At issue were plans to build a larger Kroger supermarket near the current Kroger. The plan involved tearing down three apartment buildings. Township planning commissioners and

The filing of the lawsuit in recent weeks has sparked discussions between Richard Maddin, attorney for developer Paul Dietz, and the township on a compromise development.

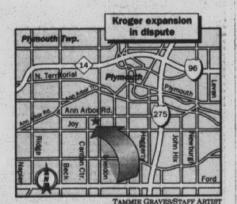

"Serious discussions are taking place, we are doing the best we can to come to an agreement both parties can live with," Maddin said.

If successful, the talks would head off the suit filed against the township in Wayne County Circuit Court, seeking damages of more than $10,000.

Rain dampens performance

BY DIANE HANSON SPECIAL WRITER

The sun shone brightly between ominous black clouds, but the Flight I bands stood still at the Lakers Invitational at West Bloomfield High School Sept. 20. Rain accumulation from the previous two days proved too much for safe marching on the waterlogged football field but didn't stop the Plymouth-Canton Marching Band from taking top honors.

"I came across the field when I first got here this morning," said musical judge Bob Rice. "It was pretty muddy and there was standing water in a number of places. They (the band directors) were afraid that kids were going to be falling down and somebody might get hurt."

Rice said the two Flight IV pands did march and some of the players were slipping on the mushy field. "We checked the field conditions right after the Flight IV bands and we were sinking right into the mud," said Plymouth-Canton band director, David McGrath. "They even had a lot of straw on but it was extremely difficult to get any

McGrath said several of the Flight I directors didn't think it was worth risking injury to the students. "A few of the bands, really high velocities this year and it would have been dangerous," McGrath admitted.

Since there was no marching, scoring was based solely on musical performance for a total of 60 possible points. The Plymouth-Canton performers, with their rendition of "Where the Wild Things Are," once again achieved the highest score for Flight I and overall with a score of 48.65. Flight I second place went to Milford, 44.85. Troy Athens captured third with a total of 40.50 points. Plymouth-Canton took both Flight I caption awards presented at a standstill for Best Winds and Best Percussion.

"All in all, we were certainly pleased with the way they performed," said McGrath. He added that a standstill presents "a different setting" with its own set of challenges. He said that it can actually be more difficult, musically speaking, since instru-ments playing an ensemble, normally together while marching, might end up separated in a standstill.

"We're just very proud of the way they came out and performed and rose to the occasion of a different set of challenges." Junior clarinetist, Kristy Metz, agreed. "It's different," she said.
"It's challenging because you ourselves included, march at have to listen across the band for all the people on the other side. You have to know the counts so you know when you come in. It's actually kind of harder."

This is senior Erin Wysocki's fourth year of marching band. While she usually plays clarinet, this year she is the narrator for the performance of Maurice Sendak's delightful children's tale. It has given her a different perspective.

"When you're out there marching, you can really only hear yourself and the people around you," she explained. "When you're up at the front, you can hear a whole bunch of different people all at once." Of Saturday's performance, Wysocki said, "I thought it sounded pretty

The band's superior performances give credence to the old adage, "practice makes perfect." Last Saturday's practice and performance schedule went from 7:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. "Imagine, it's a 12-hour day and that's short for this group," explained McGrath. It definitely gives some insight into what this activity involves and the demands placed on the stu-

"I just closed my eyes and said thanks to her," said Stewart after his team's victory over 23 other teams.

Bozell said his team was up to the challenge. "I got all the medical stuff, Rev. Seidel got the liturgical stuff, and John picked up the rest.'

The rules were simple but the words were tough for the Rotary's spelling bee. Once a participant launched a spelling, he couldn't start over. And if he exceeded his 20-second limit, Judge Ron Lowe of the 35th District Court, the event's official timekeeper, "gonged" him ungraciously back to his seat.

Spellers were on the honor system. A quick check of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Superintendent Chuck Little's shirt cuffs and palms revealed no ink marks.

"And my watch is a regular watch, and my glasses are regular glasses," he said. "I'm hoping to go longer than the first round, but I'm not predicting to be up at the end," he said.

Fire Safety Week

Be aware of prevention

The Plymouth Community Fire Department offers some fire safety tips on the occasion of Fire Safety Week, Oct. 6-10.

The first rule of a fire emergency is to evacuate. "If you discover or suspect fire in your home, immediately get everyone out, call the fire department at 9-1-1 and do not risk your life by reentering the building," said Fire Chief Larry Groth.

For prevention, install smoke detectors outside sleeping areas and on each level of the house. Remember to clean the detector and replace batteries yearly.

Dispose old newspapers, rubbish and other combustibles and store flammable liquids in closed approved containers in a cool dry place away from furnaces and other heat sources.

Electric extension cords should not be overloaded, covered, laid over hooks, placed under rugs or run through doorways where they can become worn. Furnaces and heating systems should be checked and cleaned annually.

For more information on fire safety, call the fire department at 453-3840, extension 222.

Careful: The injured worker is lowered from the roof with a hydraulic lift platform. The accident occurred after the arm of a crane lifting construction materials folded at the site of the new Plymouth District Library on Main Street.

might be more trouble that it's worth. But if they can manage it and it's more efficient it can be a good thing."

Schulz said the current commission is on the right path. He said he supports the streetscape improvement downtown. "I'd like it (downtown) to be a little more like Northville, but not like Royal Oak or Birmingham, there's too much action."

"They should do more things for the kids. They should do more for South Main and North Main. The downtown area is glamorous, it's nice. We need the town run as a whole, not as separate little pieces," Schulz said.

He supports the creation of a skateboard and in-line skate park for youth, a plan recently placed on hold by the city commission. He suggests adding an extra kids day to the Plymouth Fall Festival.

He proposed that the former Farmer Jack building, now a temporary home for the Plymouth library, could be developed as a major office building site or commercial center.

Schulz said he likes the proposal from Plymouth Community Fire Department firefighters to bring Advanced Life Support services to the city. "I would have to look into the liability," he said. Schulz said an effort should be

County juvenile center receives state license

For the first time in several years, the Wayne County Juvenile Detention Facility has received a state license

The facility's staff has corrected problems with staffing and training of staff, and facility overcrowding by improving screening programs of youths, to receive the license. A state official said the license was denied about five years ago, mainly because the facility was overcrowded with youths.

Robert Cable, program manager for child foster home licensing in the state Department of Consumer and Industry Services, said social investigators visited the facility for a week and talked with the youths. "They looked at policies, procedures and files," Cable said.

The county applied for the licensing about six months ago, and requested an on-site inspection once improvements were made, Cable said. The facility received a license from Aug. 27 through Feb. 26, 1998.

The state also wanted a better program in screening youths, meaning that some youths may have been categorized as juveniles and incarcerated at the youth home who should not have been.

Facility improves

Linda Tancil, a child welfare licensing consultant, said in a report dated Sept. 18 the facility has had many "positive changes" in its program.

"The most significant change is a dramatic decrease in the population," Tancil said.

"According to the director (Leonard Dixon) this was accomplished by establishing a tether program, and ensuring that all youth admitted meet the admision criteria."

Tancil's report also concluded: Social investigators visit residents and sometimes serve as youth advocates. The facility also has a program to evaluate and treat youths with drug and alcohol problems

■ The youth home also established a training program that "far exceeds" the training requirements of the licensing

Training improves

Dixon said the facility increased the training for staff, used many national standards for juvenile justice and juvenile corrections, and offered drug treatment and educational programs. The facility has introduced a "grandparents" program, where grandparents visit their grandchildren at the facility with hopes of steering the youths clear of trouble.

The docket was revised to expedite the judicial process, Dixon said.

They are evaluated when they come in and are given a preliminary assessment," Dixon said. Youths can enter a variety of programs, placed on an electronic monitor or housed at the

Durant case

Lawmakers grapple with how to pay off schools

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

State lawmakers are at a stalemate in paying of school districts which won the socalled Durant case

The courts had the easy job. After 17 years, the Michigan Supreme Court in mid-year decided the state owed $211 million to 84 mostly suburban school districts for shorting them on special education and other categories of school aid.

The hard parts left to the Legislature are: 1) how to pay off winners of the suit; 2) how to pay off several hundred other districts which could file claims that could total $768 million.

Senate plan

As of Oct. 1, Senate Republicans had passed Gov. John Engler's plan on a 21-16 partyline vote:

Pay off the Durant case winners in three annual installments, pay off the other claims in one lump sum by floating a 15-year, $768 million bond issue, and using the school aid fund to make the bond pay-ments. Schools would be required to use the bond proceeds for technology and infrastructure rather than salaries.

"A dangerous shell game," said Senate minority leader John Cherry, summing up the Democrats' criticism.

"We are guaranteeing every school district will get more money," said Senate majority leader, summing up the Republicans' case.

Democrats lost a series of amendments, nearly all on party-line votes, that would have handled things differently:

Sen. Alma Smith, D-Salem, sought to pay off the 84 Durant case winner in one lump sum by taking about one-sixth of the $1.2 billion budget stabilization ("rainy day") fund.

'At least we give the Durant plaintiffs their money up front,' said Smith, a former South Lyon school board member.

"For the life of me," said Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, "I can't say why they shouldn't get it up front all at and Ingham counties. ■ Sen. Joe Conroy, D-Flint, sought to drop the $768 million bond issue and make 10 annual payments of $77 million a year. He sensed a plot by Engler to make campaign capital by giving those districts a single lump sum just before the 1998 elec-

"It saves a whole lot of interest payments," said Sen. Don Koivisto, D-Ironwood.

The Democrats' amendment would dip into the rainy day fund to make the payments rather than cut into the school aid fund.

We'd be reducing the budget stabilization fund by half when it isn't a rainy day," said Sen. Mike Bouchard, R-Birmingham. 'And it would be binding future legislature that may not feel bound by the obligation," he added, pointing to modern legislatures' decision against helping out bond payment on the Pontiac Silverdome.

Peters branded the GOP plan as unfair because: "The ones with the most legitimate argument get their money over three years, but the non-plaintiffs get "The plan in SB 52 (the GOP bill) will take from the school aid fund. These districts will pay for the bonds with their own money. The plaintiff districts will pay for them (bonds), too. It's a crazy setup. And the technology won't even last 15 years," Peters said.

"This is robbing Peter to pay Paul when Peter is already destitute," said Sen. George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn.

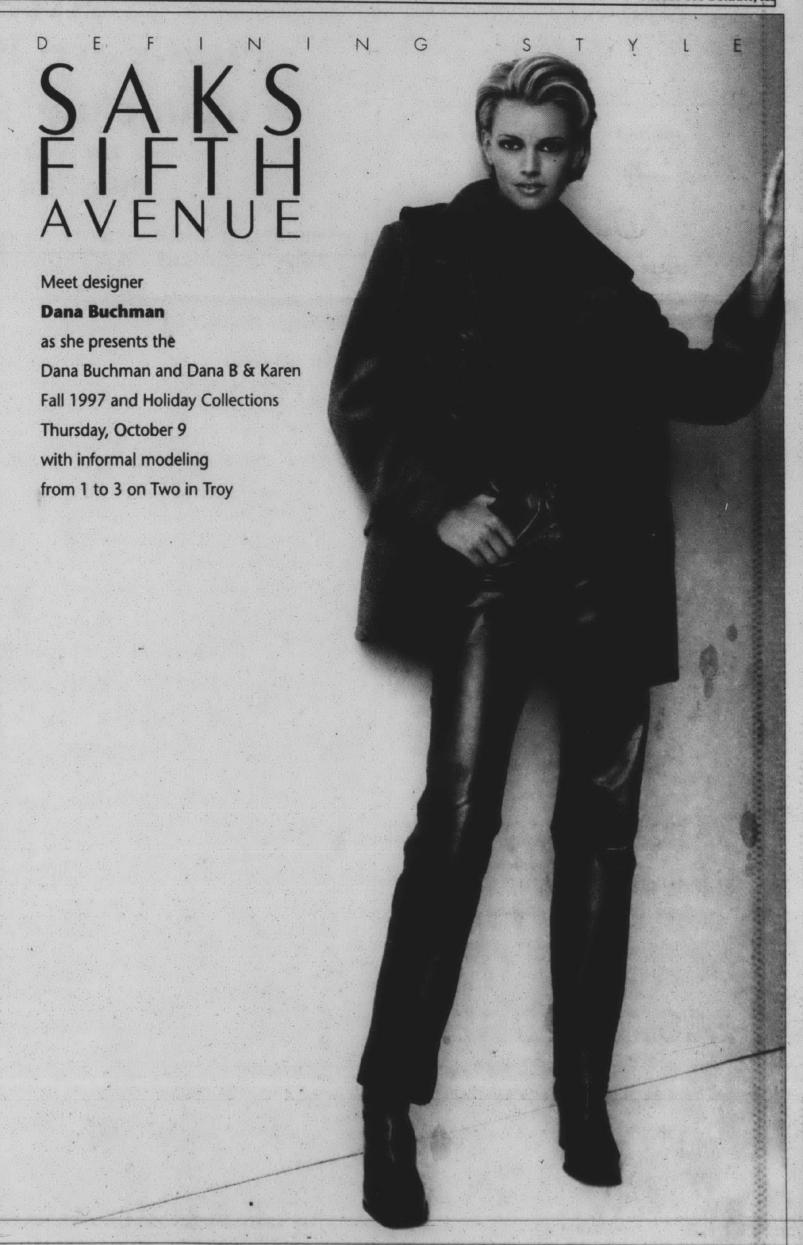

Democrats fought an Engler-GOP plan to fund school employees' pensions by assuming state investments would earn 8.5 percent instead of 8 percent in the securities mar-

When Democrats said the stock market boom wouldn't last forever and more of the pension burden would be shifted to local districts, Republicans replied that Democratic Gov. James Blanchard used a 10 percent assumption in the 1980s.

appropriations bill restoring the full $252 million for "at-risk" students vetoed in August by Gov. Engler.

Engler and the Senate favor restoring $232 million this year (fiscal 1998, which began Oct. 1) and adding $20 million next year for a total of $252 million.

Rep. Greg Kaza, R-Rochester Hills, said the House plan is better for the Durant case plaintiffs in his legislative district – Avondale, Rochester and Troy. "We're more independent," he said of the bipartisan House vote.

The battle over Durant case settlement becomes more complicated than normal.

Usually, when the two chambers pass different versions of the same bill, the two versions are sent to a conference committee – three senators and three representatives.

This time, however, the chambers have passed different bills.

County budget year to follow state

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK STAFF WRITER

Wayne County will follow the same budget year as the state of Michigan.

County commissioners approved an ordinance Thursday that would revise the dates from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30 for each fiscal year. That will mean the county will have an abbreviated budget year of 10 months from Dec. 1, 1997 to Sept. 30, 1998.

The county's fiscal years used to run from Dec. 1 until Nov. 30.

Before their action, commissioners had asked the state what impact the change would have on revenue received by the county. Mark Hilpert, director of the bureau of local government services of the state Department of Treasury, said accounting and reporting of county funds related to state grants and programs would be easier.

"Another impact will be an increase in the fund balances of funds financed primarily by property taxes since the tax levy will be recognized in full for the fiscal year while the year of the change will only have ten months of expenditures," Hilpert

"The county must remember, however, that the first two months — or more probable, three months — of the next fiscal year will not have the major tax revenue and therefore, sufficient balances must be retained to operate during that period."

Vice Chair Kay Beard, DWestland, said she had recommended this change every year she's been a commissioner. Commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-

Canton, said he had concerns about the effects on the county's revenue sharing, but that the letter addressed them.

New home for library

Commissioners also approved a building purchase to relocate the county's Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. Wayne County purchased the building from Public Service Credit Union in Detroit for $300,000.

The library will move to 30555 Michigan Avenue, Westland.

With the commission's approval, the Wayne County Health and Community Service Department now will pursue state and federal library grant funds for the purchase and renovation of the facility.

Sheriffs to get vehicles

Commissioners approved the purchase of 11 vehicles for $187,700 Thursday from Country Ford LTD of Burton, Ohio. Beard and Commissioner Bernard Parker, D-Detroit, wondered why the commission didn't receive a bid from a Wayne County firm.

An official from the Sheriff's Department told commissioners several Crown Victorias were available after a deal with the Cleveland Police Department fell apart and the vehicles just sat on the Ohio dealership's parking lot. Wayne County received a deal on the equipped vehicles for about $18,000 each.

Commissioners approved a package of the 10 Crown Victorias and one other $700 car that won't be used for patrols.

Go south for Italian wine values

BY ELEANOR & RAY HEALD SPECIAL WRITERS

very three seconds someone in the U.S. pulls the cork of a Winebow bottle of wine," Leonardo LoCascio, CEO of Winebow, Inc., a major importer of Italian wines remarked. Annually, he spends a minimum of eight weeks in Italy choosing wines for his company. LoCascio understood our concern about the very high price tag on Italian wines from the heralded northern regions of Piedmont and Tuscany. "Go south to central and southern Italy," he directed.

"This is not unlike southern France where wines from the southern Rhone, Provence and Languedoc-Roussillon have created interest because they are good values." LoCascio pointed to regions from Rome south where debt-free vineyards have been in families for centuries. New vineyard land investments in northern Italy run $50,000 per acre in Chianti or $100,000 per acre in the Piedmont. The cost of the investment is amortized over production from the land in the next 10 to 15 years. This drives up the cost of wines from these northern regions.

"Regaliali is a Sicilian producer with 1,200 acres of land that has been in the family since the 1700s," LoCascio explained. "In the south, you don't have land cost to spread over a limited number of bottles and escalate wine cost." Additionally, LoCascio singled out the vintage situation where only two or three years out of 10 are very good in the Piedmont and in Tuscany, only four in 10 years. In the south, there is no longer a middle European climate, but rather a North African climate. This creates good and great vintages in the south, but none that are poor as is the case in the north. Returns on vineyard investment in the south are more constant, but in the north, one must wait for the good vintages to make big money.

Southern Italy remains fairly undeveloped where local demand for wines, historically, has been low and has not created consumer competition for the best wines like that occurring in the Piedmont and Tuscany. "The Piedmont is like the Napa Valley of Europe," LoCascio remarked. "People drive from Switzerland, Austria and Germany, fill up their vans with cases of wine and drive home. It's not quite

Big, orange Jack-o-lanterns haunt local patches

Scary, cute, huge, round, are words we use to describe pumpkins, but ancient Greeks had another one - "Pepon," meaning "cooked by the sun."

Don't call your pumpkin a veg-etable, you might offend it. Pumpkins are fruits, melons to be exact, and one the largest in the family.

Peter Peter was a pumpkin eater, I'll bet he had pretty good eyes too. Pumpkin is rich in vitamin A, which can help you see better at night, and improve weak eyesight. Vitamin A also helps us build resistance to respiratory infections, a good thing as we enter the cold and flu season, and promotes growth, strong bones, healthy skin, hair, teeth and gums.

There's more than three times the U.S. recommended daily amount of vitamin A in a half cup of canned pumpkin.

When you're looking for the perfect pumpkin, "choose pumpkins that are brightly colored and heavy for their size; their rinds should be free from blemishes, said Sharon Tyler Herbst, author of the "Food Lover's Tiptionary," (Hearst Books, New York).

Some pumpkins are for jack-olaterns, others for cooking, they're not the same. Choose a pie pumpkin for cooking, and look for the smaller ones, they'll be sweeter, and meatier.

Herbst says to store whole pumpkins at room temperature for up to 1 month, and you can refrigerate them for 3 months, a blessing for cooks planning to make fresh pumpkin pie for Thanksgiving. Leftover pumpkin pie can be stored in the refrigerator for no more than three days. John F. Mariani, author of

"The Dictionary of American

Food and Drink," (Hearst Books, New York) credits Indians with introducing pumpkin to the pil-grims. Besides making pumpkin pies, Mariani says pilgrims made pumpkin beer and pumpkin

A popular rhyme in the 17th century went like this - "We have pumpkin at morning and pumpkin at noon. If it were not for pumpkin, we should be undoon."

Cook pumpkin just like you would any squash. Winter squash, such as acorn and Hubbard can be substituted for pumpkin in recipes. Roast squash and pumpkin in the oven, or boil until soft in enough water to cover. Add a splash of apple cider to the water for flavor.

Herbst said Halloween pumpkins will keep longer if you spray them with an antiseptic inside and out.

Chris Williams of Drivers Berry Farm in South Lyon has heard about this method, but never tried it.

"We tell people to keep their pumpkins in a cool, dry place, out of the rain, and off the ground. Put it on a milk crate," said Williams who owns the farm with his wife JoAnn. The Drivers grow pumpkins on 20 acres of their 230 acre farm, which has been in the family for 60 years. The farm was started by JoAnn's father Louis Driver, and Chris was a farmer before he and JoAnn married. "Wait three days before Halloween to carve, your pumpkin," said Williams.

Tell your anxious children their pumpkin will look absolutely gruesome, and not scary in a Halloween way, if they carve it too early. "As soon as air gets into the pumpkin it starts to rot," said Mary Hauk of Canton who

Everyone asks, what is the best way to prepare pie pumpkins for pumpkin pies. "I don't have time to do it," said Hauk. "But people tell me all kinds of ways. Some cut it open, bake it like squash and scoop out the pulp, others peel it first and then bake it.' Cathy Caldwell who works at Wiard's Orchards in Washtenaw County says fresh cooked pumpkin never tastes like canned. "My mother and grandmother prefer it to canned," she said. "You have to add a lot of spices to it - allspice, cinnamon and nutmeg."

Mother Nature played a scary trick with all the rain this spring, but farmers say this year's pumpkin crop is a little early and looks good - a treat for little goblins. "It's the best crop we've had in a long time," said Williams. "We have some nice looking pumpkins, I just came in from the field," said Hauk. "It's wonderful this year," is how Caldwell described it.

Vegetarian diet can fit demands of athletes young athletes are adopting vegetarian diets for many reasons. Athletes who seek lowfat, high carbohydrate regimens find that a vegetarian diet fits in with their training prescriptions. Let's explore the nutrient needs of the vegetarian athlete. To meet energy needs, athletes may need to eat six to eight meals and/or snacks per day. For the vegetarian athlete, it is helpful to include calorie dense foods such as nuts, seeds, legumes and vegetable oils. Many athletes do not even consume the Recommended Dietary

An increasing number of Allowance for calories. This is especially common in adolescent wrestlers. These athletes may maintain their weight by conserving energy through chronic dieting and weight fluctuation. This, in turn, can lower metabolic rate and, of course, is unhealthy. Although nutrient needs vary based on age, gender and activity level, the common deficiencies in nutrients on calorie restricted vegetarian diets include riboflavin, vitamin B-12, vitamin D, iron, calcium and zinc. Loss of bone calcium may lead to stress fractures and osteoporosis. In female athletes who stop menstruating, this may cause further complications. Because amenorrheic women tend to have lower estrogen levels, this may impair their calcium absorption and retention.

Because dairy products are high in sodium and protein, which cause calcium loss from bone, vegetarian sources are recommended for more efficient absorption and retention such as fortified soy milk, fortified orange juice, tofu, almonds, legumes and leafy vegetables such as collard greens, kale, mustard greens and turnip greens.

Iron deficiency anemia is a common problem in female athletes. Since iron loss may be increased in runners due to red blood cell destruction through foot pounding as well as sweating, prevalent among female long distance runners. Although absorption of iron is three times greater from food sources containing heme iron (meat) versus non-heme iron (plant sources such as beans, nut butters,

In short, local demand which is low, favorable climatic conditions for good vintages each year and low or nearly zero land costs create a tremendous price/value relationship for southern Italian

LoCascio said that up to this point Italian varietals grown in California have been only a curiosity and production is small. "However, sangiovese and barbera from California have staying power," LoCascio believes. "The market needs more red wines from California. Cabernet and merlot are great, but pinot noir doesn't have the flavor interest most Americans want. Enjoyment of red wine has escalated and the natural point of comparison is with Italian wines."

Because of this, sales of Italian-produced barbera and Chianti Classico (principally sangiovese) are going through the roof. "Wines are on allocation from every Italian producer of note," LoCascio maintained. "Sangiovese-based wines are very hot. This interest has come from California's growing and producing wine from Italian varietals."

Pinot grigio has garnered significant interest as an Italian white wine. Truthfully, most pinot grigios around $10 are not worth drinking. But fresh, clean and full 1995 Stella Pinot Grigio, Umbria $7.50, a Winebow import, is a departure from the norm!

spinach, fortified cereal and some dried fruits), iron supplementation may be especially helpful in vegetarian female runners who are consuming only non-heme sources of iron. Male athletes too may run the risk of iron deficiency. In the vegetarian diet, vitamin C can be helpful in enhancing non-heme iron absorption while tea and coffee can decrease the absorption.

Protein needs may vary by type of sport based on the need strength, speed and endurance. Athletes require 50 to 125 percent more protein than the Recommended Dietary Allowance of 0.8 grams per kilogram body weight. Endurance athletes need 1.2gm/kg of body weight and may benefit from 1.4g/kg during prolonged endurance exercise. Strength athletes need 1.4g/kg and may benefit from 1.8gm/kg during periods of muscle building. To determine your weight in kilograms, divide your weight by 2.2 so you can determine your specific protein needs.

Vegetarian protein alternatives include soy products such as tofu, tempeh, and texturized vegetable protein as well as legumes and seitan. Try Morningstar Farm's Chick Nuggets or Grillers for tasty meat substitutes. Protein requirements are very easily attained from these

It is not necessary to use protein supplements as excess protein can lead to dehydration, gout, liver and kidney damage, calcium loss and gastrointestinal problems. Vitamin and mineral supplements can be a significant part of the vegetarian athletes training regime but should be discussed with your dietitian.

Pre-game meals should be high in carbohydrates such as whole grain pastas, brown rice or couscous. Avoid beans or excessive soy products as they tend to be gassy. Healthy snacks can include Health Valley Tarts or Granola Bars as well as Clif

Not all athletes are school age. As an athlete ages, their calorie needs decrease. Although calcium requirements in women may vary based on if they are receiving hormone replacement therapy or not, iron requirements are reduced for postmenopausal women in comparison to younger athletes.

Just as careful attention must be given to a meat-eating athlete in order to provide a healthy, balanced food plan, a vegetarian diet can provide adequate calo-

While tailgating is often thought of in conjunction with football, it's a great way to liven up any sporting event, from softball to soccer. Pre-game festivities around the home television are also gaining popularity.

Whether it's parked on tailgate party must have deli-cious food - and plenty of it. Few other foods signify sports-event fun like handfuls of roasted, inshell peanuts. Chances are, these treats were grown in Texas, the second largest peanut-producing state.

More than a snack, peanuts add crunch and flavor to a variety of easy recipes including main dishes, salads and baked goods. Next ballgame, lead off your mobile meal with this tangy, crunchy crowd-pleaser.

Enjoy a taste of pumpkin perfection

As widespread and scary as jack-o'-lanterns are this time of year, it's important to remember that pumpkins are more than just a decorative item. Not only are they an exceptional source of vitamin A, but they contain a variety of other important vitamins and minerals, along with a good supply of dietary fiber.

When selecting a pumpkin for cooking, it is important to pick one that is heavy in relation to its size with a good orange color and a hard rind. Reject any cut or severely bruised pumpkins. At home, keep your pumpkin in a cool place until you are ready to Use the puree in any number of your favorite seasonal treats, such as creamy pumpkin pie, lightly sweet pumpkin bread, and spicy, rich pumpkin

Pumpkin adds color, texture and mellow flavor to any of your favorite soup, stew or chili recipes. Make a hearty Harvest Bean Stew by sauteing a thinly sliced onion and a minced garlic clove in oil with dried oregano and chili powder. Add chopped tomatoes and simmer five min-

Bake for an hour, or until the beans and vegetables are tender. To thicken the stew, mash about half the beans and stir the entire mixture thoroughly before serving.

Boost the flavor of plain baked chicken with a pumpkin-andlentil saute. Saute a finely chopped onion in a large saucepan until soft. Add lentils and water and bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer for 10 minutes. Add peeled, cubed pumpkin, along with lemon juice, minced fresh parsground ginger, freshly ground black pepper and ground cumin. Saks Fifth Avenue

Expansion to improve business

A new and improved Saks Fifth Avenue is evolving at Somerset Collection South as the couture retailer positions itself for the 21st century shopper.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO

When the 30-year-old Saks Fifth Avenue store at Somerset Collection South in Troy completes renovations next September, customers will feel they're shopping inside an elegant mansion.

Plans call for wider aisles, sumptuous fitting rooms, gracious entries, several fireplaces, a state-ofthe art beauty salon and spa, health food cafe, a gift shop for the home, and all new fixturing, lighting and

The store will be enlarged by 40,000 square feet and a tri-level parking deck with 410 spaces will be added to the back side.

"We've been working on these plans for three years," said Kim Nye, store manager since 1980. "It's a whole new Saks exuding feelings of luxury and ele-

Nye said the changes put Saks Fifth Avenue in a position to rival competitor Neiman Marcus for the high-end customer. A "battle" going on in many markets where the two luxury retailers woo the wealthy.

"We have very loyal customers, many of whom have shopped Saks Fifth Avenue since the Grand Boulevard store opened in 1936," Nye said. "Soon we hope to offer them the most beautiful store in one of the prettiest malls in the country."

Nye said since Saks Fifth Avenue went public in 1996, many changes have taken place.

"Locally, we'll open an Off 5th (clearance) store at the Great Lakes Crossing outlet center in Auburn Modern facade: Saks Fifth Avenue at the Somerset Collection South in Troy, is adding 40,000 more square feet of retail space, a tri-level parking deck (far right), a health food cafe and a state-of-the art beauty spal salon to keep pace with the luxurious offerings at the rest of the mall. This view from Coolidge, features iron grating above the marbled entrance.

> Hills, and at the Fairlane Town Center Store in Dearborn, where merchandise is being consolidated on the first level to create on Off 5th store on Level Two."

> In 1967, Saks Fifth Avenue was the first store to open in the cornfield that is now the retail mecca known as The Somerset Collection. It was the place to go for merchandise by Chanel, Armani, St. John and Oscar de la Renta.

> "We try to offer assortments that are a quality above what other stores present to be more special to our customers," Nye explained. "That's why I'm so excited about our changes. We'll have so much more room to present more extensive collections from designers. Our coat department will have the best selections in the city with room enough to see it all and try it on in elegant surroundings."

Increased visibility

Nye said all the store walls will come down in January when the guts of the remodel begins, heading toward a Sept. 1, 1998 grand reopening. The elevators now in the center of the store, will be moved to encourage people to use the escalators at the far

Last week, the entire Saks Fifth Avenue Men's Department was moved down the mall into the former Barney's New York space to make room for initial changes. The men's department, a success story in its own right, will remain there through the holi-

In the new Saks, look for the entire sportswear collection to be housed on the second level along with evening wear. The store plans to become the area's "Petites Headquarters," expanding its petite assortments. Fitting rooms in all departments will be enlarged and upgraded with personal amenities. Fireplaces will be added in Men's and the Fifth Avenue Club, where many customers shop in privacy.

Level One luxury

On the main floor, cosmetics will triple in size, jewelry will double in size, and handbags and accessories will become a row of individual designer boutiques with new vendors added to the present roster of who's who. The women's shoe department will triple in size and also set down on the main floor.

The third floor will house the spa/salon offering state of the art surroundings for massages, skin treatments and hair services. Negotiations are under way to feature Yves Saint Laurent products, exclusively in the spa

Cafe Citron will seat 20, have a juice bar, and prepare "gourmet health foods" in an intimate setting.

"The new store is being designed by a team that just finished the Houston Galleria and Saks Fifth Avenue's San Francisco Men's Store which opened to rave reviews," said Nye. "This store will take us a notch above our competition on all levels.

Nye said her team got the go-ahead to proceed with the modernization because store sales figures remained strong through the opening of Somerset North, and through the five years following the debut of Neiman Marcus at the other end of the shopping

Scarewood Shop opens in Kmart

Halloween shopping will be a scream at Kmart's Scarewood Forest this year. Families will be greeted by an 8-foot-tall Frankenstein and guided by furry monster footprints to everything they need for a frighteningly fun Halloween.

In addition to aisles of Halloween candy and goodies, creepy cardboard creatures lurk around every corner leading to Scarewood Forest costume displays. "The costumes that kids love best come from the year's hottest movies," Kmart seasonal buyer Randy Williams said. "Star Wars and Hercules both were blockbusters that transition well into costumes, and for prices parents like – both under

He predicted moms and dads will see a lot of pint-size Darth Vaders and Megs this Halloween, explaining that dressing as "Meg," from Hercules, will be big with girls, but not many boys will don the short skirted costume of Hercules himself. "Sometimes the costume is cooler than the actual character. For example, we expect to see a lot of kids dressing as the hunters from The Lost World," he said.

As little as 99 cents buys an eye mask in Scarewood Forest, but big kids also can splurge on $30 latex masks detailed with realistic warts, blood and fangs. Specialty licensed costumes such as Batman's Poison Ivy and Xena: Warrior Princess are available in Kmart's top-grossing stores across the country.

"A real winner is the M&M costume," said Williams. Chocoholics will make a splash in this getup whether they're attending a costume party or handing out snack-size melt-in-your-mouth-not-in-your-hands candies at the door. To outfit the house, Scarewood Forest offers many possibilities, such as bewitching foam pumpkins that light up when plugged in and enchanting autumn wreaths that are unique to the mass merchandise channel.

AN ORDINARY WOMAN

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON STAFF WRITER

Her name is Sheila Lang. She's not unlike most women. A college graduate, successful professional, homeowner, and wife. In August, she unwillingly became a member of a particular group of women not brought together by a common interest or shared back-tion to breast cancer. Sheila is a victim.

Last month she hit a brick wall that seems vast and impersonal.

She is not suffering alone though. This year, more than 180,000 American women are expected to be diagnosed, and tragically, 44,000 will succumb to this vicious disease. Breast cancer is now the second leading cause of cancer death in women, exceeded only by lung cancer.

Those 180,000 women are gathered alongside Sheila unable to see beyond the wall. They are angry and lash out at the roadblock that has intrusively disrupted their life.

Sheila wonders "why, Why me?" Staring back at her in the mirror is not the woman she's looked at for the last 45 years. Her trademark locks were lost just a few days after chemotherapy began. She sees a tired, old woman — not the vibrant, active individual she's evolved into since her teen years.

The wall is an obstacle for which they need time to overcome. Their perspective is minimal. They need time to deny. Time to be résentful. Time to heal. Time to reevaluate who they are.

The wall itself is not anonymous. In fact, it is adorned with the names of loved ones lost to the illness. A monument to their legacy and a long-last-ing reminder of their courage.

Eventually, these women will become Sheila's inspirations. Stepping stones to guide her over the wall and away from the pain and anguish that rules her life at this moment.

While you may not know the Sheila described here - she's not unlike any woman in your life. Your sister, the woman that works across the desk from you, your child's teacher, a friend, your mother or you.

Avon mug raises funds for cancer programs

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON STAFF WRITER

This October, Avon's Breast Cancer Awareness Crusade introduces the new Avon Pink Ribbon Mug to continue to raise funds for breast health programs nationwide that educate women and connect them to early detection services.

The importance of early detection was emphasized early this year when the National Cancer institute joined the American Cancer Society and the National Alliance of Breast Cancer Organizations (NABCO) in recommending annual screening mammograms, beginning at age 40.

"The theme we're promoting along with the Pink Ribbon Mug is: "Take time for yourself and others." The idea is that something as simple as having a cup of tea, alone or with a friend, can be a daily reminder to women to be aware of their breast health and to urge others to do the same," explains Joanne Mazurki, director of Avon's crusade.

In their fifth year of matching fundraising with a promotional awareness campaign, Avon's latest reminder to women comes in the form of a decorative coffee mug. Previous years items have included a small and large pink, jewelry-style ribbon pin, ear-

According to 12-year Avon sales representative Diane Luty of Livonia, the well-liked items have always featured the trademark "pink ribbon" and have grown increasingly popular over the last decade. Luty said 100 percent of the proceeds from the sale of the

The effectiveness of omen encouraging women to take charge of their health was quantified in a recent national survey commissioned by Avon's Breast Cancer Awareness Crusade and NABCO. Over half of the women surveyed, who were aged 50 and older, said they did not get regular medical checkups of any kind. They also said they would be more motivated to schedule routine examinations, including mammograms and clinical breast exams, if they were encouraged to by people close to them:

Avon's Crusade - women reaching out to women with breast cancer information, support and access to services - is making a significant impact.

Luty, whose sales territory includes Redford, Westland and Livonia (District 4794), said she has a local client base of approximately 75 customers each of om will order at least one of the crusade products. "A lot of women buy more than one and give them as gifts to a female friend or relative in their life," said

"I think Avon's involvement is important because we cover a lot of territory and can reach a lot of women. We're a company people know they can trust." Luty went on to note that more breast cancer awareness products were sold over the last five years by the 280 representatives in this state's coverage area than any other district throughout the country.

Luty said sales representatives receive no profit from the sale of the "pink ribbon" items. "We do it because we believe in the cause," said Luty.

The Avon Pink Ribbon Mug is priced at $4 and features a botanical-style illustration of the pinkribbon-and-rose motif of the crusade. Every mug comes with a gift carton and an educational flyer about breast cancer and a history of Avon's crusade. To order the mug or any of the other "pink ribbon" products, contact the nearest Avon Representative or call 1-800-AVON. Diane Luty can be reached by calling, (313) 522-0993. Early screening essential

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI

Screening for early cancer detection is one test you don't want to skip. The American Cancer Society and area hospitals are offering cancer screening tests, opportunities to get involved in research and new procedures that lessen the trauma of Garden City Hospital, for instance, is providing screening for prostate cancer, colon cancer and breast cancer from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 23. The event will also include educational lectures. A $25 fee includes a PSA colon test for men and a colo-Rectal kit, which is a simple test to check for blood in the stool. A $35 fee for women includes mammograms and the colo-Rectal

"This is our first endeavor to offer this comprehensive of a screening, according to Dr. Ronald Lutsic, Garden City Hospital radiation oncologist. "We're attempting to evaluate some of the more common malignancies and screen for them in the general public within the community. We would like to see at least 100 people. Typically the biggest draw areas are Garden City, Redford, Livonia and other nearby communi-

Women who are interested in getting mammograms during the screening program should call, 458-4330, to register. Mammograms are recommended to anyone who is at a higher risk for the disease, which includes women who have a mother or other close relative who had breast cancer.

"Most people believe screening for breast cancer should start at 40, but we are still seeing it in younger women and at an increasing incident," Lutsic said. In fact, October has been named National Breast Cancer Awareness Month in an effort to educate the public about the most common cancer among women. More than 6,000 women in Michigan will be diagnosed with breast cancer this year and of those about 1,500 will die.

The statistics are just as gloomy for colon cancer.

There are about 155,000 new cases of colon cancer diagnosed annually in the U.S. among men and women, according to American Cancer Society. From that figure, some 61,000 people will die. Prostate cancer is the leading form of cancer among men. It will strike an estimated 317,000 men this year and more than 40,000 of those men will die from the disease.

"As our population is getting older and older you're seeing more and more prostate cancer," Lutsic said. "In most cases the PSA is a very sensitive test to detect early prostate disease, which includes benign disease, but also of malignant disease as well." Men interested in getting

The Rehabilitation Unit has become an integral part of the community and the hospital estimates to have treated over 5,650 patients in the Rehabilitation Unit. Persons recovering from strokes, hip fractures, joint replacements and neurological impairments are given the ability to re-learn skills that will help them do as much for themselves, as they continue to recover from a serious injury or illness. The goal of the unit is to have patients leave the facility pleased with the progress they make and confident that life will resume as intended.

Patients continually report that they have gained improvements in their physical ability during their stay.

Henry Ford Health Systems is using an expansive telephone chain idea, "Tell-A-Friend" to promote the importance of getting mammograms. On Tuesday, Oct. 7 volunteers are asked to call their sisters, friends and neighbors to remind them to get mammograms.

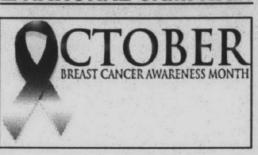

The event marks the beginning of a new relationship between Henry Ford Health Systems, Health Alliance Plan and The American Cancer Society to educate the public about cancer, risks and prevention. The "Tell-a-Friend" goal is to reach 10,000 women. Volunteer callers will receive informational material about breast cancer and mammograms, as well as a list of local facilities offering mammogram screenings. For more information about the program call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-825-2271.

"Our hope is that all of our efforts will result in a significant increase in the early detection of breast cancer and that will lead to a reduction in breast cancer deaths." Call the recruitment line at (313) 874-6725 for more information about the study.

Screening for men

Also, Botsford General Hospital is providing a three week educational series on prostate cancer beginning Jan. 14, 1998. All aspects of the disease will be discussed including treatment, incontinence, impotence and the psychological impact of cancer on men and their families. Preregistration is required and there is a $30 fee. For more information call 248-477-6100.

Besides screenings and research studies, area hospitals are also working on making testing procedures less burdensome.

the most exciting advances we've had," Grigorian said. "It's an effective procedure as an alternative to open surgical biopsies. It's nice to be able to sample these without going into surgery.

"Where it has it's greatest utility is for a subtle abnormality where you can achieve accurate and adequate sampling of the area.'

The Detroit Medical Center, for the past three years, also offers patients the stereotactic large core biopsy of the breast, which combines x-rays and computers to give the exact location and dimension of the mass. This machine defines the area for the mammotome.

'Although there have been great strides in the diagnosis of breast cancer in the past decade, we still don't know what causes it or what women can do to prevent it.'

Deidre Wickham -Botsford Hospital OB/GYN

This campaign arose from the statistics that an estimated 25 percent of women who get mammograms do so because a close friend or relative told them to. And while self-examinations are a valuable method of detection. mammograms of the breast can detect lumps that cannot be felt by a hand examination.

If you are a woman between the ages of 20 and 40, monthly selfexaminations ought to be included in your normal routine. If you are 40 and older - annual mammogram screenings should become a significant addition to your yearly check up. It's never too early to be safe - and too late only means you've let the reports ACS. Arguments of being too busy to do the exam or that mammograms are expensive and uncomfortable are made. But, experts say, your life is worth the 90 seconds it takes to perform the exam on yourself and ask a breast cancer survivor if they would trade the momentary discomfort you're avoiding for the weeks of pain from a blood transfusion, chemotherapy, a mastectomy or worse — death. There are dozens of support

I want to take you along so do a little imagining and put yourself behind the wheel of this

It's 7 a.m. as you back out of the garage and head off to work, your mind already in fast forwards as you think about the meetings, appointments, phone calls and paperwork you'll have to handle before you pull back into the garage that evening. As you make your way to the freeway, you realize you should have left 20 minutes earlier. Traffic is seriously backed up to get on the entrance ramp.

As you creep forward, you switch on your car's onboard computer. The built-in display on the dashboard illuminates and a large question mark appears, indicating it's ready for your voice command.

Who's in charge?

"Switch to navigate," you say into the tiny hands-free microphone attached to the driver's side sun visor, the same microphone that works with your cellular telephone. The computer screen switches to a new display.

"Map," you say. This time, it takes a little longer. You hear a modem sound and dialing tones. In twenty seconds, the screen changes views a couple of times and then, from a speaker, it announces: "Map view ... free-

"Pan north," you say.

The display shifts. "Pan north," you repeat. Again, the map moves to the north. You see your entrance. "Zoom," you say. The display gives you a close-up two-mile view of the route you plan to drive.

The map indicated heavy traffic all over the freeway system, normal for the morning rush. But you need to know now just how long this entrance ramp delay will be. Is this normal or "Switch to live," you say, eying the gridlock on the road ahead. Maybe 10 seconds pass. Now you see photographs, live pictures that change every few seconds, taken from a bank of cameras mounted along the freeway. There are more than 15 different locations you can select from. Again, you zoom in on your stretch and see, a half-mile south of the exit you are about to enter, the lights of emergency vehicles. It looks like a serious multi-car accident. The road is a mess. If you try to get to work this way, that accident will cost you at least an extra 15-min-

No sooner do you get moving again then a nagging thought enters your mind? The garage door. Did you remember to close "Switch to security," you say into the hands-free microphone. The display gives you several choices, such as "Call for Wrecker... Call 911... Check home."

"Check home," you say. A list of options appears. You need to keep your eye on the road but, that's okay, because the computer reads them to you as it checks to see if all the doors are locked, windows shut and... "Garage door open," says the computer. "Do you wish to close

"Yes," you reply. "Garage door closed."

That's a relief - letting your mind go back to the details of the workday.

Since you're connected to your home, you voice more commands, ordering your car's computer to patch into your home PC and display a copy of a memo you were working on the night before. Out of your peripheral vision, you see the memo on the dashboard display. The computer, however, "reads" it to you. You dictate some changes and the car computer converts them into text. Then you tell the car to transfer the file to your office

While in the office computer, you decide to check your overnight e-mail, which is read back to you by the computer. You sigh. You're half way to work... and already, ahead of the schedule. Not bad.

"Switch to Audionet," you say. "Radio... AM... News stations." As the computer offers various choices, you select your state, then your city. Then, through the speakers, you're tuned in.

"Audio books," you say, making your selection and, for the rest of the drive in, listening to your computer read you excerpts from Tom Clancy's latest novel.

Seeing is believing

Sound futuristic? Like something from a science fiction

Would you believe ... everything we just saw our mythical commuter do is available... now? It is. In fact, I've done just about everything just described. Don't believe me? I don't blame you. But to see for yourself, visit the web site maintained by Intel (http://www.intel.com) and look up information about their "Connected Car-PC" project. These features are already available, based on existing technologies and standards. For about the same cost of a home computer system, Intel and other companies can hook your car up to do everything we described above... and lots more.

I spent an hour or so experimenting with the Intel test vehicle. It was a regular Jeep Cherokee model that Intel equipped with an on-board Pentium computer system hooked up to the Internet through a cellular telephone connection. It was very strange driving and surfing the web at the same time, though instead of a mouse I spoke into a microphone on a headset and used voice recognition software to navigate the web.

Obviously, my house security system isn't hooked up to the Net and that part of the Intel test car was a demo project. But, again, all the technology is already in place. The freeway traffic maps for Metro Detroit are already online. Among other places, you can access them through the WDIV site (http://www.wdiv.com) or the Merit Network (http://campus.merit.net/mdot/).

Some cities, like San Diego (http://www.xlnt.com/quikcam.ht ml) already have live traffic pictures on the web and the Michigan department of Transportation is exploring similar plans with its several dozen closed circuit live cameras positioned up and down I-75.

Microsoft, the Big Three automobile companies and scores of software and hardware firms are developing even more sophisticated software and hardware for automobiles so... get ready. The future is here.

Officers on their way to meeting Special Olympics fundraising goal

BY RICHARD PEARL STAFF WRITER

The officers at two western Wayne County correctional facilities - aided significantly by a big donation from inmates at one of the institutions - were well on their way recently to meeting their fundraising goal on behalf of the Michigan Special Olympics. With a donation of $5,000 from the Inmate Benefit Fund at Western Wayne County Correctional Facility, plus $500 from the WWCF's Adopt-A-Family program, corrections personnel as mid-September had collected $5,500 toward their goal of about $7,000.

Another $1,400 being raised by the corrections officers themselves, plus contributions from officers at neighboring Scott Correctional Facility, should put them over the top, according to WWCF Sgt. Steve Ostrovich, coordinator the past seven years of the two facilities' efforts.

The effort, including a sizable contribution from the Scott prison for women, has netted about $7,000 each of the last three years, said Ostrovich. However, a late change in corrections personnel set back Scott's effort and the male inmates at Western Wayne, who voted to increase their contribution, picked up the slack.

The Western Wayne and Scott effort is part of the annual Michigan Law Enforcement Torch Run in which police and corrections officers raise money long to make our move.

■'The effort, including a sizable contribution from the Scott prison for women, has netted about $7,000 each of the last three years.'

Sgt. Steve Ostrovich, -Fundraising coordinator for the Special Olympics for the mentally retarded and developmentally disabled.

The 3.5-mile run-walk local Torch Run, was held Thursday in the area of Five Mile and Beck with 18 correction cers, led by a Northville police motorcycle escort, participating.

They included a stop at the Our Lady of Providence facility for the homeless on Beck to cheer the residents, passing out plastic police badges.

Runners and walkers participating included Ostrovich and WWCF Officers John Sahl, Carol Horn, Ava Williams, Philip Smith, Wade Aldrich, Janice Alston, Oliver Williams and Semaj Jorgan, plus Unit Supervisor Frank Konieczki, teacher Lisa Brown and administrative personnel Lynn Laird, Annette Norman and Darlene LeAnnais.

Scott personnel participating were Resident Unit Supervisor and Torch Run coordinator Chris Chrysler, officer Ron Page and administrative personnel Karen Welsh and Joyce Hurley.

Louis G. Redstone looked back fondly on a painting class he took with Professor Jean Paul Slusser at the University of Michigan 70 years ago. Next week, the 94-year-old artist/architect/author returns to the University of Michigan to exhibit travel sketches and watercolors in the gallery named after Slusser. In honor of Redstone's alma mater, all proceeds from art sold during the exhibition will go to scholarship endowments in the School of Art and Design and the College of Architecture and Urban Planning.

"The exhibit has a sentimental meaning for me because 70 years ago this is where I started and here is where I am 70 years later," said Redstone, who earned a bachelor of science degree in architecture from the University of Michigan in 1929.

"Professor Slusser introduced me to watercolor and the excitement of painting outdoors. Money from the sales will be used for scholarships, that's why I've deliberately kept the prices low so it will be a real come on for people.'

After becoming mesmerized with watercolor his final semester at the University of Michigan, Redstone's love for the medium continued to grow while he studied for a master's in urban design with Eliel Saarinen at Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills. Redstone used watercolor to create the 84 travel sketches in the exhibit while attending architecture conferences all over the world. Since 1937 when he spent time in France, Redstone has carried a set of watercolors in his jacket pocket. Japan, Mexico, Israel, Moscow, Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Peru, Egypt, Kenya, England, Turkey, Italy, India, Amsterdam, and closer to home, New York, California, Colorado, and Saugatuck, Michigan stirred the Detroit artist to record their beauty.

"With a camera you can't pick out what stood out about a place, what it is about that particular location I will take away with me," said Redstone. "Only by sketching can I retain what was important to me. These were done real fast; they had to be completed in two or three minutes. That's all the time you have when you're traveling with a group

For many years Redstone made Livonia the home of his architectural firm.

Author of five internationally acclaimed books, Redstone championed the integration of art into building design, thereby supporting artists such as Louise Nevelson, Marshall Fredericks and Samuel Cashwan while providing enjoyment for the public. He originally developed an interest in combining the two while studying with Saarinen at Cranbrook. Throughout his architecture career, Redstone allotted a portion of the budget for the incorporation of art into the building's overall

Lou Redstone is really an exceptional person who has distinguished himself not only as an architect and artist but as a supporter of the arts, as a teacher, colleague and as a friend," said Allen Samuels, dean of the School of Art and Design. "He's always been there. The royalties from the sales of paintings will go towards scholarships, again he's supporting the students. He's a most generous, talented individual and he has been all his life. That comes through his architecture and it comes through his paintings. I hope people come see the man and his

Jim and Patt Slack prefer to look at obstacles as opportunities. The husband and wife team opened the Rivers Edge Gallery in Wyandotte 15 years ago after Jim was in a serious car accident and could no longer travel from city to city to exhibit his art work in juried fairs.

Two months ago, the Slacks opened their newest gallery in Canton after a second gallery in the Southland Mall closed. The Canton gallery's opening exhibit will feature maritime artist Leo Kuschel. The Slacks began representing Kuschel 15 years ago. In fact, Jim and Kuschel originally met while exhibiting on the Sunshine Artist Cir-

"Because Jim is an artist and our friends are artists, we want to work with artists," said Patt Slack, a former English teacher. "Our shows are always fun, always interesting."

Jim grew up in New Jersey, surrounded by artists such as Ben Shahn, so a career in art seemed a natural choice. By age 19, he had exhibited in New York and was well on his way to becoming a successful artist when the Vietnam War interrupted his studies at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Art. Today, he continues to paint in a studio above the Wyandotte gallery and shows frequently at alternative galleries such as Urban Park-Detroit Art Center in

"We give people the option to have good art works in their home at a reasonable price," said Patt. "We're a potpourri. We've never specialized because our tastes are so wild."

"Good art is good art," added Jim. "We're a commercial fine arts gallery. To survive, we've had to learn to show a spectrum of art.'

Daughter Kelly Slack is another reason, Patt and Jim opened their first art gallery in Wyandotte. It's hard to raise a family while traveling from town to town to sell art. Today, Kelly co-manages the Canton location.

"My parents always instilled a love of art in the family, never to hate a piece until you can understand it," said Kelly Slack. "We try to be a little bit different than anybody else. Over the last 15 years, we've built up our resources. We carry over 2,000 artists, local and

Not many artists open their own galleries; if they do they usually show only their art. However, nearly all of the original art works in the gallery were created by local or regional artists. Rivers Edge Gallery represents more than 25 local artists including Mary Rochelle of Westland; Amy Chenier, Livonia; Bruce Rothfuss, Plymouth; John Fitzpatrick, Ferndale; and Nora Mendoza, West Bloomfield.

We like to have artists drop off photos or slides of their work so in the future if we decide to do a show, we have it on hand," said Kelly.

"We're always looking for artists, but we do have some requirements," added Patt. "They have to have a body of work

"I was impressed with the craftsmanship, variety and originality," said mally-mack. "A lot of shows I jury, I see a lot of look alikes but here there's an energy and an authenticity, like people are coming out of their own experiences.

Marsha Weigand won the Juror's Choice Award for an assemblage titled "Icon Dedicated to Cheryl Cuhran: The Breast Cancer Battle Continues." Weigand, a Farmington Hills artist, teaches at the Visual Arts substitute teacher at Mercy High School in Farmington Hills. She has also taught at the Art Store and More in Livonia.

"I didn't know the title when I looked at it but knew it was well rendered," said mally-mack. "There's a strong feeling of hope in this person. The setting is almost a shrine; that tells me they're someone I want to know about. There's something here that is more than just superficial. The piece is visually well done and has substance."

Weigand, an award-winning artist from Farmington Hills, teaches at the Visual Arts Association of Livonia and as a substitute teacher at Mercy High School in Farmington Hills. She has also taught at the Art Store and More in Livonia.

"The piece came about because of Cheryl, an artist friend of mine who was diagnosed with cancer in January of 1996. She was so bad at the time, the cancer had even gone to her bone marrow. But it was never a negative for Cheryl (a Livonia resident); she was always so positive. I chose an iconic image to show Cheryl's firm belief in the power of prayer which she also believes was instrumental in her doing so well along with the support of family and friends, and both traditional and alternative tute at Harper Hospital in Detroit. She is a survivor. Weigand met her will attending a week-long painting session on the Leelanau peninsula. Curhan will exhibit her work along with Weigand, Edee Joppich and other artists at Bigata, a new coffeehouse at 4867 Haggerty Road at Pontiac Trail in West Bloomfield from Oct. 17 to Nov. 4 (opening reception 1-5 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 19).

"The work in 'Sharing the Gift' came about because Cheryl's an incredible person," said Weigand. "She would never complain. I entered that piece because 'Sharing The Gift' is the theme of the show, and I really do believe is a gift to us. When I heard that I'd won, I was just so happy for Cheryl. I'm going to give the money to her so she can pay her medical bills or whatev-

Susan Heitman of Plymouth also chose the media of assemblage to relay her message in "Psalm 42." Heitman, who earned bachelor's and master's degrees in art from Eastern Michigan University, places an all-seeing eye above a painting of a deer in a forest. Heitman houses both in an icon-like struc-

"The animals eye is what the deer is thinking," said Heitman. The bottom part refers to what the deer is longing for."

"Sharing the Gift" is only one of a series of fine art programs presented by First Presbyterian Church in Northville. The church initiated the series after installing a Casavant organ in the sanctuary in 1991. It was a time of celebration and sharing. Concerts, including Handel's "Messiah" featuring the Northville Concert Chorale and the Michigan Sinfonietta 7 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7, offer the community the opportunity to share the gift of music.

"We hope the fine art series will continue to grow and attract people from surrounding communities," said Darlene Kuperus, director of music.

In the early years in Grodno, Russia, Redstone lived through German, Lithuanian and Polish occupations of his homeland before fleeing an encroaching Russian Calvary in 1920. At age 17, he arrived in Palestine to help build a Jewish Romeland through exhausting physical labor before immigrating to America in 1923.

For many years, Redstone nurtured the arts. At age 90, he received plaques and proclamations from the Detroit Institute of Arts, Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs, Arts Foundation of Michigan, Detroit City Council, and the Governor's Civic Leadership Award for contributions to the arts. In 1996. Wayne State University honored Redstone with the Arts Advocate Award. He also holds the Gold Medal of the Michigan Society of Architects, the highest honor bestowed by the organization.

Redstone has exhibited work at the Detroit Institute of Arts, T'Marra Gallery in Ann Arbor and the Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery. In addition to the travel sketches. the Slusser Gallery exhibition contains vibrant abstract watercolor paintings. The blues are reminiscent of German Expressionist Franz Marc. It is an invigorating blue full of energy that Redstone employs. A generous use of white space expresses the found joys of freedom. The yellow seems to shout hope.

Respected artist

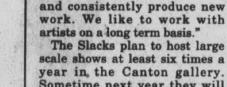

"We greatly respect the work of Lou Redstone as an artist," said Mary Anne Drew, assistant to the dean of the College of Architecture and Urban Planning. "There's a spontaneity to his watercolors - a life, a depth, the way he uses color. What's interesting is he's really an architect. That was his career, but on the side he was also an artist."

Drew said Redstone's travel

sketches set an example for architecture students to follow

"We encourage students in architecture to keep sketch books so if a student is anywhere in this world, he sees something and sketches," said Drew. "This book becomes part of their development in architecture and art. Lou kept a sketchbook all his life. There are ideas everywhere and that's what we try and make a student think about. In architecture and art, you never know how it's going to relate later in life to whatever you do.'

In addition to original art works by Great Lakes artists such as Kuschel and Paul Le Marre, Rivers Edge Gallery offers paintings, hand-pulled prints by nationally recognized artists, limited edition prints by Thomas Kinkade, Terry Redlin, Bev Doolittle, G. Harvey and Edna Hibel, and poster prints covering a wide variety of eras

Over the years, Rivers Edge Gallery grew from 250 square feet to a 2,000 square feet exhibit space with a framing area of an additional 1,500 square feet. The Slacks know with hard work and a little luck the Canton location will survive and thrive.

What attracted us to Canton was the tremendous growth," said Jim. "The type of art we carry will change according to the area we're in. It's going to be a changing process."

African-Brazilian art to color gallery

A spirited exhibition of art from the northeast of Brazil will fill the Community Arts Gallery at Wayne State University from Oct. 10 through Nov. 7. "O Pelourinho!" brings to North America for the first time a collection of paintings, sculptures, and religious objects by selftaught popular artists steeped in the rich African-Brazilian her-itage of Bahia.

The exhibition was co-curated by Mame Jackson, WSU art and art history department chair-woman and Barbara Cervenka of the University of Michigan School of Art and Design. The exhibition results from more than five years of research conducted by Jackson and Cervenka in Bahia, Brazil.

An opening reception, co-host-ed by Wayne State University and the Brazilian Cultural Club of Detroit, takes place 5-8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 10 in the gallery, 5400 Gullen Mall on the Wayne State University campus in Detroit. This festive celebration will feature Bahian music, dance and cuisine typical of the Northeast of Brazil.

Art works in the exhibition are primarily from the city of Salvador, an important port in the Portuguese colonial network of commerce and trade, and the entryway for three to four million slaves from the 16th through 19th century. These African slaves worked in the plantations and mines, built cities and labored as craftsmen and artisans in the colonial culture. They brought to Brazil their own rich heritage of art and religion, remembered and celebrated today in the popular arts of this historic area.

Pelourinho, the name given to the colonial center of the city of Salvador, refers to the pillory, or place of punishment, which once stood in the public plaza. Today this area, declared part of the World Patrimony by UNESCO, has been restored to its original beauty and brilliance, and is home to a lively resurgence of African-Brazilian culture.

'Empire Builders' hails Michigan entrepreneurs

Empire Builders By Burton W. Folsom, Jr. Rhodes & Easten, 1997, $12.95

"If you seek a pleasant peninsula, around you." Two hundred ears ago, our Michigan motto would have puzzled most visitors. Swamps and freezing temperatures hardly made Michigan a "pleasant" peninsula, suitable for settlement and economic growth. But by 1850 and for the next 80 years, Michigan attracted innovators and risk-takers who would make our state number one as an industrial power. What prompted that change? According to Burton W. Folsom, senior fellow with the Mackinac Center for Public Policy and author of "Urban Capitalists" and "Myth of the Robber Barons," Michigan's 1850 Constitution encouraged entrepreneurship by prohibiting state intrusion into private enterprise. In his third book, entitled "Empire Builders," the former professor of American history at the Universities of Pittsburgh and Nebraska and contributor to numerous publications such as the "Wall Street Journal" and the "Pacific Historical Review" maintains that a once-inhospitable environment was made attractive through the state's policy of fiscal and regulatory

In a narrative style that makes reading his book a pleasure, Folsom tells the story of six entrepreneurs whose ingenuity and global vision put Michigan on the world map: John Jacob Astor, Henry Crapo, William Durant, Herbert Dow, William Kellogg and Henry Ford.

The details of each man's life and struggle for success are dif-

There is the spell-binding tale of Dow's lone battle with the German chemical cartel, which tried to destroy him and almost succeeded. Told with equal drama is the story of Kellogg, who, despite initial subservience to his older brother, outshined him totally in the end. And then there is the tragedy of Henry Ford, once a paradigm of creativity and generosity but who turned rigid and mean-spirited in the last two decades of his life and thus damaged his once heroic reputation.

Despite the differences, a common thread runs through each narrative. entrepreneurs had humble origins; not one enjoyed inherited wealth or special privileges. All shared a dedication to hard work and a willingness to delay gratification. Success was certainly not immediate; on the contrary, there were repeated failures that would have discouraged most individuals. But each man had faith in himself and faith in a system that would reward the kind of innovation and expansion that benefited the lives of

In the Foreward to "Empire Builders," Gov. John Engler writes: "There is a lesson in the Michigan story for those of us in political life. Sometimes, the best thing government can do is to protect property and contracts, move out of the way and let the entrepreneurs take risks."

But the author's extensive research into U.S. and Michigan history indicates that most textbooks teach the reverse. They claim that the business leaders of this period were "robber barons" who exploited the public with high prices and corrupt policies. If that is true, writes Folsom, then the description fits "political entrepreneurs" who sought to procure advantages from the state, such as subsidies, monopolies, and price-fixing. "Market entrepreneurs," however, relied on their ability to create a "superior product at low cost," without governmental "Empire Builders" is an inspiring history book that recapitulates a proud past and provides a formula for the future. True, a new century means different circumstances and thus different challenges. But the character traits and work ethic of Michigan's entrepreneurial giants tied to positive incentives - spell success in any age.

The Gold of the Pharaohs By Henri Stierlin (Terrail, $24.95) Classical Modern Architecture

By Andreas Papadakis (Terrail, $24.95)

BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER

Terrail Publishing Co. produces a series of lavishly illustrated, coffee-table size art books in a quality paperback format. They are notable for their excellent design and their extensive use of quality photographs and drawings.

"The Gold of the Pharaohs" is especially interesting in light of the current Egyptian exhibit at the Detroit Institute of Arts. The DIA show gives a broader view of ancient Egyptian life, but Stierlin's survey of the art of Egyptian goldsmiths is an excel-lent complement to the exhibit. The DIA also seems to think so as the book is one of several for sale in the Egyptian Marketplace at the end of the museum's superb display.

Stierlin's book has more than 200 color illustrations showing the beautiful coloring of gold and stones used by the Egyptians in their tombs. As in the DIA show, Stierlin shows how the objects in the tombs help us understand how the Egyptians lived. Stierlin's book is more than just a survey of the gold works themselves. He also provides a supporting history of dynastic Egypt and a history of the archeological finds that unearthed these treasures. Though the story of Howard Carter, Lord Carnarvon and King Tut's tomb has been told before, Stierlin gives a good account and provides beautiful photos of the child king's treasures, now in the Egyptian Museum in Cairo. He also tells the less well-known story of Pierre Montet and the spectacular tomb of Psusennes I.

Stierlin also explains the goldsmith's art, the role of gold in Egyptian society and religious and the social organization of the different dynasties. Stierlin is a native of Alexandria, a historian of architecture and ancient civilizations, a photographer and the organizer of several Egyptian exhibitions. "Classical Modern Architecture" is an argument for just that - the use of classical ideas of form, proportion and materials in modern architecture. Andreas Papadakis, editor of New Architecture, takes a look at the work of more than 20 contemporary architects who have steered away from the glass and steel dictates of what used to be called "modern architecture." Some works will seem very traditional such as the Federalist style buildings of Americans Thomas Gordon Smith and Jaquelin Robertson. But other works such as the buildings of Germany's Rob Krier show that "classical" doesn't necessarily mean restrictive. Classical is an inspiration not a confinement, which is one of Papadakis' main arguments.

Prince Charles has made a campaign for this approach to architecture, which he advocates for its warmth, proper scale and link with history. The author quotes the prince at the beginning of the book, "I believe that when a man loses contact with the past, he loses his soul. Likewise, if we deny the architectural past - and the lessons to be learned from our ancestors then our buildings also lose their souls. If we abandon the traditional principles upon which architecture was based for 2,500 years or more, then our civilization suffers." Papadakis' richly illustrated book provides aesthetic and historical support for this position.

"Bring in 'da Noise, Bring in 'da Funk" is sending reverberations through the plush surroundings of the Fisher Theatre in a percussive celebration of life through adversity - life sustained by keeping 'da beat.

By the end of Thursday night's performance, the audience rose in unison to give a spontaneous standing ovation.

"Noise/Funk" is a musical revue through black American history. The idea for the show began when celebrated director George C. Wolfe of New York's Public Theatre wanted to capture the energy, style and creativity of dancer extraordinaire Savion Glover. Together they created a show that traces the tradition of tap dance in black

The book and lyrics of poet Reg. E. Gaines takes us through a highly enjoyable history lesson. The music by Daryl Waters, Zane Mark and Ann Duquesnay is a pastiche of styles from minstrel to hip-hop and, while never memorable on its own, serves the purpose well.

The purpose is to support an awesome display of tap dance artistry in a show that is as intelligent and insightful as it is gloriously noisy and alive.

A company of dancers take different roles through time, while da Singer (Vickilyn Reynolds) belts out songs appropriate to the times and themes and also does some droll comic interludes. Da Voice (Thomas Silcott) narrates Gaines' sometimes overripe narration and also takes on the essential persona of the age. Reynolds is a big woman with that special bluesy voice that has been a part of the musical landscape since Ma Rainey and she belts out a sweet, gospel styled Derick K. Grant takes the part of 'da Beat, the part Savion Glover played on Broadway. In the tradition of tap and jazz, Grant has recreated the role to suit his own style while retaining the essence of Glover's choreography. He dances with the subtlety that sets true tap dance apart from the show biz soft shoe. His dancing is at times sad, steady rhythm; at other times a thunder of pure rage. Outstanding is a brilliant tribute to the past masters of tap in which Grant recreates their different styles while Glover's narration explains what real tap is all about (jazz for the feet). Also outstanding is a wrenching dance of urban despair toward the show's end. But 'da Beat is one of a company of superb dancers. Dominique Kelley is a 15-year-old wunderkind following in Glover's tap steps. His body is loose, almost liquid. He can project the agony of a lynch victim and the goofy comedy of Uncle Huck-a-Buck. Jimmy Tate is alternately stylish, uptown and a torrent of heavy footed rage. Christopher Scott is lithe, quick and energet-

In addition to the dancers, two percussion specialists beat out the rhythms on plastic cans, steel pots, wooden floors and garbage cans. David Peter Chapman and Dennis J. Dove are not only rhythmically gifted, they are also infectious. They're having a great time and they let you know it.

The show has many stand out moments - "The Panhandlers" symphony by Chapman and Dove, a "Modern Times" style look at industrial Chicago with unbelievable rhythms, a stroll through the Harlem Renaissance and two riot scenes separated by 60 years in time but fueled by the same rage. Wolfe, Glover and Gaines do not make easy judgments. The "Street Corner Symphony" is almost painfully hon-

The show also has its mean spirited moments. The Hollywood sequence is funny but the put down of dancers such as Buck and Bubbles and Bill Robinson seems a bit unfair. But the ragmop Shirley Temple dancing with Kelley's Uncle Huck-a-Buck is a hoot.

This is a cacophony of joy, a noise that deserves to be heard, a funk that just won't quit.

Mom and kids survive tenting on Tahquamenon

By THERESE L. MCFARLAND SPECIAL WRITER

Not far from the "shores of Gitchegumme, by the shining big sea waters," we set up camp along the Tahquamenon River. It's a rustic site, but sufficient with ice cold spring water flowing from a pump and clean out-houses only a short walk away. Although I hadn't practiced putting up the little three-man tent, I know I remember how, it's only been about 15 years ago. My discerning 6-year-old son points out that we have too many extensions on the main

Soon the tent is pitched on top of heavy plastic and covered with a nylon fly; ample rain protection. We move on to roasting hot dogs, then pull the rest of our dinner out of a cooler filled with fruit, milk, ice and giant nightcrawlers (in a sealed container, of course).

It's the first time in a long time that I have been "tent camping." And the only time I have gone camping solo, with only my two children, ages 6 and Upper Peninsula, and my companions are ready for adventure. am too, I think.

We bait our hooks with juicy nightcrawlers and fish the river after dinner. It doesn't matter that the fish aren't biting. It's liberating just sitting on the bank of that lazy river and watching the baby-blue pink sunset - together.

At dawn ... who are we kidding, we are still fast asleep at dawn. But early enough, we wake to the screeching of sea gulls and geese on the dole. We know better. Tough love is required to be environmentally correct. It's cold cereal and juice for the kids, and a perceivable lack of java for me. The wildlife must fend for themselves.

After breaking camp, we take in Tahquamenon Falls, cascades of foamy root beer surrounded by ancient cedars. A short drive brings us to the Lake Superior shoreline. We meander the beach collecting coveted stones and agates and splash in the waves at Whitefish Point. I think about Edmund Fitzgerald,

9. We are on a walk-about in the entombed in those frigid waters, only 17 miles off shore.

What better way to spend out last carefree days of summer than wandering the natural wonders of the Upper Peninsula, enjoying the impromptu beachside picnics and long hikes through unspoiled woodlands. In Munising, our sightseeing gets the best of us; we neglect to find a campsite early on. It's well past supper time as we circle the state and private campgrounds that hug Lake Superior off Highway 28. No vacancies.

Now what? "Don't panic," I say to myself as we pass motel upon motel with their No Vacancy signs ablaze. We have come to camp and camp we shall. We continue west until I glimpse a sign for Hiawatha National Forest Campground. Through the tiny town of Au Train, past the cottages on Lake Au Train and deep into the protected forest on the opposing shore, I find our lodging. It's perfect. Thirty or so secluded rustic sites nestled in the middle of nowhere. Most of the sites are unoccupied. Our site is circled by splendid hard wood trees that whistle in the wind as we make camp. We are really good at this now. The fire pit is ready for our evening camp. We decide to backtrack to Lake Superior for a sunset picnic supper. Under a darkening sky we head back to camp.

The drive back seems a little longer and whole lot darker. I catch sight of two deer in my brights as we make our way back, singing a family favorite about "ants playing pinochle on your snout." The campfire is exceptionally dark. Apparently National Forest campers adhere to the old adage, "Early to bed, early to rise." Ours is one of only three campfires blazing tonight.

Around 3 a.m., my son catapults up from his sleeping bag and screams, "I'm scared." He's half asleep, but now I'm wide awake. He has to go to the bathroom. I turn on my four-inch mini flashlight and tell him to go right outside the tent.

Back in my sleeping bag, I lay still but unable to sleep. The eerie sounds of drizzle and the wind whipping through the enclave of trees feed my imagination. It's really black and I envision "stuff" out there.

The wind and the cracklings give way to footsteps. Definitely a cadence. Definitely coming toward our site. "Why on earth would someone be coming through our camp site?" My ears become huge. The sound moves deliberately in front of our little pup tent's closed door flap and around to my side. Inches from my head, I hear three long panting sounds that throw me into the scene in "Pulp Fiction" where that chick gets a shot of adrenaline to her heart. With outrageous energy pulsing through my veins, all I can think is DON'T MOVE ... and God, please don't let the kids wake

I decide I need to do something. Somewhere in my subconscious, I had prepared for this very possibility tonight. I had placed my small flashlight within reach, as well as a can of pepper spray. I reach for both. Nothing changes until I turn on the dim light. IT stirs, only millimeters of fabric between us. I lay immobile for a few minutes. Crawling over sleeping children to the small triangular opening in our tent door, I turn my pitiful light to the surrounding woods. Then I see them. Two beady eyes off in the darkness, peering right back at me. There was no point in looking further. I jump back in my bag and lay there for the longest three hours, flashlight in

In the morning I was most definitely up with the sun. Usually we dress, eat breakfast and break camp in about 45 minutes. We set a new record.

I can't say for certain what was outside our tent that night. The ranger at Seeney Wildlife Refuge later told me it was not a coyote as I had suspected. Most likely, he assures me, it was either a wolf, or more probably a female bear in heat, looking for Perhaps I should have tried to get a closer look. Next time, maybe I will. But next time, I think I'll be in our pop-up metal camper, armed with a much bigger flashlight, my trusty pepper spray, a bullhorn and maybe my 6-foot-3 husband to share the experience.

Chiefs emerge as league's best team

When the season started, Plymouth Canton golf coach Tom Alles had the same 'ifs' and 'maybes' all coaches have when approaching a new season. With the season now coming to a close, Alles dreams have been answered.

BY C.J. RISAK SPORTS EDITOR

Pardon Tom Alles if he takes time out to revel

After all, he's coached Plymouth Canton's golf team the past four years and never have the Chiefs challenged for much of anything - until now.

Canton will close out its Western Lakes Activities Association dual-meet season Monday when it hosts Walled Lake Central in a make-up match at Hilltop. It won't matter, however, in determining who goes into Wednesday's WLAA Tournament with the most points.

That honor will belong to the Chiefs, who are 9-1 (for nine points) after defeating Plymouth Salem 204-211 Friday and Livonia Churchill 211-216 Wednesday, both at Hilltop.

"That's the first time in my four years here we've beaten them," said Alles after the Salem victory. Moments later, Alles said the same thing in describing the Churchill triumph.

"This team has far exceeded my expectations this season. And they've done it time and time again.

Canton proves no match for top-ranked Harrison

BY DAN O'MEARA STAFF WRITER

Plymouth Canton sent highly-rated Farmington Harrison a message in the first half Friday, and the Hawks apparently got the point.

After a close first half, Harrison turned a 14-0 lead at the intermission into a 41-0 victory with a big second

The Hawks, ranked No. 1 in Class A, are 5-0 overall and 3-0 in the Western Division of the Western Lakes Activities Association.

With the big division game supposedly behind it, the Hawks had to maintain their focus and avoid a letdown against the winless Chiefs, 0-5 and 0-3.

But Canton made a game of it for two quarters, intercepting a pair of passes and stopping Harrison's rushing attack early in the game.

"They did a nice job defensively on us in the first half," Harrison coach John Herrington said. "We just couldn't get going. They were stopping the things we usually do.

"When we threw the slant to Ricky Bryant and they intercepted, it seemed to stun us.

The Canton offense, however, was unable to move the ball when it had the opportunity, and the Hawks eventually broke through with the help of their passing game in the second quarter.

Despite the interceptions, Harrison quarterback Jared Hopkins was 12-of-17 for 203 yards and three touchdowns. Bryant had four receptions for 109 yards and a touchdown.

Tailback Chris Ghannam, who finished with 91 yards on 18 carries, ignited the first scoring drive with a 29-yard run. Hopkins passed 17 yards to Jason Sharp for the TD and a 7-0

After holding Harrison to a failed field-goal attempt, the Chiefs gave the ball up on first down with an interception by Bryant at their own 31-yard line.

The Hawks needed just four plays again to score, with Ghannam going the final 5 yards with 2:21 remaining in the half.

"We got beat by a good team," Canton coach Bob Khoenle said. "Our kids did a very respectable job in the first half, and then everything took its toll their speed, strength and Slow start, but after that everything clicked for Plymouth Canton Thursday against visiting Livonia Franklin.

The Chiefs rebounded from a 12-12 firstquarter stalemate to pull away from the Patriots, outscoring them 33-5 in the next two periods to post a 58-27 triumph in a Western Lakes Activities Association girls basketball game.

Indeed the Chiefs, led by Melissa Marzolf, did. They outscored Franklin 16-4 in the second quarter to take a 12-point lead at halftime (28-16), then limited the Pats to one point in the third quarter.

Meanwhile, Marzolf - who led Canton with 15 points, six rebounds and six assists was pouring in 10 third-quarter points.

She wasn't a one-person show, however. Janell Twietmeyer contributed 11 points and even rebounds, Nkechi Okwumabua had ine points and seven boards, and Kristin Mayer chipped in with nine points and five rebounds.

Tera Morrill's 11 points was best for Franklin (3-7 overall, 0-3 in the WLAA).

Rocks splash John Glenn

It might not seem as much of a test in the view of a lot of other coaches, but Plymouth Salem swim coach Chuck Olson will tell anyone, you make your own challenges.

He did just that Thursday at Westland John Glenn. No, he didn't use all his top-of-the-line swimmers, and that's how he formatted this meet.

"We were able to swim a lot of girls who hadn't had much of an opportunity, so it was good for them," Olson said after the Rocks splashed to a 106-80 triumph. "We were able to have decent races with the John Glenn girls. We were glad we were able to still win, and that was their job tonight."

The people he used came through, led by Rachel Maurer, who had individual wins in both the 200-yard individual

Other individual-event win-Salem were for Annemarie Vercruysee in the 500 freestyle (5:49.31) and Kelly Hobel in the 100 breaststroke (1:17.31).

The Rocks also won the 200 medley relay, with Stephanie Kraujewski, Hobel, Kathy Kelly and Becky Noricks (2:05.68).

The junior varsity got two touchdowns from Jason Lewis in the first quarter in rolling to a 21-0 triumph over the Northville-Novi Colts. Quarterback David Thomas booted one extra point; defensively, Thomas also had an interception.

Reggie Joyner scored the third Lions' TD in the final quarter, and Sean Lee got the two-point conversion. Drew Amble, Brandon Szwejkowski, Tony Barth, Drew Bringley, Brandon Kilgore, Pat Keena and Robbie Garrett paced the defense.

The Lions' freshman squad won for the second time in three games, beating the Northville-Novi Colts 13-7. Chris Drabicki tossed a 16-yard scoring pass to Nathan Rzeppa for one Lions'

Big scorers

Point producers: The Plymouth-Canton Cruisers swim team finished 12th out of 47 teams at the U.S.S. Summer Long Course State Championships, held at Eastern Michigan. Those pictured above, the 11-12 boys and girls relay teams, accounted for 38 of the Cruisers' 220 points. They are, from left: Adam Sonnanstine, Kyle Silbernagel, Trisha Dotson, Alicia Dotson (front), Amy Mertens, Ben Dzialo, Kirstin Orey and Garrett Stone. Point-scorers for the Cruisers were: 10-and-under boys — Joe Le, Billy Horgan, Ryan Smith and Stephen Orey, second 200-meter freestyle relay, fourth 200 medley relay; 11-12 boys — Ben Dzialo, fourth 100 butterfly, fifth 50 free, seventh 200 free, eighth 50 butterfly; Kyle Silbernagel, seventh 50 fly and 50 free; Silbernagel, Sonnanstine, Dzialo and Stone, third 200 medley relay and second 200 free relay; 11-12 girls — Orey, Mertens, Alicia Dotson, Trisha Dotson, sixth 200 medley relay and 200 free relay; 13-14 boys — Brian Mertens, eighth 400 free; Ryan Ahern, Mertens, Brad Nilson, Aaron Shelton, fifth 200 free relay, fourth 800 free relay and 200 medley relay, sixth 400 medley relay; 15-and-over boys - Andrew Locke, Dave Schacht, Aaron Reeder, Nick Corden, seventh 200 free relay; 15-and-over girls - Yvonne Lynn, first 100 backstroke and second 200 back; Lynn, Katie Bonner, Kristen Stone and Carrie Dzialo, seventh 200 medley relay.

Salem will also play Monday against Central in what will be a make-up, double-dual meet.

Last Wednesday, Canton got strong scores from Tucker and Wheeler in besting Churchill. Both shot 39.

Arlen was next best for Canton with a 42; Lineberry shot 45 and Matt Rosol, a sophomore, followed with a 46.

Low scorer for Churchill was Evan Chall, who earned medalist honors with a 38. Brad Bescoe was next lowest for the Chargers (who finished 6-5 in the WLAA) with a 40.

Canton's victory against Churchill assured the Chiefs of a 5-0 record in the Western Division and a first-place finish, the first time in Alles' tenure as coach they've finished on top of the division.

It also means the Chiefs will have at least nine points (one for every dual-meet win) entering the WLAA Tournament Wednesday, which will be at Hudson Mills Golf Course in Dexter.

That could give them a wide lead. The WLAA is scored by single points awarded for every dual-meet victory, combined with a point for every position on the standings.

(Example: Should Canton beat Central Monday and finish second in Wednesday's 12-team league tournament, it would total 21 points - 10 for its dualmeet victories and 11 more for its tournament finish).

Since no one else in the WLAA will have more than eight points going into the tournament, it means to overtake the Chiefs they would have to finish at least two places higher. A victory in Wednesday's tournament would be a fitting end to the league season for Canton. But don't end the season just

On Friday and Saturday, both Canton and Salem compete in one of the toughest Class A regionals in the state, at Oakpoint Golf Course in Brighton. The top three teams advance to the Class A state tournament Oct. 17-18 at Forest Akers in East Lansing.

Many changes are taking place in the infrastructure of bowling.

The game is alive and well after over 100 years of America Bowling Congress (ABC) leadership. However, it's time to look toward the 21st Century and it is important for bowling to look to the future and insure that the game will continue to flourish.

The coming changes were explained and discussed at a recent meeting as Roger Dalkin, Executive director of the ABC explained the new Single Delivery System to the officers and directors of the Greater Detroit Bowling Association. Roger began by explaining how the organizational structure of Bowling, Inc./Strike Ten Enter-tainment/and SDS all work together to bring about a more efficient operation to provide better and faster service to the bowlers. Bowling, Inc. is collectively owned by the ABC, WIBC, and BPAA, all of whom have initially funded the new organization. YABA and the LPBT have membership as well.

This move combines all of the rules, structure and direction of the various organizations into one efficient delivery system for the benefit of all bowlers.

Most of the former staffers at ABC/WIBC are now working for BI in the joint operation.

The combined effort will effectively reduce overall cost of operation and result in more benefits to the bowlers

Strike Ten is the marketing branch, and as such will promote bowling bowling and bring added revenues to the operation of BI.

One of BI's recent moves was the Strike Ten Mastercard which was described in this column Strike Ten has also signed a three-year deal with Anheuser Busch in which bowling will be boosted in many future Budweiser promotions. (How about a bowling frog?). They will support bowling with an expenditure of $15 million over the three-year test period, and if more bowlers order Bud, it will certainly continue long afterward.

Under the leadership of Steve Ryan, Strike Ten will gain many other major corporate sponsorships which will enhance the public image of bowling and also produce revenues for BI and While presenting the facts and figures to GDBA officials, Dalkin answered many questions which had come up with concerns about the ways that these moves will make ABC membership more attractive. One concern dealt with the sanctioning fees and would they remain at their present level.

Dalkin introduced some ideas which are likely to take place soon, such as a multi-tiered structure for members, and who would pay at other rates and be entitled to different benefits and perks once the system is finalized.

AE KWON DO

Students master the art

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK . STAFF WRITER

You don't have to become a champion when you start Tae Kwon Do training.

But you can. Ron Rose, a Tae Kwon Do Senior Master, runs the KICKS Tae Kwon Do & Fitness Centers Inc. in Wayne with wife Chris for young and old at skill levels ranging from beginner to national champion.

Attention will be centered on Tae Kwon Do in 2000, when the full contact version of the discipline will be a full medal winning sport in the Olympic Games in Sydney, Australia.

"One part is the sport," Rose said. "We teach that for those interested in the competition. It is also an excellent physical fitness program. "If you're looking for something to get back in shape, this is something everyone can do. We have students who are three years old and people who are up in their Tae Kwon Do is a centuries old martial art out of Korea.

It fosters character-building through courtesy, respect, self-discipline and goalattainment.

"There's always a new goal to learn," Rose said, "so it can be a lifetime pursuit."

"What I like," said Paul Rose, 22, son of Ron and Chris, "are all the goals. "It keeps me on track with my life. The job is never finished."

Paul Rose, a Wayne High Memorial graduate, is one of four prize Tae Kwon Do students at KICKS who compete in the full contact competitive aspect of Tae Kwon Do.

He and other members of the United States team competed at the fifth World Chung Do Kwan championships win Washington, D.C., last July.

Rose captured a gold medal along with featherweight Tanya Kjellin of Plymouth. Dave Moutardier of Ann Arbor was a silver medalist in bantamweight while Brandon Moore of Westland won a bronze medal in middleweight.

Of the eight countries represented, the U.S. team was second to Argentina in gold medals won.

Paul Rose, Kjellin, Moore and Moutardier exemplify the extreme high end of what a Tae Kwon Do student can

Can the average person do that? Probably not.

But the point is that Tae Kwon Do will let you take it as far as you can, given your limitations.

Moutardier, 23, is "dreaming of the Olympics. That's why I'm not going to school right now. "School is something you can always go back to. You can't go back to the Olympics." "No matter what happens," Ron Rose said, "just training for the goal is going to help him." The Romulus High School product currently works in security for Best Buy, which helps with the groceries and rent while he's training for the Olympics. Tae Kwon Do has been a demonstration sport at several Olympics, but is getting its first shot at full medal status at Sydney. It will be evaluated after that. There will be eight weight classes competing according to strictly defined rules. Competitors wear protective gear and get points for kicks to different areas of the Individuals can win by knockouts, too, but hand-hits to the head are outlawed.

Moutardier got into Tae Kwon Do when he was 17.

"I used to watch old Bruce Lee movies and say, 'I can do that, I can do that.' So without checking it out, I stopped in here (at KICKS) — and I'm glad I did."

Kjellin, 24, is a chemist for Sherwin Williams who started in the sport at age eight when her parents got involved.

She played volleyball and softball at Belleville High School and dropped Tae Kwon Do for about five years until picking it up again two years ago.

"I wanted to do something to keep in shape. And I missed it," said Kjellin, who went to Eastern Michigan and played intramural sports there. Moore, 19, got interested in Tae Kwon

Do less than five years ago through a friend. He kept up while running track at Wayne Memorial, his only high school A pre-med student at Wayne State, Moore was a member of the U.S. Junior team which went to Vietnam for the Friendship Games. He competed as a middleweight and won a third place there.

"I like being in shape. I like being able to do something and not fall over when I'm

"Part of Tae Kwon Do is the goal-setting," Ron Rose said. "It helps you in everything you do in life." Paul Rose likes the fact that "no matter what happens in the day, I like coming "If you're crabby, it cheers you up. And if you're happy, you stay happy. There's always something positive to come out of "There's nothing," Moutardier said with a laugh, "like an hour and a half sparring session to get rid of some stress.

The same would be true of a 90-minute training session for the rankest beginner,

NATURE NOTES

I was near Roscommon, Michigan last weekend and the fall color was starting with a bang.

Highlighted against the green of conifirous and deciduous trees were patches of bright red from the red maples. Scattered here and there were sugar maples of intense orange. We are indeed fortunate in Michigan to have the opportunity to view this natural phenomena of fall colors. If you are looking for some interesting places to hike when you visit the north country for your fall color tour, get a copy of the Michigan Wildlife Viewing Guide produced by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. Natural areas for viewing wildlife are also very good for viewing fall

One of my favorite areas is Dead Man's Hill overlooking the Jordan River Valley.

This high vantage point allows a beautiful view of the valley, but you have to hike down into the valley to see the river in all its splendor. Once down in the valley, the view back up the hill is also spectacular. Accenting the river are cedar logs that fell into the water from the shoreline. They provide obstacles that salmon must maneuver around.

Near Roscommon there are two trails that will take you through some back woods with varied

Just south of Higgins Lake is Marl Lake next to South Higgins Lake State Park. While hiking a small portion of the trail that goes around the lake, we viewed a double-crested cormorant, mallards, black ducks, migrating warblers, whitethroated and white-crowned sparrows, bright red berries of Michigan holly; a family of otter and a dead short-tailed shrew on the trail.

Since the trail stayed near the shoreline we were able to keep an eye open for hawks, vultures, osprey, eagles and other waterfowl that would use this area as a stopover during migra-

To the north of Roscommon is Wakeley Lake. Fall is a good time to hike the trail because during the summer much of the area has restricted access because there are loons nesting in the

It's also a good place to watch for eagles and osprey.since the AuSable River is just a stones throw away. The trail winds through upland woods along the wet area before winding through some dense forest closer to the lake. These are just a few areas that might get you off the beaten path and allow you to enjoy the fall colors in Michigan.
