Township told to pay jail fees

Twelve years ago, Plymouth Township decided to withhold money charged by Wayne County for housing local prisoners in the county jail. Last week, the Michigan Court of Appeals told them to pay up.

sbuck@oe.hometown.com

The Michigan Court of Appeals ruled last week that Plymouth Township must pay the county about $70,000 it withheld over the last 12 years for the housing and feeding of local prisoners in the county jail, but that doesn't necessarily mean the case is over.

Township officials have vowed to continue to look at their options before making any final decisions. The township believes that a 1-mill countywide tax used to pay for a county jail should also have covered the daily cost of housing township offenders.

Wayne County believes otherwise and sued, while continuing to charge the communities extra fees.

"Because this is litigation, we will meet to discuss this in closed session," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy. "We've fought this since 1988. We have a time limit to decide if we want to take this case further." She was uncertain on the time necessary for a response.

Keen McCarthy says that current board members have supported the township's position through the years. "They have voted to proceed with every step," she said.

Only board trustee Ron Griffith was on the board when the township started refusing to pay the costs for jail services.

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano said that he understands the township's point of view. "I'm very sympathetic, but one of our major concerns is that there is a court order," Ficano said. "They have the right to exercise their rights. I understand their frustration."

There's a cap on the amount of prisoners that can be held. "There's a limited amount of space," Ficano said.

Group home gives disabled a chance to make their own way

The residents of Plymouth Opportunity House take pride in independent living as they strive to improve their daily life and work skills.

The group home for the developmentally disabled, which opened in 1975 on Wing and Deer Streets in Plymouth, is sometimes called the "Brady Bunch home" because of its large size.

"Plymouth Opportunity House was our very first home," said Denise King, a Plymouth resident and executive director of the Livonia-based Community Opportunity Center. The center serves homes in Plymouth, Livonia, Redford, Westland and Garden City.

"We have always had 16 people living in Plymouth," King said. "We have a lengthy waiting list of 10-15 years to get into one of our homes. It's licensed through the Family Independence Agency. It started out with a work setting, employing people. The corporation started out in 1965."

A 35th anniversary party is scheduled for May 4 at Hawthorne Valley Country Club in Westland.

An organizational goal is to have 100 "community friends" who could socialize with the 82 residents for social and enrichment activities, King said. "This way, everybody would have somebody," she said. "We started reaching out to different churches. People find it real enjoyable. There's about 15 'friends.'"

People must be at least 18 to live in the homes.

Most employers would love Gary Chmielewski's work habits.

Chmielewski, a bagger at the Farmer Jack store on Five Mile in Livonia, comes to work early and sometimes forgets to pick up his paycheck.

"I'm good, yeah," laughs Chmielewski, who has worked for other Farmer Jack stores. He started out working at the former Farmer Jack on Main Street in Plymouth in 1988.

Chmielewski, 40, who is developmentally disabled, was one of the first residents at Plymouth Opportunity House when it opened in 1975. He lives with seven other men and eight women in the group home.

This is the 35th anniversary of the Community Opportunity Center, the parent organization of Opportunity House, said Denise King, executive director. The homes work with developmentally disabled adults who are at least 18 years old. "It started with a work program in Livonia," King said.

Chmielewski is quiet.

"Gary is a good guy," said store manager Joe Mayher. "He is always here on time. We treat him like everybody else. He works a bagger's schedule, bags groceries and retrieves carts for customers. The highlight of his day, I think, is when I say 'good morning' to him. He likes to have people acknowledge that he is here. He likes to laugh a lot. He's a very nice guy. He likes to join in conversations with customers, agreeing with them. He takes off on that and laughs with them. He's not worried about the money."

Board settles on name for new school

Dodson bids under budget, A4

Amid cat calls and shouting, the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Tuesday night voted 5-2 to name the third high school at the educational park Plymouth High School.

Before the vote, the crowd at Isbister Elementary cheered when board members Steve Guile and Roland Thomas announced they would vote against the measure. After the vote, about a dozen parents and students shouted and walked out of the meeting, disgusted that "upon the opening of Plymouth High School, the existing high school names will have the 'Plymouth' stricken from them. So, Plymouth Canton High School will be Canton High School and Plymouth Salem High School will be Salem High School."

"It's our history. The name Plymouth unites those two schools," said Marguerite Haar of Canton. "The letter jackets seen all over our community will have to be changed. Canton will have a 'C', Salem will have an 'S', and who will get to have the 'P' these kids have been wearing for 30 years? The brand new kids. There will be a lot of dissension."

Museum hopes to fund expansion

BY TONY BRUSCATO

The Plymouth Historical Museum has begun a fund drive designed to pay for the operating expenses of an 8,500-square-foot addition to the building constructed 25 years ago.

A letter sent to Plymouth Historical Society members and visitors to the museum asks "all Museum lovers, members and friends to help us fund the Museum into the 21st century by making a contribution to the Plymouth Historical Society Trust."

Margaret Dunning, who paid for the current building at Main and Church streets, is donating more than $1 million to build the addition to the museum. However, as with the original building, Dunning wants the Plymouth Historical Society to raise money for the trust fund to keep the museum operational.

The current endowment is $500,000, and museum Director Beth Stewart is hoping the fund drive will push that past the million dollar mark.

"We're looking to increase our trust fund over the next four years to over a million dollars," said Stewart. "We currently received approximately $26,000 a year from the endowment, which means a million dollars will almost double that amount for our expenses."

The museum's annual budget is $85,000, which is expected to increase

Judge puts off Islam hearing

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Patricia Preslard resumed the April 7 preliminary examination of Plymouth resident Azizul Islam until May 8.

Fresard ordered the adjournment after defense attorney Michael Schwartz requested more time to supplement his briefs. Fresard agreed to the request, saying she also needed more time to better familiarize herself with the case's 580-page transcript.

Islam, 50, has been charged with first degree murder and mutilation of a body in the death of his estranged wife, Tracy, who disappeared December 19, 1999. On Dec. 22, police found her arms and legs in a Dumpster behind an A&W restaurant in Dearborn. Several days later her torso was discovered in a field in northern Ohio.

Police arrested and charged Islam in early January.

Despite the charges against his client, Schwartz does not believe the county has a solid case. Based on what he feels is insufficient evidence, he will move for a dismissal at the May 8 hearing.

"There simply is no evidence that Azizul killed or intended to kill his wife," Schwartz said. "Also, the prosecutors have no testimony or evidence he, or anybody else, mutilated the body. They don't even know the cause of death."

"Quite honestly, I think the judge is going to grant my motion. Based on the lack of evidence, she will have to."

However, Michael Lehto, an assistant prosecuting attorney for the county, believes there is enough evidence to move forward in the case and Schwartz's motion will be a typical defense maneuver. He expects Fresard to set a trial date at the hearing.

SPOTLIGHT ON YOUR PET Veterinary Notes
by Elizabeth Routson, D.V.M.

ALLERGIC TO YOUR PET?
Many new pet owners sadly discover they are allergic to the furry friend they just brought home. Cat allergies seem to be the most common problem. Proteins from a pet's urine, saliva, or dander (dead skin flakes) trigger reactions in allergic individuals. In cats, the biggest problem is the saliva protein, which gets mixed up in house dust. Cat allergies can produce serious reactions, particularly asthmatic reactions, in sensitive people. The most sensitive people will develop allergic symptoms within five to 15 minutes after exposure to the offending animal. Some people suffer a more delayed reaction. The best treatment for a pet allergy is to minimize contact with the animal, keeping it outside as much as possible.

To learn more about how to maintain a healthy environment for both pets and their owners, please contact PARKWAY VETERINARY CLINIC. Bring your cat or dog here for a complete health check-up and preventative care, such as inoculations, neutering and spaying. Visit either of our two locations at 41395 Wilcox Rd. in Plymouth, tel. 734-453-2577, or 5750 Lilley Rd. in Canton, tel. 734-981-4400, open six days a week.

P.S. Dogs, cats, guinea pigs, rabbits, and smaller rodents create the most allergens, while reptiles and fish rarely trigger immune reactions.

Concerts turn spotlight on downtown

BY TONY BRUSCATO

tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

From Memorial Day to Labor Day, music will again be in the spotlight in downtown Plymouth every Friday night during the summer.

It's called Downtown Fridays Music in the Park, Friday night concerts planned by the Downtown Development Authority featuring blues, jazz and rock bands.

"For a lot of people this is what they do on Friday night," said Melanie Purcell, the executive director of the DDA. "They like to listen to the music, browse the stores and eat downtown. It's a family-oriented night out."

Purcell said because of the large crowds the event delivers, "bands are now calling us to participate. Some well-respected musicians in the Detroit music scene are willing to play much cheaper because it's the Plymouth Friday Night series."

Purcell admits much of the success goes to Fred Sanderson, owner of Plymouth Guitar, who knows most of the musicians in the area and is able to book the best of the best.

"They're fighting over each other to get these gigs," said Sanderson. "The first couple of years we'd take anybody with a guitar. But the industry has grown in both popularity and prestige."

Sanderson said most bands play on a 10-by-12 stage, before 150 patrons in a smoky bar.

"But playing in front of a thousand people, in an open-air setting, with a state-of-the-art stage in front of families and kids in Kellogg Park ... there's nothing that can get you more inspired to play," added Sanderson.

As a result of the popularity of the event over the past five years, this year's concerts will move from street corners to Kellogg Park.

"Last year marked a turning point for the series," said Purcell. "Concerts were held on the street corners and people could go into the businesses and still hear the music. However, it started becoming unsafe when the crowds spilled into the streets."

"Besides, when we've held the concerts in the park we get from 700 to 1,000 people," said Purcell. "When we had the concerts in front of stores on the streets the crowds dropped to between 150 and 300."

Purcell admitted that not all downtown business owners are in favor of moving the concerts to Kellogg Park.

"There is some dissension. Some business owners feel it's more important to have people walking around the stores, rather than just having people in the park," said Purcell.

"The businesses won't see a big jump in sales on Friday nights, but they will see a big jump in exposure," she said. "We've given the businesses a good reason to stay open, and the public a good reason to walk around. There are a lot of new stores in downtown Plymouth, and many of them are making a concerted effort to stay open late Friday night."

Purcell said along with the concerts, the DDA is planning additional activities around the downtown area, including jugglers, artists and musicians.

"We want to make it a mini-Friday every Friday night," said Purcell.

PLAY BALL!

Baseball and softball are among the sports that cause overuse injuries of the shoulder. Rotator cuff muscles, which hold the shoulder bones together, are not intended to function under stress with the arm above a line parallel to the ground. If the shoulder joint is subjected to continual stress with the arm in an overhead position, the rotator cuff muscles begin to stretch. As a preventive measure, baseball and softball players should strengthen their rotator cuff muscles with exercises. Small weights (below 15 pounds) should be used because heavier weights will bring the larger muscles of the shoulder into play, thereby excluding the rotator cuff muscles. Exercises include (reverse) arm curls, front lifts (palms up and down), and lateral lifts.

The residents have worked with the Plymouth Rotary Club, helping to put the boxes together for the annual chicken barbecue dinners, she said. The Rotary will do landscaping at the home April 29.

"This community has been so generous and giving," King said. "It's a real family-oriented organization. Families work together to support the organization."

Residents pitch in to get both small and large jobs done.

"They have a list of chores that change every week, whether it's morning clean-up, doing pots and pans, doing towels from the kitchen, the kitchen floor, or taking care of the cats," said Paul Nagrant, an administrator for four years at Plymouth Opportunity House.

"They get to pick which chore they want that week so everybody has one chore besides their own personal laundry and hygiene in their rooms."

Nagrant is appreciative of how the home and the community have blended together. "I'd like to thank the community for being as open and receptive as they have been to the residents here," Nagrant said. "The community has shown that they are accepting of a diversified group of people."

Some residents endeavor to move to an apartment where they can live with one other person, King said.

Those who make the move select the apartment and city they want to live in. Many live in Livonia because they are near a bus route.

Corp. Because residents are disabled they receive some money from the government through the Social Security Administration. Most of their money goes into room and board.

They keep some for personal allowance, she said.

The state of Michigan determines what rate residential providers charge residents. "Right now, it is $625.50 a month and that covers everything - food, utilities, housing, staffing, and anything they need," she said.

Residents know the value of a dollar and save their money. Some residents recently returned from a trip to Hawaii after saving their money for a long time, King said.

The majority of funding for the homes comes from the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Agency, she said. A small amount of such funding goes into the Plymouth Opportunity House. The residents contribute with their Social Security entitlements. Groups like the Plymouth Community United Way, the Plymouth Rotary and the Knights of Columbus are loyal contributors.

King's personal goal is for every resident to eventually have his own bedroom. "We'd like to give people a choice to live by themselves," she said.

"They're nice," Chmielewski says of his customers.

Co-workers also speak highly of him.

"He will do whatever you tell him," said Olga Saltina of Plymouth.

"He comes in and does the job you tell him to do, no problem," said Gary Pollica, a Livonia resident.

To be eligible for Medicaid, Gary can't have more than $2,000 in his savings account, King said. "He uses the rest for personal spending," she said. "He likes clothes, movies, and he just came back from Hawaii. Gary is very social. Between work and his entitlement every year Gary is able to take a nice trip."

Music to his ears

While Chmielewski enjoys his job and his customers, fellow resident Raymond Wells has a more musical ambition. He wants to play at the future piano bar on Main Street.

Nagrant said Wells, who loves classical music, would have to learn popular tunes to satisfy a bar audience.

the home's organ, also extends an offer to teach musical technique to a visitor. Wells hopes he could alternate classical music with modern songs for a bar crowd or other establishment.

"I started playing the piano when I was 14," Wells said. "I had a previous teacher but he died so my lessons were cut short. I pretty well had to teach myself to a degree. I was playing music of Beethoven by the time I was 22. I have played for the house. Mainly I play at Christmas time. I like to entertain people. Right now I'm working at Bill Knapp's but I would love to get a job as a musician, either teaching or entertaining."

Wells is a busboy during lunchtime at the Bill Knapp Restaurant on Ann Arbor Road and Haggerty. "You hope and pray you don't break any dishes," Wells said. "If I spill something, I say, 'please be careful because I don't want you to slip and fall.' Safety is very important."

Wells wants to eventually get his own apartment. "Basically, I would have to cover a range of economical and housecleaning skills," Wells said.

Wells is so involved with his music that it takes precedence and he sometimes forgets he has something on the stove, Nagrant said. He needs to work on extra skills and criteria that would allow him to move to more independent living.

"It's not like I don't think that the chores in the house are important," Wells said. "But the time I spend with the piano is quality time for me."

Challenger drops out of race

Kenneth D. Currie, a retired banker who now does financial consulting, announced Monday he is withdrawing from the race against Plymouth Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy in this year's election because of concerns for his health.

Keen McCarthy has held the position for two terms. Currie would have been seeking his first elected position.

"I consulted with my cardiologist, who said that we need to fix some things up," Currie said.

Though Currie had not filed nominating petitions, he announced in February he would challenge Keen McCarthy.

"I'm sorry to hear that he has health problems," Keen McCarthy said.

Currie's withdrawal doesn't mean he will automatically throw his support to Keen McCarthy. "I will wait to see who files," Currie said.

Plymouth Township Clerk Marilyn Massengill said Monday no township resident has yet filed nominating petitions.

The filing deadline for local elections is May 16.

The township needs work on its planning process, Currie said. "It's the whole planning process, it's not just the issues."

He believes the township staff needs to be kept better informed and given better direction so that the employees have the ability to carry out the mandates, Currie said. He declined further explanation.

"The supervisor is the CEO of the township, who issues the directives and sets the agenda," he said.

Struggling Economic Club folds; Foundation faces new attackers

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

The Plymouth Economic Club is out of business. One day before Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer was to speak at the club's Wednesday luncheon, regular attendees received a note in the mail indicating the Economic Club "will no longer serve the Plymouth community."

Meanwhile, State Rep. Jerry Law (R-Plymouth) and State Sen. Thaddeus McCotter (R-Livonia) have written a letter to Granholm, asking the state's top law enforcement officer to investigate problems surrounding the Plymouth Community Foundation.

"As you well know, charitable contributions are a very important funding component for community foundations and other organizations. The donation of funds for the important work carried out by these worthwhile groups must be encouraged," the letter said. "Any hint of a scandal or even an appearance of impropriety can taint an organization. This, in turn, can cause a negative reaction by individuals within that community, not only toward a specific organization, but to other organizations as well, resulting in a decrease in charitable giving... We contend this investigation will go a long way toward allaying any fears about the appropriations of any actions taken by this group or individuals within the group."

The notice about the demise of the Economic Club, sent out by Bill Joyner, the executive director of the Plymouth Community Foundation, of which the Economic Club is a part, stated "As a result of a series of misleading and false statements that defamed a legitimate charitable organization, our reservations for current and future luncheons has reached an all-time low. No future luncheons will be scheduled."

Joyner was referring to recent stories about the Plymouth Community Foundation, detailing a rift between former board members and Joyner, resulting in speculation concerning the spending of foundation money. As a result of the controversy, reservations for the Economic Club declined.

"It's a great program, but we're not getting the reservations, which have dropped to about 50," Joyner told the Observer. "Rather than fight a losing cause, we'll continue with other successful projects."

In his letter, Joyner said, "For those that have luncheons available on your season ticket purchase we will be working out refunds over the next 30 days."

substantially with the construction of the addition. Along with the interest from the endowment, money for the budget comes from fund-raising, membership dues, donations, plus admission to the museum and education programs.

The Plymouth Historical Society had originally planned for a 9,440-square-foot addition. However, that was cut by about 1,000 square feet when a neighbor complained the addition was too close to the property line and the museum failed to get a variance.

Stewart said once the money is raised, a permanent display area for the Weldon Petz Abraham Lincoln Collection will be a top priority.

"Since the community was so supportive in acquiring the Lincoln collection, we want to make a permanent home for it, a vapor-lock room with the latest in climate control," said Stewart. The society raised $130,000 for the Lincoln display.

Second in line will be additional space for a new library and archives area. Other improvements will include a new ground-floor entrance with an elevator off Church Street, a research center, storage and a fire suppression system.

Dave Reitzel, who designed the current 15,000-square-foot Margaret Dunning Building which houses the Plymouth Historical Museum, also designed the addition.

Elementary bids under budget

BY KURT KUBAN
STAFF WRITER

At its Tuesday meeting, the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education awarded the majority of the bids for the construction of Dodson Elementary School.

With the bids totaling $7.697 million, board members were pleased the cost of the initial bids came in about $1.38 million under original estimates.

The accepted bids were culled from the 175 the district received at a public bid opening held March 30 at the E.J. McClendon Educational Center.

"We received a tremendous turnout during the bidding process," said Bill McCarthy of McS/EV, the architectural firm that designed and is managing the Dodson project. "We were quite enamored with the number of bids, especially on some of the major categories. We really had a strong response."

The district has already applied for a series of permits for such projects as storm and sewer, water, soil erosion and right of way with the appropriate governmental agencies. If all are approved, construction of the school is to begin the week of May 8.

The balance of the contracts, with the exception of those concerning the school's roofing, will be awarded at the May 9 board meeting.

After Tuesday's meeting, school officials were excited about the outcome of the first round of bids.

"The fact that these bids are under budget is an enormous piece of good news," said Kathleen Booher, the district's superintendent.

Board president Susan Davis agreed.

"I think this is a great development," she said. "It's a great feeling anytime you are able to get something for less than you thought you would have to pay."

Board member Steve Guile

wants to ease fears that the low cost will mean less quality.

"I think we are going to see a good facility built," he said. "With the number of bids we received, it is obvious that there are a lot of contractors looking for work."

Dodson is set to open in September 2002.

Also at the meeting, the board gave a consensus approval for staff to move forward on Phase II of the construction of the district's new high school. Representatives from McS/EV and French Associates Inc. presented the finalized design and development report to the board.

The report includes site and floor plans and budgetary costs. It also addresses board concerns such as traffic safety.

"This is very exciting," Booher said. "Building a high school is a massive project. It is not something that happens every day. Completing the design development report is one of the most important steps in a project of this magnitude."

Cost estimates in the report were $121,230 over budget, but, according to officials, in "the right ballpark."

Cops warn of Census phonies

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

Plymouth police are warning city residents, especially seniors, about giving private information to bogus census workers as canvassing by the Census Bureau continues.

"Recently a woman received a call at 11:45 p.m. from a man who said her census form hadn't been received," said Officer Jamie Grabowski. "She thought it was awkward that he was asking personal questions about her family, so she just hung up on him."

"I called the Census Bureau the next day and was told they were not making phone calls, and that they wouldn't make them that late," said Grabowski.

While the Census Bureau says it may make some telephone calls, most of the canvassing will involve enumerators working door-to-door to get information from those who didn't send in the census forms.

"If people are concerned or suspicious, don't be afraid to give us a call to help verify who they are."

Jamie Grabowski
—Plymouth police officer

"If people are concerned or suspicious, don't be afraid to give us a call to help verify who they are," added Grabowski, who notes enumerators will be wearing red, white and blue colored credentials.

If you get a telephone call and are suspicious of the caller, Grabowski suggests telling the person to send an enumerator to the house. Another suggestion would be to get a telephone number and call back to verify the caller is from the Census Bureau.

Questions concerning the Census Bureau can be directed to the regional census center in Oak Park. The telephone number is (248) 968-2100.

years," said Nick Tochman, 17, of Plymouth Township, who attends Salem High School. "The word Plymouth ties the two communities together."

In an effort to get the community involved in the name-changing process, the resolution passed by trustees "requests the administration form a stakeholder committee to develop strategies and timelines for easing the name transition at the current two high schools."

"What makes the community at the school is not the name of the school," said Superintendent Kathleen Booher. "And, yet it's important to proceed carefully, decide what needs to be altered physically, and preserve the history of the school because people do value their tradition and history."

While the board has been met by opposition to the change from district residents at its last few meetings, it appears it was the case of too little, too late.

"For every response we got for a particular name for the new high school, we got two or three that said it was simple, call them Plymouth, Canton and Salem," said Givens. "We are responding to the groundswell ... and we had many, many responses which asked for this than any other name."

"One of the things we talk about in this district is equity, and with the names of these schools Plymouth, Salem and Canton that we'll continue that movement toward equity," said Trustee Mark Slavens.

Both Thomas and Guile have held their ground during the entire school naming process.

"I am going to oppose this motion because I believe we have a rich tradition in this community," said Thomas before the vote. "We need to change the things that need to be changed and respect those things that we've established with tradition."

"I supported the name Plymouth Superior a long time ago and I still think that's the way to go," said board member Steve Guile.

The mascot names for the existing high schools ... Canton Chiefs and Salem Rocks ... will remain the same. The new Plymouth High School, which is scheduled to open for the 2002-2003 school year, will develop its own mascot.

Starfish hoped for partnership, not controversy

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER
smason@oe.homecomm.net

When Starfish Family Services last year bid on providing the Head Start program for out-Wayne County, its chief executive officer envisioned a partnership between the agency and school districts to serve at-risk children — not the controversy that has been swirling around the program for several months.

"As a community-based agency, we felt this would be a good partnership with the schools. We felt we would monitor and coordinate the program while they operated it," Ouida Cash said. "We thought it would be a two- to three-year evolutionary change. We felt we'd be the facilitator."

Starfish is one of four delegates selected by Wayne County to provide Head Start to more than 3,700 children in 25 communities outside of Detroit, but the transition from a school-based to a community-based program isn't sitting well with some parents and employees who have had to interview with the agency for jobs they formerly held with the school districts.

It's a controversy that is "wrecked by misinformation," and put the agency in the difficult spot of wanting to reassure parents about the program, but having to wait until it has definitive answers on where the programs will be offered in the different communities.

As of last week, Starfish was responsible for the Head Start programs for most of Inkster, Livonia, Crestwood, Plymouth-Canton and Wayne-Westland.

Livonia Public Schools has declined to let the program stay in the schools, so the agency is trying to find a community center or church to house it. The agency is still talking to officials in the Wayne-Westland Community Schools, while Plymouth-Canton let them know early on there is no room.

"I had a Livonia parent ask where Head Start was going to go and we told her we're looking at churches and community centers, but until we can say it will be at Point A, we can't give her an answer," said Cash. "A lot of families want information we don't have, and our experience has been that we can't give an answer before we have an answer. We feel very badly about this."

Some straight talk

To make sure the families, Head Start staff, districts and school administrators have "accurate and up-to-date information on the transition," Starfish is now publishing a monthly newsletter, Straight Talk.

Its first edition explained the major changes, answered questions about those changes and introduced readers to 18 programs Starfish offers for children and families. The second newsletter will address Head Start enrollment, finding classroom space and additional changes in the county's Head Start structure.

"We have started from the premise that good people of good faith can work things out," she said. "We have a good reputation. We will continue to provide Straight Talk and provide a good partnership."

The change dates back to 1998 when Wayne County Regional Education Service Agency announced it would no longer run the Head Start program after 28 years. In a competitive bidding process, the Head Start regional office last September selected Wayne County to take over the contract.

At first, the county selected three community-based agencies — Starfish, Downriver Guidance Clinic and Wayne Metropolitan Community Services — but added the YWCA of Western Wayne County after parents and Head Start employees in Redford objected to the change.

Ouida Cash

According to Cash, the move from the schools to the agency meant employees had to be terminated, interviewed and hired for their old jobs. While that is unsettling for the workers, it is a Head Start requirement.

"We were bringing information from the grantee that the people didn't want to hear," Cash said. "Schools had to hear they must change. We've taken on some really big challenges and have people screaming at us. We can't let that happen, we can't let them put this agency at risk."

"We have never had a bad relationship with the community. We closed a group home and gave up that contract because we couldn't be good partners with the community. We gave up our foster parent and adoption parent program because we felt we could not be good partners with our families."

A national trend

The change, according to Cash, is consistent with the movement of Head Start nationally from a program based in the schools to one based in community agencies that work with the schools. Eighty-five percent of the Head Start programs in the country are community-based, and RESA was one of only two county educational agencies to serve as a Head Start grantee, Cash said.

Head Start isn't meant to be a school-based preschool program for at-risk children, but rather a 10-hour-a-day, 365-day-a-year program for the entire family, according to Cash.

"There's more to Head Start — there's an opportunity for families to learn and grow and move out in to the community," she said. "There are 15-20 support systems with Head Start that we've been doing for years."

To meet its commitment to Head Start, Starfish has applied for four major federal grants through the county to "bring new resources to our children and tell the communities and schools that this will be positive for them as well."

"It may help for families to see that community-based is not so bad," Cash added. "The schools, the grantee and Starfish need to say what they can do to make this happen. There will be no winners if we don't work together."

Bob Thomas: Westland mayor

Westland mayor plans run for county board

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER
dclem@oe.homecomm.net

Westland Mayor Robert Thomas confirmed Monday that he will challenge veteran Wayne County Commissioner Kay Beard in the Aug. 12 Democratic primary.

Thomas, in his 11th year as mayor, will leave his job one year early if he survives the primary and topples Beard's 22-year reign as county commissioner in the Nov. 7 election.

Thomas would be replaced as mayor for one year by a Westland City Council-chosen appointee. Voters would elect a new mayor in November 2001.

Thomas' annual pay would plummet if he succeeds in changing jobs. His annual salary of $93,481 this year compared to a county commission salary of $58,683.

Moreover, he'd give up Westland's top elected job to become only one of 15 county commissioners.

"It's a free country. Anybody can run for anything that they wish," Beard said Tuesday. "I'm a little surprised. As mayor, he's one of one, making more money with a city car, and he's close to home."

Beard suggested that Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara may be supporting Thomas for a commission campaign, but Thomas said Monday that he hasn't received McNamara's endorsement.

Beard, the commission's vice chair, represents Westland, Garden City and Inkster.

"All through the years, I've had a lot of people take me on," Beard said. "I've had some tough ones... I have never been a rubber stamp for anybody. We'll see whether the people think I'm still using good judgment or whether they want somebody new."

Thomas, 49, had been rumored as a possible county commission candidate, but he confirmed his plans Monday after Westland resident Normie Brazier asked him about his intentions during a Westland City Council meeting.

"That rumor is true," Thomas said, adding that he is "99 percent sure" he will seek Beard's seat.

During a post-council meeting interview, Thomas said, "I'm going to run whether she runs or not."

Beard said she filed for re-election in January. She called Thomas' candidacy "puzzling."

"I've always had what I thought was a good relationship with the mayor," she said.

Concerned with issues

Thomas said several issues prompted him to entertain a commission race. He said he'd like to improve county services such as snow-plowing, grass-cutting and pothole-repairing.

Thomas also said the county and cities could work more closely to expedite major road projects, and he said he supports an airport expansion that would spur economic development and create new jobs.

Thomas said he hadn't planned to announce his candidacy for a couple of weeks, but he divulged his plans amid growing speculation.

His commission race comes after his vision for local government shifted dramatically in recent weeks.

Thomas, in his new budget, unveiled plans to cut taxes, reduce water-sewer rates and, in a decision already made, cancel a May 9 election for a 1-mill waste-disposal tax.

Thomas also announced that he has abandoned plans to build a new multimillion-dollar recreation center and city hall - projects he once touted as crucial to improving Westland's image.

The mayor said he changed his direction after realizing that citizens favor tax breaks over new buildings. Council members are supportive of his latest budget plan.

Bankes seeks re-election to board

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oc.homecomm.net

Wayne County Commissioner Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, announced Tuesday evening she is seeking re-election.

Bankes, completing her first two-year term as District 10 commissioner after 14 years as a state representative, made the announcement at a campaign kick-off supper in the VFW Post 3941 Hall on Seven Mile Road.

In seeking re-election, Bankes cited her efforts on behalf of district residents and her work on the issues of economic growth, juvenile justice and mass transit.

Bankes, who took office in January 1999, said key accomplishments included meetings with "numerous community groups and leaders" and getting county road department employees to attend neighborhood association meetings.

"Citizens in my district know they can count on me and that I am always willing to listen to them and to work hard on their behalf," she said.

Other accomplishments, she said, include her report seeking "to focus the region on solutions for mass transit," which she wrote as chairwoman of the commission's special committee on transportation.

She said she also "played a key role in helping the community achieve its goals, including expanding economic development initiatives, developing a juvenile justice plan, ensuring a complete census count and working with other regional leaders through the Tri-County Summit of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties."

Face the deficit

She said she "led the effort for Growth Works and other community agencies to work with juveniles to make the (county's) juvenile justice program more effective" and said she wants to "ensure that Wayne County faces its budget deficit without raising taxes."

Other goals, she said, include providing all Head Start children with books for home and school and "getting better representation" for the western part of the county among the strong Detroit faction.

Bankes stated that "another term will allow me to continue in these and other important initiatives as we make Wayne County a world-class place to visit, live and work."

Her other commission posts include vice-chair of the commission's health and human services committee and membership on the ways and means and economic development committees.

During the dinner, Bankes introduced eight community leaders who are her legislative aides - extended eyes and ears for her in her district, which covers Livonia, the Plymouths and the Northvilles.

"With five communities" and over 200,000 residents in the district, "it's real hard to be" everywhere, said Bankes.

The eight are Tony Brehler, Clara Karr, Ruth Kade and Dorothy Watters, all of Livonia; George and Josie Kazmierczak of Plymouth Township and Dorothy Tilney and Carol Gibson of Northville Township.

Between them, they have 45 grandchildren and 33 great-grandchildren.

Bankes said she "became friends" with each over the years: "They work hard in their communities and everybody likes them."

All but Gibson, who is under contract to Bankes, are volunteers. Bankes provides each with a badge and business cards and reimburses them from her campaign fund for representing her at functions, which can range from community dinners and celebrations to government meetings.

"The process is, they live their lives and if they go to something that's interesting" to her politically, "they let me know," she said.

WWII veteran

Brehler, a World War II veteran and active Scout leader, founded the letter-writing group "The Grumpies," which includes as honorary members actor Jack Lemmon and Michigan Attorney General Jennifer Granholm.

Karr served 32 years in Livonia city government and has led various community groups; Kade is a longtime worker in the Civic Center Seniors office and Watters, a past president of Livonia Town Club, is director of Livonia Goodfellows.

George Kazmierczak led the St. Agatha Church Boy Scouts for many years while Josie caters a monthly dinner for the Plymouth Senior Center.

Deborah Wanamaker, former assistant manager of Livonia Mall, continues as Bankes' full-time chief of staff and office manager.

In your Easter bonnet at Greenfield Village

Who dreamed up the famous Easter Parade in New York City? Why, milliners - or hat makers - of course. Establishments like the Cohen Millinery Shop, originally located in Detroit and moved to Greenfield Village in 1935, benefited greatly from this commercial trend.

According to folklore, just after the Civil War, hat manufacturers developed the idea to show off new products and styles by staging a large parade along Fifth Avenue in New York City. By the 1880s many small communities had followed suit, said Nancy Bryk, clothing curator at Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village in Dearborn.

However, the tradition of wearing new hats and clothes during Easter goes back farther than the period of the Civil War. "There is some indication that the pagans believed their goddess 'Eastre' preferred to be greeted in spring by revelers in new clothing. Therefore, during the Easter season or spring, we are often moved to purchase a new spring outfit because it's the right thing to do, or so our mothers said."

The new clothing would have included a hat. Not surprising since until the mid-20th century, both men and women were expected to wear appropriate head attire. As was the custom, a fashionable lady might take her hat to the Cohen Millinery Shop to have it remade in the latest fashion. From 1892 to 1902, Mrs. Cohen ran her millinery business in the shop now located in Greenfield Village. Visitors to Greenfield Village can visit the shop and talk to "Mrs. Cohen" about the hats on display.

Henry Ford Museum, Greenfield Village and the IMAX Theatre are located at 20900 Oakwood Boulevard and Village Road in Dearborn, west of the Southfield Freeway and south of Michigan Avenue.

They're open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Admission to the museum is $7.50 to $12.50, children under age 5 and members admitted free. Admission to the village is $8.50 to $13.50, children under age 5 and members admitted free. Call (313) 271-1620 for more information, or www.hfmvg.org on the Web.

Suit challenges charter schools on freedom of information

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Does the state Freedom of Information Act apply to charter schools when the operation of the school has been turned over to a private management company?

That's the question posed in a lawsuit headed to the Michigan Court of Appeals Tuesday, May 2. Okemos attorney Bill Young said he has just received notification that he is scheduled then to present oral arguments to the court in a lawsuit he filed last year on behalf of Michigan Education Association consultant Ron Bacon against the Walter French Academy in Lansing.

And it comes just after a survey has shown most charter schools in the state aren't giving out information to such requests.

In 1998, Bacon asked the academy for a list of the names of teachers and their salaries. The request was turned down because the school is operated by a private management firm, The Leona Group, which operates 21 schools in Michigan and more in Arizona.

Under Michigan's FOI law, public schools would have to release the information. Since "public school academies," so-called charter schools, receive public money from the state to pay for operations, they, too, must comply with the FOI.

Rep. Gerald Law

But when public schools contract with private sector businesses that does not make the business' records subject to the FOI. And since Walter French has contracted with Leona Group to operate the entire school, including hiring teachers and running the administration, those records are in the hands of the private sector business.

The difference, according to state Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, is that everything, the entire operation and all the public funding, is being turned over

'If it was a public school, we could see their salaries and benefits. At charter schools, the teachers actually work for the for-profit corporation and we don't see those records. Seventy to 90 percent of charter schools have private management companies.'

Rep. Gerald Law

to the management firm. Law agrees that when a government contracts a small portion of its operation to a private-sector firm, that firm's records shouldn't be made public.

"But at charter schools, all the public dollars are turned over to the private company. If it was a public school, we could see their salaries and benefits. At charter schools, the teachers actually work for the for-profit corporation and we don't see those records. Seventy to 90 percent of charter schools have private management companies," Law said.

That lack of information from charter schools run by management companies is exactly why Law has opposed expansions in the number of charter schools in the state.

Attorney Young goes a bit further in his lawsuit.

"We are arguing that they are really running a public body. The Leona Group is a public body in that it receives public money, makes decisions about how that money will be spent, including hiring and firing and setting a budget," Young said. "We felt it met all the tests for what a public body is."

Officials from the Leona Group did not respond to phone inquiries. But briefs filed by the company in the court case show its argument is that the case seeks to make public bodies out of private companies, wherever governments have privatized some functions.

But Young said the lawsuit will not likely be settled soon. The main question before the Court of Appeals is a technicality about whether the case was filed in the correct court. And once judges do get to the main issue, both sides have indicated they will take the case to the Supreme Court.

The argument over whether the FOI applies is not an unusual one. A survey, published March 26 by Booth Newspapers, showed that more than half of charter schools, 53 percent, rejected requests for information or answered only partially. By contrast, 95 percent of public schools responded to FOI requests.

Filing FOI requests for information, such as the names of teachers and their salaries, with all 176 charter schools in operation in Michigan, Booth found only 82 schools gave out the information. Ninety-four responded incompletely, were late turning over the information, or gave no information at all. Of those charter schools, 85 are operated by private management firms, Booth concluded.

By way of comparison, 87 public school districts got similar information requests, to which 83 responded with complete information.

Charter schools receive about $6,000 per student per year in funding from the state government. In return for that state money, those schools cannot charge tuition. Some 50,000 students presently attend charter schools.

Want a cracker?: "Leonard," a 26-year-old parrot, perches on the arm of Ken Kovacs.

Pet practices: Terri Bennett, owner of Specialty Pets, discusses options for transporting a dog by airplane with Jill and Brittany Smith, 10. Their dog, "Jacques," a 5-year-old Shitzu/Poodle mix, wasn't at all happy with the caged carrier idea.

Animals as much a part of owner's store as the customers she serves Rowdy, an Airedale, greets customers with his attention and a paw shake. Leonard, a blue and gold macaw, parrots his "Hello."

"Play ball," Leonard continues, systematically shredding an empty paper towel roll.
This is Specialty Pet Supplies, where owner Terri Bennett's own pets are as much a part of the business as the customers'. It's a place where Rowdy, the great-great grandson of Bennett's first Airedale, retrieves a ball for tykes and Leonard munches on a dog biscuit.

"Pets are personal," Bennett said.
The store, which has been in its present location at Ann Arbor Road and Sheldon since 1981, will move and re-open May 1 at 1449 Ann Arbor Road, a short distance down the street in the former Jerry's Bicycle building.
Bennett opened her first store in 1979 on Mill Street in Plymouth's Old Village.
"People shopping today were customers then," Bennett said. "I started out in my house in Redford Township, carrying supplies for show dogs. We showed Bouviers back then and we couldn't get any show dog equipment. We had DoggieWare parties instead of Tupperware parties."

With no pet supply stores in Northville or Plymouth, Bennett decided to set up shop. "We have done real well," Bennett said. "Most businesses have some competition."
Since then, Bennett switched to Airedale ownership because the Bouviers "were a little too intimidating for the store," she said.
The new 9,000-square-foot building will be about a thousand feet bigger, with 5,000 square feet devoted to retail products. The rest of the building will house warehouse and educational activities, Bennett said.

Bennett has put up tents in her parking lot for pet adoption of different rescue breeds such as Great Danes, Greyhounds and Airedales, as well as rescue animals from the Anti-Cruelty Association. "Now we have an area in the store where people can come, where people can adopt pets, and where people can be educated about their care," Bennett said.
Bubbles, a rescue dog Bennett adopted from the Anti-Cruelty Association, has nestled for nine years under the sales counter, secure in a doggie bed. Bubbles

L. Brooks Patterson: Pro-development.

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

"One man's sprawl is another man's economic development," Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson said April 14, at the first conference of the Michigan Smart Growth Coalition.

The coalition - a conglomeration of two dozen trade associations representing builders, contractors, real estate agencies and title companies - sponsored the conference at the Troy Marriott Hotel. Their purpose was to address the state Legislature's current concern with urban sprawl and the loss of farmland to development. State lawmakers are attempting to devise policies that will encourage "smart growth" in the future.

"Smart growth - you gotta support it," Patterson said. "What would you favor instead? Dumb growth? So, yes, I support smart growth. But I don't want to see it interpreted to mean that someone is going to be able tell you where you can build and where you can't."

Pro-development

Patterson is unabashedly pro-development. In fact, he says, "we have worked overtime to create an atmosphere in Oakland County that's pro-development."

Patterson is among those who believe that the problem of sprawl has been greatly exaggerated. In the country, he argues, only 5.4 percent of the land has been developed. The nation's population growth, from an estimated 4 million 200 years ago to 265 million today, has used up no more land than that, he pointed out.

It looks like we are sprawling, Patterson contended, only because 90 percent of us live in 3.5 percent of the land.

More important to Patterson is the economic development of the county, so when recession comes it will be "the last to feel its effects and the first to rebound."

Farmland myth

He was not the only one to sound a pro-development note during the gathering. Sam Staley, who holds a doctorate and is director of urban programs for the Reason Public Policy Institute, told the crowd about the "vanishing farmland myth."

Only 1 percent of farmland nationally was lost between 1982 and 1992, he argued. Urbanization accounted only for 24 percent of it. Most farmland is instead converted into pasture, forest, park, and recreational uses, he said, not houses and malls.

The real reason farmland has been lost, Staley argued, is that agriculture - through technological improvements - has become more productive and therefore requires less land. The U.S. has increased its agricultural output nearly 48 percent since 1970, while the nation's crop land has remained largely stable. He noted that the U.S. exports well over 40 percent of both its rice and wheat production.

"Sure, we have lots of open land in Montana, there's just not a lot you can do with it," said Karen Kendrick-Hands of the East Michigan Environmental Action Council. Compared to the total amount of land available, usable farmland doesn't take up a very large percentage either. And that is also the portion where we live, and that is what we are developing, she contended.

"That's exactly right," said Paul Tait, executive director of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. "What we have developed here is made up for by the wide open spaces out west ... The reality is that we can't go on as we have. We have to do something about the cost of infrastructure" needed to support new development in greenfield areas.

Still, Tait said he felt the conference was productive. "I was encouraged to see the building community looking at the issues of smart growth. In past years, you might not have even seen them uttering those words," he said.

Proposals

The gathering provided members of the coalition a chance to put forward their proposals for addressing urban sprawl and encouraging smart growth.

And as they pushed for their points of view, several state-level decision makers were present to hear the input.

Rep. Gene DeRossett, R-Manchester, has been assigned to head up a state House land use committee. The panel's job is to review the issue of urban sprawl and report back to the Legislature with recommendations for action, if needed. Among the proposals being considered are providing incentives for local governments to participate in regional planning efforts, reviewing state spending projects in light of their expected impact on growth, and devising statewide construction codes and sample zoning ordinances.

"I have a vision that it is about our cities. I look at our cities as diamonds in the rough," DeRossett said while addressing the conference.

Spurring redevelopment in central cities such as Detroit would take development pressure off the outer suburbs, he said. DeRossett estimated there are some 50,000 tax-reverted parcels in the city of Detroit, which he said the city and state should make available to developers for new construction.

Engler's plan

Lt. Gov. Dick Posthumus was on hand as well.

"How do we protect our natural resources and have economic development and economic opportunity?" Posthumus asked. Just a decade ago, such a confer-

Developer urges spot condemnation

"Spot condemnation - we've got to have that" if the state expects builders to redirect their construction efforts away from suburban greenfields and back toward the "brownfields" of central cities, developer Bernie Gliberman said.

Redevelopment of blighted urban areas is one of the state's chief proposals to address urban sprawl, but members of the construction industry said at the April 14 Michigan Smart Growth Coalition's first Smart Growth Conference that the plan has a number of obstacles to overcome.

One is compilation of land. To put up a project of any size in an inner city area, developers typically have to compile parcels from many different owners.

"Some guy can have a 30-by-105-foot lot and stop my entire apartment complex from being built," Gliberman said, offering an example.

Often, it involves parcels that would be impossible to develop on their own. Such parcels may have no real value unless they are combined with other parcels, Gliberman contended.

But the owners may hold out for an exorbitant price. Often, speculators attempt to buy up little pieces of land when they know a big project is coming in.

At present, city governments only condemn when they can show a public need for the land.

Lt. Gov. Dick Posthumus, responding to Gliberman, agreed that compiling land is the biggest hurdle to redevelopment of inner cities, but he stopped short of endorsing the concept of spot condemnation. He noted the state is already attempting to streamline the process for clearing up title work on abandoned and tax-reverted parcels, but countered that the state's sprawl initiatives must "protect the property rights of people out there."

Construction industry representatives took the opportunity to showcase their concerns about the state's urban sprawl initiatives. The Building Industry Association of Southeastern Michigan outlined at the conference its proposals for "smart growth."

They include:

- Removing barriers that currently block innovative land-use planning techniques that include higher density and mixed use development.

- Planning and building schools, roads and water and sewer lines to keep pace with the demand for housing.

- Finding a fair way to assess the costs of those infrastructure developments, since they carry benefits to the entire neighborhood.

- Anticipating and planning for economic development and growth in a timely and predictable manner.

- Achieving a balance in land-use planning by using innovative concepts to protect the environment and preserve open space.

- Ensuring that the process of reviewing site-specific land development applications is reasonable, predictable and fair.

ence to talk about ways to control growth would not have been held. The topic would have been how to spur more growth.

"When something stops growing, it dies," he said. "I don't want to go back to those days when we were not growing."

Posthumus took the opportunity to stump for a constitutional amendment Gov. John Engler has proposed for placement on the November ballot. The amendment would change the way property taxes are levied against farms. Currently, farmland is taxed at its value based on development potential. Engler's amendment would change the constitution to allow farmland to be taxed only on its value for use as agricultural land.

The plan is part of Engler's approach to the sprawl issue. By relieving tax pressure on those farmers, they might be less pressured to sell their land for development.

"Growth of all types will occur as the market dictates. That's a fact," said Jeff Kaczmarek, head of business services for the Michigan Economic Development Corporation. Despite that, he argued that it is in developers' best interest to build projects that, through smart growth techniques, enhance quality of life. To that end, he recommended that local governments make sure their master plans and zoning ordinances are up to date and support each other, that they create one-stop-shopping offices for developers who are seeking permits, and that they coordinate their planning with other communities.

Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara contended that

Metro Airport is "one of the greatest economic development tools in the state." As such, it can also support efforts to contain sprawl by attracting business and development back toward already developed areas.

McNamara told of how Wayne County has acquired 200 acres of land to the south of the airport, which it plans to have redeveloped into light industrial facilities and a golf course. He said it could be the first "smart park" in the state of Michigan.

Activist argues need for mass transit

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER

rpearl@oe.hometown.com

What about traffic problems? What about dwindling world oil supplies and Detroit's apparent continuing dependency on the automobile?

Those issues and others related to urban sprawl were raised at last week's Smart Growth Conference mainly through questions from the audience - in particular, those from a Wayne County attorney who's a mass-transit activist.

While the home-building and real estate industry sponsoring the Troy conference and some public officials used hot-buttons like "freedom of choice" in arguing for continued suburban growth - albeit modified by inner-city and older suburb redevelopment - Karen Kendrick-Hands countered with words like "traffic congestion" and "mass-transit."

The lack of a good, on-time mass transit system in metro Detroit means "The elderly have no choice" but to drive cars "even though they have one-third of the accidents and shouldn't be on the roads," she said in a post-conference interview.

Furthermore, it also forces the working poor to drive to jobs on suspended or revoked driver's licenses.

Citing the proposed widening of Interstate 75, she noted there's a commuter rail line paralleling it. "We could manage" the traffic congestion from the construction "by using federal money to get the train running again," she said, "but we can't get MDOT (Michigan Department of Transportation) to listen."

The Grosse Pointe Park resident, a former Detroit resident who came to mass transit after a son's severe asthma attacks focused her on air pollution, said that mass transit "wasn't on the (conference) agenda."

Indeed, as speakers April 14 cited people's right to choose where to live and school their children, Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson went so far as to call traffic congestion "a vibrant, robust expression of a (growing) community."

"I'd rather have that than" the opposite, he declared.

Contrarily, when builder Robert Jones suggested to Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara that he "tax the auto companies on each car to help pay for mass transit," McNamara responded, "Great idea. I love it."

Transportation was discussed directly only by Paul Tait, executive director of the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, who said that "By 2025, development will overwhelm the existing transportation system" in some newer areas.

A self-described "proponent of mass transit," Tait said current and projected funding "will only preserve our existing mass transit system, not improve it.

"Southeast Michigan is near or at the bottom in the amount of money put in for public transportation," he said.

Tait answered a Kendrick-Hands question by saying "We could put (a transit rail system) in, but can't (afford to) run it."

Kendrick-Hands, founder of Transportation Riders United, a coalition seeking to improve area public transportation, was supported by fellow activist James Bush, retired City of Detroit civil rights director.

Bush, now a Beverly Hills resident, predicts the world's oil supply is nearing its peak and will begin declining in 20 years at current production rates.

He said metro-Detroiters "think that, because this is the auto capital, we should be auto-dependent. Based on oil consumption, that doesn't make sense."

Library marks issue of commemorative stamp

The Plymouth District Library will hold a commemorative stamp second-day issue celebration as part of the Library of Congress Bicentennial at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 29, at the library, 223 S. Main, Plymouth.

Stamp collectors and library lovers of all ages are invited to attend this event, during which the commemorative postage stamp created for the Library of Congress Bicentennial will be available at the Plymouth District Library station.

A collectible, custom pictorial cancellation will be offered exclusively at the event. The envelope design, or cachet, that will be used at the event was created by the library staff.

The subject of the commemorative postage stamp and logo for the Library of Congress Bicentennial features the interior dome of the Library's Main Reading Room. The unseen painting within the circle of "eye" of the Reading Room dome is the image of a woman representing "Human Understanding." Ethel Kessler, known for her design of the breast cancer stamp, designed the Library's Bicentennial commemorative stamp.

Libraries across the nation are participating in second-day issue events following the initial release on April 24 in Washington, D.C.

Red Wing great tells about hockey life

BY JULIE BROWN
STAFF WRITER
jbrown@oe.homecomm.net

The room was a sea of Red Wing red as hockey great Bill Gadsby told of his career. The Thursday morning event at Presbyterian Village Westland drew eager listeners.

Gadsby, now a Southfield resident, turned pro at age 18. Coming from western Canada, he spent eight years with the Chicago Blackhawks. "Then I went to New York on a trade."

He didn't really like New York, calling it "a big zoo." Gadsby, a Hockey Hall of Famer who spent 20 years in the NHL, didn't care for the Rangers management.

The moving around, including back to Canada in the off-season, was tough on his family, which now includes wife Edna, four daughters and nine grandchildren.

"Then I got traded to Detroit," the former defenseman said. He called it "the best sports city in North America. The fans here are unbelievable."

The seniors, some from outside Presbyterian Village Westland, peppered Gadsby with questions. He believes Gordie Howe of Red Wing fame is the greatest player of all time. He thinks the Wings could capture the Stanley Cup this year.

"I really believe they've got a very good chance to win it this year." The Detroit team has a lot of depth, he noted, but injuries could be a problem.

Gadsby described his hockey injuries, including numerous stitches, two shoulder separations, nine broken noses ("which is not very pleasant"), a broken leg, and having both big toes and thumbs broken.

Better equipment means more protection for today's players, he said.

Gadsby, 72, favors long-term unpaid suspensions for players who are abusive. "The game's gotten out of hand," he said.

School board should hear everyone

We don't share Jim Donahue's belief that members of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools board have "abdicated their responsibility" or are "asleep at the switch" when it comes to the district's finances. But the Observer believes Donahue, a former Canton Township treasurer and current candidate for the school board, has every right to question the board - and receive timely, accurate answers - during a public meeting.

Unfortunately, the treatment Donahue received when he appeared before the board during the citizens' comments section of the board's April 11 regular meeting was typical of what we've seen over the years. His statements were greeted with puzzled looks, long pauses and finally a we'll-get-back-to-you-on-that response.

The Canton resident may have been a bit brash in his approach. And yes, Donahue has something to gain because he's on the June 12 ballot to replace the very people he is criticizing.

His political grandstanding aside, we say, "So what?" Donahue's quest for information is no less valid than any other district taxpayer's, even if he is only asking for his own political benefit.

In his words were some basic tenets that school trustees sometimes forget. "You are the people we elect. You handle our money. I want to know who among you is making sure that it is being spent where it is supposed to be," he told the board. Those are good points regardless of who makes them.

Ruling could make rail problem worse

Talk about an unpleasant prospect. Motorists in this town already spend an ungodly number of hours waiting at any of the city's nine railroad crossings, watching time flick by as dozens of train cars hold up traffic for what seems an eternity.

CSX hasn't exactly been a willing participant in any "Make Motorists Happy" campaigns. Now, U.S. District Court Judge Nancy Edmunds has made it possible for things to get - dare we say it? - even worse.

Edmunds effectively struck down a state law that says passing trains can only hold up traffic for five minutes if they're sitting and seven minutes if they're moving. Federal law, her ruling decrees, takes precedence over anything the state can dream up. And federal law is apparently on CSX's side.

As the attorney representing Plymouth in this matter pointed out, CSX is now free to turn any railroad track it chooses into a parking lot, and there won't be anything the city can do about it. Tickets? Tear 'em up. Complaints? Try our Deaf Ear Department.

CSX spokesman Gary Wollenhaupp pointed out the ruling means states can't regulate length or speed of trains, but also said, "Even with this decision, we'll work with local communities and continue to try to find a resolution."

Assistant City Manager Paul Sincok was quite clear in his feelings, expressing disappointment with the ruling and saying, "CSX has proven they are a poor corporate citizen in our community. Unfortunately, that will probably continue to be the case in light of this ruling."

We'd like to think Wollenhaupp and CSX could be taken at their word. But their actions in our community have shown that, like it or not, Sincok is probably right.

Senate on right trucking path

The struggle between the state legislature and local governments continues with Senate passage of a six-bill package on enforcement of trucking violations.

The bills were passed unanimously, 36-0, on April 6 and represent a compromise between a far more restrictive House package and the position of most local officials.

Under current law, local police enforce motor carrier codes on local roads. Local governments collect 100 percent of revenue from fines levied.

The trucking industry has long complained that local enforcement has been overzealous and that they have been subjected to being ticketed several times on the same day in different jurisdictions.

The new bills would limit the number of tickets that can be written by local police for minor truck code violations. Officers would still be able to enforce traffic violations such as speeding or ignoring a signal. But only one truck code ticket could be issued in a 24-hour period.

In addition, revenue generated by truck code enforcement would be split with 70 percent going to local units of government and 30 percent to libraries.

Under the state constitution, libraries receive all revenue from criminal fines. In 1994, trucking regulations were decriminalized and made civil fines with revenue going to local units of government to pay the cost of enforcement. Since 1996, libraries have not received any revenue on truck code violations.

The current rash of state legislation to limit the powers of local government are based on a perception that local governments, especially in the metro Detroit area, are hostile to business interests.

Local government and police officials argue that shifting 30 percent of their revenue from truck code enforcement will effectively reduce needed enforcement against trucks that are overweight, causing damage to roadways, or have dangerous safety deficiencies, such as bad brakes.

The Senate bills correct the more aggressive House measures. The compromise allows regular police officers to stop trucks for violations, while the House bill specified only motor carrier officers could make stops; the Senate bill retains 70 percent of the fees to local government, while the House gave the fees to libraries, courts and road improvements.

The trucking industry has made a good case about the unfair and inconsistent enforcement of the truck code and those parts of the bill that correct those problems are worthwhile.

The Senate bill represents a useful compromise between the all or nothing approach of the House and the "don't change anything" desire of local governments. But still we question the necessity for such sweeping legislation to protect the trucking industry, especially since we have invested so much money in road maintenance.

We find ourselves agreeing with Farmington City Manager Frank Lauhoff that it is "sad if we have the Legislature wanting to adjust traffic laws to make it easier (for trucking companies and others) to violate the law at the public's expense."

More than a thank you

After the curtain call for the Plymouth Players' April 8 performance of "Fiddler on the Roof," Plymouth-Salem High School retiring drama teacher Gloria Logan was called to the stage by the audience present which included well over 200 PSHS alumni gathered in the newly dedicated Gloria Logan Center for the Performing Arts. The 30-year legacy of Mrs. Logan's work stood real and apparent before her.

Even after 25 years, I cannot routinely bring myself to call her by her first name - Gloria - as so many others both can and do.

This peculiarity in my behavior may be attributable to habit or to a combination of unbridled respect and admiration for the lady who stood before us, one last time, in the bright glare of the klieg lights.

Among the gathered alumni, from every year and apparently every show that Mrs. Logan directed, were actors, singers, theater managers and patrons of the arts whose ongoing involvement in the rich world of the performing arts can be traced directly back to its origins in the high school's theater program and more specifically to the conduit of its founder and teacher.

Others, myself included, were no longer involved in the theater. We are the academicians and doctors, lawyers, and business owners who also took Mrs. Logan's teaching to heart.

Yet when the word went out that there was an opportunity to show her how we collectively felt about her, we came automatically without hesitation back home.

In short, no matter what we have become since leaving the nest she nurtured us in, and those who studied under Mrs. Logan will agree that "nurture" is the appropriate word, she taught all of us the fundamentals of self-discovery and self-respect which quid pro quo translated itself into a liberated self-confidence sufficiently secure to openly express genuine, deep and lasting affection for our school mates and the larger community around us.

Mrs. Logan's legacy endures in the creative and expressive lives we who call ourselves her students lead.

I left Plymouth, Mrs. Logan, and the community of love and friendship she essentially made possible for me some 25 years ago; I can honestly say that I have again revisited this place, and it is again vibrant and new in my heart. I am forever grateful.

Don't close roads

Iread a recent article in the Plymouth Observer regarding the Ann Arbor Road Expansion.

I feel Ms. Barney has misrepresented the views of the residents in the Green Meadows Subdivision when she quoted "they wanted all of the streets closed."

What the residents really said was that if some of the roads were going to be closed, they should all be closed.

It would cause too much increased traffic on the roads that are left open if they only close part of them. The majority of the residents don't want the roads closed at all. I have attended the majority of the public meetings in connection with the expansion and Sunshine Honda. I have yet to hear any residents in favor of the expansion or the rezoning.

Mr. Bohlander, owner of Honda, was quoted as saying, "If I were those neighbors, I would be asking the township to close those streets to Ann Arbor Road."

Well, Mr. Bohlander is not a resident. If he were, he would not be trying to bring his business into the neighborhood, where he is not welcome, and try to force people out of their homes.

The boundaries of the Ann Arbor Road corridor project seem to be changing, also.

In the first meeting I attended, the boundaries only included a 300-foot depth from Ann Arbor Road; now it appears that the project encompasses the homes all the way to Marlin Ave. As stated in the Observer, this will affect 72 homes. That is a lot of families to uproot because one business wants to expand.

Let Mr. Bohlander move his business to a more suitable location or leave it the size that it is. We don't want him moving into our neighborhood. We have voiced this opinion at numerous meetings, but neither Mr. Bohlander nor the township seems to be listening.

POINTS OF VIEW

Luncheon-goers might want to get their apologies in advance

Now here's a sentence I never thought I'd hear applied to anything I got involved in:

"That little turn you have to do is called a quarter-turn with plié." (That's pronounced plee-ay; you'll need to know that to understand the rest of this column.)

The speaker was Joanne Zavisa, who runs Joanne's Dance Extension. She has, to her great misfortune perhaps, been elected to try to teach 10 men how to move in something that resembles modern dance at the annual Secretaries' Day luncheon Wednesday afternoon.

After seeing our first rehearsal Tuesday morning, maybe the best she can hope for is something that looks like synchronized demolition derby.

There were seven of us on hand, all responding to the call of Chamber of Commerce Director Fran Toney, who planned this event to honor secretaries, all of whom work too hard to be exposed to something like this. However, when Fran talks, people generally listen, and after a couple of weeks of badgering, I let her coerce me into agreeing.

I figure there has to be an ordinance against this kind of thing, but Plymouth Township Police Chief Larry Carey, retired city Chief Bob Scoggins and City Manager Dave Rich also showed up, so at least I won't be the only one violating whatever laws we'll be breaking, including the laws of physics.

The cause is a good one: honor secretaries (or receptionists, or administrative assistants, or whatever the politically correct term is). They work hard, in most instances harder than the boss.

It's a proven fact in reportorial circles that a receptionist can be your best source, because the secretary usually is the one running things.

So we're willing, if a bit reluctant, participants, the 10 of us who shall attempt to provide the entertainment at Wednesday's luncheon. But one has to wonder how "honored" the secretaries will feel after watching us stumble around stage for a few minutes.

For her part, Zavisa was quite encouraging. "You guys look awesome," she said on more than one occasion. The third time she said it, I wanted to lend her my glasses.

To be fair, we attacked this rehearsal Tuesday with fervor. I'm deliberately painting a glum picture for comic effect, but to be truthful these guys have a very upbeat approach. Tom Nunez

'You have to make your best impression, and then leave the audience wanting more.'

Joanne Zavisa
—Dance instructor of Parker Hannifin was particularly boisterous, given the circumstances and the 8:30 a.m. rehearsal time. Brian Mamo from Community Bank and Chief Carey looked especially good in the first go-round.

I think Dave Rich and I had the highest level of concern, but that might be my own personal paranoia talking, or perhaps the idea that a dozen or so of my colleagues, including My Best Friend, will be in the audience. No pressure there.

The original idea was for two dances, lasting roughly six minutes. To her credit, Zavisa took one look at us and, in her sage opinion, noted we'd "never last" six minutes. There was also talk of removing layers of clothing. That idea was quickly scuttled.

Zavisa has some sound advice for us. "You have to make your best impression, and then leave the audience wanting more," she said.

Wanting more? We'd settle for not peppering us with spoiled fruit and veggies.

Planting wrong seed

I read your recent article about how, in essence, a board of education candidate whines that a voting advantage of 7-to-1 is not enough and calls anyone not living on his street elitist.

Truth: Canton, Salem, and the Plymouths are a community. The word community embodies togetherness. Citizens seeking public office must build on the community and not tear it down. They must not attempt to eradicate the sentiments of the majority of neighbors by dividing and conquering them. Communists and despots attempt to manipulate people through propaganda and class envy. This is called "spin" in Washington.

Dare: In the first and only statements I have ever read about this alleged candidate, it is clear that Jim Donahue is not for me or my children.

He dares to use class envy, pity, affirmative action and spin, rich versus poor propaganda and self-fabricated aggrandizement to carve out a potential voter base for himself.

Most people who know me can argue that I have a different view of the direction of the schools. At least people running for office in the last two board of education elections ran on their own ideas. It never even occurred to me to consider where a candidate lives in the district as a qualification to be on the school board. Even after attending a couple dozen school board meetings, I cannot tell you who lives where in the community.

I hate the fact that he has placed this seed in my head and from now on I will probably throw a glance at where a board member lives. Shame on you. I also hate that I have to qualify my position for him by stating that I have lived in Canton 24 years and enjoy visiting my dad in Canton.

Glenn A. Kremer

What's the message?

I love going to the high school track meets. I get a thrill watching all the dedicated young athletes performing to the best of their ability in the spirit of friendly competition. I cheer for the winners but I applaud every one of them.

They're all winners because of their hard work, their love of the sport and, most of all, because of their commitment to teamwork and good sportsmanship. They encourage and support each other, and not just the members of their own team, but everyone. These are the qualities we want to instill in our young men and women, and high school sports should be an ideal way to help accomplish this.

I was saddened and very disappointed when I learned of the outcome to the April 6 track meet between Canton and Salem, longtime rivals, but in reality parts of the same whole. The meet was very close and the final event would determine the winner.

Everyone ran their hearts out, but it was Canton's turn to win this time. The team was ecstatic, but their jubilation was soon destroyed. The Salem coach (or coaches) called for disqualification due to a technicality.

After much debate, it was decided that Salem would "win" the meet after all. The technicality? Canton had broken a written, but not widely known, rule having to do with their uniforms.

Two of the four runners in the last relay chose to wear spandex shorts under their uniform, which is allowed.

But, unfortunately, they had chosen the same color. The rule was intended to prevent confusion in situations where many schools are competing at the same time and some of them may have similar colors.

But should breaking a rule such as that warrant disqualification? The team was further demoralized when they learned that Salem noticed this infraction at a previous meet, but chose to ignore it and save it for a more advantageous time.

I ask you, is this in the spirit of fair play and good sportsmanship?

Shouldn't we expect all coaches to look out for and care about all students? If a coach notices a minor technical error such as this he should immediately share the information with the athletes, or their coach, in order to prevent such an absurd and needless heartbreak.

And what about the two young men who happened to be "out of uniform"? Winning should not be more important than damaging their self-confidence or crushing their spirit. Is the message we want to give our children, "Win at all costs, no matter how you do it or who you hurt?"

Most of our teachers and coaches do just that and I admire them greatly. But to the few who have forgotten these basic, true reasons for teaching competitive sports I say "shame on you."

State should copy Ford Motor's idea of offering Internet benefit to workers

To my way of thinking, the most consequential thing that happened in Michigan during the 20th century was Henry Ford's realization early on that the gains in productivity arising from the new assembly line technology were so great that he could afford to pay his workers the unheard of sum of $5 per day.

Characteristically, Ford also figured he'd do well by doing good. At $5 a day, he was paying his workers enough so they could eventually become customers for the cars they were making. Ford's compensation practices turned out to be an important element of his marketing strategy.

The impact of Ford's innovation on Michigan was profound. Workers were drawn from all over the country to seek this extraordinary wage. The migration thus set in motion crested during World War II, when military production made Michigan the "arsenal of democracy" and drew thousands of families, mainly from the South.

Moreover, these working families were making a lot of money, enough for them in time to move up from working class to middle class. A pretty good definition of a middle class family at mid-century was one that owned their own home. And beginning in the 1950s and continuing for a decade, Detroit boasted more owner-occupied homes than any other big city in America.

So what started out as a small but profound change in rates of pay at Ford Motor Co. wound up decades later by changing fundamentally the social structure of Michigan. Using today's buzz word, a small innovation "got to scale" within 50 years.

Now fast forward to today, the first year of the 21st century.

The information revolution now taking place is, if anything, even more profound than the application of assembly line technology at the dawn of the 20th century. The question is not whether this revolution will affect our economy and society as profoundly as the Industrial Revolution did in the 18th and 19th centuries. Plainly, it will. Rather the issue is whether the gains in productivity and human potential arising from advances in information technology will be confined to a small elite at the top of the social and educational pyramid.

Some worry that the "digital divide" separating those who are technologically literate from those who are not could become as great a chasm as the gap separating working class folks from the middle class at the turn of the century.

Put simply, the question is whether and how the information revolution can be brought quickly to scale.

PHIL POWER

That's why the decision Ford Motor Co. took earlier this year to provide home computers, software and Internet access to all its 350,000 employees for $5 per month is a good candidate for the most consequential thing that has happened in Michigan so far in the 21st century. Why? Because it's a way to overcome the digital divide by offering a way to get to scale in information technology.

First, 350,000 Ford employees is a lot of people, many of them located right here in Michigan. Second, given the tight labor market and how employers are competing for good workers, it's almost certain that other companies are going to follow suit. Delta Airlines has already done so, and I wouldn't be surprised to see other big employers such as GM and DaimlerChrysler following soon.

So there is a pretty good chance that subsidized access to information technology is going to become a standard employee benefit for Michigan workers. That's a good way for an entire society to get to scale.

So now is the time for an innovation in enlightened public policy. If the state of Michigan can afford to give a $2,500 scholarship to kids who pass the MEAP test, it can certainly afford to subsidize a computer and Internet access to every family in Michigan that signs up for training on the Michigan Virtual University.

All the talk about a computer in every classroom misses the point. What makes access to the information revolution ubiquitous — just like TV and the telephone — is to get computers and Internet connections in every home, where they become part of the standard experience of ordinary family life rather than something abstractly available once the digital divide is crossed.

18 communities approve funding for emergency system

BY KURT KUBAN
STAFF WRITER

Fire chiefs from 18 Wayne County communities have unanimously approved becoming a major funding arm of the Health Emergency Medical Systems (HEMS).

HEMS is a non-profit organization created in 1990 to be the medical control authority for the communities of the Conference of Western Wayne (CWW), as well as several communities in the Downriver area.

In essence, HEMS has developed the protocol for emergency service, as well as coordinating its various functions.

"When an ambulance goes by, I wish people realized how much coordination is involved. It is such a team effort," said Bob Miljan, the executive director of HEMS.

The fire chiefs, who are represented by the Western Wayne County Fire Department Mutual Aid Association, proposed the funding at the April 15 CWW meeting.

If approved by each CWW community, the association will annually provide $50,000 to HEMS, which has an annual budget of about $450,000.

The association will also be awarded two voting seats on the HEMS board.

"What we're looking to do is develop a system between hospitals, the county health department and local fire service to essentially seize control of the EMS infrastructure of western Wayne County," said Bill Forbush, a captain with the Garden City Fire Department.

COUNTY NEWS

Financial model

Representatives for the association, including Forbush, Garden City Fire Chief Ken Hines and Westland Fire Chief Mark Neal, presented a financial model to CWW members.

According to the proposal, each community would provide a $1,000 flat fee. In addition, communities also would pay either $.055 or $.025 per capita, depending on their fire service transporting capabilities.

If approved by CWW communities, the funds will be taken directly out of each fire department's budget.

Neal led the task force that developed the financial model presented to the CWW.

"Participation in HEMS is going to be a very important aspect of all our communities," said Neal. "This is a fair financial model that meets the diverse needs of each of our communities."

Association officials said it is important to get involved with HEMS for several reasons.

"All the fire chiefs came to the conclusion that if we are going to continue to evolve in improving medical response and medical services for each of our communities, we have to be directly tied in to the decision-making process of HEMS," Neal said.

Also, HEMS has been experiencing a shortfall in funding over the past few years because of a series of hospital closings. Each hospital pays a $25,000 membership fee, which covers the bulk of the budget.

With eight of the original 21 member hospitals closing in recent years, HEMS is facing a budgetary crisis. The association decided to get involved to ensure the future survival and stability of HEMS.

"Without HEMS, the emergency service in our communities would be set back 20 years," Forbush said.

The association is hoping to get approval from the CWW by July 1.

The Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency is sponsoring its annual photography contest for Wayne County high school students. The theme, "People, Places & Pride," provides students the opportunity to express their photographic abilities in a variety of subjects.

Students can submit portraits and candid photos of family, friends, classmates; classroom or extracurricular activities; cultural institutions; landmarks; community events; trips; and more. Photos will be judged on human interest, general appeal, composition and quality.

"Our aim for the contest is to provide a forum for students to express themselves creatively through photography and share those talents with the community," said Michelle Gaynier, communications manager for Wayne RESA and coordinator for the photo contest.

Three winners will be selected in each of the three categories: people, places and pride. First place will receive a $100 U.S. Savings Bond, second place winners will receive a $50 U.S. Savings Bond and third place winners will receive a $25 certificate to Borders Bookstores.

To enter, students must submit a 3-inch-by-5-inch (or larger) color or black and white photograph, along with their name, school, address and home phone number by Monday, May 1. Entries should be sent to the attention of Michelle Gaynier at Wayne RESA, 33500 Van Born Road, PO Box 807, Wayne, MI 48184.

The winners will be announced at Wayne RESA's Art Fair 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, May 20, at 5454 Venoy Road, Wayne. The winning photographs and several honorable mentions will be on display during the Art Fair. Those photos will also be displayed throughout RESA facilities and used in RESA's traveling informational exhibits and publications throughout the coming year.

COMMON SENSORS

JACQUE MARTIN-DOWNS

Making big strides takes little steps

I was privileged to meet Gary, a man of distinct character, while working on a project in a school district to get a busload of children to settle down on their ride to and from school.

I knew in an instant by his firm handshake and the twinkle in his eye that something special was going on in his department. I frankly couldn't wait to find out what it was.

Gary oversees the entire team of transportation employees for the district, from the bus drivers to the maintenance people. The group of over 150 has come to respect his no-nonsense approach, knowing that his bottom-line is: "Are the 15,000 children in the district being transported safely?"

When Gary arrived in 1998, the district hadn't had a passing rating on the state police inspection since 1987.

He had his work cut out for him. The employees were directionless and apathetic. As much as he would have liked to wave his magic wand and instantly change the condition of the department, he knew he would have to not only earn the employees' respect, but encourage them to take pride in their jobs.

One of the first things he started doing was to have weekly team meetings. Without financial remuneration and under no duress, employees began showing up for his weekly "pep talk." His pep talks centered around how change is tough and how each person counts in the organization.

Soon he was averaging 90 percent of the drivers each week. Donna Knoff, a lead secretary in the department, commented that his enthusiasm was "catchy." He involved the drivers in the decision-making process and encouraged them to speak up when they saw a problem.

"Talk to me before it festers," he said. He would respond to the complaints with one of three responses:

"I'll look into it," "I'm glad you told me," or "This cannot be changed." Though he admits that it's tough for an administrator to field the gripes, it was of greater value to have them feel respected and heard.

Some of the employees were not happy with the new regime and outwardly balked. Those who struggled mightily with the changes were invited to leave. The new and improved transportation department was not going to coddle the complainers. Gary kept persevering. A firm believer in managing people through a team approach, Gary created mottoes and sayings which popped up all over the building.

Earlier this year, a disgruntled parent arrived at the transportation department's doorstep to retrieve a lost and found item for her child. "Your door is so hard to find," she grumbled.

Beth Sholler, the transportation supervisor suggested to Gary that the entrance would really stand out if they painted it like the emergency exit door on the back of a school bus. With the help of the district's creative painting department... voila... a bright yellow school bus exit door that truly dazzles.

Another key player in the organization was the garage supervisor, Jason Tamer. He has been a loyal "wonder worker" under Gary's guidance and rumor has it he's saved the district scads of money. Jason shows the same dedication to safety and teamwork as his boss.

It's apparent that Gary works at creating group unity, because I noticed that his employees seem committed and loyal to their work. He admits they do an excellent job. The outcome of his hands-on approach was demonstrated in this year's 2000 state police inspection, which you will be hearing more about in this newspaper in weeks to come.

Hat's off to Gary E. Davis, director of Transportation Services — a valuable member of the Wayne-Westland Community Schools.

Annual Madonna University auction benefits student scholarship fund

Marking the event's 12th year, Madonna University is counting the days until it auctions over 1,000 items to a crowd of more than 500 at the "Around the World ... and Beyond" scholarship dinner auction, April 28 at Burton Manor in Livonia.

According to organizations that are dubbing the evening their "greatest event ever," bidders will be greeted with a champagne toast at 5:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m. The silent auction will close at 8:30 p.m., and the live auction follows at 9 p.m. An open bar will be available as well as entertainment.

Dennis Neubacher, WXYZ-TV7 (helicopter pilot and Madonna University student) will be the master of ceremonies. One raffle ticket winner will win a 2000 Cadillac Sedan DeVille donated by Don Massey of Don Massey Cadillac in Plymouth.

All proceeds from the event will benefit the Madonna University Scholarship Fund. Guests will be impressed with the more than 1,000 unique and exciting auction items available this year, said Rose Kachnowski, director of corporate development/special events.

"The community really came out for this one," said Kachnowski. "This is going to be the largest auction we have ever had."

Up for bid are Northwest Airlines trips to Rome or Milan, Hawaii and anywhere in the continental United States, the "Summer Connoisseurs Weekend" at the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, an evening yacht cruise for 25 on the "Mallard," golf packages, fishing excursions, Epicurean package and more.

"We have a tremendous amount of jewelry this year," added Kachnowski. The jewelry includes a choice of three diamond cocktail rings, or a choice between an amethyst tennis bracelet and amethyst diamond ring.

This year's auction will also feature a "Your Choice" raffle for a $1,000 shopping spree to either Laurel Park Place, Saks Fifth Avenue, Nordstrom or Neiman Marcus. Tickets are $10 each or three for $25.

General chairmen for the 2000 Auction are Madonna University trustee Tarik Daoud, owner of Al Long Ford, and his wife Helen. Honorary chairpersons are Leonard, Margaret and Patricia Vier of Livonia. Leonard Vier, at last year's auction, purchased Highest bidder: Madonna University's students will participate in the University's 12th annual auction on Friday, April 28, at Burton Manor in Livonia. With proceeds designated for student scholarships, the students will greet benefactors and work at the auction to show their appreciation. Also on display is the serigraph, "Devant La Mar," by Emille Bellet and a millennium area rug.

Red Wings tickets for 20 to attend a playoff game in a private suite at Joe Louis Arena.

This item has been donated again by Madonna University trustee William Phillips of Phillips Service Industries in Livonia and his wife Bridget.

"Last year we raised approximately $304,000," said Kachnowski. "This year we hope to break the record or come close."

The Madonna University director of corporate development said students will play a more significant and visible role in the 2000 Auction. "They have always been in attendance but were never well recognized. This year their participation is astronomical and their presence will be known at the auction," added Kachnowski.

The official sponsors of the auction are Don Massey Cadillac Inc. of Plymouth; Northwest Airlines; Al Long Ford, Gold Corp Inc., Evola Music, Kimcraft Printer Inc., and Sodexho Marriott.

Easter is more than bunnies, egg hunts

FAITH JOURNEYS

CARLA THOMPSON POWELL

What does Easter mean to you? Dyed eggs? Chocolate bunnies? Marshmallow chicks? Baskets of candy? A ham dinner? Or does it mean something else?

Yes, our typical celebration of Easter usually includes large quantities of candy. But Easter is more than just time to max out on your chocolate intake. In fact, it's even more than just a traditional time to gather with your family or a good excuse to buy a new outfit.

Easter is the celebration of Jesus' resurrection. On Easter morning, God triumphs over death once and for all. Easter reverses the horror of Good Friday when Jesus, the only son of God, was killed in a humiliating death by crucifixion. God gives us the promise of new and everlasting life on Easter.

"Early on the first day of the week, while it was still dark, Mary Magdalene came to the tomb and saw that the stone had been removed from the tomb" (John 20:1). Mary was disturbed by what she saw, thinking that someone had taken Jesus' body away. Mary was filled with such grief that she didn't even recognize Jesus when she saw him in resurrected form ... until he said her name. "Mary," he said and suddenly she knew that Jesus was raised from the dead.

Easter is more than candy bunnies and colored eggs. On Easter Sunday, we recall Mary's early morning meeting with a resurrected Jesus and give thanks to God for raising Jesus.

Significant

Easter is the historical event of God's only son who was raised from the dead.

Easter is God's action that overcame evil and defeated death. At Easter, we come face to face with God who calls each of us by name.

Easter is the celebration of Jesus' new life, Jesus' eternal life. God promises us that same new Easter life if we take up the invitation to see, worship, and believe.

Candy and eggs may fill our tummies for a while. Easter bunnies and baskets may hold our attention for a time. But what can satisfy us more than God who loves us so much that he allowed his son to take our sin upon himself on Good Friday and raised him to new life on Easter morning? That message is worth devoting your whole life to.

Carla Thompson Powell is pastor of Timothy Lutheran Church of Livonia.

"Therefore, since it is by God's mercy that we are engaged in this ministry, we do not lose heart." - 2 Cor. 4:1.

Rockers strike deal with Compuware

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisk@oe.homecomm.net

It was the logical move to make.

So the Detroit Rockers did it, agreeing to play 16 of their 22 regular-season home indoor soccer games next season at Compuware Arena. The Rockers have signed a three-year lease with Compuware.

Once the Rockers left downtown Detroit, the logical move would seem to be to a smaller arena in the heart of the soccer community. Enter Compuware Arena, which beginning in October will be the Rockers' home site.

"It's a good fit for us," said Rockers' general manager and part-owner Dave Woodrow. "I think it's going to work out well."

Mike Vellucci, building supervisor for Compuware Arena, agreed. "They went out to the Palace (of Auburn Hills), and that was too big," he said. "This is a more intimate facility for them, with 4,500 seats."

It does, indeed, seem the right place for soccer. Compuware sits in the middle of the state's biggest soccer pocket, with Plymouth, Canton, Livonia, Farmington, Northville, Novi and Brighton all within a 20-minute drive. In the last decade, most of the state's best prep soccer teams have come from these areas.

The move began to take shape when Mike Illitch, owner of the Detroit Red Wings and Detroit Tigers, decided to sell the Rockers last year. That forced the team to leave Cobo Arena for the Palace.

But that proved too big a forum for this still-growing sport. "Our product is better suited to a smaller arena," said

Woodrow.

Enter Compuware. According to Woodrow, the Rockers' owners were "approached by three other arenas" in the area, but settled on Compuware.

"There were two reasons," he said. "The greater Canton-Plymouth-Livonia area is much more conducive to our demographics."

Also, Compuware could guarantee Friday-Saturday-Sunday playing dates. The Rockers will still play six home games at the Palace.

The relocation has certainly been greeted with enthusiasm. According to Churchill battles, but Salem prevails

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisk@oe.homecomm.net

Only a preview.

That's how both coaches viewed Monday's meeting, a game that pitted two of the Western Lakes Activities Association's premier soccer teams. And the result was about what was anticipated:

A hard-fought, down-to-the-wire affair that saw Plymouth Salem prevail over Livonia Churchill by a 2-1 margin.

The win kept the Rocks unbeaten through seven games; they are 3-0 in the WLAA. Churchill suffered its first defeat; the Chargers are 3-1-1 overall, 3-1 in the WLAA.

"It was a great game," said Salem coach Joe Nora. "It reminded me of a tournament-style game. Both teams left it all on the field."

The Rocks seemed to control the play a bit more, surrendering few scoring opportunities — something Churchill must have anticipated, considering Salem had given up just one goal in six previous matches.

But certainly the Chargers had some chances.

"In the first half, I thought we had five-to-10 minutes straight where we had the ball in their end," said Churchill coach Chad Campau.

The end result, however, was an unlucky turn of events for the Chargers. With 12 minutes left in the half, Salem got possession and Kellee Mullin triggered a quick counter-strike, sending the ball through to Jami Coyle.

Coyle outped the Churchill defender and put the ball past keeper Renee Kashawlic — who was outstanding throughout the game — giving Salem a 1-0 lead with 11:26 remaining.

"It was unfortunate on their goal in the first half," said Campau. "But I thought we responded well, especially after that second goal. I was happy with the way we came back."

The issue seemed to be decided when, after 67 minutes of battling mainly in the midfields with few good chances for either squad, Salem doubled its advantage.

Following a Salem restart in Churchill's end, Coyle centered a pass to Suzi Towne and she rifled a shot into the upper left corner from 20 yards out, a shot which Kashawlic had no chance to stop.

But the Rocks' 2-0 lead, which came with 12:56 left, didn't last long. The Back-and-forth struggle: Salem's Jessica Bucks clears the ball from harm's way during Monday's encounter with Livonia Churchill. The Rocks managed to hold off the charging Chargers.

Chargers got a restart deep in the Salem end two minutes later and took advantage of it when Salem keeper Jenny Fitchett — who split time in goal with Jill Dombrowski — charged out in an attempt to smother the ball.

She couldn't. Michelle Smith sent a pass to Michelle Esparza, and she powered it past Fitchett to halve the Salem lead with 10:53 still to play.

"We were very happy to get something off a restart," said Campau.

Unfortunately, the Chargers could muster nothing else offensively.

Both teams looked solid defensively and good in the midfield, but finishing offensively, particularly against better teams, could present a problem this season.

There's time to work on that. "We'll see them again in the districts," predicted Nora.

Indeed, they could also clash again in Rocks' rally nips Vikes

BASEBALL

If his baseball team continues down its current path of playing in down-to-the-wire, extra-inning thrillers, Plymouth Salem coach Dale Rumberger may soon be doubling as a spokesperson for Pepto-Bismol.

On Monday, Salem notched a dramatic 12-11 nine-inning victory over Walled Lake Central in a game which saw the Rocks rally from behind three times in the late innings.

"These close games are taking a lot out of me," Rumberger joked. "Last year, we lost a lot of one-run games. It was nice to win one for a change. We were in another nine-inning game last week, but we lost because we couldn't get any clutch hits. Today, we got the hits when we needed them."

Salem is now 3-3 overall and 3-1 in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Senior first baseman Adam Kolb was the Rocks' primary hero on Monday. Kolb, who went 2-for-4 with four RBI, either tied the game or gave Salem the lead on three different occasions.

Justin Barnett also deserves the "hero" label. It was his two-out, solo home run that tied the game at 8-8 in the bottom of the sixth.

The way the early stages of the game unfolded, it looked like the Rocks would roll. While the offense generated a three-run first inning, starting pitcher Jason Lukasik was striking out four of the first six batters he faced. As a result, Salem led, 3-1, after two innings.

However, the Vikings rebounded with a two-run third inning and a four-run fourth to seize a 7-3 lead.

It stayed that way until the sixth when Central put one run on the board to make it 8-3.

The Rocks then put on a stunning display of resiliency, scoring five runs in the bottom of the sixth to knot the game at 8-8.

Both teams scored two runs each in the seventh and the Vikings scored an unearned run in the top of the ninth to take a 11-10 lead.

Salem won the game in the bottom of the ninth on RBI hits from Kolb and Chad Goethe. Mike Thackaberry scored the decisive run.

Rumberger said he is surprised by the way his team is winning games this season.

"Going in, we expected pitching to be our strength," he said. "But it's been our hitting that has led us."

"I'm not happy with all the errors we've been committing (five on Monday). It probably has something to do with how cold it was; no kid likes to play in this kind of weather. It will just give me something to work on in practice."

Senior Steve Gordon (1-1) earned the win for the Rocks, who paraded six different hurlers to the mound against the Vikings. Of the six, Rumberger singled out senior Chris Hardy for his three-inning stint from the fourth through the sixth.

"Chris held us in there when it looked like it might get out of hand," Rumberger said. "He did a nice job."

Senior catcher Ian Winter paced the Salem offensive attack, going 3-for-5

Spitfires eliminated by Whalers

In the end, the Plymouth Whalers proved too fast and too deep for the Windsor Spitfires.

The Whalers clinched the best-of-seven-games series with a 4-1 triumph Saturday in front of 2,109 fans at Compuware Arena. It was their fourth win in five games against the Spits, and their eighth in their last nine playoff games.

Plymouth now advances to the Ontario Hockey League Western Conference finals against the winner of the Erie/Sault Ste. Marie series; through Tuesday, the series was even at three-games apiece.

The Whalers open the conference finals at home at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Goals by Damian Surma and Justin Williams got the Whalers started Saturday against Windsor. Surma scored his fifth playoff goal 6:01 into the opening period, with assists going to Tomas Kurka and Jared Newman.

Williams made it 2-0 at 10:42 with his ninth goal of the playoffs, assisted by Newman and Libor Ustrnul. The Spits closed the gap to a single goal with a power-play marker by Vince Grant with 5:39 left.

But that was all Windsor could manage against Plymouth and goalie Rob Zepp. The Whalers had a commanding 38-21 shot advantage.

Randy Fitzgerald made it 3-1 with a power-play goal — his eighth of the playoffs — scored at 2:53 of the second period. Shaun Fisher and Williams assisted. Kurka's empty net goal with 1:14 left in the game finished the scoring.

Zepp stopped 20 of the 21 shots he faced. Mike Leighton had 35 saves for Windsor.

Rocks rule Lady Chiefs Relays

Of the 15 teams that competed in Saturday's Lady Chiefs Relays, one stood well above the field.

Plymouth Salem scored 86 1/2 points, winning four of the 14 events and placing in the top six in all but two. The next best team was Brighton with 62 points, followed by Livonia Stevenson with 59.

Host team Plymouth Canton was seventh with 23 1/2 points. Westland John Glenn was ninth with 20, Livonia Ladywood placed 11th with 14 and Farmington Mercy took 13th with seven.

The Rocks set two meet records, winning the 4x100-meter relay in 51.3 with Michelle Bonior, Celena Davis, Jessica Shamberger and Rachel Jones and placing first in the 4x400 relay in 4:12.8 with Autumn Hicks, Valerie Brown, Brynne DeNeen and Jones.

GIRLS TRACK

Canton also set a new meet record, placing first in the sprint medley relay in 3:01.9, with Tekla Bude, Amy Fitzsimmons, Elizabeth Lanning and Meredith Fox.

Other Salem wins came in the long jump relay, with DeNeen, Davis and Shamberger (45-foot, 9 3/4-inches), and in the discus relay, with Tiffany Grubaugh, Miranda White and Lori Cairo (296-5).

Grubaugh, Bonior and Cairo also finished second in the shot put relay (101-1 1/2), one of four second-place finishes for the Rocks.

Others went to Aisha Chappell, Hicks and Mary Lou Liebau in the high jump relay (14-8); Lisa Jasnowski, Kelly Solano, Kim Wood and Erin Jensen in the 4x3,200 cross country relay (44 points); and Hicks, Davis, DeNeen and Jones in the 4x200 relay (1:50.5).

Salem added a pair of thirds: Chappell, Rachel Brown, Staci Schmedding and Val Brown in the shuttle hurdles (1:11.0) and Chappell, Val Brown, Kristin Kukhahn and Rachel Brown in the 4x300 hurdles relay (3:26.8).

Salem is now idle until May 4, when it hosts rival Livonia Stevenson in a key Western Lakes Activities Association dual meet. Canton travels to Livonia Churchill May 4.

Strong returning lineup could give Canton a lift

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisk@oe.homecomm.net

If not exactly spectacular, Plymouth Canton's girls golf team a year ago was at least consistent and competitive.

The Chiefs finished sixth in the Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament, shooting a 412 (two strokes behind Walled Lake Central), and were sixth in the overall WLAA standings.

Gone from that lineup is just one golfer: Stephanie Koppe, who was Canton's third-best scorer at the conference tournament.

With the other four top golfers returning, one would think coach Dan Riggs would be highly optimistic about the coming campaign. But Riggs chooses to be more cautious with his expectations.

"We lose one kid, and we're still pretty much where we were last year," Riggs said. "Still, there might be some surprises. But realistically, overall in the conference if we finish anywhere from sixth to eighth, that would be good."

If his team has improved at all from last season, then Riggs will be incorrect — a prospect he wouldn't mind at all. Returning are a pair of all-division golfers in Julie Dziekan, a senior, and Christina Slupek, a junior. They will share the captaincy this season.

Dziekan led Canton at the WLAA Tournament last season, carding a 98. Slupek was next best with a 101.

Also returning with varsity experience are juniors Jessica Pondell and Katie Herbeck and sophomore Meghan Stewart. Pondell (110) and Herbeck (123) both scored at the WLAA Tournament.

"I expect those five kids to be right there, as far as their scores," said Riggs. "I'm looking for good things from all of them."

A year older, a year wiser — right? At Monday's season-opener, the Brighton Invitational at Oak Pointe, Pondell and Stewart turned in solid performances, scoring a 97 and a 98 respectively. Dziekan wasn't bad with a 107, but Herbeck had an off day, firing a 125.

Slupek was out with the flu. Dziekan, Riggs felt, would be "my most consistent golfer." Others who could contribute are sophomore Andrea Kirk, junior Liz Kunath, and freshmen Lindsay Amann and Jenna Hartland.

What Canton is lacking is that one anchor, a standout golfer who could carry the Chiefs into contention. Farmington Consolidated, for example, returns Cassie Jemison, who was the league medalist last season.

At Brighton, she scored an 80 — which is why Farmington beat every other WLAA team at the Invitational, shooting a 381 (Canton scored 427).

Farmington Consolidated is just one team Riggs figures to be in the hunt for the WLAA title. Northville (fourth overall) and Livonia Churchill (second) should be at the top in the Western Division, with Canton right behind.

In the Lakes, it'll be Farmington and defending league champ Livonia Stevenson.

"We have to have good practices and work hard on it," said Riggs, noting the short season — it runs just six weeks, with a 12-day break for spring vacation included. "The teams that are close to us (in talent level), we just have to beat them."

"The whole season could be interesting. I've got a great group of kids, I like working with them. We're going to do the best we can and try to be competitive, which we usually are."

Canton hosted Walled Lake Western yesterday at Hilltop. The Chiefs return to action May 1, when they host Livonia Franklin at Hilltop. On May 3, they play Plymouth Salem at the same location.

Brighton Invitational

Grosse Ile topped the field at Oak Pointe, scoring a 325 — 20 strokes better than runner-up Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook (345). Farmington Hills Mercy, the defending Division I champion, was third (349), with Ann Arbor Pioneer fourth (355) and Okemos fifth (358).

Farmington Consolidated, led by Jemison's 80, was best among WLAA teams with a 381. Next best among WLAA teams was Northville at 383, followed by Plymouth Salem at 401, Walled Lake Central at 414, Plymouth Canton at 427 and Walled Lake Western at 436.

Salem scorers were Angie Jones with a 94, Kim Tamme at 97, and Molly Hedges, Danielle March and Kellie Tamme all at 105.

A total of 28 teams participated.

Livonia Ladywood scored a 408, with Betsy Rais at 97, Amy Eischen at 100, Lani Koczara at 102 and Mary Griffin at 109.

Chiefs tie for 1st at Dearborn Elks Invite Plymouth Canton's boys track team left Saturday's Dearborn Elks Relays with the runners-up trophy and a feeling of satisfaction.

On Sunday, the Chiefs discovered something had gone wrong. There had been a mistake in the scoring.

But unlike a previous result this season, one they had to wait for a day to receive (see Salem vs. Canton, April 6), this one was positive. Points had incorrectly been given to Adrian; the amended version pushed Canton into a tie for first with the Maples.

"It was just exciting," said Canton coach Bob Richardson. "It was a beautiful day, everybody was focused on what they had to do — it was just a great day for the Chiefs."

Canton and Adrian each had 45 points to lead the 12-team invitational. Romulus was third (31), followed by Redford Catholic Central (29), Dearborn (28), Plymouth Salem (22), Temperance Bedford (20), Birmingham Brother Rice (15), South Lyon and University of Detroit Jesuit (six apiece), Wyandotte Roosevelt (five) and Westland John Glenn (zero).

Canton had four first-place finishes and two seconds. Jordan Chapman was a key to the Chiefs' success; he set a new Canton school record in the high jump, clearing 6-foot-6-inches (old record: 6-5, set by Mike DeJarnett in 1991), the best effort of the day. Chapman combined with Chris Kalis and Matt Dukes to total 17-10, good for first place.

The Chiefs also set a new Elks' meet record in winning the intermediate hurdles shuttle relay in 1:22.6 (old record: 1:23.0, set by Plymouth Salem in 1999). The record-setting team consisted of Jim O'Brien, Ricky Singh, Ugo Okwumabua and Kalis.

Other firsts went to O'Brien, Okwumabua, Dane Kobus and Kalis in the shuttle high hurdle relay (1:05.0), and to Chapman, Brian Page and Kevin Palmer in the pole vault relay (31-6).

Canton seconds went to K.J. Singh, Nate Howe, Jamie Bonner and Mike Parker in the 800-meter relay (1:33.9) and to Jack Tucci, Bonner, K.J. Singh and Jerry Gaines in the 1,600 relay (3:27.9). Both were season-best times for the Chiefs.

Okwumabua, Chapman and Dukes teamed for a third in the long jump relay (57-4 3/4); K.J. Singh, Howe, Gary Lee and Bonner combined for a third in the 400 relay (44.9); and Gaines, Tucci, Aaron Schmidt and Scott Gillen were winners in the distance medley (11:30.7).

The Chiefs' varsity is now idle until May 4, when it hosts Livonia Churchill in a Western Lakes Activities Association dual meet.

Salem 4th at Essexville, routs Falcons

Some strong doubles play carried Plymouth Salem's boys tennis team to a fourth-place finish at the Essexville Garber Invitational Saturday in Essexville.

Rochester won the tournament with 20 points, followed by Troy Athens (17), Petoskey (15) and Salem (14).

Jon Neal and Mark Coates, both seniors, were the Rocks top finishers, capturing the title at No. 4 doubles. The No. 2 doubles team of Yibo Ling and Jason Schamberger and the No. 3 tandem of Scott Peruski and Kyle Jose both reached the tournament finals before losing.

The No. 1 doubles team of co-captains Jason Meininger and Todd Schmalhurst placed third, losing a third-set tiebreaker to Petoskey 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-1).

The Rocks were without the services of No. 1 singles player Faraaz Siddiqui, who was forced out of action by illness.

Salem is now idle until May 1, when it plays at Walled Lake Western.

Salem follows WLAA loss with a sweep

Of the six games played in the last four days by Plymouth Salem's softball team, the one that mattered most was the one in which their offense did the least.

Unfortunately, On Monday against Western Lakes Activities Association Lakes Division rival Walled Lake Central, the Rocks came up with just four hits in losing 1-0 in a game played at Walled Lake Western.

"On defense, we look great," said Salem coach Bonnie Southerland. "We just couldn't answer with our hits."

Liz Dekarske certainly pitched well enough to win. She gave up one unearned run (in the third inning) on three hits and did not walk a batter, striking out 10. Four different players had singles for Salem.

The loss dropped the Rocks to 3-1 in the WLAA.

On Tuesday at Salem, they rebounded by sweeping a non-league double-header from Ann Arbor Huron, 9-0 and 7-1. Dekarske got the pitching win in the opener, improving to 3-2 with a two-hit, no-walk shutout; she struck out four.

Katie Kelly had two hits for the Rocks, including a two-run double in the second; Kelly Jaskot also had two hits, with a run-scoring double in the first; and Dawn Allen had a double and an RBI.

In the second game, Jacqui Sledobnick allowed just one run on three hits and two walks in six innings to beat the River Rats. Jen Allen had a triple and a double in the triumph and Kelly had a run-scoring triple; Shae Potocki and Jaskot each contributed a single and an RBI.

The two wins upped Salem's overall record to 7-2.

Taylor Tournament

Salem's stay at Saturday's Taylor Tournament started bad and ended well.

The Rocks lost their opener to WLAA foe Livonia Franklin, 3-1. Salem scored an unearned run in the second on a passed ball; Franklin came back to score three times in the sixth, two on a triple by Nikki Zabkiewicz.

Tara Muchow outdueled Dekarske; she gave up one run on three hits, while Dekarske allowed three runs on two hits.

Salem won its next two games, beating Romulus 16-0 in a three-inning mercy and Wayne Memorial 8-4.

Sledobnick won the first game; she did not give up a hit in her three innings, striking out four and walking one. Jen Allen had a three-run double and a single, driving in four runs to lead the offense; Dekarske went 3-for-3 with three RBI, Kelly contributed a triple and a single, and Jaskot had a two-run double.

Against Wayne, Salem scored four times in the first and added single runs in the next three innings to win easily. Kristen Miller was the victor, giving up four runs in 4 1/3 innings; Sledobnick pitched 3 2/3 innings of scoreless relief.

Marnie Jones had three hits to pace the Rocks; Katie Kelly had two. Dawn Allen had a single and two RBI, while Jen Allen, Amy Szawara, Sledobnick and Carrie Carter each chipped in with a hit and an RBI.

"That first game was a good one," said Southerland of the loss to Franklin. "We just let that one inning get away."

The Rocks are now idle until May 1.

Ladywood 4-3, Regina 1-8: Shelley Moros won her first game in four decisions in the opener.

Moros held Regina to just two hits, walking a pair and striking out three.

Shawn Fallon lost for the fourth time in five decisions in the nightcap Tuesday as three errors led to a four-run fifth inning that turned a 3-0 lead into a 4-3 deficit. Fallon allowed three hits in five innings, walking three.

Kristen Barnes had an RBI single in the opener while Megan Wilkenson had a triple plus a home run and a single in the second.

Ladywood (2-8) fell to 1-3 in the Catholic League. Harper Woods Regina is also 1-3 in the league.

Divine Child 2-5, Ladywood 1-4: A total of 21 hits in two games didn't add up to a single victory for the Blazers.

Livonia Ladywood pounded out 14 of those hits in the marathon nightcap of Monday's doubleheader, decided in the bottom of the 10th inning. The Falcons scored two in the bottom of the seventh after the Blazers had scored in the top of the inning to take a 4-2 lead.

Shawn Fallon drew the loss, working all 10 frames, striking out six and walking four. She gave up four hits.

Dawn Rini had two hits and drove in three runs for Ladywood. Fallon had two hits and Kathy Day contributed an RBI single.

In the first game, Ladywood scored in the top of the sixth but its rally fell a run short.

Shelley Moros worked seven innings, striking out four and walking three. Becky Mitchell had two hits.

with one RBI.

Redford CC 9-18, Salem 6-9: Sophomore Ryan Rogowski earned a win in his first prep decision in the opener, allowing just five hits over 4 2/3 innings.

Rogowski struck out two and walked three with Kevin Entsminger protecting the win with 2 1/3 innings of relief. Entsminger gave up five hits but struck out five and didn't walk a batter.

Matt Loidas hit a two-run home run in the fifth and doubled home two more in the seventh. John Hill drove in a run with a 2-for-3 game.

The Shamrocks (6-1) were held scoreless by Steve Gordon until breaking through for six runs in the fifth and tacking on three more in the seventh. They had 11 hits and made two errors.

Salem held a 3-0 lead after three, scored a run in the fifth and added two in the bottom of the seventh. The Rocks made three errors.

The Shamrocks started the second game with seven runs in the top of the first, featuring Jake Viane's grand slam, and put it away with four in both the fifth and sixth innings.

Charlie Haeger's grand slam accounted for the four-run fifth as CC pounded out 16 hits in the game and made two errors.

Salem chipped away until tying the score at 8-8 in the third. Walks added the Rocks as they only got five hits in the game.

Haeger went 2-for-2 and drove in six runs in the second game. Hill stroked three hits, two singles and a double. Loidas had two hits, a single and a double and drove in a run.

Dave Tovey went 3-for-5 with two doubles, a single and a walk, and scored three runs. Rogowski drove in two runs with two hits.

Jeff Niemiec, brought up from the junior varsity to offer some pitching help, came in to get his first varsity victory with 3 2/3 innings of one-hit relief. He fanned two and walked five.

Jason Lukasik paced the Salem attack with a single, triple and home run in two games.

Steve Stiles went 2-for-4 and scored three runs in the in first game. Gordon had three hits in the first game.

the WLAA playoffs. If Monday's game is an indication, none of the meetings will be a runaway.

Canton 3, N. Farmington 1: Anne Morrell provided the finishing touch in Plymouth Canton's victory Monday at North Farmington.

The junior forward scored all three goals for the Chiefs as they improved to 5-1-1 overall. North slipped to 6-3 overall.

Canton trailed 1-0 after the Raiders' Kelly Hogan scored the game's first goal. Morrell knotted it before halftime, with the assist going to Melanie Dunn.

Morrell's two second-half goals finished the Raiders. Assists went to Kara Marsh and Abi Morrell.

Last Saturday, the Chiefs suffered their first loss of the season, falling 3-0 to No. 2-ranked Troy Athens at Athens.

"They played a very tough game, and we didn't come to play," said Canton coach Don Smith.

Salem 1, Saline 0: After a scoreless first half, Plymouth Salem got what proved to be the game-winning goal from Christen Shull in the second half in a non-league match played at Salem Saturday.

Katelyn Lee assisted on Shull's goal. Jill Dombrowski (first half) and Jenny Fitchett (second) divided time in goal for the Rocks.

"It was a pretty hard-fought game," said Salem coach Joe Nora.

Editor's note: The Troy Athens-at-Plymouth Salem soccer match, originally scheduled for April 8, will be played today at Athens.

Woodrow, season ticket sales have "already exceeded last year."

One good reason for that are prices. "The overall ticket prices will go down, from $16 to $14," said Woodrow. Other special events, like Sunday Brunch with the Rockers — a package featuring a family brunch with the team at Ginopolis (located in the arena) with tickets to the ensuing game — are in the works.

The Rockers will also continue to do their camps in the area. "They do a lot of their camps out here already," said Vellucci. "I think it'll be a positive for the community."

As for the changes that need to be made to handle the new tenant, Vellucci isn't overly concerned. A wooden platform will be placed over the ice surface and a carpet will be laid on top of that for the Rockers.

The Rockers' team offices will remain in Walled Lake and no change in the team name is foreseen, but team uniforms will be updated.

"The Whalers get preference, obviously," Vellucci said. "But with the dates, it should be no problem."

A few arena alterations are necessary, he added. For Rockers games, nets that will extend into the stands must be placed behind each goal. The Whalers' scoreboard, which could present an obstacle for Rockers' goal kicks, will remain as is.

The owner of the Whalers, Compuware Arena and the NHL's Nashville Predators is Peter Karmanos.

Fitzgerald honored

Randy Fitzgerald, a left-winger for the Plymouth Whalers, was named OHL player of the week for the period ending April 16 after scoring four goals in four games to help the Whalers eliminate the Windsor Spitfires from the OHL playoffs in five games.

Fitzgerald, who stands 5-foot-11 and weighs 174, has eight goals and four assists (12 points) in the playoffs, which ranks eighth in OHL playoff scoring. For the regular season, the team captain had 18 goals and 24 assists (42 points).

Earlier Monday, Fitzgerald was named the hardest worker and best defensive forward in the OHL Western Conference in a coach's poll.

Ambassadors eliminated

The Danville Wings defeated the defending North American Hockey League and national champion Compuware Ambassadors in two games in their best-of-three NAHL semifinal series last weekend at Compuware Arena.

Danville won both games by a 3-2 score. On Friday, Dan Knapp scored twice for the Ambassadors in the third period to give them a 2-1 lead, but the Wings came back with two goals of their own, including the game-winner with 3:27 remaining from Adam Wallace, his second of the contest.

On Saturday, Ambrose Tappe scored the game-winner 10:58 into overtime to clinch the series triumph for the Wings. Compuware, winner of the last two NAHL titles, had a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Josh Griffith and Alex Sawruk.

Danville trimmed it to one on a first-period goal by Shane Saum, then tied it early in the third period on a goal by Todd Grant.

Craig Kowalski had 70 saves in goal in his last two games for the Ambassadors.

Danville will meet the Texas Tornado for the NAHL Robertson Cup in a best-of-five series April 21-30.

BUILDING LASTING RELATIONSHIPS SINCE 1900

Jabczenski helps Crusaders win 3

There were a couple of milestones reached by Madonna University's baseball team last weekend.

First, in Saturday's double-header sweep of Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference rival Concordia College, Crusader coach Greg Haeger collected his 100th career victory. Now in his fourth season as Madonna's coach, Haeger (a Redford Catholic Central graduate from Livonia) was 101-91-4 through Saturday.

Another milestone: Senior left-hander Mitch Jabczenski became the third consecutive Madonna pitcher to be named WHAC pitcher of the week (through April 16). Jabczenski was 2-0 with a 1.50 earned run average for the week, allowing two runs and no walks with eight strikeouts in 12 innings.

For the season, Jabczenski was 3-2 with a 3.38 ERA, 37 strikeouts and just eight walks in 37 1/3 innings.

On Sunday, Madonna split a double-header with WHAC foe Tri-State University, losing the first 7-1 and winning the second 6-2 at Madonna Park.

In the opener, Eric Williamson was the losing pitcher for Madonna, giving up five runs on 13 hits in 6 1/3 innings. Ray Sterling was the winner, allowing the Crusaders just three hits.

In the second game, Jabczenski got his third win of the season, giving up two earned runs on six hits and no walks, striking out four. Tim Hancock took the loss for Tri-State.

Derick Wolfe and Lance Siegwald each had three hits, including a double, for Madonna. Jason Brooks had a hit and two runs batted in, Mark Cole and Joe Pruchnik had two hits and an RBI apiece, and Neil Wildfong (from Plymouth Canton) had a hit and an RBI.

The split left Madonna at 22-12-1 overall, 11-7 in the WHAC. Tri-State is 18-14 overall, 7-7 in the WHAC.

Against Concordia Saturday at Madonna Park, the Crusaders swept the Cardinals 12-2 and 4-3. In the first game, Ryan Andrzejewski improved to 3-1 with a two-run, two-hit performance over five innings. Jason Maykovich was the loser for Concordia (3-24, 0-14 in the WHAC). Dave Kwiatkowski (from Plymouth Canton) and Joe Pruchnik each slugged solo home runs for Madonna; Kwiatkowski had two hits in the game.

Wildfong added two hits and two RBI, while Todd Miller and Bob Hamp each had two hits, two runs scored and an RBI. Wolfe added a two-run triple.

In the second game, an error followed by singles by Mario D'Herin and Miller delivered the game-winning run in the bottom of the seventh. Wolfe got the pitching win in relief of starter Nick Newman (two runs in five innings) and Jeremy Stevens.

Wolfe and Jason Brooks each had two hits (including a double) and an RBI, D'Herin had two hits, and Miller and Pruchnik had a hit and an RBI apiece.

Aquinas, Cornerstone each take a pair from Madonna

The wheels have fallen off the wagon for Madonna University's young softball team the past couple of days.

On Monday morning, the Lady Crusaders were tied for second in the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference with a 9-7 record; they were 24-15 at that time.

But in a 24-hour span their status changed dramatically, after losing a pair of WHAC double-headers.

On Monday at Livonia Ladywood, Madonna was trimmed by WHAC leader Aquinas College 6-4 and 10-0. The opening game was tied at 2-2 entering the seventh inning; with one out, a single by Kristen Jones and a double by Renee Bolitho gave the Saints a lead they would not lose.

Melinda added a two-run double in the inning; a sacrifice fly by Jodi Overkleef made it 6-2. Aquinas would need all of it; in their half of the inning, the Crusaders scored two runs on a single by Emily Cunningham and a bases-loaded walk to Jennifer Kruzal that put the tying run at second with two out.

But with Cassi Gragg on the mound, Devon Fletcher grounded out to end it.

Vicki Malkowski led Madonna with three hits; Cunningham had one hit and three runs batted in, and Kruzal and Stacie Wilson each had a hit and an RBI.

Jenny Tenyer took the loss for Madonna, giving up five earned runs on nine hits and a walk, striking out two. Melinda Rose was the winning pitcher for Aquinas; she surrendered two earned runs on seven hits and five walks.

The second game was, again, close until the sixth inning. That's when the Saints struck for nine runs to increase their 1-0 lead to 10-0 and force a mercy after six. Gragg got the win for Aquinas, stopping Madonna on four singles and three walks, striking out four.

Jennifer Staub took the loss for Madonna; four of the 10 runs she allowed were earned, on 13 hits and a walk. She fanned five.

Tuesday's games against Cornerstone weren't any better. Madonna lost both, by 9-1 and 1-0 margins in Grand Rapids.

The Crusaders totaled four hits in the twinbill. In the opener, four Madonna errors led to four unearned runs and a loss for Tenyer, dropping her to 9-7; she lasted three innings, giving up six runs (two earned) on seven hits and a walk, striking out two.

Tarrah Brown tossed three perfect innings for the Golden Eagles to get the win.

The second game was a pitchers' duel, with Cornerstone getting a run off Staub in the first inning and making it stand up. Staub allowed just two hits and a walk, but fell to 10-6 with the defeat. Brown again was the winning pitcher, also giving up two hits and a walk. She's 12-1.

Last weekend, Madonna competed in the University of St. Francis Tournament in Joliet, Ill., and came away with a 3-3 record.

On Saturday, the Crusaders lost to St. Xavier 4-2 and to host St. Francis 4-2, and defeated Iowa Wesleyan 5-1. On Sunday, they lost to Grand View 4-3 but beat St. Francis (Ind.) 16-6 and Mt. Mercy 12-6.

In Sunday's two wins, Kristy McDonald (from Redford Thurston) was a combined 5-for-6 with five runs scored, two home runs and five RBI.

Madonna was 24-19 overall, 9-11 in the WHAC through Tuesday. Cornerstone improved to 17-7 overall, 9-6 in the WHAC; Aquinas (through Monday) was 30-13 overall, 14-4 in the WHAC.

Borgess coach/AD resigns

BY PAUL BEAUDRY
STAFF WRITER
pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net

This was not the ending that Redford Bishop Borgess principal Sister Joan Charnley wanted for athletic director and girls basketball coach Dave Mann.

Mann resigned last week after an investigation by the Detroit Catholic League resulted in "concerns" of undue influence regarding tuition payments for his players.

"It's unfortunate because Dave worked hard and was respected by parents and students," said Charnley. "This really happened more quickly than I thought."

Charnley will assume the athletic director duties until a permanent replacement is found and hopes to have both positions filled by the end of the school year. Charnley met with the coaches and staff last Friday and told them of the change. Mann told his players Friday and cleaned out his office and turned in his keys the following day.

DCL officials were concerned when four players transferred out of school in January. The Spartans were 11-12 overall in 1999 and were eliminated from the Class C tournament by Detroit Communication and Media Arts — coached by James Rogers, a former assistant under Mann at Borgess. One of the four players, DeShawna Hoskins, is now at CMA. Mann is also the women's basketball coach at the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

"Incidents occurred that we were concerned about," said DCL director Tom Rashid. "It's inappropriate for specifics, but incidents occurred and (both the school and the league) investigated. We feel that it was thorough in scope. During the course of the investigation, he resigned and we accepted."

The investigation revolved around possible violations of the Michigan High School Athletic Association's rule involving undue influence, which prohibits schools from offering partial or full payment of tuition based on a student's athletic ability.

Parochial students and their families are allowed to reduce their tuition payments through academic scholarships, volunteering their time at school and church-affiliated aid.

Current tuition at Bishop Borgess is $3,975 and will rise again for the 2000-01 school year to roughly $4,100.

"People can get help in paying the tuition," Charnley said. "Some parents donate time to the school and so do the students. We've also found they get help from their extended family to help pay the tuition. And there are students who are eligible for help from programs the Archdiocese sponsors."

The Michigan High School Athletic Association had no comment on the matter. Under its rules, the MHSAA can not take action until a formal complaint has been made.

If the MHSAA deems the action taken by a school to police itself unsatisfactory, it could issue additional sanctions. If a coach is still at the school in violation of the rules, he could face penalties. But once that coach leaves the school, he would not be subject to penalty.

Should a formal complaint be lodged against Borgess, it would be heard before the MHSAA's representative council to determine guilt and/or subsequent sanctions. Should Borgess be found guilty by the MHSAA of violating the undue influence rule, only the school would face penalty. Mann would be allowed to coach at any other school without being held to the same sanctions as Borgess.

Mann, who did not return phone calls at home or at Michigan-Dearborn, still has the support of his current employer.

"I have only had a brief conversation with Dave about this," said Wolves' athletic director Peggy Foss. "At the present time, he's still our basketball coach. We have no immediate plans to make changes. At Bishop Borgess, I think there were only allegations. I don't know what was proven."

Mann had been the athletic director at the school for the past two years, replacing alumnae Diane Convery. His record in 11 seasons at the school was 198-79 with Class C championships in 1993, 1994 and 1997.

This is not the first time that Mann had come under scrutiny.

In 1997, the DCL investigated Mann for improprieties in paying his high school players to work at unofficial AAU tournaments run by him at Michigan-Dearborn. DCL officials ruled Mann could pay his players up to $500 per school year to work, but the money had to be applied to their tuition at Borgess.

Students were paid $6 per hour to work at the tournaments for doing things like keeping score, running the clock, setting up and breaking down for the tournaments. The workers were not exclusively students from Bishop Borgess, but from several metro Detroit high schools. Borgess students needing the tuition credit had their limit capped at $500 and the money was supposed to go to the school. Students who had their tuition paid in full and the students at other schools received their earnings in cash.

"There was an investigation three years ago and at that time, the ruling was everything was fine and in line," Charnley said.

That same year, in perhaps his most controversial act, he openly admitted encouraging people to join the Basketball Coaches Association of Michigan to help Ayisha Smith win the group's Miss Basketball Award. Several ballots came in as the deadline neared with only Smith's name on the ballot instead of the three names allowed.

When the voting was tabulated, she easily won the award — 818-463 and 145-45 in first-place votes — over runner-up Tawana McDonald of Flint Northern.

While within the voting rules at the time, the perceived abuse of the rule forced BCAM to change membership rules to no longer allow game officials to vote and all new members must wait until the following school

For dancers only: Wynton Marsalis and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra swing the night away on their For Dancers Only tour.

SWINGS the night away

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

It's 10 a.m. California time and Rodney Whitaker is awakening to a view of the ocean outside his room at a West Coast hotel. Santa Cruz is the second stop on the 23-city tour the native Detroit is playing with trumpeter Wynton Marsalis and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra.

Sound grueling? Not for Whitaker who loves swinging the nights away. Together with Marsalis and the orchestra, Whitaker spends eight months a year on the road introducing audiences to jazz and swing dancing. Their For Dancers Only tour, named after Sy Oliver's 1937 chart for the Jimmie Lunceford Orchestra, is reawakening people to the fun of dancing to swing music.

On Saturday, April 22, the orchestra will stop at Eastern Michigan University as part of its tour. The tour will continue on to concert and dance halls including the Roseland Ballroom in New York where the performance will be broadcast by the BBC. A free lesson with national swing dance champions Janice Wilson and Paola Lanna precedes the April 22 dance concert presented by the University Musical Society. It is one of Jazz at Lincoln Center's educational efforts. It is being presented at EMU because the venue allows room for dancing.

"I love it," said Whitaker who plays bass with the orchestra. "Anything swing is good to me. We're trying to expose people to jazz. The best way is to have them come out and have fun dancing. When I was a kid in Detroit, I played with J.C. Heard and did a lot of dances. Growing up I thought it was a drag but now I enjoy it. It's enjoyable to see somebody inspired to swing to your music."

At age 32, Whitaker is too young to remember the era when dancers stopped moving to the sounds of Duke Ellington, Count Basie and Benny Goodman. Nonetheless, he's glad to see people back on their feet dancing to the timeless works of the legendary Big Band leaders along with new tunes by Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra trombonist Wycliffe Gordon and others.

"People have the tendency to think bebop brought about the end of swing dance," said Whitaker. "What a lot of people don't realize is that it was rock 'n' roll. People stopped dancing to jazz and started dancing to rock 'n' roll."

Whitaker thinks the rebirth of swing and jazz is a good thing. A professional jazz musician since age 17, Whitaker has performed with everyone from Branford Marsalis, Joe Henderson, Joshua Redman, Stanley Turrentine, and Kenny Garrett to Marcus Belgrave and Alma Smith. He joined the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra in August of 1996 at the request of artistic director Wynton Marsalis. Whitaker had run into Marsalis in New York shortly after his Children of the Light album came out. He had recorded with Marsalis a few years before. Now Whitaker was asking the legendary jazz trumpeter to play on his next album Hidden Kingdom. Whitaker has appeared on more than 70 recordings. Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow, his fourth album as a leader, will be released in May. The title is taken from a poem by Khalil Gibran.

"Sometimes we try to possess life instead of living life," said Whitaker. "You have to embrace life and live it while you can. This is my coming of age album."

Bass wasn't Whitaker's first love. He began playing violin in fourth grade and "fell in love with it" but eventually switched to bass at the suggestion of his teacher Hosea Taylor at Remus-Robinson Junior High in Detroit. The only child in a family of eight to become a musician, Whitaker now is passing on his love of music not only to his five children but to others as well.

Whitaker was in town in February to perform with the Lincoln Center Jazz Sextet which served a week-long residency in conjunction with the University Musical Society in Ann Arbor. Whitaker gave several master classes in Detroit-area schools and narrated a program broadcast by Wayne RESA to students in Wayne, Oakland and several other counties around the state of Michigan.

Whitaker believes educating young people about jazz is one of the most important things he can do. Since September, he's been coaching students in the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra's jazz band. Whitaker played with the civic orchestra from age 15.

"That organization has a lot to do with me being a professional musician," said Whitaker, a jazz studies professor at Michigan State University since 1995. Whitaker formerly taught at the University of Michigan. "They paid for my lessons through high school so I'm just giving back. It's great to be able to inspire these kids and it's inspiring to see someone inspired by your words. And I'm learning a lot about teaching and patience."

Ballroom dancing looks like a rising phoenix — a rage that lit up movie screens and dance halls in the 1940s only to burn out and resurface as an exercise in nostalgia at the turn of the century.

But local instructors and aficionados of ballroom dancing prefer to use the term "rediscovery" to describe the form's recent rise in popularity, a movement fueled by younger generations' attraction to swing and salsa on the night club circuit and a steady stream of Latin-inspired music in popular culture.

The fire now engulfs the stage in Burn The Floor, a sensuous, no-holds-barred ballroom revue that runs April 25-30 at the Fox Theatre in Detroit.

"For those of us who are hooked on it, it never died," said 71-year-old Nora Nader, a local ballroom instructor who fondly recalls when "touch dancing" flourished in the Detroit area. "What's happened is through television and movies there's been a revival," said Nader, an instructor at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

Others have simply discovered ballroom's many benefits — healthy social recreation, source for entertainment and a good form of physical and mental exercise, said Glenn Clark, a professional ballroom dancer and co-owner of Stardust Ballroom dance studio in Southfield.

"You can go the gym and work out, but you can't go to a night club in a short shirt and show off your abs unless you're there to dance," Clark joked.

Gilda's Club honors memory of comedian

BY KEELY WYGONIK

Just thinking about comedian Alyce Faye makes me smile. She was kind-hearted, funny, and generous with her time and talent. Most of her phone calls to the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers were to ask if we could do something to help someone in need, not to promote her latest gig at a local club.

Diagnosed with lung cancer in August 1999, Faye kept making people smile until she died in November.

On Wednesday, May 3, Gilda's Club of Metro Detroit is honoring her memory by presenting the "It's Always Someone Special" award to her husband Fred Sewell at Gilda's Big Night Out II. The award is presented to the person who has demonstrated a strong commitment to Gilda's Club Metro Detroit.

Faye, a resident of Farmington, was one of the early supporters of Gilda's Club Metro Detroit, which opened on Jan. 28, 1998. She founded Motor City Women of Comedy with comedian Mary Miller in 1994, and hosted an annual fund-raiser for Gilda's Club of Metro Detroit. The last one was held in 1997.

Named in honor of comedian Gilda Radner, a native Detroit who died from ovarian cancer in 1989, the club offers men, women and children and their families and friends opportunities to share experiences, develop strategies for living with cancer and make new friends. The 6,000-square-foot clubhouse in Royal Oak offers a home-like atmosphere where members can participate in support and networking groups, workshops, lectures and social events.

"Alyce came to us out of the blue," said Geri Lester of Franklin, treasurer of the board of directors for Gilda's Club Metro Detroit, and one of the club's founders. "She begged and borrowed from friends, and worked hard to put on a successful event to benefit Gilda's Club. She had all of her comedian friends donate their time; none of them charged a penny. They all gave of their time and talent, it was really something. She was a very wonderful person who had no trouble motivating others."

Miller, who lived in Farmington Hills, West Bloomfield Township and Berkley before moving to Ohio, met Faye at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle in Royal Oak.

"Gilda Radner was an inspiration to women," said Miller. "I heard about Gilda's Club and thought wouldn't it be cool if we all got together to make Gilda's dream come true. I immediately called my tors, added Nader. "We need to be participators. We need to be a part of what's going on, and not just visually," she said. "Plus, we're more health-conscious. We need other ways to work out our calories and our feelings, and dancing is a nice, safe way to express yourself."

And, while more couples and individuals are taking up or rediscovering ballroom dancing, the 44 professional dancers who perform in Burn The Floor are offering audiences an opportunity to see the tango, cha cha cha, waltz, lindy hop and six other ballroom styles at their technical best.

The performers, some of the world's top ballroom champions, are the "black belts" of the form, said Clark, who has scheduled a Burn The Floor field trip for instructors and more than 40 of his studio's students, from beginners to competition-level dancers.

The show promises a high level of technical and athletic ability, but Burn The Floor, unlike ballroom competition, isn't bound by rules or, for that matter, image. Burn The Floor showcases a group of top-notch professionals "pretty much doing what they do best and just going all out ... kind of like Riverdance but with ballroom," said Clark.

Traditions and new twists

Inspired by a crowd-pleasing ballroom performance at Elton John's 50th-birthday party, Burn The Floor appropriately skirts the rules in favor of energetic theatricality, invention and individuality.

"It's anything but about rules," said Jason Gilkison, a member of the cast and the show's artistic director. "This will change people's perspective on what ballroom dancing is."

■ That ballroom dance is being presented as theater for the stage and public performance is evidence of its transformation.

Created by Harley Medcalf, promoter of Lord of the Dance, the show not only takes audiences on a journey through the world of ballroom dancing but also puts a new spin on several dance styles. "We take a dance like the cha cha cha, and put the dancers in street clothes and Dock Martens, and then the nature of the dance starts to change," said Gilkison.

Likewise, the show begins with a traditional rendition of the waltz. "With the innocence between men and women, the man gently leading the woman, and the woman never looking at the man," Gilkison said. "At the end of that, one of the dancers rips his tuxedo off - the man sort of sheds off the mask of the old ballroom to reveal the opposite of that innocence."

A form evolving

The show's opening metaphor is an appropriate one, given ballroom's recent growth and continuing evolution.

That ballroom dance is being presented as theater for the stage and public performance is evidence of its transformation.

More importantly, technique levels are higher than in years past, and athleticism is playing a significant role in today's ballroom competitions.

Some have even dubbed competition-level ballroom "dance sport." Once more, there's a push to bring ballroom competition to the Olympics.

"Most people think of ballroom dancing and think of Lawrence Welk and the bubble machine. Ballroom dancing today is for all ages, and it's enthusiastic and very physical. It's really a new generation of dancing," said Clark.

Ballroom training has also become much more sophisticated, said Nader, who was trained at one of Detroit's first Arthur Murray dance studios in the late '40s. Likewise, interpretation of the form and specific styles has become more of an art form, she said.

Even ballroom's most basic principle - man leading woman - may gradually undergo transformation, Nader added, recalling a recent class in which a young male student asked her why he had to lead when his partner had better timing. "And, that was true," said Nader. "But tradition says the guys are supposed to lead. I think it may be whoever is the stronger of the two that will be the leader."

Partnership

One thing that will never come under siege in ballroom dancing is partnership. "That's what ballroom is about," said Gilkison. Take away partnership, two dancers engaged in a dialogue and working together to express themselves, and ballroom, by definition, becomes freestyle dance.

And, partnership is perhaps what makes Burn The Floor so accessible to audiences. "The audience identifies with relationships in their own life," said Gilkison. "And, it's not just happy all the time. We look at all aspects of life."

Off the stage and in the dance studio, partnership is a learning experience, Nader said of ballroom's appeal. While younger generations are discovering the form, they're also just learning that "someone has to lead and someone has to follow," she said. "I see this all the time ... a little power play, 'He can only be as good as I let him.' Then, a give-and-take, the considerations in life, the respect in life, the helping of each other."

Physical flirtations: Burn The Floor, a marathon of ballroom dancing, churns out lusty renditions of such dances as the tango, samba and rumba.

best friend, Alyce. She was already planning the event before we got off the phone."

Together, Miller and Faye enlisted the help of other comedians to host an annual benefit for Gilda's Club. In 1997 these Motor City Women of Comedy enlisted the help of a few good men, too.

"Alyce had a real knack for making everything an event, she thrived on it," said Miller. "She made it a spectacular, elegant event. She made it happen. She was the ultimate hostess."

Miller also commented on Faye's ability to motivate others. "When Rosie O'Donnell got her own show, Alyce and I sent her flowers to congratulate her. The card that said 'you go girl,' we signed it Motor City of Comedy. Alyce kept in touch with Rosie, and in 1996 when it was time to begin planning our benefit for Gilda's Club, she asked Rosie to make a donation. From watching the show, Alyce learned that Rosie had just lost a friend to cancer. You can imagine her excitement when Rosie sent a check for $10,000.

"Alyce touched so many lives, and her laughter lives on. I miss being able to see her perform because she was so talented. I was fortunate to be able to visit her when she was sick, just to help out. Even when she was tired from the treatments she would think of something to say to bring a smile to someone's face. She wanted everyone to feel good.

"I'm so thankful they're doing this (giving her the award). She's an inspiration to me."

Miller - who works as a comedian throughout the Midwest, including Ohio, and books comedians at various clubs and venues - will be attending the event.

Also being honored is the memory of Linda Kozlowski, who volunteered her time to Gilda's Club and the community before dying of breast cancer in 1996.

"Linda's mission was to bring the need for breast cancer awareness and education to the community's attention," said Lester. Kozlowski's mission continues in a fund called "Women Alive."

In honoring her memory, Kozlowski's husband, Dr. Jay Kozlowski, her mother, Evelyn Kasle, and sister and brother-in-law, Lisa and Gary Shiffman, will serve as honorary chairpersons for Gilda's Big Night Out II.

The event will feature a performance by comedian Jeffrey Ross, a silent auction, and a strolling supper.

"We have some lovely pieces of jewelry, car leases, sports memorabilia, tickets to baseball games - a wide variety of exciting items in different price ranges," said Lester about the auction.

Ross has appeared on The Late Show with David Letterman, The Tonight Show with Jay Leno, and Late Night with Conan O'Brien. Comedy Central fans know Ross for his Friar's Club Roasts and stand-up specials, Pulp Comics and Lounge Lizards.

He is currently writing and appearing on Comedy Central's The Man Show, and also stars in the Showtime original film Karaoke Knight. He will star in a cameo role in The Rocky & Bullwinkle Movie, starring Robert DeNiro and Renee Russo.

"Gilda's Club is a special place," said Lester. "We hope people will support us."

BY SUE SUCHYTA
SPECIAL WRITER

"The Trial of God" is a tragic farce that puts God on trial in the aftermath of a devastating pogrom that all but annihilated a small Russian Jewish community.

Inspired by events during his childhood in Auschwitz, Nobel Peace Prize winning author Elie Wiesel has created a play whose characters demand to know why God allows innocent people to suffer at the hands of their persecutors. Wiesel insisted that humor in his script be preserved amidst the horror of the survivors' accounts. As they hold court against God, we find the prosecution subconsciously defending God, instead of becoming more vehemently opposed to him.

In addition to presenting high quality community theater productions, Trinity House has pledged to present works that it believes are "brave, necessary and truthful." In the midst of ethnic cleansing atrocities around the world daily, it becomes imperative that the horror of such crimes against humanity become more personal than a sound bite on CNN, lest we become desensitized. Trinity House accomplishes this by bringing this compelling story to its intense and intimate theater setting. Director Thomas Malcolm Olson has assembled and honed a strong and talented cast.

Cast

Mark Hammell of Lathrup Village portrays the embittered innkeeper Berish, who, along with his daughter Hannah, portrayed by Hannah Riddell of Canton, are the only surviving Jews after a brutal Pogrom in their village. Berish struggles with grief and guilt, and mourns silently over Hannah's devastated emotional state. Into this setting come three Purim Players, who are aghast when they discover their heart-wrenching error: they have come to a town where the intended celebrants have been massacred.

Hammell's portrayal of Berish is strong and intense. His agony and frustration with life's cruelty is reflected in both his words and his actions - his body is a mass of defeated tension, and his words ring out with the finality of bitterness toward God and man. His face is a fluid mask of emotions: anger, frustration and guilt.

Anessa Martin of Redford plays Maria, a lapsed Catholic servant at the end, with unrelenting intensity. She too carries a heavy burden of anger and distrust, since she witnessed the massacre of close friends, but she harbors her own secret tragedy. The physical defeat of her anger and grief is reflected in both her face and slumped body. She moves mechanically, without any joy, never allowing herself to relax. Her face shows the tension and debilitation of one always on guard and unable to seek of receive solace. Martin delivers her lines with force and intensity, commanding attention, and returning all verbal volleys with intense ferocity.

The three Purim Players, played by Paul Henry of Westland, Scot Martin of Redford and Art Colling of Livonia, are strong as a trio as well as in their individual roles. Henry, the unofficial leader of the band of players, exuded wisdom and patience, and became the judge during the trial of God. Martin, the youngest and least patient of the three, exhibited the group's collective anxieties with his body language and expressions. However, his impatience disappeared when Hannah's muddled recollection of the Purim legend called upon his chivalry and patience. Art Colling, the third of the trio, blends well into the camaraderie of the group.

Hannah Riddell's portrayal of the emotionally shattered and physically battered daughter is haunting and trancelike. Though her madness limits her character's cognizance, she effectively vents her suppressed rage and sorrow through her explosive grief for Queen Esther's ordeal.

Guy Snyder of Livonia effectively portrays the startling conflicts of the village priest. Clumsily anti-Semitic, as demanded by his indoctrination, he is nonetheless uncomfortable with the absolutes of the positions, and its contradictions of Christ's exhortations to love one's neighbor. He returns to Berish three times, ostensibly to drink, but in reality to warn him of an eminent attack by an angry mob of his own parishioners.

Dan Gumina of Redford is intriguing and contradictory as Sam, the mysterious stranger who arrives to defend God. Sam approaches the defense unemotionally, forcing the characters holding God up to judgment to constantly reassess their positions and justify their anger. Gumina is clever with a phrase, with well placed inflections and impeccable timing. His gaze is intense and startling, and he effectively shakes up the collection of humanity gathered in the inn.

Costumes

The costumes were mostly superb, from Maria's worn and dirty yet provocative tavern wench gown, to Hannah's innocent white night gown. The Purim Players' masks added an appropriate flavor to the show, providing much needed humor to a tense play. However, while the Purim players, Berish and the priest seemed to be costumed from compatible time periods, Sam's modern turtleneck and Alpine jacket seem out of place.

The set captured the elements of a rough countryside tavern well, but Trinity House's stain glass windows should have been masked - what were they doing in a Jewish tavern? And the three cabaret style tables with checkered cloths would have been better served by rough wooden benches. And Maria needs to stop sweeping into corners - get the poor girl a dustpan! The modern green glasses seemed out of place; mugs or tankards, or at least shot glasses might be more appropriate to our conceptions of the era.

While it is a long production, nearly three hours with two intermissions, Trinity House's presentation of "The Trial of God" is an intense, well-acted and thought-provoking drama, and is a compelling choice for those who like to be moved and challenged by their theater experience.

'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' perfect family event

The Marquis Theatre, 135 E. Main St., Northville, presents "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" 2:30 p.m. Monday-Friday, April 24-28 and Saturday April 29 at 2:30 p.m. Tickets $7.50, call (248) 349-8110. Please, no children under age 3.

Maybe, it is the moral of the story - "Parents, love your children well and children, learn to read and spell!" - that made this a perfect family event. Or it could be the squeaks of the rats, which brought a smile to everyone's face. It could be these and so many more things that make "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," now playing at the Marquis Theater in Northville, a great spring event and a nice vacation treat for children and adults of all ages.

Hamelin, a mystical village somewhere, has a problem with an infestation of rats. Enter the Pied Piper. Through the magic of his flute, he promises to get rid of the rats. When he doesn't get paid for his work by the mayor, he takes the children for payment.

So goes the story, which, luckily, has a happy ending. In the process, the audience is treated to delightful musical presentations.

Ken Haering, who plays the Piper, leads the talented cast of 18 adults and children, ranging in age from 8-15, with his strong voice.

Three young actresses do an exceptional job and are believable in male roles. They are Emily Moses, an eighth grade student, and Ashley Hernandez, a seventh grader, both at Power Middle School in Farmington; and Lauren Branstetter, a fifth grade student at Country Oaks Elementary in Commerce Township.

Another noteworthy performer is Debbie Lannen, who plays "Mabel" and serves as the production's director. She sings "Great Day" in a great way that gets a great response from the audience. One of the show-stopping numbers, which especially appeals to the youngsters in the audience, is the dance and squeaks of the rats to "Hall of the Mountain King."

In addition to the lively music, the show is enhanced by simple but believable scenery and creative and colorful costumes. One of the best trademarks of Marquis Theatre productions, which is also found in "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," is that they are short, sweet, but complete. The musicals are never too lengthy. This is especially good for young audience members.

Another feature that appeals to the youthful theatergoers is that audience participation is encouraged. Audience members are invited to join in the singing and are asked questions by the cast. The cast also performs in the aisles making the audience truly a part of the production.

"The Pied Piper of Hamelin" is still another of The Marquis Theatre's child-appealing presentations intended to introduce youngsters to the joy of live theater. It is worthwhile entertainment, like all the theater's offerings.

TV program showcases a broad range of talent

As host of Detroit Public TV's "Backstage Pass" series, I'm often asked how the performers are selected to appear on the program. The truth is that there is no consistent formula that is used. It might be the result of some scouting by our music producer Ron Pangborn or the suggestion of one of our music segment hosts. I've even been known to campaign successfully for some of my favorite artists. With so many worthy bands and musicians to choose from, the final decision is never easy.

BACKSTAGE PASS

Standouts

During the month of April, "Backstage Pass" has featured in-studio performances by such standouts as Al Jarreau, Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise and Marshall Crenshaw. In addition to tremendous talent, each had something special to offer.

Al Jarreau is coming off a hiatus from the recording industry and has released a new album. But mostly, he's Al Jarreau, and if you have a chance to book him, you take it.

Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise was making a return visit to the program after an astonishingly successful year for the Detroit-based rhythm-and-blues band. We were able to feature music from a new album and also showcase a group that will be among the headliners at the Detroit Music Awards.

The Marshall Crenshaw appearance, which you can still catch on Detroit Public TV 5:30 p.m. Thursday, or 1 a.m. Friday, was special to me for several reasons. His music is outstanding, of course. It was an important acknowledgment of a gifted, homegrown artist, who contributed much to the national music scene at a time when there were few performers emerging from Detroit. What made it especially memorable was the purpose for the Berkley High grad's return to our area: Marshall Crenshaw was the top name on the marquee for the Stewart Francke Leukemia Foundation benefit concert at the Royal Oak Music Theatre.

Local bands

Although we've featured big names in jazz (Jarreau), blues (Bradley), and pop/rock (Crenshaw), lesser-known local bands also had an opportunity this month. Perhaps you caught the outrageous performance by Stunning Amazon last week or are looking forward to the Atomic Numbers this Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Maybe the classical piano playing of Joel Hastings presented this week or the classical guitar and flute of the Dearing Concert Duo on this Sunday's show is more to your taste.

The criteria for selecting the music performers for Detroit Public TV's "Backstage Pass" I don't know where it ends, but it starts with talent and diversity.

'Keeping the Faith' gives twist to classic love story

Imagine it: A drunken priest stumbles into an Irish pub, slumps onto a stool and recounts a journey that begins with his sixth-grade buddies and ends with the love of his life falling for his best friend, a Rabbi.

While it sounds like the premise of a joke, no one has heard this one before. Touchstone Pictures and Spyclass Entertainment's "Keeping the Faith" spins an unusual love triangle in the modern day Manhattan. In the directorial debut of Edward Norton ("American History X" and "Fight Club"), the romantic comedy follows three childhood friends - Jake, Brian and Anna - from their carefree days on the basketball courts to careers inside a Roman Catholic Church, a Jewish synagogue and a boardroom.

When 12-year-old Anna must move with her family to California, the three musketeers are split apart. Years later, a sassy and refined Anna returns to the city on business, and manages to charm both of her friends. One look at Anna Riley - portrayed by the always perky Jenna Elfman ("Dharma and Greg") - and Rabbi Jake Schram (Ben Stiller) and Father Brian Finn (Norton) both fall for her.

Set against a backdrop awash

'Keeping The Faith' spins an unusual love triangle in modern day Manhattan.

with the vibrant lights of the Manhattan cityscape, Anastas Michos, director of photography, creates a place that - while it is so vast - seems only to revolve around the world of the three main characters. Yet the story, written by Stuart Blumberg, traces a congruous subtext of interpersonal relationships between a mother and her son, among two religious congregations, and throughout common perceptions of faith.

Dealing with serious issues of friendship, trust, faith and love, "Keeping The Faith" could've been a weighty film. But Norton and Blumberg kept the laughs coming with a blend of physical comedy, memorable characters and unexpected plot twists.

It's easy to feel for characters like handsome, charismatic Rabbi Jake and Father Brian, whose boyish charm and sensitivity appeals to everyone. Stiller ("There's Something About Mary") seems made for comedic roles, and runs with this opportunity to show off as the confident rabbi. In his dual role, Norton proves himself worthy as a director with a vision that helped bring the film to life, and a character exhibiting all the purity of a trusting man of God.

Known around the city as "The God Squad," and donning black leather, Brian and Jake breathe new life into their respective religions with striking speeches that use everyday pop culture references. Rabbi Jake even goes so far as to bring in a Harlem gospel choir to get his crowd on its feet. While traditional religious leaders cringe, Jake and Brian preside over packed houses and plan to open an interfaith senior center complete with karaoke.

The world they seem to hold in the palms of their holy hands spins upside-down when Anna, now a high-powered executive who's addicted to her cell phone, comes back into their lives. Elfman seems miles from her new-age television persona, Dharma, in the film. As Anna, she transforms into a woman of authority with an undeniable wit and magnetism.

Somewhere between blind dates with overly-eager women in his congregation, Jake and Anna begin a casual affair. Tensions rise as the couple hide their budding romance from Brian and from Jake's mother, Ruth (portrayed brilliantly by Anne Bancroft). Ruth has already disowned one son for marrying a Catholic girl. Jake doesn't want to risk falling out of her favor. But the truth comes out.

Meanwhile Brian begins to question his true faith with each friendly hug and kiss he receives from Anna. He reaches a point where he could envision giving up his life's work for her.

Faithfully friends: From left, Ben Stiller, Jenna Elfman and Edward Norton star in "Keeping The Faith," a film that tests the boundaries of friendship and religion.

He doesn't take the news lightly: "Talk about a bad case of the third wheel," says Brian to Anna. "I feel like I'm on some Aaron Spelling show - Melrose Priest."

What happens will restore everyone's faith in love and life. "Keeping the Faith" also introduces amusing secondary characters, including Ken Leung, as Don the karaoke salesman. Hoping into a scene singing to Rick Springfield's hit about jealousy, "Jesse's Girl," Don earns more than a few giggles. Brian George portrays the Indian bartender that Brian confesses his strange tale to, with a steady stream of good-natured humor. Simple sight gags showing Father Brian setting himself on fire with incense lighten the drama. In the tradition of must-see modern romance classics, like "Sleepless in Seattle," "Keeping The Faith" delights viewers with a realistic, open-minded, open-hearted look at a concept called faith.

'28 Days' star Bullock tackles addiction with laughter remedy

BY CARRIE COOPER
SPECIAL WRITER

Many people know what it is like to have an addiction to something they can't control. Their addictions come in several different forms such as food, alcohol or drugs. But one thing is consistent, they tend to keep their troubles to themselves. They won't ask for help until it may be too late.

The dark comedy "28 Days," a Columbia Pictures and Tall Trees Production, stars Sandra Bullock, Viggo Mortensen, Dominic West, Diane Ladd, Elizabeth Perkins and Steve Buscemi. It takes an inside look at the consequences of living life in the fast lane.

Director Betty Thomas, producer Jenno Topping, and writer Susannah Grant, use an ensemble cast to take a look at life inside a rehabilitation center during the course of "28 Days."

In the film, Gwen Cummings (Sandra Bullock) is a New York writer attracted to life on the wild side. Her life consists of bar hopping and avoiding hangovers with continuous alcohol consumption and pain pills. Jasper (Dominic West) of the film "A Midsummer Night's Dream", is Gwen's drinking partner and partner in general. He's the charming, but bad news boyfriend always there to enhance Gwen's party girl image.

Life is great for Gwen until she ruins her sister Lily's (Elizabeth Perkins) wedding and in a drunken state wrecks the limousine. This earns her a Driving While Under the Influence of Alcohol violation and 28 days in court-ordered rehab.

Not realizing that she has a problem, Gwen is shocked at the treatment she receives. She is not about to follow such rules as cleaning her room, chanting rituals, and emotional therapy sessions with an interesting mix of patients.

Gwen becomes very cynical, denies she has a problem, and refuses to conform. Then she meets Counselor Cornell (Steve Buscemi) known for "Reservoir Dogs" and "Fargo". Cornell, having had addiction problems in the past, forces Gwen to take a hard look at who she really is.

The cynicism fades as Gwen looks at her fellow rehab patients and starts to realize she is not alone. But the final straw occurs when she falls out of her window and injures her leg while trying to get the pain pills she threw away.

As Gwen acknowledges her addiction, she finds herself struggling with the past and a mother who drank herself to death. Gwen realizes that she is afraid of ending up like her mother. Never one to ask for help, she finally calls upon her sister.

Bullock is the perfect person to play Gwen. She has that girl next-door image, which goes to show that no matter how nice or sweet a person is they can become an addict. Bullock also has the star power to draw people into the theater to see a movie they might not normally see.

Mortensen and West portrayed the two men in Gwen's life. Mortensen does a fine job as Eddie Boone, the star athlete addicted to sex. He is able to act as a jerk, yet shows us his sensitive side. West's portrayal of Jasper shows he can be the bad boy, yet he is charming and sexy enough to be a likable addition to this cast.

But it is Gerhardt, the German stripper with a cocaine addiction, who steals the show. Alan Tudyk of the film "Wonder Boys," portrays Gerhardt and provides comic relief at just the right times.

Azura Skye, Michael O'Malley and Marianne Jean-Baptiste round out the cast. These actors provide great performances and give a wider view of the world of rehabilitation.

Addiction is a very serious matter and can be very depressing to watch. But "28 Days" takes a look this heavy situation with comedy. It does a nice job of exploring the "good" days and the "bad" in a rehab center and how it can repair your life.

Sure you can always "Just Say No," but for those who don't realize there is a problem, it's reassuring to know help is out there.

STREET SCENE

Train taking success slowly, rolling back this way

STEPHANIE A. CASOLA

There's something to be said for word-of-mouth.

I first heard about the San Francisco-based quintet Train from a friend of a friend, who happens to be a strawberry farmer living somewhere in Florida. "If a band called Train ever comes here, you gotta see em," he said to me in a smoky Ferndale club more than a year ago. For some reason, the conversation stuck in my mind.

That's basically how the Southern folk-rock band has risen from status as San Francisco Bay-area darlings to regular rock radio rotation. Together since 1994, vocalist Patrick Monahan, guitarists Jimmy Stafford and Rob Hotchkiss, bassist Charlie Colin and drummer Scott Underwood have done it grass roots style, touring incessantly. Train didn't want to be a one-hit wonder. Though the second single off their self-titled 1998 debut, "Meet Virginia," has since catapulted the band to platinum status, the musicians never intended to be the "Meet Virginia" band.

But hey, I'm just going by what Jimmy Stafford told me when he called April 11, over a week into the headlining tour set to stop in Detroit Thursday, April 27. "We just pulled up to the venue in a van," said Stafford, calling from what sounded like a temperamental cell phone somewhere in Sacramento, Calif. He was far from the starting point of the tour - Marquette, Mich.

"The Marquette show was at a college, in an area we hadn't played before. We flew up there. A show like that is kind of out of the way; it's a really good place to start, to get over the first day jitters. Actually, it was one of the best shows. The crowd was outstanding."

It wasn't always this way. While Train won over a strong following in its birthplace, the Bay area, it took constant work to spread the word. High profile tours with the likes of Counting Crows, Dave Matthews Band, Hootie and The Blowfish and Ben Folds Five helped. But Ferndale resident and 19 Wheels frontman Chris Johnston remembers the very first time Train went on the road. "We went on the road with them," said Johnston, calling from Boston, while 19 Wheels was on tour. "We had a record on Aware the same time they did. They had a deal that took them to Columbia (Records)." Johnston said not only is he a fan of Train's music, "they're a good bunch of guys." The last time Train made it to the metro area, they performed at Ferndale's Magic Bag and had a chance to stop in at the Woodward Avenue Brewery, which Johnston owns just a few doors down from the club. "They have really good food and stuff there," recalled Stafford of the brewery. He said he was looking forward to seeing his 19 Wheels friends.

Now headed back to Michigan as the final act to take the stage, Stafford could hardly contain his enthusiasm: "We're really excited about this tour," said Stafford. "It's the best-looking tour and the best-sounding tour."

Stafford admitted that it still took time for radio and MTV audiences to catch on to songs like "Free" and the latest single, "I Am."

"That was partly intentional and partly the way our single was released. Our plan with Columbia Records was to develop the band slowly. We didn't want to be an overnight, smash hit. Those fans buy your records up fast and forget about you."

So Train took the long track, building a core fan base one city at a time. "I think it's working," said Stafford. "Our fans are the greatest. We get hundreds of fan letters a day. We're not a band that's going to go away tomorrow."

Johnston said he's happy to see Train succeed. "I know they've done it the hard way," he said, predicting the band will have a long career. "The songs have done well. It's really the amount of touring. If you watch the charts, they've never really been in top 10 record sales. They've just had steady, steady sales."

"They are really dedicated. I have a lot of respect for them."

Chugging along non-stop since January 1998 in support of the album hasn't been easy. "In the beginning it was frustrating, in a van playing in front of 30 people every night. But it grew and we felt it grow."

The strength of Train's music lies in the way it reaches people. Stafford said one of his favorites, the sentimental ballad "Blind," "somehow hits a spot." "I Am" is another song that really touches a nerve," he added. "It's a goosebumps song." Train is currently working on a video for "I Am."

The focus now turns to a follow-up album. "We recorded a new record on our time off," said Stafford. "It's exciting to have new songs. Every night there's more energy for the show. It's a really diverse record, a little bit of something for everybody. We're pretty much playing the uptempo, exciting stuff off the new record. It's a hint of what's to come."

Train worked with producer Brenden O'Brien (Korn, Pearl Jam, Rage Against the Machine) on the CD, which should hit stores by this fall. The working title is "Something More," reflecting what Train fans have been thinking for about two years.

"(Brenden) is a dream come true," said Stafford. "He is the rock producer of the day. Everyone wants to work with him, including the Stones. He was our first choice. We weren't seriously going to ask him. Then we found out, he's a Train fan! The timing was right. He's got great ideas." A month and a half after going in, the album was recorded.

Long before its scheduled release, the only way to hear new Train material is to catch the band when the bus rolls into town next week.

And Train's looking forward to this stop. "Detroit is actually going to be a lot of fun for us," said Stafford.

My advice? I'm certainly not a strawberry farmer, but I know this - a band called Train is coming soon. You won't want to miss the show. Pass it on.

Mackinnon's offers fabulous fare in charming setting

After occupying the same address on East Main Street in downtown Northville for the last 20 years, you wouldn't think Mackinnon's Restaurant would need much of an introduction.

But it does, for this is a restaurant that constantly infuses the old with the new while retaining all its enduring Scottish-Victorian charm.

For instance, many fine dining restaurants serve foie gras. But at Mackinnon's, it's served with branded apple slices and "Cinnamon Fire Sauce" made from cinnamon, apple juice, cayenne pepper and a splash of grenadine. It's both daring and delicious.

menu - including debuting a seafood cornucopia - it will never abandon long-time house favorites like Beef Wellington Bordelaise and "Blown-up" Duck. "We fill it with air and that puffs out the skin so the meat and contemporary Victorian chic. Walk into the warmly lit entrance area, a mini parlor with wingback chairs and antiques, and a huge buck head looming over a carved Victorian fireplace greets you. More heads - ram, buffalo, boar and caribou - line the wall in front of the bar. There's also several mounted fish, caught by Tom Mackinnon.

However, it's the 21-foot wood plank bar, which Tom Mackinnon made in his garage 21 years ago, that finally catches and keeps your attention. Simply put, this is the bar at which you want to swirl your cognac and smoke your favorite cigar.

"We are cigar friendly," said Victoria Siegel, general manager. In fact, Mackinnon's sells cigars, and Wednesday nights are known as "Cheers" nights.

Thanks to a van that came crashing through the front windows at 6 a.m. one Monday last November, the dining room has been completely remodeled. Recovery was quick. "We were open for dinner that day. I had five carpenters in here, and they just rocked," said Tom Mackinnon.

The new look, set off by beautiful plaid carpeting and a stained glass focal piece, is artful, warm and inviting. It calls for a bit of lingering over dessert and coffee.

Best bottle: Tom Mackinnon displays a premiere vintage from his wine cellar. Wednesday night is "Cheers" night at the Northville eatery. Customers say Mackinnon's 21-foot wood plank bar is a great place to savor cognac or smoke a fine cigar. The "Cheers" crowd are regulars at Mackinnon's.

Creative chefs: Chefs Chuck and Ian Mackinnon display two of their creations - Foie gras with "Cinnamon Fire Sauce" and Napoleon topped with a chocolate-covered potato chip.

"I believe it's the passion we have for the food," said chef Chuck Mackinnon, cousin to owner Tom Mackinnon, about his culinary inspiration. "You have to love what you do. I love cooking the food and coming up with new ideas, trying new combinations."

Although Mackinnon's is in the process of creating a new and skin roast separately," said Chuck Mackinnon. He seasons the duck with just salt and pepper - why mess with perfection? - and serves it with a raspberry sauce. Some customers consider the duck the restaurant's signature dish.

Mackinnon's decor is also an inspiration, a combination of genteel country hunting lodge

Mackinnon's has long been known for its desserts, like Banana Wellington with Caramel Sauce or Chocolate Chocolate Creation, a chocolate cylinder filled with Cabernet-milk chocolate mousse and served with fresh berries. And if you've never tried a chocolate-covered freshly made potato chip, now's the time. Pastry chef Ian Mackinnon, a nephew, plunks one down atop a glorious Napoleon stuffed with Bavarian cream and dressed with Godiva chocolate and fresh raspberries.

"Chocolate-covered potato chips are awesome," he said. Tom Mackinnon said diners at his restaurant can expect the finest in service. His staff has been with him a long time. "They're fabulous, the world's best. I'm blest," he said.

Mackinnon's is also a full catering company that handles both small graduation parties and events of 5,000. It has provided dinners for President Clinton's Town Hall events, Governor Engler's inaugural host party and the cast of ABC's N.Y.P.D. Blue. "I love doing the catering because you can spend lots of time, and it's so artsy," said Tom Mackinnon, who graduated from Schoolcraft College's Culinary Arts program and trained in Belgium and France.

He once made a 5-foot cake in the shape of a car. "It drove itself in. All the lights worked. It was cool."

Don't expect car-shaped cakes when dining at Mackinnon's Restaurant. However, expect Snapper Turtle Soup, Sweet Potato Crusted Superior Whitefish, Rack of New Zealand Spring Lamb with black currant sauce, and White Chocolate Ice Cream en Croute with raspberry puree. Expect the best and come hungry.

"They're going to be very full. We don't skimp on anything," said Chuck Mackinnon.
