Bus problems plague first week of school

By Brad Kadrich Staff Writer

Transportation problems got so bad in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools last year, the district's Board of Education this year jettisoned its vendor and hired two new companies to manage the system.

But after the first week of school was still marred by late buses and other transportation issues. Facebook and other social media sites were lighting up with parents left wondering how – and, most impor-tantly, when – the problems will be fixed.

First-day problems were bad enough to prompt Superintendent Dr. Michael Meissen to post a letter to parents on the district's website (pccs.k12.mi.us), acknowl-edging the problem and vowing to fix it.

Routing issues

Meissen said the issues revolved around routing problems and did not rest with the drivers. The district over the summer hired two companies to run its privatized transportation system, replacing Michigan Educational Transportation Services. Durham Bus Services was brought in to provide the operational aspects - drivers, mechanics, etc. - while Missouri-based Trans-Par Group, Inc., was hired to manage the bus routing system.

That system is what let the district down in the first week, according to Meissen. "The goal is to have transportation that is on time, reliable, safe and dependable," Meissen said. "That is our commitment, it's the expectation of the community. We do not have that experience currently."

In a district where buses transport some 10,000 students a day, administrators were expecting problems, it being the first day of school with mostly new bus drivers and a new management team plotting the routes. The team from TransPar cut the number of bus routes from 127 to 120 and moved to a new numbering system using route numbers instead of bus numbers.

"With all these transitions going on, this is a major issue for our children, for our teachers and for our families," Meissen said. "It's got to be better and it's got to be better right now."

Fall Festival opening day hot - literally

By Matt Jachman Staff Writer

The Plymouth Community Fall Festival opened Friday afternoon to temperatures nearing 90, high humidity and a forecast of a storm Friday evening.

The festival, a nearly-60year-old Plymouth tradition, is a fundraising and public relations opportunity for churches, booster clubs and service groups, as well as a carnival, a food fair and a venue for live entertainment. It continues through Sunday. (For details, see

Festival crowds, milling in Kellogg Park and on adjoining closed streets, seemed down for late afternoon of the festival's opening day.

'They probably don't want to come out in the heat and I understand why," said Lianna Claypool of the Plymouth Fife & Drum Corps, which is selling roasted almonds all weekend in a booth near Main and Penni-

Local family battling emotions, cost of muscular disease

Erinne Williams and Kevin Yopek of Canton have the usual sibling relationship

She learned her love of hockey from him and he taught her how to play video games. Now, according to Erinne, she "kicks his butt" at them.

There's a sibling rivalry tinged with a touch of competitiveness surrounded by a love of family that's normal in most relationships.

But their relationship is not a normal one, because very little about Erinne Williams is normal. While Kevin can play his hockey on skates in full pads zooming across the ice, Erinne's version of hockey - and she's a huge fan is on wheels.

That's because Erinne, struck young by a strain of muscular dystrophy called spinal muscular atrophy, has been confined to a wheelchair much of her life. The disease, which her family likens to amyotrophic lateral sclerosis but in children, has altered the lives of Erinne and her family in ways no family should bear.

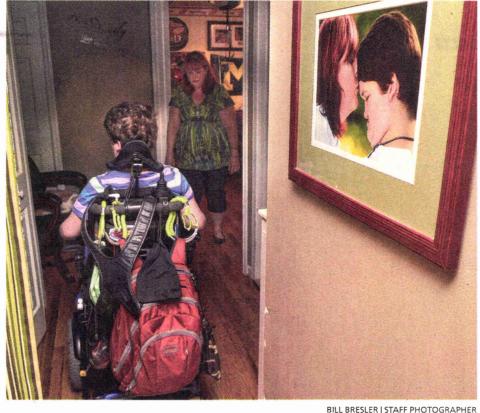

Blending in

"I want to be a regular teenager, but I just can't," Erinne said, her voice hushed and raspy from a tracheostomy tube through which she has to breathe much of the time. "I feel a little like an outsider. I try to blend in as much as possible."

Blending in, particularly at school, is tough enough. It's a little more difficult when you travel with your own nurse and service dog (Latte, provided by Canine Assistants). It's a battle Erinne now a senior at Plymouth High School, has been fighting most of her life.

When she was born in 1997, Erinne "seemed perfectly healthy," according

HELPING ERINNE

The cost in both human and financial terms of caring for a daughter with spinal muscular atrophy is high for Suzanne Williams, a single mother taking care of her 17-year-old daughter.

Some examples of donations that would help include a full house, self-starting generator to help recharge the battery backup for the host of machines that dominate her daily life; hotel gift cards, because the home frequently loses power and the family is forced to retreat to a hotel; contractor time and home repairs, grass and snow removal and wheelchair ramp maintenance; help with utility costs; gas cards; and gift cards to places such as CVS, Target, Meijer, Costco, Vitamin Shoppe, etc.

Volunteer Adriana Comsa, who has a son, Andreas, and a daughter, Isabella, in the Corps, said some 17 parents and 27 Corps members were expected to help out at the booth over the course of the weekend.

Nearby, at the Polish National Alliance Dancers' booth, scores of volunteers were also expected, out of about 40 dancers in the company from around 30 families.

City ups ISO rating for fire service

By Matt Jachman Staff Writer

Plymouth officials are celebrating an improved fire insurance rating that came out of a recent evaluation of the city's firefighting and fire protection capabilities.

The new rating from the ISO, or the Insurance Services Office, is a 4, down one point from the most recent rating of 5. ISO rates close to 50,000 departments nationwide, assigning grades between 1 and 10, with the lower score the better. The rating of 4 puts the city among the top 17 percent of departments, City Manager Paul Sincock said

The cooperative, which relies on on-call firefighters and the private Huron Valley Ambulance to respond to medical emergencies, was controversial at the time, as the city formerly had a joint fire department with Plymouth Township, the Plymouth Community Fire Depart-

Instead, Sincock said, an improved ISO fire rating could lower insurance rates a bit, as most insurers look at a community's rating when providing insurance there. That's not a guarantee, he cautioned, as insurers consider many other factors when setting rates.

Study's scope

Sincock said the ISO study looked most closely at the NCFD's resources in Plymouth the organization and equipment at the fire stations near city hall and in Old Village. The study also looked at the department's resources that are based in Northville, he said, but those were considered secondary or backup resources.

ISO also examined other departments that have a bearing on firefighting response, such as the water division in the Department of Municipal Services, which is responsible for delivering water at adequate pressures during fire events and for fire hydrant maintenance. The joint emergency dispatch center the city operates with Plymouth Township was also studied, he said.

This improved rating is a result of the team efforts and professionalism in all of our operations," Sincock said in a press release, thanking the NCFD, DMS, the dispatch center and Huron Valley Ambulance. "This improved rating would not have been possible without the dedication of everyone involved.'

Enough drivers

At last week's Board of Education meeting, TransPar's Francisco Duprey said more than 140 drivers were hired for the 120 routes and his company provided training sessions for all of them.

But, Duprey told board members, there would be glitches. But he said TransPar and officials at Durham, hired along with Trans-Par to provide the drivers and other operational aspects of the system, did what they could to get everyone ready.

"We made some changes," Duprey told the board. "There are going to be some bumps.

Parents, too, expected bumps. But they were all over social media in the first week with complaints of delays as long as several hours and other complaints.

Sticking together

"When I picked my son up (Wednesdav) from his elementary school, the buses were just arriving when we left at 4 p.m. (school ends at 3:45 p.m.)," said Nielson, a Canton resident. "I can understand bad weather. I can understand having to make adjustments to the bus schedule. I can even understand some confusion because it's the first day of school. However, I really don't understand how a 'good' school district could screw up their transportation this badly."

Meissen and other administrators drew praise, though, by actually being out at various school buildings, trying to make sure changes were made and the system got smoother.

At Dodson Elementary School, for instance, parents noticed Principal April Quas-

Meissen said the district is holding Trans-Par "accountable" and is working to get routes that "match the needs of our families and get our students to school safely and on time.'

"I would say our bus drivers are providing the level of service we are expecting," Meissen said. "The organization of our school routes is not. LOCAL NEWS

Finding local news still easy at new Hometownlife.com

Radical change is not easily embraced, so there was a bit of trepidation when the switch was flipped to launch our new website, Hometownlife.com, last week. Would readers love it, despise it or even worse, be ambivalent?

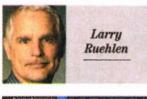

The good news is that the launch definitely evoked a response.

"The website and app look great ... Congratulations!" one reader said.

I'm grateful to say that reaction has been overwhelmingly positive thus far. Readers have discovered our apps for iPad, iPhone and Android and already 25 percent of our online traffic is from mobile users – a sure sign that the apps have hit the mark.

Our new homepage is bold, there is no doubt. Photos are vivid, headlines snappy and content is displayed in a fashion that is entirely new. For every 100 people who like it, there are a few who prefer the way it was.

"The new website is horrible," another reader said, while offering up her nephew to build us a new site.

I suppose you can't make everyone happy, but I'm going to try anyway.

Readers who have complained have said finding the local news that matters to them isn't so easy these days. That sentiment is understandable, given the overhaul of Hometownlife. But our readers should know this - there is still a dedicated home on our website for local news pertinent to every community O&E Media serves. That hasn't changed at all. In fact, for the first time there is a Community News module right on the homepage to make finding local content even easier. All you have to do is click on the name of the city that corresponds to the publication you want to read and it will take you to news from only that town.

If you want to the read the Canton Observer, there is a page for that at http://www.hometown life.com/news/observer -canton/. If you want to find the Plymouth Observer, the link is http://www.hometownlife .com/news/observerplymouth/. Links for all of our other publications are listed at the end of this column.

Bookmark the link that is important to you and all the local news you expect to find at Hometownlife will only be a click away, with no need to navigate further. And that local front now includes everything in one place. News from city hall, local schools, sports, features and, yes, police briefs from your hometown are right there and easy to find.

One fact is clear from the launch of our new website – our readers value local news and want to read about the people, places and businesses that make their hometowns unique. If you have an idea for a story, photo gallery or simply want help finding what you are looking for online, feel free to give me a call. My number is 313-595-1007 and I actually pick it up and enjoy talking to readers.

Maintenance closes parking deck's upper level

Maintenance will have the upper deck to downtown Plymouth's parking garage closed Sept. 8-12.

The Plymouth Downtown Development Authority is advising visitors to downtown Plymouth that the upper level of the Central Parking Deck will be closed Monday through Friday, Sept. 8-12, for maintenance.

"It's annual maintenance being performed on the parking deck," said Tony Bruscato, director of the city of Plymouth DDA. "We're confident that after the maintenance issues have been addressed, we'll be adding years to the life of the parking deck."

Bruscato said there will also be some spaces in the lower portion of the parking structure that will be blocked during the repairs; however, the lower level will not have to be completely closed. Normal three-hour time limits will continue to be enforced during maintenance of the upper level. Anyone leaving their vehicles on the upper level after Sunday night is subject to having them towed. All-day, or eight-hour, parking is available in the East Central Lot between the Penn Theatre and the Plymouth District Library. Other public parking locations can be found at www.downtownplymouth-.org (Click "Maps" on the left side).

"We apologize in advance to our visitors, store owners and employees for the inconvenience," Bruscato said. "However, our main concern is to make certain the structure is safe."

The Central Parking Deck was constructed in the mid-1980s and has just under 300 parking spaces.

Parents meet teachers as schools open their doors

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools officials hoped the series of open houses they conducted at their various schools for parents of incoming students would help ease kids and parents into the school year. Mission accomplished.

Hundreds of parents took part in the series of open houses in the weeks leading up to the start of school earlier this week.

With school improvement projects underway at many schools, courtesy of the $114 million bond passed by voters in 2013, the open houses also gave parents, stu-dents and even staff a chance to see the upgrades and improvements made at each school over the summer months.

District officials called open houses "a great way to meet your child's teacher and for children to meet their classmates and get familiarized with the school, if it is a new school for them."

Plymouth High School teacher Molly Dishmon talks to parents Thursday at the Plymouth High School open house.

Welding expert speaks at career center

Dean R. Wilson, president of the American Welding Society, an organization with nearly 70,000 members worldwide, will speak at William D. Ford Career Technical Center at 1 p.m. Sept. 11.

Headquartered in Miami and led by a volunteer organization of officers and directors, AWS has 22 districts with 250 sections and student chapters.

Wilson has been active in AWS for more than 30 years and has served on numerous standing committees, including serving as chair in 2005 of WEMCO, an Association of Welding Equipment Manufacturers.

As president, Wilson manages the affairs of AWS, presides at all board of directors and executive committee meetings and represents the society at many of its local section meetings, as well as other technical, national and international meetings.

If you suffer from just one or from many of these symptoms, you might have Peripheral Neuropathy

Many patients who come to HealthQuest have tried any and all treatments available. Some have found temporary relief with medications or other short term solutions while others have found no relief at all. Diabetic Peripheral Neuropathy is one common form of Neuropathy. Over time, uncontrolled sugar levels can damage your nerves. This nerve damage causes different symptoms and the problems first appear in the toes, feet, and hands. The custom treatment program available from HealthQuest has delivered success in a large number of their patients where other treatments or facilities have failed. If you are one of those suffering in pain and have tried other medical options only to have them fail, don't give up hope. You deserve to live without the excruciating pain or discomfort of neuropathy.

Do Pain Pills Work?

Many neuropathy patients develop prescription drug dependency after first taking them to help cope with the associated pain. Medications can sometimes provide temporary relief but can also introduce unintended consequences. At HealthQuest you will be shown many non-surgical, drug free options all customized to life and may even cause emotional stress or depression. Why suffer longer than you need to? If you feel that your symptoms may be caused by Peripheral Neuropathy, call today and schedule a FREE, no risk consultation with the Doctors and staff at HealthQuest.

The non-surgical solution: The latest FDA Cleared approach

Our advanced program for treating Peripheral Neuropathy is a combination of technology and experience that aids in healing the damaged nerves. Where many other treatments only address the symptoms, we address the root cause. Our treatment protocol can help restore, stabilize, and rebuild the nerves in your extremities. The effects are nothing short of miraculous in the eyes of our patients and most feel the results within the first few visits. Depending on your condition, we have many different options including the ReBuilder®. This device works by sending an electrical impulse that travels automatically from one foot, up the leg. across the nerve roots in the lower back, then down the other leg to the other foot. Most people report that the treatment feels soothing as these signals help to repair damaged nerves. The ReBuilder® is found in several prestigious medical facilities including The Cancer Treatment Centers of America, Sloan Kettering, The Cleveland Clinic, and John Hopkins. Our program has also been effective in treating painful symptoms of arthritis, MS, and other forms of chronic pain. Patients generally feel better physically throughout the treatment period and even feel better emotionally after experiencing a reduction in pain.

What are patients saying?

"I was diagnosed with postchemotherapy neuropathy in 2008. I tried several types of medications, but was allergic to all of them. After treatment I feel much better and I can even dance with my wife." — Jerry W.

"I had peripheral neuropathy for 3 years and suffered from numbness in both feet and lower legs. I tried several types of medications, which didn't work. After treatment on the ReBuilder® the feeling in my feet has returned to normal and I can now feel the temperature of the your needs.

Neuropathy may contribute to emotional stress and depression

Many who suffer from peripheral neuropathy don't realize what they have or that it can be treated. Often the condition can be misdiagnosed or even ignored until it is unbearable. This can affect every aspect of your

WHAT MAKES DR. COGAN'S APPROACH SO DIFFERENT?

Dr. Cogan and his staff have made it their mission to treat patients without surgery or drugs. After years of study, training and trials, they have chosen only the most effective non-surgical options and bring them together all under one roof.

• Super Pulsed Cold Laser — A gentle, non-invasive treatment that is successful in treating joints and nerves. These treatments help stimulate healing in soft tissues and most patients feel a warm soothing sensation with immediate relief.

• ReBuilder® — The only device that duplicates the exact waveform and frequency of a healthy nerve signal, with over 90% success rate in patients reporting improved quality of life after treatment.*

• Physical Therapy — A traditional treatment methodology aimed at the treatment and curing of certain ailments common to patients suffering with chronic or severe neuropathy pain. Its primary aim is to bring the patient back to his/her normal self, free of any pain or suffering.

• Non-Surgical Spinal Decompression — Non-surgical spinal decompression is an FDA cleared technology that can relieve disc herniations, sciatica, stenosis and general pain and numbness in the back, neck, legs and feet. Non-surgical spinal decompression does this by using advanced technology to control treatment duration, distraction/ angle, intensity, and relaxation of the spine, thus creating a vacuum effect which aims to pull the disc back into its normal position and brings in a fresh blood supply to promote healing. The treatment is gentle and soothing, with no discomfort to the patient.

• Nutritional — We provide specific recommendations on nutritional supplements and healthy food choices to enhance our patient's return to optimal health.

Why choose Dr. Cogan and the HealthQuest staff?

Dr. Cogan offers some of the most advanced non-surgical, FDA Cleared procedures for relieving chronic pain. He has also treated thousands of patients over dozens of years. He has such a great track record that the Detroit Lions have endorsed him as their official team chiropractor. Dr. Cogan

Veterans & Qualified Dependents: GET THE HELP YOU NEED To Pay for At-Home Care, Independent/Assisted Living, or a Nursing Home! (Even If You've Been Told You Don't Qualify)

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 8 3:00 PM

Presented By: Nicole Wipp, VA Accredited Attorney Family & Aging Law Center PLLC

If you or a loved one is a Veteran, the spouse of a Veteran, the widow or widower of a Veteran, or a qualified dependent, you may qualify for a very important -- but little known -- benefit.

The "real" name is Improved Pension, but people usually call it "Aid & Attendance." This is an amazing benefit for those that need help with expenses related to at-home care, assisted living, or nursing home care, but are afraid of depleting assets or running out of money.

The problem is that people are often told they don't qualify (but they aren't told they could become qualified - and they are definitely not told how to qualify.) That's what the webinar is all about.

Learn how to help those you love, your clients, or yourself by getting the FACTS about this very important benefit! (Family members WELCOME!)

Annual restaurant crawl offers varied menu

By Matt Jachman Staff Writer

Foodies can get the Cook's tour, so to speak, of 15 different Plymouth eateries 5-8 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 16, during the annual downtown restaurant crawl, Penn-Taste-Tic.

The event will offer a varied food and drink menu, from Italian (Nico & Vali) to Thai (Little Bangkok Cuisine) and burgers (Jay's Stuffed Burgers) to high tea (Sweet Afton Tea Room) to. of course, dessert (Kilwin's, Cupcake Station, Yogurt Palooza and more). New to the crawl this year are Stella's Black Dog Tavern, Post Local Bistro, Alpine Chocolat Haus and La Strovia, which just opened on Forest.

Tickets are just $20 each for adults and $15 for children 10 and under. Proceeds benefit the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce and the Friends of the Penn Theatre.

"Downtown dining is one of the biggest attractions to the Plymouth community and this event is a great way to try a sampling of many different locations," said Wes Graff, the chamber president.

Tickets can be purchased in advance at the chamber office, 850 W.

Credit union honors Camp Casey

Camp Casey is one of 60 admirable organizations to receive a 2014 Summer of Sharing donation from Community Financial Credit Union.

Founded in 2004 and based in Royal Oak, Camp Casey is a nonprofit horseback riding program for children with cancer. Through donations and volunteers, Camp Casey spreads the healing power of horses to families facing a pediatric cancer diagno Community relations director Jessica Leroux said the opportunity to receive a donation from Community Financial was very exciting. We were all so happy when we found out we had received a Summer of Sharing donation,' Leroux said.

Leroux revealed that the donation from Community Financial will fund an entire Horsey House Call for a child with cancer.

'We bring a horse directly to the doorstep of a child who needs to forget about their diagnosis and just have fun for a day," Leroux said.

Camp Casey is one of 60 organizations to receive a 2014 Summer of Sharing donation from Community Financial Credit Union.

"We also bring a pizza lunch, arts and crafts supplies, a horse treat cafe and encourage the child and family to invite everyone that has been touched along their journey.

Camp Casey strongly believes in the healing power of horses. Leroux explained that when a child with cancer has the ability to sit on a giant animal and command it to walk and halt, the child can bring that "in charge" confidence back to the hospital.

Leroux and the rest of the team at Camp Casey make 15-17 Horsey House Calls during a summer season.

Community Financial is proud to have funded one of those events.

Pilgrims host radio-control air show

The Flying Pilgrims Radio Control Club hosts its 31st annual air show from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 13-14 at the northwest corner of Geddes and Ridge roads in Canton.

Organizers point out the event has "a universal appeal to young and old alike," with several hundred people attending each day.

"Our intention is to generate new interest in the hobby, as well as providing entertainment for the casual visitor," said John Lane from the Flying Pilgrims Model Aircraft Flying Club in Canton. "This is definitely a family oriented event."

The airplanes to be displayed and flown are "giant scale," Lane explained. Models must be at least a quarter-inch the size of the real aircraft and include both turbine jet and propeller driven models. Wingspans over 100 inches are common. Most of the models weigh between 15 and 50 pounds. Engine power ranges from 3 to 12 horsepower.

Lane said the models will fly all day during the show and perform many aerobatic maneuvers during their flights. Flying is suspended at noon to allow spectators to inspect the airplanes up close and ask questions of the pilots.

The models feature all the aspects of the full size aircraft as well. Things like retractable landing gear, flaps and "smoke" systems are common features. The Flying Pilgrims are part of the Academy of Model Aeronautics, a national organization that has approximately 160,000 member's nationwide. Admission is a $5 vehicle parking donation requested. For more information, call Lane at 248-348-1156.

Updating estate plan makes good sense

Q: Dear Rick: My husband passed away a couple months ago and I'm just starting to get things organized. He was in his late 60s and was still working. At his death, he had an IRA and a 401(k) through work. I had no problem transferring his IRA to me. My problem is with the 401(k) plan. According to the company which my husband worked for over 30 years, he did not name a beneficiary. Even though I am in the will as the beneficiary, the company tells me that I have to go through probate in order for them to give me the 401(k) money. Is this correct? In addition, my husband owned a rental property and there was a quit-claim deed. The house is now in my name. The tenant would like to buy the house and I would like to sell it. When I sell the property, what is my tax liability? My son told me that I would have to pay tax on the entire proceeds from the sale because the house was fully depreciated.

A: I am sorry to hear about the loss of your husband. I hope as time goes on your pain will be replaced with loving memories.

Unfortunately, I agree with the company's assessment. The company is concerned that the 401(k) goes to the proper individual. Even though you are the spouse and you were named in the will, that doesn't mean you are entitled to the proceeds.

That is why the company wants you to do a probate, so it can be assured that you are the beneficiary. It certainly would be easier if the company paid the proceeds to you. However, the company would be potentially opening itself for liability.

We've all seen it where upon death, families fight. A perfect example is the Casey Kasem situation, where the second wife and the children are locked in a bitter dispute.

With regard to the tax situation, here is some good news. Because you inherited the property, you're entitled to a stepped-up basis. That means your cost basis the number you would use to show purchase price - is the fair market value of the property on the date of death.

For example, if your husband paid $150,000 for the property and upon his death it's worth $200,000, if vou sold it for $200,000 your gain would be zero. Therefore, from a tax standpoint, there is no reason not to sell.

I've always been a believer that being a landlord is a difficult job and not meant for everyone. That is why I agree that it is a good decision to sell the property.

Unfortunately, people not naming beneficiaries or naming the wrong beneficiaries is quite common. There have been many situations where someone passes away and an ex-spouse is named as a beneficiary or even where someone's parents were named and they've been gone for decades.

We name beneficiaries when we open an account or sign up for a new life insurance policy and rarely do we examine it later. I believe that we need to routinely review our beneficiary designations, every year or so. Family situations change and beneficiary designations may also have to change.

Whether it's an IRA, life insurance policy, brokerage account or salary deferral program, it pays to spend a few minutes to confirm that the right person is named as a beneficiary.

There is never a right time for death to occur. Therefore, it is important that an estate plan is up to date at all times. An estate plan is more than just wills and trusts and other legal documents. It is also making sure that you've named the proper beneficiaries.

Afghan translator builds new life in Milford

By Laura Colvin Staff Writer

When he stepped off the plane in the United States this past April with just a backpack, small rolling suitcase and no money, Mohammed Elham - everyone calls him Elham – wasn't sure he was really in the U.S.

"I was like, 'Am I dreaming right now?" he said. "It was the coolest time in my life. I felt like I had a heavy weight lifted from my shoulders."

Indeed. Here in the States - here in Milford, where he lives with Scott Hippakka and his family – Elĥam feels safe from the constant threats on his life in his native Afghanistan

After just a few short months in the U.S., Elham is working at Palate in downtown Milford. He already has a car and he's hoping to fulfill a dream of becoming a nurse so, one day, he can go home to Afghanistan and help the many poor families who are living without even basic medical care.

For Elham, it's the American dream.

Army translator

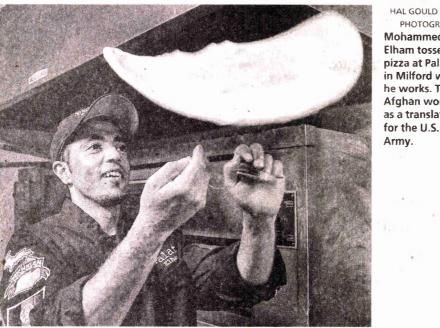

It all began in 2007, when a friend in Afghanistan suggested Elham, with his knowledge of the English language, apply for a translator's job with the U.S. Army.

At first he wasn't sure he had no experience being around military forces - but decided to give it a try

After he was hired, he found the job was a challenge for many reasons. As a linguist, his task wasn't just translating word-for-word between the Americans and the Afghans. It was important, he explained, to make sure both parties understood the intent behind the words and to make sure the Americans understood the cultural nuances of the Afghan people.

"You got to place yourself as a bridge," he said. Being thrust into military life wasn't easy either. In fact, it was downright frightening.

"A huge convoy came to pick me up," Elham said, remembering his military guys came in and called my name. I was scared. I didn't know about all the weapons. It was my first time meeting Americans. I was super-panicked. When I sit in the Humvee, I'm like, 'Oh, my gosh, look at all these guns.

Along the way, Elham met Hippakka, a U.S. Army lieutenant colonel who was a task force commander with teams dispersed though northern and western portions of Afghanistan.

Elham began going along on various missions with the U.S. forces translating and lending a hand as the U.S. teams he was working with helped to deliver medical assistance to remote villages, develop schools, water sources, community infrastructure and also worked to support the Afghan Border Police.

Early on, Elham found himself in a particularly frightening situation as the team he was working with received word that an Afghan National Army unit had been ambushed by a group of Taliban or other insurgents.

"(The insurgents) killed them all," Elham said. "I saw the bodies on the ground; it was the first time I saw people who were killed in a very terrible condition. I was so, so scared. I couldn't translate. They were telling me 'Can you ask the guy what happened?' Mentally, I wasn't there. It was the first time and I got hard. I got strong."

But that doesn't mean it got easy. Elham said he did a lot of thinking about the fighting in his country and had a difficult time understanding why it was happening. The Afghans he knew and grew up with, after all, were good people. Many, many good people.

"Then you get contact someone is shooting at you - you are under fire, by the same people from that village," he said. "I am confused."

Threats made

After his first year on the job, Elham became a senior linguist and over the next seven years, while he was translating for the U.S. forces, his face became recognizable – he'd been shown on local television channels - and things began to get especially dangerous for him

On numerous occasions, he was told by intelligence officers that threats had been made against his life - common for Afghan translators.

"He was my senior linguist and he was the senior linguist for a lot of different people," Hippakka said. "Because of that, he was out and about. Early on in the war in Iraq, a lot of the translators would wear masks so their face couldn't be seen. In Afghanistan, most linguists didn't wear a face mask."

It's culturally disrespectful for an Afghan man to cover his face. Elham said, and other imminent danger and because of his work for the U.S. military, he was eligible to come to the United States. He had, in fact, submitted his application more than a year prior. So he sold his family's and his fiance, was in car, packed two small bags and took a huge step toward freedom and safety.

A new life

Elham arrived April 1 in the United States. He knew he had a home waiting in Milford.

'In January 2013, before I left Afghanistan, I told Elham when you come to the U.S., just let me know what I can do," Hippakka said. "If you need a place to live, you can come live with me. The choice was his.

Another Afghan linguist who'd also worked with Hippakka's team arrived in Michigan several months earlier, while another is currently working toward the same end.

For Elham - who is currently working to bring his fiance to Michigan, as well - it's a dream come true.

He has his struggles, certainly, like finding his way through all kinds of red tape in order to get federal assistance with schooling. Hippakka, he said, has been a huge and consistent help in teaching him about things like credit cards - there are none in Afghanistaninterest, credit ratings and paying bills online, as well as car insurance none of that in Afghanistan, either - and rules of the road.

Getting a little help while he gets on his own two feet has been a bit of a challenge, as well

Recently, for example, he went to the Department of Human Services to find out about getting some medical coverage and was told he could not

"I told her, 'I am not a citizen (either)," he said "If I am not a U.S. citizen and not a refugee, than who am I? Explain it to me.' I was so confused. For the first couple months, it was so hard because all the rules and regulations came at once on top of my shoulders. I was trying to stand on my own two feet."

The slow pace of things has been difficult. Elham said he wants to get on track to make a difference. Still, even while the pace of things is slower than he'd like, Elham is happy at his job at Palate and determined to move forward.

"The people are so, so friendly. I love to work with them," he said.

At his new home in Milford, where he's staying until he can afford his own place, Elham lives with Hippakka and his family: wife Susan and children Abby, 14, and Alex, 11.

"I told my mom, 'Don't worry, I have a second family, they are well taking care of me," he said. "My mom asks, 'What are you doing, what are you eating, how are your living conditions?' I tell her, Scott's family, they are so awesome to me. They are so good to me.

Elham's favorite thing about living in America is his security. And the people. And the nation itself.

"When you come from a country such as Afghanistan, you would understand how blessed you are here in the U.S., he said. "I am so blessed that I came to this great nation and I will (eventually) become a U.S. citizen. My family is proud of me because I am in the best country in the world.'

Afghans won't talk with a man who does. Covering one's face indicates a lack of trust. Even as things got more dangerous, Elham kept his fears to himself.

'Anything that was happening or I was seeing, I wouldn't tell to my family," he said. "I was telling my mom I'm working in the office, I'm not even going outside. Don't worry about me, I'm safe. I'm OK. It's not good to lie, but I didn't want my mom to (worry)." But his family – Elham to her mom Suzanne and that was the expectation. Considered an older mother at 36, Suzanne Williams had genetic testing done and everything came back normal. But when Erinne was about 7 months old, she hadn't yet mastered gross motor milestones, like pulling up to standing and cruising along furniture, and she started losing the ones she had mastered - crawling normally and sitting up.

A worried mother, Suzanne started having her daughter tested, but the tests didn't tell her much. Some doctors told her she was "expecting too much" and measuring her too closely against her siblings, Claire and Kevin, who had both learned to walk at a young age.

Wrong solution

Three doctors came back with the same diagnosis: A tumor on the spine. But Suzanne wasn't buying it.

"It didn't sit well with me, so we kept pursuing it," Suzanne said of the tumor diagnosis. "There were clues to me that something was wrong. It just didn't feel right."

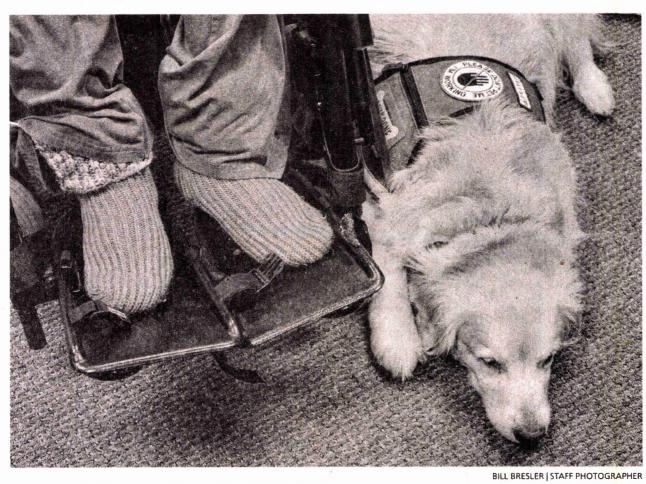

She took Erinne to see Dr. Michael Nigro, the doctor who runs the MDA program at Children's Hospital. His diagnosis – spinal muscular atrophy – came almost immediately.

"I was numb," Suzanne said. "I had no idea what SMA was and what her prognosis was."

Turns out the prognosis wasn't good. Doctors didn't figure Erinne would make it to her eighth birthday and Suzanne was encouraged to just take her home and "love her for however long I would have her."

So much for doctors and their predictions. Erinne celebrated her 17th birthday in May, though it certainly hasn't been an easy road. She's had pneumonia 21 times, 14 surgeries and 25 hospitalizations. She spent summer 2001 on life support due to unforeseen post-op complications and was not expected to survive. She was hospitalized for 101 days and spent 85 of those on a ventilator.

"She was just 4 years old. I was told that I needed to accept reality and that my daughter was never going to come back as the child she once was," Suzanne wrote in her blog. "I was told to let her go. But I couldn't – I knew it wasn't her time."

Ozzie fan

And it wasn't. Erinne picked up Kevin's love of hockey and is a huge Detroit Red Wings fan who asks her mother frequently to drive past the Plymouth home of retired goalkeeper Chris Osgood, her "favorite person in the entire world." (According to Suzanne, "Ozzie" was Erinne's first word after "mama" and "da-da.")

She's a defenseman, one of just four girls in her 50-player wheelchair hockey league (she was also the only girl chosen for an elite team). She now beats Kevin in video games to the point where "he hits the reset button" when he begins to lose, according to Erinne (it's a charge at which Kevin only smiles). She's fully integrated at school, where Plymouth High School staff and students accept her as a friend.

But she'll never drive - "I really want my driver's license, but it's not going to happen," Erinne said – and there are days when she can't breathe on her own or feed herself. There are also days when she can and Suzanne loves those days.

"The days she can feed herself breakfast are good days, because there are days she can't," Suzanne said. "The days she can sit in her chair are a blessing, because there are days she can't even get out of bed."

Good and bad

Those are the days that are particularly hard on Suzanne, although none of the days is easy anymore. A former director of a child care center for Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn with a degree in elementary education and early childhood development, Suzanne had to give up her job to take on the 24-hour-a-day care of her daughter (though she gets a nurse for 16 hours). The physical strain of lifting and caring for her daughter has taken a toll on Suzanne's body. She has three bulging discs in her back and suffers from spinal stenosis. While physically she's a candidate for surgery,

BILL BRESLER | STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER Suzanne Williams and Beverly Wheeler use a lift to raise Erinne from her bed and transfer her to her wheelchair.

Helping out

Beverly Wheeler is a friend who's trying to help with all of that. Wheeler, a Canton resident who met Suzanne six months ago through her daughter Sydney (Sydney and Erinne are friends), noticed there was no curtain in the doorway leading to the hallway from the living room to Erinne's bedroom.

So Wheeler made one. Since then, Wheeler has been a fixture in the Williams home, helping Suzanne help Erinne. She "Erinne is a gift. I know she's not going to be here forever, so every day is a gift. She has affected my life more than any other person in my life." SUZANNE WILLIAMS

Sydney's exploits, knowing Erinne won't ever do those same things.

"Sometimes I feel I shouldn't tell Suzanne what Sydney is doing, because her child can't," Wheeler said. "It makes me feel bad to share with my closest friend the things I can do, because her kid can't."

Suzanne, of course, pooh-poohs Wheeler's concerns, because selfpity has never entered into the equation.

"One thing I've never done is ask God, 'Why me?" Suzanne said. "Erinne is a gift. I know she's not going to be here forever, so every day is a gift. She has affected my life more than any other person in my life."

No pity party

Likewise, though she might be the one person entitled to ask the question, Erinne doesn't spend much time wondering, "Why me?" She wants to be a veterinarian and her dream car would be a Camaro, if she were ever going to drive one. Those things might not happen, so Erinne focuses on the things she can control. Like video games.

"That's the one thing where I'm on a level playing field," Erinne said. "SMA has given me a lot of perspective on the things in life that are taken for granted."

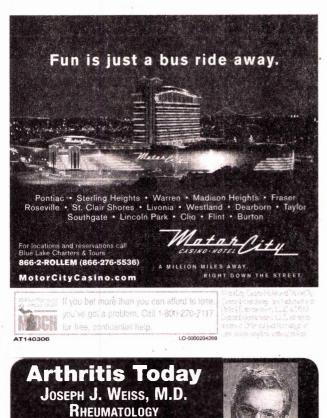

It's the kind of attitude her brother admires. Kevin, now 23, said he loves how his sister takes every day and makes it the "best it can possibly be."

"We all have our moments, but at the end of the day, you can't do anything about it," he said. "What I admire most about her and my mom is they ... literally have an indomitable spirit."

Suzanne knows she's going to lose Erinne and faces the fact head on

PATIENTS BE PATIENT

Physicians are notorious for falling behind their schedules and keeping patients waiting hours for their appointments. That situation is about to worsen.

I refer to the present effort of many physician groups to finally move into Electronic Medical Records (EMR). Going "paperless" is a difficult enterprise even for physicians versed in using home and hospital computers because the amount of information that the physician must input is large. Furthermore, the way the computer requires data entry is not in keeping with the approach physicians traditionally take in interviewing and examining a patient.

When physicians first move from written to electronic records, the scheduling of patients also shifts. If a medical practice before EMR had each doctor seeing 4 patients an hour, the initial scheduling with EMR is 2 patients/hour. If the physician can keep that pace it means the practice, at best, will see half the number of patients/day that it saw when using traditional charting. Usually an office keeps this temporary schedule for a week; to do so longer means a loss of income too great to sustain and delay of patient care too long to accept.

Usually the office returns to the previous 4 patient/hour schedule. But the old efficiency is never regained as added documentation requirements plus unexpected breakdowns in the electronic equipment cause disruptions that can last minutes to hours.

Nationally, the purpose of the change to electronic medical records is to build a system of transmitting information that physicians and hospital can tap into as needed. The country is just at the start of this initiative. All patients see at this time is delay, but eventually patients and physicians will benefit from timely relay of information and an end to duplication and fragmentation of care. not only a physical battle, it's a financial struggle, as well. Insurance doesn't cover much of her care; for instance, the feeding tubes she uses cost about $200 a month. That's just one example of an out-ofpocket expense.

Wicked weather delays games

By Tim Smith Staff Writer

For the football fans who ignored the weather forecast Friday night, they did enjoy an eventful six minutes between the host Canton Chiefs and Hartland.

Canton senior running back Chuck Turfe blew past the Eagles' defense on the first play from scrimmage for a 69-yard touchdown.

On the ensuing kickoff, Hartland's Brett Oliver answered with a 98-yard TD return to make it 7-7 at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park before 30 seconds had elapsed off the scoreboard clock.

Moments after the Chiefs went up 14-7 following a conventional 61-yard march in 10 plays, the skies darkened. Lightning bolts were spotted in the distance, play was stopped and fans were evacuated from the aluminum bleachers to ensure their safety.

Next came 45 minutes filled with a non-stop light show, 60 mph wind and hail — not to mention yard markers, firstdown sticks and end zone pylons flying all over the varsity turf field.

Officials from both high schools agreed to resume the game Saturday, midway through the first quarter.

"We really want to get out here and we want to play," Turfe said, waiting with teammates in front of the field house at the north end of the varsity turf field. "Hartland's a

New era dawns for PCA kickers

High-scoring Albrecht leads impressive cast for Eagles' new coach

> By Tim Smith Staff Writer

There's plenty for new Plymouth Christian Academy varsity boys soccer coach Kris Warnemuende to like about the 2014 Eagles team of which he is taking the helm.

First off, there is senior forward and captain Lucas Albrecht — a player Warnemuende figures to be driven to score goals and lead the Eagles to wins in the Michigan Independent Athletics Conference.

"He is fast and has a knack for finding holes in the defense," Warnemuende said. "After our first game against Clarkston Everest Collegiate, Lucas already has three goals to his name."

PCA's other starting striker is promising sophomore Austin Andres, who the coach said "makes a perfect match for Lucas with his speed, physical presence and powerful shot."

Another reason for Warnemuende and assistant coach Mark Willis to feel good about the 2014 season is how motivated the group is to take the next step after a 2013 season in which many games were closely contested defeats.

"Last season, the team fought hard and their losses were only a one-point differential," Warnemuende said. "Already, this team is playing a better passing game and is learning how to develop an attack.

"Each of the seniors on the team are working hard to make this their best season yet and I believe they will lead the team to victory."

The front line isn't the only area of the pitch where PCA will be bolstered by players with experience, talent and drive.

Backing it up

Three solid seniors return for defensive duties, namely captain Guiseppe Iacopelli, Torre Crown and Joey Fanelli. "Guiseppe knows how to read the field and keep his line

When she started playing the fast-growing recreational sport at Cass Benton about four years ago, she'd routinely bounce the hard plastic disc off of trees.

Now, Huz is so accomplished that she brings a gym bag stuffed with all different types of discs - good for tee shots, mid-range flings and putting.

Breaking it down

Yes, disc golfers are no different from traditional golfers who amass a collection of woods and irons to handle every kind of situation that might arise

"They're all different in weight, just depending on what kind of plastic it is, if it's a mid-range or maximum distance," Huz said, display-ing several of her collection on a picnic table near the 12th hole's basket. "I think I even have a putter (disc) in my car. Those are funny looking.

Huz tries to break down what a novice disc golfer might encounter in deciphering how to proceed on the course.

Pick your first shot with a maximum distance or any kind of driver and then do your second shot with a midrange or a putting (disc), depending on how far you are," she said. "This one is a mid-range and the lip is a little different. Usually the maximum ones, they are more flat (like a saucer)."

Mid-range discs feature more of a ridge, while putters are flatter, heavier and tend to wobble more.

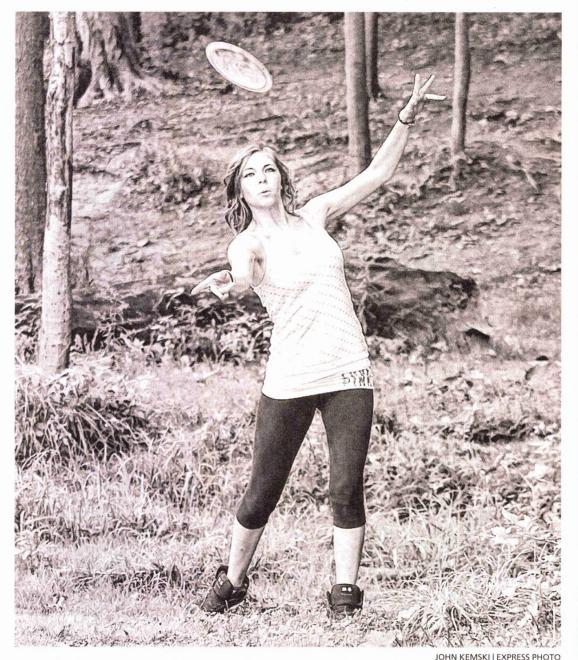

"And there's different ways you can throw it, too," Huz said. "You can throw it forehand (extending your arm away from your chest as you throw) or sidearm. That's how I throw.

'If it's so many trees in the way and you don't think you can get through them, you can tomahawk it" and send it on its way from an up-down position rather than horizontally.

Decisions

According to Huz, it is important to decide what disc to throw and how to dispatch it — just the way a traditional golfer opts to use a 9-iron or wedge when approaching the green

"First, you got to think of what kind of shot you want to shoot," Huz said. "Like, if you want to throw forehand, sidearm or tomahawk, (it) depends on what kind or course

GIRLS CROSS COUNTRY PREVIEW

Chiefs gear up to get over hurdle

By Tim Smith Staff Writer

Intense summer training could be the 'X' factor for Canton's varsity girls cross country team as it looks to make that final step toward a state meet. Last fall, the Chiefs captured the KLAA South Division with a 5-0 record in dual meets and nearly made the cut for the Division 1 state meet, Canton head coach Eric Pahl said.

It helps that this year's squad again features sophomore Kate Cotham, who as a freshman earned a spot in the state meet, as well as juniors Mary Galm and Sam McGrath.

But Canton's fortunes won't be decided merely by that trio.

"We have a lot of depth this season and hope to have a number of these girls really develop as the year goes along," Pahl said. "If that happens, we will be a pretty strong team.

A lot of the girls put in a lot of miles over the summer and that should pay dividends as the season progresses. We hope to avoid some key injuries like those that hurt us last year."

Canton's roster includes returning seniors Alli Putz, Keara Sullivan, Monica Rufe, Pooja Amin, Chloe Cross and Paige Calvert.

"All of these girls are expected to contribute to the team this year," Pahl said.

Potential rests in the legs of sophomores Katie Carr and Sam Rohrbach, who the coach said "have looked strong early on and figure to contribute as the season goes along."

Back from a one-year absence and looking good so far is sophomore Grace Grimes, while other newcomers include junior Kayla Neme, sophomore Elaine Bradlee and freshmen Shilpa Pindolia and Anika Patel.

"It's always a fun time as we try to figure out what kind of team we will be this season,' Pahl said.

you have in front of you.

"If there's trees blocking you or whatnot, you got to think like, 'OK, I want to cut it around one tree and go around another or just straight through.' Like, when I throw this one, I try throwing it to the picnic table, because it will go a little bit further.'

Then, of course, all that's to be done is "pick it up right where you found it and throw it again," she said with a smile.

Huz isn't at Cass Benton just for the disc golf. She also enjoys the outdoors, exercise and a chance to socialize with people of all ages who flock to the course.

It's also where she met her boyfriend, 2013 Canton High School grad Nate Hurley.

"This is actually where I met him," Huz said. "I met him at Hole 2. We've been discing since."

Another challenging, but favorite, spot of hers at Cass Benton is the sloping, 215-foot 15th hole, where she registered her only hole-in-one.

'It literally drops straight down," she said. "You kind of have to throw it down, to go down with the ground.

Otherwise, the disc gets caught in the current and can This disc is the first one Chelsie Huz ever used when she took up the popular recreational sport.

fly anywhere.

To be credited with an ace, the golfer needs only to hit the chains that comprise the basket — the disc does not need to drop into the cylinder.

At Cass Benton, golfers who tally a hole-in-one take out a Sharpie and inscribe their name on wood blocks located next to the tee pads.

"So if you ace it, you can write on the pad, too, so ev-eryone can see it," Huz said. "A lot of people write on the tables, too."

Free and easy

She took up the sport about four years ago, although she can't remember what prompted her initial interest.

"You come here and you can play for as long as you want," Huz said. "It's free. There's some parks in Ann Arbor that I think on the weekends they charge. But you can come out here with as many people as you want. It's not like there's any rush. "If people are playing just come and spend some time out here in the woods. It relaxes me. And I have fun with my friends, too.

Another plus is all it takes to get started is a place to go and a disc or two to throw.

She says newbies can visit Amazon or Innovadiscs websites to shop for discs or perhaps stop by Play it Again Sports to find used ones.

A three-disc starter kit on Amazon sells for about $20, for example. Yet she does favor one particular version of the flat plastic.

"To start off, you'd probably want to use a Buzzz, Huz said. "Although it is a mid-range, they fly so far.

"It can be used as a distance, mid-range or putter. Kind of like a universal disc: if you really don't know what to do, this is kind of like your 'go-to.'

Yet even if someone doesn't have such a one-sizefits-all disc, it's still all good.

After all, what could be better than being out at Cass Benton for several hours of fresh air, sunshine and disc golf? For Chelsie Huz, that's what go-to means to her.

tourney, best Wildcats

Despite a brilliant round turned in by Sydney Murphy, the Plymouth varsity girls golf team placed second at the recent KLAA Kensington Conference preseason tournament held at Fox Hills.

Murphy registered an 18-hole score of 74, good for second overall at the tournament.

But the Wildcats' total of 324 was still behind the scorching 308 turned in by first-place South Lyon. Leading the Lions to victory with a 73 score was tourney medalist Caroline Harding.

Finishing third with a 331 total was Northville, followed by Novi (fourth, 334), Salem (fifth, 358), Livonia Stevenson (sixth, 369), South Lyon East (seventh, 379), Canton (eighth, 394), Livonia Franklin (ninth, 410), Livonia Churchill (10th, 451), Westland John Glenn (11th) and Wayne Memorial in last place.

Also having an excellent showing for Plymouth was Katie Chipman, who scored a 78 for sixth overall.

Other Wildcats on the scorecard were Alaina Strzalka (10th, 84), Ariana Strzalka (22nd, 88), Maren Wizniewski (35th, 94) and Justine Berry (37th, 98).

Salem's top performer on the day was Darby Scott, who finished 15th with an 86. She was followed by teammates Hope Warkoczeski and Keista Elder (tied for 24th with 90 each), Kiley Flynn (29th, 92), Grace Relak (41st, 102) and Genevieve St. Jean (51st, 113).

For the Chiefs, Alyce Krumm and Madelyn Mans each scored 86 to tie for 15th place.

They were the lone Canton golfers who broke the 100 mark, however. Avery Ralston (48th, 110), Meghan Meredith (49th, 112), Lauren Luyet (53rd, 115) and Manasa Potluri (55th, 116) rounded out the Chiefs' lineup.

New chapter beginning for Willette

He's moving from athletics into classroom

By Tim Smith

Staff Write

Back in the 1980s, Tom Willette planned on graduating from college and embarking on his dream career of teaching history.

Unfortunately, the profession then was too tough to crack and Willette found himself working in the recreation department with the city of Plymouth.

One job led to another, then finally to the job he held for some 14 years, athletic director at Salem High School where he had been a high school baseball star back in the day.

Willette pushed his original career choice to the back burner.

But an unexpected opening late last month in the history department at Canton High School gave Willette the rare opportunity to rekindle his vocational flame. He resigned his Salem job in order to finally become a history teacher.

"One thing I do regret is losing that relationship with my coaches and student-athletes," Willette said during a telephone conversation Wednesday evening. "But this was just an opportunity. I Willette said, 'I'm doing it.' I'm excited about it, too.

"This is what I always wanted to do. Most people go from teaching to administration and I'm going the opposite wav.'

Beth Savalox, director of K-12 activities and athletics in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, said the job at Salem (officially assistant principal of athletics and activities) has been posted.

She said longtime district administrator Jerry Sullivan will help with the Salem athletics department during the interim and Willette added that he plans on being around to assist during the transition.

'Tom has resigned to pursue an unfulfilled dream of classroom teaching," Savalox wrote in an email to the Observer. "Thus, while we lost him in athletics, the district will still benefit from his work ethic and passion as he teaches ninth-grade world history at Canton."

Also open is the athletics/ activities position at Canton, while a personnel matter involving longtime athletic director Sue Heinzman is concluded.

Couldn't resist

According to Willette, he acknowledged that running a high-profile athletics department is a "grind" with long hours that extend into weekends and summer months.

Over the past couple of years, he started thinking out loud about getting the chance to do what he always wanted to do. When the Canton history job opened up, he could not resist.

"I just looked at it as some intervention or something," Willette said. "I talked about wanting to teach and all of a sudden, boom, here's a teaching job. I don't know if a situation like that would have opened up a year or two from now.'

Willette said the recent restructuring of the district's athletics department did not factor into his decision, which he called voluntary.

Last year, Savalox took the job of overseeing athletics districtwide; for a while each of the three high schools at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park had assistant principals doing tasks traditionally done by athletic directors.

Kyle Meteyer was hired during 2013-14 to handle those duties at Plymouth High School.

Also last school year, Heinzman unexpectedly left Canton (the district remains steadfast about not commenting on her situation). For the start of fall sports season, at least, Brian Samulski is filling in at Canton

"When Sue and I were doing things for seven years, that was a pretty hectic time," Willette said. "We were trying to do it for three schools. I think it's more of just, you know what, it was a lot of time and effort. And I certainly know it's not easy to teach, but

hometownlife.com

it's just a different thing. "Fourteen years in athletics is a long time for a lot of people. There's a lot of turnover in athletics and I think a lot of the changes that are going on (at the Park) are really good. We're doing a better job communicating with kids and parents and we're trying to roll out our new website, that's going to be a good thing for kids and coaches."

Now that becoming a teacher is scratched off Willette's checklist, next might be the chance to coach baseball. That could be in his future, but not for at least the 2014-15 school year.

After that, who knows? "Maybe someday I'd love to be a JV or freshman baseball coach or something," said Willette, who almost sounded as energized and pumped up about that possibility as he is about helping kids learn.

great team, it's a hard-fought game so far and I'm really excited to get back out there.

'Of course, the weather's a huge factor. But whether we play tonight or tomorrow, I'm going to be ready, the Chiefs are going to be ready and we're going to come out here and get this win."

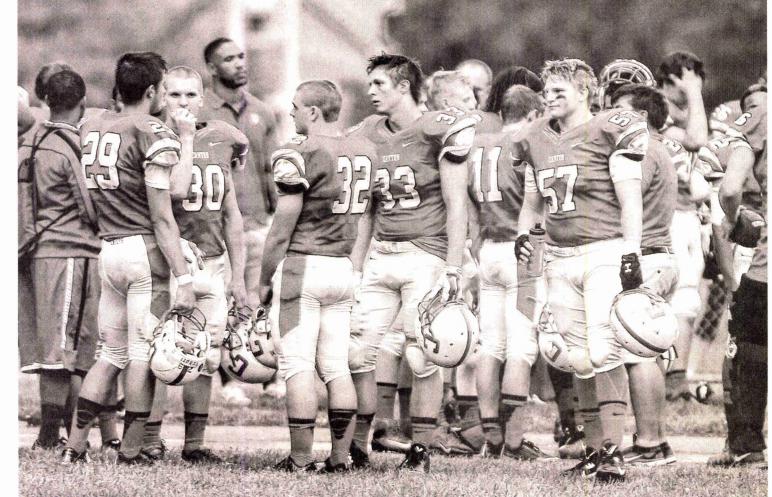

A similar fate played out over at the junior varsity grass field. Plymouth and Pinckney were knotted up at 7-7 with about 6:30 left in the second quarter when that game was suspended, to resume the following morning.

There was no update about Salem's game at Walled Lake Western by press time.

Mutual agreement

According to Canton interim athletic director Brian Samulski, it wasn't a surprise that weather interrupted Friday's proceedings. Bad weather was forecast all day.

But until the storms arrived, there remained hope that somehow the game would get played on the scheduled date.

"We checked the weather all day and we knew it was a possibility," Samulski said during the delay. "But you just roll with it. It's normal procedure, everyone in the state's doing it. You're on delay and we already got a makeup time if we have to."

According to the Michigan High School Athletic Association, the first time lightning is spotted yields a 30-minute delay. With each successive lightning bolt, the half-hour clock is rebooted.

"The determining factor, usually you only get an hour and a half delay total," Samulski said. "But because there's no school tomorrow, there's no limit. So it will be a mutual agreement between us and Hartland."

Ultimately, after the weather turned particularly nasty, with sheets of rain blowing sideways while equipment littered the field and its surrounding track, coaches and officials concurred to try again Saturday.

The weather spoiled what was looking to be an intense, hard-fought match-up between two KLAA powerAfter lightning stopped Friday's Canton-Hartland game, Chiefs players gathered to wait near the field house.

On the next play, 5-6 sophomore running back Marcus Sanders shot through the middle for a 14-yard gain into Hartland territory.

Hartland's helmet-pounding defense stopped Canton's next two running plays.

But on third down and long from the Eagles' 37, Williams stepped back and connected on a 21-yard completion to senior wide receiver Robert Guajardo near the left sideline stripe.

A personal foul against Hartland moved the ball inside the 10-yard line and Sanders muscled in from 7 yards out to put the Chiefs ahead. An extra point by Andrew Loehnis made it 14-7 with 6:40 remaining in the quarter.

ready for action," Warnemuende said. "Torre's size and strength is an intimidating force to reckon with. Joey is fast and maintains his poise, even under pressure.

'All of them have stepped up their play to the next level and are not just looking to just clear the dangerous balls, but integrate with the midfielders and begin an attack from the back line.'

The Eagles will also boast a strong midfield.

On the wings will be junior captain Luke Yakuber, along with sophomore Ethan Willis and freshmen Nevin Ruiter-Diaz and Levi Yakuber.

"Brian and Ben are both great a reading the defense and feeding great passes to our forwards," Warnemuende said. "Lance and Isaac are tall and strong and great at getting and keeping possession of the ball.

'Matthew is a great allaround player who played defense last season and has a great passing game as well."

Handling goalkeeping duties will be junior Nick Andres, with backups sophomore Brendan Hess and senior Evan Horne.

"(Andres) is a very competent goalie, good with both his hands and feet," he said. "He played keeper on his club teams, but mainly played defense last season with the Eagles.'

Warnemuende is pumped up to take over the Eagles, after coaching PCA middle school teams for seven seasons. A number of his former players are once again under his watch.

"It is an honor for me to step up to varsity and to be able to coach most of these young men again," he said. "I am also grateful for my assistant coach, Mark Willis. His experience and knowledge of the game are a great asset for the team. I am sure this will be a great season.'

'Safe at Home' work boosts independence

By Sharon Dargay Staff Writer

When "Tasha," a 43-year-old woman, returns from a hospital stay to her home in Farmington Hills, she'll be able to maneuver her walker more easily through the doorway.

She'll find a new ramp, installed courtesy of Evangelical Homes of Michigan, where porch steps used to be.

The disabled woman and her wheelchair-bound mother who lives with her, received help recently through Evangelical Homes of Michigan's Safe at Home Charitable Fund program, which repairs and modifies homes without charge for hundreds of physically handicapped and elderly persons annually.

"We do about $2,500-$3,500 a month in services. Sometimes we're just putting in a Lifeline (Medical Alert) service in a house," said Berge Avesian, Safe at Home director. "But the truth is, a lot of times you walk into a person's home and there's a leaky faucet or a broken fixture. It's a little problem, but if left alone it can become a big problem. We've replaced water heaters for people."

Évangelical Homes of Michigan is a faith-based, nonprofit organization with offices in Farmington that runs assisted and independent senior housing communities in Detroit, Saline and Sterling Heights. It also offers dementia care, health care services including skilled nursing and rehabilitation, hospice care, and an extensive program to help seniors remain independent at home.

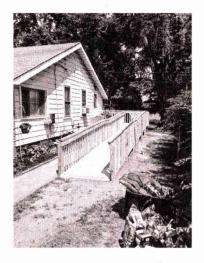

Safe at Home Charitable Fund helps seniors and those with physical disabilities remain independent at home. The program is aimed at individuals who can't afford to pay for home repairs and modifications.

More than a ramp

"Tasha," who declined to use her full name, called Avesian after hearing about Safe at Home, hoping the program would pay for a ramp at her house.

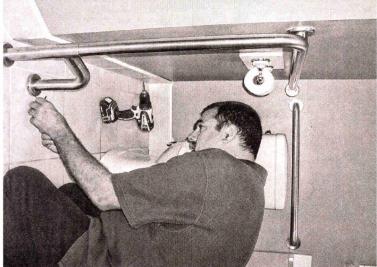

Evangelical Homes President and CEO Denise Rabidoux (left) chats with two of 100+ Women Who Care Motown Chapter's founders, Karen Rashid Balow of Beverly Hills, and Nancy Sullivan of Northville.

A wheelchair-bound mother and her daughter, who uses a walker, will have an easier time getting around their Farmington Hills home, after Safe at Home replaced steps with a ramp.

"He came out and looked at everything I needed. They not only did the ramp, but other things, including replacing my dryer, which has just conked out," she said. "They are very good, warm and receptive, outstanding people. He also bought my (eye) glasses for me. They had been sitting there (at a store) because I couldn't pay for them."

Mary Griffin, executive and marketing assistant, said the Safe at Home Charitable Fund is a part of Evangelical Homes of Michigan's philanthropic division and is funded by donations and through fundraising appeals.

100+Women Who Care Motown Chapter, a group that exists to help charitable causes, recently gave the program $15,000.

Unique philanthropists

Denise Rabidoux, president and CEO of Evangelical Homes of Michigan, is a member of the chapter and suggested Safe at Home Charitable Fund as a potential funding recipient. Chapter members sign a commitment form when they join, agreeing to pay $100 at each quarterly meeting toward a charitable cause that the group selects by vote. Any member of the chapter may suggest a charity. All suggestions are placed into a hat and three are drawn. The "winners" then have five minutes to advocate for their suggestion.

"There's five minutes for questions and answers and after the presentations everyone votes," said Nancy Sullivan of Northville, one of the chapter founders along with Molly Williams and Karen Rashid Balow, both of Beverly Hills. "We tally up the votes and say who the winner is. At that point everyone writes a check for $100 directly to the charity."

Women who are absent have five days to make good on their pledge.

Past funding recipients have included Matrix Theatre, St. Patrick Senior Center, Lighthouse PATH, Sweet Dreamzzz, Mercy Education Project, Humble Design, and Common Ground.

"We've served seniors, the homeless, the fine arts. Lighthouse PATH is about abused women. Mercy Education is tutoring and Sweet Dreamzzz teaches kids the importance of sleep. And now Evangelical Homes of Michigan," Sullivan said. "My mother had a hip replacement recently. She's 85, so it (Safe at Home) was something close to my heart."

Balow said the Safe at Home concept resonated with many of the women.

"Letting people stay in their homes is really important," Balow said. "People's hearts go out to older adults."

I have her nursery all put together and have really started the "nesting phase" of organizing all the rooms in the house. I'm anticipating meeting my little girl and getting both excited and nervous about what is to come.

I think one of the biggest changes I have begun to see is the closeness of people in my life. Some family members and friends have gone out of their way to help me prepare for this life-changing event, while others have simply vanished or almost vanished from my life. I have found that I'm not the one to invite to the drinking festivities with all the unmarried couples or single friends, yet I'm also not quite on the list for the play dates and kids' birthday parties. I'm kind of in a "middle-phase" where it's just me. Perhaps spending all this time alone is preparation for this miracle to come into my life. After all, it will just be the two of us at home together and at least for a little while. my daughter won't be much for conversation. I think I will continue to discover a lot about myself during those first few months, just as I have during the last few. I am eagerly anticipating the joys of learning things just as much as I am of teaching them. I cannot wait to hold this little baby in my arms, and try my hardest to protect her from the negativity and scariness the world sometimes offers.

Important considerations

There is a point in pregnancy when you realize that everything you have done up to this point in your life is both incredibly valuable, and invaluable. It is fantastic that you have learned so many things that you can pass on to your child, yet the dreams that you have thought about accomplishing really don't matter anymore. Now, the important thing is providing a safe and nurturing home for your child to grow up in, a place where she can be loved fully and given opportunities to become successful and happy. You think about missing all the parties with your friends lasting late until the night, but you are easily distracted when you are reminded that you have much better parties to look forward to and you won't even have to stay up late to attend them. Things change in your life, but they still remain great.

Everything changes

If you're like me, when you are pregnant, one of the things you learn is that the only thing that stays the same is change. Your whole life changes when you are busy building your baby. Your house will change. You may not physically move, but the house itself will change as you prepare a room for baby and make the necessary changes to have space for all her stuff. Your friends might change. You may become closer with friends who have children already or are expecting, while your closeness with others may gradually fade. Your body will change. Your belly will get bigger, and your brain a little smaller and things you never thought could grow will grow. But your heart will grow too, and that makes it all worth it.

Change will happen. Sometimes you will expect it, sometimes you won't. But life will bring you change every day. You cannot plan who you will be your whole life but you can follow your heart and adjust as need be. Sometimes, we will find, the things we cannot change end up changing us for the better.

Rescue sets pet adoption at Farmington Hills cleaners

By Sharon Dargay Staff Writer

Andy and Sandy Dubin have rescued five dogs over the past 25 years, including three from Michigan Animal Rescue League.

So, it's no wonder when they staged their first animal adoption two years ago, they teamed up with MARL, inviting the Pontiac rescue to bring dogs and cats to their dry cleaners and laundry in Farmington Hills.

"Our history with MARL goes back. We just got our third dog from MARL," said Sam, 22, the couple's son and fourth generation to work in the family business. "We like to be involved in the community and we are definitely animal lovers here.

here. "Well before I was born my dad had a store in Detroit, Rosedale Park. A man dropped this dog off in front of my dad's store. The dog walked into the cleaners and my dad brought him home that night. That was the start of their rescuing."

Dubin said the animal adoption is just one way his family gives back to the community. During the winter, his parents also collect winter clothing for donation to charity. They're currently collecting "wish list" items and money for MARL, as a prelude to the third annual adoption, which will run 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 14, at Dubin Cleaners & Laundry, 29975 Orchard Lake Road, Farmington Hills.

"We had one customer come in the other day who brought in probably a whole shopping cart (of items) for the pets."

Dubin said customers like the adoption event and some even share their own pet stories with his family. The Dubins own Max, a boxer-shepherd-border collie mix, and Archie, a golden retriever.

"We have a lot of people show up to support the cause. A lot of kids and babies come. All the pets we have here are adoptable," Dubin said. "It's a community-wide event. It's a fun thing to do with the kids."

He said MARL will bring a mix of dogs and

Animal festival

If you've ever wanted to scurry along in a human-sized hamster ball, see exotic animals up close or have your photo taken with a horse, Creature Feature Fest is where you'll want to be, 5-8 p.m. Sept. 10 at Inglenook Park, 20901 W. 12 Mile, between Evergreen and Lahser, in Southfield.

Visitors will get a chance to come face to face with farm animals from The Barnyard Express and small animals from Little Creatures. They'll learn the history of horses in industry and watch Disc Dogs of Michigan and Southfield's K-9 Team demonstrate their skills.

Canton-based Wildlife Safari will bring a menagerie of creatures.

"We work with over 100 animals so anything can come out, from the cute and cuddly to the creepy and crawly, said Teron Erchenbreacher, Wildlife Safari office and show assistant, as well as zookeeper. He said the outdoor temperature and animal disposition help determine which creatures the company brings to an event. "They're like people.

good days and some days they have bad days, so they let you know, 'I'm not working today. I don't feel like going out,''' he said, noting that the animals are trained, so they're accustomed to music played during presentations and most can interact with people.

"Most of the time they're relaxed and they know what the routine is so they're calm and they're good to go about it," he said. Erchenbreacher said

Erchenbreacher said Wildlife Safari generally doesn't want the audience to know which creatures will appear at a presentation.

"We don't want everybody to know, 'hey, there's a 6-foot alligator coming out to the box.' We like to keep the element of surprise with our shows."

Parking for Creature Feature Fest will be available at the park and at Highland Park Baptist Church, 28600 Lahser, south of 12 Mile. Take a free shuttle to the park; 248-796-4617.

By Robert Half

When your job search drags on for weeks and you feel no closer to landing a job than when you first started, it's easy to get discouraged. But even if you aren't getting the callbacks you were hoping for, now is not the time to call it quits. To stay motivated and focused during this frustrating time, use these six job-search strategies to regain and maintain your momentum.

1. Treat the search like a job

Unemployment often leads to an aimless feeling. The lack of a routine is a major reason your motivation may be waning, as it's a constant reminder of your situation. The key is to treat your search like a real job. Wake up at a reasonable hour and get dressed. Create a schedule with set times for phone calls, emails, social networking and job board searches. Make to-do lists and check off each item as you com-helping you regain your momentum plete it. After you've completed your to-do list for the day, "clock out" and take part in any leisure activities you enjoy.

In other words, conduct yourself as if a boss were looking over your shoulder. Stay focused on your daily tasks and avoid playing a quick game of Solitaire or Candy Crush when you're supposed to be working. Little indulgences may seem like some of the few perks of unemployment, but they can lead to listlessness and a dip in job-search momentum.

2. Put yourself out there

As important as it is for you to be connected online, you also need to make sure you're occasionally leaving the house. Not only will this help you get out of a rut, but it can also help make you more marketable. Sign up for a class or go to job fairs, workshops, conferences and seminars, where you can meet people and brush up on your skills. Join professional associations and attend their meetings, where you can learn about trends in your field. Volunteer your time and skills with a worthwhile organization, where you can work on your soft skills like written and verbal communications. All of these things will deepen your network and help you find the right job.

3. Be proactive

Don't wait for opportunity to knock. Instead, take the initiative and knock on opportunity's door. In other words, even if the companies you're interested in don't list any current job openings, contact them anyway and express your desire to work there. This extra effort demonstrates enthusiasm and initiative, and hiring managers may take notice.

4. Track your progress

When you start to feel like you're going nowhere, take some time to create a method to track the efforts you've made. Write up a list of realistic short- and longterm goals with regard to your job search, and work toward them every day. For example, decide how many applications you'd like to send out this week, or this month. Set a goal for the number of networking events you're going to attend, and for the number of new people you're going to talk to about your search. Then keep track as you move toward the goal. That way, you'll have a tangible way to prove to yourself that you've made progress, something that can help keep you motivated as you continue to look for a job.

5. Consider other work options

A full-time job with a check direct-deposited to your account is not the only type of work out there. You can also expand your search to include part-time and contract work or set yourself up as a consultant or freelancer. Maybe you can barter your skills in exchange for goods and services.

Signing up with a staffing agency for temporary or projectbased gigs can also be a productive approach. It can bring in extra income while you're looking for full-time work. Even better, some part-time or temporary gigs can turn into full-time jobs or longterm contracts. Even if they don't, though, they'll still allow you to make valuable contacts that will help you in your job search.

6. Relax, recharge, revive

Allowing a job search to take over your life is a sure way to burn out. Give yourself permission to take a break from the search at night and on weekends. When you make a point to relax and recharge for a few hours at the end of the work day, you'll be able to start fresh the next day. A change of scenery and new experiences may give you a new perspective on your search and even your career.

The key to finding employment is to keep at it. Don't let a lull discourage you to the point of giving up. By following these job-search tips and persevering, you'll greatly increase your chances of finding full-time work that is satisfying and rewarding.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

10 Reasons the Buick-GMC Juggernaut Will Keep On Cruising

The feel-good automotive story of the year is emerging from the unlikeliest of brands at the unlikeliest of companies. Buick and GMC are keeping head above water and providing the only solid performances as the company endures an annus horribilis

over the recall fiasco

Buick and GMC continued to lead the company's sales charts through August, each posting increases of about 8 percent for the year to date while Chevrolet sales rose by just 2 percent and Cadillac sales eased by 5 percent.

"We've got a wonderful convergence of elements right now, all working together -- and hence, our sales gains," Tony DiSalle, marketing vice president for Buick and GMC, told me.

Here are 10 reasons Buick and GMC continue to accelerate: Great and timely products:

While Cadillac has gotten attention for the 2013 North American Car of the Year, the ATS sedan, Buick arguably has more effectively overhauled its entire product line over the last few years, beginning with the Enclave SUV that was launched for the 2008 model year. Most recently, Buick has scored a direct hit with its new Encore compact SUV, a very timely entry in one of the industry's hottest segments. Encore sales through August were up 65 percent over its launch year.

Meanwhile, GMC has been playing a role in this regard as well, most notably with the new 2015 version of its Yukon large SUV, whose sales were up by 59 percent over 2013 sales of the old version. A new version of the GMC Sierra pickup truck has raised sales by 7 percent over those of the earlier version a year ago.

Bulls-eye advertising: The Buick ad campaign that launched earlier this year and expanded this month — in which consumers can't believe the slick vehicles in front of them were actually Buicks - has scored heavily for the brand. "It leverages consumers" misperceptions and reels them in," DiSalle said.

Working backward from the test: Major boosts for the brands have come from a recent spate of significant third-party evaluations of perceived quality levels in which Buick and GMC brands and products have outshone all or nearly all other domestic brands, including annual surveys by J.D. Power & Associates and the American Customer Satisfaction Index. Turns out brand managers have looked intently at how such things are graded and have made great efforts to satisfy those specific measurements.

Savvy dealers: Every automaker now is focusing on customer satisfaction at the dealership as one of the last frontiers for boosting sales and market share. But Buick/ GMC dealers have found ways to excel - even faced with the challenge unique within GM of having to "dual" the brands in the same facility. "We have a huge focus on the customer at the dealer level," said Duncan Aldred, GM vice president for Buick and

The 2014 Buick Encore hit a segment sweet spot.

GMC. "The way we're treating our customers is top-drawer.'

Passing under the recall radar: Buick and GMC have escaped nearly as much notice as Chevrolet has received in GM's radar mess.

Comfort in their own skin: There was confusion for decades about exactly how GM positioned the Buick brand, first vis-a-vis Oldsmobile and more recently compared with Cadillac. Sometimes GM executives would even insist that Buick was a second true luxury brand like Cadillac. But now brand stewards seem comfortable in Buick's true skin: as a "near-luxury" brand that holds down a vast swath of market real estate for GM and serves as the company's most important portal for moving consumers upscale, especially "conquest" customers.

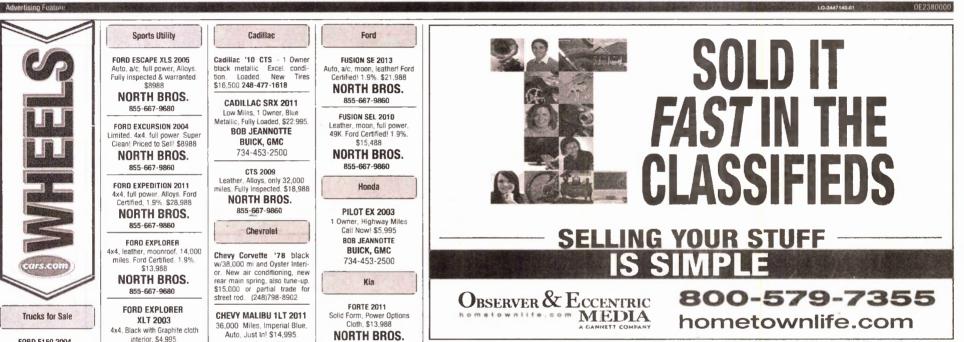

Very little string-pushing: Buick and GMC are the GM brands that don't have to try to arm-twist consumers to buy electrified vehicles that they don't want.

Connectivity strategy: Buick has a strategy for breaking out of the pack: Soon it will offer highspeed 4G LTE connectivity across its model range, as GM makes this capability available across more of its product line than any other automaker by the end of this year. And Buick will be offering it as a standard feature.

The China factor: GM's design staff in China is increasingly designing Buick vehicles or features that end up in the U.S. market, beginning with the 2010 LaCrosse. The latest: a midsize crossover called Buick Envision that the brand is showing in China.

A promising pipeline: Beyond whether Envision shows up on American shores, Buick's U.S. lineup will add seven new or redesigned models over the next three years. And a beefier Buick lineup will mean only better things for the Buick-GMC juggernaut.
