school district that it (the machines) didn't make a difference. The law is to protect the voters, not the school board."

In his lawsuit, Vorva alleged the district did not seek proper authority to use the new touch-screen voting machines. The machines failed to register 716 ballots out of almost 11,000. The election carried by 96 votes.

District Superintendent Chuck Little said he doesn't understand Vorva's viewpoint. "I am very surprised, especially after the issue has been reviewed four times – by the state board of canvassers, local canvassers, the Secretary of State, and the Wayne County Circuit Court.

"The school board did not act improperly. The machines did not act improperly. I don't understand the appeal. I don't want to engage in a dialogue in the paper on what Vorva means."

Vorva was to conduct a public question-and-answer program about the lawsuit and other school issues at the Summit on the Park in Canton Wednesday, Sept. 17. The program, initiated by the Plymouth-Canton Jaycees, originally was scheduled as a Stumpy's back.

The 35-pound African spur-thigh tortoise and owner Dr. Dennis Elmer were reunited Tuesday, two weeks after Stumpy lit out from a backyard

It was pure relief when I was sure it was indeed him," said Elmer, a veterinarian who lives in Salem Township.

The 18-inch tortoise, 14 inches wide and 8 inches tall, escaped from his pen Aug. 27.

"I gave him a big hug. He didn't show any emotion, he's real stoic," Dr. Elmer said.

But after mostly eating grass, dandelions and clover during the twoweek road trip, "He dug into his regular diet with gusto," Elmer added.

By eyewitness accounts phoned to Elmer, Stumpy's odyssey took him more than five miles through the fields, roads and highways of western Wayne and east Washtenaw counties and finally to Redford. Elmer said the journey and the attention of Redford Vandenberg Elementary kids left Stumpy "a little stressed out." "He was incredibly dirty. I gave him a good bath and oiled up his shell (with mineral oil)," was brought to this area with a group of 36 other tortoises. The animals were the subjects of a University of Michigan study on Vitamin D synthesis.

Dr. Elmer works at Remrock Farms clinic in Salem Township. To help a friend running the study, he'd been keeping Stumpy at his home on Salem Road at Brookville Road.

"Reptiles need Vitamin D to absorb calcium, they normally get it from natural sunlight," he said.

But reptiles kept indoors in cold weather regions can die from calcium deficiency. In the study, half the tortoises were provided artificial lighting indoors to simulate the sun. Stumpy was under the bulb.

Elmer also has a natural pen for Stumpy in his backyard, where the tortoise can get some real sunlight. But after a few cool days in late August, Stumpy was getting restless being stuck inside.

When the sun came out Wednesday, Aug. 27, he got to return to his outdoor pen. But Elmer said that while preoccupied inside the house, "He knocked over one of the logs, he was gone within 20 minutes."

Planning: The Plymouth Township Planning Commission will meet at 7 p.m. in the township board room.

District court will be rebuilt on original site

BY KEVIN BROWN STAFF WRITER

The new 35th District court house should be built on the site of the former court building.

That's the recommendation of a court reconstruction committee headed by former district judge James Garber.

Court Administrator Kerry Erdman, another committee member, said the recommendation will be presented to the court Advisory Board in about two weeks, for a final decision.

Erdman said "a lot of factors" contributed to the decision to go with the site of the former court house, destroyed by fire in July.

A study of population growth projections over 20 years suggests the current case load, 38,000 per year, "will probably increase to the 50,000 to 56,000 range," Erdman said.

"We looked at the number of courtrooms it would take to handle that. We determined it would take no less than three judges and a magistrate," he said, adding four courtrooms would be needed. The former Dunbar Davis Hall of Justice had three courtrooms.

In exploring other sites, the committee looked at some property near the northwest corner of Haggerty and Ann Arbor Roads, a parcel near Five Mile and Beck roads, some property near Mettetal Airport at Joy and Lilley roads, and Unisys property on Plymouth Road across from the former court - where portable units will house the court until a permanent courthouse is built.

Erdman said these parcels were either too big or small, or too expensive.

One thing going for the former court house site was that it already had sewer, water and electrical hookups.

"You have to keep in mind the fact debate between Vorva and school district representatives.

district According to spokeswoman Judy Evola, the schools considered the debate a "moot point" after Judge Rashid's ruling. "Since we want to participate in things that are not divisive but that bring the community together, we declined."

Jaycees President Tim Fedewa said his organization was concerned that Vorva's Sept. 17 program would be perceived as a debate without the school board. "This was a different project," he said, adding that the Jaycees did not want to be perceived as endorsing any positions on the bond election.

"I thought it was premature that they would do that (cancel) now that we are appealing," said Vorva. "I didn't get a chance to talk to anyone but the Jaycee people. I'm not surprised the school district didn't want to do this. They feel they got what they wanted."

Vorva said he also had planned on discussing dividing the school district in two, between Canton Township and ship. "The bond election showed that Canton's large population had and will continue to have an influence on the school district. How do we feel about Canton driving all the issues? Northville outperforms us all the time. You could say from that example that smaller is better."

Boak said the appeal process could take up to a year. "Who knows? Anything could happen. They (the appeals court) have experienced a great backlog.

They have whittled away and gotten it down somewhat. As I understand it, a year is the benchmark.

Boak said he continues to receive "lots of nice donations from concerned citizens" for Vorva's legal fund. He would not reveal fund amount or the legal fees of his client.

However, commenting on Vorva's estimate that the district probably spent "close to $25,000" on legal fees, Boak replied: "That's because they've chosen to have three lawyers. We'll have to let the voters come to a conclusion on that."

Evola said the district has spent $28,000 on legal fees to date. The fees covered payments to Wayne County to conduct a recount of the bond election vote, the voting machine manufacturer's representative (Unilac) to attend public hearings, the state board of canvassers, the district's legal firm, and in-house counsel.

Vorva also refused to comment of his legal fees. "What's more important, money or my fundamental rights?" he said.

Appeal may hold up sale of school bonds

BY RENEE SKOGLUND STAFF WRITER

The Plymouth-Canton school district may not be able to go forward with their $79.7 million bond sale

According to a bond sale lawyer with a Metropolitanarea law firm, if the appeal Plymouth attorney Steven Boak filed on behalf of Jerry Vorva in the First District Court of Appeals on Friday challenges the validity of the March 22 election, potential bond investors will be leery.

"Bond counsel can't give unqualified opinion," the lawyer said. "No one will buy the bonds. I doubt if the district would offer them. Are you going to buy from this school district versus one not involved in litigation?"

If Vorva prevails in his appeal, the case would go back to Wayne County Circuit Court and Judge Rashid would have to decide if the district has met the burden of proof, according to the lawyer.

Vorva claims Judge Rashid imposed the burden of proof that the touch-screen voting machines used in the March 22 bond election affected the outcome of the election fell upon the plaintiffs rather than the school district.

Prior to filing papers on Friday, Boak said the district could go ahead with the bond sale. "There hasn't been a court order preventing them from selling anything. It's there decision.

District spokeswoman Judy Evola said Boak's statement was untrue. "You need your bond counsel's opinion to sell the bonds. Our bond counsel would not give us an unqualified opinion in litigation. We would not be able to sell the bonds.

"Therefore, we would not be able to proceed with the financial piece of the project. It's very unfortunate for the children and the entire community. Our community is growing. We need this additional space in order to continuing offering the educational opportunities that we do."

East Middle School celebrates its 40th year

RENEE SKOGLUND

East Middle School will celebrate its 40th birthday beginning with an open house at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 17.

"We want to make sure former staff and students of Plymouth Junior High and East are welcomed back. We will have as many old pictures and band recordings as we can," said Assistant Principal Jerome Sullivan.

Sullivan said not many junior high and middle school bands recorded their music in the 50s, 60s and 70s. Whether past bands played well is irrelevant; just the fact that they played warranted a recording.

"Plymouth was so much more of a rural community back then. I'm sure the band was a focal part of the kid's lives," said Sullivan. He added that as part of their experience in vocal music, students had to learn to sing an opera aria. "That was pretty heavy stuff for middle school." Sullivan said the school still fosters a strong sense of community among its students. "School is very important to their life. Mrs. Franklin and I try to maintain that feeling. Most of our kids are active in band, athletics and other activities. East is not just a place you go to school. "We have a family way of doing things here. There are expectations to be met. East was the original middle school for the community, and we want to maintain that feeling."

Teachers also had more latitude in disciplining their students in 1957. "When I was a student a teacher could give out 25 push-ups if the student didn't do his homework. Teachers ruled with an iron fist, not quite literally, but pretty close.'

Schryer said Plymouth Junior High was a showcase of floor-toceiling glass when it was first built. Architects and planners visited weekly. "Anyplace you see drywall today used to be

Stumpy's journey

A story appeared in the Seit. 4 Plymouth Observer about Stumpy's escape, and included Dr. Elmer's phone number. That day, he started getting calls, on sightings over the previous week.

Several callers said they figured Stumpy was a native species, and learned differently after seeing the newspaper story.

First, a neighbor across the street reported seeing Stumpy going through their yard soon after his escape. Stumpy's tracks were also spotted Friday, Aug. 29 along a road in a new subdivision just west of Elmer's house.

On Saturday, Aug. 30, Stumpy, now heading south, crossed Brookville Road and passed through yards and fields. Elmer also got a call that Stumpy was seen crossing part of Fox Hills Golf Course Elmer organized two tortoise search parties and posted 500 fliers, to no avail.

Stumpy was spotted spending several hours on Sept. 1, Labor Day, in Tina Hubbard's yard off of North Territorial before crossing the road. Elmer reported seven calls Sept. 4-5 from motorists who spotted him a few days earlier ambling east down the side of North Territorial.

preferred traveling along the road, instead of plowing through fields.

One motorist who spotted Stumpy traveling along North Territorial stopped his car and moved the tortoise to some nearby grass, figuring he would be better off away from the road.

Now heading south, Stumpy made it to the M-14 freeway. Turning east, he was spotted at 5 p.m. Friday, Sept. 5 in the medi-an between Napier and Beck roads in Plymouth Township.

"A woman said she saw a semi-truck and a car parked by the side of the road at the 15-mile marker," Elmer said. The caller told him they were probably helping the tortoise cross the road. Stumpy's presence caused a big traffic backup.

Russell Grieve, a Redford trucker, picked up Stumpy and took him home to show his kids. On Monday, Sept. 8, he called their school.

Stumpy goes to school

Grieve, who knew the tortoise wasn't a native species, called Vandenberg Elementary, figuring his child's teacher Syndee Malek would be interested. "He told the the secretary he was going to bring him up after school, he said it would be a surprise," said Malek, who teaches fourth and fifth graders.

Her first reaction on seeking the tortoise was, "Oh, he's as cute as could be."

Malek, who has an extensive science background, saw the opportunity to present Stumpy to the class as a learning tool. She had Grieve bring him back Tuesday morning, and showed him to the class.

"First we just observed him, we watched some of his behavior. He Elmer said Stumpy probably was a little shy at first but he Erdman said the committee suggests expanding the size of the old court from 26,000 square feet to around 34,000. To leave ample room for parking, the committee suggests building a three-story court house.

"We went to the store and got some lettuce. He ate an entire head of Romaine lettuce and some grapes. He didn't care for blueberries or carrots," Malek said

After first meeting Stumpy on Monday, Malek determined from a reptile book the had at home - he was an African spurthigh tortoise. "My guess was someone got him at an exotic pet store and he got away."

By the time Stumpy returned for class on Tuesday, the Detroit Free Press had picked up on the story. Grieve showed a copy to Malek. "He said, 'I think we've found our owner," she said.

While the story listed Dr. Elmer as the owner, they printed his phone number wrong.

Meanwhile, a neighbor of Grieve talked to someone at Caputo Animal Hospital who knew of Dr. Elmer. His number was passed to Malek on Tuesday.

"We had listed all the things we already knew about Stumpy then listed a bunch of questions she said. Dr. Elmer was able to answer most of them. The session lasted 1:30-3 p.m.

The odyssey was over. It was time for Stumpy to return home.

No place like home

After returning Stumpy home to his indoor pen, Elmer said on Thursday, "He's chillin', hanging out under his heat lamp a lot Stumpy faced danger from cool weather, especially if there was a frost. Elmer also said it was possible a large dog could have gone after him. And there was the danger posed by cars and trucks. But Stumpy came through the adventure unscathed.

Elmer said he plans to make Stumpy's outdoor pen more escape proof.

"He'll eventually grow to be 200

Happy: Dr. Dennis Elmer is thrilled that Stumpy was found and returned home. Elmer organized two search parties and sent out 500 fliers. Finally, someone remembered seeing a story about the tortoise. And that led to Stumpy's return home.

President Lee C. Bollinger bristled when U.S. News & World Report ranked the University of Michigan 23rd and Dartmouth College in the upper,

"Michigan is so much better," said Bollinger, who served from 1994-6 as Dartmouth's provost in a tiny New Hampshire town. Bollinger spent 21 years at U-M and was hired back as president last November. "That poll borders on the shameful. It takes into account things that have nothing to do with the quality of education, and yet it's given enormous prominence in this country. It's a bad thing for American education.

The campus in Ann Arbor, a world-class institution, is famed for its research, particularly medical, and the president sees big things ahead in the field of cognitive neuroscience.

"The federal government will increase basic medical research. That's my personal view," he said off-camera after a taping of Channel 7's "Spotlight" program to be aired at 12:30 p.m. today. But teaching looms high on Bollinger's horizon.

"I'm teaching an undergradu-ate course," Bollinger said, delighted at the turnout for a political science course on the First Amendment (freedom of religion, speech and press). Until 1992, when he was U-M law school dean, Bollinger also taught.

While holding the line on student tuition isn't the most important goal in the world to him, Bollinger is pleased U-M could hold this year's increase to 2.9 percent, about the rate of consumer price inflation, but wouldn't commit to holding the line there.

This year the state boosted UM-Ann Arbor's appropriation 4.2 percent to $314 million, UM-Dearborn's 4 percent to $23 mil-lion, and UM-Flint's 4.8 percent to nearly $20 million.

Bollinger hedged on a major complaint of many suburban parents of students at Michigan's 15 public universities: Today it often takes 4 1/2 or five years to complete work on a four-year degree

"I'm not entirely sure why. It could be student choices. If that's true, we shouldn't discourage it," he replied. "Part of the problem is graduate students' staying on too long.

Airport 'trailblazer' dead at 76

James Davey, 76, a key figure in the development and expansion of Detroit Metro Airport in the 1950s through the 1970s, died Monday in his Manchester, Mich. home after a long battle with cancer.

Davey was credited by county officials for his involvement in personally negotiating an airport agreement in 1956 with American Airlines, which became the foundation for airline agreements that are still in effect today.

"The legacy of Jim Davey is the foundation upon which today's Detroit Metro Airport stands," said Edward McNamara, Wayne County executive. "He was a great leader — a trailblazer, who saw into the future and took the brave steps necessary to make Detroit a primary air transportation gateway."

Davey's contributions to the industry reached far beyond Detroit. Robert Braun, Wayne County's director of airports, called Davey his "mentor."

"He was a pioneer working with other airport executives

Navy during World War II. In 1943 he became a fighter pilot in the Marine Corps.

After the war, Davey joined the staff of the Wayne County Road Commission. He received a law degree from Wayne State University in 1948.

Davey became an attorney in the Roads Commission's Legal Department and soon became involved in what came to be known as Wayne County's Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Davey became Metro's airport manager in 1958. Three years later he was given dual responsibilities when he was named managing director of the Wayne County Road Commission.

By the time construction of a second new terminal was completed in the mid-1960s, scheduled airlines had switched from Willow Run to Detroit Metro.

S'craft seminar to examine stalking

Davey was credited for a massive expansion program that included doubling the size of the first passenger terminal, construction of a second domestic passenger terminal and a third terminal for international and chartered service.

In 1975, Davey retired and the North Terminal, which now houses Detroit Metro's hub carrier, Northwest Airlines, was renamed the J.M. Davey Terminal in his honor.

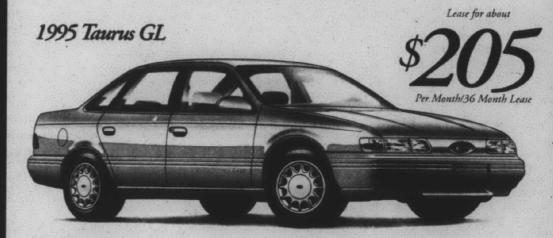

Davey received a "Winning Ways" Award from McNamara in May 1996. This award was presented to Davey in recognition of his vision, leadership and tenacity in laying the foundation for what is now Wayne County's Detroit Metro Airport.

Davey was scheduled to receive on Sept. 29 the William E. Downes Jr. Memorial Award from Airports Council International (ACI), the most prestigious award from ACI. The award presentation will occur during the Airports Council International-North America conference in Detroit this year.

Trash worries of your kids singing brown bag blues

s I remember back to my grade school days at Greenfield Elementary in Beverly Hills, it seemed things were different. Perhaps when you view things from a 10year-old's eyes, things just seem different.

I would not have recognized a good fat, bad fat or average fat even if I'd met one face to face! I can't speak for my classmates of the 1970s, but I don't think anyone else thought much about food or eating issues. We lived a carefree existence with kick-ball, four-square, monkey bars and best of all lunchtime - especially when we opened our brown bags and found a Twinkie, Ho-Ho, or Moon Pie keeping our bologna company.

Regular milk was a dime a carton. and chocolate milk was two cents more. Often I found myself and my friends doing one of the following to our lunches - trading sandwiches, or using them as basketballs into the nearest garbage can.

Today, kids seem to be a little more in tune and aware of issues such as fat and cholesterol. I was very impressed when my daughter Lauyren, now 13, came home from first grade, walked into our kitchen and demanded to see the back label of the soup cans in the cupboard to see the nutritional value.

Schools and the media, are teaching our children about the happy food pyramid, and much more. Even though our children are being exposed to lots of information, most would still opt for the fast food choice before a

Going out on a limb

Nontraditional lunches can be nutritional

BY PEGGY MARTINELLI-EVERTS SPECIAL WRITER

I remember the embarrassment I felt when I looked up from my desk and saw my dear, smiling mother hand my fourth grade teacher the lunch bag I had left on the kitchen counter. Besides that day, all of my memories of school lunch are pleasant ones. I loved sitting in the noisy lunch rooms with my friends, eating my humble sandwich and chips, and deciding if I should eat my apple before or after my cookies.

Getting kids to eat school lunch today is much more of a challenge than it was a generation ago when I was a child. Today, as with many aspects of our life, lunch is hurried through. Lunch periods have gotten shorter as kids cram more activities into their busy day.

With competition from snack vending machines, candy bars at check-out counters, and all the prepackaged, high fat, high sugar, high calorie, food targeted to the tastes of our children, it's a wonder they ever eat anything that is nourishing.

Don't give up! There are still many ways to get your child to eat a nutritious lunch.

Set a good example. Start your day with a nutritious breakfast and provide the same for your children. At dinner, provide a well-balanced meal and be sure to introduce new foods often. Plan your children's meals in advance. Grocery shop with school lunches in mind. Think about how you can use those "planned-overs" from supper for the next day's lunch. Choose nutrient-rich foods - whole wheat bread, fruit, vegetables, low-fat meats, beans and pasta, and watch out for empty calories from chips, snack cakes and candy.

Calling food something kids consider "cool" can change their attitude toward that food. One little boy I know gladly eats "trees" but wouldn't ever consider eating broccoli.

Don't use food as a threat, to reward or to punish. Avoid the "good food bad food" trap. It is not productive to tell your child they can't have dessert unless they eat their dinner. This only increases the value of desserts and makes them even more appealing. Give your child lots of choices, and they will get a good diet in the long run. This doesn't mean you have to provide a smorgasbord of food for your child to choose from, just vary the offerings, and try not to include too many foods that are high in salt, fat or sugar.

Demanding that children clean their plates before they can have dessert may be setting them up for a lifetime of eating problems. Children naturally eat until they are full. Don't mess with My 2-1/2-year-old "grazes" when she ats. She'll take a bite of macaroni and cheese, then a bite of a cookie, then a spoonful of peas. I don't make a big deal about the order she eats them in, and she ends up with a balanced diet.

that food. One little boy I know gladly eats "trees" but wouldn't ever consider eating broccoli.

When packing lunches it is also vitally important to keep food safety in mind. Use a good quality thermos to keep hot foods hot. It also lets you expand into the world of hot foods such as soups, stews, casseroles and macaroni and cheese. To keep cold foods cold, pack a reusable ice pack or freeze a juice box.

Give kids information about food to inspire them to eat nutritiously. Don't just tell your child to eat something "because it's good for you." Explain how food makes bones and muscles grow, and how it keeps you healthy. Use the freshest ingredients and include your child in the process of preparing meals. Take them grocery shopping, enlist their help in the kitchen and with clean up, too. Make meal times relaxing, and interesting. Allow your children to enjoy food.

tional, varied food choices, and after about a week of the "same old, same old," he was ready for a different main course.

> Be sure to include low-fat dairy products with every meal. Many parents serve their children too much juice. Even though juice is nutritious, it is high in calories, and may cause your child to become too full to eat. Unless your child has allergies to dairy products, the beverage of choice should always be milk for your schoolaged child. Dairy products provide an important source of calcium and vitamin D, vital to building strong bones and teeth.

Remember also that children eat with all their senses. No one likes the sight or texture of a squished or soggy sandwich. Pack your child's lunch with heavy items on the bottom.

well thought out nutritious bag lunch. It's an ongoing dilemma for those of us who pack lunches. Here are some tips to keep your kids from singing the lunch bag blues:

Always try to include fresh whole foods such as fruits and vegetables in lunch bags. Pack baby carrots, or vegetables and fruits cut into funny shapes with a fun dip. Ranch dressing is good with vegetables. Serve fresh cut fruit with a fun yogurt dip.

Include your kids in menu planning.

Prepare pinwheel sandwiches with soft tortillas or lavosh bread.

Make a big batch of homemade granola, and divide it into smaller bags to toss into lunch bags for a healthy snack.

Decorate thermal lunch sacks with buttons, patches, etc.

Make fruit kebabs with a big marshmallow in the middle.

Look for different shapes of pasta such as animals, cook, add a few diced vegetables, and Italian dressing for a healthy lunch.

Make your own trail mix with Gold Fish crackers, nuts, dried fruits, and chocolate chips. Visit a bulk food store for inspiration.

What experts say

"Try cookie cutters," suggests Nancy Kapal of Harrison Township, the mother of three, and a business owner. "Pick some fun shapes and cut out sandwich bread. I cut a loaf at a time and freeze what I don't use right away.

Kathy Menig of Birmingham, the mother of two and a social worker and preschool teacher makes her own "lunchables." She cuts meat and cheeses into small shapes or squares, and packs them with crackers or small slices of French bread. "These are kind of like kid hors d'oeuvres at half the cost," she said.

Stir up a seasonal dinner fast with fresh veggies

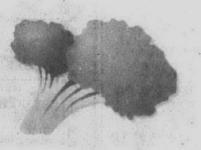

Fall, the season that MAIN DISH MIRACLES I love most, is here. Not only is the weather almost perfect, most of the time, but fresh vegetables and fruits, which are at the peak of eating pleasure, call my name. Eating the food Guide Pyramid's "Five-a-Day" becomes a treat instead of a treatment. I like to take advantage of the harvest with a stir-fry. A dinner of lightly sauteed vegetables, combined with your choice of meat, fish or chicken, and subtle seasonings, so as not to overpower the rich flavor of the fully ripe vegetables, is a perfect way to celebrate nature's bounty.

MURIEL

However, stir-fries are not always what they seem. Stir-fries served in restaurants often contain an abundance of fat - some times enough in one dish to use up an entire day's fat allowance. But this need not be the case. Nonstick pans and sprays, and reduced sodium sov sauces and chicken broth, can make stir-fries an interesting staple in any healthy eating

There are other reasons stir-fries should become a key part of your smart eating and cooking repertoire.

First, the veggies make the healthier, smaller-sized meat portion appear larger and thus more satisfying.

Second, stir-fries make vegetables more interesting - even to non-vegetable eaters. You may even be able to sneak broccoli by a charter member of the broccoli haters group.

time. If you prepare the vegetables the night before, you can have a guest-worthy dinner on the table in 10 minutes. Lastly, stir-fry varieties are infinite. The combinations are limited only by your imagination.

I used sliced chicken breast in Autumn Stir-Fry, but turkey, lean beef, pork, shrimp, scallops or fish fillets will work equally well. Even canned tuna or salmon, rinsed and drained, will suffice. Seasonings, and the choice of veggies create magic in a stir-fry. I might use Worcestershire sauce for beef. Shrimp and fish call for lemon. I like to add pineapple to pork. Fresh ginger and reduced sodium soy sauce are included in most of my stir-fries.

Fresh ginger is available in most markets. Buy a small piece. With a vegetable peeler, peel off the paper-like skin and slice. I usually have to buy more than I'm going to use, but the extra slices freeze well for another stirfry or even ginger tea. Ginger has a potent flavor, so be careful how much you use

A well-seasoned cast iron frying pan Third, stir-fries cut down on cooking is a good stand-in for a wok. Any large heavy skillet will do - even if it's not nonstick. There are many good nonstick sprays available, and you even have a choice of flavors.

Do start cooking the rice before you begin stir-frying. The beauty of stir-frying is how little time the cooking takes. There's nothing sacred about serving rice as an accompaniment. Experiment with barley, noodles or buckwheat groats as an alternate, they'll increase the fiber content, as well as, change the flavor

Finish off your meal with a cinnamon spiced baked apple, and perhaps a fortune cookie or two to recognize the Oriental root of stir-frying.

Dr. Paul Ehrman wife Robin, also a medical doctor, have three children and run a thriving family practice in Royal Oak. A large number of their patients are school-age children.

Dr. Paul urges parents to include milk and natural fruit juice in lunches. When children are old enough, let them grocery shop with you to teach them in early childhood how to make good nutritional choices. Make it a fun outing so they can feel a part of it. Training is everything. If your children only know healthy snacks after school that's all they'll expect. Start the learning process as young as two.

Packing tips

Keep cold foods cold and hot food hot until the last possible moment using Thermal cups, cold packs, insulated lunch bags or boxes

Label things. Freezer tape works great.

Pad the lunch container with crumpled newspaper comic strips to protect fragile items. These comics are great for a laugh at the lunch table

Wrap everything individually. Make a healthy batch of cookies, cool and wrap individually, then freeze.

Freeze grapes and they can double as a cooler for the lunch

Use fun, colorful paper products

Throw in a fun party favor or prize

As September rolls in, I wish you luck and success with your lunch packing. Remember, if our kids are putting good things into their bodies, they'll hopefully have the energy they need to ensure a good day at school.

Plymouth chili cook places second

Kenneth Horn of Plymouth placed second in the 19th Annual Michigan Chili Cookoff Sunday, Sept. 7 at Five Lakes Grill in Milford.

Tom Greiner of Northville took first place, and will compete in the 31st annual World Championship Chili Cookoff to be held Oct. 3 in Reno, Nevada. In addition to the first place trophy, Greiner received a check for $1,000.

Perry Sharp of Sylvania, Ohio won the trophy for best booth, and John Mikalak of Rockford, Mich. won the showmanship trophy. Dave Tennant of Manchester, Mich. placed third; Gayle Ihlen-feldt of Belleville, fourth, and Rene Farber of San Diego, Calif. placed fifth.

Event proceeds will help pay for culinary arts scholarships for deserving students, and the Mill Pond Beautification Project in Milford sponsored by the Downtown Development Authority.

Local participants included Diane Adamski of Redford, and Gary Ray of Livonia. Mark your calendars. The Second Annual Great Chili Cookoff, Michigan District Com-petition, will be Sunday, Oct. 12 in Kellogg Park, downtown Ply-mouth mouth.

Entry fee is $30 for Interna-tional Chili Society members, $60 non-members (includes I.C.S. dues). Call Annette Horn, (313) 455-8838 for details.

Seek out fresh picked, locally grown apples

John Chapman, aka Johnny Appleseed, went along planting apples as he walked. As nights grow crisp and the colors of autumn ignite, try reversing the process by biking, hiking or driving out into the countryside to pick up - or even pick apple varieties now abundantly featured at roadside stands and farmers' markets.

> Today, many apple varieties once found only at farm stands are commonly sold in supermarkets. Indeed, they are so common you may wonder, why buy them elsewhere?

> Compare a commercially grown apple that has been trucked into your area from across the country with one of the same variety, locally grown, and you will readily see the difference. For a striking example, most Red and Golden Delicious apples sold these days re beautifully shiny and round, but bland; those grown by a local farmer are more likely to boast full, juicy flavors.

Commercially grown apples can be excellent. However, they rarely are, explains Tom Vorbeck of Applesource, who offer 90 varieties of apples grown in the U.S. by mail, because, "They are usually picked too soon and stored too long. Grow-

Be an apple adventurer. ers pick Jonagold and Red Delicious," he goes on, "when they have good color but are not yet fully ripe." Apples picked early can last longer in the supermarket produce bin . This means even apples sold in season at many stores may not be fully ripe, hence their often thin, flat flavor.

> While I vote for Golden Russet as the pick of the crop, there are a large number of new and heirloom varieties of apples Vorbeck suggests looking for in your neck of the woods: Fuji, Jonagold and aromatic Macoun in New England; Stayman and intense Winesap varieties in the southeast U.S.; Northern Spy, Spigold, and the succulent Honeycrisp in the Midwest; Green-Skinned Newton Pippins and colorful Cox's Orange Pippin around the Pacific Northwest; and tart-flavored Sierra Beauty and Suzuka apples in California.

Because the heat brings out both their tart and sweet flavors, apples can be a wonderful addition to almost any meal – from breakfast to dessert. When cooked with a lightlysweet variety, like the Golden Delicious, chicken sautes, poached fish entrees or lean pork medallions take on a rich, moist flavor that doesn't overpower the meat's mild taste.

APPLE-SMOTHERED PORK MEDALLIONS

1 Tablespoon unsalted sweet butter

- 1 small onion, thinly sliced 1 Golden Delicious apple, peeled, cored and thinly sliced
- 3/4 cup sweet or hard apple cide
- 1 Tablespoon apple cider vinegar
- 4 pork medallions, welltrimmed, about 4 oz. each
- nutmeg 1/2 teaspoon salt Freshly ground pepper, to taste

In a medium, non-stick skillet, melt the butter over mediumhigh heat. Saute the onions and apple in the butter until they just start to brown, 4-5 minutes. Add the cider and vinegar. Cook until the liquid has thickened and just coats the bottom of the pan. Transfer the apple mixture to a bowl and set aside. Do not wipe out the pan.

In the same pan, sear the pieces of pork over medium high heat just until each side is white. Reduce the heat to medium. Return the apple mixture to the pan, spreading it over the meat. Add a generous dash of nutmeg. the salt, and freshly ground pep-

Cook until the pork is white all the way through, about 4-5 minutes. Take care not to overcook the meat or it will be dry and hard. Serve immediately, accompanied by white or wild rice and steamed green beans or some other green vegetable.

The Observer

Birmingham's best at Fall Spectacular

Jeffrey solves beauty puzzles As summer fades to fall, I'll use the next two beauty columns to answer reader questions about cosmetic products and how to get the most from them.

Q. I have trouble controlling the blusher I apply. It looks great when first applied, but then appears to be too much. Then, an hour or so later, it looks like I never applied any, all of the color has left. Suggestions?

that is not the case, then perhaps you fall into the common mistake of applying only a blusher or a cream rouge, instead of both. To truly keep your color on all day, first apply your cream rouge on the cheekbone, forehead and chin. Blend well. Then set it with a blusher. I usually try to combine a blue-based cream with a yellow-based blusher. That way you don't have to change your make-up when you vary your wardrobe.

Q. I have noticed that in all the fashion magazines the models are wearing a lot of red make-up on their faces, particularly around the eyes. Do they really expect "normal" women to copy this look? A. Looking at magazines to get ideas about make-up is a little like watching what comes down the runways to decide what to wear to work in the morning. There is a very small percentage of the population who can wear these clothes and wear that kind of make-up. The rest of us wait until we see what filters down to the department stores before making a decision. The magazines and the make-up artists they employ, are giving you an artistic interpretation. They shouldn't be taken literally. I would guess that all of the red will end up in your lipstick, or perhaps nail color. Putting red next to the eyes will make the prettiest Birmingham merchants come together to celebrate life, love and learning Sept. 24 when they host their 8th annual Fall Spectacular to raise scholarship money for kids who won their battle against cancer. Everyone is invited!

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO

Not all clouds have a silver lining, but some do.

And it's for the hundreds of local kids who beat childhood leukemia or organ cancers, that the businesses in downtown Birmingham donate their time, talents, merchandise and food, for a gala that showcases their fashions and finery while raising money to send these kids to college.

Under tents set up in the parking lot at Townsend and Bates, a live and silent auction, taste of the town, and professional runway show, highlight the evening which also includes an art exhibition, afterglow and entertainment.

It's all set for Wednesday, Sept. 24, beginning at 6 p.m. Tickets are $45, ($55 upon availability at the door) or $125 for patrons, which means reserved seating, three complimentary drinks and valet parking.

Tickets are on sale at almost every downtown business.

This year, Birmingham's fashion retailers will present "Choices of Couture" for the Pediatric Center Survivors Scholarship Fund at William Beaumont Hospital. Jim Harper of WNIC radio will emcee, and Larry DuMouchelle will handle the live auction of everything from a 1988 Jaguar XJ8 to 52 bottles of wine including a magnum of Veuve' Cliquet from Merchant of Vino.

Guests (1,200 are expected) will see the latest fall collections from Kathryn Scott, It's The Ritz, Lisa Parks, Fitigues, Tender, Timbuktu, Article II, Basic Goods, Ceresnie & Offen Furs, The Claymore Shop, Edward Dorian, Pogo, Furs By Robert, Hansel & Gretel Shoes, Harp's Lingerie, Kiddlywinks, Linda Dresner, Maxwell, Redwood & Ross, Shades Optical and Thom Leffler. who is looking for her own unique style," said Cheryl. "We shop for you. Our collections are very edited.'

Event co-chairs Richard Astrein and Judi Roberts said the goal of event organizers was to take this year's program to new heights.

"It's a quality show, a quality evening," said Roberts. "And this will assure that it stays around for many years to come."

Astrein said the intent of Fall Spectacular 1997 is to award 22 high school cancer survivors, college scholarships during the evening festivities. The scholarship fund was established in 1992 with assistance from Birmingham merchants by Dr. Charles Main, Chief of Pediatric Hematology/Oncology at Beaumont Hospital. Last year the event raised $100,000 for the cause.

"Almost every restaurant, salon, florist, jeweler and gallery in town contributed to this event," Astrein said. Their generosity overwhelms me."

For more details, or to make a contribution to the scholarship fund, please call (248) 644-1651.

Jewelry designer exalts minerals and metals

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO

Everything about semi-precious jewelry designer Stephen Dweck, during a recent visit to Neiman Marcus in the Somerset Collection, made me smile.

His Brooklyn accent, the ring on his finger that he made for his beloved grandmother before she died, his stories about being a bad student and worse speller, his dreams of jumping out of an airplane when he's 70, his musings about feeling guilty going off to the work he loves while his wife stays home to "really work" with their four young children, ages 11 to one month

"She used to work in the factory, she knows how much fun I'm having," he said. "I cringe at parties when people say to her, 'Oh you just stay home?"

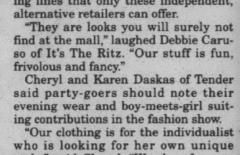

The practicing sculpture became a

With help from his brothers Gregory and Edmond, he runs his manufacturing and design business, still in Brooklyn, where the family of Egyptian/Syrian/Spanish-descent was born and raised Dweck said he tirelessly shops and deals for the minerals and cameos that are his signature.

"I love working with minerals because they were crafted by nature," he said with passion in his voice. "I don't want to be labeled 'The Guru of Minerals,' but without knocking plastic, you can rub a mineral and get such sustenance from it. People have a right

Q. Is there any truth to the old adage "You get what you pay for?" In other words, are the more expensive products better products?

women look sick, or just terribly confused. Save the look for Halloween.

A. The short answer is no. If the product is imported, you will automatically be paying more. You will also want to study the packaging. It is designed to attract you, and for that you will be paying a premium. Your instincts will automatically tell you when a product is too expensive. If you purchase it and do not notice any difference and then continue to buy the product — well, as they say, "a fool and his money are soon parted."

There are many ways to determine if a product is good for you prior to purchase. Go into any department store during a slow period of the day. Sit down at a make-up counter and tell the make-up artist the truth: that you just want to try the product prior to making a purchase. If you level with the artist, you will not be subjected to high-pressure sales techniques. If you like the look, and the feel, they know that you will be back.

Q. I remember from watching you on TV that you seemed to hate long hair on women. Why?

A. In beauty, as in art, proportion is everything. The fuller you are, the fuller the hair should be. And viceversa. We've all seen a very large woman with a tiny close perm or short hair cut. It looks as out of place as a size six woman, 60 years old with hair to the middle of the back. Or even better, a very youthful pony tail. At some stage, it is time to let go of the look you perhaps had as a teenager, and move onto a style more appropriate to your age group. A woman of 40 who looks her age and looks terrific, is much more attractive than a woman of 40 who dresses and acts like a 20 year-old. Your mother spoke of growing old gracefully - heed her advice. And answer your question again, long hair only really looks good on thin young women.

My consultations at the Townsend Hotel for September have been sold out completely, but October dates have just been scheduled. Please call 1-800-944-6588 for more information.

If you've seen any of the items in your retail travels (or basement) please call Malls & Mainstreets at (248) 901-2567. Just leave a message and your phone number (slowly and clearly, please!) and each Sunday we'll print caller solutions and new quests.

What we found:

• Several readers called with this source for vinyl reinforcements for shower curtain holes: Try the Current catalog, 12 reinforcements for $2.99. 1-800-848-2848. A West Bloomfield reader also suggested buying the vinyl pool repair patches (She got a kit at Kmart) and used the patches to reinforce her curtain rings

• A sweater de-fuzzer device was also spotted in the Current catalog.

· Several readers called with these places to buy the hammer that is also a screwdriver with several size tips in the handle: Adray's Appliance in Dear-born; Redford Township Hardware at 5 Mile and Beech Daly; Restoration Hardware in the Somerset Collection North in Troy.

• A caller offered to sell his old record player to the elderly reader in search of one. Another remembered seeing some record players at Adray's Appliance in Dearborn.

• "Mary" reports that wholesalers only offer retailers the chance to sell Clove, Beeman's and Teaberry gums once a year and that time is coming up. "Just watch your stores," she said. "It's only a promotional sale, usually in the fall."

• A reader suggested this source for hard to find fragrances: Fragrances Unlimited in Ann Arbor, owned by Gary Groz (313) 434-0692. • Four readers said they could

Family grief support

Community Hospice & Home Care - Westland / Plymouth (CHHCS) is offering a six-week "Connections" grief support series for children ages 5-16 that have experienced a loss through death. The sessions will meet weekly on Tuesdays, from Sept. 23-Oct. 28. The parent group will meet separately (but run concurrently).

Sessions begin at 6:30 p.m. at the CHHCS Westland office, located at 32932 Warren Road, Suite 100. Sessions are offered free of charge but there is a $20 registration fee per family. For more information call Kathy Dattolo, ACSW, director of social work or Sands Lans, BSW, outreach assistant, (313) 522-4244.

Animal volunteers wanted

Pet-A-Pet is a non-profit animal visitation group that consists of over 420 members and their family pets. Pet-A-Pet volunteers now visit more than 74 facilities each month in the Detroit metropolitan area. The benefits of the human-animal bond have been well documented in recent years. You and your pet can be part of the magic that the visits bring to so many people. Hope Nursing Care Center - Westland is in need of volunteers at this time. Call, Denny Gregory at 565-9124 for more information.

The Pet-A-Pet Club president, Daisy Doran, can be reached at, 565-1981 or Ruth Curry at, 535-0410 for additional information

Grow through grief

An eight-week workshop for children throughout Metro-Detroit dealing with loss and for the adults who care for them is being offered by the Angela Hospice "My Nest is Best" pediatric program. The Growing through Grief classes will be held at Angela Hospice, 14100 Newburgh Road in Livonia, on eight consecutive Mondays between Sept. 29 and Nov. 17 from 6-7:30 p.m. The workshop will provide children with creative and supportive activities to help them explore thoughts and feelings about their loss. The workshop classes will be guided by a specialized pediatric team including a psychologist, social worker and nurse. Anyone interested may call Angela Hospice, (313) 464-7810.

Pharmacist's role expands in medicine of today

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI ECIAL WRITER

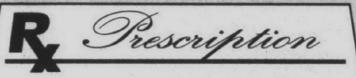

Pharmacists have always done a lot more than count pills, but in recent years their role has taken on greater importance as patient advocates. They watch for drug interactions, show you how to take your medication properly and talk to you about possible side effects that could save your life.

Experts are recognizing the important place pharmacists have in the chain of medical care and regulations are underway mandating closer relationships between druggists and patients. Much of the changes are in response to startling studies like one that showed improperly taken medications cause one in every 10 hospital admissions. Some $77 billion dollars is spent annually on drug related problems caused by medications that weren't taken correctly or stopped altogether when they shouldn't have been.

To address this escalating problem, two years ago it became mandatory that patients with Med-icaid and Medicare who want to fill new prescriptions must receive counseling from pharmacists about the medications. A release is signed if they refuse counseling. The trend is for all patients to get this kind of attention from the pharmacist, as well. Every time you get a new medication you should expect the pharmacist to work with you, explaining side effects; how to use an apparatus, like a breathing machine; when and how to take your prescription; interactions with drugs, food and alcohol; cheaper alternatives often found in generic drugs; proper storage and whether or not your insurance company covers the cost.

"In the past the role of pharmacists was primarily a drug distribution role," according to James Stevenson, director of pharmacy services at Detroit Medical Center and associate professor of pharmacy practices at the College of Pharmacy Wayne State University.

Take 1 tablet 3x daily, BUT FIRST, consult with your pharmacist about drug interaction doctors to review what was prescribed.

Behind the counter

"The big thing we're trying to do is to get patients to understand that pharmacists are an important resource," Stevenson said. But that doesn't discount the value of pharmacists generations ago. Those folks in the white jacket at the corner drugstore were often the first people everyone on the block went to if they had a problem. Oftentimes, the friendly face by the pharmacy desk quickly assessed what was going on and either recommend an over-the-counter medication or referred the person to their doctor for a closer look. That kind of relationship between patient and pharmacist likely will continue and become stronger as stricter guidelines are mandated. "Pharmacists are the most accessible of the health care professionals," Stevenson said. A watershed of changes, yes, but there's still progress to be made.

education if there were more interns and pharmacy technicians. "They know how to fill scripts," the Livonia pharmacist said. "You can check-them and you can go out and talk more with the patient."

Time is money and prescriptions are a big business. His store, alone, fills between 400 and 500 prescriptions daily. While the bulk of prescription costs are covered by insurance policies, still, the average family of four spends more than $500 annually out of pocket on prescription drugs.

Cost conscious people are looking for discounts and cheaper avenues. In comes the mail order pharmacies that look like a good deal often offering lower prices than local pharmacies. In fact, one in eight prescriptions filled in the United States are filled by mail, which is up from one out of 33 a decade.

Time well spent

But, don't assume that the mail-order companies are always cheaper. Chain and independent drugstores can be a better deal, because they try to undersell their competitors. One drawback is the time it takes to get prescriptions. Compare the fifteen minutes to one hour wait at the local drug store to the mail-order company that sometimes takes days. No matter how you choose to buy your medications, the experts recommend going to one source for all your prescriptions and non-prescription drugs to establish a comprehensive medication profile so that interactions can be watched.

The elderly are especially prone to drug side effects and the problem is worsened, because symptoms of drug induced reactions are often disregarded as being subtle signs of old age. Mail-

Kids Day America/Int'l

On Sept. 20 chiropractic offices nationwide will be participating in Kids Day America/International, a special day dedicated to children. Kramer Chiropractic will be sponsoring the event on a local level. Much of Kramer's practice and personal time is spent helping kids. No surprise therefore, he is hosting such an exciting community event.

"In addition to free balloons, food, giveaways and prize drawings every half hour, we'll also be providing essential information on crime prevention, child safety and environmental awareness." There will be special appearances by Sparky The Fire Dog, Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey, and the president of the Chamber of Commerce. The event begins at 12 p.m. and free spinal exams and scoliosis screenings will be offered throughout the day.

Kramer Chiropractic is located at 33481 Eight Mile Road, Livonia, (248) 615-1533.

New surgical procedure

In July, Dr. Samir Dabbous became the first physician at Oakwood Hos-pital & Medical Center-Dearborn to use a revolutionary closure system, post interventional catheterization. The system is now being used by all interventional cardiologists.

Oakwood Hospital & Medical Center-Dearborn is only the second hospital in the state and one of only 35 hospitals in the nation to begin using the "Perclose" system.

This system allows an artery to be sutured closed after an intervention, regardless of thrombolytic therapy or elevated coagulation times. Without this system, patients must have a sheath left in for several hours until coagulation times are brought to normal, then the sheath is pulled and manual pressure held to stop bleeding.

Focus on the patient

Today pharmacists focus on protecting patients, Stevenson said adding that written information about prescriptions is important, too. In fact, the Food and Drug Administration has set a goal that more written information will be provided with prescriptions within the next four years. Likely, the burden will be carried jointly by pharmaceutical companies, pharmacies and other medical professionals.

"We do know that verbal counseling with written information is the best method and more effective than either one alone," Stevenson said. Pharmacists are also there to protect patients by weeding out good and bad information provided by pharmaceutical companies.

But, don't believe everything you read or hear. One recent study on drug ads found that an astounding 92 percent didn't meet FDA standards for fairness, accuracy and balance. During the last 15 years you may have noticed that pharmacists are aggressively becoming involved in determining the appropriateness of medications and calling

A pharmacist at a Livonia chain store pharmacy, who asked not to be identified, said he wishes he had more time to spend with patients. "The only problem is when we do a quantity of prescriptions there is no way you can have time to do that," he said.

It's "very seldom" that he has time to meet with patients. But, there are rigid reviews of interactions with medications and patients are immediately notified if one is found. Customers "constantly" ask him for medical advice and if he has the answer he makes suggestions.

Respected referral

"If it's minor I do, but if it's beyond my scope of course I refer them to the physician," he said. Pharmacists could be freed up to do more patient order prescriptions started to become more popular about one decade ago and have grown in acceptance. But, there isn't the same opportunity for patients to see and talk with pharmacists. Some mail-order companies do, however, offer computerized patient records that flag hazardous drug interactions; overnight delivery for an extra charge and 24-hour information hot-lines for patients' questions.

Another change underway among pharmacists is their own education requirements. Currently in Michigan the minimum requirement is a bachelor of science degree in pharmacy with two years preprofessional study and three years in the college of pharmacy. Most schools are revamping their curriculum, or have already changed, from the bachelor of science degree to six-year doctorate of pharmacy degrees. Candidates must also pass a board exam to be licensed.

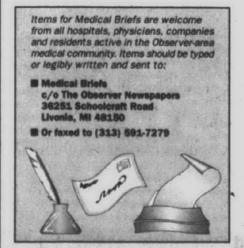

Beyond education and federal laws, one key to improving the pharmacist's relationship with patients is to make sure he has time to review prescriptions with customers.

"My interaction with customers isn't what I'd like it to be," the Livonia pharmacist said. "I'd like to talk to the customers more. It's going in that direction."

Establishing good nutrition begins at home

It's back-to-school time and here's something else for parents to worry about: Clearly, kids aren't big on reading nutrition labels. Left to their own devices, the average child's diet would resemble one designed by a vending machine company: a high-fat, highsugar, high-cholesterol, fast-food smorgasbord void of any real nutritional. value. In other words, their idea of a good meal is a sixth-grader's dream and a nutritionist's nightmare.

And your kids may be fending for themselves more than you like to think. The fact is, because many homes are headed by parents who work full-time, kids usually select most of what they consume. As a result, one out of every five American children is severely overweight. How do parents find the time and energy to establish healthy eating guidelines for their children?

"Establishing good nutrition for a lifetime begins early and at home," says Botsford's Health Development Network registered dietitian Gale Cox. Cox reminds parents that, first and foremost, they are their children's role models when it comes to eating just as in everything else. Parents can help their children learn healthy eating by setting a good example by:

eating breakfast every day and having your kids do the same teaching them that there are no 'banned foods' - just some you eat in moderation making your house a 'good food zone' by having a bowl of fresh fruit of the kitchen counter, washed and cut celery and carrot sticks in the fridge and whole-wheat (not white) bread on hand for sandwiches and toast not having high-fat, high calorie foods (chips, candy, soda) around the house; and eating healthy snacks (fresh/dried fruit; air-popped popcorn, vegetable sticks, low-fat yogurt)

'It's true that, for the most part, your kids will eat what you eat," said Cox. "But also remember that when they're younger, children do not have fully place on Sept. 25 at 7 p.m. at HDN, formed taste buds and may shun certain foods that they will love eventual-

Most kids like fruit and a wide variety of vegetables - including green beans, corn, carrots, cucumbers and red and green peppers, Cox notes, but don't push particular foods if you know they don't have the acquired taste for them, yet. For example, a lot of kids just don't like cauliflower and peas, probably because they don't think they have that much flavor. By serving children healthful foods they prefer, Cox says you'll be training your children from an early age to see food as not just nourishment but a source of enjoyment

And finally although every family seems to be eating on the run these days - try to eat at least one meal together every day. Eating with your children fosters a healthy attitude toward food as well as creates good occasions to catch up with one another. Learning to enjoy family time, the art of conversation and even table etiquette are priceless gifts you can give to your children.

For parents who would like to know more about the nutritional care and feeding of their kids, there's a special session in the HDN Healthy Cooking series in September. The session takes 39750 Grand River Ave., in Novi. The fee is $6 and preregistration is required. For more information call Botsford Hospital or the HDN at (248) 477-6100.

Seeing more clearly

In this age of computers, fine print and harsh lighting, it's no wonder we all end up with tired eyes once in awhile. Unfortunately, eye-strain is a by-product of the computer generation. But, according to Kamal Gupta, M.D., an ophthalmologist on the staff of Oakwood Hospital Annapolis Center-Wayne, it only takes a short break to avoid eye strain.

"People should take five-minute breaks to rest the eyes about once an hour," said Gupta. "Fluorescent light, the kind found in most offices today, can also be harsh on eyes."

Other suggestions include purchasing a desk lamp with regular light bulbs; wear safety glasses if you work in a hazardous area where. glass or flying plastic is common; also, beware of bright flashes of light or sparks. These can be just as damaging to the vision.

There were 30 children, 13 moms, four dads, two grandmothers and 25 volunteers attending the second annual camp which was cosponsored by the Livonia-based Angela Hospice and the Karmanos Cancer Institute. Campers spent time getting to know one another, sharing experiences about their loss, and participating in activities that were both healing and fun.

"Explorer Camp is unique because it works with the entire family system," said Leslie Feret, a pediatric social worker at Angela Hospice. "At camp, feelings that family members may have viewed as unacceptable are normalized and expressed. When the family leaves camp, they have 'permission' to talk more openly."

grounds of Camp Tamarack, near Holly, traditional camp fare such as hayrides, swimming, fishing, arts and crafts, and singing songs provided an outlet for energy. There was also bereavement therapy, movement and dance, and an ask the nurse" session offered at the bereavement camp.

"Adults thoroughly enjoyed talking with others who could identify with their pain and speak openly about challenges their daily life presents while the grieving process is ongoing," said Wendy Winkler, a pediatric registered nurse at Angela Hospice.

"Kids rated the camp excellent and seemed to feel safe knowing they were with other kids who shared a similar loss," Feret said. "Parents found the weekend to be relaxing and liked the individual counseling and learning coping strategies.

The weekend at Camp Explorer can be summed up most eloquently in the words of the young camper, Kevin Gasson, 7. "I like Explorer Camp and I liked the good things to eat the great things to do. I really, really liked camp and also there is great love between me and my grandma."

Internet can be a valuable resource, learning tool for all ages

Call it the "People's Medium." That's what the Internet's World Wide Web has become, a place where the traditional media gatekeepers in radio, television and print, are being bypassed by a new generation of consumers who go online for their news MIKE and entertainment.

I am absolutely convinced it is the biggest information revolution the world has ever seen and its long-term effects will forever alter the way we all stay informed. We saw it most recently and dramatically in the way the Net covered the death of Princess Diana. More than 200

Web sites sprang up, many linking to the established online news sites like CNN (www.cnn.com), MSNBC (www.msnbc.com) and the New York Times (www.nytimes.com). In the early morning hours after news of the Saturday night Paris accident broke, people did more than just tune in the cable TV shows. CNN's Web site counted more than 1.3 million "hits," or visits in the first 24 hours.

I set up a comment area on my PCMike Web site (www.pcmike.com) and, in three days, more than 2,000 people posted messages expressing their sadness over Diana's death, their anger memorial. Some posted prayers, poems, songs and pictures, too. Consider this: Since the New York Times set up its online edition, more people (1.7 million) have registered to surf the paper's . Web site (www.nytimes.com) than subscribe (1.1 million) to the printed edition.

Ever expanding

In fact, so many people are now moving to the Web as both an entertainment and news source that it's causing some serious worries among traditional broadcasters. A current study by Bates USA Media Research reports that Internet users watch from 32 to 23 percent less TV than other Americans. Pam O'Connell is an expert on this new medium called the Net. She is the "guide," or online host, for a Web site (personalweb.miningco.com) that chronicles the personal ways people are using the Internet. "The death of Princess Diana was a watershed event for the World Wide Web," says O'Connell. "The online response was so strong that the entire Internet was actually slowed because so many people went online to either read about it or offer their thoughts." It is that interactive characteristic that makes the Web so popular, she says, "The Web offers news-on-demand. People don't have to wait for the anchor or the editor to give them what they think is important. On the Web, all the

at the tabloid press and their calls for a information is there, much more than the legendary and still-missing Teamcan be contained in any single newspaper or news broadcast. When you add the fact that anyone can be a publisher on the web, you have a mass media force that is unprecedented."

O'Connell estimates that at least 4 million people have set up personal Web sites on the Internet. Many are of online diaries or journals. Other folks use the Web to collect and disseminate information on hobbies, from aquariums (http://www.fishlinkcentral.com/pubaqua.htm) to amateur zoology (http://www.museum.state.il.us/isas/zoo links.html).

Check it out

One great example: Jack-O-Lantern.com (www.jack-o-lantern.com) is run by a suburban Detroit man named Steve Frey. Frey likes to carve pumpkins. In fact, he's really good at it. So, last year, he set up a Web site to share his pumpkin designs. So many people logged in that he produced a video on how to carve the perfect pumpkin. Then he started selling candles and supplies through the site.

He had no idea it would become a business. "I wanted to create a site that can be enjoyed, and used by everyone," says Frey, amazed at the reception. He's now branching out, also using the site to demonstrate ways to carve and decorate ... watermelons.

Personal Web sites can have tremendous impact. Just ask Jim Hoffa, son of ster boss James R. Hoffa. When Hoffa supporters cried foul last winter about the way current Teamster boss Ron Carey handled fundraising in a hotly contested election that saw him narrowly defeat Hoffa, no one in the traditional media paid any attention at all.

So, a 53-year-old truck driver from Cherry Hill, N.J. set up a Web site (www.hoffa96.com).

"I never gave up, never stopped believing," says Dan Howell, Jr. "It's either a fault or a virtue, but when I feel I'm on the ' right' side, the devil himself can't blow out the flame."

For months, Howell hammered away, posting letters, documents, reports and files showing questionable Carey campaign finances. Finally, in May, some east coast newspapers grudgingly looked into the charges. Soon, the online allegations were main stories in the Wall Street Journal, The Boston Globe, and The Washington Times.

Last month, a federal judge ordered a new Teamster election, citing the very allegations the Hoffa Web site had been raising since last December.

"I feel the Internet and e-mail are the tools of the future for anyone who wishes to fully and effectively get their message out," says the truck-driving grandfather Webmaster.

"I grew up during what was supposed to be the 'Age of Aquarius.' It was only the precursor of the true age of understanding - the Computer Age.

On the horizon

The big Internet news story last week was the purchase of CompuServe by America Online. With CompuServe's 2.6 million subscribers added to AOL's customer base, the online service will be the main Internet access source for almost 12 million people. That, by any stretch of the imagination, is mass media.

But Ted Leonsis, the man in charge of content for AOL, says that's just the start. His company expects to have 50 million subscribers within the next five years. Worldwide, projections are that the Internet audience will reach close to 200 million by the 2002

"As we were a TV generation of kids, my son will be a Web generation kid," Leonsis said

It's my hope that in the weeks ahead, you'll find this column an enjoyable, intriguing and informative non-"geekpeak" means to tap into the "People's Medium."

Mike Wendland covers the Internet for NBC-TV Newschannel stations across the country and can be seen locally on WDIV-TV4, Detroit. His "PC Talk" radio show airs Saturday afternoons on WXYT-Radio (AM1270) and he is the author of a series of Internet books (call (888)-222-1866). Classes lead children in merry dance arents often wonder, how young is too young for a child to take dance lessons?

According to Michelle Orow, coordinator of the Wayne State University Dance Lab, the concepts of the art form can be experienced even before birth. Orow believes she instilled a love for dance in her 5-1/2-year-old daughter Alexandria before she was born. Alexandria was about 3 years old when Orow began working with her to teach basic movement and improvisation

"I danced when I was pregnant," said Orow of Garden City resident. "I think the rhythm and movement first effected her then. Later, when she was about 3, she experienced her body in a different way as she began to dance. She learned the concept of the rain cycle and floating as we pretended to be clouds. Plus, she was exposed to music she might not hear otherwise.'

Orow is one of the dancers teaching Wayne State University Dance Lab classes in creative movement, dance fundamentals, men's modern/jazz, and African dance beginning Saturday, Sept. 27. Open dance classes at the Detroit Festival of the Arts Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 20-21 will allow prospective students to experience creative movement before signing up for the sessions.

Opera singers opt for the masses

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Once a passion of the rich and elite few, opera has come a long way toward becoming accessible to the masses thanks to the efforts of opera singers such as Dino Valle and the Verdi Opera Theatre of Michigan.

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra warms up for their 1997-98 sea-from La Traviata. In addition to the concert, there will be an exhibit of rare opera posters from Zaretti's private collection.

"There's a phenomena happening now," said Valle. "A symphony orchestra cannot exist without including an operatic program at one time during the season. Opera has increased in popularity because boy in Rome, Italy. He studied voice at the Detroit Institute of Musical Art and Madonna University shortly after coming to America at age 18. Valle has performed with the Dearborn Symphony under the direction of Leslie Dunner and for Pope John Paul II in Vatican City. He continues to sing at dinner-operas, the most recent in Windsor and in special per-

Creative movement: Michelle Orow teaches children to move creatively in classes at Wayne State University in Detroit, the Maplewood Community Center in Garden City, and as part of the Wayne-Westland Schools continuing education program at John Glenn High School in Westland.

Orow will also teach classes for children (ages 3-10) in creative movement beginning Monday, Sept. 15, at the Maplewood Community Center in Garden City, and Thursday, Oct. 2, at John Glenn High School as part of the Wayne-Westland Schools continuing education program.

So how do you teach a 3-year-old to dance?

"You first teach them their body parts, then movements like skipping, walking and running, how to experience big and small and fast and slow," said Orow. "We're trying to have them experience creative movement, learn basic skills: the what (in your body is moving), how (it moves in space) and where your body is moving. You're also developing their visual awareness by asking them to watch clouds and asking how does it feel to be a cloud, floating."

Instructors play classical, new age and ethnic music during the classes which are conducted barefoot. Sometimes, props such as scarves, are used to draw pictures in the air.

"Classes are held in bare feet so you can feel the floor," said Orow. "It helps children with their balance. Dance uses one of the most personal instruments. It's a form of art that can be applied to everything else. They experience music, they can create pictures There are no rights or wrongs. Children are allowed to do it without being wrong. Dance is a good selfesteem builder. It builds coordination, muscle development and the awareness of people and things around them."

Just as scientists explore and experiment in their laboratories, the Dance Lab was started 30 years ago at Wayne State to explore and experiment with creative movement.

son in a performance with the Verdi Opera Theatre at the Italian-American Club in Livonia Sunday, Sept. 21. Charles Greenwell, WQRS radio personality, will guest conduct the program of Rossini, Verdi, Puccini, and Mozart. This is the third year the Verdi Opera Theatre has performed with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra.

A second joint concert, "The Three Baritones: Metropolitan Opera Legend," is scheduled for Nov. 9 at Orchestra Hall. See accompanying chart for information on the new PSO season.

This is the fourth annual concert by the Verdi Opera Theatre of Michigan, a nonprofit opera organization founded in 1988 by Valle (artistic director) and John Zaretti (president) of Canton. Once again due to popular demand, the audience will be invited to sing Verdi's famous drinking song, the "Brindisi" chorus of television. It can reach millions of people and is no longer a snobbish art like at the turn of the century."

The sound of opera singers permeated Valle's quiet Dearborn neighborhood on a gray day last week. One by one the singers strolled in for rehearsal with guest conductor Charles Greenwell and Jacqueline Csurgai-Scmitt, pianist for the Dearborn Symphony.

The Verdi Opera Theatre of Michi-gan is comprised of local performers engaged by Valle who handles the music, promotion and hiring of about 40 singers a year for the Verdi Opera Theatre. Tenor Greg Galla of Farmington Hills; soprano Valerie Yova, Royal Oak; baritone Quinto Milito; and Valle will perform with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra on Sept. 21.

Valle, who performed at DePalma's restaurant in Livonia for eight years, sang his first song as an altar formances at The Community House in Birmingham. He also hosts the Verdi Classical Radio Program heard 6-7 p.m. Sundays on WPON AM 1460.

Galla began singing about 30 years ago. He met Valle 25 years ago while studying singing at the Art Center Music School in Detroit. He thinks it's interesting to note that opera has been entertaining audiences since the 1600s with its combination of vocal and instrumental music, chorus, acting, scenery and costumes

"I love singing opera," said Galla. "Opera is very dramatic, it's about romance and joy, tragedy and grief, a whole gamut of emotion."

Greenwell is no stranger to the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. He conducted the orchestra for a year about 10 years ago. If you're a seri-

Artist avoids playing it safe

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN STAFF WRITER

Kegham Tazian uses a variety of techniques, mediums, materials, and found objects to create a visual diary influenced by his Armenian heritage and the more than 20 years he spent growing up in Beirut, Lebanon.

Tazian, a professional artist and art professor at Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills for 30 years, thought exhibiting his paintings and sculpture in the Livonia Civic Center Fine Arts Gallery would give his work exposure. Tazian is well known for his art work nationally and internationally. Some of his more recent public commissions include the Siemann's International Corp. in Troy; St. Sarkis Armenian Church, Dearborn; and the 125th anniversary sculpture for the city of Farmington. In 1995, he received the Artistin-Residence Award from the Farmington Area Art Commission.

A lack of galleries in the western Wayne county area is forcing local artists to seek out-of-the-ordinary venues to achieve recognition close to home. The Livonia Arts Commission is one of the organizations helping artists by hosting exhibits at Livonia City Hall and the Civic Center Library.

"I've never had an opportunity to show in Livonia before," said Taz-ian, a Farmington Hills resident. "This gallery is pretty nice and allows me to show a mix of media. Most galleries restrict you to a specific media or subject matter."

Sandblasted clay, bronze, and mixed media incorporating metal drippings from factories give strength to the women appearing frequently in Tazian's work. Nearly all of the imagery comes from his imagination. In one of the newest works, "The Journey," Tazian uses color to draw the viewer's attention to a veiled female figure. In the background, a child and a man, rendered in sepia tones, speak of the woman's life as if the two were a part of her past.

"The veil has that mystery, what's behind the veil, but also what does the person see who's looking out from behind it," said Tazian. "It has a little bit of past, present and a hint of the future from both sides of the veil.'

In the process of picking up a hunk of clay, Tazian is struck by its resemblance to a rock. From there, he sculpts the material into a "Twisted Figure." The result is a sculpture of a woman who seems to be emerging from a boulder.

"I don't like to sit down and do a person," explained Tazian. "I find that limiting. In painting, sculpture or drawing, I identify with an archaeologist who goes digging and comes across something tangible. I

"There is nothing at all light about this program of Italian opera," said Greenwell. "This is a difficult program for orchestra, particularly the strings."

Yova has been singing professionally for the last 30 years. Valle secured the her first engagement in the area when she moved here seven years ago. She sang for a year at DePalma's Restaurant with Valle. Milito has sung since he "was a little boy and is still waiting for a big break."

Valle and other members of the Verdi Opera Theatre aim to encourage and develop an appreciation for the music of Giuseppe Verdi and other composers of opera and popular music for the theater by presenting concerts, workshops, and dinner-theater performances. Principals of the Verdi Opera Theatre have also brought this dramatic form of music to Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester; Marquis Theater. Northville; and the Sicilia Club, Windsor. Programs at schools, including John Glenn High School and Adlai Stevenson Junior High in Westland, and Plymouth-Canton High School, are meant to instill a love of opera in the young.

"We want to promote opera, classics and the music of other composers in addition to Verdi," said Valle. "It's all part of our outreach to promote opera and also to create jobs for our colleagues and our self, to create goodwill and friendship among all people through opera. The music is so beautiful, it hits your heart. It touches you.'

like accidents to be part of the finished product. It gives me traces of mystery which I like to nurture in my work because reality is dead end."

A hub cap and piece of driftwood were the starting point for a bronze sculpture titled "The Conflict." Here, Tazian debates the dilemma of man versus the environment by asking, "can you have progress without tampering with nature." In another work, a crushed oil pan from a car becomes the mold for a plump lady's dress, executed in raku.

"I don't set boundaries when I do art. Twenty-four hours a day I do art," said Tazian. "I see it in an oil pan. That's the only way you can excel at it. Art is like eating, sleeping and breathing; it's part of me. That's why I don't limit myself to a medium. You can't be so safe to be stymied in your art. Those are the chances you have to take."

Tazian recently spent two weeks in Lebanon. He expects the visit to influence his work in . the future.

"I went to Beirut to visit family and see what the war had done to this wonderful country,' said Tazian. "I hadn't been back in 20 years. Twenty-five years of war had ravaged it. My visit showed me a completely different country. It's hopeful that the war has ended. Beirut is considered to be one of the world's largest construction sites, still it's a beautiful country."

Born in 1938, Tazian immigrated to America from Lebanon in 1960. Seven years later he graduated from Wayne State University with a master of fine arts degree. He's been teaching ever since.

"Teaching is as important as doing my art," said Tazian. "You'd like to think you affected

Some of the works in the show were created on computer, a new medium for Tazian. Others were scanned into the computer after they were painted. Tazian hopes to eventually bring what he learns about computer art to the classroom for students to use as a tool.

"I like the time aspect; I don't have to wait for paint to dry," said Tazian. "It's very spontaneous. It will not replace my traditional way of doing things, but I may use it as a vehicle in teaching, to show how changing a color might affect another remarkable how similar the choices they made were," Orser. said.

Since then, Orser has read his story at all eight Birmingham Schools and asked pupils to. draw illustrations.

"They were proud of their illustrations and began to identify with the illustrator," Orser said.

The illustrator was chosen by Northland Publishing, which publishes the Rising Moon children's books.

"They consulted with me, but it's their choice. I had complete confidence in the editor and art director and they picked a great illustrator," Orser said. "The original drawings were wonder-this second theme. "The main theme is the power of cooperation, the creatures coming together to take on a challenge."

Orser is working on another book, this one aimed at slightly older children, late elementary to early middle school.

"It's about a little girl who follows a drawing she's done through her wastebasket and has adventures bizarre and wonderful," he said.

The publishers of "Dancing with the Wind" have provided a teacher's guide with a special emphasis on the environmental theme. Orser said he thinks the guide is "pretty cool" and is curious to see how elementary school teachers react.

TRAVEL

Couple follows the mighty Mississippi upstream

'magnificent,' they were 'floating palaces'... terms which did not over express the admiration with which people viewed them." Mark Twain

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

Frank Delewsky likes to garden and he and his wife, Bernice, love to cruise.

So when the Livonia couple saw in their Observer that Observer & Eccentric garden columnist Marty Figley was leading a trip to Southern gardens on a Mississippi paddleboat, the Delewskys figured it would be a natural for them. The April trip also neatly coincided with their 40th anniversary.

The Delewskys are old hands at cruising. They've been to both sides of the Caribbean, Mexico and Alaska but they'd never been on the Mississippi.

"I landscape my own home and I'm presently in the process of landscaping my daughter's new home in Milford," Frank Delewsky said. "It was gardenon the Mississippi in a steam paddleboat."

The Delewskys began their Southern sojourn with two days in New Orleans where, as luck would have it, they arrived during the annual jazz festival and Frank got to meet a legend.

"I was a trumpet player and got a chance to talk to Al Hirt," Delewsky said. Trumpeter Hirt has long been a fixture in the New Orleans club scene.

After two days of great music and dining in places like the legendary Brennan's, the Delewskys joined Marty Figley and other gardening enthusiasts on the Mississippi Queen, one of three boats operated by the Delta Queen Steamboat Co.

The boat (not a ship) sleeps 450 passengers and has lounges, a movie theater, shops and a swimming pool. Each day passengers received an itinerary of boat activities and optional land activities as the Mississippi Queen made its way up the river to the plantations and old towns along the "Mighty Miss" for

Steamboat Vacations

The Delta Queen Steamboat Co. operates three steam paddleboats: The Delta Queen, The Mississippi Queen and The American Queen.

The boats cruise the Mississippi, Ohio, Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers 12 months a year for two to 14 day cruises. Costs range from as high as $8,660 for 14 nights in the superior cabins to as low as $390 for two nights in the small inside cabins.

Special theme vacations include gardening, the Civil War, Dixie Fest, big bands, great performers, Elvis, rock and roll, fall foliage and holidays.

seven days.

"You listen to the riverlorian talk history while you're having breakfast. Then there was a talk by one of the guest speakers," Bernice said.

The riverlorians were boat staff members who told passengers about the history and topography of the section of the river they were on. The experts were three nationally known garden writers - Todd Steadman of Garden Gate magazine; William Welch, author and president of the Southern Garden History Society; and Jim Wilson, author and former regular on PBS's "Victory Garden." The experts would discuss various aspects of gardening in the south and lead tours of the plantations. They would also prepare written material on their topics. The steamboat company also prepared packets on the history and sightseeing at each stop along the way.

The stops included Baton Rouge and St. Francisville, Natchez, Vicksburg and ended in Memphis. After a morning of touring a land site, passengers would return to the boat for steamboating up river.

"There were a couple days when we were just on the boat," Bernice said. "The boat went slow, only six miles an hour going up stream. But there were movies, games and a swimming pool."

The river was high this spring and views were often obscured.

"We couldn't see too much, just the tops of trees," Frank said. "Every once in a while you'd see a levee. What you saw was a lot of barges on the river. It was a quiet sojourn."

But life on the boat offered many pleasures including the food, which the Delewskys called "excellent and plentiful." Though many Southern foods were offered, the menu was varied and included other fare as well. After dinner, a septet performed and the Delewskys danced the night away. Also, a troupe of entertainers presented a different show every night on such/themes as "Dixieland," "Broadway" and "Stage Door Canteen."

The Delewskys described the accommodations as typical of cruise ships they've been on and "basically just for sleeping."

The action was along the river. Plantation stops included Long Vue Gardens, Myrtles/Rosedown, St. Francisville gardens, Natchez Gardens and Dixon Gardens. Frank said he especially liked Long Vue. Bernice said she liked Afton Villa, where statuary figures are shown each playing a different musical instrument. The plantation house no longer stands at this garden.

Of course, the riverlorians didn't just talk about current topography.

"The riverlorians spoke a lot about the Civil War and the traditions that came about because of the Civil War," Frank said.

While Bernice chose to visit the gardens of Vicksburg, Frank took a bus tour to the Vicksburg battle site, where Grant's decisive victory marked a change in Union fortunes during the war and led to Grant's promotion as general of the Army of the Potomac.

"I wish I could have spent more time," Frank said. "It was an interesting kind of museum outdoors. I wish I could have spent the whole day touring with a guide."

As befitting this "all-American" vacation, the Delewskys renewed their vows before the Mississippi Queen's captain

Salem turns it on against Mustangs

Strong defensive play supplemented an outstanding performance by senior quarterback Tony Bernhardt in carrying Plymouth Salem to its first victory of the season last Friday at Northville.

Tony Bernhardt was a one-man. offensive show Friday in leading Plymouth Salem to a 21-3 victory over host Northville in a Western Lakes Activities Association crossover football game Friday.

The win evened the Rocks' record at 1-1. The Mustangs fell to 0-2.

Bernhardt, a 6-foot-3 senior quarterback, rushed for 107 yards and one touchdown and passed for another 100 yards and a second TD.

Northville, however, got on the board first. The Mustangs capped a 41-yard drive with a 31-yard field goal by Adam Tibble for a 3-0 lead with 8:23 left in the opening quarter. The Rocks countered that with two second-quarter touchdowns. Bernhardt scored the first, finishing a 51-yard drive that started with a 14-yard run by Charlie Schmidt with a 27-yard scoring sweep. The extra-point kick was blocked, but Salem had a 6-3 lead.

Northville mounted another drive, getting into Salem territory, but it was stopped by a Jason Lukasik interception at the Rocks' 30. He returned it to the Salem 37, and five plays later the Rocks were in the end zone - although the route they traveled was an unlikely one, for them.

Bernhardt ran for 18 yards, then threw five straight passes, hitting Schmidt twice and Jeff McKian once before he completed the drive with an 8-yard TD toss to Andy Kocolowski. Bernhardt's two-point conversion pass to McKian made it 14-3 with 19 seconds left in the half.

Salem took the second-half kickoff and marched 67 yards in 11 plays, with Bernhardt tossing two key passes to McKian for 15 and 19 yards. Teono

Gilles reaches No. 1

Chris Gilles, a Plymouth Salem graduate, captured her third consecutive U.S. Tennis Association over-25 women's tournament, beating Julie Farina of Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., 6-4, 6-3 in the finals of the National Clay Court Championships last week.

OBSERVER SPORTS SCENE

Played in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., the victory vaulted Gilles into the No. 1-ranking nationally in her division.

Gilles defeated Debra Pescitelli (Tesquesta, Fla.) 6-2, 6-2 in the round of 16; Vikki Beggs (West Palm Beach, Fla.) 7-5, 6-1 in the quarterfinals; and Robin Keener (Melbourne, Fla.) 3-6, 6-3, 6-0 in the semifinals.

1st Madonna coach

Madonna University hasn't dragged its feet. It's first-ever women's soccer program will open next fall (1998). and the coach has already been hired: Rick Larson, currently the assistant men's soccer coach.

Larson has a long, and successful, coaching record. A Central Michigan University graduate, he guided the Madison Heights Bishop Foley girls soccer teams to Class B-C-D state championships in 1995 and 1997. His teams also won three Catholic League girls titles Larson doesn't limit himself to coaching soccer, either. He is currently the boys varsity basketball coach at Livonia Clarenceville HS.

His early hiring for the Madonna position - women's soccer is the seventh NAIA sport offered by Madonna

- should be very helpful in getting the program off on a firm footing. Larson will be able to recruit next spring during the girls high school season and will have a year to put together a schedule.

"I'm excited about starting a women's soccer program at Madonna." Larson said. "I think the team will have great potential to be extremely successful in this area.

Rocketed Canton's defense shines, but offense struggles

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

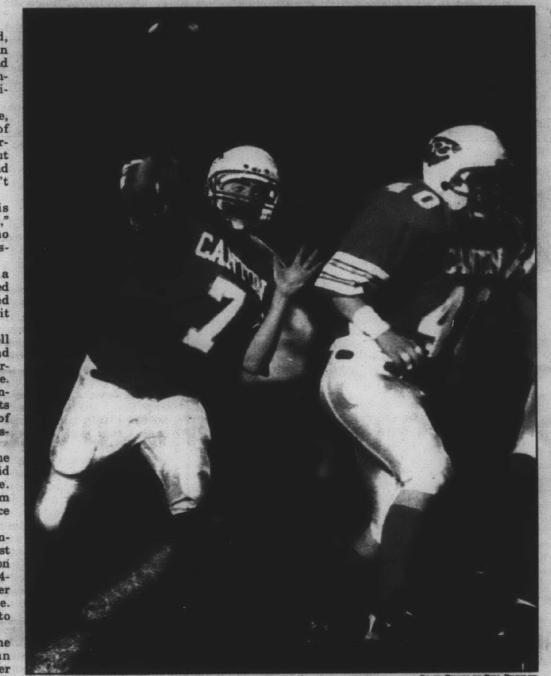

The outcome was expected, but the score was closer than many anticipated, as Westland John Glenn defeated Plymouth-Canton 16-0 on the road Friday.

Because the game was close, many pointed to the loss of Glenn's highly-touted quarterback, Justin Berent, who's out with a knee injury. Westland coach Chuck Gordon didn't want to hear it.

We have 54 guys on this team, it's not a one-man team," said Gordon. "Anybody who thinks that is making a mistake.

"We played hard, it was a tough win, and our guys battled and kept their poise," added Gordon. "Some of the credit needs to go to Canton."

Any football coach will tell you turnovers, penalties and mistakes are decisive in determining the outcome of a game. o different in th test; all of John Glenn's points came as a direct result of turnovers, penalties and mis-takes by the Chiefs (0-2). "We have a young team, one that will make mistakes," said Chiefs' coach Bob Khoenle. "We've got to cut down on them if we are going to have a chance to win ballgames. The Rockets (2-0) took command with 6:28 left in the first half as fullback Antonio Gibson went up the middle from 14yards out, dragging a defender with him across the goal line. The extra point was good to give Glenn a 7-0 lead. The mistake that set up the Rockets' touchdown was an interception of an Eric Frazer pass by Westland's Sean Heard at the Chiefs' 26. Heard carried it to the 20 before being tackled. Two plays later Glenn scored.

ed a rainbow to Harris. The sophomore wide receiver battled his defender and reached high for the ball, coming down with it on the Rockets' 41. The 31-yard play seemed to spark the players and crowd.

Eleven more yards in two plays put the ball on the Glenn 30. But that's where the momentum hit a brick wall.

A 10-yard holding penalty pushed the ball back to the 40. Two plays later, on fourth-and-22, the Chiefs punted.

Glenn's offense struggled in the third period, but the Rocket defense didn't. Canton's only true scoring chance was a 45yard field goal attempt, which was blocked.

Fourteen plays and 8:30 later, the Rockets got themselves an insurance touchdown. And, again, Canton mistakes helped produce the points.

With the ball on the Chiefs' 45, Hudson hit Eric Jones with a 10-yard pass. The play turned 15-yard gain er when "The academic programs Madonna has to offer and the tremendous soccer talent in this area should make for a successful mix right away."

Hole-in-one

He waited a while, but it finally came

Stan Michalik, a 67-year-old Canton resident, got his first-ever hole-inone Sept. 3 at Pheasant Run Golf Course. Michalik's ace came on the 134-yard 15th hole; he used an eightiron.

For the round, Michalik shot 79.

Good start

Siena Heights opened its women's soccer season with a lopsided 8-0 victory over Adrian College Sept. 3.

Among the goal-scorers for the Saints was Liz Peltier, a sophomore from Plymouth Salem.

Amy Gillen led Siena Heights with three goals. Nicole Tobin, a freshman from Livonia Stevenson, added a goal.

Siena Heights followed that match with a split on the road Sept. 6-7 in New Hampshire. The Saints lost 3-0 to St. Anselm College Sept. 6, then beat Notre Dame College 1-0 Sept. 7. Melissa Crain, a transfer from Schoolcraft College, had the game-winner.

Run Wild

What else would one call a five-kilometer run and a one-mile non-competitive walk hosted by the Detroit Zoological Society and the Southeast-ern Michigan Veterinary Medical Association - except "Run Wild?"

The two events, expected to attract more than 3,000 people, are scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday at the Detroit Zoo. Proceeds from this firstever event will benefit the Detroit Zoo Hospital.

Entry fee for the 5K run is $17 before Sept. 18 per individual ($14 each for families of three or more) and $20 per individual on race day. For the one-mile walk, entry fee is $12 per individual before Sept. 18 ($10 each for families of three or more) and $15 on race day.

All entrants receive a commemorative T-shirt. Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers in each category of the run. Also, a raffle will be held for prizes, including free pet check-ups and a one-year pass to the Detroit Zoo.

Canton's second turnover led to more points for Glenn just before the half. The Rockets punted from their own 30, and it appeared Canton's Clinton Harris was going to let it roll to a stop. However, at his own 38, Harris decided to pick it up on the run. He fumbled, and John Glenn recov-ered on the Chiefs' 40.

Looking for a target: Canton quarterback Eric Frazer (7) was pressured throughout Friday's game against John Glenn, which made it difficult to connect with his receivers.

Westland punched the ball down to the 9-yard line. But on third down, Hudson overthrew Jason Crofton in the end zone and the Rockets settled for a 26-yard field goal by Heard, capping a 10-play drive 50 seconds before halftime.

The Chiefs looked like a different team offensively in the third quarter.

On the second play, from Canton's 28, Frazer loft-

"We didn't play as well as we are capable," said Gordon. "We made some mistakes. We've got to play better. We'll be studying the film this week to find solutions." On the other side of the field, Khoenle was upbeat and optimistic despite the loss.

"Our mental approach was a turnaround from last week,' said Khoenle. "A lot of our kids don't have experience, but they played well tonight. While we don't like to lose, we did see an improvement from last week when we lost big."

"We moved the ball in the air, but we need to run the ball. "We were very aggressive on defense.

When asked if playing a top-rated team like the Rockets contributed to his teams' effort, Khoenle chuckled. "I'm sure it did. Our kids aren't stupid, they read the newspapers. But, whatever it was, maybe we can bottle it for next week."

Rocks 2nd in Relays - again

It was a surprise on the order of Deivi Cruz making a sensational play at shortstop look routine — Livonia Stevenson won the Western Lakes Activities Association Girls Swim Relays.

Stevenson swamped host Plymouth Salem on Thursday, 275-227, with Plymouth Canton edging North Farmington for third by four points with a 199 total.

Fifth went to Northville at 156, Livonia Churchill was three points back, Walled Lake was seventh with 136, Farmington Hills Harrison had 120, Westland John Glenn 104, Farmington 102 and Livonia Franklin was 11th with

"We did a lot better than I thought we would," Stevenson coach Greg Phill said. "I thought we would win, but I didn't know it for sure.

"After all, we were the defending champions. But I didn't think we'd win by that much. I didn't load a single relay."

Stevenson won six of the 10 events and set two of the three meet marks that were lowered.

Plymouth Salem won only one event, the 400-yard freestyle relay, but finished second in another, had four third-place finishes and three fourths.

Trailing by two with about 30 seconds remaining, the Chiefs allowed Flint to grab a rebound off of a missed free throw and score. Canton coach Bob Blohm said it took the wind out of his squad and put the game out of reach.

"We had our opportunities and chances," he added, "and just didn't capitalize.

"I think we got a little fatigued. They had a little more depth and were able to substitute more.

Chiefs, Rocks rule rivals

Both Plymouth Canton's and Plymouth Salem's boys cross country teams dominated their Western Lakes Activities Association foes in dual-meet action Thursday.

Canton walloped Farmington Harrison 16-45, capturing the top four spots and seven of the top nine at Cass Benton.

First for the Chiefs was Shaun Moore in 17:49. He was followed by Brian Boyd, second (18:30); Jerry Reynolds, third (18:45); Joe Niemiec, fourth (19:22); Taggert Anderson, sixth (19:38); Ian Levely, eighth (19:52); and Chris Bray, ninth (19:59).

Salem's meet against North Farmington at Cass Benton was much closer, but the Rocks emerged on top by a 27-30 margin, keeping their meet record perfect at 4-0 (2-0 in the WLAA's Lakes Division).

The Raiders had the top two finishers, but Salem runners claimed the next four spots: Matt Anderson was third (17:56), Bobby North is 0-2 in the Lakes Division.

Both teams are idle until Saturday, when Canton travels to the Monroe Jefferson Invitational and Salem competes in the Jackson Invitational.

Salem, Canton girls roll

Neither Plymouth Salem nor Plymouth Canton had much trouble with their WLAA dual-meet opponents Thursday.

Salem romped past North Farmington 15-50 at Cass Benton, with all seven runners finishing ahead of any of the Raiders. Leading the Rocks' onslaught was Erin Kelly in first (21:51). She was followed by Rachael Moraitis (21:54), Erin Lang (22:33), Jill Danek (23:03), Jenny Burke (23:07), Shae Potocki (23:20) and Aisha Chappell (23:22).

Defense lifts Shamrocks to win

Offense looks nice for headlines, but defense wins titles. Redford Catholic Central's defense looked championship caliber Friday in crushing Ann Arbor Pioneer 33-7 on the road.

The Shamrocks, now 2-0, held Pioneer to just three first downs and 92 yards of total offense. John Abshire led the defensive attack with a pair of quarterback sacks.

Catholic Central took command early in the first quarter. CC scored on its first possession on a seven-play 54-yard drive.

Quarterback Adam Tuburo, a senior, completed passes to Nick Brzezinski and Joe Jonna to move the ball down to the Pioneer 20-yard line. He then hit

FOOTBALL

Don Slankster for a 20-yard touchdown pass with 6:53 to go in the first quarter.

The Shamrocks added a touchdown in the second quarter.

Defensive back Justin Cessante recovered a Pioneer fumble at the Pioneer 24yard line. A couple of plays later, Tuburo connected with Jonna on a 10yard touchdown pass to make it 14-0 with just 25 seconds left before halftime.

CC took the opening kickoff of the third quarter and drove 63 yards on eight plays to add to its lead. Tubaro, who finished with 126 passing yards and 11 completions, hit flanker Joe Saah on a 25-yard scoring toss at 8:40.

Pioneer's lone score came later in the third. Pioneer blocked a Shamrock punt and recovered on CC's 7-yard line. Christian Champman found the end zone three plays later on a one-yard run to make it a 21-7 ballgame at the 2:41 mark.

Catholic Central added a pair of insurance touchdowns in the fourth.

Defensive lineman Lou Willoughby recovered a Pioneer fumble at the Pioneer 21-yard line with about two minutes gone in the period. Six plays later, Chris Dueweke ran two yards for the score as the Shamrocks went up 27-7.

CC got its final tally with a minute left in the game. Running back Tim Finnerty capped an eight-play drive with a seven-yard run. The extra point failed and the game ended 33-7.

Catholic Central finished with 188 yards of total offense. Josh Christenson led Shamrock rushers with 61 yards on 17 carries. Slankster caught three passes for 29 yards.

Pioneer fell to 0-2.

CC puts its perfect record on the line Saturday with a home game against Warren De La Salle. Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Clarenceville High.

CC 35, Pershing 6: The Shamrocks won their season opener over Detroit Pershing, 35-6, on Saturday, Sept. 6.

(PC)E3

Dueweke gained 91 yards on 18 carries, scoring three touchdowns. Tubaro completed seven of nine passes for 161 yards, including a 42-yard touchdown pass to Don Slankster.

Joe Sgroi led the CC defense with nine tackles, two unassisted. Abshire had six tackles, one sack. Justin Cessante had five tackles and a fumble recovery.

Pershing scored first on a 96-yard kick-off return to start the game before the Shamrocks scored five straight touchdowns.

Whalers win Can-Am challenge

It won't count in the record books, but the Plymouth Whalers will take their championship in the Can-Am Challenge just the same.

The Whalers crushed Ontario Hockey League rival Windsor Spitfires Sunday 10-2 at Compuware Sports Arena in the finals. Joe Byrne netted three goals and Mark Cadotte added a pair to lift Plymouth to the win.

A total of four teams participated in the under-18 preseason tournament.

Windsor beat the Erie Otters 8-5 Saturday in the opening round. Matt Elich scored three goals to lead the Spitfires and Jeff Martin added two. Jason HOCKEY Polera scored twice for Erie. The Whalers faced team USA in their Saturday game at Compuware Arena. Led by David Legwand's three goals, the Whalers ripped the USA "Red" team 8-1.

Plymouth held a 2-1 advantage after one period, then blew the game open with six goals in the second. Legwand got two of his three goals in the period while Randy Fitzgerald scored one of his two markers.

Stevie Lyle stopped 27 of 28 USA shots, including 16 in the third period.

Sunday's championship game was all Plymouth. The Whalers led 3-0 after one period as Jamie Lalonde, Byrne and Cadotte all tallied within seven minutes of . each other.

Down 4-0, Windsor finally got on the scoreboard with 4:19 gone by in the second period. The goal, scored by Kevin Hansen, came on a powerplay.

The Whalers answered about two minutes later with a goal from defenseman Kevin Holdridge. Plymouth led 6-2 by the end of the second and added four insurance goals in the final period.

Legwand played a solid game with a goal and three assists.

ment. The host Chargers took on cross city rival Flint Northern in the finals.

Thursday's game with Powers was a bit odd for the Chiefs.

The two teams played to a near stand-still in the first quarter with Canton taking an 11-10 advantage at the buzzer. The Chiefs shooting eyes left them in the second, however.

Blohm said Powers' defense had something to do with his team nine-point quarter, too.

We had a hard time attacking their zone," he commented. "They were more effective offensively than we were."

Canton was also hurt by the loss of center Nkechi Okwumabua in the second quarter. She picked up two fouls in the first and was forced to sit the rest of the half.

"That was a huge factor," Blohm said. "It limited our rotation."

ners, which included five in the fourth

> Ranked No. 1 in Class B, Blohm said the Chargers are a fine team.

"They're a lot like we are," he said. "But a little bigger in the post. They have good balance."

Kristin Lukasik led Canton with 15 points while Marzolf added 12. Janell Twitmeyer and Okwumabua each had eight for the Chiefs. Canton will play at Birmingham Marian Tuesday at 7 p.m. "We've got our work cut out for us," said Blohm. "But I think this group has made solid improvement."

Canton Agape 57, Ypsilanti Calvary Baptist 22: Canton Agape Academy took a 14-point lead after one quarter in Friday's game at Ypsilanti Calvary Baptist and never looked back. The Wolverines, now 2-2 on the season, led 24-12 at halftime then added to their lead in the final two quarters. Kim Ther led Canton Agape with a fine all-around performance scoring 18 points, grabbing 10 rebounds, making eight steals and passing for five assists. Margie Henry added 11 points and Allie Major finished with eight points and six assists. Agape plays at home tomorrow against Garden City United

Plymouth Christian 53, Immaculate Conception 51: Playing at home Friday night, Plymouth Christian High School held off a furious Warren Immaculate Conception comeback

The Eagles led by 16 in the third quarter, but watched as Warren chipped away. Plymouth's Amanda Clark split a pair of free throws to put her team ahead by two.

Immaculate Conception had a chance to tie in the final seconds but missed. Christian's Liz Pugro got the rebound from War-, ren's miss to seal the victory.

Jenny Sutherland led Plymouth Christian with 23 points and added 12 rebounds. Pugro had 11 points and 12 rebounds and Clark, a senior guard, finished with 10 points.

Each section of yellow has a black accent mark on each side. Covering the feet are white hairy gators." All these colors are on a frame of only a little over an inch long.

NATURE NOTES

Why animal populations

scientists for years.

explode in numbers some years and not in others has intrigued

This year caterpillars of the milkweed tussock moth, or according to some books, the milkweed tiger moth, are on more milkweed plants than I recently

If you pass a patch of milkweed plants that have been chewed extensively, the damage could have been from the monarch butterfly caterpillar, or the milkweed tiger moth.

Milkweed tiger moths gather in groups and together devour huge sections of the leaves. Since the monarch caterpillar derives its noxious chemicals from the sap of the milkweed plant, I would assume that the tiger moth would gain some protection from the sap too. One way they do protect themselves is by falling to the ground and rolling into a ball when disturbed. When I accidentally bumped one of the leaves I was examining, several caterpillars on the fell to the ground. Despite their bright colors, they were difficult to find when they fell into the tall grass.

These caterpillars will not complete their transformation to an adult moth this year. After eating their fill of milkweed plant, they will form a hairy looking cocoon and spend the winter in suspended animation.

When they do emerge as adults next year, they will hardly be unnoticed. Their wing span will only be about an inch and their wing coloration turns out to be a bland, even colored wet sand brown. Like the mid-section of the caterpillar, the abdomen will be yellow with small black accents

Why are there so many milkweed tiger moths this year? I don't know. My only thought is that the combination of weather factors this year allowed more adults to emerge and more eggs to survive

It will be interesting to see if there are as many next year.

ON THE RUN

This is a team of runners that won't be beat.

With 53-member MSAMS squad, Marathon Strides Against Multiple Sclerosis, plans to make their presence known at the 20th annual Mazda/Pree Press Interational Marathon on Sunday, Oct. 19 in Detroit.

Led by their dynamic captain, BRAD Tony Rubino, this group plans to meet its goal of raising $100,000 by marathon day to beat MS.

"As team captain I've accepted the challenge and we can use all the help we can get," said the and M

Magic moment: Maggie, an English setter, finds the scent of a grouse in the wind. Bird dogs like her help hunters, like the one below, bag their prey.

THE GROUSE THAT FELL FROM THE TREE

BY JEFF COUNTS STAFF WRITER

Grouse hunting is usually done with dogs, English setters, German shorthaired pointers and springer spaniels. Bless them all.

During the season they run their guts out for you, sometimes coming back with burrs or thorns in their paws. They get hot, tired and burned out for the day, if the weather is warm

One October afternoon, with temperatures in the upper 60s, my English setter Maggie ran herself ragged in a brushy area in the eastern Upper Peninsula

She was young, full of enthusiasm and couldn't be slowed down as she crashed through the brush. Because of the heat, her tongue was dragging and she was picking up thorns in it.

But she wouldn't stop running despite the blood on her tongue. I finally stopped her, carried her to the nearby Sucker River, washed her off and removed the thorns from her tongue.

She was then kenneled in her crate in the back of the Jeep for a rest.

It got me thinking: I should have a second dog for such days. Keep one rested in the cabin and switch off. It would keep me in the field longer and maybe I'd get a few birds

That theory stayed in the back of my head until one day last season when my two sons and their friends showed up for a long weekend of hunting. One afternoon we went out without the dog. There were about six of us and the dog was getting confused because there were too many of us. So, we figured we'd just bust through some brush and see if we could flush birds ourselves. By the time the afternoon was over, I decided a second dog wasn't needed. I had a new bird dog that walked on two legs. His name is Aaron Smith of Livonia. At 19years-old, Aaron thinks like a bird and has the energy of a kennel of dogs. We were hunting by the Sucker River in the Upper Peninsula, and Aaron dashed into a thicket. I couldn't see him, but I could follow his movements.

me, and I couldn't get a shot at it.

Minutes later, Aaron walked out of the bush, a smile on his face, despite scratches on his body. "You didn't shoot at it," he said. "It went the wrong way,"

Aaron kept flushing the birds and I kept missing. Later, we teamed up with my oldest son and his companion. They had been kicking up birds as they walked, shooting at some of them.

I followed behind, figuring I'd use them as bird dogs. I paused long enough for them to get out of sight and then started walking.

Occasionally I'd hear shots. These guys were moving fast and kicking up birds. I was planning on a few easy shots. Grouse tend to stay in one area. Biologists say they rarely move more than a mile or two of where they were born.

I finally kicked up one that had been missed and otherwise neglected by the young warriors. It flushed and flew into a spruce. I crawled under it's branches, my shotgun pointed upwards. I stood up and looked around. I didn't see the bird. Suddenly something fell on my head. It was the grouse I'd flushed.

For a moment, I through I'd frightened the thing to death. But as I examined it, I noticed a wound. Apparently the warriors wounded it, but it had enough life remaining to fly away.

It reminded me to slow down and follow up on birds I saw or shot at. I though about

"Look at the grouse, look at the grouse."

For anybody who grew up in the 1950s and was entertained by the antics of the Three Stooges, this is a familiar line. And for some, the game bird remains a mythical, comic creature, part of the Stooges stew of slapstick. For others, the grouse is a ruffled species. One Detroit newspaper columnist in recent years referred to the bird as a "ruffled grouse," as though somehow its feathers had been disturbed. For the record, it's the "ruffed grouse." They range from southern Michigan to the Upper Peninsula and are found in surrounding Great Lake states. A mature bird weighs about two pounds and it can produce some good eating. Grouse themselves feast on just about anything they can find; seeds, berries and others fruits, insects and tree buds are only a few of their foods.

The season

It starts Monday and runs through Nov. 14 statewide. In the Lower Peninsula, there's a second season that runs from Dec. 1 to Jan. 1.

The cost

As with other small-game hunting, going after grouse isn't a high-cost sport. A small game license is required. After that a shotgun is all that's needed to get started. The price of shotguns start at about $200 and go up from there. Most grouse hunters prefer light, 20-gauge over other guns. Most are pricey, starting at abut $1,000. However, a 12-gauge pump will work fine.

Where to go

47-year-old Rubino, who will be embarking on his 10th marathon. "I like to get 300 (members), the more the merrier.'

Rubino, who has been one of the the top fundraisers against MS, can't explain how he got involved with MSAMS, which originated out of a group from New York.

"Why do I do it?" Rubino asked himself. "Nobody I'm close to or anyone in my family has had it, but it's my way of thanking God and letting him know that I'm thankful family is healthy. I feel fortunate.

"And it serves as a source of motivation. When I'm struggling at 20 and 21 miles of a marathon, and I see others who are handicapped trying to finish, I tell myself I can do it."

The MSAMS team meets monthly for runs while providing each other with support. Their last meeting was held Sept. 11 at the MS Society's Chapter in Southfield.

"Our second goal is to make people aware of the MS Society," said Rubino, a businessman from Madison Heights who owns a pair of restaurants along with sportswear company. "This is a very dedicated and enthusiastic group. We meet as a group to help each other. They're involved with a letter writing campaign, getting pledges from the workplace. We try to keep everyone together."

The MSAMS team also does long training runs together. Recently, team member Greg Everal of Rockwood organized an 18-mile training run at Paint Creek.

The MSAMS team will invade the 10K Applefest Face Sunday, Oct. 5 in New Boston.

And then they will be out in force, Oct. 19, donning MSAMS t-shirts for the Mazda/Free Press Marathon.

To get involved with MSAMS, call Rubino at (248) 541-7190 or Karen Breen at the MS Society at (248) 350-0020.

Suddenly I saw a bird fly out of the densest part of the thicket. It flew away from my setter in the room. She would have kept after the wounded bird and it would have been in the hunting bag.

Anyway, I decided to teach the warriors a lesson. I picked up the dead bird, put it in my game pouch and started walking toward the Jeep.

When I was close enough, I fired two shots from my 12 gauge, pulled the bird out and walked to the road where my sons and others had gathered.

I held up the bird and said: "If you guys would slow down a little you'd get a few grouse. Your path is littered with them." They confessed they were birdless.

I hoped the lesson stuck. Working a small area slowly is as good a tactic as any when bird hunting.

The Upper Peninsula with its abundance of state land is a prime destination for grouse hunters. However, you need not venture that far from home

For western Wayne County residents, the Gregory and Pinckney state game areas in southwestern Livingston County offer grouse hunting about 20 minutes from Livonia.

Also nearby is Michigan's often overlooked Thumb area which has about 20,000 acres of public land.

Limits

Everybody has them. For grouse hunters, you can take three daily in southern Michigan and five per day in the Upper Peninsula.

TEN PIN ALLEY

League bowlers would have received the new 1997-98 copy of the American Bowling Congress and Women's International Bowling Congress playing rules.

This 70-page booklet is revised and re-issued before league bowling begins.

Most of the sanctioned leagues follow along with the exact rules and regulations. The individual leagues all have the option to change various rules to conform with the characteristics of their own leagues.

It is recommended that all officers and team captains look over the rules as the new season is under way.

There have been a few minor rule changes, in which case the rule book is accented by (brackets) which indicate these revisions.

Until a few years ago the ABC and WIBC had used separate sets of rules, now they are unified, and that has made more sense, as we are dealing with the same game regardless of gender.

Knowing the rules can go a long way toward avoiding disputes and delays. Particular attention should be paid to certain rules such as: (4a) legal delivery, (5a) definition of a foul, (6a) legal pinfall, (8) dead ball, (9) bowling on wrong lane, (10) provisional ball, (11) forfeit-delay of game, (13) parental consent, (16a) using assumed name, (17a) unfair tactics, (19) bowling ball, altering surface, (102c-d-e) duties of the officers, (105a) legal lineup, (106d) tardy players and (106e) bowling out.

These are just a few examples of the rules which everyone should be familiar with. This is part of the structure which makes this game of bowling so popular and enduring.

•The Budweiser-Michigan Majors Bowling Association has announced that three members will be inducted into its Hall of Fame

Rick Eiermann of Garden City and Ken Wyatt were voted in by the 12-man committee, while Ted Bakatselos was selected in the Veterans category. Eiermann has competed in 110 tournaments in his 13-year career winning five titles.

He has five 300 games in MMBA competition and holds the all-time record for a 12-game finals with a 2,063 score (255 average). Rick made the finals 11 times and cashed in 47 tournaments with a lifetime average of 209 for 856 games.

Wyatt, of Warren, was the bowler of the Year in 1989

He set the record for the most times in the finals in one year with eight in that year and sports a lifetime average of 214 for 1,254 games.

Bakatselos bowled during the 1960s and 1970s with 22 appearances in the finals. He cashed in 32 tournaments with a lifetime average of 206.

Wyatt, Elermann and Bakatselos will be honored Nov. 22 at the championship banquet scheduled at the Hawthorne Valley Country Club.

•The Blue Ribbon Bowling Group has announced their winners of the Schwinn Mountain Bikes. The grand prize winners in the red pin promotion included: Jason Rafalski (Westland Bowl), Matt Antroubius (Woodland Lanes), Mike VonBraunsberg (Town 'n Country), Kory Hershock (Mayflower Lanes); Eric Wolnie (Beech Lanes) and Kelly Hagedorn (Cherry Hill Lanes).

The top adult prize was a 54-inch Magnavox TV, which was won in a random drawing by David Holliday.

•Have you ever heard of the Metro Bowling Tour?

You will quickly become familiar with this new venture from the creativity of Roy Akers.

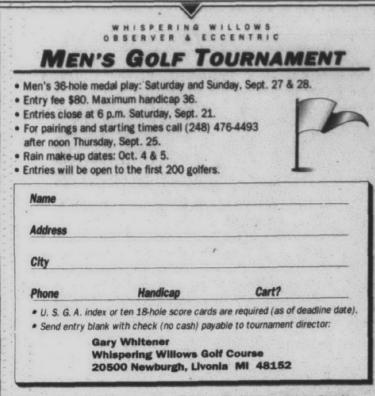

Roy has a weekly radio program, the North Oakland County Bowling report, and now will have his activities on local cable TV with this new venture. It is basically a monthly tournament for above-average bowlers. The basis will be to hold a reasonably priced entry with good cash prizes.

This is made possible through the sponsors, including Lakewood Lanes (Oct. 25), Cherry Hill North (Nov. 23), Mega Bowl (Dec. 27), Classic Lanes (Feb. 1), 300 Bowl (March 1), Century Bowl (March 28), Flero Lanes (April 28), Airway Lanes (May 23) and Bowl One (June 7). And $1,000 will added by the Mortgage King Roy Akers.

The dates indicate the TV Tournaments at these locations. The complete entry fee is only $35, which covers the bowling fee and prize fund. For more information or entry forms call (248) 673-7407.

Medicare Beneficiaries Introducing Medicare Blue... a new alternative to Medicare coverage.

Medicare Blue - more benefits than Medicare or supplemental coverage combined!

Attention

Blue Care Network, the HMO affiliate of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan, has a new health care plan for Medicare eligibles -Medicare Blue.

The Twisters won their third straight game Saturday night, Sept. 6, defeating the Fremont (Ohio) Stallions, 18-13.

With six minutes left in the first quarter, Damon Frendo (Garden City) blocked a Stallion punt and the Twisters took possession at the 27 yard

Four plays later, Pat Bowie (Wayne) bulled his way the final seven yards into the end zone. The defense added two more points with a safety when the Stallions mishandled the snap from center on a punt, allowing the ball to sail out of the end zone.

The Twisters took a 12-0 halftime lead after Jim Nagy kicked a 23-yard field goal with six seconds left in the first half.

The Twisters added to their score in the third quarter when quarterback Brian Kutch (Redford) found receiver Scott Harris (Livonia) open on a streak pattern for a 16-yard touchdown.

The Twisters gained 318 total yards, 225 rushing and 93 passing. Bowie had a season-high 159 yards on 17 carries and Scott Harris led the receivers with five catches for 49 yards.

Kutch was 11 for 21 passing for 93 yards.

Robert Bell (Inkster), Chris Simpson (Brownstown), Robert Berry (Madison Heights), Paul Daniels (Farmington), Mike Candela, Mark Bennetts and Bill Davey (Westland) played well.

The defense was again outstanding, led by linebackers Bob Pensari (Canton) with eight tackles and a s ack and Aaron Brothers (Inkster) with six tackles, a sack and a blocked extra point. Ken Kroll (Garden City) totaled five tackles from the secondary, one of which stopped a sure score.

The win puts the Twisters firmly in first place in the Western Division of the Lake Shore Football League and insures a place in the league championship playoffs.
