Senior killed in W. Virginia crash

Rachael Maurer

■ A Plymouth Salem High school senior, Rachael Maurer, was killed Wednesday in a West Virginia traffic accident.

BY SCOTT DANIEL
AND TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITERS

No matter how tough things got or how busy she was, Rachael Maurer always found time for her family and friends.

Considering she was actively involved in student government, athletics and television, that was saying a lot. Tragically, the 17-year-old Plymouth Salem senior was killed early Wednesday morning in a

West Virginia traffic accident.

"Her friends meant the world to her," said brother Michael Maurer, 15. "She was always with them."

Rachael, he added, got him out of more than a few scrapes with their parents.

"She always helped if I got in trouble," Michael said. "She was the kind of person that if you needed anything she was there to help in good times or bad."

Mother Mary Maurer saw boundless potential in her daughter.

"She had a tremendous amount of leadership ability," she said. "She was a really bright person and a happy person. She was always upbeat."

Starting Sunday afternoon, the exit ramp from northbound I-275 to eastbound I-696 will be closed for reconstruction and traffic detoured about five miles onto eastbound M-5.

From northbound I-275, motorists looking to exit to eastbound I-696 will be directed onto the eastbound M-5/Grand River exit and follow two lanes onto that portion of M-5 now known as the Keith Deacon Memorial Highway in Farmington Hills.

Motorists will drive 2.5 miles east. That will take them past the Grand River exit, then they will turn around on a temporary ramp, then proceed on westbound M-5 another 2.5 miles to the eastbound I-696 exit.

Construction crews also continued work this weekend on the Eight Mile Road entrance and exit ramps. Motorists are advised to use Seven Mile or Six Mile interchanges as alternate routes. Once Eight Mile ramps are completed, crews will move to Seven Mile for construction there.

Proposed school site switch irks ex-trustees

If the Plymouth-Canton school board votes Tuesday night to build a third high school anywhere but at Joy and Beck roads in Canton Township, some say it will make liars out of those who campaigned for the $79.8 million bond issue passed by voters in March 1997.

That's the consensus of at least three former school board members and the chair of the bond committee, who say they hope the current board will vote to build the school on the western edge of Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

"I think it would violate the public trust not to build the new school at the corner of Joy and Beck," said Mark Horvath of Canton, school board president at the time of the bond vote. "The committee made it very clear when speaking to voters. You can still drive by the sign at the corner which indicates where the school will be built. Anywhere else is a lie. Not building it there would disenfranchise everyone who voted yes."

Horvath isn't the only one who will feel betrayed by any other location.

"I will never support another bond issue if the board doesn't do what the voters wanted," added Susan Kopinski of Canton, chairwoman of the Citizens Election Committee which spearheaded the campaign. "We made a promise to the voters, and they based their vote on the high school being constructed at Joy and Beck. If the school board decides to build it elsewhere, it will make a liar out of me and the school district."

"We hope to start a process of opening lines of communication in our town about ways we can pool resources to resolve some of the differences between segments of our community, and to take a long term look at the formation of a Plymouth Youth Commission to address the issues and problems relating to youth," said Bill Steiner, president of the Plymouth Community Foundation.

It's time to go Krogering at new store

A sushi bar, store chef, and carving station will bring upscale grocery shopping to the new Kroger store in Plymouth Township.

A VIP reception is 7-8:30 p.m. Tuesday. The ribbon-cutting opening of the new 63,511-square-foot store, 44525

Ann Arbor Road at Sheldon, is scheduled for 7:45 a.m. Wednesday.

"The Kroger Co. recognizes that their customers' tastes have broadened and their expectations have grown," said Hope King of Marx Layne, the public relations firm handling the event.

The old Kroger store, also located in the shopping center, closed about two weeks ago and is being torn down.

The Kroger store at Ford and Sheldon Roads in Canton Township will close the day before the Plymouth Township store opens, according to a manager at the new Plymouth Township store.

New school boss faces a 6-month challenge

BY VALERIE OLANDER

volander@oe.homecomm.net

Ken Walcott was hungry for a challenge when he took on a six-month interim job heading Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. And, with slightly over a month in the seat, Walcott certainly has his plate full.

As the nationwide search for a new superintendent continues, an old debate has regained steam over where to locate the third high school in proximity to the other two existing schools. Also at issue is the changing of school boundaries due to the construction of the new Discovery Middle School in Canton and staffing concerns due to last year's buyout of teachers and a flurry of resignations. School is set to begin Aug. 31 with most of the positions now filled.

But if that isn't enough to keep Walcott, 58, consumed during his 2 1/2 - 3 hour drive from his home in Norton Shores, near Muskegon, there's always the ongoing financial acknowledging that the decisions he helps make in the next five months, such as the location of the third high school, will have "ramifications for the next 30-40 years."

A former superintendent of Mona Shores School District, Walcott was sought out by a search firm hired by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education. He has more than 30 years experience in education, the last seven as the superintendent of Mona Shores School District, which is about one-fourth the size of Plymouth-Canton. He left the district in July of 1998.

Since then, Walcott has been an educational consultant for URS Greiner Woodward Clyde. The company is a private architectural firm that works with school districts and other government agencies. In addition to

Customers look forward to new Kroger

BY SUE BUCK

Businesses and customers are negotiating parking lot construction in the southwest shopping center at Ann Arbor and Sheldon Roads.

They look forward to the new Kroger store anchor as they negotiate their way around the barrel barriers and tape.

"It's been difficult, but it hasn't impacted sales," said David Pohl, manager of the Kinko's store. "A lot of customers have commented about the hairpin turns."

Pohl said customers come into the store with an exasperated statement like, "Somebody is going to have an accident here."

"We're making the best of it," said Pohl, an Ann Arbor resident.

No work on the parking lot was under way Thursday morning.

"This has been a major inconvenience," said Al Bethell, a Northville resident, who operates Plymouth Beauty Supply. "Customers are unhappy."

But, he added, that his customers who are "women of the '90s" are undaunted by the barricades and find their way into the store.

The biggest store in a center brings in the most money, he said. The surrounding businesses accommodate, he said.

"My deliveries can't get in," Bethell said. "My garbage truck can't get to the back of the store."

Bethell questioned why work crews left by 5 p.m. weekdays and during the weekends to accelerate completion of the project and minimize the inconvenience to patrons and businesses.

Linda Coutts, a receptionist for Remerica, said many of the women and men who come for meetings in the office are dressed in nice dresses and suits.

They were unprepared for the construction.

JoAnne Wheelock, a Canton Township resident, parked a distance away from the Kinko's store Thursday as she walked with her two grandsons.

"We've been displaced, but they are trying to make it better for us," Wheelock said. "I guess we have to go along with it."

There's a Java Master Coffee Bar offering coffee beans roasted in the store. Customers can enjoy a cafe au lait or cafe latte as they shop, King said.

Gourmet condiments, specialty breads, imported cheeses and olive oils, natural vegetarian and organic items will be offered.

weekends. U-Scan Express is a self check-out system to help customers get in and out of the store quickly.

More than 100 varieties of fresh flowers and 75 plants can be shipped anywhere in the world with full-service FTD. A variety of shellfish, seafood salads and smoked fish is available in the seafood shop.

The Plymouth Township store is among several new stores planned.

Earthquake shakes up area relatives, friends

BY SCOTT DANIEL
STAFF WRITER
sdaniel@oe.homecomm.net

Like millions around the world, Saeed Kerimowski sat helplessly this week unable to aid family and friends in earthquake-ravaged Turkey.

All the Canton man could do was to keep trying to reach loved ones via the telephone and wait for their calls. Finally, late Tuesday afternoon, a full day after the killer quake, he heard from his sister.

"My sister said they had to leave the area," Kerimowski said. "She was calling from a motel about 25 miles away."

His sister lives in the town of Yalova, which sits well within the 400-mile northwest region of Turkey affected by the earthquake.

"She said they had bad damages to lots of buildings," Kerimowski said.

A native of Macedonia, he has 50 family members living in Turkey. Four from his wife's side of the family were killed.

Kerimowski, 46, said he also lost several friends to the quake, which registered 7.4 on the Richter scale.

"We lost four family members," he said, "and seven people I knew personally."

Ironically, Kerimowski and his family returned from a seven-week vacation in Turkey on Aug. 6.

"It wasn't meant for us to be there," he said.

While he was in Turkey, it was hit by an earthquake registering 4.1.

"They are common in that area," Kerimowski said.

A Ford Motor Co. employee, his seven-week stay used up all his vacation time. He thinks it's unlikely he'll be able to go back to Turkey.

"I wish I could do something," Kerimowski said. "But I don't have the time."

More than 7,000 people were confirmed dead as of Wednesday. Nearly 20,000 were hurt and 10,000 more missing. Massive relief efforts are under way.

Rescue teams have arrived in Turkey from Switzerland. Military jets from the United States, Germany and France are helping extinguish a massive oil refinery fire near the earthquake's epicenter.

Locally, the American Red Cross is gathering money to buy essential foods and medicines for Turkish people. Red Cross rescue workers were on their way to the country Wednesday.

"The top priority is to rescue and treat the injured," Detroit chapter Emergency Response Director Peter Amos said.

As for money, he said it'll be used to buy goods overseas.

"We get a lot better value than shopping and shipping from the U.S.," said Amos.

Those wishing to contribute can do so in two ways:

■ Send a check to the American Red Cross's International Response Fund, P.O. Box 37243, Washington D.C. 20013.

■ The Red Cross can be reached on the World Wide Web at www.redcross.org. Credit card donations are accepted and should be made to the International Response Fund.

among teens who like to converge downtown with business owners and residents who would rather see the clusters of young people disappear became apparent after four youths were ticketed last month for obstructing a Penniman street sidewalk.

"We need to pull people together to deal with an issue like the youth in our area," said Bill Joyner, founder of the Plymouth Volunteer Center, who will co-facilitate a public forum next month with Jennifer Tobin, executive director of the Plymouth Community Arts Council. "We need to know how people feel about each other... how the adults feel about the youth of our community and how the youth feel about the adults."

Tobin said people in the community have discussed the issues among themselves and in the media, but "It's time to talk face-to-face. Let's pose questions and let's get answers. All the different sides are important and have viable issues."

The forum, which will be held at the Plymouth Community Arts Council from 7 - 9 p.m., is designed to be the first of a series to develop solutions of the decades-old problems.

"It's our hope to create a task force that will meet throughout the fall and winter to come up with options, alternatives and outlets," said Joyner. "When we come back next summer we'll at least have an understanding of each side's position."

Two of the four teens who were ticketed last month for obstructing a downtown sidewalk like the idea.

"I think it would be better than the adults just criticizing us," said Jamie Wand, 16, of Canton. "Kids should have a bigger say of what goes on in the community. We're a part of the area's future."

"I think it's ridiculous to just hand out tickets," added Robbi Woelfel, 17, also of Canton. "We should be talking about how to solve the problems."

Michele Potter of Plymouth recently presented a similar idea to the Plymouth city commission in hopes city officials would begin the process of dealing with the problems.

"I'm glad to see someone doing something about the problem," said Potter. "Everyone has to have input into the process, because if some groups are left out they won't buy into it."

designing Lake Orion High School; the company was responsible for designing the Hong Kong Airport.

When approached by a "head-hunter" to consider the interim job in Plymouth-Canton, Walcott said he was up for the new opportunity. "I like challenges and I have a fire in my belly," he said.

Walcott began his duties at Plymouth-Canton on July 12, working with departing Superintendent Chuck Little for a week before Little left for his new position at Indiana University.

His contract extends until Jan. 12, when the school board expects to have a permanent superintendent in place. He is being paid $10,000 per month - the same as Little's salary.

"Right now I'm concerned with the whole equity issue with three new buildings planned for 2002. The older buildings have roofs that are starting to leak and boilers that aren't working," Walcott said. "It's going to be a concern in a growing district, such as this one."

Next month, Walcott plans to bring a complete facility overview to the board of education on the building disparity.

In the meantime, he's waiting for school to start. After a month to familiarize himself with the district, he will be able to see the district at work in two short weeks. "The most important work we do here, and I've told the administrators this, is out there in the classroom. We're here to service them," he said.

As far as teacher shortages are concerned, Walcott isn't troubled by it. "I think we filled most of the positions. Am I concerned?

No. Not as of right now."

Gerald Meijer of St. Peter's Lutheran School in Plymouth has been hired as principal of Bentley Elementary while announcements are expected next week for principals at Allen Elementary and Central Middle School. Assistant principal Jerry Morris also recently resigned.

Walcott is living at an apartment complex in Canton throughout the week until his contract expires January 12. His wife, Kay, occasionally joins him. Walcott has four daughters and four grandchildren, whom he enjoys spending his weekends with on his boat on Lake Michigan.

STRENGTH IN NUMBERS

While a large flowering houseplant can hold its own anywhere, a small potted plant can look lost if left alone. That is why it is often best to group several plants together. When doing so, consider placing plants of varying heights together so that they create a stair-step effect, with the tallest plants in the center of the grouping. In the interest of diversity, mass flowering plants of different colors, textures, and shapes for an eye-pleasing effect. And, of course, group flowering houseplants in odd numbers to create a more dynamic arrangement this possible with even numbers. For added interest, place all terra cotta pots in wooden crates, which will serve to anchor the arrangement.

In addition to improving your view, did you know that green plants keep the air fresh every day? As these emerald beauties grow, taking on lush green color, they filter the air in your home or office so you can breathe a lot easier. We invite you to visit HEIDE'S FLOWERS & GIFTS conveniently located at 995 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth (453-5140). We're celebrating 100 years in business.

HINT: Instead of putting a single arrangement in the middle of your dining room table, create a grouping at one end of the table.

Watch your road manners or you might get a ticket

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabramczyk@oe.homecomm.net

Motorists who express anger toward others on the road should be careful.

That person they are "flipping off" just might be a deputy sheriff.

Undercover officers from the Wayne County Sheriff Department will try to find and ticket drivers who express their anger behind the wheel.

Plainclothes officers will patrol in an unmarked car. They will drive stretches of road and communicate with another officer in a marked patrol car.

Sheriff Robert Ficano said the officers will look for aggressive drivers who challenge other drivers because they appear irritated over their driving. "We'll be looking for people who are driving too slow, then glare at you and try to pass, then slam on their brakes," Ficano said.

While deputies won't ticket an angry glare, they will ticket reckless driving or careless driving, such as cutting people off, slamming brakes in front of a vehicle for no apparent reason or passing on the shoulder.

When a road rage "suspect" or other violator has been identified, the undercover officer will radio a marked unit, which will stop the offending driver.

Most would be civil infractions or misdemeanors, bringing a $500 fine or 90 days in jail or both.

Officers will be patrolling I-94, I-96, I-275 and main thoroughfares such as Michigan Avenue during peak traffic hours, paying particular attention to construction zones.

The unit was established because the department received several complaints. "They would be excited, calling on their car phones, and they would not have a license plate number," Ficano said. "With all the construction that is going on, people's tempers are shorter. People need to give themselves more time."

"They shouldn't accelerate the situation. Returning the glare doesn't do any good, it just intensifies it. They should call their local police department, or exit the freeway and go to a law enforcement agency."

Residents also can drive to a crowded area if they fear for their safety.

The AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety recently released data that since 1990 drivers who won't yield, merge or pass properly because they are angry has increased 57 percent.

Drivers need to remember that motorists make mistakes, Ficano said. "People have to believe people do things by accident. They must remember that there is a blind spot that people don't always check before they switch lanes. Sometimes we don't see them and are cutting people off."

Ficano finds it troublesome that children learn to express anger by watching adults. "People see that as a gateway for approval for when they start driving," Ficano said.

Sheriffs have issued five citations using the Road Rage Interaction Initiative.

Drivers will never be stopped by an officer in an unmarked car as part of this initiative, Ficano said. "That will address concerns that people may have about being pulled over," Ficano said, in reference to recent incidents of people impersonating officers and pulling over drivers.

People need to share the road and show patience, Ficano said. "It could be a neighbor, friend or your doctor," Ficano said. "Or it could be a deputy sheriff."

week on which of two sites the new facility should be constructed. Last Tuesday, a six-member committee made up of educators and administrators recommended to the board an east site, which is close to the current schools. The alternative is the original, or west site, near the corner of Joy and Beck roads.

The committee believes an east site will maintain a strong core curriculum, be more cost effective, maintain optimum teaching conditions, and allow for continued safety and consistency in discipline. The report indicates a west site could eliminate course offerings, create scheduling conflicts, allow less time for teachers to plan lessons, and cost up to $80,000 for busing of students between buildings.

"The report is what I expected to see," said Horvath. "The administration wants to do business the same way we do business today."

"We need to start thinking out of the box, and minimize the passing time between schools," he added. "More time needs to be spent in the classroom learning."

Kopinski agrees.

"The east site is a great idea because it's easier for the teachers to continue what they're already doing," she said. "It's already too crowded. If the park concept is such a good idea, why aren't other districts doing it?"

Mike Maloney of Plymouth Township, board president until he was defeated in last June's election, says he has confidence the current board will make the right decision.

"It was made very clear in '97 what people thought they were voting for, a high school at Joy and Beck," said Maloney. "It's absolutely essential that we keep the public's trust, otherwise it will be very difficult to ask them for more money in the future."

"The east site is good for the status quo," added Maloney. "We need to make changes that are better for kids who don't do well at the park by making it smaller. This isn't about what's best for the board or employees, but for students."

Former school board member Carrie Blamer of Plymouth Township says she put herself on the line with voters in 1997.

"I said Joy and Beck, and the board should do what the public wanted in '97. I trust they will do the right thing."

After last Tuesday's presentation, three school board members indicated they would be voting in favor of the east site. They are Roland Thomas, Steve Guile and Elizabeth Givens.

"For either Liz or (current board president) Sue (Davis) to vote on the east site would be disappointing," said Horvath, who served with Davis and Givens during the bond vote.

"As far as I'm concerned it would be a bait and switch tactic."

After last week's meeting, Davis said "it could be a possibility" that she was ready to abandon the west site in favor of a closer high school.

Trustee Darwin Watts, who earlier supported the Joy and Beck site, isn't revealing his vote. However, he did say after the presentation "there are some things that supported my views that I already came to the table with."

Board members Judy Mardigan and Mark Slavens, who earlier favored the west location, want to be reassured students can get from the current buildings to a new east site within the 10-minute passing time between periods before making up their minds. Some who have walked it say it can't be done.

Mardigan believes "curriculum may be easier to deliver at the east site, but said there are still plenty of unanswered questions."

Slavens notes "there are legal and ethical implications with this decision."

Former school superintendent Chuck Little said "the voters were clearly told Beck and Joy thousands of times."

"They have to find a system to provide programs without the kids spending 50 minutes a day between classes."

Crash from page A1

According to Jackson County Police, Maurer was driving northbound on Interstate 77 near the town of Ripley at about 5:50 a.m. when she lost control of her Saturn.

The vehicle veered off the west side of the road, but Maurer was able to get it back on the pavement. The Saturn then crossed several lanes into the road's median, rolled four or five times and finally came to a rest on its wheels, police said.

Maurer and two passengers, including 18-year-old Elizabeth Cox of Canton and a juvenile, were taken to Jackson County General Hospital. Both Cox and the juvenile were later released.

Cause of the accident is unknown. Police said road conditions were dry at the time of the accident.

"It was dark and that road is curvy," a Jackson County officer said.

Funeral services for Maurer were held yesterday at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Plymouth. She was laid to rest at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery in Southfield.

Michael Maurer said his sister loved swimming.

"She was very competitive," he said. "She cared a lot about athletics."

Salem Swimming Coach Chuck Olson said Rachael made solid contributions to the team in her two seasons.

"She had become a big part of our team," he said. "She was very instrumental in our success in the conference."

Olson noted that Maurer was very involved with student government as well. She served as vice president for Salem's Executive Forum last year and was to be president this school year.

"She was very well respected by students and school administration," Olson said.

"Rachael was a down-to-earth kid who really loved Plymouth Salem High School," said Principal Gerald Ostoin. "She was actively involved in a lot of activities."

Retired teacher Gerda Burnside agreed.

"She was a special student who tried to do it all," said Burnside, who taught Rachael German for two years. "She strived to be an 'A' student, and wanted to be a leader."

Maurer and her family moved to Plymouth from Jackson two years ago. Rachael grew up in the mid-Michigan town.

The move didn't slow her down.

"She jumped right in," said Mary Maurer, "and knew exactly what she wanted to do. She always tried to give back to the community."

Michael Maurer said he and his sister had grown closer over the past year. She was someone to rely on when he had difficulties with his studies.

"She always helped me with my school work," said Michael.

Mary Maurer said her daughter planned on a career in public relations or communications. She was considering Northwestern University and the University of Michigan for college.

"She was just a gifted person in many ways," her mother said.

Rachael C. Maurer is survived by her father, Edward Maurer; mother, Mary Maurer; brothers, Michael and John Maurer; grandmother, Josephine Byle of Livonia; and grandparents, Gene and Ruth Caldwell of Grosse Pointe Farms.

Memorials may be made to the Rachael Maurer Leadership Scholarship Fund.

County buys radios for all vehicles

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER
kabramczyk@oe.homedcom.net

COUNTY NEWS

Wayne County took another step to avoid communication problems experienced by its road crews in last January's snowstorms.

Count commissioners approved a contract Thursday of $62,613 to purchase 155 reconditioned Motorola Maxtrac Model radios from Telepath Corp., of Fremont, Calif., the only bidder that responded to "direct solicitations."

That purchase will equip all vehicles of the county's buildings, roads and parks divisions in the Wayne County Department of Public Services with better two-way radios and assist in communications between trucks and the district yards.

Earlier this year, Cameron "Kim" Priebe, director of public services, vowed that more trucks will be equipped with two-way radios to better coordinate snow removal activities. Roads officials promised then to improve communications between county road crews and district yard supervisors after meeting with community leaders to discuss snow removal operations.

At that time, nearly 30 percent of the vehicles were not radio-equipped, Priebe said. Priebe was unavailable for comment Friday on the purchase.

Commissioner Kathleen Husk, R-Redford, was pleased the county was purchasing the radios. Husk visited the district yards in January to watch snow removal operations and praised county road crews for their efforts, but saw the inefficiencies first-hand.

Some of the radios didn't work properly and district yards could not track the trucks if they were plowing, were stuck or disabled, Husk said. "There was no way of communicating that back and forth," Husk said. "That was time-consuming and it wasn't very efficient."

Morton-Taylor OK'd

In other business, commissioners approved road funds Thursday for a $3.6 million project to create a new mile-long segment of Morton-Taylor Road from Ford Road to just north of Warren Road and construction of a bridge on Morton-Taylor over Willow Creek in Canton Township.

Nearly $2.8 million in federal funds have been earmarked for this project to pave a two-lane roadway, along with $694,887 in county funds and $129,950 from Canton Township.

Construction is expected to begin in mid-September to prepare the road area for paving, and crews will begin bridge work. Morton-Taylor will not be paved until next spring and summer, county officials said.

Commissioners also approved a contract of $161,514 with Tony Angelo Cement Construction Co. of Novi for concrete replacement, routing and sealing cracks and sign replacements for subdivisions located in Canton, Northville and Plymouth.

Tony Angelo will subcontract with Power-Vac Service of Detroit to clean catch basins and Scodeller Construction of South Lyon for crack sealing.

Marina fees set

Wayne County commissioners set marina fees at Elizabeth Park at higher rates than were first proposed in the spring after Parks Director Hurley Coleman talked with private marina owners along the Detroit River to come to a "mutual agreement," according to Commissioner Ed Boike, D-Taylor, whose district includes Downriver communities along the Detroit River.

Commissioners approved weekly rates at $90 for a 29-foot slip or smaller, and $100 for a 30-foot slip and higher. The rates first proposed were $60 and $70.

Boike praised the parks division for working with the local businesses. "Government is not to be in competition with the private sector," Boike said.

Commissioner Bernard Parker, D-Detroit, wondered if that was a new policy of the commission in setting fees that may undermine local business.

State law prevents public marinas from competing with the private sector in docking boats on a long-term basis.

Larry Fitch of the parks division said the boats were transient. "They have to move every seven days," Fitch said. "By state law, it has to be a transient marina."

Vice Chair Kay Beard, D-Westland, said a second public hearing should be held on the new fee. Beard said the first public hearing covered the earlier proposed fee and not the second, higher one.

"The public is not aware that the fees are being changed," Beard said.

Commission counsel Ben Washburn said there was no legal requirement for the second public hearing. The fees were then approved.

Grant funds innovative Schoolcraft math class

A $90,000-plus grant from the National Science Foundation will fund a class this fall at Schoolcraft College aimed at strengthening the mathematical skills of students who plan to be elementary teachers.

The class involves problem solving, a weekly lab and journal entries.

As the world becomes more dependent upon high tech, it is vitally important the elementary teachers be well prepared to teach mathematics and give children a solid grounding in mathematical principles.

Furthermore, research indicates that elementary teachers who feel uncomfortable with math convey their negative feelings and weak understanding of mathematical concepts to their students.

With nearly half of America's elementary teachers beginning their education at a community college, a two-year institution is a logical place to house such a program.

The Schoolcraft program includes special sections of Beginning Algebra for Future Teachers (Math 051) customized for future teachers and emphasizing problem solving, teamwork and intensive lab sessions. The new class is part of the Emerging Scholars Program for Teachers, a joint effort among Schoolcraft, Eastern Michigan University and Henry Ford Community College, funded by the National Science Foundation.

The $90,000-plus NSF three-year grant provides a sequence of courses beginning in the two-year colleges and continuing in the four-year universities that will be a model for other institutions.

Rheta Rubenstein, Schoolcraft professor of mathematics, said the NSF was seeking proposals that would use exemplary materials, with textbooks and teaching aids designed to meet the standards of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Students who plan to be elementary or special education teachers are eligible for the new beginning algebra class. They must complete an application and be interviewed by a Schoolcraft counselor to be accepted. For more information, call (734) 462-4400, ext. 5275, 5271 or 5203.

WHEN BOTH KNEES HURT

It is unusual for both knees to go bad at the same time. When you come to your doctor with the problem of hurting in both knees, he may read the problem differently. He will look for a good knee and a not-so-good one.

What happens is that you develop a limp in which you take a quick step on the bad knee and a longer step and stride on the good leg. Over time that change in walking creates strain in the good leg, and eventually brings pain to it. For you there are now two bad knees.

Your doctor has several ways of determining which or both knees are impaired.

Your history is important as to which knee hurt first. The way you walk may identify the worst of the joints. X-rays are helpful, particularly films taken while you are standing and with your knees in the standing and flexed position. These x-rays place maximum stress on the knee joints and bring out loss of alignment and irregularities of the joint space indicative of loss of cartilage.

If the evaluation reveals that one knee is worse than the other, your physician may undertake joint injection for that knee while starting you on medicine for your arthritis in general. In my experience, this is where a physician's problem starts. You are surprised that that knee with the lesser pain now receives the most attention.

Most of the time this logical method succeeds. However, on occasion you return with the observation that the knee you said hurts worse remains the same. In such instances, responding to your intuition works better than the scientific approach.

SOMETHING TO SINK YOUR TEETH INTO

People aged 65 years and older are more likely to have retained their own teeth than either their parents or grandparents did at their age. Thanks to better dental care, foundation of water, and better nutrition among other things, the rate of edentulism (toothlessness) among older individuals has been declining in this country. However, the rates of toothlessness are elevated. And, nationwide, older people who never finished high school are more likely to have lost their teeth than college-educated individuals, perhaps due to lower income and inadequate dental care. In any case, edentulism should not be viewed as a necessary part of aging.

People who have problems with edentulism may consider conventional dentures, a partial denture, or may want to consider dental implants. Feel confident with any option you choose. At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we deliver a high level of quality dental care. Our entire staff is committed to helping you keep that smile. We're located at 19171 Merriman road, where we stress preventative dentistry for the entire family. For 21st century dental care, call us at 478-2110 to schedule an appointment. ## LEGAL SENSE

By Mark Slavens, P.C.
Attorney at Law

THE OTHER SIDE

A tort is the infliction of another that causes injury or damage to property that was the result of negligence or intentional misconduct. In some cases, it is not necessary to show either negligence or intentional misconduct to bring a successful civil suit. According to the legal doctrine of strict liability, plaintiffs may be able to recover damages for injuries suffered as a result of another's activities without having to prove anything more than they engaged in the activities. For instance, a consumer may suffer an injury while using a product according to its directions. Under the doctrine of strict liability, the consumer can receive compensation for damages without showing anything more than the manufacturer marketed an unreasonably dangerous product.

If you have been injured by a defective or dangerous product, speak to your attorney. In such cases, it is often possible to name more than one defendant. Everyone in the chain of distribution, from the manufacturer to the final place of sale, may share in the liability for your injury.

HINT: Under the legal doctrine of strict liability, plaintiffs do not have to show how a product's defect came into being, only that the product was defective.

Replica of Vietnam Wall on display Aug. 27-29

BY JAY M. GROSSMAN
STAFF WRITER
jgrossman@oe.homedom.net

Ed Leafdale finally saw the Vietnam Wall for the first time during a visit to Washington, D.C., in June.

"I got a couple of friends who are on that wall," said Leafdale, a Vietnam Veteran. "I was kind of apprehensive when I first walked up - I didn't know what kind of feeling to expect. It's something I really can't put into words, to tell you the truth. I think it affects everyone a little differently."

"But you saw all those names - there was a hell of a price to pay."
Rows and rows of names, remembering 58,209 soldiers who died in the war, forever inscribed on a solemn wall of black granite.

Now, the Vietnam Wall Experience - a replica of the famous wall - is coming to Rochester Hills.

The 24-hour exhibit opens Friday, Aug. 27, at Christian Memorial Cemetery, 521 E. Hamlin Road, and runs through Sunday, Aug. 29.

Made of a simulated granite, the traveling replica is more than three-quarters the size of the actual monument in the nation's capital.

All 58,209 names are inscribed in it. That includes the names of 2,649 soldiers from Michigan who lost their lives in Vietnam.

Service Corporation International, a major funeral and cemetery service provider, is sponsoring the exhibit. Admission is free.

"Not everyone gets a chance to go to Washington and see the actual monument," SCI spokeswoman Renee Felix said. "This is a way to take that experience and share it, to provide closure for many veterans."

Some 30,000 to 60,000 visitors are expected to see the Vietnam Wall Experience in Rochester Hills. It's traveling to only 11 other locations throughout the country.

Volunteers are assembling it, and members of the Vietnam Veterans Association No. 133 will guard it throughout the night. Seniors from the Older Persons Commission will man computer stations to help visitors locate names on the panels.

The actual Vietnam Wall was dedicated by President Ronald Reagan in 1982.

Vietnam Wall Experience
The exhibit at the Christian Memorial Cultural Center, will be presented Aug. 27-29. Admission is free. The center will be open 24 hours a day for the exhibit.

Area will host international science, engineering fair

SOUTHFIELD, Mich., Aug. 19 /PRNewswire/ -- The International Science and Engineering Fair (ISEF), sponsored by Science Service of Washington, D.C., and Intel Corp., has selected Michigan as the location of the May 2000 event. Hosts for ISEF 2000 include the Science and Engineering Fair of Metropolitan Detroit, ESD The Engineering Society, ESD Foundation and engineering and scientific employers who will provide volunteers and funding for this once-in-a-lifetime event.

ISEF is known as the Olympics, the World Cup and the World Series of science competitions. Held annually in May, ISEF brings together over 1,500 students from all 50 states and 40 nations to compete for scholarships, tuition grants, internships, scientific field trips and the grand prize: a trip to attend the Nobel Prize Ceremonies in Stockholm, Sweden. Students compete for over $2 million in scholarships, tuition grants, scientific equipment and scientific trips.

Each year, between 3 million and 5 million students complete science research projects at nearly 500 affiliated fairs for the prestige of competing at ISEF. An estimated 5,000 educators, sponsors, fair organizers and volunteers will converge in southeast Michigan, along with students, their families and world media.

More than 1,700 highly qualified representatives of business, industry, the sciences and academia, from throughout the country, will convene to judge the competition along with several Nobel prize winning scientists.

Awards and recognition will come from over 100 scientific associations, major scientific and technical corporations, governmental agencies and universities. Major Award sponsors include Intel, AARP Andrus Foundation, Merck Research Laboratories, MCEC/Panasonic and Space News. Scholarship awards are $3,000, $1,500, $1,000 and $500 respectively in each of the 15 categories. Additional awards worth over 1.5 million include tuition scholarships, summer internships, scientific field trips and laboratory equipment provided by Intel, Science Service and nearly 70 other corporate, professional and government sponsors. The two overall winners of ISEF will receive all-expense-paid trips to attend the Nobel Prize Ceremony in Stockholm, Sweden.

On two public display days, 40,000 school children and adults will view the exhibits and speak with the student exhibitors. Over 2,500 local teachers and administrators, parents and friends, corporate leaders and local corporations will have a golden opportunity to network with outstanding students and educators from more than 40 countries.

ISEF is held in a different city each May. The Host City Committee is responsible for securing facilities, recruiting judges, promoting volunteerism, arranging tours as well as raising over $1.2 million for ISEF support. Additionally, Host Cities enjoy the pride of hosting an international event, and, in the process, generate close to $10 million dollars for the local host state economy.

Special Awards sponsorship is open to scientific, mathematical, and engineering societies; agencies of the federal government; colleges and universities; and corporations. Colleges and universities provide tuition scholarships to ISEF finalists.

The opportunity to meet and talk with these high caliber student finalists has proven to be a valuable recruiting tool. Representatives from special award organizations will come to Detroit to interview students for awards.

Countries participating at ISEF in 1999 were Argentina, Australia, Austria, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Czech Republic, Denmark, European Union, Germany, Honduras, Hungary, India, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, Netherlands, Nigeria, Norway, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Russia, South Africa, South Korea, Sweden, Taiwan, Thailand, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States and Venezuela.

Founded in 1895 as the Association of Graduate Engineers of the University of Michigan, ESD has evolved into the largest multi-disciplinary engineering & scientific society of its kind with members throughout the Great Lakes Region. ESD achieves its mission of enhancement of the vitality of the engineering profession through technical conferences, expositions, training courses, and published materials. ## Bring home the flavors of Jamaica

Last week my neighbor came over with a case of Red Stripe so I made him a deal. "You hold off a day mon and I make some good jerk mon." Now how could he turn that down?

Jerk refers to a cooking method from the Arawak Indians and the Maroons (runaway African slaves), of cooking heavily seasoned meat, mostly pork, in pits with hardwood lump charcoal. There were no charcoal briquettes back then. To use this cooking method on your grill, you have to buy lump charcoal. Vic's Quality Fruit Market on Southfield Road in Beverly Hills has lump maple, which is really good, but you have to be very careful because it burns much hotter.

In Jamaica mon they use fruit and hardwood coal, but you can add soaked applewood chips, or if you get really carried away, there is a company called Rastafire where you can order wood imported from Jamaica. Their number is (336) 924-9459. Visit them online at www.rastafire.com

Best beer

Of course, the best beer to go with jerk is Red Stripe or Dragon Stout from Desnoes & Geddes Ltd. Kingston. In 1918 Eugene Desnoes and Thomas Geddes got together to make soft drinks. In 1927 when English and German brewmasters came on the scene, Red Stripe was born as an ale. Then in 1938, with the arrival of reliable refrigeration, Paul Geddes and Bill Martindale came up with the present day Red Stripe lager.

Red Stripe is a nice hazy yellow, with a good head, low hops, and a slightly sweet finish. Dragon Stout is a very dark red with that nice big brown stout head with notes of licorice and a roasty finish.

The jerk rub recipe I am giving you is a wet one, and great on anything, chicken, beef, pork, lamb, fish, you get the idea, it's all up to you. Jerk is hot, sometimes real hot. Feel free to add or subtract hot peppers to your taste. The best way to use jerk is to really rub it into the meat, and let it sit overnight, wrapped, for the best flavor.

Side dish

Now, of course we need a side dish to go with it, and this Lentil Jicama Salad can be served hot or cold. For the curious, a jicama is a tuber, close to a water chestnut in taste and texture. Just peel the skin and the outer layer off, and you are ready to go.

WET JERK RUB

- Makes 2 1/2 cups
- 1/2 cup fresh thyme leaves
- 2 bunches green onions
- 4 tablespoons fresh minced ginger
- 3 Scotch bonnet or habanero peppers
- 1/4 cup canola oil
- 3 bay leaves
- 2 teaspoons ground allspice
- 1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon black pepper
- 1 tablespoon ground coriander
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Juice of 1 lime
- 2 tablespoons dark rum (my favorite is Appleton Dark)

Place everything in a food processor and blend to a dark thick paste.

This will keep for about 2 months, tightly covered, in the refrigerator.

LENTIL-JICAMA SALAD

- 6 — 1/2 cup servings
- 1 cup lentils
- 16 ounces chicken stock
- 3 tablespoons oil
- 1/4 red onion, diced small
- 1/4 cup red bell pepper, diced

GARDEN IN A JAR

Garden fresh: Cafe Cortina captures the essence of summer with their garden-fresh pasta sauces.

Cafe Cortina puts fresh flavors in sauces

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER
kwygonik@oe.homecomm.net

You don't have to grow your own tomatoes and spend a lot of time in the kitchen to enjoy garden fresh tomato sauce. Cafe Cortina has captured the flavors of summer in a jar. Since last year they've developed three sauces — Pomodoro Veneziana, Sugo Del Veneto and Aglio Del Veneto.

"People have been requesting for years that we prepare sauce for them," said Rina Tonon explaining why her popular family-owned restaurant in Farmington Hills decided to offer their pasta sauces for sale.

"They've been very successful. We've been getting wonderful feedback. People are enjoying them."

Rina credits her son, Adrian for bringing Cafe Cortina sauces to market. "It's something he's done," she said. "I never had the time."

Adrian has enjoyed working on the project. "We're trying to do a variety of sauces," he said. "These are family recipes. We want to stand out, we're known for our authentic Italian food. We want people to experience our restaurant, and the sauces are a sample of what we have to offer."

The first sauce, Pomodoro Veneziana was introduced a year-and-a-half ago. Made with garden fresh tomatoes, onions, celery, carrots, basil and bay leaves, Adrian describes the sauce as "simple, simple, simple."

To serve he recommends sauteeing a little chopped onion in olive oil, then add the sauce. You can serve it over pasta, with chicken or veal.

Sugo Del Veneto is a light tomato sauce, with a hint of cream and Parmesan cheese. Just heat and serve over pasta, nothing could be easier.

Both sauces taste homemade. Your family will think you spent the whole day in the kitchen preparing them.

In September, Cafe Cortina's newest sauce — Aglio Del

Veneto will be available. That sauce will be a flavorful blend of fresh tomatoes and roasted garlic.

Like Sugo Del Veneto, Adrian says all you'll have to do is open the jar, heat and serve.

Look for Cafe Cortina sauces at Hiller's Shopping Center Market, Westborn, Vic's, Merchant of Vino Whole Foods Market and other specialty stores. You can even find them Up North in Charlevoix. The sauces start at $4.99 for a 16 ounce jar — four 1/2 cup servings. You can place an order online at www.cafecortina.com

The sauces are also available for purchase at Cafe Cortina, 30715 W. 10 Mile Road, Farmington Hills, (248) 474-3033.

In the future, Adrian would like to "maybe offer a line of pastas."

Cafe Cortina is open for lunch and dinner 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

Elena's, a family-owned and operated manufacturer of gourmet pasta and pasta sauces in Auburn Hills, is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year.

Elena's Aglio Arrostito, a pan-roasted garlic pasta sauce, was selected as a finalist in the 1999 National Association of Specialty Food Traders Product Awards Competition in the Outstanding Pasta Sauce category.

Elena's products include the popular tomato based Elena's Bread Dipping Sauce, introduced in 1990, and a Pasta Piatto "meal in a bag" line, launched in 1994.

Elena's pasta and sauces, can be purchased locally at Jacobson's, Merchant of Vino Whole Foods markets, Long Lake Market, Papa Joe's, Kroger-Birmingham, Holiday Market, and Hiller's Shopping Center Market.

Showcase your blossoms in beautiful ice bowl

BY BEVERLY A. LEN
SPECIAL WRITER

Are you looking for different ways to display the fruits of your flower garden labor? Here is a way to combine fruits and flowers that is sure to compliment both.

While visiting friends in England, I was invited to a casual barbecue. My hosts assured me it would be nothing fancy. Right.

After a stupefying meal of grilled pork chops, steaks, chicken Tika and sausage, plus salad, vegetables and several wines, dessert was the farthest thing from my mind.

Then my hostess made a delectable dessert presentation that no one could refuse: Marinated fresh fruit in phyllo baskets, served from an ice bowl of frozen flowers from her garden.

Light, simple and elegant, perfect for a sultry summer day.

BOWL

- 2 nested smooth sided bowls, with at least 1 inch difference in size

Flowers from your garden, preferably flat types such as pansies or daisies

Place blossoms in largest bowl, breaking off a few petals

Fill bowl half full of water

Place the second bowl into the first forcing water and flowers in between. Place both bowls in the freezer overnight until ready to use. (You may have to lightly weight the second bowl to keep it submerged.)

FRUIT MIXTURE

Two or three hours before serving, cut up 1 cup each of fresh strawberries, blueberries, pineapple and grapes. Marinate in 1/2 cup of Cointreau.

SERVING BASKETS

Place 3 staggered layers of phyllo dough in lightly greased large muffin tins to create a flared effect

Bake at 350°F until crisp. Cool and remove

Basil, cherry tomatoes make pasta sauce special

BY DANA JACOBI
SPECIAL WRITER

In Italy, I find eating is always a treat. Even in the Rome airport, I have had pasta cooked properly al dente and bathed in the correct amount of a satisfying and flavorful yet light tomato sauce better than those served in most Italian restaurants at home.

Travel beyond familiar parts of Italy and you may well find food that is more than just good. Off the beaten track, it is still easy to discover unique, local styles of cooking and truly remarkable dishes. For me, exploring the south, particularly Puglia and Sicily, has produced many memorable culinary finds.

Sicilian dishes can often be imitated, though not truly duplicated. For example, in Autumn, we do have green and purple cauliflower similar to what Sicilians call "broccoli." A chef from the island of Pantelleria, off the western tip of Sicily, showed me how to make Pasta Arruminata, using this cauliflower. He sauteed it with pine nuts, raisins, a touch of sugar, and toasted semolina bread crumbs to make the sauce. But the rich volcanic soil and strong Mediterranean sun of Sicily give its vegetables an intense, sweet flavor ours do not approach. So I make this dish, a healthy and unexpected way to enjoy cauliflower, accepting that, while good, it is only a fair copy of the original.

Happily, one of the most appealing Sicilian dishes I know tastes as good as the original, especially between August and October, when the ingredients for making it are at their best. Giovanna Guccione, who with her sister runs a small hotel on Favignana, one of the Egadi Islands off Sicily's coast, makes this sauce with herbs from her own garden. A kind of red-and-green Sicilian pesto made with cherry tomatoes, it is good enough to eat from a spoon, or to heap on toasted bread, as well as on spaghetti.

This uncooked sauce contains no cheese. It is best when made with salted capers imported from the Pantelleria or Salina, another Sicilian island. (Many specialty food stores sell them.) Then find the sweetest cherry tomatoes and feast on this Sicilian dish.

SICILIAN PESTO

- 3/4 cup loosely packed flat-leaf parsley
- 1/3 cup loosely packed basil
- 1/4 cup loosely packed celery leaves
- 1/4 cup loosely packed mint leaves
- 1/4 small red onion, chopped
- 6 blanched almonds (see note)
- 1 tablespoon capers, rinsed and drained (see note)
- 1 garlic clove, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano

- 12 cherry tomatoes
- 3 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- 6 cups cooked pasta

Place the parsley, basil, celery leaves, mint, onion, almonds, capers, and garlic in a food processor. Pulse 6-8 times to chop them. Add the oregano and tomatoes, and chop coarsely.

With the motor running, drizzle in the olive oil. Turn the pesto into a bowl. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Let sit 30 minutes to allow flavors to meld. Toss with spaghetti, penne or spread on bruschetta, toasted slices of semolina bread. Store in the refrigerator, tightly covered. Use within 24 hours.

Notes: You can easily skin almonds by tossing them in boiling water to loosen their skin, which takes 1-2 minutes. Drain and pop the almonds out of their skin.

Salt-cured capers are preferable to those preserved in vinegar. Simply rinse them in tepid water to remove the salt crystals.

Nutrition information: Each 1/4 cup serving of pesto with 1 cup pasta contains 299 calories and 10 grams of fat.

Beer from page B1

- 1/4 cup corn kernels
- 1/4 cup short julienne jicama
- 2 tablespoons fresh chopped cilantro
- 1 tablespoon fresh chopped basil
- 1/8 teaspoon ground ginger
- Salt and pepper to taste

Cook lentils in chicken stock just until tender. Don't cook them too long, or they'll turn to mush. Drain.

In a pan, heat oil and cook onion until just soft.

Add everything else, and cook 3 to 5 minutes more on medium heat, being careful not to break up the lentils. Serve.

To serve cold, drain and cool the lentils. Place everything in a bowl and toss.

Take your hamburger's temperature to check for doneness

"Even though you've grilled your hamburger until it looks brown in the center, it's hard to really know if it is safe to eat," says Sylvia Treitman, Home Economist for the MSU Extension, Food and Nutrition Hotline.

The only safe way to check if meat or poultry is safely cooked is to use a kitchen thermometer adds Sylvia "to prevent E-Coli food poisonings."

The color of meat is not the best indicator of a safe temperature. Sometimes marinades can alter the color and also the age of the animal affects the color of the meat. "You also cannot rely on the color of the meat's juices as an indicator of doneness" adds Sylvia.

Tips for using a kitchen thermometer correctly:

■ Put the thermometer in the thickest part of the meat - you may have to turn a meat patty sideways. The thermometer should read 160 degrees to be safely cooked.

■ Make sure the thermometer is calibrated by checking the temperature of water boiling at 212 degrees.

For a traditional "meat" thermometer: Take the temperature of meat in two or three different places and leave in 1-2 minutes.

For the instant read thermometer: Insert sideways in the foods, do not use during cooking, only after, and leave in 15-20 seconds.

If you have any questions on using a thermometer or other food and nutrition related and food safety concerns, call the Food and Nutrition Hotline 248-858-0904.

Low-Fat Cooking: Fresno Pork Roast

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The inspiration for this recipe comes from the fruits of Fresno, Calif., which is known for its delicious strawberries, oranges and lemons. Using a fruit juice sauce on a lean roast makes a flavorful yet low-fat entree. The strawberry garnish adds to the appeal.

Preparation of the roast is quite simple as the oven does most of the work. It is an ideal dish to serve on a busy night or for guests. Each serving contains 3 grams of fat.

FRESNO PORK ROAST

- 3-pound lean boneless single-loin pork roast
- 1 1/2 teaspoons dried rosemary leaves, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
- 1 1/8 teaspoons salt, divided
- 1 1/2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 1/4 cups canned pineapple juice
- 1 1/4 cups orange juice
- 1/8 teaspoon ground cloves
- 2 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice

- 1 pint strawberries

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

Rub roast with rosemary, black pepper and 1 teaspoon of the salt. Place roast in a shallow pan and roast for 60 to 70 minutes at 350 degrees F until a meat thermometer inserted in center of roast reads 150 degrees F. Remove roast from oven and cover, let stand 10 minutes.

While meat is resting, combine sugar and cornstarch in a medium saucepan. Stir in pineapple and orange juices and cook, stirring, over medium heat, until mixture bubbles and thickens. Remove from heat and stir in cloves, lemon juice and remaining salt. Slice roast and serve with sauce; garnish with strawberries. Makes 12 servings.

Nutrition information per serving, with strawberry garnish: 180 cal., 27 g pro., 12 g carbo., 3 g total fat (1 g sat. fat), 66 mg chol., 325 mg sodium.

Lemon-buttermilk dressing doubles as marinade for chicken

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This quick and easy buttermilk dressing can be served on mixed green salads, cold pasta salads, cabbage slaws, shredded carrot salads or on sliced tomatoes, avocados or cucumbers. It is also a good marinade for fish and chicken, especially when the fish or chicken is to be dredged with flour or other coating.

Almond-Crusted Marinated Chicken uses the lemon-buttermilk dressing to tenderize the meat. Almonds and Asiago cheese give the dish a roasted, nutty flavor.

There is a common misconception that buttermilk is high in fat content, but it typically is made with skim or low-fat milk. Buttermilk does not actually have contact with butter. Instead, its buttery flavor is derived from diacetyl, a compound characteristic of butter flavor and a byproduct in the fermentation process.

GARLICKY LEMON BUTTERMILK DRESSING

- 3/4 cup canola or safflower oil
- 1/2 cup fresh lemon juice
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1/3 cup buttermilk
- 4 to 5 large garlic cloves, pressed
- 1 1/2 teaspoons dillweed, dried
- 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons coarsely ground pepper
- 1 teaspoon salt

Put all ingredients in a jar with a tight-fitting lid and shake well, or whisk thoroughly. Keep refrigerated. Shake well or whisk before using. Spoon over salad and toss.

do not drench. Makes about 2 cups and will keep, refrigerated, for 10 days. Makes 2 cups; 10 servings.

Nutrition information per 1.6-ounce serving: 238 cal., 0.5 g pro., 8 mg chol., 3 g carbo., 179 mg sodium, 0.2 g fiber, 25 g total fat.

ALMOND-CRUSTED MARINATED CHICKEN

- 4 chicken legs with thighs
- 2/3 cup Garlicky Lemon Buttermilk Dressing (recipe above)
- 1 cup roasted, unsalted whole almonds
- 2 ounces Asiago cheese

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Skin chicken pieces carefully. Wipe with a damp cloth and dry well. Lay in a shallow dish in one layer.

Shake or whisk dressing well and pour over chicken pieces, turning several times. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 30 minutes; turning in marinade two or three times.

Meanwhile, put almonds and cheese in a food processor or blender and grind into coarse meal, transfer to a shallow bowl.

Lift chicken pieces from marinade, roll in almond mixture and lay in a lightly greased or sprayed shallow baking pan. Bake at 375 degrees F for 30 to 40 minutes, or until juices run clear. Makes 4 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 633 cal., 39 g pro., 115 mg chol., 9 g carbo., 427 mg sodium, 4 g fiber, 49 g total fat.

Raspberry tart makes the most of summer fruit

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Raspberries may be eaten as is, with a simple dusting of sugar if needed, or treated to a rather more formal preparation as in the following recipe for Raspberry Clafoutis in a Tart.

The recipe is from "A Passion for My Provence" (Harper Perennial, $15 paperback) by Lydie Marshall. She suggests it for July in her selection of seasonal desserts through the year, and gives the French name of the dish, Tarte aux clafoutis de framboises. Clafoutis is a dessert of fruit, most commonly cherries, baked in batter.

RASPBERRY CLAFOUTIS IN A TART

- 10 tablespoons sugar
- 3 cups raspberries
- 2 eggs
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 1/4 cup heavy cream
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon framboise liqueur
- 10-inch Partially Prebaked

Clafoutis is a dessert of fruit, most commonly cherries, baked in batter.

Tart Shell (recipe follows)

- 1 tablespoon confectioners' sugar
- 1 cup sour cream mixed with 1 tablespoon sugar

Preheat the oven to 425 F.

Sprinkle 2 tablespoons sugar on the raspberries and let stand for 30 minutes. In a bowl, whisk the eggs and flour until blended. Whisk in 8 tablespoons sugar, cream, milk and framboise liqueur. Fold the raspberries into the mixture and pour into the partially prebaked tart shell. Place the tart mold on a cookie sheet lined with aluminum foil. Bake the tart for 15 minutes; the raspberries will be very dark. Set aside to cool.

When ready to serve, set the broiler on high. Sprinkle the tart with 1 tablespoon confectioners' sugar and place under the broiler for 1 minute to caramelize the top.

Serve with the sweetened sour cream.

Makes 6 servings.

PARTIALLY PREBAKED TART SHELL (SHORT CRUST DOUGH)

- 8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter
- 1 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
- Pinch of salt
- 2 to 3 tablespoons cold water, depending on the weather

Cut the butter into small pieces and place in the freezer for 5 minutes. In the bowl of a food processor, combine the flour, salt and butter. Process for 10 seconds, add 2 tablespoons water in humid weather or 3 tablespoons in dry weather. Process for another 10 seconds or until the mixture looks like cornmeal. Dump the mixture on a table or counter and bind a small amount at a time with the heel of your hand, using a sliding motion to incorporate the butter and flour smoothly.

Gather the dough into a ball and flatten it. Wrap in wax paper and refrigerate for 15 minutes, just long enough to firm up the butter. Flour a work surface and rolling pin. Roll the dough to a 13-inch circle, always making sure there is flour under the dough and on the rolling pin, otherwise the dough will stick to the pastry surface or to the rolling pin.

Line a 10-inch tart pan with the dough. Trim the excess (keep it frozen until you have enough scraps to make another tart shell). Prick the bottom and refrigerate the unbaked shell for 2 hours or freeze until ready to bake.

To partially bake: Preheat the oven to 400 F. Line the tart shell with aluminum foil and fill it with dry beans. Place the tart shell in the middle of the oven and bake for 15 minutes. Remove the beans and foil. Bake 5 to 10 minutes to dry out the bottom without coloring.

Prostate cancer

As in breast cancer, early detection is key to survival

BY KURT KUBAN
SPECIAL WRITER

There are situations in life when the old proverb "better late than never" just doesn't fit. Take, for example, the case of men getting checked for prostate cancer.

Of the 185,000 men that were diagnosed with the disease last year in the United States, over 39,000 will die because of it. That's roughly one in five. The reality is that of those 39,000, many, if not most, could have experienced a longer life had they gone to see their doctor sooner.

Let's face it - most men don't like to go to the doctor. Many wait until they feel sick or are prodded by a significant other before dragging themselves into their doctor's office. With some illnesses, this "if it ain't broke, don't fix it" attitude won't have such serious repercussions.

However, prostate cancer is not as forgiving as most diseases. It, along with colon and lung cancers, is considered one of the big three. Together, they account for over half the cancer deaths in males each year, with prostate cancer the second leading killer.

The key to saving a patient with prostate cancer is to have it diagnosed before the cancer spreads beyond the prostate, which is a walnut-sized gland located just below the bladder.

The problem is that there are no noticeable symptoms until it is too late. By the time a man begins to see blood in his urine, or has related back pains, the cancer is in its later stages and has most likely spread beyond the prostate into areas such as the spine and pelvis.

"If the cancer is confined to the prostate, there are a lot of treatments available. The prognosis is quite different if the cancer has spread," said Jorge Torriglia, a urologist with Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn who specializes in prostate procedures.

Although diet and lifestyle seem to play a role in some cases, prostate cancer has no known causes. All men are susceptible to developing the disease as they get older, though for some, the risk is much greater.

The two groups of males that are at the highest risk of getting prostate cancer because of their genetic makeup are African-Americans and individuals, regardless of ethnic background, who come from families that have a history of prostate cancer.

According to Torriglia, this risk factor should be taken into account when determining at what point in one's life to begin undergoing regular checkups. "The rule is that high-risk patients should be screened beginning at the age of 40. All other men should begin to be checked at age 50," Torriglia said.

The prostate gland's main function is to produce fluid for the semen. Traditionally, males who had prostate cancer, especially in years past, were reluctant to discuss it with anybody because of the sensitivity of the issue. Plus, reproduction becomes less of an issue as a man ages.

"Prostate cancer is one of those diseases that has been around for a long time, but it is just now beginning to be talked about. Nobody would admit to having prostate cancer in the past, partly because of the gloom and doom that went along with cancer, but also because people didn't really understand the prostate gland itself," said Marianne Simancek, director of the Community Outreach program at St. Mary Hospital in Livonia.

Another deterrent that keeps men from having regular screenings for prostate cancer is the method, known as a rectal examination, that doctors use when inspecting a patient. Most men are aware of the procedure, and many spend a lifetime trying to figure out how to avoid it.

"Men don't like the idea of a rectal exam. The idea that they have to go through that kind of an exam to find out if they have prostate cancer is kind of chilling for them," Simancek said. "But at the same time, the rectal exam and a blood test are the two best tests that can be done to determine whether or not a man has prostate cancer."

In the rectal exam, a doctor uses his finger to feel if there are any abnormalities in size or shape of the gland, and the blood test is used to determine the level of prostate-specific antigen (PSA), a substance produced only in the prostate, that is in the blood.

When the PSA level is elevated it is indicative of something being wrong with the gland. Still, despite the fears of most men, many doctors believe the rectal exam is the best tell-tale method of determining if a patient has prostate

What is the Prostate?

The prostate is one of the male sex glands. The other major sex glands in men are the testicles and the seminal vesicles. Together, these glands secrete the fluids that make up semen.

The prostate is about the size of a walnut. It lies just below the urinary bladder and surrounds the upper part of the urethra. The urethra is the tube that carries urine from the bladder and semen from the sex glands out through the penis.

As one of a man's sex glands, the prostate is affected by male hormones. These hormones stimulate the activity of the prostate and the replacement of prostate cells as they wear out. The chief male hormone is testosterone, which is produced almost entirely by the testicles.

trouble. "It [rectal exam] is extremely tolerable and simple, and takes less than a minute," said Zvi Levran, a Livonia urologist who says he has performed thousands of the examinations himself. "I can tell you - any man, any age - if you have anything wrong, if it is benign, if it is suspicious or if it is positive."

Gerard Graham, a Livonia resident who learned he had prostate cancer when he was 55, agrees.

"It's not that bad. There is no discomfort and it's over in seconds," said Graham, a semi-retired lawyer who is now 68. "I recommend to all my friends to at least get the PSA test. There is no reason to hide your head in the sand, because that is not going to accomplish anything."

Considering the death toll that prostate cancer has wreaked on those who failed to get screened early enough, that is pretty sound advice.

"Remember, prostate cancer kills, so you need to be checked, especially if it runs in your family," Torriglia said. "It is very important. Any male approaching middle-age should start thinking about it. A rectal exam and a blood test can save your life."

Education is teen's goal through Web site

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON
STAFF WRITER
kmortson@oe.homecomm.net

Livonia teen Ryan Dinkgrave wishes he could take care of his diabetes with a pill. "I wish it was that easy," said the 16-year-old who knows all too well the realities of being a diabetic.

Diagnosed in September 1993 at the age of 10, Dinkgrave has turned his "frustration" with the disease into a positive with the creation of a Web site for children and their families pertaining to diabetes.

Written and maintained by the Livonia Stevenson High School junior - the site "The Family's Guide to Diabetes" (<http://diabetes.cbyc.com>) offers the "DiabetiChat" chatroom and a discussion bulletin board as well as information on topics such as hypoglycemia, food, Halloween, school and diabetes and hyperglycemia.

"There's a lack of material out there for kids about diabetes," said Dinkgrave. "The site offers information and stories by a kid with diabetes and not a doctor telling you about the disease with a lot of medical terms. It's all based on experience."

Public plea

The state of Michigan's only child-delegate, Dinkgrave recently traveled to Capitol Hill on behalf of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International at their first Children's Congress. The Livonia teenager was credited with helping to "put a face" on the disease alongside 86 other children from across the United States. The child-constituents traveled to Washington D.C. with the objective of urging members of Congress to increase funds for medical research.

"I don't plan on having this disease all my life," said Dinkgrave. "It's just a matter of getting the money together and a couple of people to decide things need to be done to find a cure."

The three-day JDF Children's Congress brought both young people and celebrities together to share their stories with members of Congress.

"One of the most important lessons these children can learn is that their voices really do matter," said JDF International Chairman Mary Tyler Moore in her opening remarks to Congress. "Taking your message directly to your elected officials is critical in today's society. Those children represent the reason we urgently need a cure, and they are the reason we will find one."

Moore, singer Tony Bennett, composer Alan Silvestri and Miss America 1999 Nicole Johnson were among the personalities that shared their personal experiences with diabetes and the impact the disease has had on their lives.

"Diabetes is not something I must tend to a few times a day. It is a challenge that I face 24 hours a day, along with all the other children and adults with diabetes. It requires strict self discipline and a huge amount of responsibility. The time for a cure is now," said Dinkgrave.

Big change

During the five years following Dinkgrave's diagnosis, his need for insulin injections increased from one a day to four. In 1998, however, his lifestyle changed dramatically when his doctor's from the University of Michigan Hospital placed him on the insulin pump - a device the size of a pager that supplies regulated amounts of insulin to his body eliminating the need for him to administer numerous shots throughout the day.

The pump ushered in a new found freedom for the 16-year-old in that he no longer has to wake himself up for shots, he can skip meals, eat at different times of the day and follow a less rigid meal plan. For a diabetic, one of the most inconvenient and bothersome aspects of the disease is the insulin injections followed by meal planning, blood tests and lack of sleep.

"A lot of people don't know about the pump but it's gaining interest," said Dinkgrave. "I was the fifth teenager last year that U of M gave the pump and now there's about 50 or 60 teens who use it."

Dinkgrave addresses his use and satisfaction with the pump on his Web site and is eager to discuss it with young people or families who may be contemplating its use.

"The Web site has been a positive outlet for Ryan," said Kathy Dinkgrave, Ryan's mother. "There have been times when I expected the anger to come but it never did. He's been positive from the onset and I'm very proud of him."

The Family's Guide to Diabetes has been recognized, over the last four years, as a valid source of reference by a number of individuals and organizations and has had approximately 15,500 hits since mid-January alone.

"I get e-mails from all over the world and I answer all of them," said Dinkgrave. "I've gotten messages from teachers, parents and doctors who use the site. One teacher said they were using the site to help teach their students about diabetes."

Dinkgrave says he was also contacted by an individual representing former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's (who offers his expert advice at www.drkoop.com) Web site to talk about possibly including Ryan's site as a link exchange.

Balancing act

The high school junior said his Web site gets less attention from him during the school year because of his studies so he's been busy inputting all the stories and photographs relating to the JDF Children's Congress conference since June.

Over the next few weeks he will be focusing his attention on raising money for the "Team Ryan" crew that will walk in the annual Walk to Cure Diabetes event hosted by the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International and The Diabetes Research Foundation - Sunday, Sept. 26 at Domino Farm's in Ann

Guidelines set for pediatric vaccines

New information from the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) about two childhood vaccines has prompted local pediatricians to change infants' vaccination schedules. Pediatricians affiliated with Saint Joseph Mercy Health System will temporarily suspend providing the rotavirus vaccine and will delay inoculating babies against Hepatitis B.

The rotavirus vaccine has been provided to infants to guard against a disease that causes severe diarrhea and fever. However, limited data indicate there may be an increased risk of bowel obstruction in infants within three weeks of receiving the vaccine. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is currently re-evaluating the benefits and risks of the vaccine.

"The seasonal risk of natural rotavirus infection in the United States will be very low during the next few months, and the Academy believes this is the most prudent course of action," said Errol Soslone, M.D., medical director of Pediatrics at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

Soslone said that parents of infants who have received the rotavirus in the past three weeks should be alert for bowel discomfort or bloody stool and contact the baby's pediatrician if there are any questions or concerns.

The Hepatitis B vaccine is no longer being universally recommended for newborns because it contains a type of mercury as a preservative and bacteria eliminator. Although there is no evidence that children have had adverse effects resulting from the mercury exposure, the United States Public Health Service and the AAP have agreed that the first of three Hepatitis B shots, generally provided in hospitals, will be given only to infants born of mothers who test positive for Hepatitis B or whose status is unknown.

Ask Dr. Smereck

By Dr. Karen Smereck D.D.S.

Think Before You Snack

Q: I love to snack. How can I avoid damage to my teeth and gums?

A: You're not alone. Most Americans probably include snacks as part of their daily food intake. Snacks themselves are not the problem. Sugar is.

We all accumulate plaque, a colorless, bacteria-laden film, on our teeth. The bacteria in the plaque feed on the sugar and starch in foods and form acids that attack tooth enamel; cavities eventually follow. Besides obvious sweets, there is some sugar in fruits, vegetables, breads, cereals, milk, ketchup, nondairy coffee creamer and bottled salad dressings. Chewy candy, sugared soft drinks, cough drops and breath mints prolong acid attacks. But artificial sweeteners are harmless to teeth.

Dr. George Stoeckley, director of the Oral Health Research Institute at Indiana University, advises eating sugars and starches as part of a full meal rather than as snacks. This allows our normal salivary process to neutralize the acid and "remineralize" the teeth.

Between meals, it's best to choose non-sugary, non-starchy snacks such as fruits, raw vegetables, pickles, olives and yogurt. Many people, though not all, can snack on nuts as well. Ask your dentist.

Web sites promote weight loss

PC MIKE

MIKE WENDLAND

There's very little that can be said for being big. But in very different ways, two local Web sites are offering lots of help for the physically large. Or ... let's just say it ... the fat.

A lot of us struggle with weight problems. Few of us really do anything about it. Tim Barnette did. And after losing 130 pounds, the 28-year-old Dearborn software engineer created a Web site that offers a free program he wrote himself that he credits for shedding all those pounds.

In fact, his wife, Leslie, was so impressed by what Tim accomplished that she followed the same program and lost almost as much.

The site is called The Fitness Tool (www.fitnessstool.com), and the program Barnette wrote is a great resource for someone who wants to lose weight and get in shape. There's a log to note everything you eat, a section on proper nutrition and lots of suggested exercises and weight-lifting routines.

Barnette gives his program away. He's sold some banner ads to mostly local companies and hopes eventually to recoup his costs by attracting some big-time sponsors. But it's clear from the site that Barnette's chief goal is to help people get in shape. Since January when it went online, almost

After losing 130 pounds, the 28-year-old Dearborn software engineer created a Web site that offers a free program he wrote himself that he credits for shedding all those pounds.

1,000 people have downloaded his free program.

I warn you it's a huge file to download, over 10 megabytes. But one look at the before-and-after pictures of Barnette will convince you that it's worth checking out.

Another great locally based Web site that stemmed from size and girth is called The Big Page (www.thebigpage.com)

The site owes its existence to a marketing class Dave Binkowski took at Wayne State University in Detroit. As an assignment, the class was asked to create a product or service that could be useful in the real world.

Binkowski, who lives in Warren, is a pretty big guy. Let's just say, he more than fills a doorway when he walks into a room.

He thought about the assignment for a while and, as he explains on his site, realized that he was tired of having to walk miles through shopping malls to find a shirt with 38-inch sleeves, or pants with a 36-inch inseam, or size 16 shoes.

In fact, the 6-foot, 6-inch Binkowski was fed up with the whole mall experience.

Because of the difficulty he encountered in getting fitted, he had collected an extensive collection of catalogs from different mail order retailers from around the world.

So, combining computer and Internet technology, his frustrating search for clothes, and his college assignment, Binkowski gave birth to a Web site that could let big and tall men shop for what they need.

His site just keeps growing. Over 55 big and tall clothing or shoe sites are currently categorized and listed, all searchable. And the site is getting close to 30,000 visitors a month.

PC MIKE SEMINAR - Mark your calendars for Saturday, Sept. 11. That's the day, from 10 a.m. to noon, that we'll hold the next PC Mike/ WXYT Radio Computer Seminar. ### Carver reclaims bricks to save pieces of history Every time an old building is torn down, Paul Beaton feels a little sad. But he's not one to sit around crying about the loss. Instead, Beaton recreates the structures in brick reclaimed from the original buildings.

You'd never know by looking at the intricately detailed executive tower of the Hudson's building that Beaton couldn't even draw or paint during his early years when he lived in Livonia and then Farmington.

Whether the structure is a 1928 gas station or his old elementary school in Ontario, the carving comes to life when Beaton takes the project into his hands.

"I can't stand to see these old places destroyed," said Beaton, who now lives in Chatham-Kent, Ont. "I remember all these growing up. Especially J.L. Hudson's, I have a lot of good memories there."

Collecting bits of history

Beaton used to collect old pop bottles, some with painted labels, so preserving buildings for posterity seemed like the "right thing" to do. In the past, his interest in places and objects with a history, also led Beaton to collect advertising memorabilia.

When a car accident left him disabled several years ago, Beaton began thinking about ways to earn a living. That's when he decided to turn his talents to carving.

"I was always into art but to this day I still can't draw or paint," said Beaton. "As a teenager, I made model buildings out of board. It was part of local history."

A wall hanging depicting the ruins of an ancient brick building had stuck in his mind since visiting an art store in Chicago in 1991. But it wasn't until they demolished Cody Elementary School in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario in 1995 that the memory of that wall art began to spark his creativity. After retrieving several bricks from Cody, his old school, as souvenirs, Beaton went to work carving the features of the structure into the bricks that were once part of it.

Time-consuming art

When the Hudson's building was demolished in October of 1998, Beaton rescued 25 of the bricks. So far, he's carved seven of them. Using a dremel tool with various cutting wheels, grinding bits and diamond points, Beaton replicates the details of the architecture.

"I go through the high speed tool with a five year warranty in a couple of months because of the hardness of the bricks," said Beaton, who has displayed his carvings in two galleries, including the Swann Gallery near the spot where Hudson's once stood. "I go through five diamond points per tower. I have $50 to $60 in each Hudson's executive tower. Using pho-

The Nature of Kensington

Harbinger of spring: This tufted titmouse was perched on a pussy willow in Kensington.

Autumn color: (Below) The light snow on this maple caught photographer Ted Nelson's eye.

THE SPIRIT OF KENSINGTON

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

Ted Nelson had walked through the area near the Nature Center at Kensington Metropark once, and was on his way back to where he started from, when he came upon a whitetail fawn asleep in the grass and twigs.

The Canton photographer moved quietly into position, careful not to disturb the fawn.

Nelson was in Mother Nature's territory, and there was an etiquette to follow as he "shared the spirit" of the woods with wildlife.

Since retiring from his position as a science teacher for West Bloomfield High School 18 months ago, Nelson has spent day after day searching for subjects such as the fawn. It is one of 100 images published in his recently released book, "The Nature of Kensington."

"The hardest part is finding them in the woods," said Nelson. "You'd think they'd be easy to spot, but it's like looking for a needle in a haystack. I will go in an area where they'll likely be and start at one end and actually do a criss-cross pattern. I've gone in one direction and not seen it and come back the other way and there it is."

Deer are highly habituated in certain areas of the park. It takes real patience in terms of approach. The kinds of movements on my part are minimal because the fawns will get up and run. I'm careful of my hand movements."

For each of the photographs in the book, Nelson relays a story. He's learned plenty about the habits of deer while watching them in the hours after dawn.

"The does will get up and try to lead the intruder away, the fawns lay there and stay put."

One morning, Nelson was coming through a clearing when he spotted a doe and fawn crossing the pond. After spotting Nelson, the fawn laid down with only his head sticking out of the water.

"I got out of there in a hurry," said Nelson. "They'll just drop anywhere."

Early love

Since he was a child living in what was then an undeveloped area, Nelson has been drawn to nature. "As a kid I didn't have a lot to do growing up in Highland," said Nelson. "There was a lot of time spent exploring nature. That's something we are with increasing frequency unable to do anymore. You drive by a spot and come to love the beauty and the next week you come back and it's gone."

Nelson's first visit to Kensington 40 years ago aroused his desire to return time and again to the relatively untouched area. What else would you expect from a retired science teacher who lives on Lone Wolf Lane?

Nelson loves the diversity of the landscape — the marshes, swamps, streams, lakes, meadows, and ponds — and within each of these field and forest habitats and micro-habitats, the natural communities of red squirrels, pink dianthus and dragonflies. Nelson is hoping a similar bond, many people form with Kensington, will prompt the sale of the 5,000 books, he self-published.

"Two and one-half million people go there every year," said Nelson. "There's a lot of real deep spiritual connections people have with Kensington. There's 4,300 acres which are literally an oasis of nature. It's rare by virtue of the area. In the suburbs there's so much expansion and destruction of wildlife."

One-of-a-kind

Nelson came up with the idea for the photographic portrayal of Kensington while attending a meeting of the 1,500 member North American Nature Photography Association in Florida. He'd done freelance nature photography for Audubon, National Wildlife and National History magazines for some time but it was the encouragement of his wife Nancy and fellow photographers Bruce Montagne, Carl R. Sams II and Jean Stoick that helped Nelson persevere through the culling of 300 slides, and the design and printing processes necessary to assemble the book. Nelson spent many hours investigating not only Kensington but the businesses which would produce the rust-colors of the sandhill cranes. He eventually chose Precision Color of Plymouth to do the color separations, and Friesens of Altona, Manitoba for the printing.

"I thought Kensington is ripe because it's never been done. I'm an unknown photographer yes, but I didn't feel I had to be well-known if the photography was good," he

Artists stretch limits and question 'what is art?'

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

Brian Nelson readily admits to not knowing if his works are "sculpture or even art for that matter."

Gazing around the gallery where they're exhibited, one would beg to differ. From the video of rustling trees projected on a horizontal canvas on wheels, to a stainless steel-framed print of a perfect blue sky, the works become "a different kind of vehicle for the image or idea."

Nelson's works, frequently on wheels or incorporating circular forms, rekindle experiences from his life and attempt to spark memories in viewers.

"My work doesn't try to dictate an experience," said Nelson, a Livonia resident who graduated from Michigan State University with a master's degree in sculpture. "It's important that you remember your own experiences and those can be good or bad."

Nelson is one of three artists who stretch the limits and question "what is art?" in separate installations continuing through Sunday, Aug. 29 at Detroit Contemporary.

Director Aaron Timlin selected work by Nelson, Jared Wilson and Ron Ribant to arouse speculation in the viewer. In addition to Nelson's stainless steel sculptures, Wilson's "Sound Installation" is just that — sound. Beats and counterbeats throb through the brick walled space. Ribant's "New & Used Paintings" speak to the need to preserve nature. Using text with landscape imagery, Ribant's carved wood words warn of "poison" and the need for "preservation."

"Opening night, people were standing around trying to figure out what it was all about," said Timlin. "All the different senses are being affected with this show. This is where we want to take the gallery in the future."

said.

Jack Frost painting on red oak leaves, a mute swan, red robins after a March ice storm, the vivid gold and green of a wood duck drake — colors come alive in Nelson's book revealing the many seasons of Kensington.

"From my days as a science/biology teacher, I've always been interested in the outdoors," he said. "I was a science and biology teacher for the same reasons I'm a nature photographer."

Nelson always works off a tripod with relatively long exposures.

"When the wind is blowing you don't get the detail in the leaves," said Nelson. "I really enjoy being out there. Wandering is basically my style, being there when the conditions are right in a certain spot, on a certain day. I like to be there at sunrise or before, you get real nice light. In winter, your day extends because the sun is lower on the horizon. I like overcast days when it's very still. It's best for close-up, macrophotography."

Nelson frames his ideas, including his interpretation of a perfect day, in stainless steel. The three other sculptures also express various experiences from his life. Mobile in nature, the images are a reminder of time passing and how our activities mark "the specific meaning of a place or event."

In "Her Breath, the Wind, to Fix the Image in Memory I Exhale (for Lauri)," Nelson leads the viewer into pondering the state of the environment and life.

medical or industrial cart. Alongside, Nelson places a modified oxygen tank and nasal cannula.

"Dutifully Performed to Ward off Some Future Event" also uses the bed of a stainless steel table as a canvas for a video in which two scenarios alternate — water tediously dripping from a faucet into the sink, then someone ritually washing their hands. Nelson created all of the works during a summer hiatus from his teaching responsibilities at Center for Creative Studies, where he also directs the metal shop and foundry. Nelson has exhibited his works extensively throughout the metro Detroit area, including the Detroit Artists Market and the Creative Arts Center in Pontiac, but these works have never been seen before.

Matters of life and death

Perhaps, it's the three years Nelson worked as a welder for a military subcontractor that instilled a sterility or coldness in his work, or maybe it's just the material itself. A steel shelf extending from one of the white walls is hooked to a chain extending to the floor. Attached to it is a heart carved from salt. Individual sculptures refer to his mother, sister and wife Lauri. These are Nelson's experiences. For him, "they have meaning, love, conviction."

"The steel tables on wheels relate to the loss a couple of years ago of my grandparents, one of whom used a walker," said Nelson.

tographs, I carve out the ninth floor semi-arches on the Woodward Avenue side from the brick."

Each carving takes Beaton approximately 40 hours, although he's spent as many as 70 hours on ones such as Hudson's executive tower.

"The nice thing about these bricks is that they have a previous history as part of an architectural landmark," said Beaton. "They become pieces of art, depicting architectural features of the very buildings that they were once part of."

'Titanic' survivor heads home with guitar in hand

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

Sean McCourt has returned from yet another audition. And he's not talking. Not about the audition, at least.

"I'm kind of superstitious," he said. "There's a lot of disappointment in this business."

The 1989 Birmingham Lahser High School grad, who won critical notice for his performance on Broadway in "Titanic" two years ago, knows the unspoken rule among thespians: "Never talk about a role until you've gotten the part."

While the sirens blaring from the New York City streets can be heard in the background, he sits in his apartment, taking on the phone and barely raising his voice.

This isn't a guy who gets flustered easily.

McCourt changes roles with nearly slight-of-hand ease. In a couple of hours, he'll strum and pick his guitar at a nearby club.

And this Tuesday, he'll head west — back home — for a performance of songs from his recent CD, "Stick Figures Skating," at The Ark in Ann Arbor.

From his New York home, McCourt runs a recording studio. He records demos for musicians looking to catch on with a label.

Working as a sound engineer is another way to pay the bills, along with searching for roles on stage and film.

"Diversity is my strongest weapon in making a living," said McCourt. "Many people who act can sing, too. Fewer of them can write music."

Besides his latest CD, McCourt's music can be heard in the soundtrack of "Snow Days," an independent film that stars Bernedette Peters. Many of the songs are "romantic singalongs."

The film has been entered in the Sundance Film Festival. If it gains wide distribution, McCourt expects that he, too, will receive wider recognition for his songwriting.

After he left of the cast of the Titanic, McCourt played Woody Guthrie in a musical about the legendary folk singer. "Playing Woody Guthrie helped me find where my heart was," said McCourt. "I knew I had to follow writing music."

While Guthrie's songs are more populist and political, McCourt's compositions also strive to tell stories and create characters in the Guthrie tradition. But clearly, the late 1990s music industry is far removed from Guthrie's dust bowl, Depression-era imagery.

"Today's music market is changing rapidly," said McCourt, who not only writes, performs and records his music, but also serves as promoter and chief marketer.

"Being from a theatre background has made me used to rejection," he said. "You learn to just keep prodding along."

Based on his acting, singing and writing ability, the day will

Thompson (Wayne State University Press, $24.95 paperback) Huron By Napier Shelton (Wayne State University Press, $34.95 hardcover) BY HUGH GALLAGHER STAFF WRITER hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net The outline of Michigan is defined by the Great Lakes. We often forget that our heritage, prosperity and character have also been defined by the big lakes. Mark L. Thompson is a steward (or chief cook) on lake freighters. Napier Shelton is a naturalist with a cottage on Lake Huron. They offer unusually intimate views of life and work on the water. Thompson comes from Rogers City, where becoming a sailor on the great freighters is as normal as going to work for the Big 3 is downtown. Thompson, however, is not your typical sailor. He is a former college professor and administrator, state legislator and published author of lakes histories. This renaissance man has chosen the unusual life of being a cook on a freighter, a job he describes as one of the best in the world. He has a brother, cousins and boyhood friends who also work the lakes. He says it pays well, if you don't mind being cooped up on a boat for seven or eight months with brief stops in port cities where sailors "go up the street" while cargo is unloaded. Thompson's book is a logbook following day-by-day activities during the 1996 freighter season on the Great Lakes. During the season Thompson served on four boats (not ships) ranging from the 605-foot Calcite II to the 1,000-foot Edgar B. Speer. His longest stints were on the Calcite II. Though Thompson's book is almost too literally a diary of his work and life during the season, it is still a fascinating and colorful account of how the freighters work. Thompson fills in his daily accounts with descriptions of the different occupations, the types of raw material hauled, the life in the various port towns and the special camaraderie of sailors. The old rough and tumble of drunken sailors wreaking havoc on port cities is a thing of the long past (apparently they stopped drinking about the same time as newspaper reporters). But the sailors lead lives different from the rest of us. They are away from home for long periods of time. They sleep in tight quarters with few luxuries. They eat in mess halls. Their work is hard and dangerous. Even being on the boats can be dangerous. Thompson describes some tremendous storms and a serious fire. Thompson describes all of this with solid knowledge and deep affection. He is particularly proud of his own work as an imaginative, conscientious cook. But he is bluntly honest about the strengths and weaknesses of his fellow sailors. His strong opinions give the book a needed dose of vinegar. The book is illustrated with black and white photos of freighters and crews. Life on Lake Huron Shelton's book is a Great Lakes variation of Thoreau's "Walden." Shelton lives in Washington, D.C., but has vacationed for many years at his in-laws cottage at Port Sanilac. He wanted to find out what life was like on Lake Huron during a whole year of change, so following his retirement as a writer for the National Parks Service in 1995, he spent a year exploring every aspect of lake life. Shelton combines the observations of a naturalist with the	reportage of a journalist to describe natural and human activity on and around the mighty lake. Though anchored in Port Sanilac, Shelton travels north to the Soo and east to the Georgian Bay to provide an account of the whole lake. Shelton begins with winter and describes in loving detail the shifting phenomenon of ice and takes the reader on a trip with an ice breaker. He describes the migration of birds, the varieties of lake life from plankton to large fish and the work life of humans tied to the water for their survival. He goes out with the fishing boats and describes the changing ecology of the lakes as the Michigan and Ontario governments try to stock various kinds of fish for game and commercial fishing. Shelton has a journalist's talent for using personal portraits as a way of examining broader issues, especially the problems of the endangered fishing industry. He tells us about Coast Guard personnel, fishermen and devoted birders. But he is also a naturalist who can describe the activities of fish and birds with passion and intelligence. These two books are great reminders, if we need them, that Michigan is a unique and special place. They are an introduction to go and explore the wonders of our Great Lakes.

Writers offer intimate views of life, work on the Great Lakes

A Sailor's Logbook
By Mark L. Thompson
(Wayne State University Press, $24.95 paperback)
Huron
By Napier Shelton
(Wayne State University Press, $34.95 hardcover)

The outline of Michigan is defined by the Great Lakes. We often forget that our heritage, prosperity and character have also been defined by the big lakes. Mark L. Thompson is a steward (or chief cook) on lake freighters. Napier Shelton is a naturalist with a cottage on Lake Huron. They offer unusually intimate views of life and work on the water. Thompson comes from Rogers City, where becoming a sailor on the great freighters is as normal as going to work for the Big 3 is downtown. Thompson, however, is not your typical sailor. He is a former college professor and administrator, state legislator and published author of lakes histories. This renaissance man has chosen the unusual life of being a cook on a freighter, a job he describes as one of the best in the world. He has a brother, cousins and boyhood friends who also work the lakes. He says it pays well, if you don't mind being cooped up on a boat for seven or eight months with brief stops in port cities where sailors "go up the street" while cargo is unloaded. Thompson's book is a logbook following day-by-day activities during the 1996 freighter season on the Great Lakes. During the season Thompson served on four boats (not ships) ranging from the 605-foot Calcite II to the 1,000-foot Edgar B. Speer. His longest stints were on the Calcite II. Though Thompson's book is almost too literally a diary of his work and life during the season, it is still a fascinating and colorful account of how the freighters work. Thompson fills in his daily accounts with descriptions of the different occupations, the types of raw material hauled, the life in the various port towns and the special camaraderie of sailors.

The old rough and tumble of drunken sailors wreaking havoc on port cities is a thing of the long past (apparently they stopped drinking about the same time as newspaper reporters). But the sailors lead lives different from the rest of us. They are away from home for long periods of time. They sleep in tight quarters with few luxuries. They eat in mess halls. Their work is hard and dangerous. Even being on the boats can be dangerous. Thompson describes some tremendous storms and a serious fire. Thompson describes all of this with solid knowledge and deep affection. He is particularly proud of his own work as an imaginative, conscientious cook. But he is bluntly honest about the strengths and weaknesses of his fellow sailors. His strong opinions give the book a needed dose of vinegar. The book is illustrated with black and white photos of freighters and crews.

Tattoos aren't forever with woven nylon

THE JEWELRY LADY

DENISE RODGERS

While parents are privately rejoicing the return of school days, jewelry makers and designers have been like little elves working around the clock.

They're busy creating pieces that our daughters, nieces and other young double X-chromosomes will put on their "oh-please-I-gotta-have-it" fashion list.

Cornelia Poellnitz, manager of Carimar, an accessories store for teens at Northland Mall said there is one item that's inked at the top of that "must-have" list: tattoo jewelry.

Tattoo you

"Everyone's wearing it. All the teenagers and some of their parents. In fact, I've even seen Jenny Jones wearing it on TV," she said.

If you haven't noticed tattoo jewelry yet, you probably mistook it for the genuine article: a gracefully winding tattoo around the neck, arm, or ankle of an otherwise sane-looking teen or preteen.

Hand-woven of hypoallergenic waterproof nylon, these are fun, comfortable and retail for under $5.

"They've been popular all summer, but we expect to sell even more for back to school fashions," said Poellnitz.

Barely there

Invisible wire necklaces, illusion headbands and hair jewels are other accessory-musts for the fall season.

The wire necklace looks as if a pendant is floating in air. But if you look close, you can see the microcord that holds the pendant in place. Think fishing wire with style.

"Brandy, Cher and Drew Barrymore wear them," says Poellnitz. "And Madonna wears jewels on her eyes."

Jacobson's is also showing invisible-wire cross necklaces. An 18-carat white gold double-cross necklace strung onto a barely visible microcord sells for $120. The triple-cross invisible necklace runs $140.

Scent of a teen

Velcro-backed hair jewelry by Melles, also at Jacobson's, are fun little iridescent crystals that stick anywhere on the hair - again and again. These are more popularly priced for teenagers at $14 a pack.

Not surprisingly, preteens like everything the teenagers wear. But there are some styles that appeal mostly to the younger set.

"What's really hot is makeup and scented lip gloss on a chain," said Christine LaRock of Jacobson's. "The girls like anything with powder and shimmering things."

Platinum plus

If you're heading out to Somerset, stop by Tiffany & Co. and see timeless best-sellers for back-to-school fashion. The sterling silver classics include a heart-tag bracelet and a matching beaded bracelet and necklace.

With price tags of $60 to $125, these are less novelty fad items and more of a fashion investment. White metals - silver, platinum and white gold - have been surging in popularity because of the return of platinum as a standard in precious metal.

Platinum's comeback has had a trickle-down effect on the demand for other white metals, especially for Xers and Nexters.

Add a miniature backpack that Poellnitz says is fashion-must and your teen or preteen is ready to hit the books in style.

A Jewelry Lady note: In the last column, The Jewelry Lady suggested that costume jewelry lovers check out a special Web site.

The Web address was printed as "geostume.com." The proper address is "atgcostume.com." The "atg" stands for "all that glitters."

Room to move

Back-to-school fashion aimed at kids' active lifestyles

BY CARL WALDMAN
SPECIAL WRITER

The overwhelming task of back-to-school shopping is almost done for Susan Luther, a mother of three school-aged daughters.

But Luther, of Oakland Township, and other mothers might be baffled by their children's fall fashion choices.

Naturally, keeping up with children's changing style preferences is difficult for any parent. But this year, the look is undeniably active, causing some parents to wonder what their children will change into for gym class.

Luther's 12-year-old daughter Amanda is on the edge of "tweenhood," the time between age 10 and 12 when style is heavily influenced by teen magazines and peers' clothing choices.

Luther said that last week when she and her daughter went back-to-school shopping, Amanda picked out khaki bell-bottoms, three-quarter-length T-shirts, jeans with flares, little clips to wear in her hair and Dr.

Martens shoes.

"Trying to keep up with her is a science," she said. "12-year-olds' tastes can change like the wind."

But Amanda's choices are right on track with hip back-to-school fashion.

The look is active and, for girls, the name of the game is mixing and matching.

That means pairing T-shirts embellished with embroidered hearts or stars with flare jeans and cargo pants. T-shirts, worn alone or layered, should probably be considered a back-to-school wardrobe staple.

Strong choices are T-shirts with hoods, those made of fabric with printed graphics and solid shirts with chest stripes or funky logos.

Remember, bottoms are undeniably flared.

When the weather cools down, vests will serve as both a funky and functional alternative to standard outer wear.

Watch for vests in fleece, leather and puffy, quilted nylon. Colors will range, but look for silver and softer shades, like baby blue. Mixing soft colors with bold, sporty apparel is an excellent way to capture the spirit of the active style.

There is no doubt that boys, too, will seek to have an athletic look in coming months. To obtain the look, mix nylon track pants and jersey crewnecks embellished by uniform numbers or contrasting, sporty arm stripes.

Also, details like bungee cords and drawstrings at the waist are important for boys.

Novelty in the form of butterflies and other embellishments is important to younger school-aged children, said Susan Brockmann, owner of Just Kids Outfitters in downtown Rochester.

"Kids are picking out their clothes at an earlier age now, so details like hearts and dinosaurs need to be there to draw a kid's attention," she said.

The active look, however, is just as popular with this age group, said Brockmann. "We have been selling many separates for back to school, as most kids of all ages want a comfortable, active look this year," she said.

Since most mothers like to put together three to four outfits for every five to six pieces they buy, Brockmann recommends purchasing a sweater, sweatshirt, long-sleeved T-shirt and two bottoms that mix and match.

Also, to meet your children's desire for trendy clothing, try mixing better pieces, like woven sweaters and pricey cargo pants, with less expensive pieces from Old Navy or Target.

"Kids lives are so diverse. They want to be dressed like a Woodstock attendee one day, yet need to be outfitted for brunch the next," said Susan Beier, owner of newly opened Annie Dauphinee children's boutique in downtown Birmingham.

"Our approach is to cover kids' varied needs and to be a vehicle for moms to find what they want. Kids do not have to be dressed in the most expensive clothes, but they need to feel good," said Beier.

Taking cues from her own children's combination of comfort and style, Beier has filled her 1,300-square-foot store with a mix of American, European and French-Canadian fashions.

"Both the European and American lines are showing the active-inspired looks," says Beier. "It is, simply, what the kids want."

With heart: Jenna Guntmacher of West Bloomfield wears a three-quarter sleeve shirt with heart detail, $19, and cargo flare pants, $36, both by Tractor at Guys N' Gals in West Bloomfield.

Details: Sarah Bauman of Livonia wears Bu and the Duck's woven striped sweater, $100, and coordinating striped pants, $28, both at Annie Dauphinee in Birmingham. Velcro-strap navy Oxford by Dr. Martens, $60, and grey flannel loafer by Candies, $39, both at Hansel N' Gretel in Birmingham.

Stanley J. Winkelman, a prominent civic leader who brought affordable fashions to career women as chairman of Winkelman's stores, died Thursday at age 76 in his Bloomfield Hills home.

He had been battling health problems, but his cardiac arrest was unexpected, according to his wife Margaret "Peggy" Winkelman.

"I was with him and he died peacefully," she said.

"He was the most remarkable man. We had 56 rich beautiful years together."

Indeed, the life-long love affair he had with his wife was no secret.

"It was obvious that she adored him and he adored her," said Bloomfield Hills artist Patricia Hill Burnett, who saw Winkelman a week ago at lunch at the Franklin Hills Country Club. "He's one of the finest gentlemen I've ever known."

BB&amp;B raffles its wares at new Novi store

BY ALICE RHEIN
STAFF WRITER

Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi is shining a little brighter this month since it welcomed Bailey Banks & Biddle jewelry store to its upper level concourse next to Hudson's.

BB&B has three stores in Michigan including one at the Somerset Collection in Troy, downtown Birmingham and Lansing.

The decision to open a fourth store in Michigan wasn't too difficult, according to Jan Roberts, public relations director for the Texas-based jeweler.

"The Somerset store is quite a distance from Twelve Oaks, especially in your traffic. We feel with the new store we are serving a whole different part of the community," she said.

The jeweler, which was founded in 1832 in Philadelphia by Joseph Bailey and Andrew Kitchen, is known for its classic, traditional jewelry, and luxurious dark wood exterior.

Swiss watches, gemstones set in platinum and Mikimoto cultured pearls are some of the store's exclusive offerings.

"Obviously we are very pleased to be part of this market. Our goal is to be the best place for classic, timeless jewelry," said Roberts.

With 107 stores nationwide, BB&B is a division of the Zale Corp., which topped $1.32 billion sales last year, according to the New York Stock Exchange.

For the Twelve Oaks store grand opening, the company is sponsoring a raffle to benefit the Michigan Horticulture Society.

For $10 a ticket or 3 for $25, participants can enter to win four exclusive jewelry items, including a 1-carat diamond solitaire ring, a 2-carat white gold sapphire and diamond "Lady Di" necklace designed by Clyde Duneier, an 18-inch strand of Mikimoto cultured pearls and a man's Omega watch.

Winkelman from page C6

Sault Ste. Marie where his father, Leon, ran a women's clothing store. The family moved to Detroit in 1928 where a young Stanley scrubbed floors and did odd jobs in the first store on Fort Street.

In 1943, he graduated from the University of Michigan with a degree in chemistry and worked as a research chemist in California. During World War II, Winkelman served as a naval officer. After the war, he joined the company that his father and uncle, Isadore, founded. By 1976, he was its chairman and CEO.

Winkelman's stores had wide appeal to women looking for stylish, affordable apparel. "He brought the whole panache of importing fashions. Winkelman's came to be known for fashion at moderate prices," said Al Cohen, who worked with Winkelman for 35 years as the company's senior officer.

At its peak, the chain had 150 stores. Winkelman retired in 1984, having sold the company to Petrie Retail Inc. the previous year. After unsuccessful attempts to revive the retail store, Petrie closed its last Winkelman's in 1998.

The Winkelmans savored all the cultural arts in Detroit and traveled extensively. For years, Winkelman covered the European fashion scene for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and wrote a column entitled "Euro Fashions."

John Reddy, retired "Birmingham Eccentric" publisher, said Winkelman understood the elements of fashion that had appeal for Midwestern women, but it was his contributions to the community that will long be his legacy.

"Stanley was a man of vast and varied interests. He made quite an impact in the city," Reddy said.

Winkelman virtually immersed himself in community affairs. He served as president of the Metropolitan Affairs Corp. and was a board member of the Jewish Welfare Federation, the Jewish Home for the Aged, the Detroit Economic Growth Corp., Detroit Renaissance and the Economic Alliance for Michigan, in addition to many others.

During the 1967 Detroit riots, Winkelman was pivotal in bringing together the business and labor communities and in urging store owners not to flee to the suburbs.

"He felt it his obligation to do the best he could for everyone for his family, for the city, for the state and for me. He had tremendous energy," said Peggy.

Fred Marx, president of Farmington Hills-based Marx Layne & Co. and a longtime friend of Winkelman said, "His family always came first, but I can't remember anything that he wasn't interested in. He was a forerunner in so many Detroit neighborhood opportunities. When you say 'Stanley' in town, it meant Stanley Winkelman."

In addition to his wife, Peggy, and two brothers, Jack and Fred, he is survived by three children, Andra Soble, Margi Epstein and Roger Winkelman, seven grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Funeral services will take place at 11 a.m. today at Temple Beth El, 7400 Telegraph Road, Bloomfield Township.

Couple has fond memories of honeymoon in England

BY PAM HOUGHTON
SPECIAL WRITER

England - narrow roads, bad directions, roundabouts and lots of green, green grass - yes, we went there on our honeymoon. Loved it. Want to go back.

My husband, Tim, and I flew British Airways and became

Honeymooners:
Tim and Pam Houghton of Troy as they looked seven years ago.

us after our meals were in fact "sweets."

As we stood in line to get our rental car after landing at Heathrow Airport - wind and rain ripping through our hair and jackets - I remember thinking we weren't there for the weather.

No, we were there for history, the legacy of kings and queens, and the famous English countryside.

Mistakenly, we'd actually planned our itinerary ahead of time - where we were going to stay each night of our trip. As our travels progressed, we realized it would have been perfectly reasonable to wing it - there were plenty of bed and breakfast inns to go 'round.

We were supposed to drive all the way to the Cotswolds to spend the night in a B&B our travel agent had booked for us. But we were so tired from the flight and the time difference that we needed immediate rest before we figured out how to drive the car, steering wheel and transmission positioned on the wrong side of the road. For the immediate moment, we weren't terribly particular about where we stayed, we just wanted a bed to crash in.

Roundabout

We found a hotel near the airport (it wasn't in the greatest neighborhood in the world) and did the horizontal thing for few hours (that means strictly sleeping and nothing else) before we practiced our driving - into London.

We're not necessarily brave souls at heart - in retrospect, we were naive tourists who had no idea how grueling driving could be in a foreign country so dependent on roundabout intersections.

We managed to make it into the heart of London. We parked and walked around the streets of the city while the sky alternated between bleak overcast gray and then pure sunshine interrupted by a few puffs of clouds. The architecture was old and the weather not the least bit stable. Sunshine and rain appear almost simultaneously.

We were struck by the obvious fact that regular blokes lived and worked in these townhouses and office buildings that looked like they housed those of royal lineage.

These buildings were old and not just a quarter of a century old. No, they were probably 500 years old or better. If Henry the VIII revisited his old stomping grounds, he just might recognize them. We were accustomed to the idea that new is better; if you build it, we will come. But these people take great care to preserve their architecture.

As we needed our way back to our Heathrow hotel, we stopped in an obscure London neighborhood for a meal. I'm not sure what made us select a restaurant with a country-western motif, but after listening to Garth Brooks over the sound system and ordering a side of Texas fries with my burger, I felt like saying, "Hey, Ma, look at me. I'm in Dallas."

We would soon enough become accustomed to hearty English breakfasts (with an abundance of not-in-the-least-bit low-fat dairy products), bland battered and fried fish and chips and Shepherd's Pie.

Bath

On the second day, we drove to Bath. There's nothing like getting directions from a native Brit with a thick peanut-butter-in-their-mouth accent whose "directions" were entirely uninterpretable. Once we managed to navigate our car on the narrow roads without putting dents in our hubcaps (thank God for car insurance) we did OK.

Bath was a wealthy shopper's dream with a giant Benetton store in ancient ruins. A pair of Levis cost more than a pair in Chicago and New York combined. Again, the architecture was startling; curve-shaped stone buildings set in rows of geometric perfection.

The Cotswolds - this was the English countryside so often revered by travelers complete with charming stone cottages, solicitous proprietors, early afternoon tea by the fire on an overcast, windy day (is there any other kind?).

Stratford-Upon-Avon, home of Shakespeare: what a tiny house he lived in. Obviously, mankind has grown since then. As was typical of most towns we visited, the grass was really, really green. Must have something to do with all that rain. (My knowledge of ecological science amazes me.)

Old rocks

Salisbury - on our way to this tucked-away-by-itself little village, we stumbled upon Stonehenge. (How can one just stumble upon Stonehenge? Well, we did.) Our goal was to visit a cathedral in Salisbury, but we managed to drive right by Stonehenge.

Hey, look! Let's turn around. Which we did. Hate to say it, but it was a disappointment. The rocks (which - if you want to get technical - is really what they are) were roped off from the public. You could circle around them as the wind and rain whipped through you (weather seems to be a theme here) but you could not go past the rope. Instead, you could look at the rocks (which we did), listen to a head-phone-guided tour (which we didn't) and take note of the unfortunate graffiti that had been spray-painted on the rocks.

Once we finished ravaging the English countryside, we spent our last few days in London.

After a week of B&Bs tucked away in charming places, we checked into what we were led to believe (by that travel agent back in the states) was a luxury hotel. Luxury must have a different definition in London.

Our room had twin beds. Even though we were on our honeymoon, we could live with that. But, we couldn't live with the inoperable toilet. We asked for another room.

OK, the new room was a bit more luxurious. At least they had the forethought to push the twin beds together! And, hey, the toilet worked. What more could a couple of easygoing Americans ask for?

Swingin' London

As we had surrendered our car, we had to rely on our feet to get around. And get around we did. Hyde Park (with its gothic trees arranged eerily in perfect row after perfect row), Piccadilly Circle (where, as culturally enlightened Americans, we visited Madame Tussaud's Rock Circus Wax Museum; we have a very life-like picture of my husband standing next to the prototypical young female late '70s London punk, gazing into her eyes - yuck!) and the London theater (with audience participation yet).

My husband, a lifelong Rolling Stones fan, had to visit a cafe owned by Bill Wyman.

And so, we walked. And walked. And walked. It was far, far away. We were certainly in no fear of gaining weight from all the bacon and cream and granola and deep-fried foods we ate while on our trip. We walked off nearly every stinking calorie.

We finally got there and, well, what do you in a cafe owned by Bill Wyman but eat? And so we did as we studied the vintage photographs of Mick and the gang. We kept hoping that maybe, just maybe, Bill was on the premises... he would have been our sole celebrity sighting. But, alas, all we managed to do was buy a memorabilia T-shirt which, to this day, I wear when I work out. Makes me think of London every time.

Since my blow-dryer blew up at the beginning of the trip (and I had a converter - can't figure that one out) I was dependent on hotel provided hair drying equipment for styling. Once we got outside, however, it made no difference as the wind and rain created a whole new style for me.

And our pictures certainly show it as I am standing in front of Scotland Yard (hair whipped into a frenzy), Westminster Abbey (hair looking like a wet rat from unexpected downpour) and the Buckingham Palace (hair blown entirely eastward). The hair was immortalized in London.

Seven years and two kids later, I'm still waiting for that most opportune time to return to the great British Isles. But maybe this time we'll go when the weather's good.

Pam and Tim Houghton live in Troy.

Rutherford, the former Churchill High and Eastern Michigan University standout, pitched 4<sup>1</sup>/<sub>3</sub> no-hit innings just the day after being called up from Class A Clearwater (Fla.).

Covering from shoulder surgery, Rutherford is on a 90-pitch count.

Canton Oaks go 1st-2nd

Rocks remain solid at Best Ball

Plymouth Salem's top two golfers from last year have left but the Rocks haven't gone anywhere.

In fact, Salem's score in the John Sandmann Best Ball actually went down this year as the Rocks captured first place in the opening prep event of the local season.

Salem totaled 139 for a six-shot victory over Livonia Churchill and Livonia Stevenson on Thursday at Hilltop Golf Course in Plymouth.

A year ago, Westland John Glenn served notice it had arrived as a prep golf power with a 138-139 victory over Trenton in the John Sandmann. Salem was sixth with a 149 while Churchill and Stevenson tied for third at 144.

Hosted by the Plymouth-Canton school district, the John Sandmann pairs two golfers for a round of best ball golf. Each school fields three threesomes but only the scores from the low two pair count toward the team total.

Salem's 139 easily beat out the 145 posted by Churchill and Stevenson, which was placed third by virtue of a tie-breaker. Finishing fourth was Northville at 146.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS GOLF

Remaining team totals:

5. Trenton, 149; 6. Woodhaven, 150; 7. Westland John Glenn, 151; 8. Livonia Franklin, 151; 9. Grosse Ile, 152; 10. Ann Arbor Huron, 152; 11. Plymouth Canton, 155; 12. Ann Arbor Pioneer, 155; 13. Dearborn Edsel Ford, 156; 14. Redford Union, 158; 15. Redford Thurston, 164; 16. Dearborn Fordson, 170.

Salem overcame the loss of Eric Krueger and Adam Wilson from last year's team.

The twosome of Mark Doughty and Matt Leon combined for a 69 for the low score by a twosome, one stroke better than Mike Thackaberry and Brian Gullen of the Rocks, who had a 70. A medal for the third-place twosome went to Stevenson's Mike Byberg and Chris Thomas, who combined for a best ball 71.

Salem's third team, Ryan Nimmerguth and James McCaffery, shot a 77 which did not count in the team total.

Other Observerland school scores (only the low two counted toward the team total):

Churchill: Jeff Hunter-Brad Bescoe, 72; Kevin Kasen-Will Bashara, 73; Randall Boboige-Lance Antrobus, 80.

Stevenson: Byberg-Thomas, 71; Scott Wolfe-Matt Bartnick, 74; Brian Dery-Travis Belcher, 80.

John Glenn: Jeremy Fendeleit-Rich Fudak, 72; Matt Darnell-Jason Broderick, 79; Keith Fukuda-Ryan Villemure, 79.

Franklin: Scott Warra-Cole Muncy, 73 each; Tony Fotiu-Tim Kufel, 78; Mike Wallace-Josh Garbutt, 84.

Canton: Mike Baracy-Derek Vermeulen, 77; Nick Lariviere-John Merrick, 78; Chris Pell-Andrew Wagner, 79.

Redford Union: Cody Bartlett-Justin Root, 79; David Lee-Chris Beaman, 79; Steve Elliott-Brad Johnson, 85.

Redford Thurston: Charlie Feys-Kyle Robertson, 82; Steve Perkins-Tony Davies, 82; Sam Nagher-Eric Wilde, 93.

Madonna coach Abraham optimistic

BY BRAD EMONS
SPORTS WRITER
bemons@oe.homecomm.net

When Jerry Abraham modestly launched women's volleyball 13 years ago at Madonna University, he never envisioned it would become something special.

"Thirteen years later — you don't realize how fast it went," said Abraham, who came from Madonna from Redford Bishop Borgess High. "We didn't have much time that first year, actually we built it from an intramural level."

"It's taken a lot of work, but I think we've built it into a national program."

With the help of his longtime assistants Brian McClain and Tim DeBeliso, Abraham should reach 500 wins sometime early this fall.

In 12 seasons, Abraham has compiled an impressive record of 488-158, including three trips to the NAIA Nationals.

The Lady Crusaders are also two-time defending Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference champions.

Coming off a 44-7 season in 1998, Madonna reached nearly all of its goals with the exception of one — going to the nationals (slated this year to be played at Fresno, Calif. Pacific University).

Taylor (Ind.) University denied Madonna a trip to the NAIA Nationals last November, ending the Lady Crusaders' 21-match winning streak in the Great Lakes Region Tournament.

"Our first goal is to repeat as conference champions," Abraham said. "This year we have a different regional setup. It's just four teams instead of 12, but we still have Taylor and Bethel (Ind.), two very good teams in our region."

"We also have four new coaches in the conference and it should be a very competitive league because everybody will be gunning for us."

Starting setter Deanne Helsom, the team leader in assists (11 per game) and ace serves (79), decided last spring not to return for her senior year, while starting outside hitter Rayna Vert (team-high 528 digs) and four-year defensive specialist Jennifer Russell both graduated.

Madonna, however, returns veteran cast led by Brandy Malewski, a 5-foot-11 junior middle-hitter from Redford Thurston.

The second-team NAIA All-America and WHAC MVP led the club in total kills with 589 (3.25 per game) with a .403 attacking percentage. She also paced Madonna in total blocks with 467 (2.58 per game).

Senior Stephanie Uballo (Highland), a 6-1 left-hander who hits from the right side, will serve as a co-captain along with Malewski. Uballo ranked second in blocks and was tied with Vert for third in total kills (399).

The third veteran in the equation is 5-8 junior outside-hitter Erin Cunningham (Romeo), who finished second in total kills (478).

"One of the plusses for any volleyball team is experienced players at key positions," Abraham said. "You always need three big hitters. And with Erin, Brandy and Stephanie, we should be strong in attacking."

COLLEGE VOLLEYBALL

Malewski will take on a leadership role along with Uballo.

"We've never asked Brandy to do this before," Abraham said. "She always led by her statistics, so this is something different for her."

"Stephanie, at her position, is one of the best in the nation I feel. She's strong and powerful. She gives us a big block on the front row and the setters will be instructed to get her the ball."

"Erin is steady. She lends stability day-in and day-out."

Nicole Burns (Fort Wayne, Ind.) will mostly likely start in the middle. The 5-11 senior, who had 273 total kills, is in her second season after transferring from Coastal Carolina (S.C.).

"Nicole was bothered by a shoulder injury last year, but we hope she has a big year," Abraham said. "She's a strong defensive player and is very good at serve reception."

Another player who could start in the middle is 6-1 sophomore Donna Birkenhiser (Dearborn Edsel Ford). Meanwhile, 6-1 junior Kelly Arty-movich (Utica Ford) and 5-10 Mary Lu Hemme (Livonia Ladywood) should see considerable action as outside attackers.

"Donna has improved more than anyone since the preseason started," the Madonna coach said. "She has the ability to be an impact player as a blocker and hitter in the middle."

"Kelly played a lot last year behind Vert. She had a lot of starts and looks good. She had a nice spring."

"Hemme is one of the best defensive players and passers we have. She's ready now to compete and will bid for some front row starts. She also does a nice job on the outside."

The team's burning question mark is setter, where Abraham will use 5-7 freshman Jen Wing (Rochester Adams) and 6-0 sophomore returnee Jennie Wind (Birmingham Groves).

"Both will compete for the starting job and both bring different styles and possess different qualities," Abraham said. "We'll probably use both. I like our setters, but they don't have the experience. But I'm happy with both."

Wing was All-Region and team MVP as a setter at Adams, while Wind has

DiLaura Brothers hold seminars for equipment

Just about every pro shop operator in the metropolitan area is supplied by DiLaura Brothers in Warren.

They have bowling balls from every manufacturer in all weights and pin configurations.

This is an enormous amount of stock and supply in the fast-changing bowling industry.

They also supply the accessories that are a vital part of the bowling business.

Two weekends ago DiLaura Brothers held its annual dealer show at the Holiday Inn in Troy.

Many new items were introduced and representatives of many manufacturers were on hand, holding seminars with the pro shop people to update them on the latest products and technologies.

This knowledge enables the pro shops to serve their customers better, eliminating much of the guesswork in the science of fitting and drilling balls to attain the most effective action on the lanes.

There is a lot more to fitting than just drilling three holes for your thumb and fingers.

Modern bowling balls are made with a wide variety of coverstock material, a variety of weight blocks inside the ball and weight distribution within the ball itself.

The pro shop operator knows what these balls are all about and can make the proper drilling patterns when it comes to fitting a bowler.

Each bowler is different, so it is up to the customer to let the driller know what type of bowler you are, what kind of delivery you have and where you usually do your bowling.

There is a danger sign ahead, though, and this is the advent of merchandising on the internet, which is here to stay.

The sale of bowling balls over the internet should not be part of that expansion.

Why not? A bowling ball is not a finished product and must be taken to a skilled ball driller in order to be used. You cannot buy this service on the internet.

Internet purchases do not usually carry any warranty and it may have the incorrect pin placement for you or the wrong top weight.

In some cases the internet dealer may undercut the pro shop's price, but bear in mind that most of these sellers operate out of their garage or basement.

They have no real overhead and may be here today and gone tomorrow, leaving the purchaser holding the empty bowling bag.

Most of the guys or gals in pro shops are friendly and courteous, so it is best to get to know them better. As they get to know you, they can help you more with their extensive knowledge, applying it to your needs.

Some of the latest balls introduced at the dealer show, according to Mark Moore of DiLaura Bros.,

The Matrix from Ebonite, featuring a new cover stock called pro-reactive.

Columbia has come out with the Extreme Chaos, which has the new TEC coverstock.

Faball has introduced a new Hammer called the Syntactic Sledge Hammer, their first ball with a particle-filled outer shell.

The hottest ball from Storm is the Fire Power — and another new one will be out in a few weeks.

Brunswick has the new Danger Zone HPH and the HPD. The HPD is still three weeks from introduction. This for all the bowlers who loved the original Danger Zone, now out in a Proactive version.

AMF has the Night Hawk Menace. It is an upgrade from the original Night Hawk, which was highly successful.

Track has the TKO Contender, a radical new version of the Pro-reactive balls now coming on strong.

Every good bowler should go out and spend the next mortgage payment on some of these wonderful new balls, sure to raise the old averages. Oops!

It still takes a certain amount of skill to make a good shot regardless of how high tech the ball.

Many of the fall leagues started off in August. So if you are among those who are looking for a particular league spot to bowl in, better not wait too long. These spots may not be available later.

If you were not in touch with your regular teammates over the summer, it would be wise to contact them prior to the start of the season to be sure that they are returning.

Otherwise you may be out there trying to find a warm body to fill up an empty team spot.

Many leagues are looking for bowlers or teams to fill out rosters. Others have waiting lists of people just trying to get into the league.

The best thing is to call various bowling centers and let them tell you what they have to offer that might be of particular interest to you.

The traditional start of the new bowling season is the 63rd annual John P. Gavie Tournament, starting at 7 p.m. Monday at Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park.

This year the Press Team will be comprised of three bowlers from the Observer & Eccentric including myself, circulation manager Larry Geiger and production manager Jim Jimmerson from the O & E Livonia plant. Rick Stroble of Bowler's Digest and Duane Roose of the Detroit News.

Detroit Free Press bowling writer Matt Fiorito usually bowls with us, but he is currently on the injured reserve list.

Mark Silverstein of Farmington Hills is on standby if we need a last-minute sub.

The following night, Tuesday, Aug. 24, will be the opening of the All-Stars, also at Thunderbowl.

The new sponsor is Pepsi for the Tuesday Classic.

The Thursday All-Star Traveling Classic will have Budweiser as its sponsor. That league travels to a different area establishment each Thursday.

Matt Fiorito had a great bowling write-up in last Wednesday's Free Press.

He pointed out that for the first time in 15 years, this area added more lanes than it lost. There are three new centers opening and only one closing.

Most significant is the reopening of State Fair Bowl in Detroit. In recent years, the property that bowling centers were built on became more valuable for other uses, such as when five years ago Barnes & Noble paid Larry Sisson double the value for West Bloomfield Lanes in order to build its bookstore.

At this time, I want to remind parents of youth bowlers they should think twice before allowing their kids to go bowling with grown-ups in the adult leagues.

Once the first ball is thrown, a youth taking part in an adult league becomes ineligible for Y.A.B.A. sanctioned youth leagues.

It may also make them lose amateur status, and silly as it may seem, they may be unable to play any high school sports because of eligibility rules.

There are no scores to report this week as we make the transition from summer leagues, except for one in which Dick Krupa, bowling in the Gavie Supply Senior Trio fired a 300 game. Cannot miss that one.

There was a pro regional tournament. The 5th Annual DiLaura Bowling Supply/PBA Headquarters Senior Regional Open held at Bowl One Lanes in Troy a week ago.

Bob Chamberlain of Auburn Hills defeated Roy Buckley of New Albany, Ohio 279-247 in the opening match of the stepladder finals.

Roger Workman of Kenova, W.V. then stepped past Chamberlain in a close and hard fought match 197-192.

John Hricina of Franklin, Pa. took care of Workman, 247-200, in the semifinals. Ron Peters of Boyne City lost to Hricina in an exciting tournament final, 203-201.

In regional play, more pro bowlers have a chance to win cash and keep expenses low, as the travel is much easier than on the national tour.

There is no TV on the regionals, therefore the purses are also lower.

BOWLING & RECREATION

Metro parks offer trail exploration

Don't be fortunate to have a metro park system that has preserved some natural areas for residents to explore.

Several times along with Oakland and Wayne counties have also preserved land in its natural state. These areas provide places for families to experience the natural world.

When growing up I was fortunate that my grandfather owned 80 acres of land outside of Grosse Pointe.

During the summer I would spend two weeks with him exploring the woods, tending the garden, fishing, cooking, cleaning and learning the art of napping. I learned a great deal about the natural world and learned to feel comfortable in natural areas.

Some students that visit the nature center have never had the opportunities I had, and it shows in their questions and trepidation on the trail.

Natural areas are beautiful, but if a person is fearful while visiting the forest or field, they will not enjoy the experience.

Visiting a natural area with a naturalist, or an experienced guide, will help to ease any tension. Becoming familiar with the unknown can make any experience much more enjoyable.

On our last family vacation one of the most enjoyable things we did, and my children agreed with me, was walk through the woods in northern Michigan.

My children have been in the woods enough to feel comfortable in traversing new areas and even seeing familiar areas again. They were always on the look out for signs of wildlife.

We found several monarch caterpillars on goldenrod plants and even found a few ladybugs. We found a few more monarch caterpillars on the goldenrod plants.

It was then when we would see, as part of the environment was the thrill of discovery, no matter what it was.

Walking the trails in natural areas around the city can provide the same kind of enjoyment. Spotting the first turtle basking, a hawk on a telephone pole, a molted feather on the ground, these simple things can be exciting if you search and find them.

Even if you don't find something you were searching for, while you search its inevitable that you will discover other exciting things.

Just the other day I was walking with Joe Derek searching for dogbane beetles that neither of us had seen in 15-20 years.

After looking at many dog-bane plants, we found a few dogbane beetles. We found a few more dogbane beetles on the goldenrod plants.
