drive competition while visiting an uncle in Florida 10 years ago.

"My uncle's friend said 'You know, son, my son-in-law does long drive, and I think you ought to try it. You hit the ball as far as him, maybe even better.'"

Peters headed off to a course in Ohio that was having a local qualifying contest and began a passionate interest in his new-found sport.

"I took a regular driver; I had no idea what I was doing," Peters said. "All I knew is that it was a long-drive contest and I hit the ball a long way.

"The second-to-last-guy bumped me out, but I was hooked. I had to do this more; I knew I had better shots in me. I've been going great guns every since."

In his five trips to the national finals in Las Vegas, Peters has finished as high as 13th in a field of nearly 40 entries and was 20th last year.

Contestants must first qualify at the local level in sectional events and next the district phase to earn a berth in the national tournament.

The number of district qualifiers is determined by the number of entries. Anybody can enter but must declare amateur or professional status because of prize money offered at the national level.

A novice long driver might enter one local event and leave it at that, but the more serious pros like Peters go to as many qualifying events as possible to increase their chances.

"One guy had the idea to go to a lot of districts," Peters said. "Needless to say, a lot of us have taken the ball and run with it."

Peters competed in 11 sectionals last year. A handful were in the metro area, but he's also made weekend trips as far

For Churchill grad, golf's a stretch

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

When it comes to golfers, Cindy Diakow is more concerned with keeping one able than improving one's ability.

She's there for those who learn the hard way that even some of the best golf lessons can go to waste without the proper warmup sessions.

Diakow, an Aerobics Fitness Association of America Certified Fitness Instructor, owns Step to the Beat Fitness Co., a contracted service out of Livonia.

The 1989 Livonia Churchill graduate has made a video titled Staying Up To Par, which is designed to prevent golfers' injuries while reducing muscle tension, improving flexibility, range of motion, muscle strength and endurance.

Diakow made the video with the help of Tim Holmes, of Holmes Production in Birmingham. It costs $19.95 and is on sale at Pro Golf in West Bloomfield and Caddy Shack in Brighton.

Diakow also teaches 20 minute clinics and workshops at Fox Hills Country Club and Brae Burn Golf Club, both in Plymouth, and Firecreek Golf Club in Toledo, Ohio.

While the video and clinics may not improve your handicap, they will certainly keep you from feeling handicapped on the golf course.

Proper stretching hints

1. Warm up muscles by walking with low arm swing and large arm circles
2. Never force a stretch
3. Breathe – don't hold breath
4. If something hurts stop immediately
5. Relax muscles while stretching
6. Do not bounce
7. Take your time – forced stretching may result in muscle tears and injury

"I like to teach basic body awareness, muscle control and flexibility, that enables you to do the things you enjoy, like golf," said Diakow, whose company also teaches fitness classes for pregnant women and teens. "I just want to show people how easy it is to take care of their body and maintain agility as they age. It only takes 10 minutes to warm up properly. I think that's worth avoiding a visit to the hospital. They need to learn that stretching is part of golfing."

Diakow admits her own golf game is as North Carolina, Arkansas and Iowa for contests.

On one occasion, he drove to Raleigh, N.C., and "didn't do well" Saturday. He went from there to Little Rock, Ark., and placed first Sunday. He arrived home at 10:30 a.m. Monday.

"That was 2,400 miles in less than three days," Peters said. "And I went to work that day, too."

The most unusual contest was no doubt the one in Bettendorf, Iowa.

The tee shot was from a platform constructed on a river boat to a patch of sod that been purposely laid in a casino parking lot.

There are three key factors involved in being a successful long driver, according to Peters. The first is practice.

"There's no substitute for practice," he said. "With that, you can plan on not having a fabulous golf game along with it."

The second is finding the right equipment that fits your swing, Peters said, adding he just about has that part down to a science.

A long driver is the not the same as you'd buy off the rack. It will be longer and probably specially made.

Peters uses a 48-inch club shaft made by Harrison Sports, and he takes that to Ricque Golf in Livonia to have owner Rick Young attach a specific club head.

"I've tried to make a few on my own, but I've never made a club I was comfortable with," Peters said. "Maybe it's because I expect too much out of it. Rick seems to make it just right."

Robert Peters

The third key is concentration, according to Peters.

"You have to focus; you have to put everything else out of your mind," he said. "There can't be anything between you and that piece of ground out there where you want the ball to land."

That's how the 6-foot, 175-pound Peters, who says he compares with the "average tour player size," is able to compete with bigger men.

"I can't muscle it out there with those guys," he said. "I focus on technique and making a good golf swing as strong as possible."

Of course, a long driver has bad days as well as good days.

"Some times it comes real easy. You pop one right away and sit on it all day," Peters said. "One time I never hit a fairway. I hit it 350, but it was out of bounds. After eight or nine times, I put it down; it just wasn't meant to be that day."

Another factor, which no one has control over but can affect a competition, is the weather.

"If it's raining and the wind is blowing against you, 290 might win it," Peters said. "Another time the wind was blowing out; I hit it 388, and some guy hits it by me."

Like players on the pro golf tour, there is a fraternity among the long-drive pros who see each other at many of the same events.

"I'll pull up in Columbus, Ohio, and see a buddy from Chicago, one from Raleigh, and another from Little Rock will be there," Peters said.

"The local people come out and say 'Is this a tour or something? You all know each other.' We've developed a camaraderie. It's a neat gig we have."

WHO: Robert Peters, 32, of Westland; employed as warehouse manager for Jumbo Sports in Canton; 1982 graduate of Livonia Stevenson High School.

WHAT: Long-drive contest sanctioned by Long Drivers of America (based in California), sponsored by Remax and televised annually (national finals) by ESPN Sports.

SPORTS: Peters was a member of the Stevenson golf team that finished second in the state in 1981. He also played golf at Oakland Community College and hockey at Stevenson. He has been a high school hockey referee for 12 years.

CONTEST: Anyone can enter the long-drive contest at a local golf course. You pay $15 to hit six golf balls. You can repeat the process as many times as you like, but you must get in line again if others are waiting.

PURSE: The sport has grown in popularity and prize money in recent years, according to Peters.

The total purse was $27,000 with $10,000 for the winner in 1994. There is now an Open Division and a Senior Division for anyone over 45.

This year there will be $200,000 in prize money, with $50,000 for the open winner and $10,000 for the senior winner.

PLACE: Peters has finished as high as 13th in five appearances in the national finals. There are usually 40-50 finals qualifiers. His biggest payday at the nationals was $750.

Peters won the Temple Master long-drive contest, a spinoff pro-am event at the nationals, with a drive of 325 yards.

in need of improvement, politely saying "No comment," when asked about her handicap.

She comes from a non-golfing background but "All of a sudden my sisters (Nina and Sue) and mother (Gerri) want to start," she said.

The 40-minute video, filmed at Fox Hills, includes a 10-minute warm-up and stretch routine followed by 15 minutes of strengthening exercises for muscle endurance and control and two minutes of mental relaxation.

Diakow recommends stretching before each round, and staying in shape is just as important in the winter months.

"It's Michigan and I think everyone gets in the hibernation mode in the winter," Diakow said. "I hope this keeps them active."

Diakow has a dancing background, starting at Churchill where she studied in the Creative And Performing Arts program. After graduation, she worked in Florida as a manager of a dance studio and in the Bahamas as a member of a family entertainment show for a daytime cruiseline.

She became AFAA certified while in Florida.

"I took aerobics to meet people and decided 'I can teach this too,' " Diakow said. "Because of my dancing background, I focus on discipline and body awareness. All the techniques are just like golfing."

Upon returning to Michigan, Diakow earned a role as a dancer in the Pocahontas Show at Fox Theatre, before starting her own company.

Anyone interested in the video or the clinics/workshops can reach Diakow at (810) 518-1779.

growth in the golf market," said Hart, who has a total of six employees. "And that's because the golf markets have money to spend."

Hart would like to market his product to other sports as well.

With the use of underwater cameras, he is working with the U.S. Swim Team in Colorado Springs. The potential to expand to the collegiate market is also appealing.

"That could be a huge market," Hart said. "At a college, it could be shared by all teams."

Hart is also tied into the Internet.

"Digital information, tied in with the Internet, it goes hand in hand," said Hart.

She said Oasis is going to get ball dispensers that can be used with debit cards "which makes it easier to run specials; you can run specials any time of day."

Ashley said plans for the facility's par 3 course are uncertain. Golden Bear hopes to be able to do more on-course teaching and is thinking about tinkering with the course to get 2-3 long holes it can use for instruction.

This would enable the pros to teach approach shots, the short game and hazard play in round-like situations.

Some driving range changes are also planned.

"We're going to get new targets for the driving range. And we may turf some of it. We've got the world's greatest mat system now."

Anybody who drives I-275 north of M-14 can see the golf dome in winter and Golden Bear has no plans to change that.

"It will continue to go up and down every year," Ashley said.

GOLDEN MUSHROOM

CHEF STEVEN ALLEN

Hunting for morels one of spring's thrills

My first time mushroom hunting came when I worked in the south of France for Chef Michel Guerard in the town of Eugenie les Bains. I worked at a spa/restaurant/hotel called Les Pres D'Eugenie which was situated next to a forest.

In the spring time, after we were prepared for lunch service, there would be about a half hour or so to go outside, relax and get some fresh air before lunch would commence. We would immediately head into the woods and forage for mushrooms.

At first it was a difficult time for me. I couldn't see any, then I remember what Chef Milos Cihelka told me years before about hunting mushrooms. He said to make a visual picture in your mind of the mushroom; the shape, color and smell. Think about nothing else. All of a sudden I started seeing mushrooms. It was like looking at a surrealistic painting. What started out as being difficult turned into an enjoyable event. That day we found many cepes and morels.

Last summer, my family and I moved to the country, and I'm looking forward to discovering new forests for hunting. It won't be as hard now to schedule a small amount of time early, before work, to hunt mushrooms. It's very peaceful to he out there while nature wakes up.

Mushroom hunting has turned into quite a popular pastime, with thousands of people heading into northern Michigan forests every spring. But don't think you have to head up north to find morels, they grow in metro Detroit too. In fact, the largest one recorded was found on Belle Isle in Detroit. Not only is it enjoyable to forage through the woods, the "catch" is delicious.

The Golden Mushroom serves over 4,000 pounds of morels each year, along with numerous other varieties imported from around the world. In the restaurant, we don't have to worry about the "season" for mushrooms, they are always on the menu.

In Michigan, morel season lasts three to four weeks. They begin to pop up in May. The warm, humid days of early spring are perfect for beginning your search.

Morels are unpredictable. Once a year they may thrive in a given area, and the next they may not appear there at all. Typically, the fungus grows near fallen trees under the leaves in the rich dirt of the forest floor.

In hardwood forests they are commonly found where aspen, maple and ash trees predominate. Morels blend into the grass and leaves and often look like stumps, twigs and shadows.

Begin searching on hillsides. Scanning up the hill may help you find initial success. When you find a morel, cut it off above the ground and carry it in a well-ventilated bag or basket. At home, slice the morels in half and clean gently, checking for bugs. A true morel has a hollow stem and cap.

There are other mushroom species that strongly resemble the morel. The telltale indication of a "false morel" is that the head is joined to the stalk at the top, and not fused to the stalk at the bottom. False morels have a head, which is wrinkled to nearly smooth, but never pitted like the true morel.

At one time, most Americans cooked with the common domestic button mushroom (Agaricus). Today, our grocery stores carry a good selection of fresh mushrooms, and many more varieties are available dehydrated. Like America's growing knowledge of wine, we are becoming more discriminating and educated in our selection of mushrooms.

In France we cooked with many species of mushrooms, as they have been doing for hundreds of years. Shoppers can usually find 20 different varieties in their marketplace. But since cooking with wild mushrooms is relatively new here, I have described a few of the most popular:

■ Chanterelles – are yolk-colored, trumpet bell-shaped, and one to four inches tall; usually ready for harvesting from August to October. This mushroom has been popular in Europe since ancient times.

■ Boletus (more commonly known as cepes) – grow in open woods during summer and early autumn. There are many species of the genus Boletus suitable for eating. One of the most popular – the B. edulis, has a stem two to six inches tall, and fleshy, brown cap four to six inches across. The underside of the cap consists of a network of fine pores, which are white when young, then change to yellow and finally to a greenish hue as it ages. This mushroom is at optimum when the pores are pale yellow.

A SMALL, SIMPLE LUXURY

Biscotti

KRETSCHMER WHEAT GERM

Sweet treat: Cocoa Orange Biscotti, a crunchy, subtly sweet cookie, is perfect for dipping in a cup of coffee or cappuccino.

BY ANNIE LEHMANN
SPECIAL WRITER

Traditionally served as an accompaniment to espresso, cappuccino or sweet dessert wine, "biscotti are giving chocolate chips a run for their money," said celebrity baker Emily Luchetti, author of "Stars Desserts" and "Four-Star Desserts."

Luchetti, who recently taught a dessert making class at Kitchen Glamor in West Bloomfield, is not surprised by the growing popularity of these dry Italian dipping cookies, which translated means "twice baked."

"They are packed with flavor, have a satisfying crunchy texture, and have a two to three week shelf life when stored in a sealed container or tin," she said.

Biscotti are baked in loaves and cut on a diagonal. Until recently, they could only be found in the traditional anise and almond varieties. But things have changed.

The growing taste for these simple cookies is evidenced by the big biscotti-filled glass jars that commonly line countertops of neighborhood coffee bars and gourmet shops. Biscotti manufacturers are responding to the increased interest by developing new flavors and variations looking to keep American coffee drinkers hungry for more.

For example, white chocolate with hazelnuts, chocolate almond, and chocolate raspberry are just a few of the biscotti flavors served at the Coffee Trader in West Bloomfield. Paul Dupell, owner and operator of this casual eating establishment, said that biscotti is one of the most requested coffee accompaniments.

"People sometimes come into our shop and buy biscotti without even buying a cup of coffee," he said. His best-selling variety, almond dipped in milk chocolate, costs $1.35 per piece. "It's a small luxury most people can afford," he adds.

Still for cost conscious home bakers, biscotti is inexpensive to make requiring a short list of easy-to-get ingredients.

"Baking biscotti is a 'no brainer,'" said David Auer of Troy owner and operator of Auer's Baking Co. in Pontiac. A former instructor in the culinary arts department at Schoolcraft College, Livonia, Auer said biscotti is an ideal first cookie to make in a beginning baking class.

The trick to making good biscotti said Luchetti, is to bake them so that they are crisp enough without being too hard. "They harden as they cook," she explains cautioning bakers not to mistake the initial softness when taking them out of the oven, for being under baked.

Be creative – flavor your biscotti with an assortment of nuts, spices and dried fruits. Besides the better known sweet varieties, there are, according to Auer savories, which tend to be salty, and are sometimes made with herbs and cheese.

Auer used to sell biscotti to enthusiastic Italian patrons when he ran his retail shop, Baking by the Auers, in Southfield. At that time American customers didn't seem to understand that these European beverage companions were meant to be brittle.

"They would bring them back and say they are stale," said Auer. He explains while biscotti are thought of as a liquid absorbing confection, they can stand on their own.

Luchetti agrees. "They are simple and sophisticated," she said, "in addition to being low in fat, light in texture, and tasty."

Biscotti are also a nice accompaniment to a bowl of fresh fruit, or berries. Luchetti said she has even used chopped biscotti as a topping for ice cream.

It is clear – this simple cookie can be used creatively to produced memorable desserts. Biscotti has come, and can go, a long way.

Thomas Jberg, executive assistant manager food and beverage, said the menu includes eggplant manicotti, risotto with morel mushrooms and asparagus, and veal loin with fennel and tomato.

Lorraine Platman, owner of Sweet Lorraine's in Southfield and Ann Arbor and deli in Madison Heights, is participating in the Le Gala de Cuisine and La Fete au Jardin.

"I am an activist in many things, but because my husband Gary and I are very busy we can't organize events ourselves," said Platman. "This is our chance to do the things we believe in. By doing things collectively we can do more than we could do alone."

Variety raises money for Michigan children's charities such as the Cardiology Center at Children's Hospital of Michigan. Tickets are $100 per person, call (810) 258-5511 for reservations.

Northern Lakes Seafood Company opens to the public on Thursday, June 5.

■ Oyster – are fan-shaped and white to yellow brown. Popular with many restaurants, these mushrooms are now grown commercially. Though they may appear in early spring, they are mostly harvested in the summer and fall.

■ Coral – appears much like the coral found in the ocean. Instead of a cap, it has erect finger-like or club-shaped stalks that may intricately branch. There are many species, and they range in color from pale yellow to orange red. The flesh can be soft and brittle or leathery and tough.

■ Morels – are among the most popular of wild mushrooms. There are several varieties, the most sought being black, white and gray. They grow two to six inches tall, and have caps three quarters to three inches wide. The black morel is richest in flavor. The cap is beige to dark brown, and is ribbed and pitted like a honeycomb.

A word of caution. If you decide to hunt wild mushrooms on your own, consult an expert before eating any of your find. Many varieties are difficult to distinguish from the poisonous type. If you are unsure, don't eat it. Better yet, begin your mushroom education in a restaurant, or specialty grocery store.

Trained under Master Chef Milos Cihelka and in France under Chef Michel Guerard of Eugenie les Bains, Steven Allen is the executive chef of the Golden Mushroom in Southfield.

See related story on Taste front.

COCOA ORANGE BISCOTTI

- 2/3 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons margarine, softened
- 1 egg and 2 egg whites
- 2 tablespoons grated orange peel
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup wheat germ
- 1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 6 ounces white or semi-sweet chocolate (optional)

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Spray large cookie sheet with no-stick cooking spray. In large bowl, beat sugar and margarine with electric mixer until well blended. Beat in egg, egg whites, orange peel and vanilla.

In medium bowl, combine dry ingredients; mix well. Add to sugar mixture; mix well.

Divide dough in half. On cookie sheet, shape each portion of dough into an 8 by 3-inch loaf. Pat gently to flatten slightly. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until firm to the touch. Cool 10 minutes on a cookie sheet.

Using serrated knife, cut biscotti into 1/2-inch thick slices. Arrange slices upright on cookie sheet, about 2 inches apart. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until dry and crisp. Cool completely on wire rack.

If desired, melt chocolate according to package directions. Dip ends of biscotti in chocolate; place on waxed paper until set. Store tightly covered. Yield 3 dozen.

Recipe compliments of retschmer wheat germ.

MACADAMIA NUT BISCOTTI

- 1 cup (4 ounces macadamia nuts)
- 1 1/2 cups all purpose flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
- 6 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 1 large egg

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Toast the macadamia nuts until light brown, about 10 minutes. Let cool. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Coarsely grind half the nuts with the flour mixture in food processor.

Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg. Stir in vanilla extract and unground nuts. Add ground nut mixture.

On lightly floured board, divide dough in half. Roll each half to 12 inches long. Place on baking sheet lined with parchment paper. Bake until golden brown, about 30 minutes.

Decrease oven temperature to 300 degrees F. Slice partially baked logs into 3/4-inch slices on a diagonal. Place them cut side up on baking sheet. Bake until firm, about 15 minutes. Makes 24 biscotti.

Recipe from "Four-Star Desserts" by Emily Luchetti (HarperCollins Publishers, copyright 1996.

ALMOND BISCOTTI

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 3 to 3 1/2 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs
- 2 egg whites
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
- 1/2 to 1 cup chopped almonds

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. Melt butter and let cool. Sift together 3 cups flour with the baking powder, baking soda and salt.

Beat the eggs and egg whites until foamy. Add the sugar and continue beating until thick and creamy. Beat in the almond extract, then melted butter and the chopped almonds.

Stir the sifted flour mixture into the beaten eggs using a wooden spoon – the dough will become too stiff for a beater. Take half the dough and turn it out on a well-floured board. Sprinkle more flour on top and shape it into a smooth log about 1 1/2-inch in diameter and about 14-15 inches long.

Lift the log carefully onto large baking sheet that is oiled or lined with parchment paper. Form another log with the other half of dough and place it at least 4 inches away on the baking sheet. Flatten them just a little.

Bake the logs for about 25 minutes, or until they feel firm to the touch. Take them out, let cool for at least 10-15 minutes and turn oven temperature down to 275 degrees. F.

Using sharp knife, cut the logs into 1/2-inch slices. Arrange the slices upright on two baking sheets, with space between them for air circulation. Bake them for about 40 minutes. Reverse the position of the baking sheets midway to ensure that the biscotti bake evenly. Let cool. Makes about 48 biscotti.

Aromotherapy helps you feel good all over

BY DONNA MULCAHY
SPECIAL WRITER

What did people do to ease common ailments before drug stores were around?

Colleen Dodt of Rochester Hills wondered that and set out to find some answers. Her research led her to the ancient art of aromatherapy, which she's been studying for the past 18 years in America and abroad.

Aromatherapy centers on the belief that pure, natural, plant-derived scents can enhance the quality of – and even have healing effects on – the body, mind and spirit.

SHOPPING CENTERED

DONNA MULCAHY

"For years, when I told people that you can use aromas to heal, they looked at me like I was crazy. But now, aromatherapy is very popular. It's really caught on," Dodt said.

A popular author, she is also the owner of Herbal Endeavours Ltd., a home-based business that produces and distributes aromatherapy products, many of which are made by Dodt herself.

Many stores today sell potpourri, scented candles, plug-in aroma diffusers, fragrant massage oils and other such products that claim to have soothing or restorative powers. But if they contain synthetic fragrances, they can't fall under the category of aromatherapy, Dodt insisted.

Only essential oils, the distillates and extracts of certain flowers, herbs and citrus fruits, are used in aromatherapy, according to Dodt. Synthetic fragrances can try to mimic the scent of, but they can't mimic all of the properties of an essential oil.

In her book "The Essential Oils Book," published by Storey Communications last year, she writes: "When lavender is inhaled, for instance, serotonin is released from the raphe nucleus of the brain, producing a calming influence in the body . . . Chemical reproductions do not have the same biochemical effects as naturally occurring pure essential oils."

Dodt said because lavender has a relaxing effect, it can often help people who are suffering from stress or headaches. Citrus aromas are invigorating, and eucalyptus and coltsfoot herb oils can help clear up chest and nasal congestion.

Aromatherapy recipes usually call for essential oils to be diluted into almond oil or some other base. The diluted oil can then be spritzed onto a handkerchief, bed linens, a nose-gay or potpourri. Essential oils also can be diluted into skin care lotions, hair care products and bubble baths.

Essential oils can be expensive because it takes a great amount of plant material and time to produce a small amount. For example, it takes five-and-a-half tons of rose petals to produce one pound of rose oil, said Gloria Boyajian, owner of Aetheria, a shop on Woodward in Ferndale that specializes in aromatherapy products, dried flower wreaths, soaps, candles and other unique gift items.

Aromatherapy isn't just for grown-ups or humans.

Ageless Wisdom, a Plymouth store that specializes in botanicals and aromatherapy products, sells "Aromatherapy Bath for Non-Stop Children," a bath salt that is meant to help children relax. Aetheria sells it, too.

Aetheria also sells "good dogma" aromatic spritzers and soaps for dogs, and is the only distributor of them in the Midwest. In addition to acting as an all-natural perfume to cover up doggy-odor, the spritzers are meant to calm dogs down and sooth their skin.

Customers also can find aromatherapy products at T.K.'s Craft Village in Rochester. It carries some of Dodt's hand-made products, including "PMS Peace," an essential oil blend to help ease pre-menstrual syndrome.

Meet the expert

Dodt will be signing copies of "The Essential Oils Book," and her new book, "Natural Baby Care," published in March, at Barnes & Noble Books, Rochester Hills, May 10 at 2 p.m.

"She's a very popular author," said Mary Killeen, community relations manager for the book store. "She had a book signing here last year, when we first opened, and there was a long line of people waiting to see her."

Dodt can be reached at (810) 852-0796. She also has a Web site. Its address is http://www.living-library.com/dodt.

Fashion Group votes to admit male members

Folks in the fashion business around town benefit from a professional association that just voted to allow men to join the ranks. The 67-year-old Fashion Group International prepares to enter the new millennium.

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON
SPECIAL WRITER

Staying atop ever-changing fashion trends while promoting the professional development of women in the industry, is the cornerstone of Fashion Group International (FGI).

The non-profit organization established in 1930 boasts a list of charter members that includes Elizabeth Arden, Eleanor Roosevelt, Helena Rubinstein and Edith Head. Today FGI has over 6,000 members represented by 42 chapters across the United States and a dozen countries worldwide. A majority (77 percent) of them recently voted in favor of opening up membership to men.

"This was something some of the older members were not interested in doing but with everything the way it is in the industry today it was almost long overdue," said Patricia Rosen, regional director of the Detroit Chapter of FGI. She feels Dominic Pangborn, of Pangborn Design, Ltd., is likely to be the Detroit Chapter's first official male member.

"Dominic has been a loyal supporter of ours for a long time," said Rosen. "And I do think other men will be interested in being part of this organization too."

Locally, FGI has 150 members who represent all areas of the fashion industry including apparel, accessories, beauty, publishing and interior design. Rosen, of West Bloomfield, has been a member for nine years and is completing a two-year term as Midwest regional director. She manages the Burberrys store at the Somerset Collection South in Troy.

"The Somerset Collection was the biggest retail fashion story for us (FGI) in 1996," said Rosen. So much so that the group named Rebecca Maccardini, director of operations for the mall, their "Stylemaker of the Year."

The annual award is presented by FGI to someone who has made a difference in the industry, said Rosen.

FGI membership requirements include holding an executive position in the field for a minimum of three years. Candidates must also be recommended by a current FGI member.

Dues are $100 a year and the group hosts just one official meeting annually. But they meet every six to eight weeks to attend local fashion and retail events.

"It's an exciting way, if you're new in the area, to meet people that are doing the same things that you are and have similar interests," said Rosen. Invitations to upcoming events are mailed to members, but non-members may also attend certain functions.

Beyond group gatherings, FGI also works to show its support for the community. In 1987 they founded the Tavy Stone Research Fashion Library located inside the Detroit Historical Museum downtown. The facility is named in honor of the late Detroit News fashion and features writer.

"The library is solely funded by our group and represents our ongoing commitment to the future of the industry and our association through education," said Rosen. "It's a very, very, special place and quite unique."

FGI's devotion to the community also extends to local students via an annual scholarship program. This year, FGI will present six financial aid awards to students at Wayne State University, Madonna College and The Center for Creative Studies in downtown Detroit.

"There is no financial inquiry for this," said Rosen. "This is for somebody who stands out for their educational merit and creativity." FGI is joined in sponsoring the program by area retailers like Hudson's, Jacobson's and Burberrys.

Tina Treposki, FGI member and assistant fashion director at Saks Fifth Avenue, said she voted against allowing men into the organization, because of the all-female history.

"I liked the idea of having women-only in the group for connecting and networking purposes," she said. "I'm disappointed that it will change. But the organization offers so much – like the trip I took to Paris last year to see the Spring '97 shows – that it pays to be an active participant."

As the association gears up for the annual spring membership drive, Rosen anticipates lots of new faces and is happy to play a part in the historical induction of men into FGI.

"It's been very worthwhile for me," Rosen said. "I've met a lot of people in the industry. And I enjoy the fact that there are always changes and lots of challenges."

For more information about FGI membership, call Rosen at (810) 643-8555.

Goose lovers flock to trendy newsletter

Kim Belz with Bubba

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
EDITOR

You see them on porches everywhere.

They're usually very well-dressed, sporting looks of the changing seasons and holidays.

Cement geese have become the lawn ornament of the 90s and their popularity and charm is celebrated by a Northville television producer who created a newsletter about them to help fund her sons' college costs.

Kim Belz has watched her six-page "GAGGLE (General Association of Gleeful Goose Lovers Everywhere) Newsletter" pick up 600 subscribers in just a year. She sees it as a "lighthearted journal, a segment of Americana."

Inside each issue are patterns for sewing goose outfits, reader-contributed photos of cleverly costumed ganders, humorous stories about the phenomenon, and of course, ads for goose-related paraphernalia.

Subscribers pay $9.95 for four issues. Production and distribution is a Belz family affair.

Belz, 45, an Indiana University journalism and political science grad, came to Michigan in 1984 to produce the 6 O'Clock News at TV2. Her own beloved goose "Bubba" owns 20 different outfits.

"It's the daughter I never had, the Barbie Doll I'm too old to play with," she laughed. "Mostly women have these geese for the fun factor. When I got the idea for a newsletter about them, coworkers urged me on with warnings, "if you don't do it, you'll be sorry.

"I was also inspired by stories of others who published newsletters, like the lady who edits the "Tight Wad Gazette." Although I know my market is limited, it's really an experiment to see how far I can take a newsletter published from my home."

Subscribers are garnered from flyers in craft stores and art fairs. Belz said most new subscribers want the back issues too. You can visit the newsletter at a "webbed site" http://www.oeonline.com/gaggle.

New dolls for Raggedy Ann fans

M. T. Hunter country-home stores (Birmingham, Northville) have a new collection of Raggedy Ann dolls in stock. Fans recall that the doll was created in 1918 by comic book illustrator Johnny Gruelle, 28, and based on a old rag doll he found while visiting his parents.

He gave the doll to his daughter, Marcella, and her love for the doll inspired him to create one in her memory upon her tragic death at 13. Gruelle named the doll Raggedy Ann and penned a series of adventures. The doll and books were then-marketed by Volland Publishers of Chicago for 69-cents. Raggedy Andy was created in 1920. Today, serious collectors search the Internet for doll clubs and related merchandise. For more information call Matt or Martha Twomey, (810) 646-4440.

Where can I find?

What we've found:

• Several callers had the pyrex orange/lemon pitcher to sell, plus "Fran" said the item is still available through the Corning outlet shops at Birch Run and Monroe and "Cindy" of Canton said she saw some at Kohl's and Lechter's.

• An old pair of saddle shoes was found, but we need more for Joyce who is sewing dummies for a class reunion.

• Antique dealer Judy Trumbull offers her "filebox collection" of magazine articles on items people collect for perusal. "I'll make copies for 50-cents if shoppers want, or they can take notes for free." Her store is at 205 Pierce in Birmingham, (810) 646-1900.

We're still looking for:

• Videotapes of two Stephen Sondheim musicals Into The Woods and Sunday In The Park With George for Helen of Dearborn.

• A tube of Estee Lauder lipstick "Suncreme Red," for Trish Beyreis. "I loved it and now it's discontinued. I'm hoping somebody has a few tubes they've never used in their drawer someplace."

• A videotape copy of The Music Man for Dennis. He is also looking for old, collectible snow globes.

If you've seen any of these items in your travels, let Malls & Mainstreets know and we'll print the answers. Please call (810) 901-2567.

Dentistry in the 90s
by Herbert M. Gardner, D.D.S. & Martha P. Zinderman, R.N., D.D.S.
WISE MOVE
"Wisdom teeth" are the third molars which emerge as a set of four permanent teeth behind the upper and lower 12-year molars. They generally break through the gums between ages 17 and 21. Many dentists recommend they be extracted when they run into such problems as becoming impacted against adjoining molars or tightly bound (ankylosed) to the underlying bone. When extraction is planned, it is advisable to have nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs), such as ibuprofen, on hand. The reasoning behind this recommendation is that researchers have found that NSAIDs reduce the swelling associated with this type of oral surgery, as well as help patients heal faster. In some cases, NSAIDs are given before the surgery so that their bodies can better prepare to handle the swelling.
Don't delay your next dental checkup. Make sure you see us on a regular basis. A complete checkup and cleaning should be scheduled at least every six months. During these examinations we can check on issues such as wisdom teeth. For complete dental care, taking you into the new millennium, including "Twilight Sleep" intravenous sedation, come see us at LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, located at 19171 Merriman Road. Let us help you make the most of your smile. Call 478-2110 to schedule an appointment. Smiles are our business.

COP CALLS

Car window smashed

A 59-year-old Plymouth man told police he was working in his garage on Penniman shortly before 6:30 a.m. April 20 when he heard what sounded like someone knocking on his door. He opened his door to discover the right rear window of his 1997 red Cadillac smashed.

A witness said she heard a similar knocking noise while at her nearby residence. She looked out her window to see a white male wearing a white painter's cap, running in a westerly direction along Penniman. She then heard tires squealing.

The complainant found a pack of Marlboro Lite cigarettes in the middle of the street along the approximate path of the suspect. The pack was open, police said, and contained nine cigarettes. It didn't appear the pack had been there for any length of time, "as it was still in good condition." It was taken and placed in a police evidence locker.

A second pack of Marlboro Lites containing six cigarettes was found on the sidewalk in front of 1426 Penniman. It also was in good condition, and found along the suspect's approximate path, officers said.

The cigarettes were taken, tagged and placed in an envelope and put into the evidence locker.

A single tire peeling mark was found exiting the driveway near the victim's house. The tire mark headed westward from the driveway. It appears that the suspect had backed his escape vehicle into the driveway prior to the incident. There are no known suspects at this time.

Stalking reported

A 34-year-old Canton man told police he is being stalked by a 50-year-old female client from Pinckney.

According to the victim, for the past six months, he has been harassed by the former client both in person and on the phone. The woman has made numerous calls to the man's Canton and Plymouth offices.

She drops in without an appointment, telling the secretary she has an appointment. The secretary has tracked her boss down, only to find the woman was lying about the appointment. The woman has been asked to stop calling and coming to the office as it disrupts his business, however her behavior has continued, according to the police report.

The man also receives countless voice-mail messages from the woman, telling him how much she needs him and wants to be with him, even though she is married.

The victim says there has been no romantic involvment and no relationship at all with the woman, "other than when he sold a home for her in Novi" and later, a home in Pinckney in 1994.

The victim has spotted the suspect in his rearview mirror while driving in town. When she realizes he sees her, she drives off, police said. The man is concerned about the welfare of his children because on several occasions the suspect has referred to them as "our children."

The victim is concerned she may actually believe they are their children. The man has received no threats The man also filed a complaint with Canton police.

Senate OKs tip bill to benefit restaurant workers

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Restaurant servers wouldn't pay Michigan income tax on their first $10,000 of tips under a bill that recently won 34-4 approval in the state Senate.

Senators spent hours on April 16 deadlocking over Democratic amendments to raise exemptions for low-income workers even further. The bill is now in the House Tax Policy Committee.

"The best way to help the working poor and unemployed workers is through tax breaks that put more money in their wallets," said Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township. He offered many amendments that fell in 19-19 tie votes.

"We should not pit one class of workers against another by choosing winners and losers with tax breaks," said minority leader John Cherry, D-Clio, whose district includes northern Oakland County.

"I don't think that's fairness in taxation," said a joint statement from Sens. Jim Berryman, D-Adrian, and Alma Wheeler Smith, D-Salem. "Some of those (left out) are men and women who work in nursing homes. . . who get $5.25 or $5.50 per hour, and they're responsible for your grandparents or your parents."

Smith was the only area senator to vote no on final passage. All other area senators voted yes.

The bill's Republican sponsor, Sen. Dale Shugars of Kalamazoo, said, "It's important that this bill goes through without any amendments. We want to help the waiters and waitresses. We want to make it a fairness issue. We're not going to broaden this into a major tax cut.

"There's no other employee out there that the IRS targets" in requiring reporting of income, said Shugars.

The Democratic amendments were supported by all 16 Democrats and three Republicans – Loren Bennett of Canton, Jon Cisky of Saginaw and Joel Gougeon of Bay City.

Sen. Mike Rogers, R-Brighton, called the Democratic amendments "hollow, shallow and certainly short-sighted rhetoric. . . looking out for the next election as opposed to the next generation."

Rogers criticized Democrats for supporting a minimum wage hike that he said will "cost about 250 to 500 waitresses their jobs next year. We know that. That's a conservative estimate."

Sen. Bill Schuette, R-Midland, said Republicans prefer "broad-based tax cuts" rather than Democrats' "targeted" cuts, "which frankly don't fit the bill for every family in this state."

A Peters amendment would have set up a 25 percent earned-income credit.

Another Peters amendment would have exempted $500 of income for every elderly dependent of a taxpayer.

A Smith amendment would have set up a $10,000 per family income credit.

Phone line information delayed

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Ameritech will not have an immediate actual count of the number of billable telephone lines for the 911 service for western Wayne County, a vice president of Ameritech told members of the Conference of Western Wayne.

Wayne County residents are hit with a 48-cent user charge for 911 services. That money is collected by Ameritech, then turned over to communities for specific use in 911 services, such as dispatcher salaries and 911 equipment, according to CWW Executive Director Marsha Bianconi.

The 18 CWW communities receive about $187,000 annually for equipment, Bianconi said.

The CWW includes the cities of Belleville, Dearborn, Dearborn Heights, Garden City, Inkster, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth, Romulus, Wayne and Westland, and the townships of Canton, Huron, Northville, Plymouth, Redford, Sumpter and Van Buren.

Because that revenue translates into money for communities, CWW members want to know how many billable access lines exist in each community.

Ameritech appeared before the CWW in March to tell them they would reappear in April to inform them when that information is available.

But apparently that data isn't that easy to generate.

On April 18 Harry Semerjian, vice president of Ameritech, told the consortium of leaders from the 18 member communities of the CWW that the communities had 18 separate customer support systems.

Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey said he couldn't understand why the report was so difficult to complete, and added that it must be an "embarrassment" to Ameritech.

"I would acknowledge it is embarrassing," Semerjian said. "If only a single billing system, it would be a piece of cake."

He later said he was "chagrined that he couldn't give them information."

LSO conductor shares stage with talented daughter

Livonia Symphony Orchestra music director/conductor Volodymyr Schesiuk beamed with pride as guest artist Anna Sorohtej practiced the Brahms concerto on a Steinway baby grand in Kresge Hall at Madonna University in Livonia.

Sorohtej is Schesiuk's 24-year-old daughter, and will be peforming with the LSO at their season finale concert on May 2. Sorohtej arrived last week from Ukraine for a visit Schesiuk hopes will extend through fall.

Schesiuk was a prominent Ukrainian conductor in the former Soviet Union with a long list of credentials including a two year stint with the Bolshoi Theater in Moscow. He immigrated to the U.S. with his wife, and daughter Maria in 1991. Schesiuk hasn't seen his daughter Anna since he visited Ukraine for Anna's wedding 18 months ago.

"I hope we will have good audience. It will be a beautiful concert," said Schesiuk. "It's important to hear a young person perform from a country no one's heard about."

Sorohtej, who studied piano 11 years at the Special School for Gifted Children and five years at the Lviv State Conservatory, began performing at age nine. She now teaches piano at the Special School for Gifted Children, and performs regularly with the Lviv Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra.

Sorohtej was very impressed with the LSO during her first rehearsal with the orchestra Monday night. Schesiuk served as interpreter for Sorohtej, who speaks little English.

Over the last year, singers and dancers from the FAR Conservatory in Birmingham, and the students of Livonia Parents of the Visually Impaired, have spent hours learning their parts in preparation for the Very Special Arts Festival May 2-3 at Wonderland Mall in Livonia.

The seventh annual festival, presented by Very Special Arts Michigan Southeast regional committee, celebrates the power of the arts to triumph over disabilities by spotlighting the achievements of 122 children and adults with sight, hearing, mobility, and developmental and emotional impairments who have participated in VSA programs during the year. The nonprofit Very Special Arts Michigan Southeast funds grants for visual art, dance and music therapy programs.

"The audience is going to get a chance to participate and share a creative arts experience with others, and see the achievements of these special kids and adults who are learning and growing through the arts," said Connie Lott, festival chairman and executive director of FAR Conservatory of Therapeutic and Performing Arts in Birmingham.

Among the highlights on Friday's program are performances of vocal and instrumental music by Pontiac Public Schools students under the direction of musical therapist Margaret Hull of Birmingham. On Saturday, the Fine Chimes choir from Farmington take to the Center Court stage at 12:30 p.m., country line dancers sponsored by the Livonia Parents of the Visually Impaired at 1:20 p.m., Schoolcraft Players chime choir from Redford at 1:35 p.m., and tap, jazz and ballet dancers from FAR Conservatory in Birmingham at 2:15 p.m.

Livonia Parents of the Visually Impaired, a nonprofit organization enriching the lives of blind and visually impaired children in western Wayne County, received a $400 minigrant from Very Special Arts to fund country line lessons for their children this spring. The after school dance program proved so successful when introduced during a daily living skills program last summer, the Livonia parents decided to continue it through the regular school year. The children, ages six to 18, will dance "The Hustle" and "The Hitchhiker."

"It's great because it gets the kids out having fun not just under the pressure of learning their Braille and other academics," said Sharon Marsh, mother of 7-year- old Autumn, "and I think it's good exposure for the public to see these kids are just like sighted kids."

Dance teacher Dee Gallina of Northville approached the Livonia parents last summer with the idea of dance lessons even though she had no experience teaching the visually impaired. The initial obstacle Gallina encountered was to teach dancing without demonstrating the steps. She improvised a method based on the clock system.

"I blindfolded my husband and practiced on him. I observed things he did like turning off center, which helped me to teach the kids," said Gallina. "One of the biggest obstacles was how to verbally communicate that to them because they can't see. Sometimes I just have to rephrase it to specifically communicate the movement I want them to do."

Christine Karabatakis of Westland, a teacher for the visually impaired at Livonia's Hull Elementary, used hands-on teaching to show the children how far to move their arms up or down, and how to position their feet.

"The kids are excited about performing at the festival," said Karabatakis. "What at first seemed awkward while learning to dance, they eventually overcame to enjoy. Dancing gives them a love of music, a sense of rhythm and coordination. It's definitely a self-confidence booster."

The lessons came a little easier to Michele Sheridan, a 15-year-old Churchill High School student. Before she began losing her sight at

Writer brings a poet's voice to his fiction

BY HUGH GALLAGHER

Charles Baxter calls it the 600-pound gorilla. A book can succeed or fail based on what the gorilla does.

"If I got a pasting in the New York Times, my life would be a lot different today. It can be a terrible blow to be publicly humiliated in that way," Baxter said.

He needn't have worried. Francine Prose's long review of Baxter's new book "Believers" (Pantheon Books, $23) in the Sunday Times Book Review was ecstatic, calling Baxter one of those few writers that are so gifted they deserve to be more widely read, "At once inventive and meticulous, their work seems to glow with a steady light so unlike the distracting flashbulb of momentary fashion." And she concludes with, "This is a book we can enjoy with admiration untainted by rancor or envy – though writers may secretly wish they'd written it themselves."

Charles Baxter

Now the University of Michigan English professor will spend the month of May traveling the country to promote his book of seven short stories and a novella. He has previously published three books of poetry, two novels and three books of stories.

At 2 p.m. today Baxter will read from his works and sign books as part of the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association's "Sundays at the BBAA" at 1516 S. Cranbrook Road, Birmingham. Admission is free. For information, call (810) 644-0866.

In addition to his new book of fiction, Baxter has also published a collection of essays, "Burning Down the House," (Graywolf Press) and Vintage has released a new paperback edition of Baxter's first fiction collection, "Harmony of the World."

Sitting over the ubiquitous Ann Arbor cup of coffee at the Espresso Royalle Caffe near the UM campus, Baxter talked about his new book, the writer's life and the future of serious literature.

"I think worthwhile writing is in danger. I think poetry and serious fiction is always a minority art," Baxter said.

"We run up against the blockbuster ethos. A segment of society has contempt for you if you don't produce a blockbuster."

Baxter's stories are not "blockbusters." They are subtle, reflective studies of complex relationships written with the rhythm, cadence and precision of poetry. Baxter began his writing career as a poet.

"The kind of fiction I like most tends to be concentrated linguistically and stylistically," he said. "But I don't like showoff prose and style so self satisfied that all you're doing is watching.

"My past history as a poet is dimly visible."

Baxter said he gave up publishing poetry because "I wasn't as good at it as I wanted to be." But the poet's sense of economy and allowing a few words to capture many emotions is part of Baxter's gift.

His stories are set in the Midwest, occasionally in real places such as Ann Arbor and Ferndale and other times in

EXHIBITION

Artists express anger, healing, hope for the future

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

In more ways than one, the annual "Creative Expressions" exhibition of art works and writings by rape survivors, encourages healing.

The exhibition, which continues through May 18 at Urban Park-Detroit Art Center in Greektown, consists of works illustrating the devastating (and sometimes disabling) impact of rape. It is sponsored by the Southeast Michigan Anti-Rape Network consisting of First Step in Canton; Haven, Pontiac; Assault Crisis Center, Ypsilanti; Rape Counseling Center, Detroit; Turning Point, Mt. Clemens and LaCasa/SARA, Howell.

The painting, mixed media, assemblage, sculpture, and collage, created by rape survivors ranging in age from eight to 67, address sexual assault and domestic violence issues.

Exhibit coordinators Kent Baumkel and Karen Lang wanted to provide a safe forum for survivors to express their reactions and emotions, and bring these crimes to society's attention.

"Creating Safe Relationships" a collage of words and images by the Hartland Relationship Group, speaks of rape, domestic violence, stalking, and teen runaways.

"The words are a way for people to break the silence, because you're not supposed to talk about rape," said Baumkel, a former sexual assault counselor at First Step in Canton who was appointed coordinator of Ann Arbor Mayor Ingrid B. Sheldon's Task Force on Increasing Safety for Women last December. In this show, "the emphasis is not on artistic skill but self-expression," said Baumkel.

A 40-year-old survivor uses pastels to portray a stuffed bear holding a bottle of tranquilizers. The title, "Healing Tools," is self-explanatory. In triumph, a 13-year-old hand-paints a T-shirt with the words "I made it through." Another work consists of a broken mirror pieced together on the inside of a medicine chest.

"The exhibition has a lot of impact," said

Lang of the Rape Counseling Center, City of Detroit Police Department. "There's a lot of healing pieces. The survivors spoke out; it empowered them and enabled them to let go of their shame. Creating works of art can be therapy. In the sexual assault treatment programs, they're always doing art to help with the healing. A lot of therapists will say if it's too painful to talk — draw."

Barb Domina, director of sexual assault and child abuse treatment programs at Haven, which has offices in Pontiac, Southfield, Novi and Rochester, agrees with Lang. "Many individuals will express their pain and go through the healing process by utilizing art therapy," said Domina. "It helps them work through their issues."

"Creative Expresions"

What: The Southeast Michigan Anti-Rape Network presents its fourth annual exhibit of art works and writings by sexual assault survivors.

When: Through May 18. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday; until 8 p.m. Friday; noon to 8 p.m. Saturday; and noon to 7 p.m. Sunday.

Where: Urban Park-Detroit Art Center, on the second floor of Trapper's Alley, 508 Monroe in Detroit's Greektown. Call (313) 963-5445.

The Southeast Michigan Anti-Rape Network chooses to use the term "survivor" instead of the legal term "victim" to describe those who are sexually assaulted, or abused. A victim is someone who has survived an often life-threatening physical attack and is struggling courageously to rebuild their lives.

Survivors don't just "get over" a sexual assault, explains Baumkel. Recovery is a process that takes place over time.

For Cyndy Weeks, it's been 10 years since she survived a "stranger rape" and domestic violence situation which resulted in stalking. A graduate of Our Lady of Mercy High School in Farmington Hills, Weeks earned a bachelor of fine arts degree from Center for Creative Studies in Detroit and is a thesis away from a master's degree in art therapy from Wayne State University.

"Echo," an assemblage from Weeks' Memory Boxes series, speaks to flashbacks of memories she still suffers through in the course of daily life. An upside down face of a clock points to the realization that regardless of the passage of time, rape echoes and haunts.

"In the healing process, something will touch off a memory, the smallest event, a word or a song will bring it back to you when you least expect it," said Weeks.

"It's an important show. It's not professional artists for the most part, but art that comes from a true passion for expression. It's similar to where my own art comes from, of not being able to verbalize what I can show," said Weeks.

Julie Collins spent an entire day sanding her "Healing Box" to release the anger caused by a rape which occurred at age 16. Like Weeks, for years Collins hid the sexual assault by not telling those around her. Two years ago at age 20, Collins discovered the group and individual therapy programs available at First Step when she entered an art work in the exhibition.

"I feel like I've entered the last stage of healing. I painted the box with hope and filled it with love," said Collins. "All of the beads and found objects glued to the top of the box represents who I am."

This is the fourth year Urban Park Gallery is hosting the exhibit. From Very Special Arts shows by the disabled to a photography exhibit focused on the homeless, director Dave Roberts schedules art shows treading on the cutting edge.

"It's a way for the gallery to do an exhibition that provides a service to the community by heightening awareness of sexual assault," said Roberts.

April, nationwide, is Sexual Assault Awareness Month. First Step is conducting a green ribbon campaign to encourage a greater awareness of sexual assault. First Step is asking everyone to wear a green ribbon on their lapel, to tie a green ribbon on your vehicle, and to tell people why.

"Rape isn't about sex, it's about power and control," said Baumkel. "You can use sex to hurt somebody and it's a weapon, or you can use sex to love somebody."

age 9, Sheridan took dance classes and performed in recitals.

"Michele loves country music and dancing is fun for her," said Michele's mother, Bonnie Sheridan of Plymouth. "The dancing is another avenue to have fun. It gives the kids an opportunity to do more because so many times there are not a lot of activities for the visually impaired. We live in a sighted world."

The students have already put their dancing lessons to use. Like their sighted peers, students recently were able to join in and dance, instead of sitting on the sidelines at weddings, school dances and parties.

"Now Michele comes home and teaches the rest of the family," said Bonnie Sheridan. "Dancing makes her feel good about herself."

In addition to the live performances, the festival offers a free hands-on art activities area, and a VSA visual art exhibit fresh from a showing at the Jewish Community Center in West Bloomfield.

Master of ceremonies Ron Bachman is an inspiration. Born with a congenital deformity, Bachman had both of his legs amputated at age four. A documentary, about a day in the life of this single dad is scheduled to debut, at a location to be announced, in October. John Prusak, an instructor at William D. Ford Technical Center in Westland, directed the photography; Kathy Vander produced the film.

"I'm absolutely blown away by these kids who are doing this," said Bachman of Northville. "I think it's going to be an exciting couple of days. I think many people will go away saying, 'I don't have such a bad life. It's going to be a good day."

his fictional towns Five Oaks and Eurekaville.

"What I like to do for a story is create an ordinary setting with people that you and I would recognize, in a place like this, then something disastrous, bizarre – but inevitable – happens to these people in that place," he said.

"I'm also in a number of stories writing about Midwesterners who are coming to terms with the limits and possibilities in their lives."

Having said that, Baxter paused. He has been given that "regional writer" label, someone who writes about those quaint Midwesterners, according to East and West Coast critics.

He comes by his Midwest background honorably. He was born in 1947 in Minneapolis. His father died when he was 18 months old. His mother remarried and he was reared on a 40-acre estate in Excelsior, Minn.

He attended Macalester College in St. Paul. He taught briefly at SUNY-Buffalo and then Wayne State before coming to UM, where he is director of the MFA program and acting director of the prestigious Hopwood writing awards.

He lives in Ann Arbor with his wife, Martha, and 17-year-old son, Daniel.

Though he doesn't denigrate his background, he points out that no one ever calls Woody Allen a regional writer, though almost all of his stories and films are set in New York City.

"I've come to resent and loathe the idea of Midwest simplicity, it's really condescending."

He said his stories are about how people organize their lives and their belief systems. The stories happen primarily in the Midwest, though he has set stories in Europe, New York and other places.

In all of his stories, relationships are minutely dissected through subtle observations and pointed dialogue. And no relation runs smoothly.

"I'm a realist and usually there are shadows on relationships. Stories begin when things start to go wrong," he said.

His stories often deal with "faith." The title novella is directly about a priest who loses his faith after a disastrous trip to prewar Nazi Germany, as told by the priest's adoring son.

"This book is being described as a religious book and it was not my intention to do that. When I gave it this title, it was what do people believe about their own lives that keeps them interested in their lives," Baxter said.

The novella is especially interesting for its point of view. It is the father's story told many years later by his son; and the son imposes his views on his father, even though we are given clues that his view might not be totally correct. Baxter said he had never written a story quite like this before.

"It's a relationship that has left a shadow on the son. The son has been disabled by his father's life," he said. "I was drawn by a paradox that a father can be too good and that a father who is too good can disable a son."

Baxter's writing has been put on hold since last summer because of his work load at UM.

"When I was young I could teach and write. I'm going to be 50 next month and don't have that energy," he said, though he looks younger than his years with slightly graying blond hair, a neat goatee and a casual blue tweed jacket.

He said when he gets home he has no inclination to write.

"Writing comes out of repose and a calm quiet mind," he said.

Now he will be out on the road for a month, followed by a graduation trip to Europe for his son. Baxter plans to return to writing by the middle of summer.

orchestra," said Sorohtej. "It will be interesting playing for an American audience."

Applause Please

Schesiuk is especially grateful to Madonna University president Sister Mary Francilene for the support she's given Sorohtej. Sister Francilene was instrumental in bringing Sorohtej to the U.S. to perform. Sister Francilene, a member of the LSO board of directors, and other LSO board members wrote a letter inviting Sorohtej to perform not only with the orchestra on May 2, but also at Madonna University later this summer.

Sister Francilene also saw to it that the Steinway piano was available for Sorohtej to practice. After all, the young Ukrainian pianist is a visiting artist at Madonna University.

"Hearing Anna play is certainly a good experience for our piano students," said Sister Francilene. "Madonna University is very much into global education. This is one more way we can exchange cultures and learn about the techniques Anna learned in Ukraine."

Stay tuned for the date of Sorohtej's concert at Madonna University, but in the meantime, don't miss her performance with the LSO 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 2, at Churchill High School, 8900 Newburgh north of Joy Road in Livonia.

In addition to the Brahms' concerto Sorohtej will perform with the orchestra, the program includes Beethoven's "Lenore Overture No. 3," Bizet's "L'arlesienne Suite No. 2," and Bach's "Passacaglia & Fugue in c minor." Instead of the usual four French horns, Schesiuk will use eight, and five flutes instead of the regular two.

"Bach's Passacaglia is art for art, not just music for nice theme," said Schesiuk. "It's a composer's conversation with people, very philosophical, not only talking to people but to God (and discussing) what is this life,"

Tickets are $10 per person. Call the LSO ticket office for more information, (313) 421-1111, or Lee Alanskas, (313) 464-2741. Tickets will also be available at the door on the night of the performance.

An Afterglow to meet Sorohtej, Schesiuk, and the rest of the LSO musicians, will be held after the concert, at the Water Club Grille, 39500 Ann Arbor Road, (east of I-275). The cost is $10.

Chorus wends its way West

Ordinarily, the Livonia Civic Chorus are a pretty mild mannered bunch of folks performing at various community functions, shopping malls, and Greenmead Historical Village, but at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, May 2-3 they intend to raise a ruckus by presenting their spring musical, "How the West Was Sung" at the Clarenceville High School Auditorium, 20155 Middlebelt Road, Livonia.

Tickets for adults are $6 in advance, $8 at the door, seniors/students $3 in advance, $4 at the door, and available through Livonia Parks & Recreation, or by calling (810) 478-3728.

The musical, written especially for the chorus, is a western comedy featuring many familiar tunes like "Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin," "The Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe," and "Ol man River." The story revolves around an old western town called Chisholm City, an old retired saloon singer named Lulu Bufont and her run-in with the Women's Temperance Union.

The 65 member chorus received rave reviews on last year's spring show entitled "Island Magic," and played to sell-out crowds both nights. Director Jim Whitten attributes the success of the chorus to "lots of hard work and enthusiasm." The members of the chorus come from various communities and musical backgrounds, but they all have a common bond, their sincere love for music.

Proceeds from the Livonia Civic Chorus' spring and Christmas shows go toward Interlochen Summer Music Camp scholarships awarded to Livonia high school students each year.

Horowitz to perform concert

Renowned pianist Fedora Horowitz and Detroit Symphony Orchestra cellist Marcy Chanteaux will give a concert to benefit the Gibson School for the Gifted in Redford Sunday, May 4. The concert will follow a High Tea at 3 p.m. in the school at 12925 Fenton Road.

Tickets are $50 per person. Seating is limited. For reservations call the Gibson School at (313) 537-8688.

This is Horowitz' last performance in the Detroit area before she moves to Israel for three years.

Horowitz established a firm reputation as a highly regarded and gifted pianist in Romania and Israel before immigrating to the U.S. in 1969. Since her arrival in the states, she has performed in recital at such acclaimed places as New York's Lincoln Center, and the Brahms and Bartok Festivals of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

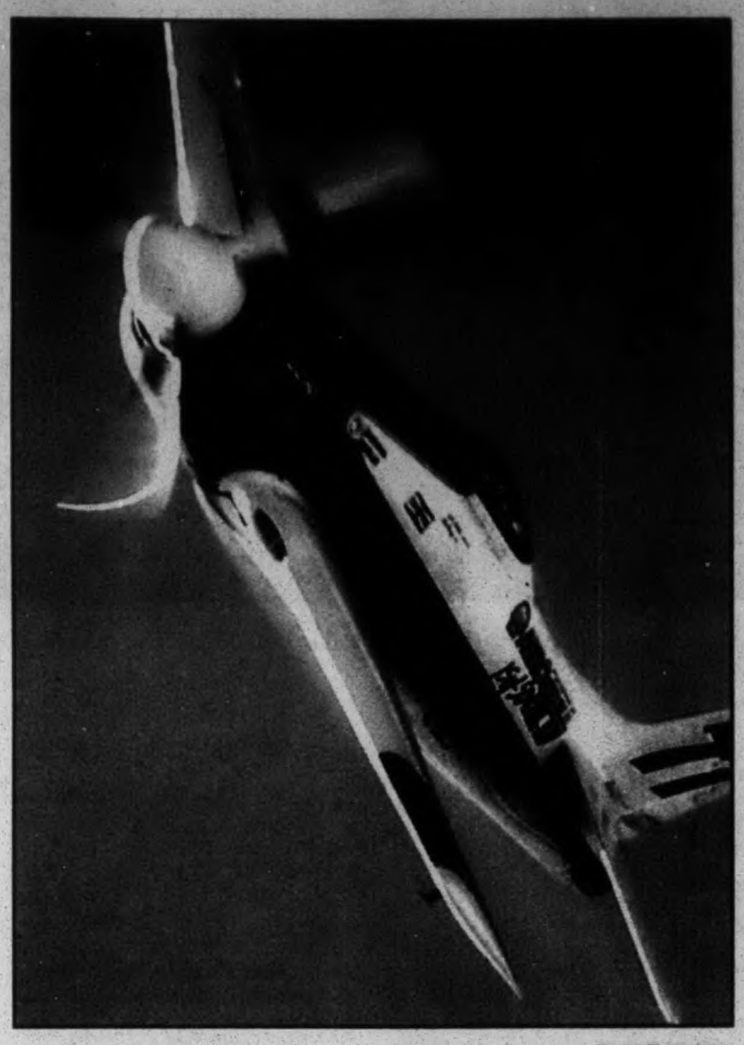
BOOKS

Area pilot-photographer captures air racing drama

"Speedsters: Today's Air Racers in Action," by Philp Handelman (Motorbooks International, $21.95, 112 pp.)

BY RANDY BORST
STAFF WRITER



PHILIP HANDLEMAN

Acrobatic Plane: A Grumman Bearcat flashes past a pylon and into Philip Handelman's viewfinder at Reno, Nevada in 1995. This aircraft completed the race with an average speed of 443 miles per hour.

The first time I heard, saw and felt a World War II era P-51 Mustang perform a low-altitude, high-speed pass, I realized just how powerful a piston-powered aircraft can be. Living in an era of space travel, we sometimes think of airplanes with propellers as low-performance castoffs from a by-gone era. In his book, "Speedsters: Today's Air Racers in Action," Birmingham resident, author, pilot and photographer Philip Handleman asks us to think again.

The P-51 and other propeller-driven aircraft from the 1940s and '50s have been resurrected to fly once more as racing machines in the high deserts of the western United States.

A high-speed, high-risk sport, air racing got its start in the early part of this century – not long after the Wrights made their first flight. Detroit and Cleveland were two of the centers of racing during the 1920s and '30s. Despite interruptions from wars, air racing survives today in the deserts surrounding Reno, Nevada, and Phoenix, Arizona.

Using 170 color photographs covering 112 pages, Handleman shows us what's out there on today's air racing circuit. This is primarily a photographic book of the subject – not a scholarly treatment of the history or techniques of air racing. However, the book does include a brief but thorough account of air racing's beginnings to the present day.

The real strength is the quality and variety of photographs. Great photos combined with skillful photo editing make "Speedsters" a joy to look at. Trying to get well-composed, sharply focused photos of machines hurtling through the sky at nearly 400 miles per hour is not an easy thing to do, but Handleman is clearly up to the task. A licensed pilot for 25 years, he brings to his photos a pilot's eye of seeing an airplane in flight – the angles, lighting and attitude of the planes – all convey the sense of power and majesty associated with this fast-paced sport. Handleman shot all the photos that appear in the book.

If 40-year-old aircraft aren't for you, Speedsters still has a lot to offer. Handleman's photographic subjects touch on all the various classes of air racing. Chapters are devoted to the International Formula One Class, which is made up of very small, fast, modern midget aircraft with a speed range around 200 mph, the Sport Biplane Class and a chapter devoted to racing helicopters. The last chapter is a collection of close-ups of nose art – those artistic idiosyncrasies that find their way onto the engine cowlings of airplanes.

"Speedsters" isn't just a photographic collection of airplanes in flight. Handleman knows that what happens on the ground prior to a race is just as important as the race itself. Many photos are devoted to the activities of the mechanics and ground crews. These are artfully interspersed with the in-flight photographs.

Highly detailed and sharp as a tack, these shots prove to be just as interesting as the in-flight photos. Good closeups of the aircraft's power plants and paint schemes make this book an excellent reference work for fans of the sport as well as those who build scale models of these aircraft.

Each photo is accompanied by a caption explaining what it is you're looking at, when and where the photo was taken and the names of the people in the picture. This level of detail conveys a sense of Handleman's journalistic style in covering his subject. An author's note at the beginning of the book reminds the reader that these are candid photographs – not staged. That's a refreshing change in the world of today's point-and-shoot staged photography.

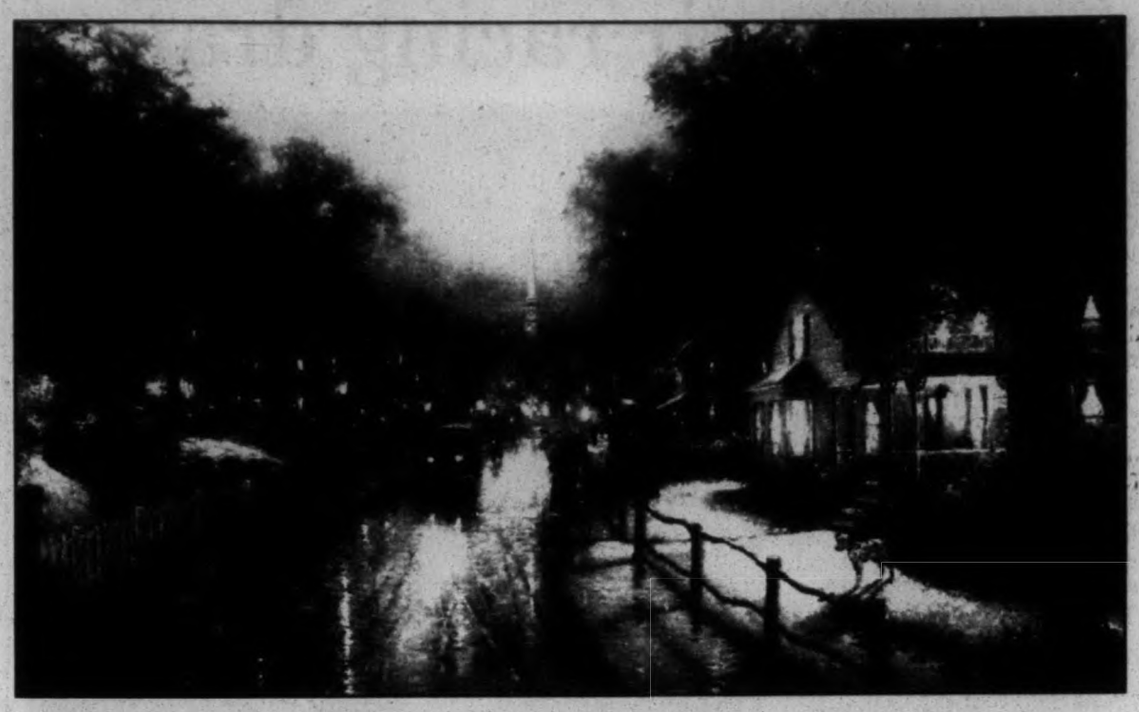
For information: call (810) 594-7600.



Hometown Memories: Thomas Kinkade's idyllic landscapes inspire sense of community.

Contemporary art is often defined by the aesthetic and social boundaries it pushes. The mainstream artistry of Thomas Kinkade, however, is defined by the familiar boundaries it draws around itself.

For those who seek to be provoked, prodded and challenged by contemporary painting, please look away. Or be prepared to "feel good." Clearly, Kinkade's lush imagery appeals to those looking for a blissful escape from routine, gloom and pessimism.

The main practitioner of uplifting American painting travels from Main Street U.S.A. to downtown Birmingham on Saturday when the California-based artist visits the Avenue Gallery for its grand opening celebration.

Expected at the artist reception are Gov. John Engler and State Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham. Kinkade will present his recent painting, "Flags Over the Capitol," to two politicians who were drawn to his idealistic landscapes because they reflect strong American values, according to Jim Cote, who owns the gallery with his wife, Barbara.

A lecture and signing will follow the presentation. Proceeds from the event will benefit Beaumont Hospital's Children's Miracle Network, a nonprofit that raises funds for children's programs and services at 163 hospitals in the United States and Canada. Avenue Gallery will also donate Kinkade's painting, "Bridge of Faith," to Beaumont Hospital.

Creating common art

Avenue Gallery is one of 15 new spaces – and the only one in the Midwest – to exclusively show Kinkade's work. Worldwide, more than 5,000 galleries represent the 39-year-old artist, who began his professional career creating background paintings for the 1980 animated feature film, "Fire and Ice."

The one-artist gallery concept has prospered in central and southern California. The Cotes, residents of Bloomfield Hills, modeled their cozy space after other Kinkade "signature galleries," complete with fireplace and walnut paneling.

Along the crowded walls and display cases at Avenue Gallery are more than 100 different paintings, lithographs and memorabilia, from note cards to frames to sculpted ornaments. That type of large inventory, critics claim, can make a gallery appear more like a high-end retail gift shop. In fact, QVC, a leading electronic retailer, markets Kinkade art through its cable-Internet distribution channels.

The Cotes hardly appeared bothered by any criticism that Kinkade's paintings are conservative, mass marketed and fail to meet some standards of high art. "He makes art available to the common man," said Jim Cote. "Thom (Kinkade) says he's doesn't paint realistic, but that he's idealistic. He says he presents the world as he wants it to be."

From that perspective, it's difficult to look away from Kinkade's masterful technique and ability to illuminate a canvas. To many ardent admirers, Kinkade is the modern-day Norman Rockwell. While his paintings lack the implied narrative of Rockwell's work, they capture the spiritual realm of American aspirations.

A blithe and prolific painter with an aesthetic rooted in Currier and Ives and Biblical serenity, Kinkade's Americana is untethered from industry, electronics and decay. A stark contrast from popular renderings of a fast-paced, high-tech world growing out of control.

Unabashedly, those who collect Kinkade's work are captivated by his mastery of light as much as the joyous, uplifting message. In the typical art world of angst, abstraction and innovation, Kinkade's realistic homespun canvases of bustling city streets, cozy cottages and country churchyards offer the antithesis of many of today's highly subjective representational paintings.

"One visitor said, 'You don't have to figure out if it's a painting or if the cat dragged her tail through the paint and across a canvas,'" said Barbara Cote.

"Art galleries don't have to be intimidating places," said Jim Cote, an attorney who left a position in real estate development for a major corporation to open the gallery. "The gallery is like an Open House," he said. "People stop by, some you know, some you don't. They can just sit here and enjoy the art."

Ironically, Kinkade's appeal to a simpler life makes use of today's mass-marketing techniques. Some may say that makes him an American success symbol that transcends art. Essentially, Kinkade's conservative romantic idealism is aimed at the masses – it's immediately accessible and inherently optimistic.

"Some people say they can take a five-minute vacation by staring at his work," said Jim Cote.

If popularity, sales and exposure are the criterion, Kinkade rates among the most successful of the century. In 1995, Kinkade along with Rockwell were honored as charter inductees into the Bradford International Hall of Fame. Last year, Kinkade's products retailed for more than $100 million. His original painting, "Hometown Memories," sold for $125,000. And this Christmas season, Hallmark is planning a major promotional campaign featuring Kinkade's art

Some tips for parents when children fly alone

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some tips from the Department of Transportation and National Child Safety Council for parents with children flying alone:

■ Tell the reservation and ticketing agents that your child will be traveling unaccompanied.

• Try to make a reservation on a nonstop flight or a flight that does not require a change of planes.

■ If you child has never flown before, take a trip to the airport and familiarize your child with airport personnel and the areas where he can get assistance and ask questions.

■ Be certain that your child carries identification and cash for emergencies. Have change for telephone calls. Remember, flights can be delayed, missed or re-routed.

■ Tell your child never to leave the airport alone or with a stranger. If immediate assistance is needed, an unaccompanied child should go to a uniformed personnel or to the front of the airline ticket counter. Tell your child not to wait in line in an emergency.

Family makes an independent trip through Israel

STAFF WRITER

At midnight on Friday in Tel Aviv, the teenagers head for the movie theaters. They walk or take the buses with their friends without fear of being mugged, caught in a drive-by shooting or hassled by drug dealers.

This is in sharp contrast to the usual image of the Israeli city as a place strangled by fear of terrorist attack.

But this was the Tel Aviv experienced by West Bloomfield's Bonnie Fishman and her family when they traveled there March 27, just a week after a suicide bombing.

Fishman, owner of Bonnie's Patisserie in Southfield, found a country that was politically aware but not gripped by fear.

"There's not much violent crime there. There isn't this random stuff," Fishman said.

Following the bombing, Fishman called her cousin who lives in Israel, Beth Fishman Orshalimy, and was assured that these acts are rare. So Fishman and her family (husband, Dr. Robert Ketai; son, Ben, 14; and daughter, Hanna, 9) continued with their plans.

Fishman's cousin grew up in the United States but has lived in Israel for 24 years.

"We were roommates at Michigan, and she came back her junior year and said 'I'm moving there,'" Fishman said.

Orshalimy and her family visit the United States every three years, and Fishman decided it was time to travel in the other direction. She had been to Israel with her father and sister 11 years ago and had an idea about things she wanted her family to see. She was also not interested in going with a tour. She said her family doesn't do well on rigid, fixed schedules.

"Before we went, nine out of 10 people asked what tour I was taking. When you tell them you aren't going on a tour, they think you're crazy," she said.

But careful research and planning make it possible to tour even such a volatile place as Israel. Fishman said she talked with people who had been there and with a travel agent.

High on the list of "must sees" for the family was the Old City of Jerusalem.

"It's the heart and soul of the city for all religions," said Fishman, who attends Temple Israel.

In the Old City is the most holy site for Jews, the Western or Wailing Wall.

"We went on Shabbat (the Sabbath). Men and women can't pray in the same area. You're not allowed to do anything on Shabbat – write, listen to music – one man's cell phone went off and a policeman tracked him down and told him to shut it off.

"But everyone is invited to write a message to God. The walls cracks are jammed with paper from all over the world. It's pretty overwhelming. And the blocks are huge, much bigger than you think from looking at pictures."

For a trip to Masada and the Dead Sea, the family hired a personal guide.

"I was nervous driving that far," Fishman said. "All guides are certified by the government. They know everything about the country; they're historians. And they know where it's safe and where it isn't."

For two days, the family stayed at a kibbutz resort. These resorts are outside the kibbutz, a communal farm, and are staffed by kibbutz residents. Fishman said the communal lifestyle continues to be popular and regularly draws young people, especially Americans, who work on a kibbutz for short periods of time.

The kibbutz resort has palm trees and a setting reminiscent of Florida, not at all the popular barren image most people have of the Middle East.

"For a small country there is a lot of contrast in the terrain: flat, sandy desert, rolling hills, beautiful beaches, beautiful hills and mountains with cultivated farms. The climate also changes," Fishman said.

The cities also offer a sharp contrast. Jerusalem is ancient, historically and religiously important. It is a place holy to three great monotheistic religions – Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

Tel Aviv is a modern, seaside city about an hour's drive away.

"There is a huge difference between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem," Fishman said. "The more religious live in Jerusalem, the more lax in Tel Aviv. Jerusalem is hillier, Tel Aviv is closer to the Mediterranean. Jerusalem has a lot more vistas and is more crowded. Tel Aviv was built for cars."

As a professional chef and baker, Fishman was especially interested in the open-air markets, where fresh produce, meat and fish are brought in all year long. She said a highlight was eating at the home of the parents of her cousin's husband, who had emigrated from Iran to Israel and prepare Persian dishes.

The food served in Israel is not what is usually thought of as "Jewish" food in the United States. Fishman said that is really East European cuisine.

"They eat a blend, a lot of Arabic food. I hardly ate any meat there. I ate a lot of fruits and vegetables. You hardly saw any heavy-set people," she said.

Of course, American businesses have made their in-roads. Fishman said a controversy arose over McDonald's serving cheeseburgers (it is against kosher law to serve dairy products and meat together). But tourists can also find many good kosher restaurants and many excellent Arab restaurants, the only ones open on Shabbat.

Fishman said that for her husband and most visitors to Israel, the most important thing is seeing the historical and Biblical sites.

For Christians, Muslims and Jews, Israel continues to draw pilgrims no matter the perceived dangers.

Holy sites: The Western or Wailing Wall of Jerusalem is holy to Jews who gather to pray and petition for God's help. Behind the wall is the Dome of the Rock, a mosque and one of three most holy sites for Muslims.

Market at Acco: Outdoor markets such as this in the Israeli Arab town of Acco are a common sight throughout the country where fresh produce is an important part of the diet.

Salem dominates Falcons

When running a track meet, defense isn't usually a consideration.

Perhaps that's not quite the same at Plymouth Salem, where they apparently surrender points grudgingly. Case in point: last Thursday dual meet against visiting Farmington.

The Rocks didn't satisfy themselves with just dominating the first-place finishes (they won 14 of 16 events). No, that wasn't enough.

They gave up just 19 points, while scoring 109.

In other words, they competed for every point.

Rachel Jones and Lisa Maul each won two individual events for the Rocks, who are now 3-0 overall in dual meets and 2-0 in Western Lakes Activities Association Lakes Division duals.

Jones won the 100-meter (13.01) and 200-meter (27.1) dashes; Maul's firsts came in the 100 hurdles (15.9) and 300 hurdles (49.4).

Among Salem's other wins, one of the most impressive was in the discus, in which all three Rocks surpassed the 100-foot distance. The winner was Tiffany Grubaugh, with a personal-best 112-feet, 8-inches; Angie Smith also threw 107-9 and Sarah Vida went 101-4.

Other Salem wins in field events went to Angie Sillmon in the long jump (15-11); Kristin Kosik in the high jump (5-0); and Jessica Ash in the shot put (36-7).

In other track events, Rocks' winners were Katie Bonner in the 400 (1:00.1); Evelyn Rahhal in the 1,600 (5:45.1); and Nicole Bolton in the 3,200 (11:55.1).

Sillmon, Aleshka Marquez, Jones and Candace Lynett won the 400 relay for Salem (52.6); Bonner, Joan Marquez, Ruth Viforeanu and Sarah Vida won the 800 relay (1:53.4); and Bonner, Kristie Giddings, Joan Marquez and Viforneau topped the field in the 1,600 relay (4:17.5).

The win keeps Salem in the running for the WLAA championship, together with Livonia Stevenson and defending champ Plymouth Canton.

Canton 101, Franklin 27: Livonia Franklin did win four events in Thursday's dual meet against visiting Plymouth Canton. But the Patriots didn't do much of anything else.

The Chiefs won 12 events, including all four relays, in improving their dual-meet record to 3-0 in the WLAA and 2-0 in the Western Division.

Great toss: Salem's Sara Vida let loose with a personal-best throw of over 100 feet in the discus, and it wasn't just a milestone for her. She was one of three Rocks on this day to surpass 100 feet.

OBSERVER SPORTS SCENE

Making the grade

When University of Michigan's softball team lost pitcher Sara Griffin with a broken arm, opponents may have thought, "Hey, this is our chance."

After all, pitching carries an immense amount of the responsibility in this game.

If, by chance, opponents did think that, they were mistaken to do so. Because they weren't giving Kelly Holmes her due.

A senior from Plymouth Canton HS, Holmes has proven herself in the past — and now, she's doing it again.

Since taking over as the team's No. 1 hurler April 5, Holmes has been superb. The Wolverines have gone 10-4, including a 7-3 mark in Big Ten play.

Last week (April 15-20), the Wolverines were 6-1 overall and 5-1 in the Big Ten, and Holmes was on the mound in all seven games, including six starts. Her performance earned her Big Ten Pitcher of the Week honors.

For the week, Holmes worked 40 innings, allowing just four runs (one earned) for a 0.18 earned run average. She was the winning pitcher in each of her six starts, raising her season record to a career-best 18-5 going into Tuesday's games against Michigan State. Two of her wins were 1-0 shutouts, giving her five this season.

Holmes has 23 career shutouts; her ERA for the season is 1.10, and she is 9-0 in her last nine starts. Her 61-24 career record is fourth best on the all-time U-M listing.

Entering last Tuesday's double-header with MSU, U-M was in third place in the Big Ten at 10-4. MSU was second at 13-2.

More college news

•University of Michigan's women's track team made their trip to the Michigan State Invitational a successful one April 19. The Wolverines had four individual first-place finishes and three seconds.

One of the wins was from Ndu Okwumabua, a junior from Plymouth Canton HS who finished first in the triple jump with a leap of 36-feet, 11 1/2-inches. It was the second-best effort of the season among the Wolverines.

One of the three second-place finishes went to sophomore Olive Ikeh (Plymouth Canton), who was runner-up in the 400-meter hurdles (1:03.87). Ikeh has clocked U-M's best time in the event this season (1:02.69), and she has the second-best time in the 100 hurdles (15.5).

•University of Detroit Mercy's baseball team improved to 10-6 in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference after taking 3-of-4 games from Wright State last weekend (April 19-20).

The Titans improved to 17-16 overall.

In last Saturday's first game, UDM rallied for four runs in the bottom of the seventh to edge WSU 4-2. The game-winning rally started with three-straight singles, one by Plymouth Salem grad Ed Gundry, a senior third baseman.

With the bases loaded, WSU brought in closer Mark Squire to pitch — and his first pitch, to senior first baseman Dean Rovinelli (Plymouth Canton), was a winner. Rovinelli drove the pitch over the right field fence for a game-winning, grand-slam home run.

Gundry hit his 10th homer of the season in Saturday's second game, but the Titans lost 10-7. They won both of Sunday's games, however, 3-2 and 13-10.

•University of Detroit Mercy's Jeff Keith, a junior from Plymouth Canton, posted the second-fastest time in school history in finishing sixth in the 3,000-meter steeplechase at the Michigan State University Open April 19.

Keith was clocked at 9:46.4. Said UDM coach Guy Murray: "That was a very nice breakthrough for Jeff. He lowered his best by 20 seconds, and I think he has another 10-15 seconds in him. This is the type of performance to improve our outlook for the MCCs."

•Jason Grimm, a senior member of Hope College's tennis team from Plymouth Salem, improved his record at No. 6 singles to 7-7 and his No. 2 doubles mark to 12-5 as the Flying Dutchmen won their first two matches in Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association play.

Hope is 13-8 overall. The Dutch defeated Calvin and Albion by identical 8-1 scores.

A World Scholar-Athlete

David Koshizawa, a senior at Plymouth Canton HS, has been accepted to participate in the World Scholar-Athlete Games June 22-July 2 at the University of Rhode Island.

The games will feature competition in seven sports and six cultural activities for student-athletes 16-19 years old. This is the second World Scholar-Athlete Games; the first, in 1993, attracted 1,600 people from 108 countries and all 50 states.

Sporting events to be competed are basketball, sailing, soccer, swimming, doubles tennis, track and volleyball; others will participate in art, choir, dance, symphony, theater and writing/poetry.

A team captain and an honor student at Canton, Koshizawa will compete in track and field.

Anyone interested in submitting items to Sports Scene may send them to sports editor C.J. Risak, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI, 48150, or may FAX them to (313) 591-7279.

Collins, Murinas lead Rocks to an 8th-place finish

GOLF

In what could be seen as a preview to next month's Class A regional, 23 teams converged upon Oak Pointe Golf Club in Brighton for the Brighton Invitational Friday.

Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton were among them. The result was pretty good, at least for Salem.

The Rocks finished eighth and had their two top scorers, Katie Collins and Katie Murinas, both medal. Collins finished fifth, shooting an 82 over the 5,400-yard course; Murinas shot 84, placing eighth.

"This is where the regional will be, so we want to play in it for that," said Salem coach Rick Wilson. "I think this was representative of the state finals — a lot of these teams will be in at the state tournament."

As for his own team, Wilson said, "I was real pleased with a top-10 finish. A week ago, I was happy when we trimmed 50 strokes off our score from the previous year at the Ann Arbor Invitational.

"We went from a 14th last year here and a 436 to a 384, so I guess it was no fluke last week when we trimmed 50 strokes."

Salem's 384 included Collins, Murinas, Jessica Hedges at 106 and Chrystal Kopacz at 112. Others who competed for the Rocks were Julie Licata, 114, and Angela Jones, 115.

Still winning

Offense offsets Chiefs' errors afield

It may have looked like a breeze, but it wasn't.

Plymouth Canton defeated Walled Lake Western, 12-5, Thursday in girls softball with a 15-hit attack. But it was anything but easy even though the Chiefs jumped out to a 4-1 lead in the first and were ahead, 8-3, after three.

"We started out mentally not really prepared," Canton Coach Jim Arnold said. "After awhile we started catching on, playing good softball."

The Chiefs committed six errors. But the Warriors made five.

"Most of our errors were in the beginning of the game," Arnold said. "We set this year's record of 15 hits in a game. We've been hitting the ball real well. Eight of the nine starters had hits."

Canton also put a four-spot up in the sixth while Western scored two in each of the third and fourth innings.

Sarah Carson went the first four innings to get the win, allowing half of Walled Lake Western's eight hits and striking out one. Gretchen Hudson relieved and got the save, striking out three and issuing the lone walk allowed by either hurler in the game.

Tara Biro went 3-for-5 with a pair of RBI for the Chiefs while Jenny Sikora batted four times and got three hits. Amber LaGrow went 2-for-4.

Sarah Freels went 3-for-4 but she drove in five runs, including three with a bases-loaded doubled in the first. She was thrown out at third trying to stretch the hit into a triple.

Canton is now 8-1 following the Western Lakes Activities Association crossover game.

Canton played Saturday in the Chelsea tournament (see Thursday's Observer for details) along with Northville, Riverview Gabriel Richard, Trenton and the host team.

Marian 2-5, Ladywood 1-3: Suicide squeezes will kill you. If you don't execute them, they'll execute you.

The winning run in the Thursday's first game defeat scored on an error. The host Blazers were unable to bunt the tying run in from third base with nobody out in the sixth.

Ladywood had three of its best hitters up and botched two bunts plus a suicide squeeze, stranding the tying run on third.

Cathy Hermann tossed a five-hitter and struck out seven but still wound up the losing pitcher.

Jessica Roman had a triple for the Blazers; shortstop Sara Theismeyer had an RBI triple plus a base hit.

The second-game loss was pinned on Melanie Grewe, who struck out four and allowed five hits.

Grewe also had a base hit, Roman had two base hits and Theismeyer smacked a two-run triple.

But Ladywood still dropped to 8-5 overall with its fifth loss in six Catholic League Central Division games.

North ace baffles Salem

BASEBALL

It was a vintage Jeff Trzos pitching performance Thursday.

The junior left-handed produced the kind of results people have come to expect of the 6-foot-5 fireballer.

Trzos nearly pitched a perfect game as North Farmington whipped host Plymouth Salem in a Lakes Division baseball game, 10-3.

He limited the Rocks to one hit and posted 17 strikeouts over seven innings to put his personal record at 2-1.

Trzos was working on a perfect game until the bottom of the sixth inning when he allowed the only walks (four) he issued and Ryan Rumberger had Salem's only hit.

The Rocks put three runs across in that inning (none earned), but the Raiders had given Trzos a 10-0 lead with five runs in the top of the sixth.

"His curveball was working, his changeup and everything else," North coach Irv Horwitz said. "He was really on; he just dominated the game. He sure had a good one today."

Trzos also struck out 17 a year ago during a 4-2 victory over Westland John Glenn in which he allowed six hits, walked one and hit one batter.

Junior Kirk Taylor, who pitched a three-hitter Wednesday in a 9-6 win over Farmington Harrison, led a 14-hit attack by going 3-for-5 with four RBI.

Taylor hit a three-run homer, drove in another run with a double and scored two runs himself.

Senior Dave Gosselin, senior Jeff Seaman and junior Mike Gleeson had two hits apiece. Gosselin had two RBI, and the others one each. Gleeson also scored three runs

Kurt Berlin was the first of five Salem pitchers. He went five innings and took the loss.

With the game still in doubt, senior Tom Ouellette had a key bunt sacrifice bunt that led to North's second run on a single by Gleeson, according to Horwitz.

"We had a great game today and it was exciting," he said. "We had great pitching and some key hits."

Salem dipped to 6-4 overall, 3-3 in the WLAA and 1-3 in the Lakes Division. The Raiders are currently 2-1 in the division and 5-4 overall. They will play a doubleheader with Walled Lake Central at North on Friday, May 9.

W.L. Western 7, Canton 2: Visiting Plymouth Canton couldn't handle Walled Lake Western's Kevin Thomas on Thursday.

Thomas struck out nine Chiefs and gave up only three hit as the Warriors improved to 11-1 overall and 4-0 in the WLAA's Western Division.

Canton dropped to 4-6 overall and 1-3 in the division.

PCA 12, Oakland Christian 1: Plymouth Christian Academy routed Pontiac Oakland Christian despite the Lancers being in the league's superior division.

Oakland, in the Michigan independent Athletic Conference's Red Division, couldn't slow down the offense of the Eagles.

PCA, which is 1-0 in the MIAC's "lower" Blue Division, improved to 8-3 overall with its sixth consecutive win.

The Eagles took advantage of nine walks and used 10 hits to do their biggest damage with a four-run third inning and a five-run seventh inning.

James Jones was 2-for-3 with two runs scored, while Randy Dahlman added a single, triple and scored four times.

Chris DeRenzo added a pair of RBI on sacrifices and Jon Isensee knocked in two runs with a single.

Jim Speier, known more for his right arm than his bat, ripped a solo homer in the seventh inning rally.

Zack Parton hurled the first three innings for the victory, allowing the only run on two hits. Nathan Bryan and Speier pitched two innings each of scoreless ball.

The Lancers, who recorded only three hits, dropped to 4-3.

On Thursday, PCA defeated Warren Bethesda 8-5.

The visiting Eagles gave up four runs in the first two innings, but just one more after that.

PCA countered Bethesda's early onslaught with a four-run second and a two-run fourth, followed by single-run innings in the fifth and sixth.

Isensee and Dahlman led the attack, Isensee collecting three hits and a run batted in and Dahlman getting two hits and three RBI, two coming on a single in the second.

Jones, the starter, was the winning pitcher; he gave up three earned runs in three innings. Bryan and Speier relieved and shut the door, allowing no runs on three total hits while combining for eight strikeouts.

Final relay victory lifts Franklin over Canton

BOYS TRACK

Talk about a difference in emotions.

According to Livonia Franklin coach Dale Lee, the Patriots' thrilling 69-68 victory at Plymouth Canton Thursday was Lee's biggest victory in his five years of coaching at Franklin.

On the other hand, Canton's misfortunes on the track continued as the Chiefs came within a second of winning its first meet of the season.

The Chiefs, now 0-3 in the Western Lakes Activities Association and 0-2 in the Western Division), led 68-64 heading into the final event, the 1,600-meter relay.

It appeared the Chiefs would claim victory as they led by about 15 yards heading into the final leg of the relay. But Franklin's Nick Houstakalis took the baton and turned it on to edge the Chiefs at the finish line by an eight of a second.

The relays had been good for Canton, as the Chiefs won the previous three.

In the 400 relay, Dave Koshizawa, Kwaku Dankwa, B.J. Page and Nathan Howe took first in 46.4. The Chiefs also won the 800 in 1:34.6 with the team of Koshizawa, Eric Larsen, Dankwa and Byron Miller.

Canton won its third relay in the 3,200 by crossing the finish line in 8:39.9 with the team of Steve Blossom, Andy Tessema, Shaun Moore and Jon Page.

The Patriots (3-2) outperformed the Chiefs in the field events, as Kevin Keil was the lone Canton winner. Keil recorded a winning throw in the discus of 144 feet, four inches.

Franklin's Matt Lawson narrowly missed his personal best in the shot put, winning with a toss of 50-11 3/4. Dan Colip later won the high jump with a leap of 6-0.

The real hero for the Patriots, however, was Paul Terek. The senior, who is known primarily as one of the state's best pole vaulters, also displayed some of his other talents.

Terek didn't disappoint in the pole vault. After easily winning the event with a vault of 15-2, he tried to clear 16 feet. He failed but on one attempt had the bar cleared before nicking it off with his hand.

Terek also won the long jump (20-10 1/4) and the 100-meter dash (11.2). Lee decided to run Terek for the first time this season in the 400 run, and the decision paid off as he won in a time of 52.4.

The Chiefs were holding their own as Koshizawa won the 200 dash (23.9) and Adam DeGiorgio took the 800 run (2:11.2). Moore's time of 10:22.8 gave him the victory in the two-mile run.

Other Franklin winners were Josh Burt in the 1,600 run (4:45.9), Ryan Supplee in the 110 high hurdles (15.8) and Brent Accurso in the 300 hurdles (44.0).

SOCCER

Livonia Ladywood dropped to 1-7 after being shutout 4-0 by unbeaten Plymouth Canton Friday at Ladywood.

Emile Meier opened the scoring with a penalty kick. Lisa Tomasso's unassisted goal gave the Chiefs (6-0-1) a 2-0 halftime lead.

Canton's Jenny Parviainen and Lisa Reissenweber added insurance goals in the second half.

Kristin Lukasik and Becky Hayner split time in the Canton nets to share the shutout.

On Thursday, host Madison Heights Bishop Foley (7-1-1 overall), a Class B-C-D semifinalist a year ago, blanked Livonia Ladywood 2-0 behind goals from Theresa Albaceli and Margaret Humiecki.

Goalkeeper Lynn Clashman posted the shutout.

Canton 7, Harrison 0: The Chiefs poured in six first-half goals Wednesday in thumping WLAA and Western Division rival Farmington Harrison.

Becky Hayner and Kristin Lukasik split time in goal for Canton.

Six different Chiefs connected against the Hawks. Jennell Cobor accounted for two goals and had two assists. Kelly Connell had a goal and an assist, and Jenny Parviainen, Lisa Reissenweber, Lisa Erickson and Robin Devos each scored one goal for Canton. Beth Knight added two assists.

Madonna gets split

Madonna University bounced back from a 6-2 first-game loss to Northwood University to rout the Northmen 10-2 in the nightcap of a baseball double-header Wednesday at Madonna Park.

The Crusaders, 14-21-1 with the split, slugged three home runs in the second-game victory. Delano Voletti led the way with a homer and a double, driving in four runs.

Dan Pydyn, from Plymouth, rarely bats for Madonna but he pinch-hit in this game — and made it pay off, slamming a grand slam. Jeff Gutt (Redford Catholic Central) added a solo homer.

Aaron Shrewsbury contributed three hits and an RBI, Mike LaPointe had three hits, and Daryl Rocho had two hits.

Mitch Jabczenski went the distance to even his record at 1-1, tossing an eight-hitter. He walked two and struck out three.

In the opener, Madonna managed just six hits as Northwood (20-17) put up a pair of three-run innings — in the first and the third. Rocho had two hits and an RBI and Pete Quinn had two hits for the Crusaders.

COLLEGE SPORTS

Tim Holland went all the way for Madonna, falling to 2-3.

Madonna softball

The Madonna University's women's softball team improved to 21-15-1 overall after splitting a double-header Tuesday at Hillsdale College.

Hillsdale pitcher Monique LeGris two-hit Madonna in the opener, 5-0, as Melissa McGue and Stephanie Dick had the only hits for the Lady Crusaders.

Losing pitcher Shanna Price (11-6) gave up five earned runs on nine hits in six innings.

In the five-inning nightcap, Madonna dumped the Chargers 9-1, as winning pitcher Angie VanDoorn (6-5) tossed a five-hitter. She also went 3-for-3; so did third baseman Dawn Shaffer.

Shawn Greene, Christy Riopelle and Vicki Malkowski each collected two hits for the winner. Shaffer and Riopelle each had two runs batted in.

The loss dropped Hillsdale to 13-20 overall.

For Ladywood, scorers were Gretchen Siebert and Sarah Townsend, each with a 96; Jackie Karrack, 97; and Katy Zimmerman, 101.

Mercy was paced by Jenny Boravlec's 83. Kristen Smith and Angela Harbar each shot a 92, and Sarah Cahill had a 99.

Individual medalist honors went to Shelly Morton of Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook-Kingswood, with a 78.

Salem plays Walled Lake Western Monday and Grosse Ile Tuesday, both at Hilltop. On Wednesday, the Rocks play Livonia Franklin at Whispering Willows in Livonia.

Canton's depth was apparent: The Chiefs had just one double-winner in individual events — Erin Stabb, who was first in the high jump (4-foot, 8-inches) and in the 100-meter hurdles (16.8).

Other individual winners for Canton were Brandi Bernard in the discus (108-8); Nkechi Okwumabua in the long jump (16-0); Nancy Hoffman in the 300 hurdles (50.8); Becky Uryga in the 400 (1:01.2); Angkana Roy in the 800 (2:37.8); and Becky Wolfrom in the 3,200 (12:20.6).

In the relays, Alina Boyden, Kim Robertson, Doris Igwe and Okwumabua won the 400 (53.8); Natalie Wood, Tiffany Williams, Hoffman and Uryga were first in the 800 (1:56.9); Hoffman, Christina Keena, Crystal Alderman and Wood took the 1,600 (4:45.7); and Roy, Sara Rucinski, Amy Dupuis and Debbie Kaczmarek were best in the 3,200 (11:07.0).

Canton travels to Farmington Harrison for a dual meet Thursday, while Salem hosts North Farmington.

RECREATION

MARY BETH DILLON

Headed by race director John Ekin (that's Nike backwards), Doug Kurtis and Randy Step, the fun-loving Redford Roadrunners work hard every year to give something back to the running community, and to recruit newcomers to this wonderful sport.

It's one reason they dedicate months of effort to stage the annual Redford Roadrunner Classic, set this year for Saturday, July 26.

The evening 8K (5-mile) race and party, moved from Livonia to Northville a few years ago, is a popular stop on the running circuit, drawing more than 1,000 runners and walkers of all ages and abilities.

Even if you're a sofa spud with love handles to spare, it doesn't mean you can't experience the thrill of crossing that finish line.

Buy yourself a good pair of shoes, and get started with a daily walk around the block. Gradually increase the distance and jog part of your route, switching back to walking when you get winded. If you can't carry on a conversation, you're pushing too hard.

On Monday, May 19, you'll be ready to embark on the accompanying training schedule designed by Randy Step, Roadrunners founder and two-time Ironman finisher.

Doug Kurtis, godfather of the Classic, says this year's race will be better than ever, thanks to more sponsorship and some exciting innovations.

Randy Step's Training Schedule

Week	M	Tu	W	Th	F	Sa	Su	Tot
1		1		1		1/0	1.5	3.5
2		1		1.5		1/0	2	4.5
3		1.5		1.5		1/0	2	5
4		1.5		2		1/0	2.5	5.5
5		1.5		2		1/0	3	6.5
6		2		2		1/0	3.5	7.5
7		2		2.5		1/0	4	8.5
8		2		3		1/0	4.5	9.5
9		2		3		1/0	5	10
10		2		2		8K		9

"For the first time, we will have prize money," said Kurtis, third American to finish Monday's Boston Marathon with an impressive 2:23. A $3,500 purse will be distributed among top runners, including top finishers in an age-graded category, meaning "a 70-year-old guy could win some money," he said.

Another draw will be a separate start for women – a first for Redford. "We're going to start the women on Main Street and the men on Cady. They'll meet up a half mile into the race on Seven Mile. I think it will be neat for women to race against themselves for a little bit," said Kurtis.

The $10 entry fee buys entry to the race and the post-race party, which features food and refreshments, music and dancing. A Redford T-shirt – a perennial favorite – is a deal at $5.

Watch for clip-out race applications in the Observer and Michigan Runner Magazine.

"The goal of our race committee is to give value back to the runners," said Kurtis. "Most of the volunteers are runners who want to give the most they can back to a runner. I think that is one of the things that makes our race special.

"We're billing our party this year as a masquerade, encouraging people to bring some kind of mask with them for the party," he added.

Events kick off at 6 p.m. with a 1-mile trot for kids at the Northville Recreation Center on Main Street just west of Center. The 8K begins at 7 p.m. A 5K racewalk is set for 7:30 p.m.

Jasper Banff Relay Race: Just a few slots remain on the Michigan team competing in the scenic, 180-mile relay in the Canadian Rockies on May 31. For more information, call team captain Dale Graham at (810) 247-9746. Last week's mention included the wrong area code.

TEN PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

Play by the rules. Every once in a while, there's a need for a league to take action for any rule infractions that come up during play. This was the situation recently in the Men's Senior Classic league at Mayflower Lanes in Redford.

Bill Kandilian had brought along two balls to use while his team was contending for a possible shot at first place. He left both of the balls at the pro shop, where "Ace" was supposed to clean them on his spinner. Although Kandilian was just so-so in the first two games, he bowled extremely well in the third contest.

It was afterward that one of the opposing team members was in the very same pro shop where he overheard some conversation on how well Kandilian had bowled in game three, and that the ball had been "sanded."

Now, most league bowlers are familiar with ABC/WIBC rules which clearly state that no ball may have the surface altered once it has been introduced into play.

It is, however, quite legal to use a cleaning agent such as alcohol or "Alley Catz" merely to clean the dirt and oily residue from the ball's surface. It's illegal to use any abrasive item or substance. In this instance, all team captains and officers were required to meet prior to the bowling session and hear the testimony of the individuals involved.

Kandilian was able to convince the committee and officers that what he did was within the rules and that the score would stand. He had the balls only cleaned, and they were brought out to him on the lanes prior to the start of bowling. This is a good rule, but it is not always clearly understood by everyone. The local GDBA should publish a clarification of what is legal or not.

Can you bring along another ball which may be sanded dull if you left it in your car? Can you have a ball sanded if it has not yet been in play? Can you use a "Luster King" machine in a ball that you have bowled with during the current competition? I hope that this rule will be better understood in the future.

BIKE CLUB REPAIRS PARK TRAIL

THEY'RE READY TO RIDE

Clean up: Below, Bud Pell, left, points out where a section of the bike trail at Maybury state park will be moved to help with erosion. Helping him out is Ron Hiddell, center, and Mike Kloeckneg. It was the Michigan Mountain Biking Association's local chapter annual clean up of the trail.

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER

Last year, 10,000 mountain bikes zipped up and down the new 4-mile biker's trail at Maybury State Park in Northville. That's a lot of wear and tear for a trail just built in 1994, and the heavy use of the popular trail is starting to take its toll.

That's where the men and women of the Michigan Mountain Biking Association (MMBA) come in.

Earlier this month, members armed with chain saws, limb cutters, shovels and trash bags, they spent hours walking the trail, sprucing it up for the hordes of bikers about to descend on it on the trail's opening day, April 15.

The trail is closed to bikers from Dec. 15-April 15, with riding prohibited during the snowy, freezing, thawing and muddy times.

Rerouting trails

"The first two years, we had no maintenance problems," said Westland resident Bud Pell, member of the Southeast Chapter of the MMBA and volunteer trail manager at Maybury. "The trail is designed so it won't erode. We slow riders down in areas that could erode. But we still have four places on the trail starting to deteriorate. We will reroute those turns and put up barriers."

Redford resident Wes Watt is one of the MMBA members who brought a chainsaw to cut into pieces the three trees that fell onto the trail over the winter.

Members divided into two groups. One worked the northern part of the loop trail, the other worked the southern part.

Throughout the year, Pell and fellow members of the MMBA work to protect a trail they had a hard time convincing Michigan's Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to build.

Few places to ride

When mountain biking became popular in the late 1980s, Michigan's bikers caught the fever, but found few places to ride that didn't lead to conflicts with hikers and horse riders.

"We rode on any trail we could find," said Pell, a retired Ford Motor Co. engineer and lifelong outdoorsman. "By 1990, it became evident to the DNR that the influx of bikers was creating problems with hikers and horses."

Maybury's solution back then was to let both bikers and hikers use a 1 1/2-mile, two-way trail in the park. Naturally, the two-way traffic caused a severe safety problem, and turned out to be no solution at all.

The DNR rejected plan after plan the MMBA put forth. Then, in 1994, it agreed to extend the 1 1/2-mile trail another 2 1/2 miles into the southeast corner of the park to create a 4-mile loop trail. There are few safety concerns if hikers walk the circular trail counterclockwise; they can see the bikers coming.

Keeping bikes off trails

"We built it to get the mountain bikes off other trails in the park," said park supervisor Anna Sylvester, a biker herself who rides the trail with her three children. "Our most serious obstacle was getting approval. It's hard to get development on public land."

The park levies a stiff penalty – $225 – for bikers caught riding the hiking trails. While the ranger might be talked out of writing the ticket, the offender is unceremoniously ejected from the park.

MMBA members did most of the trail-building work, cutting away the brush and digging up stumps. Pell laid out the route, hanging ribbons every 25 feet to mark the path. While trails such as the Potawatomi, Island Lake and Bishop Lake, Highland, and Bald Mountain have cost the MMBA money to either build or maintain, this one involved mostly members' time.

"We didn't cut down any tree to built it," Pell said.

Technical challenge

The trail isn't long; it takes a biker about 40 minutes to navigate. But because of its switch backs and tight turns, it gives bikers a lot of technical challenges. It's a trail for bikers with some experience.

The MMBA is still looking for a treed site in southeast Michigan to build a flat trail for beginners. Hammerheads, or experts, tackle the steep hills of the 17-mile Potawatomi in the Pinckney Recreation Area. The Poto, a longtime Boy Scout trail, is now considered one of the 10 best biker's trails in the U.S.

Despite policing efforts by biking enthusiasts such as Pell, conflicts still erupt occasionally between the fast-moving bikers and other trail users such as bird watchers and hikers. The biker's trail at Maybury is not just for bikers.

One such tiff erupted between bikers and cross country skiers before the trail closed for the winter months. Bikers would ride over the tracks set by skiers, leading to verbal outbursts between the two.

"We had problems, so we sat down at a meeting and came up with this (the Dec.15-April 15 trail closing)," Pell said.

Skiers police the trails during the close-down period. They're not afraid to holler at bikers who disregard the shut-down.

In fact, from the MMBA's point of view, most of the problems that now arise come from neighborhood bikers riding the trails, not from MMBA members who adhere to a 12-point responsibility code. The MMBA has 1,400 members statewide.

Cleanup

The recent cleanup session precedes the big trail cleanup day held nationwide every year by all trail users, including national hiking associations.

This year, National Trails Day takes place June 7. For Southeast Chapter MMBA bikers, their cleanup site this year is at Island Lake Recreation Area.

Anyone wishing to participate in the cleanup need only contact their nearest park or recreation area to be put in touch with an event organizer and given a place to go to.

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

The baby bunny calls have started. About this time every year, nature centers around the area get calls about what to do with the live baby bunny a caller just found.

Many callers are concerned about the baby bunny because when they found it there was no adult around the nest.

Adult rabbits generally return to their nest of young under the cover of darkness. If the young remain still in their fur-lined depression in the ground, and do not remove the cover of leaves and fur placed over them when the adult leaves for the day, they will usually be fine.

Most of the time the young discovered by concerned callers are those supposed to be out of the nest and on their own. A general rule of thumb to follow is that if the bunny has its eyes open, is fully furred and fills your hand when you pick it up, the bunny is supposed to be away from the nest and should be able to fend for itself.

If the bunny doesn't fit the description – it's too small, its eyes are closed, or it's not fully furred – then place it back in the nest, if you can find it. The best mom is the real mom. Be sure to leave as little human scent around the nest as possible. Skunks and raccoons will follow strong human scent during their nocturnal wanderings.

In some cases, a dog or cat found the bunny and brought it to the caller. Bunnies are tough and may look fine from the outside but there could be internal injuries. If this happens, we suggest they take it to a veterinarian to have it checked out.

Slightly injured or homeless bunnies can be raised by licensed wildlife rehabilitators who know the kind of formula to feed these animals.

Technically, it's against the law for an individual to possess a wild animal without a license from the state. Call a local nature center or an animal rescue organization and they may be able to help direct you to someone qualified to raise your injured or homeless animal.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

Learn to become an outdoor woman at expo

Women who want to learn how to fish, hunt, camp and hike can learn how at the International Women's Show at the Novi Expo in Novi.

Staffers from the state Department of Natural Resources will be on hand to teach a seminar, "Becoming an Outdoors Woman," at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 1.

The seminar will be taught by Lynn Marla, Lt. Mary Sherzer and Diane Gosler.

The seminar will highlight what women can learn at weekend-long workshops designed to offer hand-on instruction in outdoor skills to women in a relaxed, non-intimidating atmosphere.

Classes typically offered in the programs include archery and bow hunting, shooting sports, camping, canoeing, fishing, fly-fishing, fly-tying, orienteering and camp cooking.

The three women who teach the program have outdoor experiences to pass along.

Marla's father took her hunting and fishing as a child. She now hunts for turkey, deer, pheasant, ducks, geese and elk in Michigan as well as several western states.

Gosler grew up hunting and fishing with her family in the Saginaw Bay area and has trained retrievers for hunting and field trial competitions.

Marla and Gosler are past judges of the Michigan Waterfowl Hunting Stamp Competition.

Sherzer likes to camp and hike. She raises sled dogs for weight-pulling competitions and is an avid musher. Her sled dog expeditions have taken her to Minnesota, the Yukon Territory and Alaska.

"It's not always easy to find someone to share outdoor activities and interest, and it's often much harder to find women who want to try hunting or fishing," said Marla. "But it's really amazing to see women cheer for each other at a 'Becoming an Outdoors-Woman' program."

One of Marla's more memorable accounts of such a program came after a participant finished shooting a gun for the first time.

"She announced that she no longer wanted a sewing machine for Mother's Day, and was going to ask for a handgun instead."

She said many single mothers who want to teach hunting and fishing to their children are interested in the workshops.

"Becoming an Outdoors-Woman" is an international program, with weekend workshops in Michigan scheduled for July 18-20 in Sagola, in the Upper Peninsula, and Aug. 22-24 in Tustin near Cadillac.

The second seminar, "Let's Get Ready for Your Outdoor Adventure," begins at 2 p.m. and features Eve Rolandson, education and information specialist for the DNR Wildlife Division's Natural Heritage Program.

Rolandson, whose love of the outdoors began at age three when she accompanied her uncle outdoors on his nature photography pursuits, will give tips on how to pack, where to go, what to do and what to take for any array of outdoor interests ranging from hiking and canoeing to mushroom hunting.

Both seminars are held in conjunction with the DNR's "Step Outside with the DNR" booth at the show. The booth will be staffed all four days with women DNR conservation officers and state park, wildlife, fisheries and forest management staff.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Touch of a button

Medical emergencies and accidents can happen to anyone, especially aging parents, the physically challenged and latchkey children. Health Watch personal emergency response system offers the secure feeling of never being home alone.

The system is sponsored exclusively by Visiting Nurse Association Support Services. Health Watch is regarded as the safest personal response system on the market today. The compact Health Watch console comes with a waterproof personal transmitter that can be worn around the neck or on a belt. The transmitter allows the subscriber to answer phone calls remotely, without leaving a bed or chair.

Health Watch operates on a two-way voice system, allowing the uswer to speak with a trained emergency operator through a speaker phone in the home, making it unnecessary for the user to get to the telephone to communicate during an emergency.

Health Watch costs $30 or $35 per month, depending on the model, plus a one-time installation fee. To order, call Donna Coburn at (810) 967-8747.

Breast cancer test

Henry Ford Health System surgeons are offering women with breast cancer a new surgical procedure that not only leaves women with less pain than traditional methods but also helps doctors determine, more accurately, if the breast cancer has spread.

The new technique, done in southeastern Michigan only at Henry Ford Hospital, allows surgeons to find the sentinel lymph node – the first node to receive cancerous cells from the breast tumor, said Dr. David Nathanson, M.D., director of the Breast Care Clinic at Henry Ford.

"When a woman has a tumor in her breast, one of the things we need to find out is if the cancer has spread to the lymph nodes under her arms. That's one of the major points from which the breast cancer spreads to other parts of the body," Nathanson said. "The current standard is to remove all of the armpit lymph nodes. This operation sometimes leaves women with swelling in their arm, higher rates of infection, occasional nerve function damage and often times, chronic pain."

In the new technique, doctors inject a blue dye that "lights up" the lymph nodes, which are embedded in fat in the armpit and very difficult to detect. In addition, a radioactive agent, concentrated in the sentinel lymph node, is detected by a special instrument.

The combination of the blue dye with a radioactive agent shows the location of the sentinel lymph node, which is removed and studied by a pathologist to determine if the cancer has spread. In more than 90 percent of the cases, doctors can find the sentinel lymph node. If this node does not contain cancer, it may be appropriate to leave other lymph nodes intact. Women then have fewer side effects when fewer lymph nodes are removed.

Diabetes study

Women with diabetes are needed to participate in a study that may help determine what types of services are needed for long-term improvements in blood sugar, cholesterol and weight. The study, part of the American Dietetic Association's Nutrition and Health Campaign, is being conducted by Saint Joseph Mercy Health System.

To participate, women must have non-insulin dependent (Type II) diabetes, be age 18 or older, not be pregnant and be 30 percent or more over their ideal body weight. For more information on the study, in which participants will be randomly assigned to one of two groups, call Dennis Gordon at (313) 712-2835. There is no cost to participants.

Beaumont and HAP

Beaumont Integrated Delivery System, which consists of William Beaumont Hospitals in Royal Oak and Troy, and the Premier Physicians Network, has signed a contact with Health Alliance Plan, effective July 1.

Individuals selecting HAP's regular HMO, HAP Senior Plus program, or the Medicare Complementary program may select participating Beaumont physicians and be admitted to the Beaumont Hospitals beginning in July.

The initial HAP Beaumont Network will consist of approximately 40 primary care physicians and a complement of specialists. Beaumont and HAP expect to expand the network based on future membership growth.

Medicinal herbs... the layman's pharmacy

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

Area residents are discovering that herbs from the spice rack jazz up menus, and that they also have a place in medicine cabinets to improve their health, moods and minds. Countless herbs are used to battle everything from easing a toothache to weight problems and possibly fighting cancer.

The practice of using herbs has peaked and ebbed for centuries, often times overshadowed by mainstream medical methods.

"It's funny how things go around in full circle," said Shelly Getty, a nurse and sales representative at Healthways of Plymouth. "What's interesting is that these were around thousands of years ago and people are learning about it again.

"It's a brand new hot thing, but it was used by Native Americans and Egyptians. Everyone is getting into this new thing. People want to be healthy."

In fact, Hippocrates, the father of medical literature, named between 300 and 400 helpful plants; and nearly one-third of these plants are still used today. Even the Bible is filled with references to the healing value of plants.

Many uses

Americans are finding that black cohosh is known among herbalists to lessen the symptoms of asthma; angelica reduces menstrual discomfort and boosts energy; allspice relieves muscle pain and eases toothaches; buckthorn relieves constipation and is believed to fight cancer; celery seed sheds water weight, lowers blood pressure and reduces cholesterol; and chickweed fights bronchitis. Echinacea, which is known to boost the immune system, is one of the hottest sellers at Good Food Co. in Canton.

Other big stock items are St. John's Wort, often used as a natural alternative to fight depression; bilberry, to build eyesight and help people with failing night vision and ginger for nausea in motion sickness and morning sickness among pregnant women, according to Judy Schamanski, a sales representative.

"Young people come in and want something for the immune system," Schamanski said. "People even come in and buy echinacea for their babies. People are getting more well-read, more open to natural things and becoming more open to nutrition and different alternative methods of healing."

Schamanski said she recently learned that the number of people who visited health food stores doubled last year. During the cold and flu season recently, goldenseal was a big seller at Healthways of Plymouth, Getty said. The herb is also known to strengthen the immune system.

"It affects everyone differently, but I haven't received any testimony that it does not help," Getty said. An abundance of information on the benefits of garlic has piqued a lot of interest in the herb's anti-bacterial, anti-fungal and anti-viral releases. Studies show that garlic helps protect against stomach cancer and limits the risk of heart disease by lowering blood pressure and reducing cholesterol levels.

"A lot of people take herbs to help them sleep at night," Getty said, adding that camomile and valerian are known for easing tension. In fact, camomile is a mild sedative and valerian has tranquilizing and sedative properties like those found in Valium.

Earth offerings

"People are learning more about what the earth has to offer," she said. "They're turning to alternative ways to make themselves healthy to be strong and heal themselves." But, if you're looking for a cure, don't turn to herbs, according to Robert Bailey, a distributor for Enrich Intl. in Livonia.

"Herbs don't cure a thing," he said. "They feed the body and allow the body to heal itself."

If you're taking a vitamin or herb, you're among good company, because 60 percent of Americans are taking some sort of supplement. "Herbs are fun as long as you don't think of them as medicine – they're food," said Bailey, explaining that herbs have helped him overcome a prostate problem, gum disease and to help him lose 20 pounds.

Shannon Adams, 24, sees the benefits of herbs and other alternative medicine among her family members, especially her grandfather, Harry Zerbo. He began selling Nutralite out of his Livonia home in 1957 and one year later he opened Zerbo's Health Food Supermarket in Livonia.

"He tells me about how crazy everyone thought he was in the late '50s. 'Health foods ... who needs health foods? Everything is healthy already!' they would tell him," she said. "So many times a new statement is brought out in the media and so many times my grandfather has already preached it. It's amazing what he already knew."

Zerbo, 81, got involved with health foods while he was raising chinchillas and added a kelp, soy bean grits and vitamin E supplement to their diet. The chinchillas thrived and their dispositions were calmer. Zerbo decided something similar could be done with humans by altering diet.

During his four decades of doing business, he said, the popularity of herbs has "increased tremendously. They've been tried for thousands of years," Zerbo said. "There's no guess work."

Comfrey came to his mind first when he was asked about the benefits of herbs. "I raise it in the backyard here," Zerbo said, quickly relating a story, a different one for each herb and how it helped a particular customer.

"A fellow was bitten by a dog and after several weeks his hand was still bleeding and full of pus," Zerbo said. He gave the man a handful of comfrey told him to cook it like spinach and tape it on his hand. Three days later it was clear.

HELEN FURCEAN / STAFF ARTIST

Converted into drugs

Camomile and valerian are also used a lot for soothing the stomach and nerves, he added. "Many of the modern-day drugs are copied from herbs," Zerbo said. "They convert them into drugs that have side effects."

Goldenseal is another amazing herb that's commonly used, he said. "A mother came in whose little girl had chicken pox and I told her to make a strong tea with goldenseal, it's very bitter," Zerbo said, adding that he told the mother to sponge the girl with the mixture. "Within minutes the itching was gone."

Until he started on a health food regime, Zerbo said, every winter he was sick with fever, strep throat and respiratory problems. "I've been here 40 years and I lost one day from the flu, if that was what it was," Zerbo said. Jokingly, the octogenarian added: "But I cut my hours from 70 hours to 35 hours a week."

While other people are taking herbs in pill form, teas, or in compacts, Mary Novrocki of Plymouth uses them in other ways. She ties a bath bag on the faucet of her tub and as the water drips over a mixture of oatmeal, hops and camomile, an aroma is released and is intended to take away the stresses of the day.

This year, she's taking her herbs outdoors to her lawn. She's mixing camomile, alyssum and clover with grass seeds on bare spots in her lawn. "And when you mow it or walk on it sends up relaxing aromas," she said.

Home safety based on common sense

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

Our homes are supposed to be our refuge, a haven for comfort and safety. Yet, in 1994 there were 26,700 deaths caused by accidents in U.S. homes, according to the 1996 World Almanac Book of Facts. Some are quirky accidents that seem impossible to sidestep. Others can be avoided.

"Last year there was a toddler playing on a couch. He fell on the curtain cord, couldn't get himself off of it and strangled himself," according to Tom Kiurski, a Livonia firefighter and director of fire safety education.

It's recommend that parents tie up the cords and keep them close to the wall. Bob Haasey, American Red Cross community disaster education specialist, has other ideas to keep your home safe. He gave a "Seniors and Fire Education" lecture April 15 at the Royal Holiday Mobile Home Park in Canton. One of the topics was microwave cooking and potential hazards.

"Usually that's the safest way to cook, unless they have a pacemaker," Haasey said. "Some people will turn them on as a timer and let them run for 20 minutes. You can't run an older style microwave with nothing in them for that long."

Wear an oven mitt when you're cooking, he suggested, so that if you're distracted away from the kitchen your hand will remind you that you have something on the stove. "If someone has a fire in the oven they shouldn't open it," Haasey said, explaining that by opening the door, air gets in and fans the fire.

He also reminded people who attended his talk to change the batteries on smoke detectors twice yearly. Vacuuming them is a good idea, too, he said, because dust in the detectors can cause false alarms. Test detectors monthly by using a broom, or other stick, to push the button.

"Don't stand on chairs to do it," he added. In fact, the World Almanac lists falls as the leading cause of deaths in homes. And during this season of stormy weather there are other things to think about. Haasey advises against taking a shower, sitting in the bathtub or using the telephone during thunderstorms.

Seeking shelter

It's also a good idea to unplug the window air conditioner. If there's a tornado warning, find shelter, preferably underground. If you don't have a basement, go to a room without windows or find a closet.

"The biggest thing is trying to be prepared for emergencies," Haasey said adding that people should have a first aid kit, canned food, a can opener, a bottle of water, work boots and gloves, a battery-powered radio, flashlights and extra batteries in a bag in the basement in case of an emergency. Keep a supply of your medications in the kit, too.

After falls, poisoning is the second leading cause of death in homes, according to the World Almanac. If you have children, consider the dangers of medicine looking like candies, Kiurski said. "It's surprising how many of those pills look like candy," he said adding that parents should keep the child-resistant tops on, not refer to medication as candy and keep them out of a child's reach. If your child does take someone else's medicine, call 911.

The caller will be told to do one of two things: Make the child drink water or milk to dilute the medication or induce vomiting with syrup of ipecac that you can get without a prescription. Remember, however, that syrup of ipecac expires every couple of years.

"Most people have expired syrup of ipecac," Kiurski added.

Another important precaution is to place covers on electrical outlets. "Kids are going to explore," he said. "Most kids have access to their spoons and forks. If you're going to have a child come into your home get down on your hands and knees and see the world through their view."

And always expect the unexpected. "We have gone on calls where little kids have fallen head first into the toilet," he said. "One ended up a drowning and one had permanent brain damage."

Kiurski recommends getting potty locks that hold toilet seats in place. "And it's a whole lot of fun when your friends are over and they ask how to go to the potty in your bathroom," he added.

Always remember that children will put anything that you give them in their mouths. "I recommend that all parents take a CPR course that tells us how to relieve airway obstruction and choking, especially this time of year as we get to the opening of the pool season," Kiurski said.

As far as fire safety and children, remember they're never too young to explore the mystique of flames. Most children who are burned by playing with matches and lighters are 3 years old, according to the United States Fire Administration.

"At that age, they don't understand how deadly a fire can be," Kiurski said. "Once they get that fire going, they're the ones who will hide underneath a bed or hide in a closet."

Smoke detectors

It seems, however, that most Americans have gotten the message about smoke detectors. The National Fire Protection Association reports that 80 percent of U.S. homes now have at least one smoke detector. The bad news, however, is that one-third of all smoke detectors do not work, usually because of dead or missing batteries.

Don't put smoke detectors near fireplaces and avoid putting one outside a bathroom, because the steam can activate the alarm. If your smoke detector is 10 years old or older, buy a new one, Kiurski said.

Families should develop a fire escape plan. Start by drawing a picture showing each room in the house. Figure out how you can use windows as exits and designate an outside meeting place.

While there has been debate about carbon monoxide detectors, Kiurski said, he thinks they're a good tool to have. "They were the source of false alarms when they first came out," he said. "We went through a period two years ago where maybe the technology wasn't there yet. Since carbon monoxide is colorless and odorless you have to call the fire department if the alarm goes off. We don't want to discourage anyone from calling us if it does go off in your home."

Carbon monoxide poisoning causes flu-like symptoms, headaches and nausea. If your alarm goes off, call 911 from a neighbor's house. As far as electrical outlets, one rule to follow is one plug, one appliance. "If you need more outlets, call an electrician," Kiurski said. "If the appliance is anywhere near water, bathrooms and kitchens it should have a ground fault circuit interrupter."

Dentistry in the 90s
by Herbert M. Gardner, D.D.S. & Martha P. Zinderman, R.N., D.D.S.
WISE MOVE
"Wisdom teeth" are the third molars which emerge as a set of four permanent teeth behind the upper and lower 12-year molars. They generally break through the gums between ages 17 and 21. Many dentists recommend they be extracted when they run into such problems as becoming impacted against adjoining molars or tightly bound (ankylosed) to the underlying bone. When extraction is planned, it is advisable to have nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs), such as ibuprofen, on hand. The reasoning behind this recommendation is that researchers have found that NSAIDs reduce the swelling associated with this type of oral surgery, as well as help patients heal faster. In some cases, NSAIDs are given before the surgery so that their bodies can better prepare to handle the swelling.
Don't delay your next dental checkup. Make sure you see us on a regular basis. A complete checkup and cleaning should be scheduled at least every six months. During these examinations we can check on issues such as wisdom teeth. For complete dental care, taking you into the new millennium, including "Twilight Sleep" intravenous sedation, come see us at LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, located at 19171 Merriman Road. Let us help you make the most of your smile. Call 478-2110 to schedule an appointment. Smiles are our business.

Internet content presents concerns for parents

EMORY DANIELS

O&E ONLINE

Awhile back, maybe even quite awhile back, I wrote a column on making the Internet safer for children in which we took a look at steps parents could take and reviewed software helpers available at that time.

The topic has since been revisited by computer magazines and other Internet sources. One of the more recent examinations of this topic has been done in the May issue of Consumer Reports in an article "Is Your Kid Caught Up in the Web?"

As we know, the Internet is a two-sided coin. There are invaluable resources for kids who can sit down at their computer and get help with homework, take virtual tours of areas they might never visit in person, exchange E-mail with pals around the world, and share their creativity with other kids.

But they also can sit down at that same computer and come across a lot of trash and experiences that can harm them. The May Consumers Report offers some pretty good advice to parents on how to seek out the positive sites on the Internet and how to protect their children from what could be harmful.

Consumer Reports reports that an estimated 2.6 million youngsters go online using the family computer and that the number is expected to reach 10 million in the next five years.

Part of the article contains some very good tips for parents which we looked at earlier but warrant a second look: 1. Review your browser's bookmarks for sites your child plans to revisit; 2. Examine the browser's history file which shows recent visits. Using file manager, search for files or folders with names containing the word "history" or find it among the menu options (usually under "preferences"); and 3. In file manager, look for files that contain images by searching for extensions such as .gif, .jpg, .tif, .zip or .sit.

Consumers Report's lab did some testing of the Web "babysitting" software and offers information on new features of the latest versions that are available. Reviewed are Cyber Patrol 3.10, Cybersitter 2.1, Net Nanny 3.1, and SurfWatch 1.6V2. Among some good advice offered is that none of the "babysitting" software is totally effective, the software designer's standards may not match yours, rating systems aren't widespread yet, and they may not work with commercial online services.

The magazine identified 22 sites it judged as inappropriate for young children. Cyber Patrol blocked 16 of the 22, Cybersitter 14 of 22, Net Nanny blocked none of the 22 adult sites, SurfWatch blocked 18 of 22. Internet Explorer browser, which relies on voluntary ratings, blocked three of the 22.

■ Pick up the magazine after April 29 on the newsstands because it also contains several good sites, including their URLs, for young people.

Pick up the magazine after April 29 on the newsstands because it also contains several good sites, including their URLs, for young people. Some of the better ones include the search engine for youth, "Yahooligans," at http://www.yahooligans.com, "Teachers@work" at http://www.teachers.work.con.nz which has 1,000 rated sites grouped by age and subject, and "Berit's Best Sites for Children" at http://www.cochran.com/theodore/noframe/ksites.hmtl.

EdView for cyberkids

CyberKids Inc. has a new browser for use in the classroom by educators. EdView, a "secure, smart" Web browser, was demonstrated to attendees of the National Association of Elementary School Principals convention in San Antonio.

The EdView browser addresses two major Internet concerns expressed by educators: potential legal liability should offensive material be viewed by students; and the disorganization of information on the Web.

A recent Market Data Retrieval survey found that three out of four of the 6,000 educators and school librarians polled believe the Internet is a serious research tool for students. A majority, however, said Internet information is unorganized and does not directly relate to curriculum or textbooks, and as a result, only 13.4 percent say they believe the Internet helps students score better on tests.

The browser's fail-safe security is based on its "Access Certainty" feature, a system to prevent offensive or indecent Web sites from filtering into a classroom. Users will not access Web sites not contained in the CyberKids database without the approval of an on-site supervisor.

Educators can also use the "Teacher's Assistant" to guide them to subject specific lists of sites that can be assimilated into curriculum. Grade, reading and age levels in later versions of EdView will also be included in these categorized lists.

EdView runs on Macintosh, Windows 3.1, and Windows. Users can customize the look of the browser. Other features include E-mail, and a personalized address book.

For more information on EdView, visit the company's Web site at http://www.EdView.com.

Kidz Korner

Children can learn about Michigan agriculture by visiting Kidz Korner, an interactive section on the Michigan Department of Agriculture's Web site at http://www.mda.state.mi.us.

By clicking on the Kidz Korner icon on MDA's home page, visitors can learn about crops, animals, food safety, farm life, and other topics. A friendly fowl called "Booster Rooster" leads kids through a county fair, a story corner, a photographic album and into a "Rap Room" where children can chat about farming, pets and other agriculture-related topics.

Kidz Korner changes as the seasons change. This past winter, the site had stories about soybeans and sugar, lambs, keeping school lunches safe, and real stories about growing up on Michigan farms.

Interactive games help children learn about agriculture while having fun testing their skills. A special story section invites children to send in by E-mail their favorite pet and food stories. Many of the stories are put on the site for everyone to read.

NEW HOMES

★★ F1

Livonia infill site beckons purchasers now

Ten houses in a row, all of similar style and nearly ready to go.

That's Sunset, an infill project (Fargo to Sunset streets) east of Merriman and south of Eight Mile in Livonia.

Nine of the houses have the same plan – a two story of 1,615 square feet with three bedrooms and 1-1/2 baths. The 10th, due to an unusual lot configuration, has those same elements but a different layout.

Prices range from $169,900 to $175,900.

"It's very private," said Herb Chad of C.C. Building. "Anybody you see on that street, you should know. Cars coming down that street are going to be your neighbors or friends of your neighbors."

"All of the houses are in different stages of construction," said Jay Cykiert, in partnership at Sunset with Chad and his father, Walter Cykiert. "We have five we could probably move in 30 days.

"We build a good, custom product for a production price," Jay Cykiert said. "We take pride in what we do. We don't just slam them up and walk away. What you see in the model is all standard. We tried not to chintz on anything.

"We take every precaution so people don't come back and say, 'Why do we have this (problem)?'" Cykiert said.

It's somewhat rare for a builder to construct so many houses on speculation.

"We wanted to have product ready for spring ... when people want to get out there, get going and buy a house," Chad said. "We'll have it.

"We expect prices to increase this spring, and we wanted to pass savings along to the consumer," he said. "Also, it's more cost effective to build them in a row all at once. The trades get to know construction."

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

While most of the houses at Sunset have the same floor plan, there are variances on the exterior elevation so that they're not identical.

Most feature a living room, dining room, kitchen/nook, first-floor laundry with tub and a half-bath on the main floor.

Three bedrooms are upstairs. All have ceiling lights. The largest bedroom, 19-by-11, has a walk-in closet.

The full bath upstairs with combination tub/shower and angled, dual-sink vanity has two entry doors, one from the largest bedroom, the other from the hallway.

Other standard features include two-car garage, basement, range and dishwasher, plus carpeting in all bedrooms, the living room and dining room.

The house on lot 8, the same square footage as the others, has a larger kitchen/nook, a great room and but no formal dining room. Three bedrooms and the bath upstairs have a slightly different layout.

All the mechanicals, furnace, water meter and sump pump, have been placed on one side of the basement so buyers can more easily remodel into a rec room if they desire.

Sunset product: The interior of this house constructed in Livonia by C.C. Building includes three bedrooms, 1-1/2 baths, living room, dining room and kitchen/nook.

Debra B. Silverman, the on-site sales rep, has a handle on prospective buyers.

"What I see happening is it's going to be singles and couples without children because when you have two or three kids, you want four bedrooms," she said.

But the seclusion of the in-fill sub, sidewalks and streetlights could prove attractive to parents.

Visitors have commented on the openness of the floor plan – "it seems a lot larger that what it is" – and pricing, Silverman added.

Sunset offers other amenities.

"It's in close proximity to everything," Chad said.

"Expressways are everywhere," Cykiert said.

"What other city has three malls?" Silverman said.

Sunset is serviced by city water and sewers and is within the Clarenceville school boundaries.

The property tax rate is now $32.33 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $174,000 house on Sunset would pay about $2,800 the first year.

Steve and Maria Cole, along with children Abby and Alex, will move into Sunset.

"We liked the location there. We like the seclusion. The idea of one way in and one way out with the street was appealing," Steve said. "The house is affordable. Quality is excellent.

"My wife loved the kitchen. With two children, three bedrooms was exactly what as were looking for. All the bedrooms up gives us living space down. That's what we wanted," he said.

The model/sales office at Sunset, (810) 471-9619, is open 1-5 p.m. weekdays, 1-6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, closed Thursdays.

A town should have a personality: Aspen does

STEVEN SIVAK

A badly needed vacation took me to Aspen, Colo. a few weeks ago. Somewhere between Beverly Hills and Dodge City lies this simple yet glamorous town. Founded sometime in the mid 19th century, the city has worked very hard to preserve its character, yet has grown nearly seven fold from its original size.

This character has been kept intact through a combination of factors that include: strong support for maintaining this character by its residents, high property values and strong, nearly militant local government enforcement of preservation and building guidelines and codes. Certainly many people would find this much control to be unfair and un-American, i.e. that one can do with one's property as one desires. It is through stringent controls that Aspen has preserved its western gritty urbanness.

The heart of the central city is a simple grid with streets running in a perpendicular fashion. The grid is not made up of evenly spaced streets as the grid of our city is but rather long blocks that run parallel to the slopes of Aspen Mountain (Ajax). The perpendicular streets are about one fourth the length of those.

Included in the grid is a central bus station, which serves the entire Aspen community and adjacent ski areas. There are also parks and malls, which are woven into the grid. The malls, however, are not anything like our malls but rather areas where the roads have been closed to cars and only pedestrian traffic is allowed. So in a certain sense the malls of Aspen are the most urban part of the city.

This is exactly the opposite of what we mean when we use the word "mall." The basic layout of Aspen is no more sophisticated than downtown Birmingham, Rochester or Ann Arbor. The difference is the quality of the buildings and how they relate to each other.

Like all construction prior to the mid 20th century, indigenous materials were used to construct the majority of Aspen's buildings. Each geographic location usually has at least some major building material that is abundant and is heavily used in construction. In the case of Aspen, it is a red sandstone that is mined locally and can be seen on many of mountains in the area.

Red sandstone is a very richly colored material that must have been easily obtained due to its frequency of use. It is a much more durable material than the sandstones that I have seen in New York City, which appear to be eroding at a fairly fast rate. In addition to the sandstone, there appears to be a fair amount of brick (also reddish in tint) and wood siding, which is used mostly on single-family houses. Since the majority of buildings are either commercial or multi-family structures, the more long-lived masonry products are more common in town. The style of these buildings is somewhere between the light and finicky Victorian and the heavy Romanesque of the mid nineteenth century.

Aspen is a real city: It is usually growing but always changing. Parts are added and replaced on a regular basis. In order to do this, there must be rules or an agreement as to how to accomplish this. Most new buildings typically maintain the set-back lines of the earlier buildings. One of the most interesting applications of this "rule" was how a Victorian box abutted a contemporary modernist box and yet felt so natural and real.

Instead of trying to make a new building appear to be old – which is almost always a silly idea and frequently unsuccessful in the end – this junction allowed the two buildings to merge through the use of similar set-backs and similar materials (red sand stone and red brick). The buildings were each individually strengthened by their contrasts to each other. The transparency of the modern project was heightened by the opaqueness of the heavy Romanesque project.

Parking, which is always a sore subject in this part of the country, was handled through a combination of on street parking, remote parking lots and mass transit.

Mass transit helps reduce the parking problem by reducing the number of automobiles in the community. The speed limits in town are kept low to help guarantee the safety of the pedestrians who roam and meander through the streets and shops.

This kind of town is highly efficient in its use of land and resources. The density guarantees this efficiency but, more important, it helps to give Aspen its character.

Today that character is that of a super-sophisticated international village, but 150 years ago it was that of a western town with saloons and swinging doors.

Spray paint is the decorator's secret

Decorators and interior designers worth their chintz and color swatches will tell you: Paint is the fastest way to change the look of room, and spray paint is the quick and easiest way to apply paint. Faster than you can say "quick-drying formula," spray paint can transform attic and yard-sale finds into treasures and instantly coordinate accessories match a room's decor.

With aerosol spray, the sky's the limit. In 1996, traditional spray paint has been joined by a formulation newcomer, latex paint. The world's first-ever latex spray paint, Living Color from Krylon, is being hailed as a major step forward in spray-paint performance and convenience.

The exciting news for decorators and crafters is the technological breakthrough of waterborne aerosol products for home use. Waterborne expertise makes possible, for the first time, spray painting on such materials fabric and craft foam. Decorative techniques, like stenciling, are made easier, too. Latex spray is also appropriate for outdoor use: Wicker accessories and intricate wrought iron are made infinitely easier to paint with the convenience of an aerosol.

Imagine, for instance, stencil moons and stars on a porch or a bedroom wall, or in orbit around a breakfast nook, for an out-of-this-world look. You can easily create a decorative sisal rug or floor mat in a subtle geometric design using masking tape and spray paint. Fabric, too, can be spray painted and will remain colorfast in the washing machine.

Decorating novices and style innovators alike now can put away messy paintbrushes forever. "This easy-to-use product will inspire thousands of new around-the-house projects in 1996," says Tim Knight, vice president of marketing for Krylon. "The low odor and easy cleanup of Living Color, along with a contemporary color palette, will appeal not only to people who regularly use spray paint but to nonusers as well."

Need some inspiration? Krylon's new "Decorating With Color" booklet contains simple spray-paint projects transforming flea-market finds to magical make-overs and creating colorful crafts for home-furnishing accents. Learn to make a checkerboard square game table in an afternoon, theme a Crayon Box Kid's Room, stencil an Artful Runner or create Trendy Table Toppers with inexpensive charger plates.

The "Decorating With Colors" booklet to make rooms come alive can be ordered free of charge by calling 1-800-4-KRYLON.

Grow perfect lawn with sod

There's a hole in your otherwise very acceptable, if not perfect lawn. Maybe the dog or kids dug a hole. Maybe you're changing the shape of a garden or flower bed. Or maybe salt from sidewalk deicing caused the problem.

Whatever the cause of this unsightly problem, there's a fast, easy and certain solution that's often overlooked by many homeowners.

Whether it's called cultivated turf, turfgrass, turf, or just plain sod, this carpet-like grass can turn a hole in a lawn into a whole lot of lawn, with just four simple steps according to the not-for-profit Turf Resource Center (TRC).

Soil preparation

An essential first step in the entire process of patching a lawn is proper soil preparation. This includes clearing away all the dead or near-dead grass and possibly squaring up the area, or creating straight lines on all of the sides you are repairing.

Once the area has been defined, maybe by going so far as to lay a hose on the ground to outline the repair area, you should loosen the soil by spading or rototilling larger areas. Rake the surface smooth and remove any large clods, roots, weeds or other debris to achieve a level surface that maintains the original slope of the area.

A helpful tip from TRC is to make sure that when the final raking is in progress, the soil should be about an inch below any sidewalk or driveway surfaces as well as the area where the new sod will come into contact with the existing grass. When the new sod is installed following this advice, it will be at the same height as the surrounding surfaces. Otherwise, the new sod may be too high or too low, creating new problems that could have been easily avoided.

Buying sod

Once the surface is prepared, the area should be carefully measured so that the correct amount of turfgrass sod can be purchased.

In most areas, sod is sold by the square foot or square yard, with a single roll measuring approximately one square yard, or nine square feet. Slabs or folded pieces of sod available in some areas will not be as large, but their dimensions will be uniform and the total amount of sod can be easily calculated at the turfgrass sod farm or retail garden nursery.

If the "ground under repair" is relatively small, say less than 10 square yards, you can probably load the sod into the trunk of a larger car; however, if the trunk is small or the repair area large, you may have to make several trips or have the sod delivered.

Calling ahead to the farm or nursery to ensure you can obtain the quantity and type of sod you want is always recommended. If the sod will be delivered, advance time is even more important and you should expect to pay a separate delivery charge on very small quantities.

So that the new grass closely matches the existing lawn, it's a good idea to take a small piece of the existing grass to the sod farm or nursery center. However, attempting to match even known varieties may prove impossible because of turfgrass breeding improvements that continue to take place almost every year.

Turf installation

Because turfgrass sod is a living plant, TRC recommends that it be installed in 24 hours or less and watered within 30 minutes after installation, so having the soil fully prepared before the sod is purchased is very important.

Installation is simple, but some care is required to achieve a really great result. Install the first piece of sod on the outermost area of the repair, along a straight-line surface if possible. If the sod was rolled, be sure to back-roll the leading and tailing edges of the sod piece to make sure it will stay flat on the soil. Be careful not to pull or stretch the sod as you install it, or in an effort to force a fit. After being stretched, sod has a tendency to pull back to its original dimensions, which could ultimately result in gaps between pieces.

Using the first piece as a base, place all of the other pieces tightly against the first by butting the edges and ends tightly together, but not overlapping. If the area is large enough, stagger the end seams in a brick-like pattern.

A sharp utility, hunting or butcher knife should be used to cut pieces to fit the proper dimension. This is most easily done by placing an oversized piece in place, folding it back to where you need to trim and then cutting the piece from the root-soil side. This method reduces ripping of the sod and leaves a nice straight finished edge.

Water, water, water

With the sod firmly in place, the last step is the easiest yet perhaps the most important – watering.

You need to apply enough water to new sod so that the soil beneath the sod is thoroughly wet. As noted earlier, watering should be started within 30 minutes after installation.

An easy way to see if you've applied enough water is to gently lift a convenient corner of the new sod. If the base soil isn't thoroughly wet, keep watering. Water daily, or more often in extremely hot weather, for approximately two weeks or until the sod is firmly rooted.

Again, gently lifting a corner after a few days will reveal how well the sod is rooting. Within about a week, light tugging, without actually lifting the piece, will tell you the sod is rooted.

Turfgrass sod isn't just for whole lawns. It is also a convenient and simple way to patch small areas. Its major advantage over seeding is that it is virtually instant. Because it's instant, you know what the result will be and more important of all, you can enjoy your yard faster.

For additional information about turfgrass sod installation and other turf care tips, the Turf Resource Center offers a variety of complimentary brochures. Send requests to TRC, Dept. HI-4, 1855-A Hicks Road, Rolling Meadows, IL 60008.

Interest rates up

WASHINGTON (AP) – Interest rates on 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages inched back up to 8.16 percent this week, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Thursday.

After hitting a seven-month high of 8.18 percent April 3, the 30-year rate had dropped to 8.15 last week. But with this week's rise it has held so far this month at more than half a percentage point higher than the year-to-date low of 7.56 percent of Feb. 20.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for those refinancing mortgages, averaged 7.71 percent this week, more than recovering from a drop to 7.67 percent a week earlier and the highest rate since September.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 5.89 percent this week, down from last week's eight-month high of 5.91 percent.

Hot water heater tips

■ Drain a pail or two of water from the faucet located at the bottom of the heater several times a year.

■ Set the water heater at "normal," or about 120 degrees, in order to save energy. However, you may wish to set the water heater at 140 degrees if your dishwasher does not have a water heating booster as part of its automatic cycle.

■ Keep the burners clean.

■ If the pilot light goes out, follow the appliance instructions and relight it. If you smell gas, call your local gas company.

Adding enduring delight to your garden

Your garden is as much a reflection of your personality and the things in life that are most important to you as is the interior of your home.

But there's a great difference in most people's attitude towards these two important areas of their lives. Every so often they will decide to give their rooms a totally new look: refinish the walls, replace drapes and window coverings, move the furniture around or change it completely. Out with the old – in with the new! But rare indeed is a major overhaul of the yard or gardenscape.

A garden, once established, usually changes very little over the years and whatever changes are made come gradually. There will be a few trial plantings from season to season, or a flower bed will be moved to gain better sun or more shade. A once attractive shrub will wither or become ungainly and have to be replaced. For the garden reflects the more serene and contemplative side of our personality. A good part of the joy we take in our garden comes from its continuity, from watching the annual cycle of blossoming and transitions of color and foliage with its reassurance that this part of our life, at least, will remain unchanging.

Among the more acceptable changes that can be made to a garden with little effort and without disturbing its continuity is by adding an arbor.

Not only does an arbor provide an attractive accent in itself, it affords an opportunity for a dramatic display of one or more of the romantic old-fashioned climbing roses or the many new varieties of clematic or other flowering vines. Or it can be situated so that it frames the entry to your garden or a special vista.

Selecting your arbor

While ready-made arbors are available in metal, plastic and wood at garden supply stores, nurseries and home centers, the more enterprising do-it-yourselfers may wish to build it themselves. You can buy sets of plans but while a small arbor is a simple structure it is not an easy project to build from scratch. It requires not only superior carpentry skills but also lots of tools and you'll have to run around to pick up the lumber needed for a quality job.

A good wood arbor demands high grade materials, preferably rot-resistant. The best-looking arbors include lattice in their construction and that can create a problem. Not only is craftsman grade lattice not easily available but it requires special care in cutting and fitting in making an assembly. The alternative of having it custom built can be a spendy proposition even it you can locate a neighborhood carpenter who will take on a small job – a vanishing breed all across America.

The best approach, and the one which offers the most attractive results and the best value, is to assemble an arbor from one of the packaged kits produced under the Woodway and Arboria names by the LWO Corporation and available nationally through lawn and garden supply stores and departments. They are offered in a variety of styles, the most popular being the classic round-top or the straight-topped pergola model shown in our photos.

All models are nicely detailed and well-constructed of premium grade Western Red Cedar, a species nature has made so resistant to rot and insects that it does not require chemical treatment. Red cedar is also an attractive wood, warm in color, which takes paint or stains very well or can be left unfinished to weather to a soft gray which is particularly attractive in the casual or rustic garden.

These arbors are truly easy to assemble. Even an unskilled do-it-yourselfer can complete the job in about an hour using only a screwdriver. The latticed side panels are pre-assembled at the factory, and full detailed instructions are provided, together with all necessary fasteners. Each unit is fully cartoned to assure that it reaches you in clean, undamaged condition.

Finishing your arbor

You can paint these smoothly-finished arbors any color you wish, stain them or apply a clear coat if you prefer. Careful application of any finish its best done prior to assembly, and will take longer than putting them together. Unlike the industrial-looking plastic versions, with their glassy finish and mechanical aura, Arboria and Woodway Cedar arbors seem at home, attractive and unobtrusive, in the garden setting.

While you can do your final assembly of your arbor adjacent to where it is to be finally located, it may not be a convenient spot to work in. But these units are light in weight. They can be assembled in a practical location and readily moved to the chosen spot. It will require a couple of people but these won't have to be professional weight-lifters.

There are many places in the garden where an arbor can provide an attractive addition:

• As the entry to the yard or garden, or to a special garden walk.

• In a spot at the back of the garden, or in a corner, where it will offer shelter, particularly if you add an available accessory bench to convert it to a garden seat.

• To frame a view, either of part of your garden or of a vista beyond.

• On a section of lawn, with profusely-blooming roses or other flowering climbers, like clematis, honeysuckle or columbine, to make a key feature of your yard.

• Several in a row, with connecting trellis, to create a garden "tunnel" or gallery, with grapes or wisteria clambering overhead.

• At the top of a stairway, either wooden or stonework, down from a deck, or to a lower terrace or waterfront level.

With a minimum of care, these attractive arbors, with their durable red cedar construction and good craftsmanship, will provide many years of service while lending added beauty and delight to your continuing enjoyment of your garden.

For color literature and further information, write to Arboria Division, LWO Corporation, Portland, OR 97217.

Repair screening to fight insects

By Reader's Digest Books
For AP Special Features

Take time now to get your window screens and screen doors in shape. Even tiny holes can allow squadrons of mosquitoes to zoom through.

Screening is available in aluminum or fiberglass. Fiberglass comes in several colors and it is cheaper than aluminum and more flexible, making it easier to install.

But fiberglass is also easily damaged and stretched out of shape. Although stronger than fiberglass, aluminum is subject to corrosion and trickier to install.

Unless you're planning to replace all of your screening, use the same material currently in place so that the repaired screen blends in. Plugging holes<

With care, modern screening will last for years. Accidental holes, however, are just about unavoidable. Make repairs when holes occur before the entire screen has to be replaced.

Here are some tips:

• Plug small holes with a dab of clear nail polish or shellac.

• To patch a larger hole in aluminum, cut a scrap piece 1 inch larger all around than the damaged area.

Unravel a few strands of wire from all sides of the patch. Then bend the ends upward. Push them through the screening and fold them flat on the other side.

• To patch fiberglass screening, neatly trim the edges of the damaged area. Cut a patch from a scrap one-half-inch larger all around. Make sure the pattern aligns.

Apply a thin bead of clear, all-purpose household cement around the edges of the patch and press it in place. Smooth the glue and blot excess with a rag before it dries.

• Children can't reach the doorknob so they often stiff-arm the screen on their way out. Inexpensive guards, which you can mount over the screens, are available at home centers and hardware stores. The sturdy wire mesh prevents even a tiny hand from pushing out the screen. Replacing screens<

Replacement screening is sold in several widths, either by the foot or in rolls of various lengths. Purchase enough material to cover the screen frame with at least a 1-inch overhang on all sides.

On most metal-frame screens, the screening is held in place by a spline that fits into a groove. Some screens have reusable metal splines, but most have vinyl splines that should be replaced if old and stiff.

To get the right size, take a piece of the old spline to the store. Also pick an inexpensive tool called a spline roller.

• Remove the old splines with an awl or thin screwdriver. Remove metal splines carefully so that you can reuse them.

• Cut new screening about 1 inch larger than the frame on all sides. Lay it over the frame evenly, aligning a strand of screening with the groove. Clamp the screening to one short side of the frame.

• Starting at a corner on the side opposite the clamped side, pull the screening taut and roll the spline into place.

If you are using aluminum screening, first press the screening into the groove with the convex end of the spline roller. Then roll in the spline with the concave end of the roller.

With fiberglass screening, roll the screening and spline into place at the same time.

• To keep material from bunching up, cut a slit in the screening at a 45-degree angle to the corner. Press the spline into the corner with a screwdriver, then continue rolling in the spline around the frame.

• Trim excess screening along all edges with a sharp utility knife. Hold the knife at an angle and cut carefully along the outside edge of the grooves so you won't damage the screening if the blade slips.

Satellite dish has 'cloaking' device

It's like killing several birds with one stone for television lovers who have held off buying a satellite dish. Someone called it a functional pet rock for couch potatoes.

Molded of fiberglass and granite dust and designed to fit over an 18 or 24 inch satellite receiver, the new boulder size Rock-On dish cover is overcoming many people's reluctance to indulge in satellite television's wide programming choices and interactive opportunities.

Just think who those procrastinators might be, suggests Rock-On inventor Gary Chosewood, who as a ten year owner of a satellite dish dealership has heard every conceivable reason for not buying something people say they want to have.

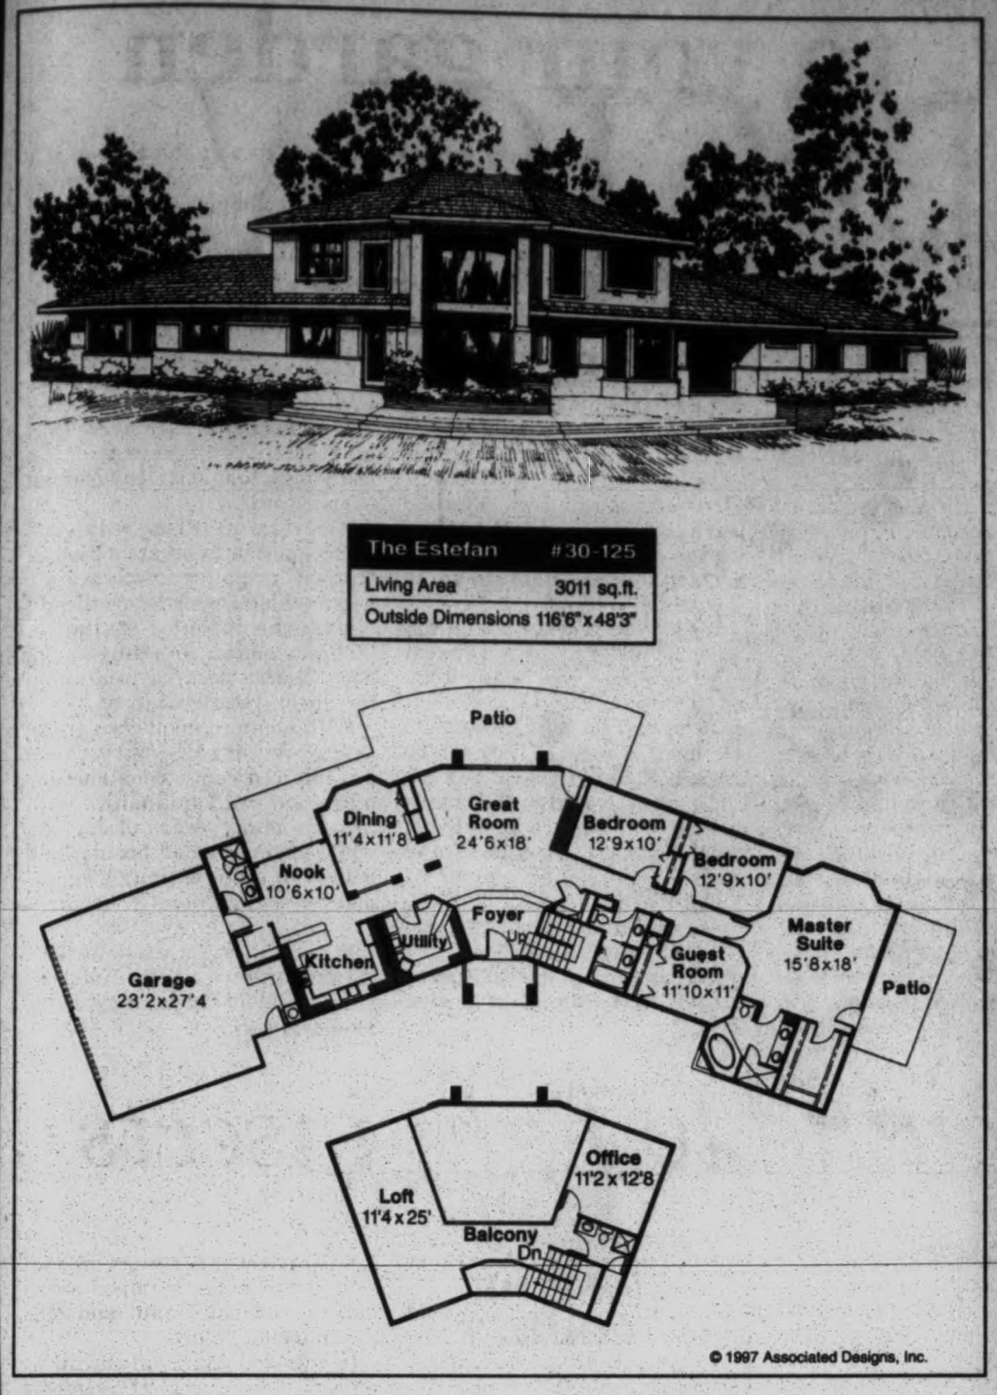
- Residents of thousands of deed restricted communities, where dishes were often prohibited until an FCC ruling in 1996 said ownership would no longer be forbidden. In many communities and historic neighborhoods, however, dishes can still be positioned only where they are not visible from the street or from a neighbor's home or driveway.
- Families whose pets and small children would damage or dismantle any expensive piece of electronic equipment in their yards.
- Families whose active backyard sports might put the dish at risk.
- Owners whose dish would create a hazard if positioned where reception would be best, like near an entry or pool.
- Renters who are prohibited from attaching anything to their building or lawn.
- Others whose aesthetic sensibilities simply don't allow them to hang an ungainly dish from their house or to position one in the midst of a lawn or garden.
- Those who fear that vandals or thieves would take or damage their receiver.
- Anyone who recalls dishes being damaged by heavy ice buildup.

Protected by the sturdy, lightweight boulder, perhaps clustered with its "companion rocks" and some plantings or ground cover, the dish no longer becomes the target of criticism, abuse or theft.

If your neighbors suddenly begin upgrading their yards with handsome landscape quality boulders, Chosewood adds, ask yourself if they are enjoying satellite programming.

While looking and feeling like a two ton granite boulder, the 27-pound Rock-On can be transported easily in most cars or ordered from many satellite receiver suppliers.

Information about Rock-On satellite dish covers is available from Rock-On, Inc., 4928 Abshier Blvd., Belleview, FL 34420, or call 800 543 5102.



Home plan wants a view

Stepped brick planters support a classic columned portico to create a stunning entry for the Estefan, a large, contemporary Mediterranean-style home with a wedge-shaped two-story great room at its core.

This plan is designed for construction on a view lot facing the rear. All of the rooms along the back are richly glassed to allow maximum appreciation of the outdoor environment.

Despite its large size, the home has no living room, per se, though the great room could be formally furnished if desired. With its wealth of windows and lofty ceiling, this space makes an ideal atrium. Small trees and flowering plants can't help but flourish in this bright, airy space.

Rectangular pillars bound an elegant octagonal dining room with a wide bay window and coffered ceiling. The nearby kitchen offers two more eating options: an eating bar, and a nook. Three sliding glass doors open on a covered patio.

A roomy walk-in pantry and a small bathroom are convenient to both kitchen and garage. Utilities are also close, in a large laundry room outfitted with deep sink, fold-down ironing board, and plenty of storage space.

Bedrooms cluster together on the right. Luxury touches in the elegant master suite include a coffered ceiling, wide window bay, huge walk-in closet and plush bathroom with spa tub, oversized shower and double vanity.

On the second floor, a balcony-bridge overarches the Estefan's entry, connecting the loft to the office space and bathroom.

The loft's long unwindowed wall makes an ideal location for a library. This area might also be a good spot for the family computer.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Estefan 30-125 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"WOULD YOU PAY WHAT YOU ARE ASKING?"

Every homeowner wants to sell his or her home for the highest possible selling price. In an attempt to maximize profit, however, some sellers set the asking price too high above the market.

If you have your home on the market now or plan to sell it in the future, ask yourself this question, "Knowing what I know about my house, would I be willing to pay what I am asking?" This sobering question may help you price your home with realistic expectations. You know your home better than anyone else. Can it really support the price you think it should bring?

EXTERIOR
Does it make a good first impression from the outside? What have you done to guarantee that the exterior shows well? What have you not done that you should do to either the structure or the grounds? A Top selling price demands that your home must be in top shape.

INTERIOR
Does the house have that freshly decorated look? Are important mechanical items in good repair? How about the overall cleanliness? Remember, clean homes sell faster.

THE COMPETITION
Have you taken a long hard look at similar homes that are presently on the market? What are their features and asking prices? How does your home compare on a feature-for-feature basis?

RECENT SALES
What have been the recent sales prices of homes comparable to yours? How does your asking price compare with these recent sales prices? Are you in the ballpark or way out of line? The most accurate method available to forecast future sales prices is to review recent sales.

ADVICE: It is better to properly price your home at the outset than live with the frustration of trying to sell a property that is obviously overpriced. When selling, be sure to use the professional services of a Realtor.

Top technology temps can work from home

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

Wish you could make a six figure income working from home?

Usually that requires going into business for yourself, with all the attendant responsibilities of finding clients and marketing your expertise on an ongoing basis. Now, however, information technology (IT) professionals with some of today's most in-demand areas of expertise, can work from home and let someone else market their talents for anywhere from $35-$125 an hour.

According to Tim Booker, area president for the MidAtlantic region for RHI Consulting, the division of California-headquartered Robert Half International which places information technology consultants, companies are increasingly offering high level contract talent the option of working from home.

"One of the advantages of this approach for employers," says Booker, "is that they don't have to provide any office space for these people." They don't have to provide computer equipment either. "Typically, these people have their own PCs," says Booker.

Reduced work space and equipment costs aren't the only reasons companies are making this option available. To land the talents of industry experts or people with in-demand skill sets, sometimes this approach is required, says Booker.

Booker is quick to point out that not every assignment nor every contractor is a fit for the work-from-home arrangement. According to Booker, "Typically it's a software developer, someone who has a tremendous amount of development experience." who's given the latitude to work this way.

"Data base administrators, particularly with Oracle, Sybase or SQL server expertise, and SAP or PeopleSoft package experts who can provide expertise in implementing or expanding the capabilities of those products in a given environment, can also work from home," says Booker, adding, "Even mainframe application developers can work this way by dialing on to the client's mainframe."

Besides specific technical abilities, business acumen is important for these projects. "The people generally in demand for these assignments need to really understand how to use technology to design business solutions," says Booker.

WHO'S WATCHING?

Since contractors are typically paid by the hour, you might be wondering how companies paying for this expertise keep track of contractors' time when they work from home. "Typically, there's a project objective and we estimate the number of hours needed to achieve it," says Booker. "As long as the person provides the agreed upon deliverables within the estimated period of time, there's not really a problem. There's a lot of trust involved."

Honoring that trust is essential to maintaining this enviable work arrangement. "People who want to work this way must be very ethical," says Booker. "The client really has to feel that they're getting value for the dollars being spent."

The company who refers the contractor also has to feel confident about someone's ability to to perform without supervision. "If you disappoint the company that gave you the same degree of autonomy next time," says Booker.

Booker admits that not every client of RHI Consulting is comfortable with this approach so not every assignment offers it. However, "if someone builds themselves a reputation in the marketplace for producing tangible results" says Booker, they'll be kept busy.

Busy enough, says Booker, "that there are people earning full time salaries working part-time from home. By not having to market themselves, they can devote their hours to projects and some juggle multiple projects. In fact, some who work this way have full time day jobs and work on their contract assignments evenings and weekends."

How widespread is this practice likely to become? "This trend is still limited to some degree by the capabilities of client server technology," says Booker, who prior to joining RHI Consulting worked for IBM for five years as a senior consultant and for four years at Software Management Consultant Inc. as Southeast Regional VP of Operations. "Mainframes allow remote development on both large and small projects. With client server, it tends to work only for self-contained projects."

WORKING LIFE

Working with your biological clock

By Deborah L. Jacobs, Chronicle Features

If you start work persuing your mail, take a coffee break around 10:30 a.m., and head for lunch at noon, you're probably missing out on your most productive times of day.

That's because we all have energy peaks and valleys, regardless of whether we find a job scintillating or deadly dull. Most people hit their stride between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m., have a mid-afternoon lull, and pick up steam again just before quitting.

Blame it on the biological clock, and what scientists call circadian rhythms--the body's daily cycles that put us to sleep and walk us up. By figuring out your best and worst periods, you can cut down on errors and accidents, take less time to complete boring tasks, and improve your creativity.

For optimal results, go to bed and wake up at about the same time each day. And forget all the macho execs who brag about getting by on a few winks. Most people need seven to eight hours of shut-eye a night.

To chart your highs and lows, keep a log. Start with a simple scale that runs from "very sleepy" to "very alert," advises Claudio Stampi, of the Institute of Circadian Physiology in Cambridge, Mass. Note how you feel each hour or two for several days, and look for a pattern.

For day workers, the results vary only slightly, depending on the hours a person keeps. Night workers tend to have more frequent lulls (sometimes often as every 90 minutes) because of their irregular sleeping habits. Still, both groups can learn to organize work around high-energy periods. Here's how you might structure a day shift::

• Morning peak (10 a.m. to 1 p.m.). This is when we tend to be most alert, cheerful and cooperative, says Timothy Monk, professor of psychology at the University of Pittsburgh. It's a good time for critical and creative thinking, operating tricky machinery, or doing job-hunting tasks you dread (like writing cover letters, making cold calls, or going on interviews.) If you're planning to ask for a raise, catch the boss before 1 p.m.

• Mid-afternoon dip (1 p.m. to 3 p.m.). During this part of the day, don't even think about delving into that boring report. Instead, schedule lunch, or job-related activities that require less attention, like opening the mail, filing, or making appointments.

The slightly foggy feeling that most people experience has little to do with whether or not you take lunch, when you eat, or the size of the meal. Menu choices can make a slight difference, though: high-protein foods (like chicken, fish, and cheese) tend to leave you more alert, while carbohydrates (most notably pasta) make you even sleepier.

• Late-afternoon surge (4 p.m. to 6 p.m.). Use this spell of increased productivity for tasks that demand concentration, such as proofreading, crunching numbers and planning the next day's agenda.

• Early evening second wind (7 p.m. to 9 p.m.). If you feel inclined to work after dinner, it's a good time to learn new things, read technical journals, or memorize material. Just be sure you quit within two hours of bedtime, or you might have trouble falling asleep.

What can you do when energy starts to lag? James Maas, (cq) a professor of psychology at Cornell University, recommends a 15- or 20-minute "power nap." Most U.S. businesses wouldn't even consider the idea, but a brief snooze in your office or the company lounge would boost productivity, Maas says.

While some sleep experts frown on caffeine, there may be a time for that too. People who can't get started in the morning without a cup of java probably aren't getting enough sleep the night before, says Lynne Lamberg, a Baltimore writer and author of the book, "Bodyrhythms (cq): Chronobiology and Peak Performance" (Morrow, 1994). Later in the day it's perfectly natural to need a pick-me-up. Whether you turn to coffee or caffeinated soft drinks, mid-afternoon is when you can reap the full benefits of a high-octane jolt.

Money-saving resources help out in home office

By Alice Bredin, Tribune Media

In about two weeks I am moving my home and therefore my home office. Needless to say, this is a huge logistical project. It is also expensive. Because of all the cash I am laying out for the move, I am more on the lookout than ever for bargains, money-saving services and inexpensive resources for my business.

One money-saving trick I learned during this move is that if you are installing multiple phone lines and want to save on hefty per-line installation fees, you can request an RJ21 jack that accommodates many phone lines in one.

Because I am in a money-saving mind set I created the following list of free and money-saving resources for home-based businesses. You can use them if you are moving or if you just like to save a little money in the operation of your home-based business.

-Call your local and long-distance phone carrier every six months or so and find out what offers it currently has that will save you money.

-Reuse the back side of paper for printing out rough drafts or items you are faxing.

-Barter with your attorney, accountant or other professional for services to cut down on bills.

-Buy your chairs, file cabinets and desks from liquidators and other companies that buy up furniture when businesses goes under.

-Only send overnight packages when it's necessary. Many times the mail will suffice.

Aside from my tips, many free resources on the market can help you cut costs. Here is a sampling:

-"Achieving the Competitive Edge Through Office Ergonomics," Quill Corp., (800) 789-6640, www.quillcorp.com.

-Boston Computer Exchange, (800) 262-6399. Maintains a database of used equipment and serves as a matchmaker for buyers and sellers.

-"Glossary of Leasing Terms," Advanta business Services Corp., (800) 255-0022. A free guide to help you understand the language used when negotiating a lease.

-"Lighting in a Healthy Office," Steelcase, (800) 333-9939. A free, 17-page publication that discusses how lighting affects performance and productivity. Includes instructions for adjusting the lighting in your office.

-"Software for Your Small Business Success," National Business Association, (800) 456-0440. A guide that teaches you how to choose the right software for your business. Cost is $2.50.

-"Hands-on Solutions to Improve Your Profits and Productivity: Energy-Saving Tips for Small Businesses," Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Clearinghouse, (800) 363-3732. A free, 27-page resource guide. This group also handles phone queries free of charge.

-"Using Prepaid Phone Cards," Consumer Action, 116 New Montgomery St., Suite 233, San Francisco, Calif. 94105. A cost comparison of various cards, including advice on how to use them.

-Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Publications Information Center, (800) 699-3362. Provides free resource booklets and fact sheets on hiring and employment.

You can find these resources and others in a just-released book called "Bootstrapper's Success Secrets: 151 Tactics for Building Your Business on a Shoestring Budget" by Kimberly Stansell (Career Press, $13.99), (800) 955-7373.

The author is creator and publisher of a newsletter called Bootstrappin' Entrepreneur, which highlights free and low-cost resources and techniques for starting up and managing a business. The hook is full of resources and advice for keeping costs low while you expand your business.

Ex-boss's badmouthing is wearing her down

By Lindsey Novak, Tribune Media

Q: When I started, my supervisor told me she doesn't give second chances. I also soon found out that she's a gossip and that having "the scoop" on other employees opens doors for her with influential people in the company.

After a short while, her boss took a liking to me, and that was it. I was on her bad side She was continually badmouthing me. She gave me bad reviews, but her boss changed them to good ones. I was even promoted after several years.

I was subsequently promoted to anpther department, which I though would put an end to it. It didn't. My former supervisor was caught several times calling people I was to meet with to "warn" them about me. she was ordered to stop, her boss put it in her reviews, and she was advised she would be fired if she continued.

Unfortunately, she had not stopped and it doesn't look like the company will back up its threat. Those who know me ignore her, but those who don't believe her gossip and react strangely to me when we meet. I've tolerated this many years, but it's wearing on me.

A. I've received many letters from readers with similar problems. It's hard to understand why companies keep certain employees, especially vindictive ones, because no matter how technically good they are at what they do, they are usually replaceable. It sounds like your former supervisor may be connected to someone in upper management who protects her job, but informs whoever is her boss to disregard her supervisory comments. In fact, she may not have supervisory authority, as shown by your promotions. It also seems as if you like your job and management likes you.

But you need to explain to her boss how the situation is wearing you down. If her boss can't commit to stopping her behavior, you may want to meet with a private counselor who can test your stress level and work with you on releasing it.

WHAT TO DO WHEN NEW JOB ENDS AFTER A MONTH

Q: I left my job at a hospital for a seemingly better job at another health-care center. My new manager took one month to arrange for me to use my computer terminal. During that time, she insisted that I learn another computer software, did nothing to help my transition to the organization, expected me to grasp everything in one month and when I didn't, she fired me within the 90-day probationary period. Do I have recourse without damaging my future employment aspirations?

A: Unfortunately, you have no recourse against your recent employer. During the probationary period of a new job, a company can terminate an employee for any reason, as long as it's not discriminatory in nature. Also, because Illinois is an "employment at will" state, an employee can be fired at any time for any reason that's not discriminatory.

Many organizations will rehire past employees who left on good terms. Since you were gone for only a month, you may want to call your previous supervisor and express your wish to return. If the hospital can't rehire you, ask your boss's help in developing a reason for leaving so you'll be worry free when interviewing. It's OK to be open with your past boss about the new job not working out, because he knows you.

JOB TITLE IS IMPORTANT FOR GETTING NEW JOB

Q: My boss gave me a new title and new business cards, but the change was never put through in the human resources department. I left the company and would like to use the new title on my resume, but it's been two months and HR still hasn't updated my file. What should I do?

A: Hopefully, the HR director has no objections to the new title and is simply too busy to have the records formally corrected. Explain the importance of having your file match the information on your resume and ask for a letter stating your job title and employment dates.

WRITE IT AND REAP!

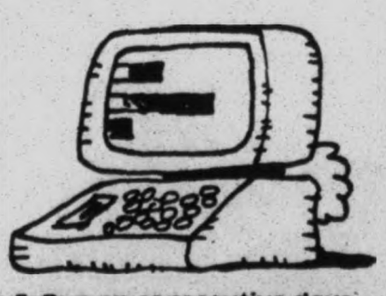
Writing a classified ad that gets results–whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise–is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in-kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!



5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

Redesigned Toyota 4Runner beautiful, versatile

CAReport

By Anne Fracassa
Avanti NewsFeatures

I'm doing my best to teach my two girls to be polite and lady-like in every way. So it should be no surprise that they love to wear frilly dresses.

That said, why is it that they both get all excited when I bring home a truck or sport utility?

"Mommy's got a truck, Francesca," Becca squeals.

"Cool," says Francesca. "We love to drive in trucks."

"Becca," scolds Francesca, "That's not a truck, that's a sport ute."

Becca frowns, then says: "That's OK, mommy, I still wuv sporty utes."

And that really sums up the whole craze in sport utility vehicles. They appeal to a lot of women, largely because they're so comfortable, versatile, fun to drive, safe and commanding.

So it is with the 1997 Toyota 4Runner. This year, the 4Runner has been completely revised, both inside and out. There's new styling on the exterior and interior, new engine choices and an updated suspension system that I noticed almost immediately on the drive home. Much, much more comfortable to drive, this 4Runner is. Its' ride is more like a passenger car than a truck this year.

Something you need — no matter how young, old or agile you are — are running boards. The 4Runner is quite high off the ground and even with the assist grips, you'll have a hard time.

The ground clearance on the base models is almost 10 inches. With the 4WD option and P265 tires, that pumps it up to 11.1 inches. That'll make for some interesting footage in a short dress, you can bet. Save yourself grief ... get the running boards.

There's even a new color this year — Radiant Red. What an understatement.

The top-of-the-line 4Runner, the one tested, had a base price of $25,678 and topped out at $28,565 with added options, including the sport package. It's in the price range of most of its competition.

If you drive fast, don't get this color. You can see it a mile away, as clear as the Hale-Bopp comet.

You want options in a sport ute? The 4Runner's got plenty. It's available in 2- or 4-wheel drive, 4-cylinder or V6 engines, with manual or automatic transmissions and in a base, SR5 or Limited models.

Driven was the 4Runner 4-wheel drive 4-door outfitted with a 3.4-liter V6 and 5-speed manual transmission. Strong choice for a sport utility of this size. Horsepower is rated at 183.

The V6 also features a 24-valve twin-cam that's designed to boost power in the high rev range and gives it the low-rev torque needed in off-road or towing applications.

You'll find the best value in the 4-cylinder 2-wheel-drive base 4Runner. It's powered by a 2.7-liter 16-valve twin cam 4-cylinder engine that pumps out 150 horses. The base price, before any options, is $19,888.

The top-of-the-line 4Runner, the one tested, had a base price of $25,678 and topped out at $28,565 with added options, including the sport package. It's in the price range of most of its competition.

I wish I had driven the automatic. The 5-speed manual transmission slowed me down because I had a hard time with it. The 5-speed will do well for you if you do a lot of off-road driving and/or towing. If you only occasionally off-road and do mostly city driving, demand the automatic.

On the outside, the 4Runner has a front stance that's commanding. The look is impressive and follows rounded corners and flattering lines, ending up with a rear treatment that surely says Toyota. The heavy Japanese influence is there, and you know what? It really looks good.

Inside you'll find everything at your fingertips — no stretching, no bending — even the emergency brake is right there, up high enough you can use it with a flick of the wrist. Instrumentation is smartly laid out and easy to understand. Had a little trouble with the radio — those buttons and knobs are so small.

The 4-wheel drive system is shift-on-the-fly, which means you can engage it if you're going under 50 miles per hour. An option is a locking rear differential. When operated in 4WD-Low, the differential locks both rear wheels together, forcing them to turn together and giving you the best of traction in low-traction applications.

Don't misunderstand me when I say this is comfortable to ride in and the handling is quite nice. The surprise is that there's not a sacrifice of off-road ability in this vehicle.

Because most automakers are now making their sport utes more conducive to highway driving than off-road capabilities (because most people use their sport utility mostly in highway situations), it doesn't mean it suffers in the off-road area. Toyota engineers melded the basics of both — comfort on the highway and handling and control in off-road situations.

I could give you all the stuff about the double-wishbone design, low-pressure gas filled shocks, stabilizer bars and the 4-link coil spring setup, but I won't. It's got a darn good ride and handling is superb. That's it. Never felt uncomfortable in any situation I found myself in.

There's a lot of legroom and just plain room on the inside of the 4Runner. It accommodates whatever you throw at it. The 50/50 split rear seats are a breeze to pull down to give you even more room to haul whatever you think is necessary.

The cargo area is more than any one family would need on a given day and the one-piece swing-up tailgate has a power window — the only one of its kind in the industry.

The safety features are all there, too, including dual air bags and standard 4-wheel anti-lock brakes.

The 4Runner is perfect as a family car, a single's car, a business car or a people hauler. Versatility is its strong point.
