The Farmington Hills/Farmington Emergency Preparedness Commission is encouraging citizens to Resolve to be Ready in the New Year by making a resolution to be prepared for emergencies. The EPC is hosting a free First Aid Awareness training class on Saturday, Jan. 7 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Costick Center, 28600 11 Mile, just east of Middlebelt, in Farmington Hills.

The class will not offer certification, but will focus on demonstrating what you should do until first responders arrive. Participants will rotate through one session every 15 minutes with a short break halfway through the program. Each of the sessions will be taught by a professional First Responder or First Aid Instructor. Advance registration is required; call the Costick Center at (248) 473-1800.

A resolution

The holidays always seem to leave a little leftover weight for many. Just in time for those post-holiday pounds, the Take Pounds Off Sensibly group will host an open house event 7 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 5 at the St. Thomas A' Becket Catholic Church, 555 S. Lilley Road, Canton. Meet TOPS' 2010 International Division 4 Winner Barbara Harness, a nurse who lost 65 pounds in 2010. There is no charge to attend. Suicide called the 'gorilla in the room'

By Stacy Jenkins
Observer Staff Writer

Reports of suicides in public places made local headlines throughout 2011, raising the attention on a topic that remains taboo.

In Farmington Hills, there were two murder-suicides, one in which a 34-year-old dad shot and killed his 22-month-old son before turning the gun on himself in October. Reports indicated he was upset about an impending divorce.

A 21-year-old Oak Park man was found with a fatal self-inflicted gunshot wound to the chest in October — he was found by a drinking fountain at the Marie Tot Lot, a children's park. He left a note at the scene.

In Plymouth, police determined the death of a 51-year-old Plymouth man was a suicide when his body was discovered on the train tracks after being struck and killed by a CSX Corp. train.

Winner of Westland's "We Promise You a White Christmas" poster contest, Carl Anthony Yalo plays in his prize — a load of snow for the front yard. It's his first winter in Michigan.

Poster earns youngster a white Christmas

It's his first winter in Michigan and Carl Anthony Yalo had a white Christmas courtesy of the City of Westland.

The five-year old was the winner of the "We Prom-

Medical pot issues wind way through courts

By Ken Abramczyk
Observer Staff Writer

In 2008, 63 percent of Michigan voters approved the use of medical marijuana.

Yet three years later, attorneys battle in the state courts over whether communities have the right to prohibit an activity, which in their eyes violated federal law, even when approved by a voter referendum.

Communities throughout the state are watching what courts decide in particular with one local case.

The American Civil Liberties Union has appealed a Wayne County Circuit Court ruling that supported the city of Livonia's ban on medical marijuana facilities. Circuit Judge Wendy Baxter granted the city's motion for summary disposition and dismissed the case. Communi-

Plymouth-Canton will review banned book

By Brad Kadrich
Observer Staff Writer

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Supt. Jeremy Hughes has reversed his decision to unilaterally ban the use of Graham Swift's 1983 novel Waterland from use in district English classes, instead opting to send the book through the district's review process to determine its suitability.

In a statement issued Thursday, Hughes said he made the decision after "a flurry" of comments he has received in the intervening weeks since banning the book.

He did reiterate, however, he will ask teachers not to use the book until the district's review committee makes a decision.

"Although it has been argued that I took action solely on the complaint of one parent, it was my judgment at the time that the majority of parents in

Plymouth-Canton would have a similar objection if they read what I read," said Hughes, who found at least one passage extremely sexually explicit. "As it turns out, from the comments I have received from

Redford teen shot during home invasion

By Pat Murphy
Observer staff writer

A 19-year-old Redford Township man was shot, but not fatally injured, early Friday when he struggled with two men who had entered his house. The victim, who was not identified, was in the home in the 19900 block of Denby about 3:40 a.m., police said, when the intruders entered the unlocked house. A struggle ensued, police said, and the 19-year-old victim was shot. He was treated at a local hospital and released. This did not appear to be a random home invasion, police said. The victim appeared to have been specificly targeted. The intruders, both black males, are in their mid to late teens. One is described as having a dark complexion and about five feet, eight inches tall. He weighed about 150 pounds and was wearing a white T-shirt. The other suspect is described as having a lighter complexion, about six feet tall and about 160 pounds. He was reportedly wearing a gray jacket with a hood. A white, General Motors pick-up truck may be involved, police said. Anyone with information is urged to call Redford Township police at (313) 387-2551.

Suspects sought in thefts

Canton police are seeking help identifying two suspects wanted in connection with thefts from a local retailer and possibly another location in Southfield.

The male is described as 50 years old with a dark complexion. He was wearing a long-sleeve white shirt with three buttons near the collar, jeans, black shiny cowboy boots and a dark-colored baseball cap. The woman is about 40 years old and wore a long black coat and black pants. She had her hair pulled back and sunglasses on her head.

Anyone with information is asked to contact the Canton Police Department at (734) 394-5400.

Canton police are asking for tips to find this suspect, wanted for questioning in a retail theft.

WDIV's Baracy: First job is her dream job

By Sue Mason
Observer Staff Writer

Last Call with Carson Daly may be late, late night TV, but for Ashlee Baracy, it's time to rise and shine for early morning news.

A typically day for the WDIV-TV (Channel 4) traffic reporter starts with a 2 a.m. wake-up alarm so she can make the commute from her home in Westland to downtown Detroit. It ends for a 3:45 a.m. meeting. It runs around 4 p.m. in the offices of WLND, Westland's local cable channel.

"Working an early morning show shift is a lifestyle shift," Baracy said. "I try to be in bed by 7 p.m., but in the summer, it's impossible, so I push it to 8-8:30. I eat lunch at 10 in the morning, squeeze in a half-hour nap and come back to Westland to work."

Communications wasn't the career Baracy envisioned when she was graduating from John Glenn High School. She loved math and science in high school and started out wanting to be an engineer, but realized that wasn't "where she wanted to wake up" every day. She also considered veterinary medicine and physical therapy, but somewhere between being Westland Junior Miss and competing for Miss Michigan, she realized how comfortable she was with public speaking.

She ended up with a bachelor's degree in general studies and got a master's in integrated marketing and communications. Now she's looking to expand her skills. She's back in school, studying for a master's degree in meteorology.

"Actually working in the weather department would go back to my roots of math and science," she said. "In traffic, I realized how much I liked math and science. I like doing news, but with the weather, you're in the studio, not out in the elements and everyone jokes that you can be wrong half the time."

"Weather and traffic turn into news and that's job security," she added.

Getting started

Baracy was in a contest WDIV held in 2008 to find a new traffic reporter. She lost out to Lauren Podell, a loss that allowed her the flexibility to work as a substitute teacher in the Garden City Public Schools and compete in and win Miss Michigan. She went on to the Miss Michigan pageant, where she finished in the top 10.

Those experiences gave her confidence and she credits her work at WLND — where she became comfortable working with a Teleprompter and a green screen — for getting the job at WDIV. The job offer "came out of left field," last December, and she was ready to be on a local station with people she felt she already knew.

"I grew up watching Guy (Gordon) and Rhonda (Walker)," she said. "They're like my second family. I feel like I'm hanging out with friends."

Baracy said she is blessed to land a job at a No. 1 station in the TV market. Her goal was to come and work in Detroit, but she figured it would be by way of places like Alpena and Grand Rapids.

"It's almost unheard of to start off in a large market," she said.

She's now in the public eye even more than when she was Miss Michigan and her personal life has changed. She's recognized, even at the grocery store, and as a local celebrity, she's become a fashion icon. People tune in to see what she's wearing.

Working in front of a green screen, she has to stick to solids and nothing green or with a hue of green "because my head will look like it's floating." She's challenged to find suits that are "youthful, professional and trendy."

"I mix it up, two days I'll wear suits and then a blouse with a skirt," she said. "I have a spread sheet on what I wear, so nothing is worn twice in six weeks."

Shoes and more shoes

Baracy also is known for her shoe collection. At one time

Ashlee Baracy spreads her time between work with Westland's WLND cable channel and as a traffic reporter with WDIV Channel 4 News.

she had more than 200 pairs, explaining that the number includes her dance shoes — she's been dancing since she could walk. However, she's "slimmed down some." The closet space at her condominium won't accommodate that many shoes.

"I have about 100 that get used throughout the year. My favorite is my black stilettos," she said. "My dance shoes are always my favorite."

At age 26, Baracy said she doesn't feel that old, possibly because she is so career driven. She fell behind many of her friends who are married and have children, but then she's "so far ahead in my career." Granted, juggling two jobs doesn't leave much time for a personal life and the worst part is the early hours, but she's "happy and content" with her work in Detroit. She has embraced social media and challenges herself to be the first traffic reporter who tweets about an accident.

"The best part of being on TV is that it gives you local celebrity status and a microphone to speak," she said. "The best part of having a crown on your head and being on TV is that people listen."

Resolve to be ready in 2012

As 2011, one of the most active years for disasters in recent history, comes to a close and Americans get ready to ring in a new year, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is encouraging all Americans to Resolve to be Ready by making a New Year's resolution to be prepared for emergencies.

As a recent report by the National Climatic Data Center highlights, 2011 has seen more billion-dollar natural disasters than any year on record.

This year alone, the U.S. experienced its first hurricane land-fall since 2008, the most deadly series of tornadoes since the 1950s, significant earthquakes and severe flooding — hazards that impacted every region of the country.

All of these events have served as important reminders that disasters can strike anytime, anywhere, and being prepared is one of the most effective things we can do to protect our homes, businesses and loved ones.

FEMA has just kicked off its 2012 annual campaign, Resolve to be Ready, which urges Americans to make preparedness a priority by making a New Year's resolution to be ready for disasters.

"One of the most important lessons we can take away from this year is that disasters can impact all of us, no matter what part of the country we live in," said FEMA Administrator Craig Fugate. "While we can't control where or when they might hit, we can take steps in advance to prepare for them — efforts that can go a long way toward protecting our families, homes and businesses. Resolving to be Ready in 2012 could be the most important pledge you make this year."

By making a resolution to take a few simple steps in advance, Americans can minimize the impact of an emergency on their families, homes or businesses. To take the pledge, visit www.ready.gov/resolve, which offers free information, checklists, and guidelines about how to put together a kit, make a plan, and stay informed.

Resolve to be Ready in 2012 is a nationwide effort to increase awareness and encourage individuals, families, businesses, and communities to take action and prepare for emergencies in the New Year. This effort is led by FEMA's Ready Campaign in partnership with Citizen Corps and The Advertising Council.

FEMA's mission is to support our citizens and first responders to ensure that as a nation we work together to build, sustain, and improve our capability to prepare for, protect against, respond to, recover from, and mitigate all hazards.

The award-winning Farmington Hills/Farmington Emergency Preparedness Commission holds monthly meetings, open to the public, to discuss these same awareness issues.

For more information, visit the EPC website at www.fhready.com or in the event of a local emergency, go to radio station 1650AM.

Enjoy your fireplace - the safe way

By Tom Kiurski
Guest Columnist

Relaxing with the family in front of the fireplace during the cold winter months is a wonderful way to pass some of the cold evenings we face here in Michigan. While we can get great pleasure out of this activity, if we do not properly maintain our fireplaces and chimneys, it can lead to a tragedy.

One problem with fireplaces is the buildup of creosote inside the chimney walls. Creosote is the byproduct of burning wood, but when it builds up inside the chimney, it can cut off ventilation and catch fire. If you use your fireplace, you should have your chimney cleaned and inspected at least once a year.

As you prepare for your first fires of the season, make sure you go over the basics. Open the damper to allow the smoke (as well as other dangerous gases) and heat to rise up and out of the chimney, move flammable decorations away from the area and keep small children back from the fireplace as you prepare for lighting the fire. Never use flammable or combustible liquids to "help" the fire start, and avoid the temptation of getting the fire too large.

Inside the house, we have a rule about open flames. All combustible materials should be kept at least three feet away from any open flame or heat source. This means the fireplace, so even after a cold evening of building a snowman and lighting a fire in the fireplace, you, your kids and your gloves should all be kept back three feet from the fireplace. The fireplace screen should be used so that sparks and embers cannot leave the fireplace. Supervision is a must, so based on the ages of your children, you must determine if an adult must be in the room in which the fire is burning, or if the children are old enough to understand the hazards involved.

Don't leave the home or go to bed with a fire still burning in the fireplace.

Don't leave the home or go to bed with a fire still burning in the fireplace. Use only dry wood or other commercially available fireplace products (but only after reading the directions) in the fireplace. They are not designed to burn cardboard, trash or wrapping paper, as this can cause a premature buildup of creosote inside the chimney.

Be sure that all ashes have thoroughly cooled before you dispose of them, preferably in a metal container with a tight-fitting lid. Once the ashes are in the container, it is best to store them outdoors and away from the home.

Once you have read and planned for your upcoming season of fireplace fires, you have now completed the "Fireplace 101 Refresher Course." Enjoy the season!

Murder suspect faces examination

The suspect in the Christmas Day shooting death of a 27-year-old Redford Township man has been scheduled for preliminary examination on Jan 10 in 17th District Court.

Andre L. Johnson, also 27, was arraigned Wednesday afternoon on three felony charges in the death of his roommate, Dexter Stafford, at the home they shared in the 20500 block of Denby. Judge Charlotte L. Wirth set bond at $1 million.

Johnson is charged with second degree murder, manslaughter — death by weapon aimed with intent, but not malice — and felony firearms, or possessing a firearm in commission of a felony. He has no criminal history, according to the Wayne County Prosecutor's office.

Police were called to their home shortly before noon on Dec. 25, where they found Stafford had been shot. He was taken to a local hospital where he was pronounced dead. The Oakland County medical examiner's office said he was killed by a single shot to the head fired at close range.

Services for Stafford were Friday at the O.H. Pye III Funeral Home in Detroit.

Injured teens leave hospital, crash probe continues

By Darrell Clem
Observer Staff Writer

Two teenagers ejected through a rear door of a Ford Taurus during a Monday evening accident in Canton have been released from a hospital as authorities continue to investigate the car-bicycle crash, Canton police Sgt. Pat Sullivan said.

Though the pair suffered injuries such as broken bones, they — along with three other teens inside the car and an adult bicyclist who was struck — escaped what Sullivan said could have been a much worse outcome during the 8:30 p.m. accident near Lotz and Burlington, south of Cherry Hill.

The teen driver and the bicyclist also had been taken to a hospital but were released after they received treatment.

Sullivan said Wednesday that authorities could be "a couple weeks away" or possibly even longer before a decision has been made about possible charges or citations.

Police already have said it didn't appear that alcohol or drugs were involved in the accident.

Police have said the driver apparently lost control of the Ford Taurus and struck the bicyclist before crashing into a utility pole, knocking out power for hundreds of residents until DTE Energy crews made necessary repairs.

Sullivan described all five people in the car as teenagers.

The two teens who were thrown from the car were ejected through a rear driver's side door after the latch was damaged from the impact of the crash, Sullivan said.

"They didn't go through the window," he said.

The accident remains under investigation by the Canton Police Department's Accident Investigation Team.

Women arrested trying to pass off counterfeit bills

By Ken Abramczyk
Observer Staff Writer

Livonia police arrested two women who tried to purchase approximately $2,000 worth of items with counterfeit $50 bills at a Target store Tuesday night.

Livonia police were notified after loss prevention officers at Target, 29451 Plymouth Road, observed the women making several purchases of electronic equipment with what was later found to be counterfeit money, according to Sgt. Patrick Moug.

At 7:15 p.m., one of the women purchased items totalling $66, and paid for them with two counterfeit $50 bills. "She then walked immediately with her items to the customer service desk to return the items for cash," Moug said.

A second woman purchased $741 worth of items, including DVDs, iPods and clothing, using 15 counterfeit $50 bills. She was also seen purchasing six more similar items worth $87 at another register.

When Target loss prevention officers noticed what was happening, they contacted police. Officers arrived and found a white Impala in the parking lot with one of the women in it with a man. The woman was arrested and a few minutes later the first woman who was seen at the registers returned to the car and also was arrested. She had purchased another $484 worth of items with counterfeit money.

The two women, both from Detroit and ages 20 and 25, face several charges and are being held by Livonia police, Moug said. The man was released.

Police continued their investigation into the source of the counterfeit money.

EXPECTATIONS

When a patient sees a doctor, the pattern of the visit seems as follows: the physician will hear the patient's story, ask the patient a number of questions, undertake an examination and come to a conclusion as to what next needs to be done.

However, physicians are undertaking an additional assessment at the time of listening, making inquiries, and checking muscles and joints. The doctor is determining what patient's expectations are. The physician is also determining if he can meet those expectations, and if not, what middle ground exists to provide the patient at least partial satisfaction.

A good example of this process is when a physician sees a patient with Fibromyalgia. The patients wants a medicine to stop the pain; the physician knows that at this time, no such medicine exists. The doctor must both diagnose that the patient's pain does in deed come from Fibromyalgia and explain that what the patient heard about prednisone or Vicodin to treat the condition is not completely true. The physician must be ready to offer alternatives for pain control such as exercise or biofeedback therapies. The physician's assessment depends not only on what the patient tells him, but the tone of the patient's voice and the patient's look, mood, and body movements. The doctor's questions not only gather more information about the illness, but they bring out the patient's attitude toward the problem.

Obtaining a history of the patient's illness and examining the patient remain the bedrock of medical care. However, of equal importance for the physician is to identify the patient's expectations and respond to them.

MARIJUANA

ties across Michigan will be watching to see how the state courts interpret state and federal law.

Early this year, attorneys from both sides will file respective motions to the Michigan Court of Appeals.

Dan Korobkin, attorney with the ACLU, said the ACLU's position hasn't changed on the issue.

"Livonia or any other community can't make its own decision to ban medical marijuana in their community," Korobkin said. "The approval of medical marijuana was a decision made by the voters and approved throughout the state. Medical marijuana patients, who are registered with the state and got a doctor's approval, will not be prohibited or banned from an activity that is in accordance with state law."

Don Knapp, Livonia's city attorney, said the city's position hasn't changed. Knapp said the ordinance was not aimed at legal medical marijuana users, but was directed at the growing facilities and dispensaries.

"We wanted to take away any of the problems associated with medical marijuana," Knapp said. "In Oakland, California, there are places with a lot of dope and a lot of cash that are the targets of armed robberies."

"We didn't want these places popping up next to pizzerias or other small businesses and be a target for crime that would impact these other businesses."

State vs. federal law

At the heart of the case is whether the voter-approved state law permitting medical marijuana use or sales pre-empts federal law banning marijuana or whether the federal Controlled Substances Act pre-empts state law.

Michigan voters approved the use of medical marijuana in 2008. The city of Livonia later enacted an ordinance that did not mention medical marijuana, but prohibited activities that violate federal law.

The ACLU filed a suit in December 2010 on behalf of Linda and Robert Lott of Birmingham against the cities of Livonia, Bloomfield Hills and Birmingham regarding the authority of communities to prohibit medical marijuana use or sales on the grounds that marijuana possession violates federal law. The Lotts own a portion of a property in Livonia where they said they wanted to grow medical marijuana, according to the ACLU. The ACLU argued in court that Livonia could not enact laws that violate state laws. The case against the cities of Bloomfield Hills and Birmingham was transferred to Oakland County Circuit Court.

Baxter agreed with the city of Livonia and dismissed the lawsuit.

"Livonia's ordinance directly conflicts with and is preempted by the Michigan Medical Marihuana Act, which regulates the use, distribution and maintenance of medical marijuana and occupies the field of regulation," Baxter wrote in her ruling.

"However, the MMMA is pre-empted by the Controlled Substances Act, which completely bans the use of marijuana and bans its use by physicians for a medical purpose. Therefore, plaintiffs have failed to state a claim for which relief can be granted and no factual development could possibly justify recovery."

On Nov. 29, Oakland County Circuit Judge Colleen O'Brien dismissed the ACLU claims against Birmingham and Bloomfield Hills. Neither of the cities had applied their ordinances against the plaintiffs, so any question about how ordinances might apply was "hypothetical," O'Brien ruled.

"The court, in its discretion, denies the request for declaratory relief for the reason that no actual controversy exists here for the court to decide," O'Brien wrote in her ruling.

Patient-to-patient prohibited

In August, the Court of Appeals ruled in a separate case involving a dispensary in Isabella County that sales were not permitted between registered patients and ruled a dispensary closed as a public nuisance. The court found it violated state health laws. That ruling shut down most dispensaries because "they effectively said the Michigan Medical Marihuana law does not allow patient-to-patient sales," Knapp said.

All the Lotts wanted to do was grow it in Livonia and use it at their home in Birmingham, Korobkin said. "The fact that Livonia doesn't like the law isn't a reason to ban it from the city," Korobkin said.

When asked if the Lotts would be willing to discuss their situation for this story, Korobkin said the ACLU was acting as a spokesman for the Lotts during the lawsuit, Korobkin said. "The local laws have really taken a toll on the Lotts and hundreds of medical marijuana patients," Korobkin said. "Most patients have the doctor's permission or they are registered as patients or caregivers. They don't consider themselves as criminals and they don't want to be treated as criminals in cities where they live or work.

"The decisions on the ordinances in Livonia, Bloomfield Hills and Birmingham has a detrimental effect on their health and takes a toll on their physical health."

One year ago, the Law Offices of Thomas M. Loeb of Farmington Hills, and Neil Rockind of Southfield, filed a joint lawsuit in Oakland County Circuit Court against Bloomfield Township for its medical marijuana ordinance passed in October. Rockind, whose case probably won't be heard until February, said the law is designed to be inclusive for patients and caregivers. "To me, the law isn't as confusing as people make it, Rockind said. "The act is designed to give very broad protection to caregivers and patients."

Rockind said some of the issues raised in some of the court cases don't even discuss the medical, pain-killing use of the drug, but whether growing facilities are enclosed in lots. Arguments also are raised on whether a doctor is an expert in cannabis and whether patients can self-medicate. "Ironically, the act isn't being used to help them, it's being used to hurt them," Rockind said.

Knapp would not be surprised if the Livonia case ends up in the Michigan Supreme Court. "If the city of Livonia was not successful before the Court of Appeals, we're going to try and take it to the Michigan Supreme Court," Knapp said.

Lawmakers hope to clarify medical marijuana law

By Ken Abramczyk
Observer Staff Writer

While the medical marijuana legal questions are examined in court, state lawmakers will study proposed legislation in 2012 aimed at clarifying the law.

House lawmakers are expected to study a package of bills introduced in 2011 that proponents hope will clarify ambiguities in the Michigan Medical Marihuana Act.

Rep. John Walsh, R-Livonia, chairs the House Judiciary Committee. State Rep. Phil Cavanagh, D-Redford, also serves on that committee. Walsh expects to hear more public comments and receive more input in February about the proposed legislation. Walsh said he has met with dispensary operators, caregivers, patients and patient advocacy groups.

"We're trying to meet with everybody," Walsh said. "We're trying to cover all potential concerns. It's a one-shot opportunity to bring greater understanding and predictability of the law."

The proposed legislation:

- Requires traditional doctor-patient relationships to end the current practice of some doctors certifying patients for medical marijuana without even seeing the patient or knowing the patient's medical history. Walsh said a recent Detroit Free Press article reported that just 55 doctors have certified about 45,000 — or 71 percent — of all medical marijuana registrants;
- Prohibits patient-to-patient transactions and requiring growers to keep their plants in enclosed, locked facilities accessible only to the registered caregiver or patient;
- Allows access by law enforcement to the state's medical marijuana registry. Law enforcement currently can only verify a patient/caregiver by contacting the state Department of Community Health and verifying an identification on the patient/caregiver's card. It also requires an applicant include a photo during the registration process.
- Clarifies zoning guidelines as many city, village and township boards do not know how to classify dispensaries opening within their boundaries.

Walsh said lawmakers welcome input. "Our intent is to provide legislative framework and guidelines for all the state. You still have a right to use it, but we have difficulty with the distribution issue," he said.

Livonia City Attorney Don Knapp appreciates any legislative efforts, but wonders whether they will reach the 75 percent legislative threshold of support required for any change on voter-initiated measures. "I think any effort at clarity is good," Knapp said. "While I like the fact that they are studying legislation, I'm a little reluctant that its ultimately going to be adopted."

Dan Korobkin, attorney for the Michigan American Civil Liberties Union, which has filed a lawsuit currently on appeal against the city of Livonia over an ordinance that bans medical marijuana, said the state law and voters approval of medical marijuana allows its usage by patients without prosecution.

"If there are ways to make it better for everyone involved, that would be great," Korobkin said. "But if legislators think of getting rid of the law, that would go against what the vast majority of voters wanted when they approved medical marijuana. 'I don't think they would do that. I don't think legislators are interested in going against the will of the people.'"

Attorney Neil Rockind isn't a fan of the legislation. Rockind believes the law should keep patient information confidential and ensure medical marijuana use. Rockind believes law enforcement agencies should not be what he called a stakeholder in this debate after voters have approved medical marijuana and its use is permitted under state law. "Law enforcement works for government," Rockind said. "Their job is harder, but who cares? Why is that an issue?"

Rockind isn't optimistic about medical marijuana's future. "I'd like to believe that legislators are going to be receptive and sympathetic, but the attorney general is going to have to have a change in mindset. I'm not optimistic about those things."

to school," said Lee Vargas, Carl's grandmother. The youngster and his father Camilo Yalo recently immigrated from the family's native Philippines. His two older siblings are in the U.S. and his mother is waiting to join the family.

A kindergarten student at P.D. Graham Elementary School in Westland, Carl was so scared on his first day of school that his grandmother had to come pick him up because he wouldn't eat his lunch.

Now, Vargas said Carl enjoys schools and wants to be first in line waiting for the bus. His limited English vocabulary hasn't deterred him from drawing about his favorite things, including snow. "He was so excited (about the snow delivery). The neighbor children came over. He was playing out there until about 9 p.m.," said Vargas. "My son has Christmas lights and deer lights, so it was well lit. The neighbors were happy for my grandson."

In addition to the snow, which was waiting for Carl when he arrived home from school, he also received a $50 gift card, compliments of the Wayne-Westland Credit Union.

"It was great to see the smile on Carl's face when he saw the snow covering his yard. I'm sure he will have many children in his neighborhood wanting to play in the snow," Westland Parks and Recreation Director Robert Kosowski.

Livonia mayor expected to name police chief

By Ken Abramczyk
Observer Staff Writer

Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey is expected to name a new police chief later this week.

On Wednesday Kirksey said he was finishing his interviews with Acting Chief Curtis Caid and Capt. Ben McDermott to fill the seat vacated in October when former chief Robert Stevenson retired to become president of the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police.

"When we get back after Jan. 1, we will make an announcement within the first two or three days," Kirksey said.

Kirksey said he is reviewing the two candidates' backgrounds and careers with the Livonia Police Department. Both men would make "outstanding" police chiefs, Kirksey said.

Kirksey will review their plans and vision for the police department over the next 10 years, including budget plans, reorganization of resources and use of police personnel.

Kirksey is also reviewing their efficiency reports over the years. Kirksey said he didn't want to hurry in making a decision after Stevenson left in October. Caid has filled in as acting police chief since then.

"The deputy chief knows the department really well," Kirksey said. "There was no urgency to fill the vacancy because there's no compromise in public safety so there's no need to rush it. He's making sure things are operating efficiently."

Kirksey, re-elected to another four-year term in November, doesn't officially take office for that term until Jan. 1. "I didn't want to do a lot of quick questions and I wanted to get to understand and know the candidates," Kirksey said. Kirksey also wanted to meet with Stevenson to get ideas on what the next chief can expect in the job.

Once that appointment is completed, another police captain is expected to be named from a field of three lieutenants who have interviewed for that position.

That will streamline the department's administrative positions from three captains to two. The deputy chief will take over the duties of overseeing the administrative division, a position once held by a police captain. The other captains will supervise the investigative division and the support service division.

Three police service aides were recently promoted to police officers after receiving training with veteran officers.

Six police service aides were recently hired by the city earlier in December. They were among 27 who tested for police positions earlier this year after the public safety millage was approved by voters.

The aides also took physical and psychological tests, and will be trained by veteran officers.

parents, community members, students ... what has become overwhelmingly objectionable to the community is my decision to remove the book without instituting the complaint and review processes provided for in our district's Administrative Guidelines."

In his statement, Hughes said he had originally explained passages in the book "were shocking in their graphic explicitness and, in my judgment, not suitable for a high school English class."

"As a former high school English and Latin teacher, I am certainly aware that much of modern literature contains sexual material," the statement read. "It was my judgment, however, that the passages I read from Waterland had crossed the line in terms of graphic portrayal of sexual activity."

The review process requires the creation of a committee of teachers, parents, administrators, literary experts and community members who will be invited to read the book, consider arguments for and against its use, and in the end, develop a recommendation to the administration.

"Respecting what I now perceive to be the wishes of the community at large, I am modifying the earlier decision I made regarding the book and will be putting the book through the review processes outlined in the Administrative Guidelines," Hughes wrote. "Until that process is finished, I will ask that the book still not be used in class. It will be my intention to accept the recommendation of the review committee."

Gary Ley, CEO, President, Garden City Hospital

Over the last ten years insurance companies have been developing protocols to deny hospital readmissions.

As part of changes in federal law, Medicare is following suit. "If readmission is for the same diagnosis, the government tries to deny payment," said Gary Ley, President and CEO of Garden City Hospital. "It has been an issue for a long time. They deny and we appeal."

One of the first questions hospital discharge planners ask the family is "can you provide the necessary care at home?" If not, a brief stay at Four Seasons could prevent readmission to the hospital; 24 hour nursing care, cardiac rehab, physical therapy — rehabilitative care builds strength before returning home and helps decrease readmissions.

"A short term rehab at Four Seasons reduces the risk of readmission to the hospital — readmit too soon and coverage may be at risk."

Jean Michael has lived in Livonia 48 years. She will celebrate her 100th birthday Jan. 4.

Livonia woman turns 100

Jean Michael weighed only 3 pounds when she was born Jan. 4, 1912, in Clyde Bank, Scotland, so her mother used her oven as an incubator to keep her warm.

This week, the longtime Livonia resident will celebrate her 100th birthday.

She lives with her sister, Betty Murdock, 84, her only surviving sibling, and still cooks and does laundry. She loves to bake traditional Scottish cakes and cookies.

She attributes her long life to having an optimistic outlook and being able to enjoy each day, said Robert Laughton, a nephew who lives in Brighton.

"Jean is an inspiration to her family," he said. "She is a generous, caring and cheerful person and everyone loves to have her around."

Mrs. Michael was born a twin, but her twin did not survive.

She lived in Clyde Bank during World War I and can remember watching the harbor being bombed.

In 1923 at age 11, she and her two sisters and brother came with their mother on the ship called the United States and arrived in Montreal. Then they migrated to Detroit where their father was already employed at Detroit Lubrication and was waiting for his family. Mrs. Michael became a U.S. citizen on May 6, 1929, and has always been proud to be an American.

She graduated from the High School of Commerce in downtown Detroit. She and her sisters went to dances at the Grande Ballroom in Detroit and traveled downtown each Christmas to have lunch at Hudson's.

She married Charles Michael in 1941. They were married for 27 years before his death in 1968. Mrs. Michael worked as a secretary at Sylvania Electric for 25 years. After her retirement, she took up golf and was an avid player until just a few years ago.

At one time, Jean took in a foster boy for three years until his mother was able to care for him again. She still receives cards and calls from him.

A birthday celebration on Saturday will be attended by cousins, nieces and nephews.

In Livonia, a 51-year-old Plymouth man parked his vehicle on the shoulder of I-96 during morning rush hour, then opened the truck's hood and stepped out into the right lane, according to Michigan State Police. An armored truck struck and killed him.

In Birmingham, a 17-year-old Cranbrook student jumped to his death from the roof of an apartment complex at Old Woodward near Brown Street. A suicide note was found inside his apartment.

In Novi, a 39-year-old father and husband killed his wife and two young kids before killing himself last January. He was found deceased from carbon monoxide poisoning in his vehicle in the Walmart parking lot at I-96 and Milford Road in Lyon Township.

A Wayne man was hospitalized after police responded to a call that he was armed and suicidal in a vehicle parked at Kroger at Merriman and Michigan Avenue.

Family members contacted police after finding the man had left a suicide note and had withdrawn all of his money from his bank account. He was found slumped over in the vehicle with pills scattered around and he was lying on a loaded rifle. Police had the man hospitalized for psychiatric care.

'Increasing problem'

Farmington Hills Police Chief Chuck Nebus said suicides and mental health issues are an increasing problem.

Nebus said in 2010, there were four adult suicides in Farmington Hills, no teen suicides and 220 people were petitioned for mental health treatment.

From Jan. 1 through Dec. 14, there were 10 suicides, including the two murder-suicides; 56 people threatened suicide; 50 sent to mental treatment after attempting suicide; and 50 people were people were petitioned for mental health treatment for other reasons.

The department now keeps detailed statistics, which show among teens, there were no suicides in 2011; 18 teens were referred for mental treatment for threatening suicide and eight for attempting suicide.

Nebus said some reasons cited from the investigations included relationship breakups, unemployment, financial problems, illness and history of depression.

In Livonia, there were 13 reported suicides from Jan. 1 through Dec. 6, compared to 11 in 2011.

Lt. Tom Goralski said the numbers of suicides remained "relatively stable."

"Sometimes we'll get calls of someone who may be suicidal or in a crisis, especially during the holidays, because there might be financial distress or turmoil in the family," Goralski said. "If they are dealing with those issues and need help, they should call us. We have a responsibility to them and we're here to help them."

In Canton Township, there were 11 reported suicides or attempts; in Redford Township, there was one reported suicide; in Plymouth Township, there were three reported suicides.

Taking action

In Farmington and Farmington Hills, news that there were several students who had expressed thoughts of suicide in a short time frame prompted city leaders to take action. It was also noted that the 10 adult suicides is the highest number ever recorded in Farmington Hills.

Public officials and members of the community formed the Farmington Area Suicide Prevention Task Force, and hosted a community forum in September. It was attended by about 200 people. A second forum was co-hosted by the Farmington Schools PTA Council in October.

Guest speakers at the September forum were former Detroit Lions player Eric Hipple and Jeff Edwards, who

SIGNS, RESOURCES

Warning signs: Feeling sad; change in appetite; loss of interest in activities; change in sleeping patterns; difficulty concentrating; feeling helpless and hopeless; energy loss or fatigue; risk-taking behavior; extreme withdrawal from friends and family; giving away favorite possessions; neglect in school work; stomach aches; and headaches. Help should be sought if someone exhibits several of these signs over the course of a couple of weeks.

is chairman of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. Both men lost their sons to suicide.

Edwards said a survey showed 28 percent of Michigan high schoolers cited feeling depressed and 9 percent had contemplated suicide. It's the third leading cause of death among people ages 15-24.

"It's rampant," Edwards said. "It's an epidemic that we don't talk about. It's the 10,000-pound gorilla in the room."

He said he finds it ironic that the media and community will push out an information blast if there's an attempted abduction of a child; yet little, if anything, is shared about this epidemic that's taking the lives of so many young people.

Encouraging

The work the task force has already tackled is encouraging.

"I am grateful that Farmington and Farmington Hills started the Farmington Area Suicide Task Force at the start of 2011, so we are already promoting awareness and education," Nebus said. "We must educate teens that it is a duty to report or get help for a friend or help for themselves. I am encouraged that we have had examples of teens who have reached out to a school official or to a police liaison officer."

Founding task force member Ken Massey, who is a Farmington Hills city councilman, said the work of the task force is being noticed statewide. A March 20 suicide prevention training workshop will be hosted at a Michigan Municipal League meeting.

"It really is getting some attention," Massey said, noting the city of Saginaw may be setting up a similar task force.

He's also encouraged that a group called MINDS visits classrooms all around the state and local area. He's disappointed it doesn't visit Farmington Public Schools, though.

Massey said he knows the challenge in addressing the topic of suicide.

"We've got plenty of people who need help and plenty of resources, but the problem is connecting the two — because we don't talk about it," he said.

For more information about the group, its meetings and events, find it on Facebook by searching "Farmington Area Suicide Prevention Task Force."

Family members journey through pain, acceptance

By Stacy Jenkins
Observer Staff Writer

When Farmington Hills City Councilman Ken Massey and his wife were making the long drive to Texas, following the death of their son Graham Smith, they received a call from a friend who asked a tough question.

"He said, 'What do you want me to tell people?'" Massey said.

It was at that moment that he realized they had to address Graham's suicide publicly and candidly.

"It was the hardest thing to say that he committed suicide," said Massey, who just a few months prior helped start the Farmington Area Suicide Prevention Task Force. "But it is what it has to be."

Massey knew that brushing the topic under the rug wouldn't do anyone any good. In fact, he recognizes that the secrecy only furthers the taboo surrounding suicide.

Seven months later, it's still hard to talk about.

"It is very hard for us to say Graham killed himself," Massey said. "It's like somehow we let him down."

Looking back, trying to connect the clues why the 27-year-old took his life, Massey said he thinks Graham had exhibited signs of depression. But when asked about it, Graham would always say he was fine.

Of course, he wishes everyone would have pressed Graham a little more, to find out what was going on in his mind.

"If your guts tells you there's a problem, go with your gut," Massey said.

Sara Majoros, of Farmington, also said there were signs before her brother took his own life in 2001, at age 33. One major sign was a suicide attempt when he was 16.

"My brother and I never talked about it — that's the hugest regret of my life," she said.

She said back then, no one talked about suicide.

"It was an era where there was no support," she said.

Now, Majoros finds herself on the other end of the phone, with desperate people who call the Common Ground crisis hotline with a variety of problems.

From 2010-11, the crisis line received 1,436 calls relating to suicide. That number is up from 1,227 the previous year.

She said the training she received as a volunteer at Common Ground was worthwhile.

"The Common Ground training has been one of the most rewarding and coolest things I've ever done," she said.

She said people just need a listening ear.

"People are in hard times," she said. "I thought I'd be giving advice, but I'm not — I'm listening. By listening, you are giving them hope."

It's been helpful for her, as well.

"I'm making my worst thing my best thing," she said, smiling.

She's come a long way from the days of silence surrounding her younger brother's death.

"Now I'm yelling it out on the mountain tops," she said. "This experience (at Common Ground) has made my life better. How I handled it originally is 'what not to do,' unfortunately."

Majoros is also a founding member of the Farmington Area Suicide Prevention Task Force.

"I'm so proud to be working on that — it's just an amazing group of people," she said. "I can't wait to see what we'll do next."

Jeff Edwards is also turning his worst thing into his best thing. The Brighton resident is the chairman of the American

Foundation for Suicide Prevention and spends his time telling his story at forums and in schools.

He captivated the crowd of about 200 recently in Farmington Hills, at a forum presented by the Farmington Area Suicide Prevention Task Force — and challenged them to see beyond the surface.

He showed a collage of photos depicting a happy, healthy boy who was silly; who was athletic; who appeared to be a normal boy, enjoying life.

"What don't we see?" Edwards asked. "Where are our blind spots when we're looking at this?"

They didn't see that the happy, smiling kid in the photos was suffering inside so intensely that he killed himself in March 2003.

That boy was Chase Michael Edwards, the 12-year-old son of Jeff Edwards.

"I've got a Chase-sized hole in this heart," Edwards said. "Why would you know that about me? I do a pretty good job of covering it up."

Looking for clues

Edwards, like every loved one of someone who takes their own life, searched for clues and answers. He found a poem his son had written that described himself as crazy, schizo and depicted himself as being tortured and guilty — then set free, like a bird.

Edwards now knows that his son suffered deeply and wanted his pain to end. He now knows that his son was ill and undiagnosed.

Majoros said the answers aren't always there.

"That will always be there — you won't know why," she said. "It's just accepting that you'll never know."

Twelve lessons in 12 years of parenting

By Rebecca Kavanagh
Guest Columnist

This Christmas, smiley Riley burst into our house, making everything merry and bright with her toddler antics and infectious laughter. Having not seen her for a month, my niece astonished us with how much she's learned since Thanksgiving, and how quickly she's grasping new things.

Mom's the Word

Rebecca Kavanagh

Big cousin Sophia was giving Riley a tour of our kid-friendly Nativity set, prompting her little student to moo for the cow and baa for the lamb. When Sophia pointed to one of the wooden people and said, "This is a shepherd," Riley obediently said, "Shepherd" — a tricky word that she repeated on command throughout the evening. My eldest and I were impressed. Not only had this 18-month-old listened, she'd absorbed, retained and repeated.

In fact, Riley is constantly listening, absorbing, retaining and repeating, just like my own kids do all the time. But I don't notice it as often with them because I'm too busy being busy. Sometimes you just have to stop and say wow.

Slowing way down helps me realize that I'm learning, too. As I flip the calendar and head into my 12th year of parenting, this seems a fitting time to reflect on 12 things my kids have taught me about motherhood along the way.

1. It's hard. In late 1999, I could not wait for baby Sophia to show up and snuggle sweetly in my arms, cooing and gazing up at me adoringly. And that probably did happen on occasion, before a colic freakout or after a diaper blow-out. But mostly she screamed. Eventually, Sophia settled into a bright, bouncy, babbling baby, but those early months were H-A-R-D hard. Those early months taught me that I can handle anything — a confidence that has come in handy more times than I can list.

2. Family ties are comforting, not confining. Despite having planned to raise our kids in sunny San Diego so they'd never know a gray Michigan day, Don and I hightailed it back to our home state even before Sophia could crawl. For us, raising our kids surrounded by grandparents and aunts and uncles and (eventually) cousins won out over ideal weather and breathtaking scenery. Sure, there are dreary times when we bemoan our flight back to the nest. But we know deep down that Michigan is where we belong.

3. Hearts expand. When I was expecting Jackson, I secretly doubted that I would ever love another creature as much as I loved 2-year-old Sophia. But I did. I do. Not only that, but my kids love each other. And I think that because of the two of them, Don and I love each other even more.

4. I'm strong. Jackson was born with health issues that made his first few years a challenge for all of us, physically and emotionally. Dealing with nail-biting procedures and bad-news appointments has taught me that when circumstances warrant, I can be faster than a speeding bullet, more powerful than a locomotive and able to leap tall buildings in a single bound.

5. Sharing a secret eases its burden. By way of playgroups and school, my kids have introduced me to a collection of warm and witty women who have become my friends. It's been a relief to compare notes and confess my sins to mommies living my exact same life. During those early years, we hashed through sleepless nights and potty training and bratty behavior, and if we didn't conjure solutions, we at least offered absolution. More often than not, those supercharged talks have inspired material for this column, which was born in 2004. Working my way through parenthood in print has helped me understand what I'm doing and why — and has forced me to search for the silver lining.

6. Accept help when it's offered. I have an independent streak. My first impulse is to say I can do it myself, thanks. Parenthood taught me that there is no such thing as too much help. Even if that means a mother-in-law stifling a gasp when she arrives unannounced to find piles of dirty laundry and yesterday's dishes in the sink.

7. Kids are people too. When they fluttered out from under my wing to attend school for seven hours each day, my children made me realize that there was only so much I could control. After having orchestrated their every minute from birth through kindergarten, they now were loose in the world to make independent choices left and right. At some point, I relaxed my grip enough to notice that those choices were mostly good ones. And when they weren't, the kids were learning from them. Even without bossy mom saying "No!" and "Because I said so!"

8. Be grateful for what you have. In 2007, I lost my beloved grandma. She was my mentor, my cheerleader, my friend. I suspect I could have gone adrift without her anchor, had it not been for my kids. I was buoyed by their very presence, and seeing my grandma's spirit shine in them. Soon, my grief turned into gratitude for the nearly four decades I had with Grams, and the shorter but significant amount of time my children had with her as well.

9. Laughter makes it easier. I suppose it's possible that Don and I could have ended up with somber children, but I'm tickled to say we didn't. It's a yuk-fest at our house. My kids crack me up constantly, each with their own brand of humor. Ha-ha-hooray for funny kids!

10. Adjustments are necessary. For a decade, I stayed home and worked as a freelance writer. Then I accepted a full-time job that separated me from everything and everyone I loved, for 10 hours a day. I had to learn to be a mom all over again. From figuring out how to get dinner on the table five minutes after walking in the door to mourning missed classroom parties, that juggling act was the toughest trial I've yet to face. I know so many of you are keeping your balls in the air with grace. I'm still dropping a few here and there, but my balance is improving.

11. Breathing is crucial. Last year, amidst the chaos, I began to meditate. The practice slows me down and helps me achieve focus. When I take time to breathe, I feel calmer and more present for the people who need me most, which has helped me realize that ...

12. It's easy. So much has changed since those early days of wailing and wet diapers, except for the fact that I am still burdened by this tremendous responsibility. But as hard as parenthood continues to be, taking note of beautiful everyday moments is a cinch. Listen: Sophia is plunking out a new song on the piano. Look: Jackson is paging through a book on the floor. These people I created and continue to nurture are full of delightful surprises. Appreciating them is as easy as counting to 12.

Mom's the Word appears on alternate Sundays in the Farmington Observer. Write to columnist Rebecca Kavanagh at rakwordplay@att.net.

John Tartaglia brings his production of "ImaginOcean" to the 400-seat Village Theater at Cherry Hill.

'Underwater' family adventure awaits at Village Theater

John Tartaglia's ImaginOcean, billed as a family musical adventure created and written by the Tony Award-nominated actor, takes center stage at Canton's Village Theater at Cherry Hill for performances at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 20.

The Village Theater at Cherry Hill, located at 50400 Cherry Hill Road between Denton and Ridge in Canton, is a regional, 400-seat center for the arts.

ImaginOcean follows the undersea adventures of a group of fish friends, who discover a treasure map that leads them to learn about themselves and ultimately uncover the treasure of each other's friendship. It's produced by Jellyfish Jive Productions.

Tartaglia, along with Philip Katz of Broadway Theatrical and musical theater veteran Michael Shawn Lewis, have teamed up to bring the black-light musical puppet show to the stage. ImaginOcean takes audiences on a one-hour magical underwater journey full of surprises and special effects.

The seafaring stars Dorsel, Tank and Bubbles open an enchanted world of aquatic adventures where they meet jiving jellyfish, a strong-willed seahorse and a new friend, lovable Leonard the Octopus. The production features a lively original score with music and lyrics by composer William Wade, plus characters that light up the stage with their effervescent color and personalities designed and built by the innovative artists at The Puppet Kitchen in New York City.

ImaginOcean is the latest creation of Tartaglia, a nominee for his performance in the Tony Award-winning Broadway musical Avenue Q, for which he originated the roles of Princeton and Rod. Tartaglia was most recently seen on Broadway appearing as Pinocchio in Shrek The Musical and previously starred as Lumiere in Disney's Beauty and the Beast.

A 10-year veteran of Sesame Street, Tartaglia is one of the youngest puppeteers ever to perform on the show, starting at the age of 16.

All tickets for the 10 a.m. Jan. 20 show of ImaginOcean are $8. Tickets for the 7 p.m. performance are $16 for adults, $13 for seniors and youths; $8 for groups of 15 or more — and they can be purchased online at www.CantonVillageTheater.org or by calling (734) 394-5460.

For more information about Tartaglia's ImaginOcean, visit the official show website at www.imaginocean.com.

The Best Money I've Ever Spent!

I had laser hair removal on my lip & chin over three years ago with Beth. It changed my life. I had such severe facial hair I shaved my face every morning (like 5 o'clock shadow hairy.) After waxing me one day Beth gently asked me "Why don't you have the laser hair removal done?"

I told her that I had tried that. I went to Henry Ford Fairlane paid $1000 for my chin area and had 8 treatments. I then sarcastically said "Clearly it doesn't work." She promised me that after one treatment I'd see a difference. I really wanted to believe that it could work. I had my first treatment and noticed a difference. After 3 treatments my friends and co-workers noticed it too. By the time I was done I finally felt like a girl. My self esteem was restored. It's been three years and I have thanked Beth, Renee, & Fatima every time I see them for taking such wonderful care of me. I referred every woman I know to see them. Laser hair removal is the way to go! I'm having my underarms done now. For less than the price of a Coach purse, I'm NEVER going to have to shave my underarms again. I'm investing in ME!

I've lived in Canton, Northville and now Dearborn. I don't care how far I am from them New Face New Body is my Laser Hair Removal Spot. The Brazilian wax is awesome too. I think I'll laser that next.

Whalers matinee idols

By Tim Smith
Observer Staff Writer

Several of the Plymouth Whalers' big guns are playing for various teams at the World Junior Championships, but you wouldn't know the team was shorthanded if stopped by Compuware Arena on Wednesday afternoon.

With winger Alex Aleardi of Farmington Hills scoring a hat trick (plus two assists for five points) and backup netminder Matt Mahalak superb between the pipes, the Whalers rolled to a 6-1 OHL victory over the Western Conference-leading London Knights.

Netting two goals for Plymouth was forward Stefan Noesen while left wing Jamie Devane chipped in with a goal and two helpers, making it a fun time for the 3,254 fans attending the annual Kids Day matinee.

"It was a big game," said Aleardi, the game's deserving first star. "Coach (Mike Vellucci) wanted to win this game, so we got it done tonight."

Vellucci, who noted the Knights were without several top players due to the World Juniors, said he'd gladly take the two points under any circumstances against London.

Plymouth improved to 23-9-2-1 for 49 points, two behind London (25-8-0-1) entering Friday's games (which took place after this holiday edition of the Observer went to press).

Bachrouche wins 4 golds

North Farmington High grad and former University of Virginia swimmer Katya Bachrouche, who will represent Lebanon in the 2012 Summer Olympic Games in London, recently captured four gold medals at the Pan Arab Games held in Doha, Qatar.

Bachrouche also won two bronze medals to set a record for most ever for the nation of Lebanon.

She has now qualified in four Olympic events — the 200-, 400-, and 800-meter freestyles and the 200 individual medley.

MU adds two

Madonna University women's golf coach Scott Marzolino announced the signing of two players last week including All-Observer and Division 1 All-Stater Jordyn Shepler of Livonia Churchill.

Marzolino also signed Holly Laginess of Monroe St. Mary Catholic Central.

Shepler placed ninth individual at the MHSAA Division 1 state finals last fall after placing 13th at the regional. She also finished fourth in the Kensington Lakes Activities Association Tournament.

Laginess earned four letters in both golf and tennis for the Kestrels.

During her senior year Laginess was named the Monroe Country Co-Player of the Year after earning medalist honors at the Monroe County Championship and winning her second Lady Marauder Open championship.

Laginess capped her prep career with an all-state honorable mention selection.

Ex-goalie starts up his own company

By Brad Emons
Observer Staff Writer

When Kevin Marlowe decided to start his own hockey company, he drew from experience.

"I grew up playing hockey in the LHA (Livonia Hockey Association) and always had a passion for the game," said the 29-year-old, who manufactures and sells hockey goalie masks from his parents' home in Livonia. "I've always had a passion for hockey — just filling out my notebooks and designing the equipment I wanted and coloring the equipment ... I just loved doing it. So, when I had a chance to start up my own hockey company, I jumped at the opportunity."

Marlowe is a 2001 Stevenson grad who played three years of high school hockey. He also played club hockey for Western Michigan University and has a degree in Managerial Communications from Wayne State.

After graduating from Wayne State, Marlowe sold industrial rags for a year before moving on to his current job at Aerotech, a job placement company that does recruiting and staffing.

In 2008, Kevin Marlowe and his father Dave, who works in sales as an associate publisher for Motor Information Systems, started the goalie mask company on the side —

Brighton 1st at Chiefs' tournament

By Ed Wright
Observer Staff Writer

The Bulldogs' bite was as strong as their bark during Thursday's Canton Varsity Team Wrestling Invitational in the Phase III gymnasium.

Brighton outlasted an impressive field — including Adrian, 55-12, in the title bout — to earn the first-place trophy.

Downers Grove South (Ill.) made its several-hours trip east pay off with a third-place showing.

The host Chiefs, who battled to a 49-49 draw with Downers Grove South in their fifth match of the day, finished fourth.

Two Chiefs racked up 5-0 records: senior Keshav Patel (130 pounds) and sophomore Ben Griffin, (112 pounds).

Earning 4-1 marks for the Chiefs were Alec Pantaleo (135 pounds), Marc Przybylski (140), Richard DeMarois (119), Austin Pilmer (119) and Zach Marsh (152).

Other highlights for the Chiefs included 215-pounder K.J. Wooley's 6-1 triumph

Roundball no Classic for Glenn

By Brad Emons
Observer Staff Writer

Westland John Glenn used Wednesday's Motor City Roundball Classic against host Beverly Hills Detroit Country Day as a barometer for its girls basketball team.

And gauging from the Rockets' performance, there's work to be done after they suffered a 73-39 setback.

"It was definitely a step backwards," said Glenn first-year coach Eric Kovatch, whose team slipped to 4-2 overall. "I don't have a lot to say. We just didn't bring it today. Lack of effort, lack of execution. Granted, Country Day is a very good team and personally I think is the best team in the state of Michigan. But that's no excuse. We made it too easy for them."

Glenn was coming off a spirited performance eight days earlier in a 56-53 loss to defending state Class A champion Inkster. And the Rockets stayed close

Quit smoking with seven-day program

Dr. Arthur Weaver, Emeritus Professor of Surgery from Wayne State University, will offer his popular "Breathe Free Smoking Cessation Program" beginning with an introductory meeting on Thursday, Jan. 6 in Livonia.

Each session will include a video presentation about smoking, group interviews and interaction, a lecture with advice on successfully quitting and remaining smoke-free. One session will include information on how to stop smoking without gaining excessive weight. Participants also are given information on other lifestyle changes that enhance their likelihood of remaining smoke free.

Sessions start at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at the Livonia Library, located at 5 Mile and Farmington Road. In addition to the introductory meeting, sessions run Monday-Friday, Jan. 9-13. A graduation is set for Monday, Jan. 16.

A three-night "Stress Control Clinic" follows the smoking program. It will meet at 7:30 p.m., Jan. 19, 24 and 26 at the Livonia Library.

Weaver has led the Breathe Free Smoking Cessation Program since 1966 in the Detroit Metro area and has helped thousands of people to stop smoking. He has been involved in a wide range of community and industrial-based programs for promoting a healthier lifestyle for nearly 40 years.

His expertise in smoking withdrawal has been shared nationally and internationally with clinics in Russia, Pakistan and Taiwan.

He has won various awards for his efforts, including a Michigan Cancer Foundation "Man of the Year" award and the Wayne County Medical Society award for Humanitarian Achievement.

He has served on the board of trustees of the American Lung Association of Southeastern Michigan and as president of the Wayne County Council on Smoking and Health.

Weaver's non-profit corporation, "Better Living Seminars" offers nutrition and cooking classes, weight control and exercise programs and stress management seminars, in addition to an annual health camp.

Weaver is a graduate of Loma Linda University, a general surgeon and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

Recognized for excellence

Linda Chomin, (right), freelance writer and a Canton resident, shows her Pulse Award as she poses with Kathy Kauffmann, executive director of the southeast Michigan Heart Association. The Association and Beaumont Health System earlier this month recognized media outlets and reporters in five categories ranging from heart and stroke coverage to CPR education, at the inaugural awards event. Chomin was honored for an educational piece she dedicated to Go Red For Women. The story ran in all editions of the Observer & Eccentric, which also was recognized for supporting the Go Red For Women movement since its implementation in 2006.

Light treatment aids Alzheimer's patients

A Wayne State University researcher has found that Alzheimer's disease patients respond positively to treatment by blue-green light.

In a study published recently in the Western Journal of Nursing Research, LuAnn Nowak Etcher, assistant professor of nursing, reported that caregivers perceived improved functioning in their patients. They said their charges seemed more awake and alert, were more verbally competent and showed improved recognition, recollection and motor coordination. They also said patients seemed to recapture their personalities and were more engaged with their environment. They also saw improvement in their patients' moods.

Etcher's work is inspired by her interest in a phenomenon known as "sundowning," when Alzheimer's patients sleep during the day, wake up later and may be up all night. Part of her doctoral research was to use light to regulate the rest-activity patterns of women with Alzheimer's.

The study involved 20 women older than age 65 with Alzheimer's dementia from nursing homes in southeast Michigan. Each patient was assigned randomly to an experimental group receiving blue-green light treatments or a control group receiving dim red light.

A commercially available visor used to treat seasonal affective disorder and jet lag was used to administer the light to patients. Caregivers — patients' family members and nursing facility personnel — were not told which kind of light was thought to have physiological effects.

Although blue-green light recipients comprised the active experimental group, Etcher said she was surprised when some recipients of red light — the placebo group — also were reported as showing improvements, with caregivers saying their patients were calmer and less resistant to care.

The level of effects varied. Although caregivers reported that blue-green light recipients improved, a few patients showed little or no effect from the treatments.

Calling her study preliminary, Etcher said it now needs to be replicated with a larger sample and different demographics.

"If they sleep better at night, and are more awake during the day, they can eat, they can interact with other people and they can take advantage of other cueing agents in the environment," she said. "In addition to light during daytime and darkness during the nighttime, smells at mealtimes, food intake, interactions — all these things in conjunction help regulate our day."

It's good to be bad

Local pets are famous for one day in nationally-sold calendars

By Sharon Dargay
O&E Staff Writer

Maizie isn't a "bad dog" but she plays one in the Workman Publishing Co., 2012 Bad Dog page-a-day calendar.

"She is a Golden (Retriever) and she's going to be nine in March," said Denise Zlonkevich of Plymouth. "The worse thing she does is take papers and tear them up or dollar bills. She's torn them up. You can't mention take a bath or trimming nails or getting brushed ... you will get growls."

Denise and her husband, Jeffry, sent photos of Maizie to Workman's annual contest for four years, hoping she would win a spot in one of its wall or desk calendars. They stopped sending the snapshots last year while Maizie underwent her final treatments for lymphoma that was diagnosed in April 2009.

"We gave up," Jeffry said. "We hadn't sent any and I didn't realize they saved the old photos," Denise added.

But then last August, the couple received a letter from Workman stating that Maizie's photos would be in two of their calendars for 2012.

"We were quite honored," Denise said. "It's almost like your kid's going to college," Jeffry quipped, remembering the moment they received notification.

A photo showing Maizie as a puppy took the Nov.

Jeff, Denise and Maizie Zlonkevich of Plymouth attend the annual picnic sponsored by Animal Cancer and Imaging Center, Canton. Maizie is a cancer survivor.

21st space in a favorite dogs calendar and the snapshot of her with toy gun under her paws is on the Feb. 15 page in the Bad Dog calendar. The couple's son, Jeremy, 23, set up the winning Bad Dog shot.

Animal lovers

Denise and Jeffry said they grew up with dogs and got their first Golden Retriever together when their children were young. After "Sadie" died, the couple brought Maizie into the family. Her name is a nod to the University of Michigan's maize and blue colors. Nearly everyone in the Zlonkevich clan attended U of M or are "hardcore" fans. "We've given the calendar for Christmas," Denise said. "The cancer vet said it would be framed and put up in the office."

"We're just happy and we're wondering if Hollywood is going to call," Jeffry added.

If it does, Maizie may face competition from another local canine, Ginger, of Canton, whose photo on Bad Dog's April 18 page clearly shows her aspirations to become a top banana.

"She likes to have her picture taken and sometimes she likes to dress up ... and sometimes not," said owner Connie Serwonski, who submitted a winning photo of her Long-Haired Dachshund wearing a banana costume while lounging on a banana-shaped pillow. "I buy the calendar yearly and I love looking at all the dogs. I thought, we'll enter her and see what happens."

Like Denise and Jeffry Zlonkevich, Serwonski submitted photos every year for about four years. Most of them showed Ginger in a costume.

"She does eat bananas for breakfast every day. She's a family-type dog and she enjoys everyone," Serwonski said. "She's not a bad dog."

Getting in

Pets don't have to look "bad," or threatening to secure a place in the Bad Dog and Bad Cat calendars, but must inspire the writers who pen captions to go along with the images.

"A huge pile of photos is sent to the (Bad calendar) writers and they do the selection," said Susan Bolotin, editor-in-chief at Workman. "The easiest way to get into the Bad calendar is for the picture to be funny."

For its other pet calendars, such as the 365 Cats or 365 Dogs, a photo researcher sifts through thousands of images, looking for variety, and works in conjunction with a writer and editor.

"Sometimes a dog or cat doesn't make it into a calendar one year ... maybe there are too many of that

The company began publishing the 365 Dogs and 365 Cats calendars more than 25 years ago. Its Bad Cat calendar has logged seven years and Bad Dog is in its sixth year.

Kitten and puppy wall calendars also consist of photos from the public.

New this year is the LEGO calendar that also accepts submissions.

Protecting your home from heat loss

By Lon Grossman
Guest Columnist

If your chimney flue has not been cleaned recently and you use the fireplace weekly, have it cleaned to prevent a chimney fire. Also, examine the firebox for loose or crumbling bricks. Make any necessary repairs using fire clay, which is a heat resistant mortar.

Take a look at your chimney from the outside. If ivy or tree limbs are near the top, cut them back. If you have loose or missing bricks, have them repaired or replaced before you use your fireplace.

Lon Grossman

Most fireplaces built since 1990 have dampers just above the firebox that close off the flue to limit heat loss when it's not in use. Make sure the damper is not damaged by age or stuck open (or shut) because of fallen debris. Call in a chimney sweep for major problems. They should be able to make a "clean sweep" of anything wrong.

If your house has a crawlspace make sure you've closed all the vents. Also, if you have little or no insulation in the crawl, add R30 insulation to the perimeter walls, a vapor barrier (generally 4-6 mil plastic) should be covering the dirt ground of the crawlspace. And finally, insulate all plumbing pipes with insulation or pipe wrap.

Does your house have a whole-house fan in the hall ceiling? Install a plastic vapor barrier on top of it and then cover it with insulation to prevent heat loss. The heat loss through those louvers is considerable. One problem I find when inspecting houses is some families don't seal the whole-house fan, which causes rotting and mold in the attic to the roof sub-structure. That is not good.

If you total up all the areas around the average house that need caulking and weatherstripping, you're looking at an equivalent of a three-foot gaping hole in the wall. Weatherstripping consists of those slim strips of rubber, plastic, metal and foam that seal the moving edges of doors, windows and other areas. To stop air leaks, weather stripping has to make a good seal between the door or window and its frame.

Storm windows not only protect the main window from water, winter, rain and snow, they slow heat loss by creating a dead-air space if they are tight enough to limit air movement. Make sure storms fit snugly all around the window frame, leaving only small weep holes along the bottom edge to allow condensation, rain and moisture vapor to escape. Loose storms are not only ineffective, they promote frost on the indoor window surface.

Pipes, vents, hatches, recessed lights, and cracks that penetrate the upper floor ceilings are easy avenues for heat loss. Even more important, they allow moisture vapor to migrate to the attic, where cooler temperatures cause it to condense into water that saturates insulation and freezes into frost. Close off large penetrations with plywood or wallboard, then seal all joints and cracks with caulk.

If you think you have "bats in the belfry" what do you have up there? You'd better make sure you have good attic ventilation. In an insulated attic, the rafters and roof boards are cold. Any warm, moist air reaching them through the insulation immediately condenses into moisture. The moisture gets trapped and eventually rots the wood. So whenever you add attic insulation, make sure you have good attic ventilation. To see how much insulation and ventilation you need, go to my Web site at www.technihouse.com and click on "Insulation: Packing It In".

If a winter storm strikes, close off those rooms that are not absolutely essential. Listen to TV and radio for weather developments. Letting faucets drip a little may prevent freezing damage. If a power failure occurs, turn off most light switches, your furnace switch, and unplug the freezer and refrigerator. The surge of returning electrical power can damage the motors of appliances.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Many people are wrongly rejected when they apply for Social Security Disability benefits. Money was taken out of their paychecks for Social Security taxes to ensure that they would receive disability benefits if they could no longer work full-time. Sadly, the government denies approximately 60% of those who apply for disability benefits.

Attorneys J.B. Bieske and Jennifer Alfonsi have 42 years combined experience representing only Social Security disability clients. And they personally meet with all clients and appear themselves at all court hearings. Many large firms assign inexperienced attorneys to your case. And some of these firms are located thousands of miles away and only fly the attorney in the day of the court hearing. Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi have vast experience before local Michigan judges.

Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi can often make a winning difference at the application stage. And, if an appeal is necessary they have won several hundred cases before a court date is even set.

Those denied can appeal on their own but statistics for many years reveal that those represented by attorneys win a much higher percentage of appeals. And attorneys who specialize in Social Security Disability cases win a much higher percentage yet.

In addition to practicing only Social Security disability law attorney Bieske has written a book for attorneys about the subject and has been interviewed on various television programs. Both attorney Bieske and Alfonsi have also been interviewed on radio programs and have given speeches to many groups.

Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi offer free phone or office consultation. If they represent you, there will be no fee charged until after the case is won. The fee is a percentage of retroactive benefits.

Bieske and Alfonsi represent clients from all over the state of Michigan. Their Livonia office is on Six Mile Road just west of I-275. Their Novi office is located on Haggerty Road just north of 12 Mile Road. Call them at 1-800-331-3530 for a free consultation if you have been denied, or if you are thinking of possibly applying for Social Security benefits.

Contestants submit a story in either written or video format about their experience with a family member who has Alzheimer's disease or dementia. Essays and videos must:

- Share how Alzheimer's has impacted your life.

- Talk about the role that memories and remembering have played in your family, especially with regard to your family member who now has or had Alzheimer's.

- Share specific stories or examples of how you and your family members cope or coped with challenges of Alzheimer's disease.

- Tell why you deserve to win this family reunion.

Entries must be submitted by 11:59 p.m. Jan. 31. Three finalists will be notified by a judge's panel by Feb. 15. Online voting to select the grand prize winner will occur from March 28-June 30.

The "I Will Remember for You Family Reunion Giveaway" grand prize winner will have the opportunity to experience an unforgettable family reunion. The event, funded by Home Instead, Inc., the franchisor of the Home Instead Senior Care network, will include activities to help family members create and capture special memories together, such as a scrapbooking and shadow box station, a memory booth to capture videos, photos or written thoughts, and assistance from a professional family historian to create a family memory anthology.

Attendance of the family member with Alzheimer's disease will be left to the discretion of the grand prize winner. If the individual with Alzheimer's does not attend, the Home Instead Senior Care network will arrange for a local office to provide the family member with in-home care services during reunion activities.

"We hope this contest will help turn some of the negative aspects associated with this disease into proactive projects that will preserve family memories for generations to come," stated Jeff Huber, president and chief operating officer of Home Instead, Inc.

My sweetheart, every day you have been gone seems like an eternity. You were the most loving husband I could have ever imagined.

You were kind and generous to everyone in your life, but I was the luckiest of all to have so many years with you by my side. You taught me the true meaning of love and friendship.

The Christmas lights will remind me of you: a bright star in my life. I know you are now in a beautiful place, and I can't wait to see you again.

Kelly Moscarello

Aug 4th, 1978 - Dec 26th, 2010

One year ago last Christmas Eve; I prayed along the bedside of a very special, amazing friend who was fighting for her life. I held her hand in my hand as the tears rolled down my face and sadly wondered why God would take her away to heaven, a beautiful but far unreachable place. As I held her hand, I kissed her cheek; and told her it's okay, "I whispered, Kelly don't be scared, an angel will show you the way". I tried so hard to stay strong, but couldn't help but cry. I knew she earned her angel wings, and soon she'd be able to fly. Kelly an amazing friend whose smile was as bright as the moon, was taken away from all that knew and loved her, unfairly way too soon, but as angry as we all want to be, we must accept God's plans. He needed a very special angel, and placed Kelly in the palm of his hands. I will never forget our special times through the passing years. We sure enjoyed our morning coffees, shared lunches, long talks on the phone, long walks, hang outs, lots of hugs, smiles and laughter and many unforgettable tears and how you'd hand me your brush at work and say, "Sheree, will you brush my hair"? I am so proud of you Kelly, your strength, your dignity and pride. You amazed all of us with your unforgettable, courageous fight to survive! You will live forever in my heart, YOU inspire me. I will never let you go, I love you, and I miss you, My Dear Friend, Kelly Moscarello!

SUDOKU

Fun By The Numbers
Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
